Happy bike parade ends in confrontation

BIKE FOR THE MAYOR: When Mayor Donald MacCallum emerged from city hall Monday evening to speak to some 200 parading cyclists who were pushing for city action in establishing safe bicycle paths, he was presented with a new, bright red, three-speed bicycle by parade organizers Mrs. Christine Sun, centre, and Mrs. Michele MacDougall, right. The bicycle, they said, would allow aldermen to "enjoy all the perils of driving on city streets." The mayor replied by thanking them for "a very attractive bribe."

200 demonstrate at city hall but dialogue turns to argument

By ANDY DODGE

An ugly confrontation rose from the ruins of seeming co-operation between citizens and city council Monday evening, as the two groups spent almost an hour debating the prospect of bicycle paths in Westmount.

The incident, which included snappy words, constant interruptions and even one citizen leaving the chamber before hearing out the city fathers, developed, it would seem, more out of misunderstanding than a true disagreement on the relative merits of or need for bike paths.

City council wanted time to determine if a path could be built, and where. Citizens wanted council to declare, once and for all, that some sort of path would be built. When council members hesitated to make such a commitment, tempers boiled to the point that Mayor Donald MacCallum felt forced to bang the gavel and close the meeting, bringing hisses from some 50 rookie council-watchers.

The confrontation did bring one result, however, and the organizers of the Westmount Bicycle Path Committee will be sitting down with city officials on June 27 to give the city a more detailed run-down of their ideas, and to get from the city some indication of what might be possible.

And though Mayor MacCallum remains unconvinced that bike paths are the desire of more than a small group of Westmount citizens, he still will be working with Montreal Executive Committee Chairman Yvon Lamarre to see if an N.D.G.-to-Montreal commuter route can pass through Westmount.

Began with parade

The long evening began at 7:30 pm, as some 200 carefully orchestrated cyclists, replete with flags, balloons and T-shirts, rode to the front door of city hall to show council their desire for "safe bicycling" routes in Westmount. The group included about 50 adults — mostly Westmounters — who had organized during the past few weeks to show their interest. The police-supervised parade went off without a hitch despite the cool and rainy weather suffered by participants.

The chilly cyclists stood outside the front door of city hall for 20 minutes, chanting

Provincial bike money may end

Quebec might not be offering any more grants for municipal bicycle paths, the city learned late last week.

This was the word on Monday, as Mayor Donald MacCallum researched the bike path situation in preparation for that evening's visit by a parade of citizens interested in having bike paths in Westmount.

With the cities obtaining a larger "field" for municipal taxation next year, it seems, the province intends to cut down on grants for such programs, His Worship told The Examiner Tuesday. (He was cut off by an angry crowd while trying to explain this publicly the previous evening.)

The mayor expressed strong doubts that Westmount MNA George Springate would be able to succeed with a "late application" for this year, since the deadline for such grants (involving "utilitarian routes" only) was March 15, and applications had to include complete descriptions of planned bicycle paths in order to merit consideration.

Will patrol parks:

City hires guards, dogs to counter vandalism

The city has hired ADT Security (formerly Garda Security) personnel — including trained guard dogs — to patrol Westmount's parks in the coming weeks, at least until the recent wave of vandalism is stopped.

This was the decision reached following last week's extensive damage to the famous floral clock, just west of Victoria Hall (see story last week).

"There is far more vandalism than anyone here can imagine," Mayor Donald MacCallum told a worried Barry Hill, 462 Victoria avenue, following Monday's council session. "We hired the men and the dogs to indicate to the young people that we mean business and we are not going to tolerate the kind of nonsense we are experiencing."

The mayor agreed with another young questioner that guard dogs are rather frightening creatures, even — as the questioner put it — "more effective than a loaded

A $400 cassette player was stolen from an unlocked car on Abbott avenue on Monday. The owner had left the car unlocked in front of his home at 1 pm and discovered the theft when he returned to the car four hours later.

Police nab 31 for belts

The law governing use of seat belts is the focus of the police security campaign this week.

Library celebrates 80 years

The Westmount Public Library will be in a festive mood next week as it celebrates its 80th birthday.

Bunting and balloons will decorate the exterior of the building from June 18 to 22, the birthday period. Inside, various gifts and souvenirs will be distributed, including book-marks and copies of maps comparing the City of Westmount in 1897 and 1979 which will be available to all.

As well, a free library bag will be awarded to each new member registering during the week and a daily draw will be held for three prizes of paperback books.

Visitors will also be asked to contribute their names and observations on the occasion to a birthday book, to provide a memento for future anniversaries.

Street work funding is delayed

Public works officials are unable to schedule this summer's planned street repairs, they say, until Quebec approves the city's recent loan by-law, thus freeing the necessary funds.

Street work outside of the major reconstruction to St. Catherine street and a small portion of Sunnyside avenue thus have been stalled temporarily, though officials say they expect the provincial approval in a matter of weeks.

Once it comes through, they will notify residents of affected streets when the streets will be closed for resurfacing and sidewalk repair.

One of the snags, it appears, is council's decision not to go ahead with repairs to the city incinerator this summer, for which funds were included in the same loan by-law. Provincial officials have asked that the incinerator sums be removed from the legislation, The Examiner has been told, and council filed a notice of motion to that effect — without comment — on Monday.

It is possible that the expression of intent will be enough to satisfy Quebec's bureaucrats, thus freeing the funds, but the loan by-law probably will not be amended until council's July 3 session, after which the public appeal procedure must be followed.

One official suggested the delay might be only two weeks, but said only provincial staff really knew.

Greene work costs $15,500

Improvements to Greene avenue this summer are costing taxpayers $15,500, citizens learned Monday evening when city council approved the sum as part of a $22,625 fund commitment.

Other sums include $1,975 for hot water piping at No. 2 Fire Station, $1,650 for relining the hot water reservoir at Victoria Hall and $3,500 for new floodlights at city hall (The Examiner, May 31).

Council had to include the new funds as an amendment to its provincially mandated "municipal works" by-law, and immediately gave notice of motion to amend the legislation again, should the need arise, at a future council session.

City waiting to study Greene beefs

The city has received various complaints about the renovations and changes to Greene avenue in the past month from drivers, merchants and pedestrians, Mayor Donald MacCallum told The Examiner on Tuesday, but council has decided to wait until the "new" street has been in complete operation for about 10 days before considering any changes.

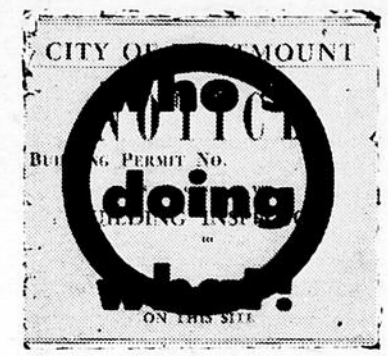

Citizens have filed various complaints about speed bumps, parking problems, the entrance at Sherbrooke street, even the planters, the mayor mentioned, though there has been no specific and regular worry.

Once the final touches are completed and the new street has been in unencumbered operation for more than a week, he said, council will examine "every single detail" to decide whether or not the new effects are warranted.

They have been made this summer exactly for that purpose, he pointed out: as an experiment to determine whether or not they improve the character and traffic flow on the street, and whether they should be added permanently when the street is reconstructed next summer.

Citizens should be reminded—again—that diagonal parking will not become part of the experiment until August, when lines will be painted on the street to designate such parking.

NO PUN INTENDED? City officials probably batted around ways of introducing Westmount's newly-reorganized Greene avenue for quite some time before coming up with the Bill 101-sensitive "Village Greene" signs, posted at entranceways from Sherbrooke street, de Maisonneuve boulevard and St. Catherine street. The final results appeared late last week, announcing the spirit council has hoped to create in the shopping area, save for the last "e" in "Greene."

The following building permits were issued at city hall during the past week.

We Say

Make bicycling safe

CITY council got and deserved the worst of it from Westmount's bicyclists Monday night.

Granted mayor and aldermen had weightier, more abiding topics on their minds for the monthly statutory meeting than the long-dormant and now resurgent matter of bicycle paths.

But here was a popular issue, dramatically presented, with ample warning.

And council fumbled it.

SPOKESPERSONS for the bicyclists failed, too.

Having organized a delightful parade of young and not-so-young — their numbers and the police shepherding them to city hall demonstrating the need to make local bicycling safer — they clearly had not thought through what they had to say or ask of the city fathers.

