For the Love of Summer

By Zachary-Cy Vanasse

It hasn't exactly felt like summer in the Eastern Townships yet. While Thursday gave Townshippers a nice little reminder of just how nice a summer day can feel, the weather has yet to really have us out enjoying the beaches and sunshine. Dreaming of beaches and sunshine, that we've been doing plenty of for sure, but those hot summer days we remember so fondly when we could hit the local beaches or even head a little south to Hampton Beach or Old Orchard to take in some actual ocean have been few and far between up to now.

While no one knows for sure whether or not the weather will cooperate, that vibe and feel, those so-called good vibrations of summer, will nonetheless be alive and well in the Eastern Townships next Thursday night when, after a fireworks display worthy of all the glories of summer, the legendary Beach Boys take the stage for their show at the fête du Lac des Nations.

Original Beach Boy Mike Love fronts the group that has been a staple of summer for over 45 years. "It's that kind of a feeling or idea that seems to be universal," says the 68-year-old Love of the music he's helped write since 1961 when he and the Wilson brothers, Carl, Dennis and Brian, along with their friend Al Jardine formed the beach-loving band.

COURTESY BEAULNE MUSEM

A work of Francis Favreau

From Art to Nature

The Beaulne Museum is proud to present «From Art to Nature - Flowers for Abby» an exhibition by the eclectic artist Francis Favreau. The preview will be held in the presence of the artist and is scheduled for July 12, 2009 from 2 to 4 p.m. The exhibition will continue until September 13, 2009. Everyone is welcome.

This exhibition is a mini-retrospective of the artist's unbridled imagination, an expression of his sensitivity and his search for "Truth." The spiritual journey is of great importance to him, including the tangible and practical aspects, in order to communicate. He focuses on the qualities of exchanges among people, people and materials, and materials to conceptualize ideas-forms, archetypes, and interconnections. This produces a drawing, a painting, a sculpture, a poster, a machine, etc. He earns his living, in part, by making art posters sculpted with first-rate materials. He produces popular art as well by endeavouring to create a symbiosis between tradition, client, and material. On the other hand, his 2008 flower images were created to impress a beloved botanist. Airy and light, the flowers were drawn with particular attention given to detail and accuracy. He used the kake-mono format from the Japanese for style and space. To sum up his approach, he says, "discovering art and nature is what matters to me. Nature is versatile and I strive to be versatile by exploring various mediums, materials and technologies."

Love and the other founding members of the Beach Boys grew up in Los Angeles and, as he explains it, growing up in that kind of atmosphere during that time period meant that the music grew quite organically from their surroundings.

"There was nothing forced about it or anything like that," he says of the group's friendly pop tunes. "That was what we knew back then. You surfed, you cruised in your daddy's T-Bird and you tried to meet girls. You were just trying to have a good time. That's what we knew so that's what the songs were about."

Besides the surfing and daddy owning a T-Bird, those seemingly lost summer days of old aren't that far off from the modern teenage experience anywhere in North America. There seems no season/age experience we romanticize more than being a teenager in the summer.

And why not? The shackled responsibilities of school are shaken from the teenage mind almost before classes are even dismissed. The whole season, though inevitably finite, feels in many ways as if, as that classic Beach Boys album was titled, it could truly be an "Endless Summer." You spend your days playing and your nights, to borrow a line from 'Barbra-Ann,' looking for romance.

"Everyone always relates," Love says when explaining the Beach Boys timeless appeal. "It's something that all ages and people from everywhere seem to have felt, or are trying to remember, from some point in their life."

Fans of the Beach Boys, or even people who are simply fans of summer, nostalgic or otherwise, should not miss the band's July 16th show. The Beach Boys will be taking the stage following the fireworks at approximately 10:30 p.m.

Other acts on the Thursday night line-up include Pascal Dufour, Zékuhl and Angel Forrest. For more information check out the festival's website, www.fetedulacdesnations.com

Stanstead College picnic to benefit Border Minor Hockey

By Ross Murray

To support youth hockey in the Border region, Stanstead College will host a barbecue picnic on the school grounds during Border Fest this Saturday, July 11.

Volunteers from Stanstead College and Border Minor Hockey Association will be selling hotdogs, hamburgers, chips, drinks and homemade baked goods to raise money for the local hockey program.

Border Minor Hockey needs to raise money annually above and beyond registration fees in order to cover such expenses as ice time, insurance and referees. This year, due to the slumping economy, the group is lower than usual in corporate sponsorship.

