Canadians Carry Eight And A Half Billion Insurance

Dealing with a subject which was extremely difficult to handle without "sounding his own trumpet" or unduly boosting his own wares, and seeking to enhance the value of the line of business he is engaged in, Walter W. Murray, C.L.U., manager of the uptown branch of the North American Life Assurance Company, a member and director of the Westmount Rotary Club, speaking at the club's regular weekly luncheon Wednesday, carefully avoided everything that might have been construed as advertising or publicity, and still made his address extremely interesting and instructive.

Even the name of his company was mentioned only a couple of times, and in a purely casual manner.

He had chosen for subject of his address: "Life Insurance a Vital Factor in Canada's Economy," and in support of this contention he stated there were over four million policyholders paying premiums of a quarter billion dollars annually. They are insured for over eight and a half billions with an average amount of insurance slightly over $2,000.

In his opening remarks Mr. Murray outlined the history of insurance.

The exact origin of Life Insurance is lost in antiquity, said the speaker. The earliest form of insurance was Marine Insurance which goes back to the old Roman days when ship owners were able to insure both ship and cargo for each voyage. tI is thought that someone eventually got the bright idea of insuring the captain also, in case his valuable services

He served as an instructor with the R.A.F. at Port Albert, Ont., and was supervisor of the R.C.A.F. navigation schools west of Regina, prior to going overseas in September, 1942. He returned here in the fall of last year and just recently left for England. SO. Maclure, R.C.A.F. (WD), is adjutant at R.C.A.F. Convalescent Hospital at Saraguay. With the R.C.A.F. Gives Lecture On Mining Work

Talking on "Thoughts on Mining", Professor L. W. Bladon, Macdonald Professor of Mining Engineering at McGill University, stressed the necessity of greater development of the mining industry in Canada, and the adoption of more modern and scientific methods of extracting mineral ores and processing them for their use in industry.

The address, which was devoid of most technical terms, was delivered in Moyse Hall recently, and was listened to most attentively by a good audience.

The speaker, to emphasize the need for better and more productive mining, pointed out that it had been estimated that each man in the armed forces today required 4,900 pounds of metal as against only 94 pounds in the Great War.

The lecture was the first in a series of public inaugural addresses by new McGill professors to introduce them to the community and the university body.

Prof. Bladon was introduced by Dr. F. Cyril James, principal and vice-chancellor.

Prof. Bladon outlined the history of the mining industry up to the modern industrial age, and showed that with the exhaustion of high grade and easily accessible ore and resources ever increasing, the mining industry had of necessity to consider the introduction of mining methods to meet increasing demands.

Born in Montreal and educated in that city and at Westmount High School, Prof. Bladon graduated from McGill in 1926 with the degree of B.Sc. in mining engineering. He gained considerable experience in actual and practical mining in Europe and on this continent. After the outbreak of the war he enlisted in the R.C.A.F. but was released to take over his important duties as professor at McGill.

Form New Unit In Mount Royal

In the absence of Captain R. H. Green, who was to have been Inspecting officer of the evening, Captain J. H. Richardson was pleased to have the 1940 membership cards presented by Lieut. John Johnstone of the 9th Toronto Company who happened to be passing through the city and dropped in rather unexpectedly on the Company. His visit was a most pleasant surprise and he was accorded a warm welcome by the officers and boys. During the evening he drilled the Company, instructed signalling and assisted with the physical training class. It is hoped he will again visit the unit before he is posted elsewhere.

The N.C.O.'s bowling league will commence its fall and winter schedule this coming Saturday afternoon and an interesting season is anticipated.

News that a Battalion Shield for physical training is to be up for challenge this session has spurred the team to increased enthusiasm. Some of the newer members to the class have been showing great talent and Staff-Sergeant Edwin Goring is planning a very interesting display for the mid-winter company night. Lieuts. A. G. Anderson and A. G. Upham have one of the largest First Aid Classes in many years and are progressing at a rapid rate. Lance/Cpl. Alistair Riddell, star member of this group has also been giving a considerable amount of instruction.

The 1st Company has been lending a hand in the formation of a new unit in Mount Royal and has loaned Lieut. A. G. Upham and Sgt. Bob Eastwood for the session, until their officers have been fully trained. There has always been a very close tie between Garden City Church and the 1st Company and this has been further strengthened by the formation of this new unit.

Sentenced To Long Term In Penitentiary

Two years in the penitentiary was the sentence imposed upon Armand Henri Arcand, who has no known address, on Wednesday, by Deputy Recorder A. E. Laverty.

The accused had been found in possession of stolen goods, mostly ladies' and men's coats, and other wearing apparel which had been stolen from a number of residents in Westmount.

E. J. Anderson, superintendent of parks in this city, announced this week that the figure skating rink in Westmount Park will be re-opened this winter. The rink has been out of operation for the past couple of seasons, closing up just when it was proving a very popular atrtaction to the younger set of the city. It is expected that a large number of skaters will avail themselves of the opportunity to join up when the rink opens again.

The rink will be situated on the adult tennis courts in Westmount Park, its former site, and it will be open Monday through Saturday.

Professional instruction will be available, but as yet no instructor or instructress has been appointed.

Season tickets will be available at the office in the greenhouse as soon as the rink is opened, daily tickets will be available at the rink when it opens. As in other years, the membership of the club will not be restricted to the residents of Westmount.

MACKAY INSTITUTE

The Annual Meeting of this Institution will be held at the School, 3544 Decarie Boulevard, Montreal on Friday, November 17th at 4 o'clock p.m.

Room Rentals Held Exorbitant

Exorbitant prices for rooms in Westmount have been cited in communications to the city authorities from the Welfare Bureau of the Soldiers' Wives League through the Co-ordinating Council of the Welfare Committees, the Examiner has been informed.

In one case on Roslyn Avenue tenants are compelled to accept from the landlord receipts for less rental than is actually paid—a palpable evasion of rental control regulations.

Due to the fact that the administration of rental control is vested entirely in the hands of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board through its rental administration, the city is unable to take any action to halt the imposition.

Y.M. Badminton Club Elects Officers

Westmount Y.M.C.A. Badminton Club which plays at the Junior High School on Wednesday evenings and King's School on Friday evenings elected the following officers last night:

Pres., Lt. A. S. Robb; vice-pres., Miss B. Endersby; secretary, Miss G. Morgan; treasurer, Miss Collins; social convener, Miss Elsie Patterson; members at large, Miss Dorothy Pering, Miss Lorna Ferguson and Miss Jean Adam.

Plans are now under way to arrange several special social evenings, following Badminton.

GIVEN THREE MONTHS

Marcel Ratelle, of no given address, who was arrested by the Westmount Police on a charge of theft of money while employed as a messenger for a local store, was found guilty and sentenced on Tuesday to three months in jail by Recorder C. A. Hale.

"Y" To Celebrate Fifth Birthday

Westmount Y.M.C.A. will celebrate the fifth birthday of its weekly dances for members of the forces, on Saturday evening, Nov. 18th.

Dances have been held every Saturday evening since Nov. 1939, and 60,000 members of the services have participated.

The ladies committee at the present time is: Mrs. W. D. Scott, Mrs. W. S. Gilpin and Mrs. E. M. Compton, Senior Hostesses.

Junior Hostesses: Misses Peggy French, Dorothy Coldrick, Florence Goode and Marjory Cornell.

Refreshment committee: Mrs. Brodie, Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. Kneeland, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Drain, Mrs. Spearman, Mrs. McHattie and Mrs. Stan Gilpin.

Other members of the committee are W. S. Gilpin, chairman, F. B. Wilson and F. W. McHattie.

The regular Saturday night dances have been a real feature. Many of the ladies serving on the committees have served right from the start, five years ago.

Found in Parks

The following articles have been found in the municipal parks and they may be claimed at the comfort station in the park where they were found.

Westmount Park: three sets of false teeth; baby's plaid carriage blanket; black velvet beanie.

King George Park: two boys' windbreakers.

TEENAGERS DANCE

The teen-age people of Westmount turned out well for the first Friday night dance.

This event promises to be a well worth-while project, providing supervised fun and frolic for all young people between the ages of 14 and 19.

Nominate C.C.F. Delegates

At a meeting held on Tuesday evening at the International Tobacco Workers' Union on St. Antoine street, the Westmount-St. Lawrence division of the C.C.F. nominated Mrs. E. T. Bourke as delegate to represent the joint clubs at the national convention to be held at the Windsor Hotel on November 29 and 30 and December 1.

Major Romeo Lafond and S. W. Griffin were nominated alternate delegates. Dr. J. Cyril Flanagan was in the chair.

KINGSMEN CLUB

Junior "Kingsmen" are in no way related to the "Kinsmen". They form an entirely separate organization, a club of boys whose ages range between eight and twelve years.

They have their headquarters at 826 Atwater avenue, Westmount.

In a story about the club, which apeared in last week's issue of the "Examiner", the "g" in the name of the club was, unfortunately but unintentionally, left out, the printers having taken it for granted that the name should have read "Kinsmen", without the "g".

KNOW YOUR WESTMOUNT

SNOW REMOVAL

Question: How does Westmount deal with this winter problem?

One of the most difficult problems which face our City is that of keeping open for traffic the public sidewalks and roadways during the winter season especially so in times like these when there is a great scarcity of labour.

Our City is situated in an area where the fall of snow during winter may easily reach a total of ten feet. It has exceptionally steep streets and owing to its location carries heavy traffic passing through from East to West in the metropolitan area.

Every detail of keeping these streets and sidewalks in good condition must be planned in advance to the smallest detail not only to clear the snow that falls but to take care of all the vagaries of weather which with such suddenness is encountered—such as sleet storms, freezing rain and alternate thawing and freezing which causes the whole area to become slippery at once.

Preparation for these conditions really begins during the summer when in the shops at the Corporation Yard the tractors, snow ploughs, graders and machinery for crushing and loading cinders is overhauled and prepared for the earliest snow storms.

At this season of the year when the falling of leaves has just ended the observant citizen will notice preparations being made which all have a bearing on the winter problem.

The catch basins at street corners are being cleaned out so that they may be clear to take the water from winter and spring thaws and to prevent them becoming blocked through freezing.

The water courses through the ramps which lead to all driveways are being cleared to permit a free flow down the gutters in the spring.

Wooden covers are being placed on all public steps where found to be necessary.

Citizens are being asked to remove those large loose stones and other obstructions which they often place to mark the entrance to driveways. If not removed these stones might break the ploughs and other machinery used in clearing the sidewalks as they cannot be seen when snow lies heavy on the ground. For the same reason the citizens are asked to remove those fences which lie close to the public sidewalk and are often placed to protect the lawn from careless pedestrians.

The observant citizen might also see tractors being driven along the sidewalks though no snow has yet fallen. This shows that new drivers are being trained to follow a predetermined route which they must follow when storms are to be cleared as familiarity with the walks and all difficulties are vitally necessary to carry out clearing operations at night, in a blizzard or when a white blanket of snow covers everything.

Similar training is given all other machine operators such as those who plough the roadways and those who handle the large snow loaders.

The following of predetermined routes in all such operations was adopted in Westmount even before automotive machinery was first used for snow removal. To ensure an economical use of all units the Roads Department staff prepare blueprints of each route for each machine and each operator is given a copy and trained to make use of it so that in case of emergency he may be able to become a substitute in a section other than his own.

Next week we shall tell how these preparations are used to combat an actual storm but before we end may we ask the reader on behalf of those who have to care for our sidewalks to remove those little fences and the obstructions near the public sidewalks which they placed during the summer. It will prevent damage to the Municipal machinery and help to give us all a better service.

West End Workers Aid C.N.R. Drive For Victory Loan

Many of the men and women of the Canadian National Railways headquarters staff, who aided their fellow employees throughout the system in rolling up an all-Canada record in the Seventh Victory Loan, are residents of Notre Dame de Grace and Westmount. The amount subscribed was $12,893,850, an increase of $3,766,750 over the total subscription by the company's employees in the Sixth Loan which was the Canadian record for employee loan purchases up to that time. G. S. Cowie, assistant treasurer, who was in charge of the headquarters loan campaign resides at 5891 Notre Dame de Grace Avenue.

