Splendid Display of Flowers—W. M. S. Meeting—Contracts Let For Conveyance of Pupils to Consolidated School—Softball Players Active—Pleasing Piano Recital—Women's Association Meets

A splendid display of flowers was held by the members of the Garden Club on Wednesday evening in Walsh's corner window. This display was a variety one in which flowers of any kind were entered. There were twenty-six large and beautiful bouquets and the arrangements of them added to their beauty. There was no judging of this display and no prizes were given.

On Monday evening the usual flower competition was held by the Garden Club. The display was confined to peonies only, divided into three classes. Owing to the prevailing dry, windy weather there was not as large an exhibit as usual, but those that were on display were large and striking blooms. The prizes were awarded to:

Class A, best single bloom—H. B. Patton; 2 Mrs. R. E. Walsh. Special mention, Miss M. Welch.

Class B, three of a kind—H. B. Patton; 2 Dr. W. S. McLaren.

Class C, two stems of four varieties—H. B. Patton.

The judges were Mr. W. J. Miller, Rev. W. T. Payne.

The members of the Ormsdown Auxiliary of the W. M. Society of the Presbyterian Church held their regular meeting on the evening of Tuesday the 13th.

Mrs. James Sangster read the Scripture lesson. Mrs. Owen Campbell led in prayer. Owing to the indisposition of Miss Pelton who was expected to address the meeting, that part was ably taken by Mrs. O. Campbell of Montreal, taking as her theme "The duties of a professing Christian." She in a very interesting way sought to show the need of education through feeding on God's word.

Also keeping in touch with our missionaries through the Glad Tidings and the Presbyterian Record. By being loyal to faith, constant in prayer and filled with love for the salvation of others, we as individuals and through our societies may do much for the maintenance and extension of the Kingdom of God.

Miss Pelton in a few words expressed the need for a greater recognition of Stewardship.

A vote of thanks was extended to the speakers for their timely and convincing messages. A short season of social intercourse, with refreshments ended a pleasant and instructive evening passed.

A pleasing piano recital took place at St. Malachie Parish Hall last Sunday evening when the pupils of the Sisters school performed before an appreciative audience. The program was interesting and the soloists were numbers. Besides piano solos there were recitations, and two short legends set to music in which the young players performed creditably in singing, three gymnastic drills, and a comic playlet "Matters a Servant."

Following the pupils recital certificates won at recent examinations were distributed. Then the gathering was addressed by Rev. Father Delage, who with the sanction of the School Commission, granted the children a holiday on Monday.

Rev. A. S. Reid D.D. of Toronto, Ont., will occupy the pulpit in the Presbyterian Church here on Sunday, June 25th at 10:30 a.m. There will be no service in the evening.

Burly L. McGerrigle accompanied Mr. J. M. Leehy of the O'Connors Inc. of Huntington, to Brandon, Ont., last week and returned home with a 1933 model Chevrolet combination hearse and ambulance.

Mrs. George W. Sadler of Juniata, Sask., is visiting her father, Mr. Robt. McLean, and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McLean and family.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Watt of Lacolle, Que., were guests of Mrs. W. H. Young, Exhibition week.

Mr. F. R. Dowse, mayor of the city of St. Boniface, Man., spent the week-end visiting Mrs. G. E. Gentile and other relatives in the vicinity.

Miss Hilda Bryson, R.N., is spending a week in Montreal.

Mrs. Ernest Oulmet of Kennington, Que., spent the week-end with relatives in this vicinity.

Dr. and Mrs. Colin Russell of Westmount, Que., spent on Tuesday of Mr. Gordon LeClair.

Mr. Donald A. McEwen is spending a few days this week in Bainsville, Ont.

Mrs. Robert Cleland and children of Berlin, N. H., arrived on Thursday to spend the remainder of the summer with her sister and father, Miss Florence and Mr. Randall Dunn.

PEOPLE TO FARM IN HARD TIMES

Annual Convention of Quebec Women's Institutes Held at Macdonald College

The annual convention of Quebec Women's Institutes was held at Macdonald College on Thursday, Mrs. C. E. Petch of Hemmingford was elected second vice-president, and Mrs. R. J. Blair, Ormsdown, convener of Agriculture.