When Mayor Donald MacCallum and the even more sympathetic Ald. David Carruthers got to respond, the visitors were rude, interruptive and inconsiderate. One leader petulantly stormed out of the council chamber. When Ald. Alwyn Lloyd pointed out that they apparently were unprepared to listen, he was hissed.

NONETHELESS, the solons mishandled the affair from the beginning.

Instead of being on the city hall steps to greet this large and extraordinary wheeled delegation of citizens when they arrived, the mayor had to be cajoled to come out before the meeting. His words were patronizing.

Then he invited everyone inside.

Out of consideration for their numbers and the large proportion of youngsters, the occasion called for a quick adjournment of the 8 pm meeting to deal with their concern.

Instead, "Bicycle Routes" appeared as Item 22 at the foot of a long, crashingly boring agenda. In the event, the patience of the remaining visitors was commendable. But the frayed tempers were predictable.

SOMEHOW, both sides have become hung up on "bike paths" when, surely, the issue is plainly bicycle safety.

Ideally, bicycles as vehicles have every right to travel Westmount's 32.2 miles of paved streets (but not our 63.8 miles of sidewalks or the footpaths of our nine parks) freely and safely along with cars, trucks and buses.

The facilities already are there. The fault lies with the vehicle code which is prefixed by the word "motor" and thus relegates the bicycle to secondary, almost ignored status.

Specified paths or lanes, for travel and-or pleasure bicycling, would be but a stop-gap for responsible driving, whatever the size or number of wheels beneath the operator.

And let's face it: the most irresponsible drivers on the road today are bikers: they weave, ignore stop signs and red lights, use the wrong side of the street, ride against one-way traffic, fail to signal, are inconsiderate of pedestrians, invade sidewalks — you name it. And they are rarely apprehended.

Paths and lanes themselves — apart from cost and traffic problems in an already congested city — are no solution in isolation from all other considerations.

We hope the bicycle committee and city representatives, when they get together, weigh all the ramifications of making biking free and safe.

Perceptions of youth

WE stood accused in a letter on this page last week of elevating an outbreak of vandalism in Westmount to the status of a crisis and of unfairly laying the blame on "youth."

We respect our accuser, Mr. Pierre Goad, the conscientious reporter of the healthful activities of the Westmount recreation department for readers of The Examiner. His interest in wholesome, constructive activity of young people renders him something of an authority on good conduct and fairness.

In our relating of senseless damage to public and private property over recent weeks, and editorial comment upon the situation, we were not aware we had created a crisis. These things undoubtedly have been going on, at a rate somewhat more than occasional incidents. Irrational behavior in a community, particularly in one such as Westmount noted for good order, is cause for concern — and we have, quite properly we believe, expressed it.

As for blame, we are on sensitive ground. A search of our reports since the situation which got out of control at St. Matthias' parish hall on April 27 — clearly involving youths — shows we have scrupulously attempted to avoid unfounded suspicion on any particular age group as succeeding incidents have occurred. Neither we nor the authorities have yet discovered who the perpetrators may be.

Indeed, in our editorial on this subject of May 10, we went out of our way to say: "There always will be individuals — and not always high-spirited, or low-spirited, youngsters — ranging from thoughtless litterers to the violently angry . . . "

Nonetheless, there are many now-sedate Westmount citizens (this editor among them) who can recall all too vividly their own early escapades on the streets, in the parks, or on private property in this community with chagrin, hindsight alarm, and even remorse and shame. We just happen to know from our own experiences of what youth is capable, and shudder at the retribution had we been caught.

Monday evening in city council Mayor MacCallum was even more direct in casting the city's suspicions at the younger generation and revealed stern measures, including security men and a guard dog engaged to thwart further depredations.

Perhaps Mr. Goad is blaming us for merely thinking that youths may be responsible for much of the current vandalism, and somehow has read our thoughts. But we have him at a disadvantage, possessing some insight through having been through, and survived, youth ourselves.

This is hardly what Mr. Goad calls "injudicious prejudice." We'd just love to be his age once more.

You Say

Put an effigy in park for vandals to mangle

Sir: I would like to offer a palliative for the disease that produces the senseless vandalism described in a recent issue of The Examiner.

Destructive individuals need an outlet for their suppressed grievances and destructive impulses. I suggest that an effigy be posted in Westmount Park and that these unhappy individuals be invited to punch, kick, stab, mangle or otherwise mutilate this effigy to their heart's content.

Such a rite or practice would save the community the considerable expense as well as the emotional trauma associated with the misconduct you so rightfully condemn.

Wait upon city council was 'just too tedious'

A copy of the following letter has been sent to The Examiner:

Mayor D. C. MacCallum,
City Hall,
WESTMOUNT, PQ, H3Z 1E2

Dear Mayor MacCallum:

As a citizen of Westmount I would like to comment on the monthly council meeting with regard to the "safe cycling path" issue.

In view of the fact that 300 interested adults and children cycled to city hall to voice their concern about the lack of cycling paths in this city, I think you could have waived the regular procedure and perhaps dealt with the cycle path item with greater expediency.

About 40 adults and children waited patiently while the council mumbled through 20 or so rather boring items. When, indeed, you finally opened the meeting to the citizens, many of the children who had come to participate in the "safe cycling path" discussion had gone home — the wait was just too tedious.

I was disappointed to see the issue at hand fell on deaf (council) ears, even though you had indicated to the crowd earlier in the evening that you would welcome all our comments. As the questioning from the citizens progressed it became clear that the mayor and his council were not interested in the safety of cyclists. In fact, one of the councillors stated that there were more important items to deal with.

Well, Mr. Mayor, I for one think cycling safety is a very important issue. The 300 citizens who cycled to city hall last night bear witness to a very real concern for the cycling safety of children and adults in this city.

One would hope for a broadened interest from our city fathers in issues which affect the daily life of our citizens — in this case, especially, those who ride bicycles.

Yours truly,

Editorial Notes

When we noted last week, in the absence of his weekly column, that "Our MP is on a post-election vacation," we did not mean to imply that Mr. Donald Johnston was lolling on a beach or taking time out at Verandahville — rather that he was giving his regular message to his constituents a short rest midst the Ottawa hiatus. In fact, he's very much on the job; for example, this week he has been involved in the hearing before the Supreme Court of Canada on the side of the argument against the constitutionality of portions of Quebec's Bill 101 on language....

Speaking of Mr. J., week before last La Voix Populaire, our contemporary to the south in St. Henri, Ville Emard and Côte St. Paul, got around to printing the pictures of the four Liberal MPs elected May 22 representing that area. Throughout the campaign, the community weekly virtually ignored the federal election in the ridings of its readers. With this extraordinary lack of interest in matters political locally, it perhaps is understandable that the "Deputé libéral de St-Henri-Westmount" was identified as "M. Daniel Johnston." . . .

The monthly bulletin of 306 Wing, RCAF Association, headquartered in the old Westmount telephone exchange building at Metcalfe avenue and Sherbrooke street, Westmount, this month features the reprint of a long piece on "Dinghy," a cocker spaniel mascot in Britain and on the Continent during the Second World War of 401 "City of Westmount" Squadron. This is the outfit which went forth from that same old red brick pile, now called the Frank S. McGill Building (which has had all sorts of trouble from both Westmount and the MUC over taxes and zoning; unseemly considering its local historic role), as 1st Canadian Fighter Squadron with its Hurricanes to fight in the Battle of Britain and, by the way, set up shop in the Normandy beachhead 35 years ago this week. "Dinghy" was preceded by another, more extraordinary, 401 mascot in the "person" of "Henniker," a goat. Acquired in 1942 at RAF Station Redhill, Surrey, as a young kid, his favorite delicacies were Canadian cigarets. He flew north with us to Yorkshire where he was irreverently but quite naturally named for the properly decorous English senior administration officer of RAF Station Catterick, one Squadron Leader Henniker-Gottley. Eventually becoming more of a nuisance than a pet, "Henniker Goatley" was donated to a local farmer before 401 headed south to soften up and invade Fortress Europe.

He fills jobs abroad

FORTY-ONE-year-old Paul Creighton is the Canadian partner of Executive Resources International, a London-based company which specializes in recruitment of management and technical personnel for service in developing countries.

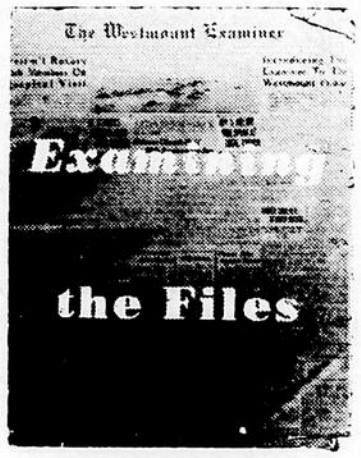

"We feel that we are the only organization that does this," said Mr. Creighton, a former foreign service officer with the Canadian department of external affairs, during an interview in his attractive office suite in Westmount Square.