Throughout the system 92,110 workers purchased bonds, an increase of 9,742 over the number subscribing in the Sixth Loan.

"When the Seventh Victory Loan campaign opened" R. C. Vaughan, Chairman and President, C.N.R., stated, "I said that as employees of the largest industry in Canada, the staffs of the Canadian National Railways were naturally expected to give the lead. I am more than proud of the way they have responded, throughout the System, from coast to coast. But I was confident of the result; I knew that we would break our record again. The employees of the Canadian National System know what the war means. As members of a vital industry on the home front, they make a contribution in their daily work. They are blood donors, active members of the many groups organized for the welfare of troops and their families, and supporters of all the public appeals. They have relatives overseas. Twenty thousand of their fellow-workers are on active service."

Since the beginning of the First Victory Loan, the employees have bought bonds amounting to $48,945,550. The C.N.R. companies have bought $90,556,900 worth of bonds, which they are still holding. The grand total for Companies and employees to date is $139,502,450. This is devided as follows: Canadian National Railways System $88,511,400; Trans-Canada Air Lines $2,045,500; employees, C.N.R. $47,187,150; employees, T.C.A. $1,032,750; employees National Railways Munitions $725,650.

By uniting gaseous hydrocarbons to form liquid hydrocarbons of higher molecular weight, it is possible to produce motor fuel from our large reserves of natural gas. This process would not deplete the normal supply of natural gas, as only the unwanted constituents are removed for motor fuel.

The year of greatest employment prior to the war was 1929 when the average number of persons employed was 46,700,000, or 19,600,000 persons less than the present labor supply, including the armed forces.

Paper for Troops Being Produced By Father and Son

Father and son combinations are few in contemporary Canadian journalism. One of the most interesting is a comparatively recent creation. The result is the Canadian Overseas Mail produced by a father and son, one a veteran of the Great War and another who has seen service in the present conflict.

The paper is produced for those who are or have been at one time or other serving Canada at home or abroad.

Evan Morton, comes from a family that has been Canadian for generations. He is 34, and prior to volunteering in 1939 he had worked for newspapers and news agencies in Canada, Britain, France and Spain for more than ten years. He has been the editor of two weekly newspapers.

Very early in the war, he joined the D.E.M.S. section of the Royal Navy as a gunlayer. In 1941 he transferred to the Royal Canadian Navy on the grounds that he preferred to serve with his own countrymen.

From June, 1941, until September, 1943, he was continuously at sea in destroyers. For reasons of health he remained ashore for almost a year at H.M.C.S. Niobe, the Canadian base in Britain. Here he acted as librarian and was closely associated with the educational branch of the Navy.

His experience at Niobe convinced him that the information contained in The Canadian Overseas Mail would be welcomed by the men overseas.

In September, 1944, he was discharged from the Navy "At Own Request." His rate on discharge was Leading Seaman, Quarters Rating Second Class.

He has no politics. His hobbies include fishing—and going to sea.

During the last great war Arthur C. Morton served overseas with the Canadian Railway Troops building narrow-guage transportation in the forward area in Belgium.

On demobilization in 1918 he ebcame editor of the Veterans' Department of the Montreal Daily Star and through this medium assisted thousands of returned men to get a square deal.

He was at one time President and Managing Director of the Montreal Daily Herald, and he is known throughout Canadian Rotary as a former member of the Canadian Advisory Committee of Rotary International. He is a past President of the Rotary Club of Montreal.

He has always been very active in helping servicemen in many ways. His decision to establish The Canadian Overseas Mail came as a result of information provided by his four sons overseas, and of conversation with returned men and with the parents of sailors, soldiers and airmen on active service.

He has a special interest in publishing this newspaper as during the past five years, he has had one son in the Navy, one a war correspondent with the Toronto Daily Star in Italy, one a Flight Sergeant (E) with the R.C.A.F. in Britain, and one a Pilot Officer posted as missing on "ops."

Balsa, the lightest wood known to man, is found almost anywhere in the tropics. The wood, one-half as heavy as cork, weighs only five to seven pounds to the cubic foot.

Westmount Pays Tribute To Sons Who Fell In Wars

Civilians, many of them relatives of men who made the supreme sacrifice during the first Great War and of those who have already laid down their lives in the present world conflict, joined veterans of both wars and soldiers in uniform, in a most impressive Remembrance service in front of the War Memorial opposite the Westmount City Hall on Sunday afternoon.

A large number of wreaths were laid at the foot of the monument by the civic authorities, the military representatives, by societies and associations, and by members of families of men who fell in the last war and of those who have already died in the present one.

Hon. Lieut.-Col. Rev. Harold S. Laws, V.D., chaplain of the Royal Montreal Regiment, read the service and during the singing of the hymn "Abide with Me" towards the end of the ceremony, the wreaths were deposited at the monument.

The religious part of the open-air demonstration consisted in a hymn, the reading of a lesson, prayers, and the final singing of "Abide with Me."

The Last Post was sounded by the buglers of the R.M.R., this was followed by two minutes silence, the Reveille by the R.M.R. drums and band, and the National Anthem.

At the close of the demonstration at the war memorial the Royal Montreal Regiment, Legionaires, and Frontiersmen marched past a saluting base at the foot of Stanton avenue on Cote St. Antoine. The salute was taken by Maj.-Gen. Price who was accompanied by army and civil officials.

Prior to the open-air service a special ceremony was conducted by Lieut.-Col. Laws, in the R.M.R. armory on St. Catherine Street, and a wreath to the Regiment's dead was laid by the Honor Roll mounted in the drill hall.

When the regiment returned to the armory after the Remembrance ceremony they were addressed by Maj. Gen. Price who told the members of the unit that he had visited the remaining company of the R.M.R. overseas—the Headquarters Defence Company of the First Canadian Army.

He said he had been with the company shortly after their return from the fighting on the Leopold Canal in Belgium, where they had shown the same old spirit the Regiment always had.

Preceding his brief address General Price had presented the inter-company shooting cup to Major A. F. Shaw, whose No. 3 Company won it in recent competition.

Unity Club News

Glen Wood, physical instructor at Sir George Williams College, has taken over the basketball and indoor sports at the Queen's school gymnasium on Thursday nights. The nights have been changed from Mondays to Thursdays. A few vacancies are still available on the teams.

About 25 of the older boys have made good progress in their swimming at the Westmount Y on Tuesday nights. Tests will be given in swimming and diving in the near future.

Committee members Jack Gardner, Ken Bramble, Fred Dejean, Fred Lord and Doug Ward have had a busy week. Kennie handled the basketball refereeing chores at Queen's school last week and did a splendid job while the others organized ping pong and checker tournaments. Donnie Wadsworth and Fred Dejean were the winners of the tourneys. Twenty new members were enrolled.

Mr. A. Burke Seltzer, an amateur boxer of repute, has high praise for his boxing class, a group of some 30 boys who start the evening with physical exercises and then finish up with boxing instruction. Several of the boys have come in for special mention, amongst them are Fred Dejean, Donald Rolph, Pat Craig and Jack Gardner. Keep up the good work boys!

Lloyd Williams, who broke a window last Friday, found it expensive when he had to replace it —better be careful Lloyd!

Mr. Alan Ross, who has had a lot of experience in boys work, has agreed to help out on Saturday nights at the club and with Mr. Seltzer, should provide a full evening's recreation.

Soccer and floor-ball along with group games have been very popular, with the competition at a high pitch.

Make a note to visit the club on the following nights: Tuesday, swimming at the Westmount Y, 8.30 p.m.; Thursday, basketball and games at Queen's School, 8.00 p.m.; Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights at the Westminster Central United Church on Atwater Avenue for group and quiet games.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

A memorial service will be held in Trinity Memorial Church on Sunday at 4.30 p.m. for Lieutenant James M. Parker, son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Parker of Claremount Avenue, who died of wounds received in action in France last month.

If gratitude is due from man to man, how much more from man to his Maker!—Joseph Addison.

Gordon Pfeiffer Shows Paintings

Gordon E. Pfeiffer of Montreal, formerly of Quebec, who is a fairly constant exhibitor at Montreal shows, is exhibiting a collection of his oils at the Canadian Hall of Fine Art, 1201 Sherbrooke street west, the bulk of his offerings revealing that his main sketching ground has been the rural sections of Quebec province. He has found some capital subjects and in his ramblings has come upon some fine old houses while workers in garden and field have also captured his interest.

Pfeffer also shows a fondness for winter scenes and has some capital examples in this group such as "Barns in Winter", with a red sleigh, while he has found a good subject in "Cape Diamond", with the dwarfed houses beneath fronted by snow and glimpses of open water. In another oil a church is the centre of interest, with adjacent houses and wayside cross, while an old solidly built house, with roof partly bare of snow, are the main pictorial elements in another. A church on an eminence against a blue hill, houses and barns and a hilly road with sleigh is another typical work. He also shows white gladioli in a blue vase, and, in more imaginative vein, "Moonlight Ballet', three white horses prancing on a knoll beneath a crescent moon.

This exhibition will last until November 25.

By Rene de Carteret

Colonel Ralston's resignation recalls the last time he stepped down from a Cabinet post in this fashion in 1930 when the entire King Cabinet left office following the victory of the Conservatives under the leadership of R. B. Bennett.

Soon after the Liberal defeat Col. Ralston visited Montreal to take part in the welcome to the British dirigible R-200 which flew from England to St. Hubert. In the administration building Col. Ralston stood by, listening to the reading of the airship's log by the navigator, Squadron Leader E. A. Johnson, who was later to die in the absortive attempt of R-101 to fly from Croydon to Karachi in India—an attempt that ended in a crash and fire among the Vosage Mountains of France on a night of terrific rainstorms. As Johnston detailed the progress of the successful flight of R-100 he read out the landmarks passed in England and Ireland before the ship headed out over the Atlantic. "We passed Rathlin, and T ory Island on the north of Ireland—" "What did you say, Tory Island"? demanded Ralston. "That's it sir," replied the young officer smiling. "That explains it" ruefully commented the defeated Liberal. "It" was the resounding Tory victory in Canada that had put him and his colleagues out of office.

Front line soldiers are becoming more than a little tired of some of the publicity that is being handed out for their sake and for ours. Here is a recent reaction:

"We think it's high time the copywriters learn that this war is being fought by grown men. We are soldiers, and good ones, and we are fighting because our country is at war and for reasons which grown men understand.

"We get pretty fed up with the sticky ads that begin 'Dear Mom' and end 'And that, Mom, is what I am fighting for—the corner drugstore with its double-extra-special-thick chocolate malteds.'

"But since the public seems to think that soldiers are simple asses, drooling mush in the face of machine-gun fire, we offer the following 'Dear Mom' letters direct from the front.

'Dear Mom: Well here we are in Normandy. I saw a cute little piggy-wiggy today, Mom, and gracious, was he cute! That's what I'm fighting for, Mom, little piggy-wiggies and little ducky-wuckies and little lambie-wambies and oh, just oodles of young, free things to brighten a brave, new world.

Your loving son, Joe."

"Dear Mom: We are camped in an orchard not far from Carentan that you've read about, Mom, and there are dairy cows grazing in our orchard and the peasants come right out in their wooden shoes and milk them, and, Mom, one of the cows made fertilizer right where I put down my blankets. Golly, Mom, it sure smelt good and reminded me of you and Dad and old Muley. That's what I'm fighting for, Mom, a world in which there won't be no soldiers putting down their blankets right where old Muley wants to make fertilizer.

Your loving son, Junior."

"Dear Mom: We are going through some hedgerows toward St. Lo today, Mom, and a German burp-gun got on me and I ducked into a ditch and set off a Teller-mine and a Tiger tank ran right over my ditch and a squad of Boch infantry started heaving fragmentation grenades at me and I got to thinking, Mom, of old Bess and her about to have pups again and, Mom, we can't have them pups born in a world that ain't free and bright, can we, even if it's the way you said old Bess got out that night and was bred by that mongrel next door, so Mom, I got right out of my ditch and fixed that tank good and proper, and also the burp-gun and the Boche infantry, and we will get this here war over, Mom, just as soon as we can for you and Dad and old Bess and a better, brighter world for that little unborn litter.

Your loving son, Henry.