The seeming paradox that people move from the country to the city when times are prosperous and the trend is in the other direction in hard times was explained by Robert J. Sted of the Federal Department of Immigration and Colonization, who addressed the convention on "Farming for Dear Life." This is a time of readjustment of ideas, he said, and people should get back some of the old picture of times when although money was scarce, and trade by barter was the rule, people "did not realize they were hard up, but were content to make a little advance from year to year."

Discussing the present situation, Mr. Sted told of the policy being carried out by the two railways in conjunction with the Department of Immigration and Colonization, with a view to helping to return to the land families who, with a little money, are going back to farming, and also single young men seeking employment on farms. Under this scheme about 10,733 families and 23,000 young men, or some 76,000 persons in all had been transferred from the city to the country. No financial grants had been given, the assistance being in the nature of advice, guidance in location of farms, etc. Provincial Governments also had land schemes. Many people were looking for the land as a means of escape from unemployment in industrial centres.

Leslie Gordon Barnard, author, also addressed the convention, taking for his subject, "The Writer's Second Mile," touching on factors that make for good writing. These included: significance, the living content such as makes one read a story the second time; simplicity of language, manifesting; authenticity, writing of life as one sees it and feels it; self-indulgence, losing oneself in the theme and atmosphere of the story; and spirituality, breathed through with the universal breath of time and eternity.

Election of Officers
Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Honorary president, Mrs. Arthur W. Pratt, Cookshire; president, Mrs. F. S. Browne, Lennoxville; 1st vice-president, Miss Alice C. Dresser, Richmond; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. C. E. Petch, Hemmingford; National secretary, Mrs. J. E. Cross, Kirk's Ferry; education and better schools, Mrs. G. F. W. Kuhring, Lakefield; child welfare and public health, Miss Collins, Sherbrooke; home economics, Mrs. Morley H. Honey, Abbotford; industrial progress, Mrs. Ashworth, Nylmire; East; legislation, Mrs. H. M. Cuthbertson, Wakefield; publicity, also editor of "Home and Country," Mrs. G. G. McCurdy, Lennoxville; representatives to the Federated Women's Institute of Canada, Mrs. F. S. Browne and Mrs. A. C. Drew.

The cause of the present depression probably rests in the ethical basis of modern society, Prof. J. King Gordon, of Montreal, stated in his address before the closing session of the annual convention that evening. The speaker felt that society is affected by a change in this ethical basis.

Comparing modern and primitive societies to find out if the change in their organization represented progress, Prof. Gordon found two indications of advance and two of retrogression. The advances he said, were the emergence of the individual and society's respect for his rights; and the principle of universalization, that was the tendency to spread the peace of the plan to a wider group. The retrogression, he said, was the tendency towards inequality and the spread of untrammelled individualism.

Discussing this last, Prof. Gordon pointed out that the so-called primitive acquisitive instinct was not primitive at all, but a growth of the last two or three years. Mr. A. H. Egan, he said, would have thought of claiming more than his share, or of putting a net across a river and preventing the rest of the tribe from getting their share. He was dominated by the group interest. While there was inequality in the Middle Ages, social justice assigned to each individual responsibility as well as rights. The Roman Catholic Church performed a valuable function by guaranteeing the rights of the individual in the social structure and protecting the weak against the aggression of the strong. There were laws against usury, and just wages and fair prices were insisted upon.

Failures of Individualism
With the development of new scientific discoveries and the theory of evolution in the last century, the economic belief was formulated that by everyone seeking his own interest society would go onward and upward forever. But the twentieth century has shown that this belief was not justified, and people were beginning to wonder if there was not something wrong with this new individualism in which the individualism was forgotten. Today, Prof. Gordon noted, we were not only building factories, but slums; we were not only creating a great culture, but were denying it to thousands who could not afford it.

We were not only extending our medical knowledge and the science of public health, but were creating by

H'DON LOSES LEAGUE GAME

Defeated at Ogdensburg on Sunday by 16-0 Score

Huntingdon played a league baseball game at Ogdensburg on Sunday, losing 16 to 0. Ogdensburg made twelve runs in the fifth inning.

The Huntingdon team was composed entirely of local players with Schryer of Burke as pitcher. There were no runs until the fifth inning when Ogdensburg began their scoring streak and got 12 runs on four hits off Schryer. Thereafter no hits in the game other than singles. Fine had 7 strike outs, Schryer 9. Ogdensburg allowed 8 hits; Huntington 6. With practice this team would make a fair showing with the minor teams in the league.