Mr. Creighton's British partner is Michael Berger, who was the general manager of the National Development Corporation of Tanzania, an umbrella organization set up to manage that country's nationalized assets. His other partner is Muslim Iqbal Mam Dani, a Tanzanian citizen of Asian extraction who is stationed in Manama, Bahrain, one of the Gulf states. Mam Dani had a profitable private import business in Dar es Salaam and with its nationalization left Tanzania and came to New York to work for the American Express International Banking Company. The three partners met in Dar es Salaam in the late 60s.

Mr. Creighton is six feet tall, fair haired, bearded and blue-eyed. He uses his fine hands to punctuate his flowing conversation. His diplomatic manner is polite, friendly and direct.

"The largest part of our work to date has been in the Middle East," he explained. "Executive Resources International has recruited about 350 persons to work in the Middle East, Eastern and Central Africa and most recently Brazil. Most of them are engineers — mechanical, electrical, civil and structural.

"The next largest group is finance and control types. Then come the general managers. In addition, ERI has recruited computer analysts and programmers and hotel management people.

"Squadron-Leader Dal Russel, DFC and Bar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Blair Russel, 607 Clarke avenue, who is a veteran of the Battle of Britain and now on his third tour of operations overseas, was the first Canadian flier to land on French soil last week on an operational air-field landing. It is reported that prior to this, the commanding officer of a tactical air force fighter group, flying his own Spitfire, touched down neatly last Saturday morning on this strip of land, the Allies' first operational air-field in France to officially open as a Canadian base."

Twenty-five Years Ago

"Police Chief Robert Byford announced this week that Westmount avenue will again be reverted to two-way traffic. The street had formerly been one-way between Argyle avenue and The Boulevard. New traffic lights will be installed at The Boulevard intersection. The new setup will allow motorists to turn left onto Westmount avenue instead of having to circle the park as has been the case for the past few years."

"The former Kings School, a 78-year-old Western avenue landmark, was slowly pushed almost to the ground this week to clear the site for a new apartment building. The New Rochelle Development Corporation purchased the land and school building at the foot of Roslyn avenue in late fall for $418,931.25. Kings was built in 1896 at a cost of $25,000 but was then called Glen School. Both Kings and Queens School were abandoned last spring to be replaced with the renovated Westmount Park School on Academy road."

"Atlas Construction Company will be moving out of Westmount tomorrow and Saturday into new facilities in Ville St. Pierre, The Examiner has learned. The building in which it is located at 4781 St. Catherine street, at the corner of Lansdowne avenue, is to be torn down for construction of a high-rise complex, though details of the new building are not available. City officials say the maximum height for new construction in the area is 12 storeys."

300 to Middle East

"About 300 have gone to the Middle East and the remainder to East and Central Africa and Brazil.

"The vast majority of them are British. The next largest number are Canadian and Americans. It is difficult for clients to hire American citizens because their tax situation is such that their remuneration requirements are uncompetitive. Canadians have a much less punishing tax situation and the same North American management and technical background that the Americans have, so they are therefore in a good competitive position."

Mr. Creighton said that most of ERI's clients are foreign businessmen or foreign government agencies who require developed world expertise and use the company's services to secure the most qualified personnel as expeditiously as possible. "Their alternative is to try to recruit these people themselves and they have found it very expensive and very time consuming," said Mr. Creighton.

"The crucial thing about recruiting for overseas assignments is being able to select people who have the personality and the adaptability to take themselves from one cultural and job environment and fit themselves into a totally different one. That means that they are still productive and a family unit.

"The client wants to pay only as much as he has to, to secure the qualifications he requires. That is where a good executive search organization comes in. We try to meet the client's requirements with a candidate who has the overall capability both in so far as his technical training and background is concerned and with respect to his personality and adaptability."

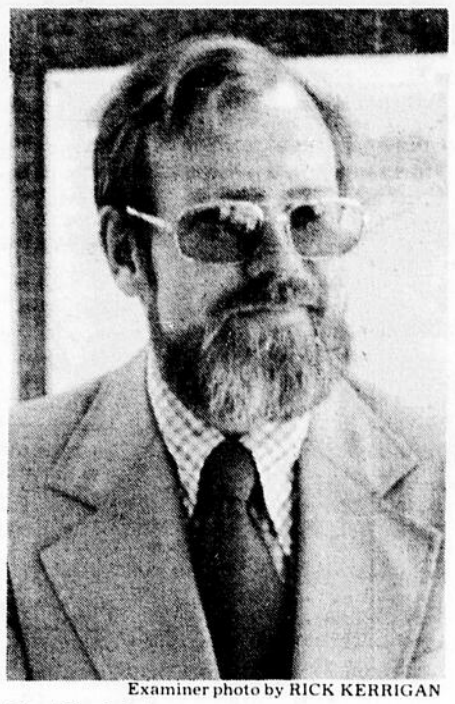

Wives most important

ERI says the wives are the most important element in the family going abroad. "Most of the candidates are married," said Mr. Creighton. "We always interview the wives. The family unity, or lack of it, reflects almost immediately in the husband's job performance."

What are the three most important factors in recruiting personnel?

"First, the person has got to fit the client's basic qualification requirements," replied Mr. Creighton. "Second, he has got to have demonstrated adaptability to challenge and, third, he has to come across as a person of equitable personality. He can't be a prima donna or a cave dweller."

Mr. Creighton said schooling at the high school level is difficult to secure in the developing countries. "That means you have to send the kids back to school in Canada or Europe at one of their most formative periods," he remarked.

Paul Creighton

Mr. Creighton, the father of two teenagers, is glad to be settled in Montreal at this stage of his family's life.

What's different about ERI?

"ERI is fundamentally different from most other management consultants and recruitment agencies in that its services are devoted entirely to developing countries," said Mr. Creighton. "All of the consultants have first-hand experience of working overseas, and of the countries for which they recruit."

For instance, Mr. Creighton recently travelled to Syria to investigate living and job conditions to fill a recruitment assignment. "I was amazed at how well I was treated by the Syrians," he said.

In New York he met a Middle Eastern sheik who wanted 20 persons to work for him.

Large fish, small pond

"You must remember that here a person is a very small fish in a very large pond," Mr. Creighton said. "Overseas almost everyone we send on assignment immediately becomes a very large fish in a very small pond. The candidate has to use judgment and skills that he never will have the opportunity to use here."

Paul Creighton was born in 1937 in Swift Current, Saskatchewan. As a small child he moved with his family to Ottawa where he was educated. His father, the late Col. Leslie Creighton, was an engineer who saw service in the Second World War. Later he was chief personnel officer for the Civil Service Commission. His mother, Ruth Creighton, lives in Ottawa. She was a teacher in rural Saskatchewan when she was young and rode a horse to her schoolhouse.

In 1962 Mr. Creighton graduated in economics from the University of Western Ontario and was then appointed to the Canadian department of external affairs as a foreign service officer. His first posting was the fall session of the United Nations in New York in 1962. In the spring of 1963 he was appointed to the Canadian Embassy in Santo Domingo, the capital of the Dominican Republic. He was there until the fall of 1965. During that time there was civil war (13 revolutions). He acted as chargé d'affaires of the Canadian Embassy at San Jose, Costa Rica, for three months.

Mr. Creighton then came back to Ottawa for three years. He spent a year with the Canadian International Development Agency as a planning officer and two years in the Latin American division of the department of external affairs as an area political officer. During that time in Ottawa he had a special assignment as Canadian representative to the NATO experts' meeting on Latin America.

Went to Tanzania

Then Mr. Creighton was appointed to the Canadian High Commission in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, responsible for Canadian programs in that country as well as in Zambia and Mauritius.

In 1970 he returned to the University of Western Ontario, graduating with an MBA in 1972. He then joined CANAC Consultants Ltd., a Canadian transportation consultancy firm, where his duties included the implementation of a major operations study for a Latin American railway network.

In 1976 Mr. Creighton went to London to confer with Michael Berger about opening an ERI office in Montreal.

Mr. Creighton is married to Beverly Ann Petty, of Louisville, Kentucky. They met in Paris in 1959 and married in Louisville in 1960. Mrs. Creighton attended Miami University in Oxford, Ohio.