On Sunday morning, Dr. J. A. Johnston will speak of The Most Compelling Thing in Life. In the evening he will deliver the third in a series of Sunday evening sermons entitled: "Simon — Not So Simple". The subject will therefore be: "Simon — the Cross-Bearer — a Coloured Man at Calvary." The Fireside Fellowship will follow the evening service. It will be held in the Lower Assembly Hall. New Hymn Books will be used.

"Westmount" has just completed a very fine series of special services conducted by Rev. J. A. Church, Toronto. The attendance at these gatherings was very satisfactory and the preaching was of a high order, being vital, challenging and inspiring.

AN APT RETORT

English political speeches, at their best, have long been noted for their pungent humor. A rejoinder of John Morley, given in the heat of battle, is a typical example.

Morley had just finished a campaign address by requesting his listeners to vote for him, when a man jumped angrily to his feet and shouted. "I'd rather vote for the devil!"

"Quite so," rejoined Morley with a smile, "but in case your friend declines to run, may I count on your support?"

Photographers See Film Development

The Montreal Amateur Photographers' Club at its weekly meeting Tuesday evening was shown a practical demonstration of film development.

The members gathered around a long table, while the demonstrator, A. M. Hitchen, developed several rolls of films supplied by members. For those who are anxious to do developing themselves, no better way exists.

This very active club has planned to hold a print criticism on Tuesday evening. Landscapes will be judged and members are urged to bring in prints on the subject.

A very competent committee consisting of Mesrs. Geo. Fernley, Fred. C. Houghton and W. A. Petch will judge and offer suggestions for better work.

Canadian bus lines have been refused licenses to operate post-war helicopter services. The government takes the view that if the helicopter has merit it should be permitted to develop on its own and not be tied up with surface transportation.

We have a positive record of one of the earliest life insurance policies and it is noteworthy that the term "underwriter" as used today, can be easily understood upon examining this early policy. By the terms of the contract, issued in 1583, one William Gibbons, citizen and salter of London was insured for a term of twelve months for the sum of £400 in case of death, at a premium of some £32. The amount of £400 was underwritten by about a dozen citizens each of whom signed his name opposite the amount of risk he assumed. The premium of £32 was dividend amongst the underwriters in proportion to their risk.

Co-operative Insurance

One of the first co-operative efforts to be made by a group was made by an English clergyman who opined that the average clergyman was possessed of a small salary and a fruitful wife so that he often died leaving a number of dependents who became subjects for even more charity than they had required during his lifetime. He organized the clergymen in his county who agreed to pay a sum into a central fund upon marriage and as often thereafter as they could afford to do so. From an actuarial standpoint this was very unsound, as each man usually made but one small payment. However, it was the beginning, and during the 17th century we find several instances of man's desire to protect his loved ones by some form of co-operative benefit fund.

During the next several years, little sound progress was made. We pass through a period when both political and religious persecution were rampant and sanitation was in its infancy. It was not uncommon for one group to underwrite the life of a political or religious leader and then hire trusties to guard the insured. Those who would benefit by his death would hire thugs to finish him off.

Insurance in North America had its beginning in 1759 with the formation of the Presbyterian Ministers Fund in Philadelphia. It is today a continuing highly successful legal reserve life insurance company. From 1813 to 1843 efforts were made to form companies and in 1843 fifteen life insurance companies were formed most of which are operating today as strong institutions.

Insurance in Canada

In Canada today, are over four million policyholders paying premiums of a quarter billion dollars annually. They are insured for over eight and a half billions and the average amount of insurance is slightly over $2,000. The per capita amount of insurance over the entire population is approximately $700.

The assets held by Canadian Companies and others operating in Canada exceed three billions four hundred millions. Total payments to policyholders and beneficiaries in Canada last year exceeded one hundred forty-seven millions. That's over four hundred thousand dollars per day for every day of the year including Sundays, holidays and Rotary Fair days! And that money went to people either afflicted by the death of the breadwinner, or disabled, or in financial need, or at maturity of policy.

Today in Canada life insurance business is transacted by 41 active companies operating under Dominion registry, of which 28 are Canadian, 3 British and 10 United States companies. These companies are all subject to strictest supervision not only by the Dominion Superintendent of Insurance but by the Department of Insurance of every Province in which they operate.

Mr. Murray next went on to explain the difference between an ordinary contract and the agreement between a policy holder and an insurance company, and gave a number of examples to illustrate his meaning.

He dealt with the training of the insurance salesman who required highly developed skill. He must be alert, able, and of course extremely trustworthy.

He concluded by stating that along with Victory Bonds and Savings, life insurance has been a vital factor in the fight against inflation, and caused some laughter when he finished his address with the words: "So I say that the life insurance agent is a sort of an angel in long pants, and the institution of life insurance is a vital factor in Canada's economy."

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian P. J. McAndrews and the thanks of the club were expressed by Rotarian C. T. Medlar.

Ernest R. Richardson, who was recently elected a member of the Club was welcomed by president A. W. Callard, who occupied the chair.

Mr. Callard also announced that next week would be Ladies' Day and asked members to notify the secretary of the club of the number of guests they intended bringing to this important meeting.

Two young boys, pupils of Westmount High School, Joe Eveleigh and Gerry Wright, were guests and introduced to the club.

"Wings" Christmas Cards Sale Ahead Of Last Year's

The third annual Christmas Card Drive in aid of Wings for Britain is now well under way with most departmental stores and over 250 industrial concerns cooperating. All profits from the sale of these cards go to Wings for Britain Benevolent Fund. The campaigns of 1942, 1943, yielded over $6,000 and it is confidently expected that returns from this year will bring the aggregate total over $10,000.00.

Profits from sales occurring to November 3rd which largely constitute purchases for overseas mailing, are close to one thousand dollars and $800.00 has already been turned over to the Wings for Britain office. This is about a 20 per cent advance on 1943.

The cards are made up in a series of eight illustrations in full colour mounted on a double fold text paper. There are two of each in a package along with 16 envelopes. Each card bears the Wings insignia an appropriate wording showing that all profits from the purchase of the cards have been turned over to the Benevolent Fund. They are neatly packaged in blue and red boxes over-printed in silver. A French series is packaged in a bright green box over-printed in silver, they sell for $1.00 per box.

Wings for Britain contribute all money turned over from this drive to the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Benevolent Funds which are used to help Airmen and their families, especially the wives and young children of Airmen who have been killed in action. The fund will also be used to help in the difficult period of rehabilitation when the war ends. The Funds are administered by the Canadian Government for the R.C.A.F. and the British Government for the R.A.F.

The present Christmas Card Drive in the City of Montreal and District has already received the full cooperation of over 250 industrial concerns who are making an employee canvass. It is pointed out that practically everyone buys Christmas Cards and if all purchases included just one box of Wings for Britain Cards this Christmas the objective would be reached.

Residents of N.D.G. and Westmount have contributed the larger share of profits in previous campaigns and this fact is gratefully acknowledged by the Wings officials coupled with a plea that this year the campaign be supported more strongly than ever.

Departmental stores cooperating in this campaign on a voluntary basis are the T. Eaton Co. Ltd., Henry Morgan Co. Ltd., Robert Simpson Co. Ltd., Jas. A. Ogilvy's Ltd., Dupuis Freres Limitee. The cards are also on sale at Burton's Book Store and the Wings for Britain Shop, 2084 Peel Street.

Any firm or individual wishing to help in the campaign may do so by calling Alan Isles, Executive Secretary, Frontenac 2111, or writing to 2151 Ontario street east.

WESTMOUNT, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1944

BUILDING A BETTER NATION.

AT a recent meeting of the St. James Literary Society the question of the present position and the future prospects of "new Canadians" was discussed at length. Dr. Bela Eisner, who some time ago undertook a study of Canadians of Hungarian origin on behalf of the War Services Department, was the principal speaker. Dr. Eisner's findings in respect of Hungarians are, however, applicable to all new Canadians. He impressed his hearers as having made a thorough job of the investigation, and his recommendations are worthy of the close study they will no doubt receive by the authorities. He found that considerably less than half the foreign-born population give any support to the more extreme political movements, and a like percentage of the labouring class can be found backing the C.I.O. In both cases their support is not based on any ideological convictions, but simply because extreme politicians and extreme labour leaders seem to offer the best prospect of security in the post-war era. Many of these people suffered extremely during the years of depression, incurring debts which in some cases not even the boom wages of wartime have wiped out. They have provided fertile ground for cultivation by the extremists. The great majority, however, have strong middle-of-the-road liberal convictions that not even years of adversity have shaken. Dr. Eisner emphasized that prejudice against sections and classes of these new Canadians was pretty general, and he cited many individual cases he had investigated. Among his recommendations, he urged that post-war immigration be restricted to married men who would bring out their families with them, or undertake to do so in a given period. He found that single men, and married men who had made no serious effort to bring their families to Canada, were chiefly responsible for giving new Canadians a bad name with the authorities, and were the principle backers of extreme political and labour leaders. He also urged that every immigrant be taught to speak English, in spare time schools, under government auspices. This, he believes, would many times repay the government for the expense involved, by removing much of the misunderstanding existing between "old" and "new" Canadians. Dr. Eisner's report to the War Services Department's Committee on Co-operation in Canadian Citizenship should prove of value in the post-war period when the question of immigration will be more important than at any time in the past.

POST-WAR PROSPERITY, UNDERSTANDING.

Those who believe that the salvation of the world lies in the spread of internationalism were greatly encouraged by the election-night speech of Eric Johnson, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Johnson spoke on a national hook-up, shortly after the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt seemed assured. He appealed to the United States to take a full part in world affairs, for greater international cooperation, and especially—and this he emphasized—for a general lowering of all barriers to trade over the whole face of the earth. Mr. Johnson is one of the growing number of business leaders who perceive that tariff warfare is as destuctive as werfare with explosives, that the nation that erects tariffs against its neighbours destroys goodwill, business and employment all round.

Johnson is a broadminded man, and a far-sighted one. A big industrialist, he has always encouraged his workers to belong to unions—not so-called company unions, but independent unions affiliated with the A.F. of L. On a recent visit to Russia, he told a banquet gathering of over one hundred Soviet commissars, at Moscow, that the U.S.A. was a free enterprise country, and would remain so. He told the Russians that of some two hundred nationally-known unions in the United States, not one was asking its members to vote for the socialist candidate for President. He said that the United States believed in the right of every country to determine the system under which it wanted to live He praised the results achieved by Russia under its collectivism, but expressed the opinion that the free enterprise system was best for the United States. A frank and candid man, he made a hit with the Commissars, who applauded him roundly.

The cause of better understanding between nations, and of world peace, would be greatly furthered if there was more straight-from-the-shoulder talk by men like him, and a greater appreciation of the economic ideas he champions.

A JOB FOR EVERYONE.

Canadian labour need have no fear of mass unemployment in Canada provided there is reasonably close cooperation between management, labour and government, Hon. C. D. Howe recently told seven hundred delegates to the annual convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. Mr. Howe told the gathering his objective was one million new jobs, and he thought it could be done. The new Ministry of Reconstruction is out to provide a job and a fair income for everyone willing and able to work, he said.

These are encouraging words upon which the Canadian worker can put some reliance, for Mr. Howe is no idle talker given to making impossible promises for political purposes. Mr. Howe, a celebrated engineer who was persuaded to enter political life against his personal inclination, is no politician. His job in converting Canadian industry from a peacetime footing to the needs of war has won world-wide admiration. That the job of reconversion will be achieved efficiently and speedily almost goes without saying. And with half the world waiting to be rebuilt from the basement up, there will be markets for years for everything our factories and farms can produce.

Of Issues and Men

More Terrible Than The Hun

It was one of the grim tragedies of 1939 that the two great democracies which after years of vacillation and surrender unsheathed not very bright swords to bar further passage to the German tyrant, went into that war handicapped by a generation of intensive propaganda and unvarying practice against the virtues needed to win it. How perniciously successful the propaganda had been the sudden and total collapse of France was to demonstrate months before the leaves were to fall in another autumn. As Christopher Dawson puts it:

"The present conflict is not just a material struggle for markets and territory. It is a battle for possession of the human soul. Western civilization is threatened not by the blind violence of the barbarian, but by a far more sinister power which strikes directly at the moral foundations of our civilization and releases the forces of destruction which have been held in check by a thousand years of Christian culture."