Ogdensburg—Knowlton, Farrand, L'Esperance, Livermore, David, Knickman, Austin, Farrand, Jenkins and Fine.

Huntingdon—L. Elder, Henderson, Harvey, Watson, C. Elder, N. Hay, L. Hay, Gavin, McIntyre, Schryer.

On Saturday afternoon Huntington played a team game at Ogdensburg, losing 8-5 in seven innings.

The strong Chateaugay, N. Y. team was defeated in Malone 8-0 on Sunday, in the league game.

Book Written by Dr. W. N. Macartney Of Fort Covington

It was our privilege this last week to review a book written by a country doctor well-known to residents of this community and particularly to those of the western section of Huntington County. This 476-page book, "The Doctor's Practice," is a gem of observations by Dr. William N. Macartney, of Fort Covington, N.Y. Richard P. Badger, the Gorham Press, Boston, is publisher.

It is a clever treatise of a country doctor's work written in a lucid style, self-expressive, and with the necessity of which problems his solution, long and short, are given. It is a country doctor's practice emergencies arise where there is little time for extensive reading of voluminous treatises or for the summing up of his assistants who must come long distances. Here the science of medicine must largely be subordinated to its art. Many examples of such treatment are given in this volume.

In his foreword the doctor says that this book has been written to satisfy a long-felt desire of his own. He tells us "This book is written for the general practitioner. It is not a text book in any sense of the word. It is largely confined to my own personal observations and deductions and will be necessary and incomplete for this reason. One must choose between this and the greater evil of being to a large degree a mere copycat. The profession, as a whole, is hereby relieved of any responsibility for my personal opinions."

Miss Edna Todd of Beauharnois was the week-end guest of her mother, Mrs. Mary Todd.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Henderson of Ormsdown spent a few days the past week visiting with Mrs. Martha Henderson, also Mrs. Lotie Graham.

Mrs. N. J. Fennell entertained a number of her daughter Alma's little friends to a delightful birthday party on Wednesday.

Our system thousands of ill-nourished children. While the radio was bringing Rome and Berlin to our very doors, the drive of aggressive individualism was leading men to exploit backward races and to build ruthless tariff walls, which were creating a situation comparable to that of 1914.

A new ethical basis, as defined by Christianity, would, Prof. Gordon suggested, bring the world back to the path of progress.

BOARD OF TRADE RECEIVES $500 FROM BORDEN'S

Gift is to Reimburse Funds Spent on Industrial Prospects For Baumert Plant

It will be recalled that during the year 1932 the Huntingdon Board of Trade put forth a great deal of effort to locate an industrial concern to occupy the Baumert Co. Limited plant owned by Borden's. After being disappointed over them not locating the Fordrell and Alexander Co. the Borden Co. wrote the Board of Trade asking if they could share in the expenses incurred by the Board during the year.

The financial statement of the Board of Trade showing that over $500 had been spent during the year on industrial prospects.

The following letter, accompanied by a cheque for $500 was received by the secretary of the Board of Trade, Mr. J. C. Londen:

New York, June 17, 1933
Mr. J. C. Londen, Secy.-Treas.,
Huntingdon Board of Trade,
Huntingdon, Quebec,
Canada.

Dear Mr. Londen:—
We acknowledge your letter of June 12th.

It is with pleasure that we send you herewith cheque of The Borden Company Limited, drawn to the order of your Board, for $500.00 in full of the amount you put in part for the money expended during 1932 in an effort to locate a manufacturing concern in our property at Huntington. We thank you for allowing us this opportunity to help.

It has always been a great pleasure to work with the gentlemen who compose your Board and I look forward to future contacts and future success of our joint efforts.

With kindest personal regards to you and my other friends on your Board, I am
Yours sincerely,
THE BORDEN COMPANY, LIMITED
Real Estate Department,
Alfred C. Bowman.

Huntingdon Town Council

An adjourned session of Huntington Council was held on Monday, with all the members present and the Mayor, Mr. D. Faubert, presiding. The following bills were ordered paid:

John Galpeau, $17.50; John Marrow, $23.00; A. Broderick, $20.00; Shawmut, $10.00; J. Baker, $10.00; John Reid, $76.10; W. Warden, $47.75; Provincial Treasurer, $6.10; Dominion Rubber Co., $3.25; Shellico Bros. Ltd., $33.58; Mrs. W. Tedstone, $11.00; Harold Henry, $127.02.