"Border Minor Hockey is an important youth organization in our cross-border community," said Stanstead College Headmaster Michael Wolfe. "Besides being one of the major users of the College arena, they also share a lot of the school's values, including health, sportsmanship and teamwork. It seemed like a natural fit for us to help in this small way."

Besides raising money for local hockey, Border Fest will also be an opportunity for Stanstead College to share its proposal for a new community arena to replace its existing aging facility. Visitors will have a chance to see plans for the proposed arena as well as local hockey memorabilia from the last 50 years.

Currently, the school has applied for federal-provincial infrastructure funding to help build a new arena. To demonstrate their support for this community project, visitors will be invited to sign a Book of Signatures, which will be presented to officials in Quebec City.

Volunteers will also be giving away balloons as well as organizing games for youth.

The barbecue takes place on the Stanstead College grounds at Border Fest from 11:00 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Stanstead College was founded in 1872. It is an international co-educational boarding/day school from Grades 7-12 in Quebec's Eastern Townships.

COURTESY CIDI

Stephen Paglia

By Stephen Paglia

CIDI is a very eclectic mix of programming that showcases the talents of a large number of people. I am just one of those people.

My name is Stephen Paglia and my show is Mostly Canadian Unplayed. I have to say this is one of the sweetest gigs I have ever had. It is an absolute pleasure to play the music I have listened to over the years and be able to play new music by people who have a passion for sound.

For instance, recently I have had the pleasure of such individuals giving up their time in the studio to share their work with me, and by extension, with the listening audience. Art in the Townships is alive and well, and for me to be part of the scene is an honour and a privilege.

This past week local singer-songwriter Sarah Biggs joined me and our son, Gabriel, on the show. You see, Gabriel joins me in the studio from time to time to record the show, and has become a co-host of sorts. We played music from Sarah's past CDs and were treated to live performances of songs she has written for her next CD. It made for a wonderful Sunday morning.

The show airs Monday and Wednesday evenings. If you miss the program, you can go to Radio Communautaire Missisquoi's (RCM) website (rcm.org) and find it on CIDI's player. Not just my show you understand, but also the work being done by other CIDI volunteer hosts. These people are dedicated, helping create the unique sound of an Eastern Townships radio station. This is not top 40 nor is it single genre radio. It is far greater than that. It is radio driven by people who wish to share, with the rest of world, the concept of "being who we are" without the banal cookie-cutter mentality that pervades much of today's mass media.

So now we begin to throw off the shackles of mediocrity to shine a light on the works that have grown from the passion of people like Sarah, a dedicated musician and a proud Townshipper.

People say you can choose your friends but not your family. I disagree. At CIDI, one chooses family. It doesn't matter what your interests are (e.g. music or sports) when it comes to hosting a CIDI show. What matters, is that we have the freedom to play and talk about the music and things we love, while striving to provide our listeners with honest and artistic programming. Driven to share deep personal things important to each of us in our own respective way, is what constitutes an

RCM volunteer.

So come and join us. Listen to the shows and once inspired, come and help out in whatever fashion suits you best. This is radio for the Townships, by people from the Townships and it is an experience that has made me all the richer.

For now I must sign off. There is a guitar here waiting to be played, music to be listened to and songs and stories yet to hear. And for this, I am truly thankful.

Being who we are is CIDI, lots of great shows, lots of wonderful hosts and terrific volunteers. Give us a listen, send us your comments and suggestions, we always want to hear from you all and play the stuff you want to hear.

For those of you who can't pick us up on the radio go to our website and click on the live-streaming button. If you missed a show you can listen to it on the CIDI player or go to the show/host pages and listen to past programs.