The couple's two children are Christopher, 16, who attends Selwyn House School, and Amy, 14, who goes to Trafalgar School.

The family has one dog and four cats. The oldest cat is 18 and her kitten, 17; both travelled to Santo Domingo and Dar es Salaam with the family.

Mr. Creighton's interests include cross-country skiing, canoeing, and a long-range effort to bring some sense of order to an extensive garden in Westmount.

'Big Brother' list

The PQ now wishes to create a permanent voters' list via a computer. Your name, age, address, social security number, etc., are to be fed into this machine. From then on your whereabouts will be recorded and altered whenever your movements indicate that change is necessary.

Naturally, the Quebec Liberals oppose such a plan. We have told the government that we will stay in Quebec City fighting that bill all summer if need be.

It is easy to see why we cannot accept the idea of a permanent computer voters' list. This is even more sinister than an identification card.

"Big Brother" is going to be able to follow you everywhere. Who is to have access to this list? The PQ says that it will be restricted and guarded. Yet, today, even though the bill has yet to be enacted into law, some 150 persons are working 24 hours a day preparing the files to feed into the computer ... 150 persons, and there is no law.

And, what if Hydro-Québec wants to track you down to pay the bill? Will it have access to the computer? No, says Robert Burns, the PQ minister responsible for the bill.

You want to bet?

WESTMOUNT WANDERINGS

Congratulations to City of Westmount employees at this peonies time. The flowers are beautiful.... Am with Claude Ryan this Saturday when he gives the convocation address to the graduates at John Abbott College.... We continue sitting in Quebec from 10 am to well past midnight Monday through Friday until June 22. Then comes the summer recess. Of course, that depends on the permanent voters' list legislation.... Enjoyed being with Westmount senior citizens during their visit to Quebec on Tuesday and Wednesday.

views in his article which appeared in The Examiner on June 7 last.

The caption and the lead paragraph attribute to me an admission that the schools are facing a danger of a slip to educational mediocrity resulting from the ministry's proposed Plan of Action. This is not the view I expressed. On the contrary, I supported in general the government's policy statement on education, particularly those aspects dealing with curriculum. I stated categorically that the intent of the ministry is to improve the quality of education and to foster intellectual rigor.

One of the aims of the Plan of Action is to guarantee to all students, regardless of physical or social handicaps, a basic minimum in terms of content and quality.

During the discussion a parent expressed concern that the emphasis on the basic guarantee might lead to a danger of providing only the minimum rather than developing students' abilities to the potential maximum.

Here I agreed that there is this risk in putting the plan into effect, if those responsible do not exercise vigilance. The plan encourages parents and teachers under the leadership of the principal to enrich the pupil's school experience beyond the basic minimum requirements set for all schools to each child's full potential.

The danger of mediocrity does not result in my view from the Plan of Action but from the use that could be made of it. Vigilance is required by parents and teachers and the plan provides a mechanism for parent and teacher participation in the ways and means committee and the educational project.

The use of the word "slip" indicates an assumption that present day schools provide excellent education which is endangered by the government's education policy. My observation of the situation is that such smugness constitutes a danger. Surely Protestant schools can benefit from an analysis of their curriculum offerings and a re-examination of their school practices!

Finally, I did not say that it was critical for the English-speaking boards to take on the politicians concerning this plan. I did say that it was crucial for English-speaking school board members, like my fellow panelists, who function at the political level, to take on the members of the National Assembly in debates on such issues as the financing of school boards and their powers and responsibilities. As a civil servant I confined myself to providing information about the educational aspects of the government's policy statement.

The discussion initiated in Westmount by Mrs. Sally Aitken and the Roslyn School Committee is timely and productive. It should continue. For my part I have already indicated a willingness to join parents and educators of the Westmount schools again in the autumn after they have had an opportunity to read the English version of the document and I have offered to bring with me other English-speaking personnel of the ministry of education.

My thanks again to The Examiner for this opportunity to clarify the situation.

Council backs mayor on Bill 101 views

Mayor Donald MacCallum has voiced his sharpest criticism yet of Quebec's language legislation, pointing out that it is changing the face of Westmount unduly while he, as chief magistrate, stands by helplessly.

He expressed heartfelt sympathy Monday evening for those merchants forced to change their external signs, and urged citizens to stand solidly behind them by continuing to patronize them.

The city's aldermen added their support to the statement, read by His Worship at the beginning of the formal council session so that it could be included in the minutes. Though he had not been aware the statement would be presented, Ald. P. André Gervais, speaking in French, moved that it become a council statement rather than a personal view of the mayor.

The other solons approved unanimously.

"As the mayor of this municipality," Mayor MacCallum reported, "it is utterly distressing to stand by helplessly while the shopkeepers of Westmount are forced to comply with the requirements of Bill 101 with respect to external signs. Under no circumstances can the mayor or council ... recommend or condone disobedience of a law, therefore I must urge these shopkeepers to act in accordance therewith in their own best interests."

He pleaded, however, "That they continue to serve Westmount as they have in the past, that the citizens of Westmount continue and increase if possible their patronage of these essential elements of our community, and that any ideas as to how we can help be submitted for consideration."

The mayor said later he was moved to write the statement because of last week's news that four small stores on St. Catherine street, near his own 4300 de Maisonneuve boulevard apartment, were being forced to comply with the legislation (see last week's Examiner).

He recognized that other Westmount stores have already changed their signs, however, and suggested they should receive the same sympathy and support from citizens.

Change coming

The city is planning "substantive" changes in its general pension fund for municipal employees, Ald. Alwyn Lloyd reported Monday night. He offered notice of motion to city council that he would propose amendments to the pension by-law, under review for the past year, at an uncoming council meeting.

Congregations say farewell to ministers

Two of Westmount's three United church congregations will be marking the departure of their ministers this Sunday.

Dr. E. A. Kirker, minister at St. Andrew's Church the past 11½ years, will preach his last sermon at the local church at the 11 am service. It is titled "Finally . . ."

Also at the service, Dr. Kirker will officiate at the baptism of three infants whose mothers are sisters who were all married by the St. Andrew's minister.

Dr. and Mrs. Kirker and their daughter and son will leave Westmount later this month to take up residence in Waterloo, Ont. Dr. Kirker becomes minister of the 1,500-member Trinity Church in the adjoining city of Kitchener on July 1. He will be succeeded at St. Andrew's by Rev. W. Robert Hussey, at present of Brandon, Man.

A dinner was held in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Kirker several months ago and gifts presented in recognition of their years of service at the local church.

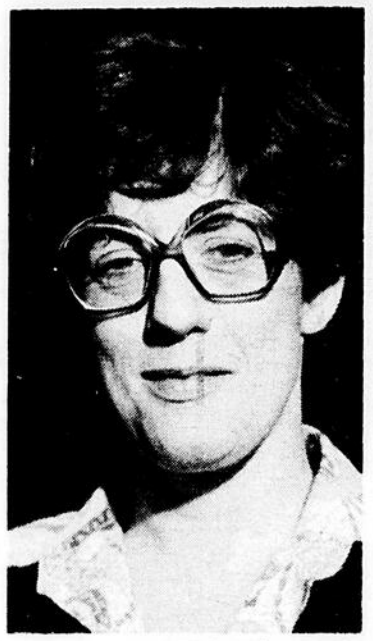

Dr. E. A. Kirker

Supper for Dr. Smyth

At Dominion-Douglas Church on Sunday from 5 pm, the congregation will gather to honor Dr. Phyllis Smyth, their minister the past five years. Dr. Smyth is leaving at the end of August to become assistant professor in the faculty of theology at the University of Winnipeg.

Sunday's celebration will begin with a casserole supper, followed by an interesting program. Members of the congregation are asked to notify the church office (486-1165) of their intention to attend.

A pastoral relations committee to find a replacement for Dr. Smyth was formed at a congregational meeting held following regular services June 3.

Summer services combined

Members of Westmount's three United Churches will gather for regular services in their own churches for the last time this season Sunday.

Next Sunday, on St. John the Baptist Day, the three congregations will hold a joint service outdoors in Westmount Park. This will be the first of the regular joint summer services which will rotate from church to church through July and August.

The following Sunday, Dominion Day, the first of three joint services will be held in St. Andrew's Church. Rev. E. C. Armstrong will conduct the services and a children's program will be provided by Rev. Tom Nordberg.

Gospel concert on Sunday

The singing and witnessing ministry "Harvest Celebration" will present a gospel concert Sunday, June 17, at 7 pm at Westmount's Seventh Day Adventist Church, 571 Victoria avenue.