That enemy was and is materialism. Materialism, explaining away the distinction between right and wrong; materialism, buying our own ease and safety at the cost of other men's freedom; belittling their danger or dismissing it as a quarrel between two peoples in a remote region of which we knew very little; acquiescing first in the undermining of a friendly neighour state and then in an open assault on its government by thugs in authority in well-armed lands whom we did not dare to restrain; organizing "rationalization" to permit powerful irresponsible financial aggregations to make necessities dear and scarce and labor plentiful and oh, so cheap; moving downward from the philosophy of "get all you can and the devil take him who cannot" to Hitler's maniacal, screaming denunciations of honor, conscience, mercy and humanity as outmoded delusions fit only for the practice of decadent nations, made by Providence to be the sport of the herrenvolk, and sending out pitiful, ill-equipped youths, unwanted a year earlier, to stop the progress of the most merciless enemy the world has

THE FORUM

In Which Subjects of General Interest Are Discussed

The opinions expressed in this Forum are not necessarily those of this newspaper, and it does not accept responsibility for them.

On April 18, 1906, the date of the great fire, the legal fraternity of this country (U.S.), was indebted to us in a sum in excess of $200,000. The fire destroyed all of our books of accounts. The lawyers of San Francisco having lost their entire libraries were absolved of their indebtedness to us, amounting to about $30,000. This left an amount due from outside lawyers of from $170,000 to $175,000. Having no lists of patrons, we sent a circular letter to the lawyers named in Martindale's Legal Directory, advising them of our loss and asking for information as to their indebtedness to us.

The responses to this circular were so prompt and so gratifying that we think the legal profession should know that of this total indebtedness of say $175,000, nearly $150,000 has already been reported to us, and we are receiving advices every day from parties who had not previously answered our circular asking about their indebtedness.

It is but right to say that some of the San Francisco attorneys declined to accept the cancellation of their accounts and have paid same. Let it be known to the world that the legal profession is made up of men of the highest honor.

Franco-Ontarians now number 375,000 and have an active Educational Association. If not the most important French minority in Canada, it is the largest and best organized. The Church Calls to Worship

Students Asked To Pledge Selves To Uphold Liberty

Asking that students bravely resolve not only to remember yesterday but to pledge themselves to live for freedom, truth and peace, Reverend Captain T. W. Jones, pastor of Calvary United Church, addressed junior and senior students of West Hill High School separately in a special Armistice Day service at the school on Friday. The names of 89 ex-West Hillians who have given their lives in the present war were read to the assembled students by D. B. Wilson, vice-principal.

He partially outlined the course of the last war, telling his audience to remember the sacrifices they made and also to bear in mind the sacrifices of "the gallant army that has gone forth from this school in this war". He mentioned the fact that West Hill does not have a record from the First Great War because the school is a "post-last-war" building.

Dr. Jones told a touching story of a pair of South African Negro soldiers whom he encountered at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Westminster Abbey two years ago.

"I was paying silent tribute to his gallant warrior", he said, when I noticed the two South Africans in uniform. They sank to their knees. I learned from them later that they were not only praying for the Unknown Soldier but for David Livingstone, the man who did so much for Negroes."

G. H. Heslam, principal, introduced and thanked the speaker.

At the close of the program a printed list containing the names of all available West Hill students who are or have been in the Armed Forces during this war, was given to each student.

"Nine Till Six" Presented To Westmount Women's Club

The cleverly contrived play "Nine till Six" by Aimee and Philip Stuart, which was presented to the members of the Westmount Women's Club on Friday afternoon in Victoria Hall, showed a cross section of the private lives of employers and employees in a large and exclusive dress and millinery establishment in London. The various situations as they developed provided excellent opportunities for the notable amateur cast to display their deft handling of subtle humor and incidents charged with poignancy and suspense.

Under the direction of Mrs. Louis deSavoye the play proved to be a smooth bit of dramatic entertainment.

Louise Perrault as the proprietress of the shop, gave the impression of a beautifully turned-out modern business woman, suave, human, worldly wise, a keen judge of character, and possessing that flair for business which had raised her from an eleven-year-old apprentice to be "tops" in her work. Her characterization twinkled with facets of mother-love, realism tolerance and quiet humour.

The part of Miss Robert's, millinery saleslady, as played by Margaret McKean added greatly to the interest of the performance. Ready to bristle at the merest reflection of slackness or interference with her department, Margaret McKean by her every gesture and intonation interpreted the privileged employee who had climbed the ladder of success with her employer. With consumate skill this experienced amateur actress melted under stress of circumstances from her dominant role of forthrightness into a "Well, I'm sure I don't know" attitude of frustration, but not capitulation.

The part of Freda, stock keeper in the dressmaking, was played by Alice Rogers with sensitive feeling and a restrained feverishness till, at the crisis of the plot, she broke down and told of the deceptions she had practised which had put everyone in the shop, including the righteous and easily huffed Miss Roberts, under suspicion of being a thief.

Margaret Pitt, as Gracie Abbot, an apprentice with an artless Cockney way, provided a good deal of the humor. Maud Whitmore, as her mother, portrayed a nice homey person, very fond of her cup of tea. Sheila Coonan was completely at home in her part of Bridgit and Eileen Jacques, as Lady Avonlea, enacted her role with pleasing dignity.

As Miss Pembroke, daughter of the proprietress, Cecile Wright gave a clear-cut delineation of a career girl, disillusioned, sure that romance had passed her by in both the dressmaking and the millinery, and bored with the everyday need for stroking aggravating customers the right way. One of the highlights of the play, in the writer's estimation, occurred in the last act when during a fiery clash, Miss Pembroke's scathing comments on her own life as a business woman, crackled explosively against the icy disapproval of Miss Roberts.

The roles of mannequins, packers and other employees were adequately filled by Muriel Meikle, Elizabeth Watts, Dorothy Danford, Elsie Poole, Dorothy Harvey, Margaret Chapleau, Winnifred Hogan and Joan Marshall.

Stage and properties were under the direction of Maud Whitmore and Eileen Jacques who deserve credit for the effective, simple settings. Margaret Pitt acted as convener and Winnifred Hogan was wardrobe mistress.

PARENT-CHILD CONFIDENCE

HELEN GREGG GREEN

When I was a child I was taken to a dentist's office, with an aching tooth.

"Let me see your tooth," the dentist said.

I hesitated and then, "I'm afraid you'll pull it!" I admitted, frightened.

"I won't pull it," the dentist promised.

Confident that he was telling the truth I opened my mouth. It was pulled before I had closed my mouth.

I never liked that dentist after that. Years later, whenever I passed him on the street I thought of that incident. He had two boys. I often wondered whether he kept his word with them.

A well-known writer relates the following:

"A little boy of five, pointing to a library, asked his father, 'Is that your office, Daddy?' The father answered that it was the library. 'What's in a library?' asked the child. 'Books' replied the short-spoken father. 'What does it say in books?' 'It says to mind your Daddy!' "

The writer goes on to say that the child would eventually find out that his father was wrong, and that a series of such thoughtless answers, "over a period of time," would very likely cause him to lose confidence in his father.

I feel that the writer is too optimistic when he says, "over a period of time," because of my experience with the dentist. One untruth made me lose confidence in him completely. I looked upon him as a man in whom something fundamentally right was lacking.

Probably I exaggerated the offense. But that was one child's reaction to a breach of faith, and, without doubt, it is a fairly reliable criterion of other children's reactions to similar experiences. My attitude toward this man made little difference, but had the offender been my parent the incident would have had very unhappy consequences.

It is indeed important that children have confidence in their parents and older relatives. For this reason, if for no other, parents need to appreciate their children's viewpoints.

A friend of mine related her childhood experience with regard to a pet lamb. She had fed the lamb from a bottle and was devoted to it. One day when she was at school some older members of the family sold the lamb.

When my friend recalled this incident she was a mature woman but the hurt she had felt that day crept into her eyes and voice. It had been a real tragedy to the child. The blow might have been softened had the aunt explained why her pet must be sold before Emily left for school that morning. It was a severe shock to come home and find that she would never again see her lamb.

Another friend said she wanted always to remember, in bringing up her little son, to try to put herself in his place when she was in doubt about any question that might arise. When a child, her mother had given away a little dog she adored.

"That was a lasting sorrow to me," Eileen said. "Mother thought I should soon forget about Curley. I never forgot him. To me he was as much a member of the family as myself."

If that mother had only stopped to put herself in her little girl's place, she would not have caused the deep and lasting hurt. I'm afraid we all have the human tendency of thinking in terms of our own immediate interests—even parents, at times.

Hope happifies life, at the altar or bower,
And loosens the fetters of pride and of power;
It comes through our tears, as the soft summer rain,
To beautifuy, bless, and make joyful again.
—Mary Baker Eddy.

The five-year-old niece accompanied her dad downtown recently and upon her return home her mother asked: "Well, Claire what did daddy do downtown?"

Claire answered: "He went to the bank and talked to the lady working there, and she smiled, and then daddy gave her all his money."

But scowled at all who ventured near him.

GUIDE NOTES

WESTMOUNT GIRL GUIDES

The seven Girl Guide Companies and three of the Brownie Packs of Westmount district, have been meeting regularly for a month or six weeks. The fall meetings of the local association and of the Guides, have been held during the last two weeks, and plans made for carrying on the winter activities.

The doll convener, Mrs. J. C. Armour, with the help of several interested women, have mended 44 dolls. These are now ready for distribution to the companies. The Guides dress these dolls, which are then returned to Boy Scout Headquarters in the early part of December. The dolls are sent to various welfare organizations in Christmas parcels.

The most extensive service project in Westmount will be the Guide Overseas Gift. This will be under the general convenership of Mrs. F. G. Ferrabee, but each member of the local association is making herself responsible for a company or pack. It is hoped the companies will be ready to begin early in December. Three companies have articles ready to be sent overseas now—66th Co. at St. Matthias' Church, under the captaincy of Mrs. Errol Clift, with Miss Betty Connal as lieutenant, has a complete layette; 16th Co. at St. Andrew's United Church, under Miss Margaret Turnee-Bone made 20 stuffed animals which are covered in oilcloth, gay cottons, and knitted materials; and 74th Melville Co., recently taken over by Mrs. Lillian M. Smith, have made a variety of knitted articles and baby clothes.

The Badge Secretary, Mrs. John Bishop, announced that she had made arrangements for a health course to be given by Miss Stewart of the Child Welfare Association to begin shortly. This is a most comprehensive course, and the Guides who avail themselves of these six or eight lectures, will find it most interesting and helpful.

During the Guider's meeting the Brown Owls were greatly privileged in having a discussion group, led by Mrs. A. S. Keats, an Eagle Owl. New games and handicraft were explained as well as many training points of the Brownie program.

Westmount Women's

The Westmount Women's Club Inc. is holding its first business meeting of the season at Victoria Hall, on Friday, November 24th, at 2.30 p.m., for members only. At this meeting there will be a reception for new members.

Tea hostesses will be Mrs. Archer J. Wright and her committee.

Doris Doree broils a tiny steak to serve with her rice and eggplant a la Newark, New Jersey.

When a starlet like Doris Doree of the Metropolitan Opera sings the praises of a Jersey Ragout and chants lovingly about her Rice a la Newark, it's time to listen.

And So It Goes . . .

By Betty Bruce

Being an accomplished public speaker can open the gateway to many exciting and interesting contacts—not to mention positions of honour, and when one considers that many women think nothing of talking for an hour in a monologue on the telephone (despite wartime regulations) it would seem that the woods ought to be full of women orators. But it is not quite like that. Too many women have found that getting to one's feet to give a vote of thanks, or "say a few words" is a soul-shaking experience.

Surprising as this is, it is equally so to find a quiet mouse of a woman suddenly launching forth as a first-class spell-binder. Like Alice, she steps into a wonderland where her own interests are broadened and her talent polished through contacts with more experienced speakers.