Canadian author pens worthy sequel

By Jim Napier

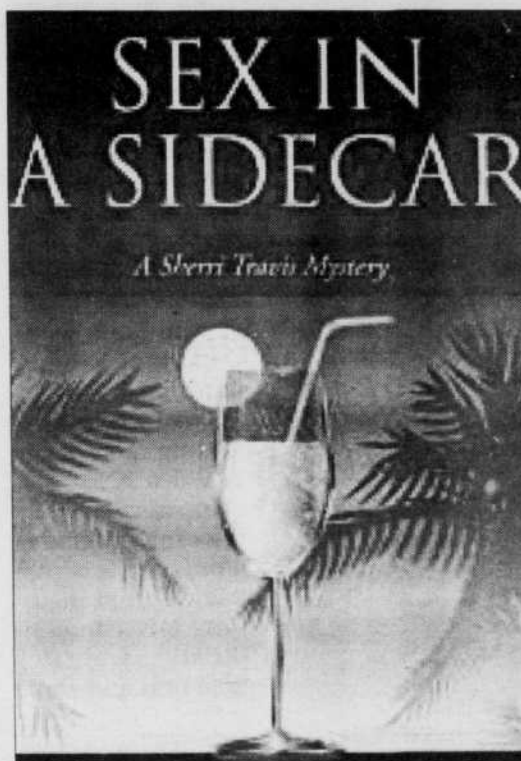

Tempus fugit. A year ago Canadian author Phyllis Smallman was launching her debut novel, Margarita Nights. A year earlier she had won the very first Unchanged Arthur award, which is given annually by the Crimewriters of Canada for the Best Unpublished First Novel. Established by Louise Penny and her husband, Michael Whitehead, together with Canadian publisher McArthur and Company, the prize was created to help previously unpublished authors gain national recognition and perhaps see their winning entry appear in print. Sure enough, McArthur picked up her manuscript, loved it, and last year released it to widespread acclaim. Later Margarita Nights earned Phyllis a spot as a finalist in the British-Based Crime Writers Association Debut Dagger competition. She has followed it up with her second novel in the series, Sex in A Sidecar, and it's a worthy sequel to the earlier work.

Phyllis Smallman

After a succession of jobs in libraries and as a potter, Phyllis Smallman finally bit the bullet and turned to her first love, crime writing. It brought her the proverbial "immediate" success, and since then she hasn't looked back. But she will be the first to tell you that Margarita Nights was not her first manuscript, simply the first to be published. Fact is, Phyllis has been writing novels for years, patiently improving her craft and filing away a wealth of plot ideas and colourful details that she can draw upon for future works. A good thing, as her works are attracting a growing legion of admiring fans.

Articulate and outgoing, when not touring and doing signings Phyllis and her husband Lee divide their time between BC's Salt Spring Island, Hamilton Ontario, and Southwest Florida, where she hatches her plots for her spunky sleuth, bartender Sherri Travis.

Sex in a Sidecar
(McArthur & Co., 2009)

COURTESY PHYLLIS SMALLMAN.COM

Sherri Travis is having a bad week. First a hurricane strikes the town of Jacaranda, on a barrier island off the West coast of Florida, where Sherri tends bar at the Sunset Bar and Grill. When she finds herself locked out of her pickup in the chaos of evacuating the bar, Gina Ross, a woman patron she's only recently met, offers her a lift. But Sherri is alarmed to discover they're going in the wrong direction, away from the causeway that forms their escape route, rather than toward it. The woman seems obsessed, and when they come to a halt at a cottage the woman leaps from the car and disappears with the car keys. In desperation Sherri searches for her, and it is not long before Sherri discovers the woman's lifeless body. Her skull has been crushed, the object that did it isn't in sight, and she's been laid out in crucifixion fashion. No doubt about it: she's been murdered.

Retrieving the car keys, Sherri makes her way to the mainland, where she reports the crime. Over the next few days she learns that Gina had a sister who was also recently murdered, and her death bears an eerie similarity to yet another death, a tourist named Bunny Lehre who had been killed while visiting the island. When it's revealed that Gina Ross knew Bunny Lehre as well it looks as though there might be a serial killer at work in Jacaranda.

It's not really Sherri's problem, of course; the Sunset Bar and Grill has been virtually destroyed by the hurricane, and Sherri needs to find another job. Contacting an old friend who runs the bar at the Jacaranda Bath and Tennis Club, she manages to get some temp work. It's not long before Sherri realizes that all is not sweetness and roses at the upscale resort: someone is dealing drugs, and one of the pool boys is having an affair with one of the members, to his girlfriend's dismay. As well, there's a club member with a loose tongue, a fondness for Sherri's shooters, and a tendency not to know her limit. Add to that Sherri's total inability to leave matters to the police, and it all makes for a lethal brew that will see more deaths before things are sorted out.

A fascinating read

As I've said before in this column, writing debut novels is a tricky business: all too often one book is all an author has in them, and the sequel is a disappointment. Having reviewed Margarita Nights I had no such doubts about Phyllis Smallman. She is a gifted writer, and has a strong and captivating protagonist in Sherri Travis. Sassy yet vulnerable, full of self-doubts about her relatively new relation with wealthy boyfriend Clay Adams, Sherri is an engaging figure whose combination of single-minded determination, absolute candor, and underlying sense of values utterly beguiles the reader. Add to that the strong sense of place unique to the Florida Keys, together with the menace of a major storm reminiscent of the film classic Key Largo, and you have the perfect recipe for a fascinating read. I'm already looking forward to the next installment in the Sherri Travis saga.

