(2) Exterior view of the Canadian pavilion. (3) Canadian mineral exhibit. (4) Ontario carriages and canoes. (5) An exhibit of Canadian fruits. (6) Great nation-builders of Canada and the piscatorial exhibit. (7) A large booth entirely made of wheat, before and after threshing. (8) Live Canadian beavers at work in one corner of the Canadian pavilion. These animals form one of the attractive features of the pavilion, and excite a great deal of curiosity. Several sanguinary battles have already taken place between them, and, as the fatalities have been numerous, their numbers have had to be added to from time to time. In the illustration they are called "the earliest known wood-cutters and dam-builders in the world." (Photos by E. E. Cinq-Mars, Ottawa.)

View of What Henley is Like on Regatta Day—the Most Famous Rowing Course in the World

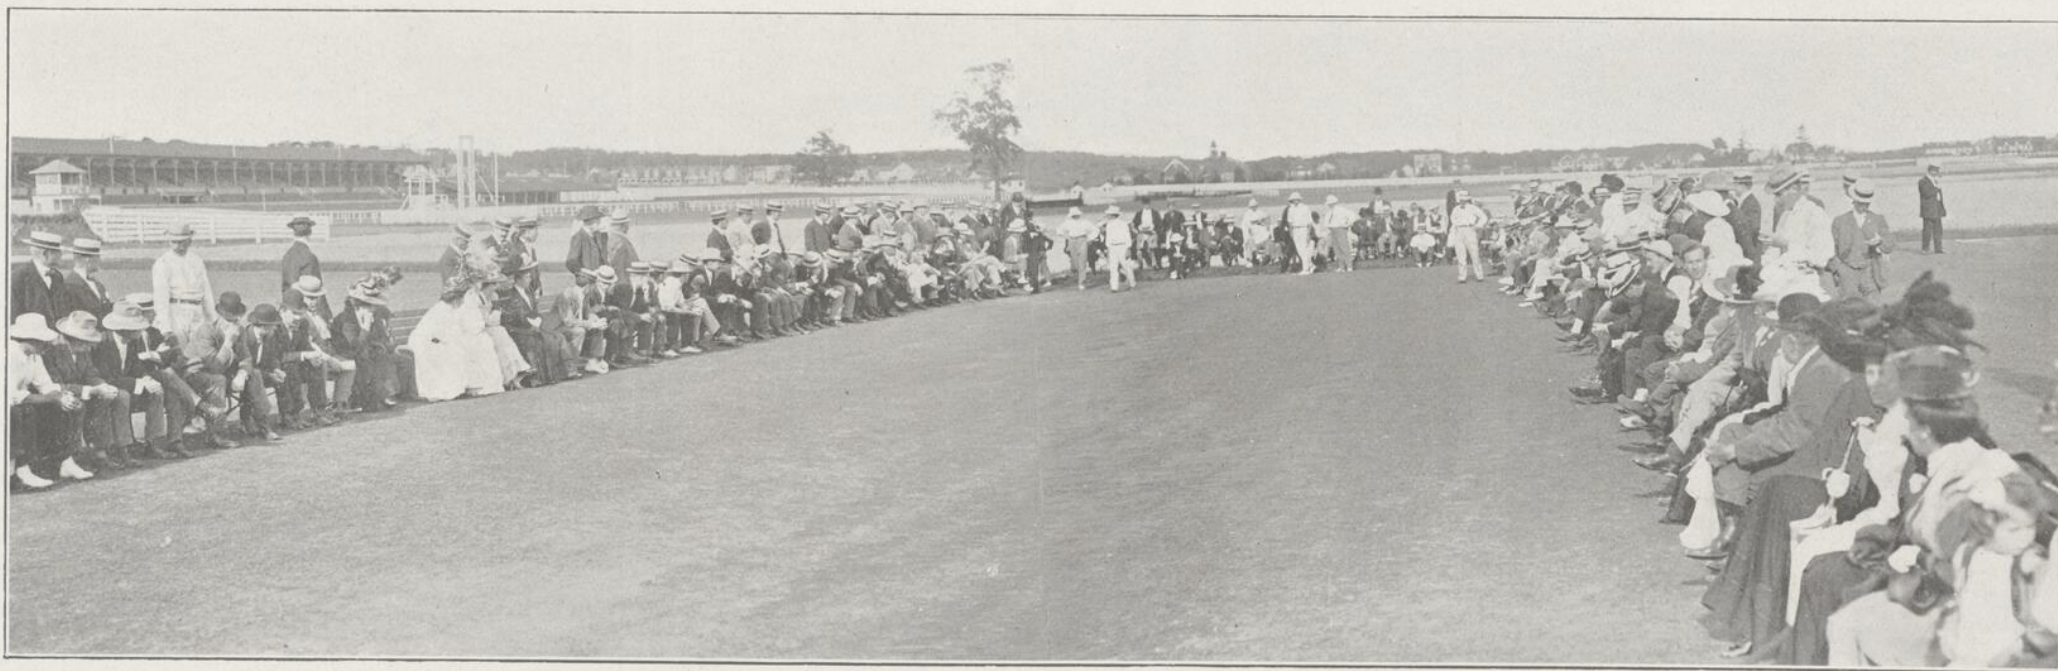

THE GREATEST AQUATIC CARNIVAL IN ENGLAND—A view of the immense crowd of spectators that witnessed the recent regatta at Henley-on-Thames. The illustration shows the final heat between Leander and First Trinity for the possession of the Grand Challenge Cup. This interesting event was won by Leander by a narrow margin. One of the unique features of this regatta was the vast flotilla of skiffs and pleasure boats which lined one side of the course. These afforded a splendid view of the races.

CANADIAN BOWLING TOURNEY.

BOWLING, which is rapidly becoming popular in Canada, is a British game of great antiquity. It is played on a smooth, level piece of green sward, generally about 49 yards long and surrounded by a trench or ditch about 6 inches in depth. A small white ball, called the jack, is placed at one end of the green, and the object of the players, who range themselves in sides at the other, is so to roll their bowls that they may lie as near as possible to the jack. Each bowl is biased by being made slightly conical so as to take a curvilinear direction; and in making the proper allowance for this bias, and so regulating the cast of the ball, consist the skill and attraction of the game. The side which owns the greatest number of bowls near the jack, each bowl so placed constituting a point, carries off the victory.

While bowling appeals possibly with greater force to those who play the roarin' game in winter, it nevertheless is extremely popular among thousands who never have curled and who do not take at all to the latter game. In Canada during the past few years a large number of bowling clubs and bowling greens have come into existence, and their number has been considerably augmented during the past summer. At the present time nearly every big athletic organization in the Dominion possesses a bowling green capable of accommodating several rinks, and, in addition to these, there are many private greens, not only in and near the larger centres of population, but in the rural districts as well, where land is plentiful.

During the past few months an all-Canadian bowling team made quite a name for itself in Great Britain. A series of interesting games were played with the crack organizations of the Mother Land, and, although the Canadians did not always emerge victorious from these contests, still they made a creditable showing and secured many valuable pointers as to the manner in which the game is played on the other side. The lessons learned in Great Britain during the past summer by the Canadian bowlers cannot fail to prove beneficial to the game in every part of Canada.