Centred in Lincoln, Nebraska, the group of 13 young singers from across the U.S. is led by Buz Starlett. It travels ten months of the year throughout Canada and the U.S. There is no admission charge.

Shearmans mark 60th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Shearman, who were married from the house at 365 Clarke avenue on June 7, 1919, marked the 60th anniversary of the event last Friday at a reception attended by some 100 persons at Wesley United Church hall.

The Shearmans lived for many years in St. Eustache, where they brought up their family of three girls and three boys, and now, both age 86 and in excellent health, still live in their own home on Hingston avenue in Notre Dame de Grâce.

The 60th anniversary reception attracted all their offspring, from as far away as Halifax and Vancouver, for the first complete gathering of the family since before the Second World War. Also attending the party were nine of 12 grandchildren and three of five great-grandchildren.

Who reacts? is sermon question

"Who takes the initiative?" will be the sermon title at the 11 am service at Dominion-Douglas Church this Sunday.

Dr. Phyllis Smyth will preach, exploring the question of whether we react to God or God reacts to us. Appropriate music for the service will include "O world of God, so vast and strange," arranged by Gordon Jacob, "Dear Lord and Father of mankind" by Parry and "O praise God in His holiness" by Armstrong Gibbs.

The organ prelude will be "If thou but suffer God to guide thee" by J. S. Bach, and the postlude will be "Allegro assai vivace" (last movement, Sonata 1) by Mendelssohn. Organ stop No. 17 to be demonstrated this week will be the 16-foot "trombone" on the pedal organ.

Hymns to be sung are "Praise my soul the King of Heaven," "Jesus, friend of little children," "O love that will not let me go" and "Lead on, O King eternal." Hymn tunes played on the chimes from the tower from 10:45 am will begin this week with "Song 24," No. 201. Visitors are welcome to attend this service.

BIOFEEDBACK: Dr. Hal Myers, director of reasearch at the Allan Memorial Institute, addressed Westmount Rotarians last Wednesday on recent advances in the area of biofeedback, pointing out that it has proven to be an effective way of teaching people to control stress—far more important that the 4 billion tranquilizers which are sold in North America each year. He and others have developed machinery to allow people to measure stress levels easily—even while driving in their cars or sitting at their desks, he said, so they can understand how their body reacts to various incidents, and thus learn how to control it. He was introduced to the Rotary membership by Wilder Penfield, son of the late neurosurgeon, who said he had grown up "never trusting" psychiatry.

City may celebrate St. Jean Baptiste

Efforts are under way to organize a Westmount celebration for the St. Jean Baptiste Day "Fête du Québec," and city staff are busy preparing for the annual Canada Day "splash bash" which has been scheduled for July 4.

Al Fisher of Lancer Senior Citizens Foundation is working on obtaining funds from the province-wide "Fête du Québec" organization for local celebrations, including street dances and other activities, but as of yesterday morning he had no firm commitment. He would hope to have the celebrations next Saturday evening, June 23, he said.

The city will be putting up Quebec and Canada flags on lampposts throughout Westmount, flags which will remain during the provincial and national celebrations. Council has authorized Mr. Fisher to speak on the city's behalf in negotiating funds for local celebrations of Quebec's holiday, but will be handling the Canada Day program by itself.

On Monday evening, committee of council deliberated the idea of merging the three early-summer festivities next year, combining the late-May "family day" program with the others to create a "Westmount, Quebec, Canada" celebration. The idea is still in its infancy, city sources suggest.

Also on Monday, Mrs. Christina Myler protested the fact that Westmount had not postponed its Family Day program this year because of bad weather, choosing instead to move the festivities into the artificial ice rink.

Mayor Donald MacCallum suggested the city had little control over the weather, but Mrs. Myler maintained the city could have anticipated skies would be more pleasant the next weekend, since there had been so much bad weather before.

Ald. Brian Gallery later told The Examiner the city had scheduled bands, shows and other events which could not be postponed, thus forcing continuation of the festivities despite the weather. It would re-think the contingency plans for next year, however, he promised.

MOVING OVERSEAS?

Call Kenwood's Intercontinental Services... and relax!

After the first excitement about going overseas wears off, second thoughts about moving the whole household — lock, stock and what do we do with this? — can be positively depressing. There's so much to think about; so many things to do: and — worst of all — so many unknowns.

But we know! Kenwood's were among the very first in Canada to spot the need for overseas moving services; and to do something about it. And we know how many years we spent learning all the essentials, and making all the necessary contacts with customs, shipping lines and airlines. Not to mention the years of experience we've accumulated refining the whole operation into a science; and building our links with carefully-chosen movers abroad.

Today, a call for Kenwood's Intercontinental Services sets off a procedure that's simplicity itself. For you. In fact, we leave our customers so free of headaches, they start getting excited about going overseas all over again!

English theatre alive and well

With all the talk about the decline of Montreal and the fretting about the fate of the English language and its accompanying culture, it seems odd that the English-language theatre companies have chosen to ignore the signs of doom and continue, at least for the present, to survive and, apparently, prosper.

The Phoenix Theatre can be counted among this group and is now presenting its second production in the new facilities at 1858 de Maisonneuve boulevard west. The play is called "Veronica's Room," a thriller about a dying young girl at the home of "two sweet old people." The play opened last night and continues until July 1, Tuesdays to Sundays at 8:30 pm with Sunday matinées at 2:00.

Also opening last night for a short run until Saturday is the Chancel Players' production of Bertolt Brecht's "The Caucasian Chalk Circle." It has a cast of 40 actors and an original music score written for this production by Bill Vincent. The play is being presented at the Erskine and American Church at the corner of Sherbrooke west and du Musée. Curtain time is 8:00 pm.

What sounds like an evening of good fun is being presented by La Poudrière theatre on St. Helen's Island beginning Thursday, June 21. It is a contemporary adaptation of a French farce called "In one bed ... and out the other." Performances are Tuesday through Friday at 8:30 pm and Saturday at 6:30 and 9:30 pm. A couple of familiar names in the cast are Graham Batchelor and Wendy Dawson.

Away out in Dollard des Ormeaux, the Town Stage is presenting a musical titled "Gravediggers of 1942" as its final production of the season. It is billed as a "colorful collage capturing the color and music of the 40s." It will run June 20-24, June 29 and July 4-8, 8:30 pm, at 12001 de Salaberry in D.D.O.

Coming up soon will be a new production from the Saidye Bronfman Centre theatre; the Piggery in North Hatley will be opening its season, and the Lennoxville Festival will be of particular interest to Westmounters with Richard Ouzounian's interpretation of the "Anglo establishment" in his play "Westmount."

You don't have to be Jewish...

A Yiddish music and theatre festival will be held Monday, June 18, at 8:30 pm in Hampstead Park, corner of Queen Mary and Fleet. The program will include the Children's Choir of the Jewish People's and Peretz Schools, the mandolin orchestra of the YM-YWHA, the Yiddish Drama Theatre of Dora Wasserman, lyrical tenor Cantor P. Rabinovicz, operatic soprano Ginetta Labianca from New York and pianist Joseph Milo. Material will be contemporary and traditional. Admission to the event is free but it is BYOC (bring your own chair). If it rains, the event will be held inside at 5151 Côte St. Catherine.

You don't have to be Mexican...

Another ethnic festival, this one sponsored by the Mexican Association of Canada, will be held Saturday, June 16, 1:00 to 7:00 pm at 8200 St. Lawrence boulevard, corner of Jarry. Included will be Mexican music, dance, games and, hold on to your tongue, food. The event is called a "Mexican popular festival" or "Kermesse traditional." Senors, senoras, senoritas and ninos are all invited.

Local Rathbone Theatre offers summer course

For the first time this summer, Westmount's Rathbone Theatre drama school, 443 Prince Albert avenue, will offer a summer session.

The curriculum will differ from the normal season's work which includes all phases of theatre arts. Focus of the summer course will be on creative drama, art and jazz dance, to be taught by Louise Johann, well-known to many Westmounters for the jazz dance classes she held in the Château Maisonneuve, 4998 de Maisonneuve boulevard west, where she lived.

In her classes with the summer school, Ms. Johann will be uniting dramatic expression through movement of dance, to which she has a lyrical approach which she transmits to her students.

The course, being offered in early July, will consist of 35 hours of instruction and an open house.

BEYOND . . .