And if you're wondering about the title, you'll just have to read the book.

FLIRTING WITH DISASTER

In the new two-part NBC TV movie "Meteor," airing on consecutive Sundays, July 12 and 19, Marla Sokoloff ("The Practice") tries to save the world from a giant meteor strike that means a sure and fiery doom for every living thing.

As scientist Imogene O'Neil, she must continue the work of her boss, Dr. Lehman (Christopher Lloyd), and get vital information to a government scientist, Dr. Chetwyn (Jason Alexander), that may prevent the planet from being blasted to smithereens.

And Sokoloff wasn't about to do all this in a pair of flats or running shoes, despite the fact that she was covering a lot of rough ground in the desert just outside of Los Angeles last summer.

"I had high-heeled boots on," Sokoloff says. "It was a huge fight with the producer, because I did have to do a lot of running. I'm 5-2, and I have never, ever been on film in my entire career without having height. That's just not fair. No, I need my high heels.

"So he's like, 'You're going to have to run. You're going to have to have a gun, do all these things.' I'm like, 'I can do it. I can pull it off.'

"Then one day, I fell — major, like, totally scraped up. He was standing off to the side, and I didn't even want to look at him, because he had the biggest I-told-you-so look on his face, just like, 'Really? You had to wear the high heels? Because I don't know if you would have fallen had you not picked those shoes.'"

While Sokoloff may not be the equal of "Alias" star Jennifer Garner for saving the world in stilettos, she does get to do quite a lot of action-hero stuff in "Meteor," along with being a computer-literate scientist.

"I actually thought it was quite hilarious when I got offered this job," she says, "and I was playing a scientist — not only a scientist, but one who saves the world. I'm like, 'Really? Me? OK.'

"I don't see me doing that anytime soon, but it felt really cool to be the one with all the answers in my laptop.

"But a couple of the crew guys told me, 'You were the last person I thought they were going to cast.' I was like, 'Thanks, I think.' I'm not sure it's a compliment."

"Meteor" also stars Stacy Keach ("Prison Break") as small-town California Sheriff Crowe, and Billy Campbell as his son, Jack, an LAPD officer who's hot on the trail of his corrupt, dangerous partner, Calvin Stark (Michael Rooker).

As a native of Northern California, Sokoloff is quite used to earthquakes, but that doesn't mean she likes them.

"I would say I do worry about the earthquakes, but not meteors. I didn't even really think — not to sound naive, but really, a meteor? I don't know if that even crossed my mind in the 28 years I've been on this planet."

Maybe the Four Seasons were right. Maybe big girls don't cry.

Only sometimes they do, and maybe, just maybe, they sometimes die, and maybe, sometimes, their bodies are re-inhabited by skinny L.A. models.

Brooke Elliott

OK, more than often than not, that probably doesn't happen, but the notion provides rich fodder for "Drop Dead Diva," a new dramedy premiering on the "new" Lifetime Sunday, July 12.

The series, which stars Broadway newcomer Brooke Elliott and cutting-edge comic Margaret Cho, is a bracing attempt by the cablenet to distance itself from the "Saturday Night Live" parody-worthy, issues-heavy TV movies it once traded in while still remaining true to its target audience. And, happily, "Diva" manages that very neatly, based on the four episodes previewed.

Billed as a "comedic drama," "Diva" opens on Deb Dobson (Brooke D'Orsay), a size-zero aspiring model whose career is nipped in the bud when she smashes into a produce truck while trying to multitask behind the wheel on the way to an audition. Concurrently, brilliant young attorney Jane Bingham (Brooke Elliott) takes a bullet for her boss and dies on the operating table.

At the Pearly Gates, Deb clashes with clerical angel Fred (Ben Feldman), who is stunned to note that while she has done virtually nothing to allow admittance into heaven, Deb has not committed any transgression for which she deserves to be sent to hell. An exasperated Deb acts impetuously, and presto, her soul is transplanted into Jane's plus-size body and given a chance to connect with the world in a different, more meaningful way, assisted by her no-nonsense aide, Teri Lee (Margaret Cho).

"What was attractive about the character to me," Elliott says, "was the message that we get to send: that all women are beautiful and they should deserve to know that. You don't have to be size zero to be beautiful, and I liked that message.

"(This show) makes me think of that quote from 'Steel Magnolias': 'Laughter through tears is my favorite emotion,'" she adds. "I think the audience responds to that, maybe because of the time period we're in with our country Certainly people must be open to it because it's all over TV right now."

Jennifer Arnold

Becoming a TV star was probably never a consideration for Jennifer Arnold, who has been quite busy with becoming a pediatrician and neonatologist.