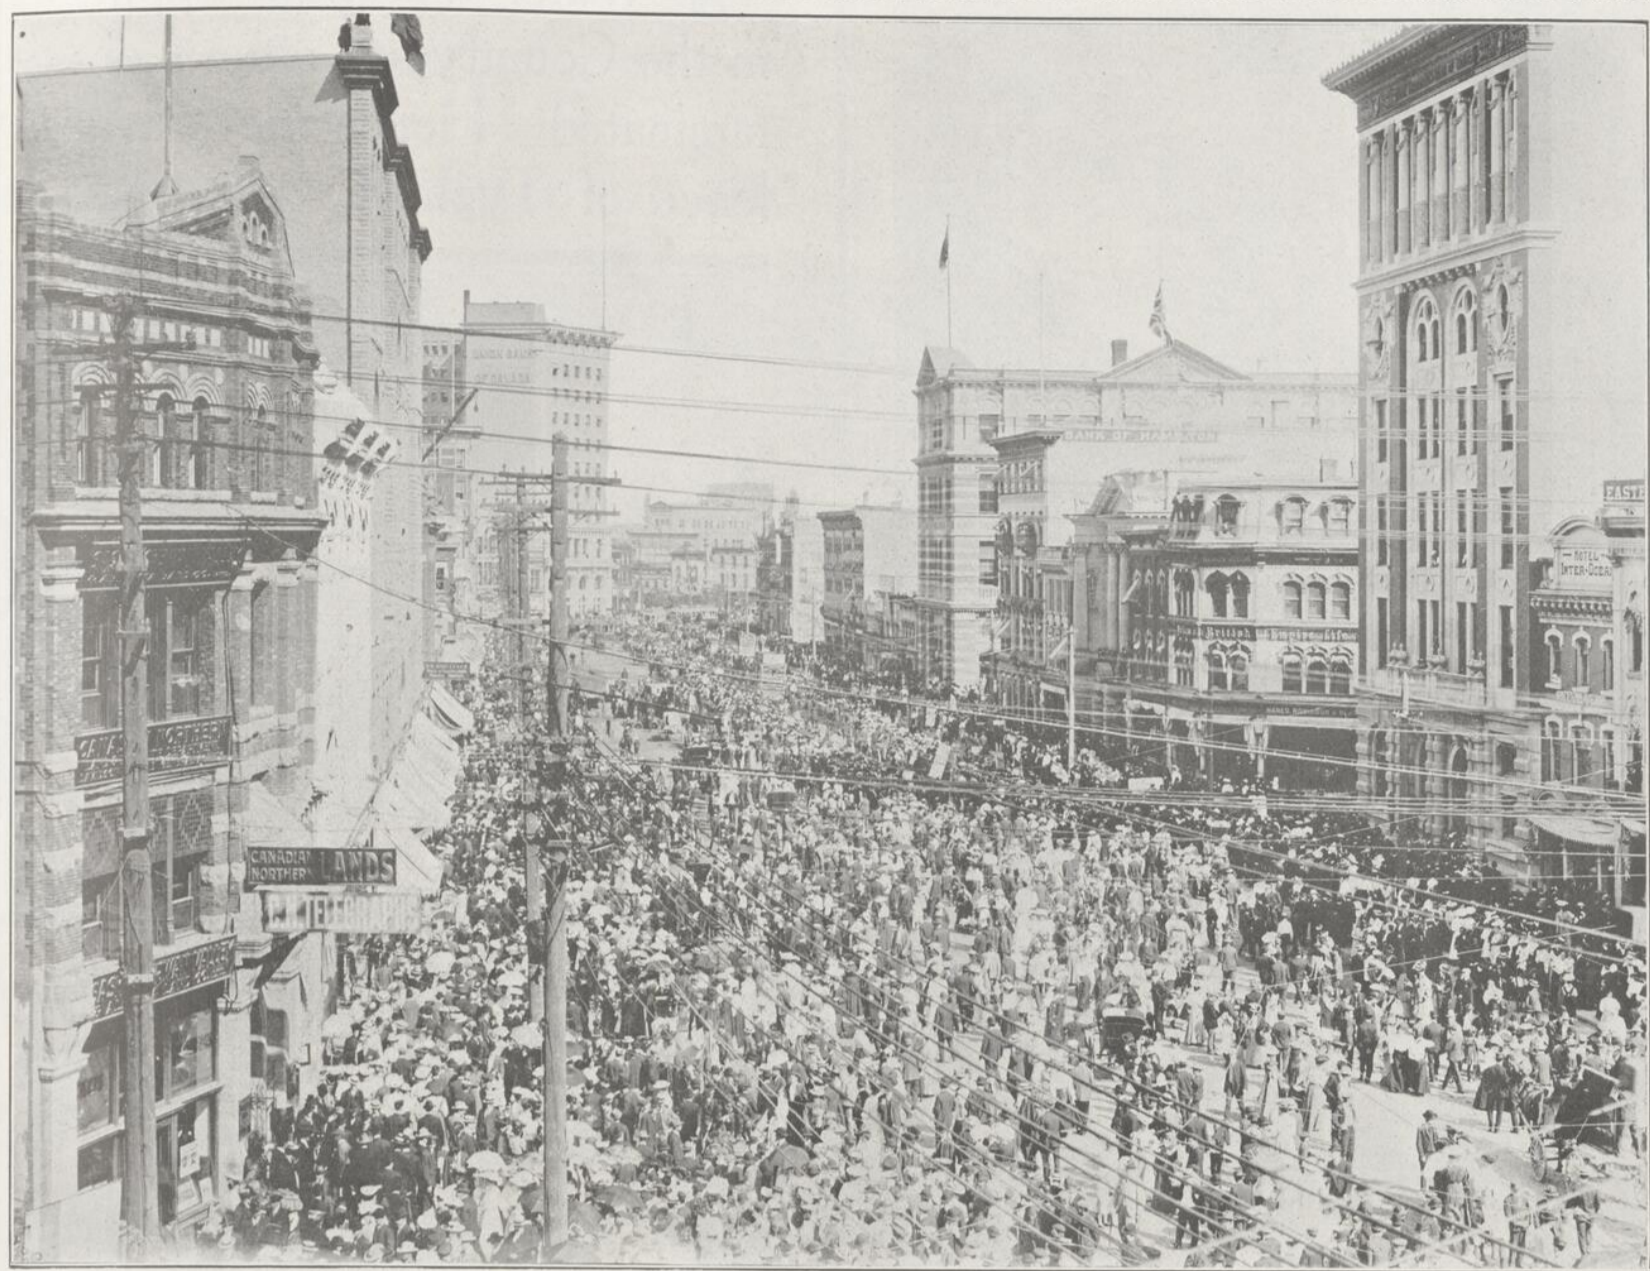

At Toronto recently, a Dominion Bowling Tourney of great interest was held on the grounds of the Ontario Jockey Club. This Tourney is illustrated in this issue of The Standard.

The Standard's Series of Beautiful Canadian Homes; Growth and Development of Winnipeg

AN ANIMATED SCENE IN THE PRAIRIE CITY OF CANADA—The illustration shows a typical holiday crowd promenading Main Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba. This street is one of the widest in the world, and during the past few years has been greatly beautified by the erection of some splendid new buildings. Winnipeg is the portal to the Great Canadian West, and is rapidly becoming one of the great cities of Canada.

The Right Hon. Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal is at present honorary colonel of the Association. On the occasion of his recent visit to Montreal, the members took the opportunity of presenting him with an enlarged group photograph framed in oak of the officers and members. The presentation was made by Lieut. W. L. Marsh on behalf of the members. His Lordship expressed his thanks for the gift, which he said he deeply appreciated.

Another parade was held in 1897, by way of commemorating the Diamond Jubilee. Quite a number who turned out on that occasion are still in the Association, and are aiding in the common purpose of uniting together all those who have honorably served in His Majesty's army or navy; of keeping up old recollections and associations; of visiting and attending those who are sick; and of helping as far as possible those who require assistance.

VETERANS OF THE BRITISH ARMY AND NAVY.

THE British Army and Navy Veterans' Association was first organized on the occasion of the Queen's Jubilee in 1897, among the promoters being the present president, James A. Edwards, the late Lieut.-Col. J. Fletcher, Capt. P. Mathews, the present commander, and others at present in the Association. The late Colonel Fletcher, of the 100th Regiment, was elected president and commander.