Continued from previous page and Uinigumissutung will be at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts until Sept. 16. Just in case you think I have a terminal case of typewriter finger run-on, let me assure you that the above are merely the different names for the Inuit sea goddess. On display at the museum will be Inuit sculptures, prints, didactic texts and charts depicting her and explaining the myths surrounding the goddess. Although the stories differ slightly from region to region, the sea goddess is a central figure in the traditional life of the Inuit. Crossing her could result in starvation, bad weather or sickness. The exhibition is part of the Highlights of the Collection series.

Quebec photos at Place des Arts

"Photography: a documentary of Quebec in the 1970s" is the title of the exhibition currently at Place des Arts as part of the Expositions Flammarion. Several Québec photographers, including Westmounter Gabor Szilasi, depict the Quebecers' daily life on three levels: rural Québec, perpetual change in Québec, and the social and political side of Québec. The exhibition is described as a "striking social commentary." It can be seen daily, 9:00 am to 6:00 pm.

October crisis relived in film

If you haven't yet had a chance to see Robin Spry's film "Action: The October Crisis," you can catch it tonight at 7:00 at the Conservatoire d'Art Cinématographique de Montréal, 1455 de Maisonneuve west. This is a National Film Board production.

These streets were made for walking

The Save Montreal walking tours of the city have started for another summer. Each tour takes in a certain neighborhood and a bilingual guide points out the social problems such as demolition, speculation and fires. Each tour is about two hours long, and the next one is Sunday, June 17. Meeting place will be the northeast corner of Sherbrooke and Jeanne-Mance at 2:00 pm for an exploration of St. Louis south. Wednesday's (June 20) tour will be of St. Lawrence boulevard and the meeting place will be the southwest corner of St. Lawrence and Coloniale at 6:30 pm. The tours are free but they won't refuse a $1.00 contribution. Future tours will include St. Denis, Terrasse Ontario, the Golden Square Mile, St. Jacques, Lincoln-Tupper, and downtown west.

Chinese style art on show

Five Chinese brush paintings by Jennifer Clare Pearson, 4042 Dorchester boulevard, will be among those on exhibit June 18 to 30 in a show of works by students of Virginia Chang.

Ms. Chang, a resident of Westmount, operates Studio J. C. Chang in downtown Montreal and teaches the art of Chinese brush painting. The exhibition will be held in the Alcan Aluminum Lobby, 1 Place Ville Marie, and may be seen from 9 am to 6 pm daily except Sunday.

Miss Pearson, who is graduating from Westmount High School this spring, started doing Chinese painting when she lived with her family in Hong Kong.

slogans and listening to megaphone-boosted speeches before a joyful Mayor MacCallum, followed by the rest of council, was drawn outside to cheer what he termed "The best demonstration we have had in Westmount in years."

"We are quite prepared to listen and to act . . . within the realms of the reasonable and the possible," the mayor shouted into the megaphone. He invited them into city hall but warned they would have to sit through an hour-long formal session of council before being heard.

As it turned out, some 50 paraders took him up on the offer, but not before presenting council with a three-speed bike to "enjoy all the perils of driving on city streets until you can establish a safe bike route," as one organizer explained.

The mayor, in still-evident spirit of joviality, thanked them for "a very attractive bribe."

Council had included bike paths as an item on its formal agenda for the evening though Ald. David Carruthers, when the time came to discuss the subject, had little to report.

CYCLISTS AT CITY HALL: Mayor Donald MacCallum, right, addresses some 200 cyclists who paraded to city hall Monday evening to ask for city action in establishing safe bicycle paths in the city.

(The topic apparently had been mulled over during the in-camera committee session preceding the 8 pm meeting.)

Recreation paths too

Both on the steps and during the question period following the session, Mrs. Georgina Howick, one of the organizers, told His Worship that the group were asking not just for a commuter route, but for recreational paths in all parts of the city. The commuter route, she said, should follow the CPR tracks as proposed by the City of Montreal, which is still deliberating the idea.

Mrs. Howick reminded council that she had addressed them a month earlier with the appeal for bike paths, when she had been told council wondered about the extent of demand, the types of paths being demanded, and the problem of cost to the city. The latter question had been answered by the mayor himself just that morning, she pointed out, when he said on CBC's "Daybreak" program that money no longer was a problem.

Michele MacDougall, another organizer, then announced she had received a promise that morning from Westmount MNA George Springate to "do his utmost to see that a late application is put through right away" for partial provincial funding of commuter bike routes (see separate story).

Mayor MacCallum proved to the crowd that he had done some homework on the topic, having discussed the situation with Mr. Lamarre, though he was waiting for a "cost estimate" from Montreal. He also spoke that morning with Montreal West Mayor Roy Locke, but discovered Montreal has not approached that community about a comprehensive east-west bike path.

So far as recreational bike paths are concerned, Mayor Locke had pointed out to Mayor MacCallum that citizens of Westmount have easy access to the newly established Lachine Canal bike path. Beyond this, there were other paths on Montreal Island, though even the Montreal Urban Community, which has prepared an extensive path plan for the island, could see no way of fitting Westmount in.

Such talk, it would seem, gave the bike enthusiasts the idea that Mayor MacCallum might be backing down, or at least softening his commitment.

Made more fervent

Mrs. MacDougall reported she was "all too aware" of what other municipalities had to offer, but that made her "all the more fervent" about "a route in our own city where we own homes and pay taxes." She added: "I have always loved living here, because we are such an innovative and creative city."

Mrs. Christine Sun, another of the organizing trio, and a recent arrival in Westmount from Sweden, agreed.

"Why is the street only for the cars?" she asked, pointing out that both cars and bikes share Swedish streets. "I'm scared stiff to drive on the streets here."

"Cyclists simply deserve a fair share of city streets," chimed in Shelley Lipsey, 72 York street, to a prolonged applause.

Ald. Carruthers then tried presenting another olive-branch of peace, suggesting that a new approach might be for citizens and city officials to sit down together and determine the "intersections and streets which are perilous," perhaps with a view to diverting cyclists from those points to routes which would be safer for riding through Westmount.

Despite his reputation as a major proponent of the bike cause on council, Ald. Carruthers then pointed ou[t] that the number of bike licence[s]

For extended summer: Greece

By RICK KERRIGAN

The warm uncertain days of spring usually are accompanied by thoughts of idyllic summer months and the realization that barely a quarter of the Canadian year is T-shirt and bathing-suit weather.

And as lovely as our summers can be, they are usually spiced with a few days that come close to qualifying for winter. What our summers lack are those endless, initiative numbing days of blazing sun and cloudless blue sky. That's what summer is all about: putting one's mind and body in neutral and letting the world turn without you — total indolence.

There are few places in Canada which even approach this ideal. The mountains, forests, lakes and streams beckon with far too many activities for the ideal lazy summer. The beaches of P.E.I. come close at times but the spell is broken by a dip in the often icy waters of the gulf. For true idleness we need perpetual sun, warm ocean water, inexpensive accommodation, inexpensive and tasty food and, ideally, a different cultural environment.

The Greek islands in the Aegean sea fit the bill: a warm, clear ocean to swim in, an average of 300 days of sunshine per year and a mean summer temperature of 28 degrees. Depending on your tastes, the cost of living will be very reasonable.

Seen in many ways

Greece can be seen in many ways and there are activities for those who like to take in as many sights as possible and for those who prefer to settle on just a few spots and soak up the local culture. Whether on an organized tour or improvising, you probably will start your trip to Greece in Athens. This will delight the doers but should not be overlooked by the inherently lazy. A tour of the city's museums and of the Acropolis is well worth the leg work.

For those who want an Aegean islands vacation planned for them, several cruises can allow you to island hop in luxury, but you won't spend much time in any one place and a strict schedule is not in harmony with a culture lacking the North American sense of time.

Making your own way from island to island is easy enough by local ferry service and every village has a pension with startlingly low room rates. Nourishment can be had at the local markets or at one of the many small inexpensive restaurants serving tasty Greek food. Should your budget be particularly limited or the pensions full, you can camp near some beaches with no fear of being rained on.

Necessities are easy

With food, lodging and transportation easily obtained you can concentrate your energies on doing as much or as little as you like. Swimming and sunbathing probably will be two of your major activities and they may be enjoyed wearing as much or as little as you like, depending on the beach.

Mykonos is one of the better known islands and it has become popular with tourists and artists. This should not deter you from at least a brief stay on this rocky island to explore the beaches, churches and the archaeological museum. The nearby island of Siros is where many Greeks spend their vacations.

Farther south lies the island of Ios, according to legend the burial place of the poet Homer. The capital city, Ios, has about 400 chapels.