Along the way, she also met and married New York businessman Bill Klein.

And she did all of the above while being well under 4 feet tall, as is her husband (who is slightly taller than Arnold).

After being featured in a special on TLC called "Little People: Just Married," Arnold and Klein are the stars of their own TLC reality series, "The Little Couple," which premiered in late May and airs its first-season finale - as of this writing, no decision had been made on renewal - on Tuesday, July 21.

Oh, and while the series was going on, Arnold got a new job, which meant that she and Klein had to relocate to Houston.

"Clearly medicine is still my primary focus," Arnold says, "but I do feel like I have a third job now that takes up a lot of my free time that I might have otherwise had, for filming, but thankfully it's fun, so it makes it worthwhile."

Arnold and Klein have always attracted attention when they've gone out together, but now it's changed a bit.

"The response we've gotten from people is overall very positive," Arnold says. "Most time people are very appropriate, but there are definitely people that aren't always so appropriate, so this kind of attention is actually refreshing.

"It's very positive. People already know, 'Oh, there's the little-person doctor.'"

As to what doing a TV show has taught her, Arnold says, "What it means to be a positive role model. In the short amount of time our show has been airing, it's amazing how many people watch the show and really pay attention to the details of it.

"You really want to make sure that it's a positive show."

My Favorite:

Book: "Coming from Florida, she was a Florida writer: 'Their Eyes Were Watching God,' by Zora Neale Hurston. It's just a very real book. It's a great story about a young girl and all the struggles that she went through. It was written in Florida, so it had a lot of personal attributes."

Birthplace: St. Petersburg, Fla., on March 12, making her a Pisces

School cred: Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine (graduated 2000); pediatrics residency at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh, completed 2003; neonatal-perinatal medicine fellowship at Magee-Womens Hospital of UPMC Health System (completed 2007)

Current positions: Assistant professor of pediatrics, division of perinatal-neonatal at Baylor (Texas) College of Medicine; neonatologist and medical director of the pediatric simulation center at Texas Children's Newborn Center; faculty, SUNY at Stony Brook (N.Y.) Health Science Center

Association cred: Member, American Academy of Pediatrics, Academic Pediatric Association, Society for Simulation in Healthcare

"Anthony Bourdain's Blog," anthony-bourdain-blog.travelchannel.com

Travel Channel premieres a new season of "Anthony Bourdain: No Reservations" on Monday, following the peripatetic chef, author and traveler as he heads to far-flung parts of the globe to sample local culture and cuisine (even when it's occasionally still moving). Check out his official blog for Bourdain's firsthand recollections of his travels and other facets of his life. There's also a link to the crew's behind-the-scenes blog about shooting "No Reservations."

"National Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum," web.baseballhalloffame.org

There's a lot of baseball action on television this week, including the Home Run Derby Monday on ESPN and the All-Star Game Tuesday on Fox. But the game of baseball is much more than just an afternoon's entertainment on the TV screen or at the ballpark - it's inextricably woven into the fabric of American culture. To learn more visit the home page of its Hall of Fame, located in Cooperstown, N.Y.

celebrity q&a

Cat Deeley

OF "SO YOU THINK YOU CAN DANCE" ON FOX

Q: Where are you?

A: I'm at home at the moment, in L.A. I go between the two (London and Los Angeles). It is so peaceful here. I love it here, so funny. From some people L.A. gets a hard rap. I have great friends; I can run my horse, go surfing, I never used to ride in London. I got really bad hay fever. Whatever it is I was allergic to in England doesn't exist here, so I can horse-ride again. Sometimes I have to be serious, but sometimes I feel about 7, riding on a horse through the hills.

Q: How is this dance show different from all of the others?

A: I love the popularity of all of the other dance shows. While there is still a passion to see other new shows, I don't see it as competition at all. It is lovely that the American public has the appetite for them. With our show, it is more about finding unknown people and putting them into the spotlight, and usually dancers aren't. It's a lovely opportunity to appreciate their passion, and America does know their names, and it enables them to become very, very well-rounded. Normally dancers have one specialty, and on this they have to do ballroom and salsa, and they grow as dancers.

Q: You're a fashionista. What's your latest favorite item?

A: I just got a brand-new Jimmy Choo leopard print bag. It can look very chic Fifth Avenue, or you can wear it with a pair of jeans.

Q: Do you know what has happened to "Eleventh Hour" and if it will return to the air?
—Sue Gosman, Denver

A: CBS canceled it, and though another channel might pick up the existing episodes sooner or later, there won't be any new ones of the British miniseries' Americanized version, which starred Rufus Sewell and Marley Shelton.