Despite the fact that you're either a born speaker or you're not, the rewards of being able to talk calmly and collectedly at a meeting are so great, that it is really a good investment of time and money to join a debating society or a public speaking class. It is lots of fun, and the training may be of inestimable value. How can you be sure you're not hiding your light under a bushel(Perhaps you are like the shy little country girl in a recent class who, lonely and away from home, her husband overseas, joined a group of about ten other fluttering souls. She was so self-effacing that the class was hardly conscious of her presence till the time arrived for each member to give an impromptu talk, lasting at least five minutes, on any subject chosen by the pupil. This little mouse of a woman had been absorbing every bit of helpful information about throwing the voice at a certain spot on the opposite wall of not fiddling with a button or pushing back her hat. She stood gracefully, wore a becoming gown, and something about her poise and a certain magnetic look in her eye riveted attention upon her, and believe it or not this little shy creature stunned class and teacher alike by holding forth with great personal charm and fluency for half an hour on "Life on a Lighthouse". As a matter of fact she had lived for three years on a rocky island with her husband, the keeper of the lamp, and I figured that her admirable talk was nothing more or less than a bout of homesickness finding expression. She continued to talk, though, to many church groups and was climbing on towards other fields of success when last heard from.

Another astonishing instance of a shy person suddenly taking the plunge and finding he could swim with the best, was that of a high school lad who read of a open public speaking contest, attended it and walked off with the second award.

A great sports enthusiast, he was a quiet and unassuming lad, who thought much but said very little.

But the trick, it seems, is to speak on what interests one. He spoke on tropical fish, knowing his subject thoroughly, from guppies to Black Mollies and Siamese fighting fish. The lady spoke on aspects of life on the lighthouse, which she knew in all seasons.

So, if you get stuck sometime and have to fill in, in an emergency, keep your head up, let your voice out, and remember that if you are thrilled by your subject, ten chances to one you'll be a huge success.

Practice in a public speaking class is an awfully good lifebelt though, if you fear you're more ap' to drown than to swim!

And so it goes this week. Did you notice that the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has permitted the use of elastic for leather dress gloves and mitts, and leather or cotton work gloves or mitts. Well, I know somewhere where it would do a dot of more good, don't you?

SHRIMPS BRING TANG OF SEA TO LUNCHEON

Try stuffing tomatoes or green peppers with shrimp, or use as the Chinese do with chopped vegetables and rice, or in an India curry or a southern gumbo.

For a luncheon or supper, make a hot shrimp salad. Saute thin slices of onion and green pepper in salad oil until tender. Add shrimp and heat through. Combine with hot cubed boiled potatoes and hard-cooked eggs in top of double boiler, add French dressing and heat for 5 minutes.

Shrimp and Vegetable Luncheon Rolls

(Serves 4)

One and a quarter cups of cooked shrimp, ½ cup chopped celery, 1 cup mixed cooked or canned vegetables, 1 cup well-seasoned French dressing, mayonnaise or salad dressing, 4 long soft rolls or French bread slices, salad greens.

Combine shrimp with celery. Chop vegetables (peas, carrots, green beans, lima beans, corn). Add to shrimp; combine with French dressing. Chill ½ hour; drain. Moisten generously with mayonnaise or salad dressing. Split rolls or bread slices lengthwise; spread open. Fill with shrimp mixture. Serve on salad greens.

NOTICE TO EMPLOYERS AND THEIR MALE EMPLOYEES—
Including Farmers

By an order signed on August 15th, 1944, by the undersigned Minister of Labour under authority of National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations, 1944:

1. Commencing August 22nd, 1944, every employer is required to check the documents held by each newly engaged male employee, within 7 days of the employee's engagement, to determine if such employee possesses documents to show that he is in good standing under National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations, 1944 (that is, in relation to the Military Call-up);

2. Every employer must report on Schedule 9 to the Registrar for his Mobilization Division, concerning any employee found not to possess documents as referred to;

3. Every employer is required similarly to check the documents held by each male employee now working for him, whose documents he has not checked before, and to report to the Registrar for his Mobilization Division at once on any such employee found not to possess documents as referred to;

4. Any male employee here referred to, is required by the Regulations to present his documents to his employer for purposes of inspection;

5. FOR THIS PURPOSE "EMPLOYER" INCLUDES ALSO ANY FARMER OPERATING A FARM, WHO HAS A MALE PERSON WORKING FOR HIM;

6. Penalties are provided for any employer or male employee who fails to comply with these Regulations.

By an earlier order, employers were required to check the documents held by their male employees, and to report by May 1st, 1944, on doubtful cases as well as cases where employees did not possess documents.

Employers are asked to remember that they do not report on men who do possess the necessary documents—only on those who fail to present documents for examination, or where there is doubt that the document presented actually proves good standing.

The employers of Canada, including farmers, co-operated very satisfactorily on the first check, made up to May 1st, last. This co-operation was decidedly helpful, and is very much appreciated. Further co-operation is now earnestly requested.

Schedule 9, for reporting to the Registrar, and details as to documents which prove good standing, are available through the nearest Employment and Selective Service Office.

Farmers not needed on the farm during the winter, who answer the urgent call for winter workers in other essential industries, will be given a continuance of postponement of military training while away from the farm.

NEWS OF THE THEATRE WORLD

AT WESTMOUNT THEATRE

The motion picture version of the all-soldier musical, Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army," produced by Warner Bros. for Army Emergency Relief, is now playing at the Westmount United Theatre until Saturday night.

The film, recently completed in Hollywood, was produced by Jack L. Warner and Hal B. Wallis, Michael Curtiz directed. The entire company of 350 soldiers, who appeared in the musical on Broadway and during its cross-country tour, appears here with the soldiers in their original roles in the picture, which includes the entire stage production of "This Is the Army" as well as additional material from Irving Berlin's World War I soldier show, "Yip, Yip Yaphank."

Irving Berlin makes his picture debut in "This Is the Army," singing his famed lament, "Oh, How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning," as he did in the stage version.

Also included in the cast, for purposes of a slight story content, are George Murphy, Joan Leslie, Lieutenant Ronald Reagan, Alan Hale, George Tobias, Charles Butterworth, Una Merkel and Sgt. Joe Louis. In addition, it is in "This Is the Army" that Kate Smith makes her first screen appearance in ten years and new Berlin songs are sung by Frances Langford and Gertrude Niesen.

Screen play for the picture is by Casey Robinson and Capt. Claude Binyon, based on the stage show Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army," with music and lyrics by Irving Berlin.

AT THE WESTMOUNT SUNDAY!

Red Skelton and players in a scene from the hit film in Technicolor "Bathing Beauty," which stars Esther Williams and opens at the Westmount United Theatre on Sunday playing until Tuesday night.

At York Theatre

With a starring trio of Charles Laughton, little Margaret O'Brien and Robert Young, and a story adapted from Oscar Wilde's celebrated tale, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has brought "The Canterville Ghost which is now playing at the York United Theatre until Friday night.

It is a whimsical picture, full of delightful humor and warm dramatic situations which all the family can enjoy. Brought up to date by Edwin Harvey Blum in an excellent and exciting script, "The Canterville Ghost" tells of a ghost (played by Laughton) who because of cowardice in a duel during his life, has been forced to roam the broad halls of his English castle for more than 300 years. Not until one of his descendants performs an act of bravery in his name will he be rid of the curse and able to return to rest forever.

Margaret O'Brien, one of the most talented youngsters in the entire history of the theatre and the movies, plays the youngest descendant — Lady Jessica de Canterville, who becomes hostess to a platoon of American Rangers billeted in the old castle during the present war.

This is the setting for one of the warmest bits of story-telling it has been our pleasure to experience in a long, long time. What happens when the ghost appears before the American Rangers, for instance, is only one of the highlight scenes you'll remember for a long time. And how the spirit of Sir Simon de Canterville finally is set to rest will keep you and your neighbors completely entranced.

Jules Dassin, one of the most able of the younger Hollywood directors, leaves his distinct touch on the film, the same deftness which characterized his guidance of "Young Ideas" and "Reunion in France."

The outstanding supporting cast includes such highly competent and engaging performers as William Gargan, Reginald Owen, "Rags" Ragland, Una O'Connor, Elisabeth Risdon and Lumsden Hare, among many others.

FROM WINGS TO MAKE-UP

Roger Pryor's first picture after three years a civilian flight instructor for the government was Pine-Thomas' "High Man," starring Robert Lowery and Phyllis Brooks.

Some co-operators' slogans: Own or be owned; Legislation alone cannot protect you; On economic grounds there's no alternative to ownership.

Double Feature Programme Opens Saturday At Snowdon

Who is the fastest-rising young star in Hollywood?

Well in pre-war days that might have been a hard question to answer. Today however, with the Stewarts, the Gables, the Taylors, the Powers and many others in uniform, the question is easy to answer: Van Johnson!

Not that Johnson didn't do his part, too. He enlisted in the Navy during the first months of the U.S. at war; served for many months in uniform in a branch of the Coast Guard and then was mustered out of the services.

It seems that Van Johnson's popularity is universal. He is adored by the "teen-age, bobby-sockers"; the twenty-ers love him; the married thirty-ers 'go" for him as one patron expressed it; and as for the rest, well . . . they would just love to have him for a son, or perhaps a grand-son, if they had their choice.

Van Johnson has been in Hollywood but a few short years. He made his first appearance in "The War Against Mrs. Hadley" and almost over-night became the ideal leading man. In two years he has appeared in about seven features, the latest, and most successful being "Two Girls And A Sailor". Johnson is featured in "Three Men In White" with Lionel Barrymore, Marilyn Maxwell, Keye Luke and Ava Gardner, starting Saturday at the Snowdon Theatre.

The co-feature at the Snowdon, Saturday is "The Canterville Ghost" starring little Margaret O'Brien, Charles Laughton and Robert Young. The petite star Margaret O'Brien, star of "Journey For Margaret" and "The Lost Angel" plays the youngest descendant of Sir Simon de Canterville, who, because of his cowardice in a duel during his life, has been forced to roam the broad halls of his English castle for more than 300 years—and must do so until some of his posterity performs a deed of bravery in his name, to free him of his curse. When a detachment of American Rangers, on a commando job, arrive at the ancestral castle the fun begins, and never lets up until the "ghost" is laid away, happy at last.

OUR SHORT STORY

This Man Hengist

By FRANK BATCHELOR

Summer manoeuvers can be very hot work, and the tall, fair soldier and the short, dark soldier slid joyfully into the grassy ditch under the elm and leaned their backs against a bank on which masses of willow herb and the creamy lace of meadowsweet looked like a cardinal's wardrobe spread to air.

They removed their net-covered tin hats, mopped their sweaty faces, thoroughly scratched their necks and wrists, and gave themselves up to the lassitude of the moment.

The road was a by-road; the white dust they had themselves kicked up was already settling and the droning of a large bumble bee drowned the drone of distant aircraft; the real quiet of the country dropped swiftly down and it was very quiet indeed.

Then from the hedge above them came cautious cracklings and rustlings; tin hats were thumped on, rifles grabbed, and the two peered up into the face of a very small boy who eyed them with dispassionate curiosity.

"Are you Danes?" he began, "'cos I'm a Briton—not quite an ancient Briton—just a—a—one of of those Britons who—who faught Danes."

"Ah, yes," replied the tall soldier. "I know, Roman Britons; yes, we are Danes, both of us. I am Hengist and this gentleman is Horsa; but you'd better call him Joe, because he's lost his 'memory'."

"Where——?" commenced the Briton; but entirely failed, as many powerful talkers before him had failed, to interrupt Hengist.

"Where?" continued he. "Why, out at the back, I expect, because he's never been out at the front, at least, not yet. You see, the military authorities deem it inadvisable to send raw recruits into the firing line; so we, he and I and a few thousand others, are being cooked prior to embarkation. Do you mind if I take my hat off? . . . I find the external, cerebral pressure impedes the tranquil flow of my stream of consciousness—or perhaps you are at variance with Professor James—still, we can debate that at some more convenient season.