The Greek islands offer a way of life for practically everybody. You can do nothing but enjoy the sun and walk in the hills or you can stick with an archaeologically inclined itinerary. You can cruise luxuriously from one island to another in a modern ship, or hang out with the villagers in the local tavernas and hop a ferry when the spirit so moves.

We can help you reach a beach or bright lights or both. We've been there, and that makes a world of difference. We know the places to stay, the sights to see, the things to do in holiday spots around the world. Call us.

We can find you a getaway.

Call us for details!

issued by the city — a supposed indication of cycling popularity locally — has dropped severely this year (a point made at council's May meeting).

Mrs. MacDougall immediately objected, sensing again that council was backing down from its commitment. The licences are a waste of a $2 fee, she said, since citizens can keep their own identification records, and the money does nothing to help cyclists in the city.

As the repartee developed further, Mayor MacCallum tried unsucessfully to close off debate. This brought an objection from Jamie MacDougall, husband of the organizer, who wanted to know other councillors' feelings. The mayor, who holds the floor during such discussions, refused.

The two exchanged barbs several times, with Mr. MacDougall eventually charging that "Council members can't speak for themselves."

Though the mayor then tried to promise a committee meeting with the organizers "within the week," Mrs. MacDougall demanded a firm commitment from council immediately, else she would take the issue to radio and television stations throughout the city. As the mayor refused, she stormed out of the council chambers, unwilling to listen to his explanation.

Ald. Alwyn Lloyd, reticent until then, felt the threat was the last blow. He had the feeling of "being bulldozed into the corner" despite his mayor's promise of "meaningful dialogue." Other citizens, he said, were spending a "goodly number of hours" trying to help the city, without once threatening such confrontation tactics.

As the mood simmered, His Worship tried to explain to Mrs. Howick why the city was in no firm position to commit itself, once and for all, to a definite bicycle path. Mrs. Howick refused to listen; the mayor, "fed up" with the course of events, banged the gavel and ended the meeting amid boos and hisses from the crowd.

Despite her anger and that of the crowd, Mrs. MacDougall agreed to speak to General Manager Norman Dawe following the meeting, to set a date for a meeting with city officials.

Next day, Mayor MacCallum told The Examiner he felt there was "nothing negative about our approach to it," and agreed there had been enough interest shown to get the subject on the table.

"I don't judge from that that there were enough people," he said, however. "They demonstrated an interest, but I don't want to take a position yet. If there are enough people something will be done."

He did not indicate how he thought that interest should be expressed.

The entire incident shocked and saddened him, he said, but would not deter his or council's interest in the subject. "It left a bad taste in my mouth," he commented.

Casual discussions with two other aldermen brought the same reaction. "In my four years I have never been so badly treated," Ald. Brian Gallery mentioned. "It was more of a hurt than anything else. It's the biggest disappointment I have had."

Ald. P. André Gervais repeated the views, charging that the citizens "were just interested in talking, not listening. People on council have tried to be objective. I don't think it was representative of Westmount."

Mrs. Sun called The Examiner to dissociate herself from the more dramatic antics, apologizing on behalf of the Westmount Bicycle Path Committee.

"It (the confrontation) doesn't reflect our attitude," she said. "Things got out of hand."

She added that the committee is willing to give the city a chance, but would watch developments closely during the summer.

Farm land is now outlawed by city

No Westmount farmers turned out to insist on the protection of their farmland last May 17, Assistant City Clerk Robert Wilkins reported to city council Monday night. Despite the seeming lack of interest, he was forced to report this fact in a lengthy, provincially mandated speech.

The public meeting had been called to hear representations concerning Quebec's agricultural zoning bill, even though Westmount does not allow for such "agricultural zones" in its regular municipal zoning by-law.

Because there was no public interest in having farms locally, council was able to approve a resolution to the effect that "no lots in the City of Westmount be included in the agricultural zone plan of the City."

With the resolution, Mayor Donald MacCallum, whose 4300 de Maisonneuve boulevard residence rests on what was one of the last known farm properties in the city, was able to declare that "there will never be" farm land in Westmount, from this time forward.

"Well, no farmers came forward," shrugged Ald. David Carruthers.

"It's too late now," chimed in Ald. Muriel Kaplan.

RENT WITH OPTION TO BUY

If your home is on the market long enough, you'll hear the proposition: "I'll rent your home with the option to buy." We've heard it time and again. It is usually made by someone who wants to get out of the rain and is not serious about buying any house.

I would not advise you to rent your home under these circumstances unless there is a serious consideration for the option over above the rent. The consideration should be a significant amount because you are removing your home from the market. The longer the period of time, the larger the consideration. The option may or may not apply against the sale price. These and many other items should all be specified in the option contract which should be drafted with even more care than the usual purchase and sale agreement.

Most important of all—remember that you are now culling your prospects down to one, one who has already told you he would prefer to rent than buy.

Parents will decide Roslyn H&S fate

Parents of students at Roslyn School will be receiving ballots at the end of this week asking them to decide the fate of Roslyn's Home and School Association.

Some 20 Roslyn parents decided on the move Monday evening at a meeting held prior to the regular meeting of the school committee. The home and school association at the school has, effectively, been non-operational for several years, since the institution of the government-mandated school committees which provide for parent input into the educational system.

The home and school group, a long-standing institution at the school, has continued to exist on paper in recent years and has collected membership fees, part of which went automatically to the Westmount-based Quebec Federation of Home and School Associations, while the rest was used to finance various school activities.

A spokesman for the school committee said this week that the committee could easily generate these funds from other activities and that many members of the committee no longer saw the need to have, in effect, two parent groups at the school.

The parents who met Tuesday, however, decided they were not representative enough to decide the home and school association's fate, so direct consultation with the parents was decided as the best way to decide whether the group should fold.

The ballots were scheduled to be sent home with students today or tomorrow.

Executive is named

The newly chosen Roslyn School committee met Monday evening for their first session since the election at a meeting May 31 and named executives for the 1979-80 year.

Internal chairman is Maureen Lofthouse, 416 Grosvenor avenue, while Elizabeth Annesley, 226 Prince Albert avenue, formerly active in the Westmount Park School committee, was chosen external chairman.

Judy Bourne, 9 Lansdowne ridge, will serve as secretary and Tony Lemoine, 654 Murray Hill, was named treasurer.

Ald. Gervais named last pro-mayor

Westmount's newest council member, Ald. P. André Gervais, was appointed pro-mayor of the city Monday night for the final four-plus months of the present council's term of office.

The public safety commissioner thus will be substitute mayor—when needed—and chairman of general committee of council until a new city council is elected early in November. His term of office as pro-mayor begins next month.

Mayor Donald MacCallum pointed out to council that once the fall's municipal election campaign starts, only he and Pro-Mayor Gervais will remain in office until the new council members have been sworn in.

Also Monday evening, Ald. Alwyn Lloyd was reconfirmed as Mayor MacCallum's substitute for meetings of the Montreal Urban Community Council from July through October.

Got purse

A Selby street woman was reunited with her purse by police last Sunday. The purse was discovered on Bruce avenue and contained cheques, a driver's licence, personal cards, credit cards, keys and a wallet.

pistol."

"I don't like this any better than anybody else," he said, "but we are going to cure this vandalism and that's it!"

He said later that the city has hired the extra rangers to be in the parks on weekends and during the week — mostly at night — to boost the patrols of the regular park rangers. Outremont and other municipalities have used similar guards very effectively, he explained.

Despite the guards, it seems the vandalism in continuing. A window was broken in the Westmount Park comfort station last Wednesday night and a sign was smashed in Devon Park Thursday or Friday.

"The House of Service for the last 30 years"

NO REPORT: Last Friday an Examiner photographer found this white Volkswagen Rabbit parked on Prince Albert avenue north of Windsor avenue, its window smashed in with glass lying on the front seat and on the ground outside. He dutifully phoned a downtown police dispatcher to report the incident, returned to the car and took some photos. Police had not arrived 20 minutes later, so he left. On Tuesday, an official at Westmount's Station 23 said he could find no report whatsoever of the incident, not even on that day's car logs of local patrol cars. Wonder what the cops were doing that day . . .

Block parent contest

How would you like to be prime minister of the province?

The winner of a contest being organized by the Block Parent Association in honor of "The year of the child" will become prime minister of Quebec for one day in October. Further details of this contest are not yet available but will be made known to everyone as soon as possible.

Two bicycles were found recently in the vicinity of King George Park, one of which is a child's yellow bike. Others were picked up on both Kensington avenue and at Summit Park. If you think you are the owner of one of the these bicycles don't hesitate to call us.