Rufus Sewell

Q: What has James Spader been doing since "Boston Legal" finished? —Barbara Dime, Bellevue, Wash.

A: Emmy winner Spader soon will be seen in his first project since the series ended, a family film titled "Shorts," written and directed by Robert Rodriguez ("Spy Kids").

Q: Whatever happened to "Secret Millionaire"? It was my favorite show, and it was gone after what seemed like a month. —Chris Seymour, Victoria

A: The reality series involved rich people doing good things for poor folks. It ran for just six episodes on Fox in December 2008 before being canceled. Looks as if good news just doesn't sell.

Jane Bingum from 'Drop Dead Diva'

BY JACQUELINE CUTLER

If this article could spark a retail revolution, so be it. Let's force change so women in double-digit sized clothing aren't relegated to shapeless garments.

In Lifetime's "Drop Dead Diva," premiering Sunday, July 12, the cliched battle of the sizes is waged: dumb, size-double-zero blonde versus brilliant, size-18 brunette. Both women die young on the same day. The blonde, Deb (Brooke D'Orsay), breaks the rules, and her soul winds up in the body of the brunette, Jane (Brooke Elliott), who gets a new lease on life.

Jane dresses in an understated, professional manner. Her office wardrobe of black suits and white blouses looks more like uniforms than outfits.

"She primarily wears the suits because she is a lawyer, and so it is still very lawyer-conservative as opposed when she is Deb, a (size)-double-zero L.A. model, which is very different," Elliott says.

"So much of our worth is placed on what we look like," she says. "If you don't look like a certain package, you're not worth anything, and so little importance is placed on are you a good person, a loving person, fun to be around? OK, you have these other qualities, and are you engaging those?"

Costumer Michael Clancy is ever mindful that the character appears in court.

"Her whole approach to the character was, more than anything, to just have it be true to a professional working woman, an everyday working woman who does that kind of work," Clancy says. "She needs to have outfits that are both sober and conservative enough to be appropriate for court and stuff that is flattering and nice as well. There are very firm parameters where you can go with how she can look."

He shops in New York, where he is based, as well as Los Angeles and Atlanta, where the show shoots.

"She very rarely wears one outfit from one place; maybe she will have a jacket from one manufacturer and a skirt from another," Clancy says.

While shopping at Saks in Los Angeles, Clancy learned that although the store did not display the merchandise in the larger sizes, it could be ordered online. He buys many suits and blouses from Marina Rinaldi, which makes finely tailored, classic pieces for women sizes 14 to 24.

He also buys suits from New York Lafayette, which specializes in lovely suits and dresses.

He finds blouses at J. Crew. Clancy says he also shops at Macy's, Bloomingdales, Nordstrom and Ann Taylor.

"I am constantly looking, partly because the challenge of dressing someone like Jane or any woman in plus sizes tend to be really matronly," Clancy says. "It's tough to find clothes for women in their 20s. ... One of the benefits of shooting in Atlanta is that they do carry the bigger sizes."

what we learned from tv lately

BY BEVERLY FOSTER SEINBERG

Catherine Keener

"HAMLET 2"

You can make a sequel to anything – even if everyone died in the original. All it takes is a time machine.

"RED DRAGON"

Do not attend a dinner party hosted by a guy named Lecter. Just don't.

"MIDNIGHT EXPRESS"

If you're facing prison time for attempting to smuggle drugs out of a foreign country, it's not a great idea to insult the judge who's sentencing you.

"THE NATURE OF NICHOLAS"

Boys going through puberty possess the ability to see the dead and split people into twins.

Jodie Foster

"ANNA AND KRISTINA'S GROCERY BAG"

A "flexitarian" is a person who follows a primarily vegetarian diet but occasionally eats meat.

"KARL MAY AND THE WILD WEST"

Author Karl May never made it west of Buffalo, N.Y., but his tales of the U.S. West are wildly popular in his native Germany.

"THE MOUSE THAT ROARED"

The best-laid plans of mice, men and tiny little countries ... well, you know the rest.

"Occam's razor" is not a slasher movie.

"U-CARMEN"

People who are in love – or think they are – can do very stupid things.

"DOC ZONE: HOW TO DIVORCE & NOT WRECK THE KIDS"

In a "collaborative divorce," the attorneys for both parties work together to reach a mutually satisfying outcome.

best of... Bad-Cop Movies

BY JAY BOBBIN

Charlton Heston

"Touch of Evil" (1958): Also the film's director, Orson Welles plays the corrupt police chief no one wants to run into – not even the passing-through cop portrayed by Charlton Heston – in this classic.