"Won't you come right in—or right out—according to your point of view? It is a little disconcerting, talking to a head; it reminds m of the Cheshire cat, and I can't abide duchesses — and neither could you, my gallant Briton, if you knew some of the duchesses I know . . . There, that's better! Now we can really get together." The head had drawn back and, after a renewed creaking and rustling, a foot, clad in a sandal, unmistakably British, appeared in its place, to be followed by a leg —then two hands, one bearing a wooden sword, and the head again. A short struggle ended in the emergence of the entire Briton, who rolled down the bank, and was fielded and deposited, right side up, by Hengist, who proceeded:—

"Now, the Danes were always a remarkable people——"

"But," piped in the child, "Hengist wasn't a Dane; he was a Jute and he came over in A.D. 449 and he——"

"That was yesterday," the soldier floated on, " and yesterday, as you know yo"self, is only tomorrow if you're going the other way. I am Hengist because I feel hengist. Don't you feel hengist sometimes? I feel as Hengist as I-dont-know-what-today; but he"—and he indicated his companion, who lay with closed eyes, smoking a pipe which bubbled, liquidly and without meaning, as though inviting comparison—"he——Silence, dog! We call him the Babbler, for no one can get as much as a 'yes' or a 'no' into a conversation with him. He, as I was saying, is not a Dane at all . . . you've only to look at him. . . . Lend me your sword a moment, will you? I want to cut a bit of grass, and my bayonet's . . . well, you know the way it is when you've been hacking your way through the shield ring. . . . Thank you! . . . A bit of grass to chew is an excellent stimulant to conversation, I find, don't you?"

"My father's a——" began the owner of the sword, scenting an opportunity for a little elocution.

"He"—the soldier's voice poured over him like an Atlantic roller, and his father was carried away on the crest of Horsa's nativity—"never had a father. He is really a troll. You must ask him about it, some time."

"Does he——?"

"He does; only they won't let him do it in uniform, and his battle dress is so tight, he can't get it off, and it cramps his style, hopelessly. . . . Now, where he comes from; beyond Outremer ——"

"Is he Russian?" The boy got it in as one throws a missile through a rapidly closing door, and brightened visibly.

"No, no, further than that—much further—beyond Minsk, and beyond Tobolsk — beyond the whole of Muscovy—I think he's a Tartar—I've even heard it said that he is. H may be Kubla Khan. No, no, I don't think he's Kubla Khan; for if he is, believe me, my friend, that pleasure dome, of which you have probably heard, is nothing but a four-ale bar with a dart-board—in which young man from Porlock called when he did. No, I fancy he might be Genghis Khan, if one could see him without the moustache—it's false, you know—and he is definitely brachycephalic, as you must have noticed. I do wish he wouldn't smoke that pipe though, don't you? I've threatened to tell his mohter and his aunt; but he will do it, and every time it bubbles it smells like burning plasticine."

"And did you——?"

"Tell his aunt? . . . Good gracious no! That was only a threat. Aunts and mothers are splendid things, the best in all the world; but gentlemen don't split on each other to them . . . but, there . . . you were joking, of course, ?? ?? ?? ?? ?? z things, and I see you are a gentleman, because you carry a sword."

"My name——" announced the Briton; but with little hope of completing the sentence, for he felt like the green and red boat when it gets in the whirlpool where the bath water goes down; just being carried round and round and down, with no power to do anything about it.

"Never mind real names," said Hengist, "they only make it harder to part when the time comes. I will call you Vortigera. A man's real name is his most personal possession, and should be kept a secret, even from his wife."

"Oh, there you are!" broke in a third voice, and it went on, addressing the soldier, "He's always talking to somone. I never saw a child with such an imagination. Talk—talk—talk. I do hope he's not been worrying you."

The man named Hengist rose to his feet and saluted: "Not at all, Ma-am," he said, "I'm a good listener."

As Vortigern was led away, the voice descended to him out of a swirling cloud of wonderful, incomprehensible things: "I hope you didn't bother him, dear; it's so hot and you do, do talk so."

"Why" — his enfranchised tongue sprang to his defence—"why, he —" then he broke off, and his round little chin took on a new line, for was not this an aunt, and he a gentleman?

FINAL EDITION

The Norwegian Underground delights in telling the story about the young Nazi who was deeply absorbed in reading a copy of The London Times while on guard duty at a lonely Norwegian outpost. Suddenly, his superior officer came along and caught him at it. "So," the latter exploded, "you are reading enemy propaganda, Fritz! What is the meaning of this? Explain yourself!"

The other gulped uncomfortably once or twice, then smiled sheepishly. "Can I help it, sir, if I happen to be an old subscriber?"

NEWS OF THE THEATRE WORLD

At The Monkland

Thrills, comedy and romantic adventure are blended absorbingly in "Honky-Tonk," the M-G-M film which opened last night at the Monkland United Theatre. This is the first picture to co-star Clark Gable and the fetching, versatile young Lana Turner who recently scored personal successes in "Ziegfeld Girl" and "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Mr. Gable, who has had some famous and highly decorative partners during the course of his screen career, hits it off to excellent mutual advantage with Miss Turner. In few of his previous vehicles has he been engaged in a more exciting romantic contretemps, or stepped into the path of more rough-and-tumble adventure.

In this new frontier gold camp yarn, Gable emerges as "Candy" Johnson, a card sharp and would-be political tycoon who makes the mistake of falling in love with a young Boston school teacher who has an extraordinarily strong will of her own. When he makes it apparent that marriage does not coincide with his Yukon plan of life, she determines to teach him a lesson by tricking him into a marriage on which she immediately turns her back. From there the complications pile up thick and fast, with Miss Turner giving her strongest dramatic performance to date, in a part that offers far more opportunity for her than even the interesting "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

Few pictures of the year have been given such a sterling supporting cast as "Honky-Tonk." Claire Trevor, one of the most striking of Hollywood's Broadway stage alumnae, has an outstanding part as a girl vying for Gable's affections. Frank Morgan, playing a "straight" role with convincing adroitness, is seen as the kindly mannered but congenitally unscrupulous father of Miss Turner. Marjorie Main, who has been vaulting to the top of the screen ladder in the Wallace Beery pictures, has another topnotch part, as has Albert Dekker.

RIDE STARS, RIDE

Both Sonny Tufts and Barbara Britton are spending all spare time riding in preparation for their forthcoming roles in Paramount's "The Virginian." A blue ribbon winner at many Boston horse shows, Sonny has to practice with western saddle while Barbara is starting from scratch with a complete set of riding lessons.

Musical Sharps Flats and Naturals

by

Frances Goltman

Many "tall" tales have been told about Caruso's engagement by the Metropolitan Opera Company. Some are amusing, others fantastic, but we think this is the authentic one and readers, you may judge for yourselves. In March, 1902, at Milan, Italy, Caruso, who was appearing at the La Scala Opera, made his first gramophone recordings—ten, to be exact and these were sent to various offices of the record company. Mr. Heinrich Conried, who was the manager of the Metropolitan at that period (prior to Gatti-Casazza) was in Paris at the time and heard the records at the company offices, took the famous "E Lucevan Le Stelle" from the opera "La Tosca" to New York and played it for the directors of the Metropolitan. When they heard the record their enthusiasm was intense and Caruso was cabled a contract right away.

Those of you who have not yet seen the Canadian Army Art Exhibition should do so soon. It is a demonstration of artistic achievement that surpasses all expectations. There are oils, pastels, water colors, pen and inks, charcoals, pencils, and chalk works that are really exceptional. Besides many portraits, winter scenes, comic work and many phases of soldier life are displayed. Do not miss this spendid exhibition.

It is surprising that orchestral players will perform so much better for one leader than another. Witness what happened with our Montreal Philharmonic Orchestra! Everyone agreed that they were really a good ensemble of musicians when they gave the first two concerts at the St. Denis Theatre under the distinguished Pierre Monteux. But since the last concert of this series controversy has been universal in Montreal musical circles and non-musical spheres also. One would hardly believe that they were the same body of performers when they played the Brahms Violin Concerto under Wilfred Pelletier with Mischa Elman as soloist. What was the matter?

Now that "Education Week" has just passed it is to be hoped the great interest shown during that short period will not diminish. Co-operation is needed between parents and teachers throughout the scholastic session in order to get the desired results.

The Metropolitan Opera is to begin its sixtieth season when the first opera to be heard will be Gounod's "Faust" on November twenty-seventh and as usual, it will be broadcast. Two Canadians are being honoured at this premiere, as Raoul Jobin, the French-Canadian tenor will sing the title role and Wilfred Pelletier, who this year is celebrating his twenty-fifth season at that great opera house ,has been chosen to conduct.

FOOTBALL SEASON DRAWING TO CLOSE.

As the rugby season draws to a close, local interest is centred in the game between Toronto Navy and H.M.C.S. Donnacona, to be played here Saturday, and in the West Hill-Ottawa game at the capital. After their showing against Halifax last Saturday, many of the experts are predicting that the local tars will give the Ontario winners a tough battle in the Eastern Canada play-downs—if the Donnaconas are permitted to proceed to the playoffs.

Meanwhile, in Toronto, Hamilton Wildcats will be battling Balmy Beach in the second of the home-and-home O.R.F.U. playoff games. Wildcats carry a 13 to 4 lead into the second game, achieving that margin last Saturday in Hamilton without the services of the celebrated Joe Krol. The attitude up in Ontario is: "If Hamilton won comparatively easily without Krol, they should be able to hold or increase their margin with him back in the line-up." Irrefutable logic, that, but football championships are not won by logic. There have been bigger upsets.

Randolph Field Team Is Good

Over in the United States, the team that seems to have national honours in hand is the Randolph Field Air Force squad. The flyers have scored 296 points in their six games, to date, with only 6 scored against them. They have gained a total of 2,381 yards in these six games, and have a scoring average of 49.6 per game. Johnny Leicht, their star halfback has averaged 10.8 yards every time he has handled the ball. There is no service team in the country capable of standing up to these boys with the possible exception of Gils Dobbs' Second Air Force team. Among the other teams, excluding the professionals, probably only West Point and Annapolis could challenge the Texans. Dobbs' team has lost one game — to Iowa Pre-Flight — which removed them from the unbeaten list. Army and Navy are unbeaten, to date.

Sweeny Returns To Star

The hockey season is young yet, but the manner in which Dave "Sweeny" Shriner has revitalized the Toronto team makes the Leafs look like best bets for league honours this year. Shriner is one of the great stickhandlers of all time, one of the few still left in the game, and he has undoubtedly made the difference between the team Canadiens defeated 11 to 0 in the playoffs last spring. Shriner has scored ten goals this year, at this writing—a phenomenal start. The Toronto star broke into professional hockey with the Americans in 1935, and won the league scoring championship in his second year in pro hockey.

From Larry Souter's Scrapbook 1919

"Probably in all his lengthy experience it had not fallen to the lot of Newsy Lalonde to be attacked by a lady fan prior to Saturday night's game with Quebec Bulldogs here.

"Immediately after Lalonde had entered the penalty box, following his set-to with Frank Brophy, a lady attired in sealskins and with many jewels in evidence, rushed down from a nearby box and began to berate Lalonde in no uncertain terms.

"Newsy rapped on the back of the cage with his stick in an effort to shoo away the excited fanette, but this only added to the lady's ire, and reaching over the top of the netting, she pummelled Lalonde's head vigorously with her muff. The lady was joined by her escort, who added his voice to the insults, and it took three or four policemen and ushers to quell the disturbance. The lady was still breathing dire threats in Newsy's direction as she left the rink.

"Between serving two majors and a minor, being cuffed by a lady, and battling with Brophy, Lalonde had time to score only two goals during the evening."

Panthers Near Championship

The Panthers are but one game away from the championship in the pee-wee section of the Westmount Municipal Six Man Rugby League, the first place team handed the second place Argos an 18-6 defeat in the first game of a best of three series at King George Park on Saturday morning.

In the two semi-final series, the Panthers eliminated the Yanks and the Argos downed the Greyhounds. While both of these series were billed as two fame affairs with total points to count, the agreement was that if one team won by 15 points or more, no second game would be played. Each team performed this feat, the Argos swamped the Greyhounds 19-0 but the Panthers waited until the last play of the game before they scored the necessary point to hand the Yanks a 16-1 defeat.

Phil Martin and Ted Budzen scored 7 points each in the Argos 19-0 win, the other five points counted five and Mike Barnard

Fred Hofman scored 10 of the Panthers points in their game with the Yanks, Billie McCoubrey counted five and Mike Barnard one. Dave Belcourt kicked the Yanks' lone point.