Serious damage has been done recently in our parks. I would like to remind you that the parks are there for your recreation and enjoyment; they are your property as much as anyone's and it is up to each of us to protect these public areas from vandals.

Anyone who witnesses vandalism should consider it a duty to report it to the police. An intelligent person will not cause damage to public or private property nor will they ignore or tolerate such actions by others.

The window of the back door of a house on Prince Albert avenue was broken last Wednesday afternoon between 1:30 and 3:30 as someone tried unsuccessfully to break into the house during the owner's absence.

Summer program in playgrounds to start June 26

By PIERRE GOAD

The Westmount recreation department summer playground program is ready to go for another season and, with the end of the school year approaching, the program's start is near.

Registration will begin Tuesday, June 26, and will continue throughout the program until it closes Aug. 23. Activities are held in Westmount and Prince Albert Parks and Westmount residents age 6 to 16 are invited to take part for the whole summer, one day, or any days in between.

A busy summerful of activities has been planned for the program, centered around the theme "A Child's World." Activities planned include swimming, arts and crafts, trips, bowling, movies, sports, tours, roller skating, picnics, boating, contests, cook-outs and games.

Participants are reminded that registration forms will not be accepted unless the number from a current recreation department pass is included in the space provided on the form.

Registration is held every day of the program in both parks. For further information, contact the recreation department by calling 932-4293.

Two ties in soccer

Czechoslovakia and The Netherlands frustrated their respective fans Saturday morning by playing to a 1-1 draw in atom league action in the recreation department's mini world cup soccer program.

Meanwhile, Switzerland increased its lead in the atom standings by blanking Hungary 3-9.

There was also a tie in peewee soccer action Saturday as Brazil and England each scored twice in their contest. In the final peewee match, France downed Sweden 3-1.

Westmount soccer teams have also been taking on other teams from different parts of Montreal to test their soccer acumen. The Irish of the novice age group took on Montreal West last week and battled to a scoreless draw in an exciting game.

Argentina, representing the local bantam section, defeated Macdonald Park of N.D.G. recently by the close score of 2-1.

At 7 o'clock this evening, Westmount peewees will meet the Benny Park team from N.D.G. The game will be played at the Westmount Athletic Grounds behind Westmount High School.

GIRLS' SOCCER ACTION: Members of the Cheetahs and the Pink Panthers are in hot pursuit of the soccer ball during a game at Prince Albert park last Wednesday. The Cheetahs won 2-1. The girls program, run by Beverley Adams Adelabu, includes girls from eight to 13 years-old.

Softball nears end of season

The last games of the regular season in the Westmount recreation department's softball leagues are being played this week and players will soon be wrapped up in the tension of playoff action.

On Monday, the Mets hammered the Expos 20-4 in peewee play and the Reds played dead to a suddenly alive cellar-dwelling Braves team, losing an important game 6-4. The Dodgers, meanwhile, tripled the output of the Cubs in taking home two points from a 9-3 win.

Bantam teams played last Thursday in mediocre weather, with only the Royals walking off with a two-point win. They downed the unfortunate Pirates 17-7. The Twins and the Cards each scored nine runs in their game, thus splitting the two points in the standings.

Hillside Place loss below budget

The Hillside Place public housing project is doing better financially than anticipated, Ald. Alwyn Lloyd happily reported Monday evening, operating at a deficit $20,000 less than budgeted.

The city's finance commissioner was able to report that the project is costing Westmount taxpayers only $12,700, after taking into account taxes and power revenue the city collects from the property, despite the fact Westmount has assumed the payment of $178,000 of the project's initial $1.6 million cost.

Ald. Lloyd presented the 1978 financial statement of the city's municipal housing bureau to council Monday evening, reporting that the 65 apartment units brought a rental income of $83,385 (plus other revenues of $2,233) while costing some $238,685 to operate. Ninety percent of the net loss of $153,067 is paid by the Quebec Housing Commission, leaving Westmount with a bill of $15,307.

Beyond this, the city paid out approximately $17,800 to cover its additional loan for the excess cost of the project (to make it meet municipal housing standards), meaning a total out-of-pocket expense of $33,100.

To counter these costs, Ald. Lloyd explained, Westmount gets municipal taxes (beyond services provided to the project) of about $9,000, and makes a profit on power sold to the tenants of about $11,400. Thus, with $20,400 coming back to the city, the net cost to taxpayers is only about $12,700.

Improvements dropped by $5,446 last year from $10,842 in 1977, according to the report, payment of interest expenses came to nil ($6,481 in 1977) and insurance costs dropped from $8,586 to $3,197 last year. Legal costs were down 45 percent to $555, and association dues down almost 90 percent to only $42 last year.

The net loss (expenditure less revenue) last year was $10,948 less than the loss in 1977.

No changes decided for garbage

Garbage drew the attention of city council members on three occasions during Monday's meeting, as changes in collection procedure and disposal were hinted at though no firm decisions were made.

Council officially rejected the two vastly divergent bids submitted last month by private contractors to pick up city refuse, feeling that neither gave a true picture of the amount which such a service should cost. The city will draw up new specifications and ask for more tenders in August, Public Works Commissioner Ald. David Carruthers reported.

During his report of Montreal Urban Community proceedings, Mayor Donald MacCallum said the MUC council had agreed to establish landfill sites, which would be available for the disposal of garbage. Then later, council started operations to remove from a recent loan by-law references to reconstruction of the city incinerator, which has been stack-less since late last year.

Mayor MacCallum said later that council still had not decided whether or not to rebuild the stack, since it is not certain any stack could meet the MUC's new anti-pollution by-laws. Council also will be examining the relative cost of building the new stack against the cost of hauling and dumping at MUC landfill sites.

It will be quite some time before a firm decision is reached, he indicated.

Though the future of the incinerator is unknown, council approved another resolution committing $5,120 for repairs to the incinerator plant's heating system.

Firemen begin inspections

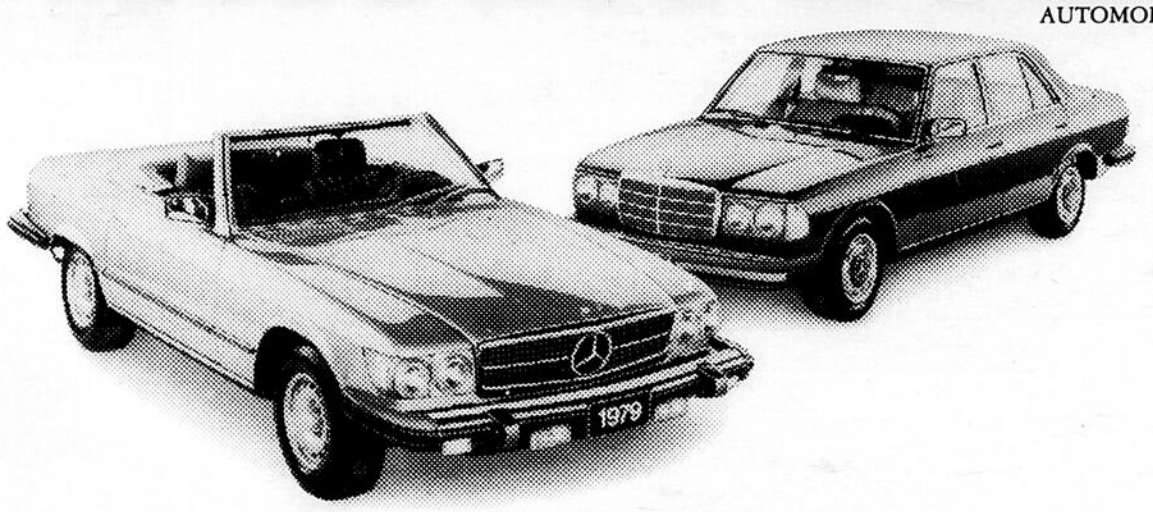

The annual home in-service fire inspections have been begun by the Westmount Fire Brigade, so don't be surprised if a firetruck appears in front of your house complete with a crew wishing to check the homes in your vicinity for possible fire hazards.

Don't be surprised either if the crew inspecting your home departs suddenly without completing the inspection as the firemen carrying out these inspections are on duty and could be called at anytime to the scene of a fire.

These inspections are carried out without notice to residents and often many homes cannot be checked because no one is home when the firemen come. If your house or flat has not been checked, or if you are buying a new home or moving into a new flat, you can arrange for a fire safety check by contacting the fire station.