"Magnum Force" (1973): The original "Dirty Harry" took pains to establish Clint Eastwood as a rogue cop, but this first sequel made Harry look not-so-rogue as he went up against a group of vigilantes within his San Francisco department – two of them played by television-stars-to-be David Soul and Robert Urich.

"Serpico" (1973): Seemingly the one truly honest cop in his New York precinct, according to director Sidney Lumet's version of the true story, Frank Serpico is played quite memorably by Al Pacino.

Al Pacino

Treat Williams

"Prince of the City" (1981): Filmmaker Lumet returns to the police corruption theme with another fact-based story, with Treat Williams as the hero.

"Internal Affairs" (1990): An utterly convincing Richard Gere plays a sly cop who draws the attention of an Internal Affairs investigator (Andy Garcia) – who becomes his prey's next target.

"Unlawful Entry" (1992): Ray Liotta is great as a villain in blue who makes life tough for an upwardly mobile couple (Kurt Russell, Madeleine Stowe) when he falls for the wife.

"Ransom" (1996): Spoiler alert, but it may be too late already: One of the "good guys" here is bad. REALLY bad.

"Training Day" (2001): It came as little surprise that Denzel Washington earned his second Oscar as a make-his-own-rules officer giving a relative rookie (Ethan Hawke) an unexpected education.

"Dark Blue" (2002): Kurt Russell turns it around to play the badge-carrying victimizer this time.

"The Departed" (2006): The "bad cop" concept works in two directions in director Martin Scorsese's superb Americanization of Hong Kong's "Infernal Affairs." Leonardo DiCaprio plays an actual cop who infiltrates South Boston's underworld, while Matt Damon plays a covert mob underling who makes his way through the police academy.

"Lakeview Terrace" (2008): Samuel L. Jackson is among the latest actors to maintain the tradition of a police character who uses his position to do bad, as the new couple next door can attest.

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE AULIS

The premise of Brad Paisley's tour is that every night really is a fun Saturday night and that's what will be happening at the Champlain Valley Fair on August 30 when the reigning CMA Male Vocalist of the Year and ACM Top Male Vocalist winner, Brad Paisley, will appear at the Bud Light True Music Series in the

Coca Cola Grandstand. Paisley comes to the Comcast Stage with a brand new album titled American Saturday Night and with special guests, country singer Dierks Bentley and Jimmy Wayne on Sunday, August 30 at 7:30 pm. What a lineup! It holds the promise for a magical evening. Tickets are now available at the Flynn Box Office in person, by phone, (802) 86-FLYNN (863-5966) or through their website www.flynntix.org Tickets are also available at Copy, Ship, Fax Plus at 159 Pearl Street in Essex Junction, (802) 879-3719. Paisley has a new, very solid album which features a wide variety of great music. Brad Paisley has mainly built a career on up-tempo songs with infectious guitar solos and a lot of witty tongue-in-cheek humour. The material on this new album is a little bit more serious than some of his previous work but he has made a habit of making great albums filled with well crafted songs and this one is no exception. It is different in that Brad Paisley has gone down a more intimate path on most of the songs. It's clear that Brad Paisley is growing up. It is far from the days of 'Ticks', 'I'm Gonna Miss Her', and 'Celebrity'. But honestly, this is a welcome change. Fans will love to see another side of him. Being more mature doesn't mean that Brad Paisley lost any of the genius that has been driving his career from the start. His talent shines brighter than ever, with meaningful lyrics that reflect both the husband and father he has become. More serious doesn't exactly mean that there are not many moments to make you smile or even bust up laughing.

Missisquoi Museum Presents Danielle Clement

A series of paintings by Danielle Clement will be exhibited at the Missisquoi Museum in Stanbridge East from July 10 to July 31, 2009.

Born in Montreal, Danielle as a young woman first studied art at Sir George Williams University. Later she was a student at the Museum of Modern Art in New York and after at Montparnasse in Paris. Upon her return to Quebec she accepted a career in scientific illustration at the University of Montreal.

Tireless in pursuit of art Danielle continued to fine tune her work by an intensity of the study of watercolor with Jean-Paul Ladouceur, Maurice Domingue, Jacques Hebert and figure painting with Ayfer Gursoz.

Danielle invites you to visit her virtual Art Studio (Danielle Huguette Clement), which is situated on a serene avenue near the Vermont frontier in Philipsburg, Quebec, a historical village on the shores of Lake Champlain. The Missisquoi Museum is located at 2 River street, in Stanbridge East.