After several parades and drills, the veterans paraded on the Champ de Mars in company with the city regiments. They mustered over 400 rank and file, and were highly complimented by the late General Middleton on their smart and soldierly appearance, and on the large number wearing medals for services rendered in different parts of the British Empire.

Shortly after this parade an illuminated address was forwarded to her late Majesty Queen Victoria, congratulating her on the fiftieth anniversary of her reign.

The Standard's Series of British War Medals.

BURMA MEDAL, 1824-1826

Obverse.

The East India Company issued a medal to the troops for services in Burma in 1824-6.

Upon the obverse, the White Elephant of Ava is crouching before the victorious British lion, and behind him is the Union Jack flying in the breeze. Behind the elephant is the Burmese flag, drooping, signifying submission. In the exergue is the Persian inscription: "The Elephant of Ava submitting to the British Lion, 1824."

The medal was issued without name or regiment on the edge, and is worn with a crimson ribbon with blue edges, suspended by a steel clip and ring.

This is a very rare medal, and is now seldom met with. M. A. J.

SCINDE MEDAL, 1843.

Obverse.

For the campaign in Scinde, in 1843, the East India Company presented a medal to all the troops engaged, and also to the officers and crews of the Indian flotilla, four ships of which were employed.

Three medals were struck, all with the same obverse, namely, a diademed head of Queen Victoria, with "Victoria Regina" above.

No. 1 has on the reverse, "Meanee," a crown above, "1843" below, the whole surrounded by a laurel wreath.