In the first game of the final series the Panthers held an 8-6 lead at half-time over the Argos but mode the final count read 18-6. Vince Roberts, Fred Hofman and Bob Forrest all got touchdown for the Panthers while Mike Barnard booted the other three points. Ted Budzen counted the Argos' six points on a touch and a convert.

TRIBUTE PAID JIMMY DAROU BY BAZ O'MEARA

High tribute is paid to Jimmy Darou, former jockey and now operating a service station at Sherbrooke Street and Westminster Avenue, by Baz O'Meara, Sports editor and columnist of the Montreal Star in an article which appears in the latest edition of the Montrealer.

Mr. O'Meara's home is at 427 Victoria Avenue.

That Shakespeare knew

Of all the cheerful characters you meet up with around the sport rialto you have to hand the potted palms to Jimmy Darou. Jimmy has a horse named Head Sea. This is a claimer, and no handicapper. Jimmy has won some races with her this year, and he lives in constant fear that someone will claim her. Last spring she was ill. Jimmy fretted so much that he actually thought he might be able to rig up a place for her in his service station so he could be near her and see that she got every attention.

Nobody but a well worn heel would claim her, but Jimmy, who used to be a jockey, says there are many such in racing. He is a cripple, who preaches the gospel of cheerfulness to all and sundry. Sunday and every other day. Recently he heard Major Connie Smythe might not have the use of his leg. So he decided he would visit the Major when he went to Toronto just to cheer him up a bit. Jimmy is like that. His letters are the most wonderful things. They breathe a spirit that animates his broken little body. Though he is paralyzed from the waist down, he expects to walk again.

Jimmy broadcasts the local races and he does a fine job. He found out that he had to polish up on his English, so the first authority he tackled was Shakespeare.

"You know he even talks about racing. That Shakespeare knew his stuff and human nature. He must have been around those old race tracks." Jimmy opines.

You don't meet many finer characters than Jimmy. He got Head Sea cheaply because a jockey friend bought her in New England and let Jimmy have her almost for a song. Some day some radio promoter will wake up to the possibilities of utilizing the talents of this cheerful little earful. Our guess is he would be a sensation on the air.

Professor A. B. MacDonald, managing director of Nova Scotia Credit Union League and associate director of St. Francis Xavier Extension Department has severed his official connections with the Maritime Co-operative movement to take up his duties as national organizer for the Co-operative Union of Canada. His headquarters will be at Ottawa. Co-operators representing societies throughout Cape Breton Island gathered to honor him in a farewell banquet at Sydney. To him should go much of the credit for the success of what is known everywhere as the Antigonish Movement. He has unbounded energy and power of concentration and is a convincing speaker and writer. He is noted for his tact in all circumstances. For five years he gave outstanding service as Inspector of Schools for the counties of Antigonish and Guysboro.

A "dust bowl" laboratory, for testing military combat vehicles under simulated battlefront climatic conditions, is one reason why American motor equipment is standing up in Alaska and the jungles.

Tigers Advance To Final In The Midget Section

Pete Fullerton's Tigers advanced to the final round of the playoffs in the midget section of the Westmount Municipal Six Man Rugby League when they eliminated Marvin Greenbaum's Greyhounds, 30-24, in a two-game total points to count series. The first game between the two teams ended in a 13-all tie while the Tigers won in the last minute of the second encounter by a 17-11 score.

The Tigers now meet Dave Binmore's Eagles in a two out of three game series for the championship. The Eagles went through their league schedule undefeated.

The first game between the Tigers and the Greyhounds ended up in a 13-all tie, the Greyhounds held an 11-8 advantage at the halfway mark but a touchdown by Mike Tucker gave the Tigers a 13-11 lead only to see Dave Crombie tie the score up on a touch from fumble. Tucker led both teams in scoring with 10 points while Fullerton tallied his team's other three counters. Ross Jolly scored six points for the Greyhounds, Donnie Wadsworth five and Dave Crombie two.

A roughing penalty in the last minute of play enabled the Tigers to break up an 11-all tie in the second game of the series. The score had see-sawed back and forth, the Greyhounds led at half-time 6-5 but with but a minute to play the teams were tied at 11-all. The Tigers were in possession about 20 yards out when they advanced to the Greyhounds' 10 yard line via the penalty, on the last play of the game Mike Tucker kicked and while the Greyhounds' backfield let the ball roll around behind their line, he came up and recovered his own kick for a major score. Pete Fullerton then added another point with a convert.

Fullerton led the winner's scorers with seven points, Mike Tucker and Derek Hannaford had five each.

Dave Crombie and Allan Bishop counted major scores for the Greyhounds while Donnie Wadsworth added the eleventh point.

The line-ups for the game were as follows: Tigers—Mike Tucker, Pete Fullerton, Pete Clark, Robin Upton, Dave Wells, Derek Hannaford and Jack Watson.

Greyhounds—Bob Gough, Dave Crombie, Ross Jolly, Bob Bunten, Donnie Wadsworth and Allan Bishop.

The Municipal Hockey League

The organization meeting of the Westmount Municipal Hockey League will be held this Monday evening, November 20, starting at eight o'clock.

All teams wishing to enter the bantam, midget and juvenile sections of the league should have at least one representative at this meeting.

The age limits of the three sections are the same as last year, in fact they never change, the bantam being for boys 13 years of age and under on November 1; the midget for boys 15 years of age and under on the same date and the juvenile for boys 17 years of age and under on November 1. This of course means that if a boy has a birthday on November 2 or later, he is eligible to play in the section according to the age he was on November 1.

At least six teams are expected to enter the juvenile section of the league, two Golden Eagles teams, the Unity Boys' Club, a team entered by Frank Creaghan, one entered by Ted Armstrong and the Claremont Barracks.

There should be a large number of bantam teams but the midget section is a doubtful mark at the present time. Nevertheless four or five clubs will enter before the season starts.

Team application forms are now available and teams wishing to receive same are asked to call at the office in the greenhouse and obtain one from Recreation Supervisor Jim McCormick. The players' cards will not be available until the end of the month.

WESTMOUNT HIGH LIGHTS

By GEORGE COCHRANE

The class of '44 will be together for probably their last time tonight when Westmount High's 1944 graduation exercises get underway at 8.15 in Victoria Hall.

A comparatively short program has been drawn up for the exercises and the evening will be topped off with dancing to the music of Ed Baillie's orchestra.

Brian MacDonald's valedictory speech is expected to be outstanding while speeches by other dignitaries will likely be listened to with interest.

Only those with invitations will be admitted to the exercises and the dance and those attending are reminded that separate tickets have been issued for both attractions. An invitation to the exercises does not admit one to the dance, and vice versa.

It is expected that there will be some delay between the end of the exercises and the beginning of the dance, for the chairs have to be cleared away before the dance can begin.

Basketball

Westmount High's as yet coachless school basketball team held its second drill of the season on Wednesday and at the end of the session number two it appeared evident that Westmount will definitely be in the running this year.

One thing which some of the players were complaining about is that until the inter-class basketball schedule is completed, the school team gets the gym only on Wednesdays. Last year practices were held three days a week starting in October and the team ended up in second place, three points behind the league champions, Lower Canada College.

Another thing which some would-be players don't like is that some flights have air cadet training on Wednesday afternoon.

Back from last year's team are forwards Jack Dudley and Bob Keefler, centres Hugh Cameron and Fraser Vipond, and last year's starting guard combo of Ray Binmore and Peter Trueland.

Trouble is that both the Messrs. Binmore and Keefler are going to try for the hockey team.

Debating

Westmount High is going to be a very debatey school if present plans of the newly formed debating society are put into effect. For good old W.H.S. is in the inter-school debating league this year and that means two teams, probably Peter Scott and Chippy Batshaw and Sam Freedman and Rita Weissler, will be upholding the honor of the school in a series of debates with L.C.C., Verdun, West Hill, Strathcona, and other schools.

Westmount gets into action next Friday, November 24, when one team debates here and the other visits Verdun to discuss the question of whether the modern magazine is doing less harm than the modern motion picture.

Neutral judges will be making the decisions and Westmount's two teams will debate with every other school in the league. Then the points will be added and a champion declared. If memory serves correctly, as it usually doesn't, West Hill won the trophy last year.

A series of inter-class debates will be starting in the next couple of weeks and when a class champion has been declared inter-form debates will get underway.

Dancing News

Now it can be told: Starting next Friday, November 24, Friday night parties will be held weekly in the gymnasium of Westmount High. A seven-person committee, consisting of John Pepper, chairman, Peter Oliver, Fraser Vipond, Judy Knowles, Mavis Johnson, Irvin Koven, and a Menorah club girl, will be running the affairs and chairman Pepper, who has been making plans for Friday night parties since about the middle of September, is confident that the dances will be the best of their kind ever held in Westmount.

It was Mr. R. O. Bartlett who secured permission to use the gym and Mr. Bartlett has assured the committee that school authorities will co-operate in every possible to make the dances a success. A few classrooms, the principal has announced, will be available for games.

The original plan was to have the dances start tonight. Due to the graduation excercises, however, opening night was shoved ahead a week.

The faculty will be represented by Mr. Shaffelburg and Miss Davidson and if present plans are carried out there will be no admission charge. Which is a very popular idea.

Hi-Y

The girl's Hi-Y, with president Inger Jorgensen in the vanguard, has been campaigning to get the school gymnasium on the night of December 15 for a Sadie Hawkins dance but school authorities are not going to give a definite reply for another couple of weeks. Which would indicate that the matter will be discussed at a meeting of the board of school commissioners, which would also indicate that the authorities that be were not 100 per cent pleased with the way the boys' Hi-Y ran their dance on November 3.

Which puts the girls' Hi-Y in somewhat of a pickle.

The boys laid plans for several ambitious projects at their regular weekly meeting last night. Chief among them is that the club hopes to teach every boy in Westmount, who wants to learn, to swim. It's a mighty undertaking and it's in the hands of Derek Ramsay, asisted by John Earle.

The boys also plan to sell buns and other choice commodities to the students of W.H.S. during recess periods and Mr. Bartlett has agreed to put the project on a one-day trial. The one-day will probably be a week today and the man who will probably be in charge will be William Atwood MacDonald, Westmount's ace drink vendor.

Next Friday the girls' club will be guests at a joint meeting which will be held in the local "Y" and which will probably feature an outstanding amateur magician.

Menorah Club

President Sam Freedman's; boys' Menorah club reports that they have made "splendid progress" with their plan of having a Menorah old boys reunion dinner at the Mount Royal Hotel about the second week of December, Nat Liebman, chairman of the social committee, is in charge of all arrangements and he is being ably assisted by the Messrs. Irvin Koven and Norman "Sonny" Latasky.

LIVES IN THE MAKING

A Century of Service with Youth

TODAY the Y.M.C.A. looks back with pride over one hundred years of constructive service to youth—and forward with faith to the bigger challenge of tomorrow.

Here are but a few glimpses of part of the many-sided programme of the Montreal Y.M.C.A., throughout the city. Through supervised sports, physical training, camps, discussion groups, hobbies, Bible classes, informal education and other activities the "Y" is effectively supplementing the work of the home, the church and the school in moulding the lives of youth and developing in them those qualities of character, initiative and leadership so essential to good citizenship.

For hundreds of lads the Montreal "Y" has been their first home in the big city. To others it has been a welcome avenue to clean companionship and fun. For many the "Y" has opened the door to higher education and their first job. To youth in the fighting services it has been a "home away from home". To youth of all ages it has brought strength in Spirit, Mind and Body.

This great work, while 82% self-supporting, needs your help to balance its budget and to assure the continuance of its programme for another year. Answer the call of youth and give generously.

Westmount High Lights

Arthur Roskies, last year's president of the Menorah club, wil be on hand at the graduation exercises tonight not only to pocket his diploma but also to present the Mussels Chemistry trophy to Robert Moodie. The trophy was donated to the schooi by the Menorah club in 1940 in memory of the late Mr. Mussels who taught chemistry at Westmount High school for a number of years. It is given annually to the eleventh year boy who receives the highest mark in chemistry on his matriculation exam.