He has never lost his creative lyrical wit, and he is not showing any signs of slowing down.

The new album starts out with a feel-good summer song, 'American Saturday Night', that is all about having fun, no matter what part of the country you're in or what day it is.

'Welcome to the Future' is very catchy, and has strong lyrics that many can relate to.

It is truly a gem and it might just become the country star's next #1 single. 'Catch All the Fish' sounds more like what Brad Paisley has done before and is one of the best songs on the album. It has a real bluegrass feel to it.

'No' a song inspired by his grandfather's words of wisdom is bound to make you cry. This song replaces the traditional Christian hymn usually found on his albums. It is extremely powerful with great steel guitars and simple laid back production.

Paisley pays a tribute to his wife on 'Then,' a smash love song. Paisley is a man who feels that his love for his wife has only gotten stronger. This was the first single released while 'Anything Like Me' is about his two sons.

On 'Water' he shows off his ability to take simple pleasures of life and turn it into a catchy, summery song. Songs like 'Everybody's Here,' 'She's Her Own Woman,' 'You Do the Math,' and 'Oh Yeah, You're Gone' are quite different from what he usually offers but they still are well crafted.

These songs are all about where he is in his life as a father and a husband and showcase a singer who has matured. He is a great songwriter and guitarist. What never changes is his huge respect for country tradition. Paisley is an artist who always remains true to who he is.

Dierks Bentley

Bentley grew up in a nonmusical family in Phoenix, Arizona. The 'What Was I Thinkin,' singer got his country music education on his own, listening to recordings. A love of the music inspired him to move to Nashville at the age of 19, but he quickly grew discouraged by the lack of public and professional interest coming his way.

It all changed when he walked into the Station Inn, a bar where the bluegrass faithful hang out. An all-night jam session gave him new hope and he restarted pursuing gigs. He landed a job at the TNN television network doing research on classic country music and by night he worked on his demos.

Capitol Records heard the artist, signed him, and released his self-titled debut in 2003. Bringing his love of Merle Haggard and Waylon Jennings to the forefront, his debut album Modern Day Drifter followed two years later and became a Top Ten hit.

Feel that Fire, is a perfect name for Dierks Bentley's latest effort. You can definitely feel the fire and passion that he has for his music. Released in early February 2009, his latest work shows just how much he has evolved into the rising Country Music Star that he is today.

This is his first studio album since the Grammy nominated 2006 release Long Trip Alone and his fifth album for Capitol Records Nashville. The songs are solid, fun and passionate and the collection offers a great mix of songs that show all the sides of Bentley's musical talent.

Dierks Bentley's summer party anthem 'Sideways' overtook the top spot on Billboard's Country Singles Chart. 'Sideways' is the award-winning vocalist's second consecutive No. 1 hit off his new album. It also marks his seventh career No. 1 hit.

The country star, 33, has acquired a great reputation through the years as a live performer. His high energy show is appealing to the fans but he can also sing a mean love ballad.

Jimmy Wayne

With two albums under his belt, Jimmy Wayne is still in the class of the newcomers, but well on his way. Everything he sings is brought vividly to life by his strong, soulful voice. The honesty of his lyrics and the catchy melodies really appeal to the listeners.

In a few short years, Jimmy Wayne has gained a lot of respect from his peers for his ability to deliver a song with passion and personality. He can easily capture the nuance of a lyric with his vocals.

Jimmy Wayne was born Oct. 23, 1972, in Cleveland County, North Carolina. He had a hard childhood, as his father left the family when Wayne was a toddler while his mother was in and out of prison.

He grew up in foster homes, and used writing as therapy. Wayne moved to Nashville, practiced guitar until becoming proficient and put his life experience to music. Tracy Byrd cut one of his songs, 'Put Your Hand in Mine' in 1998.

Wayne's first single, 'Stay Gone' was inspired by his sister Patricia, who was having marital troubles at the time. She told Wayne that everything would be better if her husband would just stay gone. Wayne released his self-titled debut album on DreamWorks Nashville in 2003.

The artist has grown as a songwriter and with maturity comes a larger view of life. While his first album was intensely personal, his new songs are about more universal themes. His sophomore effort, Do You Believe Me Now, is far from traditional country arrangements and it is clear that he's a pop/country artist. Most of the music arrangements are 'pop' while his lyrics are country, but make no mistake it is those lyrics that drive the album and the live shows.

Once again, this is a great line-up of entertainers presented by the Champlain Valley Fair. With such a selection, there will be something for every country fans attending. I'll see you there!