No. 2 is similar, but with the word "Hyderabad" substituted for Meanee.

No. 3 has both names—"Meanee, Hyderabad"—inscribed, with a similar arrangement of crown, date and laurel branches.

A steel clasp was originally issued with it, but Sir J. Pennefather, Colonel of the 22nd Regiment, at his own expense, substituted a massive silver bar for suspension to the men of his regiment, being the only English Regiment to receive this medal.

The medals were issued according as the recipients had been in either or both engagements; but no one received more than one medal for the campaign.

The ribbon was of the "Rainbow" pattern; crimson shading to yellow, and yellow shading into blue. M. A. J.

Canada Loses Excellent Artist and Charming Personality in the Death of Mr. Henri Julien

THE LATE MR. HENRI JULIEN—The painfully tragic death of this consummate artist last week in Montreal removed from the ranks of the small but distinguished coterie of Canadian artists one who occupied a prominent position among them. Mr. Julien was probably the most facile and gifted pen and ink artist on the continent of America, and was also a painter of considerable originality and strength. (Photo by Lapres & Laverne, St. Denis Street, corner Ontario.)

"LA CHASSE GALERIE"—The above is a reproduction of a weird and powerful painting by the late Mr. Henri Julien, Montreal, whose awfully sudden death last week, while walking along St. James street, came as a painful shock to his many friends throughout Canada. The painting now hangs in the National Gallery, Ottawa, and is looked upon as one of Mr. Julien's masterpieces. It illustrates a legend popular among the French-Canadian shantymen of the Upper Ottawa, to the effect that, by selling their souls to the devil on New Year's Eve, they are enabled to travel through the air in a canoe a distance of many hundred miles to visit their sweethearts and families, returning to camp before daylight. A "mirage" showing a canoe apparently travelling through the air was probably the origin of the fantastic legend. The picture is an important contribution to Canadian art, and no one was better qualified than the late Mr. Julien to deal with a composition of this class. A close scrutiny of the clouds in the illustration will show the presence therein of several devils. There is wonderful strength and character in the faces of the men in the canoe. (Photo by Lapres & Laverne, St. Denis Street, corner Ontario.)

Henri Julien, Artist.

THE late Mr. Henri Julien, whose tragic death occurred on Thursday of last week, and whose funeral took place on Monday morning last, was one of the great newspaper artists of the world, and a painter of unique prestige. He was born in Quebec, his father being Henri Julien, who had had some experience in the printing and lithographing business, and who ended his days as a prosperous merchant in St. Timothee.

Mr. Julien was educated in the schools at Quebec, and when sixteen years of age came to Montreal and entered the engraving firm of the late George E. Desbarats. This firm then published periodicals known as "The Canadian Illustrated News," "L'Opinion Publique," and "The Heartstone," afterwards known as "The Favorite." After working in various engraving departments, Mr. Julien began to draw, and his sketches appeared in those papers. In 1871, when the first expedition of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police proceeded on the Red River expedition, Mr. Julien accompanied it as an artist, and his art work, which appeared in Montreal, was the first to be done of that great country. His sketches of the Indians and the life of the plains were wonderful portraits and attracted attention throughout the continent. Mr. Julien related amazing tales of the then great unknown land, and his story of a buffalo hunt at Fort Garry is a classic to the friends and associates to whom he had told it. After returning to Montreal, he rejoined the service of the Desbarats firm, and afterwards, when its interests were taken over by the late Mr.

George Burland, Mr. Julien entered the employ of that gentleman. For twenty-two years previous to his death Mr. Julien had been in charge of The Star's art staff, and for ten years previous to joining the staff of that paper he had drawn for its pages. He was amongst the first, if indeed not one of the pioneers, who inaugurated daily illustrated newspaper work. His pen was facile. His portraits were unequalled and he could delineate a man's features with amazing rapidity. In the art world, Mr. Julien possessed qualifications which made him superior to any black and white artist in America; indeed, there are few if any men, who possessed the craftsmanship of this Canadian. He was thoroughly conversant with every aspect and every phase of newspaper illustration. Not only could he make the drawing for the illustration, but he could, if necessary, make the plate for the cut. He was a master of every form of known engraving processes and was also qualified for stone work and general lithography. This knowledge, coupled to his skill with pen and pencil, secured for him a position rarely attained by any man.