The club's next meeting will be held at the Shaar next Wednesday and members are reminded that the starting time is 7.45. Mr. J. D. Lawley, famed Latin teacher of the institution, will be on hand to lead a discusion on post-war Canada.

Vox Ducum

With J. Lawrence Hutchison proudly bearing the title of editor-in-chief, plans for the 1945 edition of Vox Ducum, the Westmount High annual, are already underway and the key men of the staff have already been chosen, while the lesser lights are in the process of being selected.

Sam Freedman, of Thunderbird fame, is associate editor; Pete Seimers is assistant editor; literary editor is the one and only (for which we are thankful) Peter Scott; business manager is Charles Kennedy; Joe Duffin, president of board of publication, will be in charge of photography, as he has been for the past few years; and Lia Margulies is in charge of the art department.

The board of publications will hold its second meeting of the year on Tuesday when it is probable that the rest of the staff will be chosen.

Soccer

Westmount High's senior soccer team journeyed out to Montebello last Saturday and went down to defeat 3-1 at the hands of Sedbergh school. Westmount's lone tally was netted by Donald Johnson and others prominent for the locals were Roy Aikman, Pete Harling, Charles Burgess, Graham Ross, Bill Raymond, A. MacKay and John Bishop.

Bill Raymond, now of 12M, attended the Sedbergh school last year and arranged the match.

Items

Bob "Pappy" Sproule left 12M at the beginning of this month. He dons the baggy pants common at H.M.C.S. Donnacona next Wednesday. John Starke and Don MacIntosh join the senior service the same day . . . Don Hawker, Dave Harvie; Bill Reade, Allan Mackey, Buddy Beck, and other local members of the much-publicized 4,200 who are being discharged from the R.C.A.F. have been seen around the town. The lads report that on their way out they are handed a discharge paper and a draft notice. What they think of some politicians is not printable. Which may be just as well, for the P.M. seems to have enough to worry him as it is. Some of the lads would like to come back to school. Most of them signed up for air force when they were only 17. C'est la guerre . . . Sue Haire has something like 26 girls on her hostess committee which caters at Hi-Y supper meetings at least weekly . . . Don't forget the amateur show in the junior high auditorium next Thursday. It's a two and a half hour show and the admission rate is only a dime . . . Westmount High will have its own school paper soon. The boys' Hi-Y will be publishing it and have already started preliminary plans . . . Anyone who found a diamond-hued brooch-like affair at the Hi-Y dance on November 3 is asked to return same to Joy MacKay. Reward . . . The football team is prepping up for their party at Victoria Hall next Friday. No gate-crashers. Admission by invitation only . . . Seen at the McGill Junior Prom last Friday night: James Spencer and Margaret D. Swaine; Barry Campbell and Sue Haire . . . Many pardons for a bad error made here last week. The West Hill and West Hill girls' Menorah club Sadie Hawkin's dance will be held next Saturday, November 25, in the Shaar. Not tomorrow night. The Skyliners will be supplying the noise and tickets are available from any member of the girls' Menorah . . . War Savings stamps were scheduled to go on sale on Friday.

PEARL HOWARD WINS 2 PRIZES

By TOM BOWLING

Pruned of a good deal of deadwood, Fortresses fulfilled this critics earlier judgments and scored three fine victories and four points last week at the expense of Lancasters.

In the other alleys Liberators took two games to Spitfire's one.

Pearl Howard, a new recruit to Fortresses aided materially in the victory by winning the ladies' high single and high triple prizes. Robert MacKenzie did likewise among the men.

Tomorrow evening Liberators clash with Lancasters and Fortresses with Spitfires.

Now It Can Be Told

Here is the first of the lurid revelations promised last week. George Mitchel, as captain of the rejuvenated Fortresses is scheduled to appear before the Legal Committee of the League at an early date on a charge of unsportsmanlike conduct. Rumors have it that he is accused of pasting small pictures of Mackenzie King on the pins as an incentive to good hunting. Certain it is that Pearl Howard hurled with an energy and accuracy she has not hitherto shown.

* * *

Ruth Webster and Norman Doherty present an interesting study in contrasts. Norman, ever a humble soul, believes in getting down close to the floor before taking aim and firing. Webby stands erect and lets the ball fall with a thud to go on its own sweet way. It's suprising how often it heads for the centre pin. Doherty's result's, however, show that humility pays.

* * *

The Stoddard - Edgar rivalry would be more colorful if it developed into a bowling contest instead of an oratorical one in which each tries to out-talk and intimidate the other. Be careful, Harry, youth wil be served.

* * *

Two regular stalwarts were absent last week—Hugh McCormick and Brodie Snyder. Come back gentlemen, all is forgiven.

Tornados End The Seasson By Taking Championship

The Tornados won the championship in the bantam section of the Westmount Municipal Six man Rugby League when they handed Pete Laffoley's Typhoons two straight setbacks by scores of 12-7 and 26-0. The winners had gone through their schedule undefeated and ended the season in this manner.

While the Typhoons led at the halfway mark in the first game of the series by a score of 7-6, the Tornados made a last half comeback to win out 12-7. Normie Kerr notched up seven points for winners while Dave Wilks got the other five. Pete Laffoley scored a touchdown for the Typhoons and Mike McCulloch booted the other two points for the losers.

The second game between the two teams was a rout with the Tornados scoring almost at will. Normie Kerr led the winner's scoring brigade with 10 points, Dave Wells had six, Buddy Selby, five and Dave Wilks, five.

The members of the winning team were presented with crests emblematic of the championship in the bantam section immediately after the game.

The players on the two teams were as follows: Tornados—Normie Kerr, Dave Wells, Buddy Selby, Dave Wilks, Ken Black and Allan Turner.

Typhoons—Pete Laffoley, Mike Crombie, Don Bishop, Mike McCulloch, Pete Halls, Lyall Johnson, Dave Cox and Craig Grindley.

Rugged are the shoes worn by Russian soldiers. The average boot made for the Red army requires eight feet of leather as compared with two feet for other army shoes . . . A housing efficiency expert advises that fuel may be saved in the heating of a home in winter by spreading surplus rugs over the attic floor, which prevents the heat from escaping into the attic and out through the roof.

Nearly 18,000 farmers—17,984 to be exact—attended the 144 field day meetings organized by the Division of Illustration Stations, Dominion Experimental Farms Service, during the 12 months ended March 31, 1943.

Where's Joe?

Gone to get Cigarettes for our Fighting Men!

A cigarette is such a little thing, just a pinch of tobacco and a scrap of paper, but to a fighting man it is complete relaxation, the needed break for tense nerves, a supreme enjoyment.

On the return from "the target for to-night", or after tense moments of life or death, danger and suffering, a cigarette provides a sense of deep satisfaction that nothing else can give.

That's why we, every one of us, should make it an obligation to contribute regularly to the cigarette funds for our fighting men overseas.

Won't you do your part?

known since the day of Genghis Khan.

It is not that enemy, materialism, which we are now pushing across the Rhine and encircling in the Phillipines. Those whom we are pressing so hard today are the peoples who surrendered most completely to that devil's doctrine, those in whom it took the form of a false virility—with guns and bombers as its toys—just when it disposed us to softness, moral and physical laziness and supine appeasement of the strong and vile. War and initial disaster have not yet cleansed us, nor have the awful sacrifices we have made —or rather which our youth has made for us—fully opened our eyes to the malady that brought us to the edge of the abyss. Are we destined to plunge over it? Has disintegration gone too far to be arrested: Is the civilization of Europe and America to go down to oblivion like Cnossos or that of the Aztecs? It will if profit and loss are to be the sole criteria in the post-war world to which we are hastening, if things rather than human beings are to count most.

Of course, we are endeavoring to provide work and wages for all in the days to come! But man shall not live by bread alone. Are we preparing with equal eagerness to prepare an environment for the whole man? Fulfilment of man's other needs is held as at least equally essential as food, clothing and shelter in a new book by one of our most penetrating thinkers and observers, Lewis Mumford. In that book, "The Condition of Man" Mr. Mumford declares that ritual, art poetry, drama, music, dance, philosophy, science, myth, and religion represent human needs that must be met as fully and adequately as is that for daily bread. Man's true life consists not alone in the work of activities which directly sustain him but also in the symbolic activities which give significance both to the processes of work and their ultimate products and consummations.

Back of the old, ever-reviving heresies that are again assailing the minds of men, only partly cleared away by the cathartic of war and near-annihilation is the craze for accumulation, the mad race for wealth to make it no longer necessary to work. "I don't have to work." These words represent a goal of many who fail to achieve it. It is the slogan of those who fail to see that the end of work is too often the end of life. It is a continuance of the misleading scales of values we inherited from Europe, a relic of the idea of nobility which makes a man respected in proportion to the extent of time to which he has to go back to find an ancestor who earned his bread by the sweat of his brow. Leisure we must have if we are to live a full all-round life, but except in the case of the few who have learned to spend life in the service of humanity, "retirement" or "idleness" seems generally to add to the ennui of seeking satisfaction in "pleasure." To put us, as so many of our psuedo-intellectuals profess to aim at, on the new basis of having everything the heart could wish for and nothing to long for is to invite physical and mental degeneration. The satisfaction associated in men's minds with the blessings of idleness is a creation of the perenial superstition that work is a curse and release from it a blessing, whereas all nature teaches us that men have life just in proportion as they can put every faculty to eager use. There is no escape. Unless men and women find themselves doing some part of the work that must be dope for humanity, only petulance and disgust will be their portion. If these theologians be right who take literally that story in the third chapter of Genesis which makes work a penalty inflicted upon mankind for the sin of our first parents in the Garden of Eden then the curse of God is better than that blessing of man which holds freedom from labor the best of all goods. Happy would the world be if it could make the discovery that it needed some enthusiasm of humanity to supply the void created by lack of occupation. Any form of struggle for livelihood would be preferable to a general pursuit of new distractions. On the other hand, if the world were filled with emulation for human betterment, what a kingdom of Heaven this earth of ours would become.

Come to think, the zoo must be a prolific source of wartime ideas. The armadillo, for all we know, suggested the tank. The giraffe and the zebra can teach the camouflage people. The crocodile offers a model and a name for amphibious vehicles. The skunk can hardly be unfamiliar to the chemical-warfare experts. And haven't we heard of hedgehog defence?—New York Times.

Solar Club Hears Concern Voiced Over Delinquency

V. F. McAdam, director of the Shawbridge Boys' Farm and secretary of Weredale House, was guest speaker at a dinner meeting of the Solar Club of Montreal, held at the Homoeopathic Hospital on Thursday evening last. Taking as his subject "Youth a generation hence" the speaker reviewed the effect of wars and depression years on the youth of our country and gave several illustrations as to the extent that these increased juvenile delinquency.

The principal cause of juvenile delinquency lies in the fact that a great many more people have children than are competent to bring then up, and although he admitted that it was a revolutionary idea the speaker said that he was in favor of taking children away from parents who were found, after investigation to be unfit to raise them. In the opinion of the speaker, juvenile delinquency could never be entirely eradicated because it was always believed that heredity also played no small part in the behaviour of children and this conclusion was frequently arrived at in cases where all the most expert methods of rehabilitation had failed. The number of these cases, however proved to be less than twenty per cent at the Shawbridge Boys' Farm where boys are taken only after they have been in trouble and have appeared before the Juvenile Court.

"DENTAL HEALTH"

Q.—Why is it imperative that devitalized molars be extracted rather than filled? What effect on the system does this type of tooth have if allowed to remain?

A.—If a pulpless tooth can be satisfactorily treated so that it can be kept from bacteria indefinitely by the use of a satisfactory filling, the tooth should never become a source of trouble. However, the treatment and filling of some molar root canals is so delicate and intricate that sometimes it is physically impossible, no matter how carefully done, to render the pulp canal and dentin completely sterile or to keep it so. If infected teeth are allowed to remain in the mouth, the primary infection may be carried by the blood stream to other parts of the body where it may infect other organs such as the eyes, heart, kidneys and joints. Since the majority of pulpless teeth are caused by dental decay, the best method of preventing infected pulps and preserving the vitality of the tooth is to prevent or at least completely remove decay when it first starts and fill the cavity with a suitable filling material.