A petition was received from Rev. J. B. Maclean, D.D., and his wife, in regard to a disturbance on King Street. It was moved by Ald. Hunter and seconded by Ald. Derochie that the complaint of the Rev. J. B. Maclean, D.D., and others, be left in the hands of the Police Committee to investigate and take action. Carried.

It was moved by Ald. Gardiner and seconded by Ald. Lefebvre that the complaint in respect to the sewer on the water committee to get an estimate of the cost of the work and to report at the next meeting. Carried.

Tatehurst by Miss Willa McNeill

Mrs. Walter Scott spent a few days last week with her mother, Mrs. Bicknell, Huntington.

Mrs. Mary Graham of Brysonville spent last Tuesday with her aunt, Mrs. John Whiteford. Miss Vernice Graham spent Tuesday with her aunt, Mesdames Robert and Wm. McGerrigle.

Provincial Grants Extended County

Mr. L. N. Roy, secretary of the School Municipality of St. Roman, Quebec, has been appointed to the position of secretary of the Provincial Government.

Mr. O'Connor, as one of the members of the local Agricultural Society board of directors, appealed to the Quebec Department of Agriculture for a special grant towards the Huntington Fair. As a result of his request a grant of $500 was made. The regular grant of $600 has also been received.

LOCAL MILL NOW OPERATES WITH NEW NAME

City Gas and Electric Corp. Ltd. Acquire Consolidated Utilities Ltd. Interests

The Huntingdon Agricultural Society Div. A. has had a great many difficulties in recent years. Their financial condition has suffered. During the past three years they have somewhat reduced their debt, and a special grant of $300 for that purpose is doubly welcomed. In order to further reduce this debt it has been decided to curtail the expenses by operating the fair for one day only, Sept. 15. Mr. O'Connor informs us that a first class baseball game will be arranged as an attraction.

After the extremely hot weather of the previous week there was a decided change in the temperature from Wednesday to Monday. The air was very cool and topeats were generally worn in the evenings. There was another change yesterday and real hot weather will undoubtedly continue the remainder of this week.

Final examinations are being held this week in Huntington Academy. All classes but one finish for the year on Friday.

Mr. James M. Craik of Tees, Alta., has been visiting at the home of Mrs. E. O. Hastings. Mr. Craik left Franklin 33 years ago, and has been greatly enjoying his visit amongst old friends and acquaintances. Through Mr. Craik is in his 76th year, he is enjoying his declining years, having visited the district for 33 years and was prompted to ask Mr. Craik what he looked for first in the Gleaner each week. Strange to say he did not say the deaths first, but it was the births and then the deaths. This fact is sufficient to indicate that Mr. Craik is keeping thinking of the future rather than wholly living in old age and in past recollections. His friends about enjoyed his visit and look forward to his taking advantage of the railway transportation inducement that may again be offered another year.

Mr. Allan Biggar of Lachute, is spending a two weeks vacation at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Biggar.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Perry and Messrs. Gordon and Stanley Perry spent Sunday with relatives in the city.

Mr. Jack Mitchell of the Bank of Montreal staff is enjoying his summer holidays.

Mr. Arthur J. Fallon, grandson of Dr. C. Fallon received the degree of Doctor of Veterinary Medicine from Cornell University on Friday.

Messrs. Marc and Edgar Lefebvre have completed their year's studies at St. Laurent College and are home for the holidays.

Dr. Donald and Mrs. Henderson of Providence, R.I., have been visiting at his home here.

Mrs. Gouin and her son George of St. Johns, Que., accompanied by friends, visited in town on Tuesday.

Rockburn by Mrs. W. G. Gibson

The Rockburn Wm. Aux had the pleasure of a visit from Mrs. O. R. Campbell and Miss Pelton of Montreal on Thursday afternoon. There was a good attendance of the ladies of the congregation and the program given by both sisters was thoroughly enjoyed. Tea was served to all at the close of the afternoon and all felt that a repetition of the program would be looked forward to with interest and hoped for before this season is past.

Mr. and Mrs. A. N. McDonald of Huntington were visitors recently at the home of the Misses Can.

Mr. Albert Steel of Saskatchewan is visiting at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Steel.

Mr. Charles Johnston of Pithsburg, Mass. is spending his holidays with his sister, Miss F. Johnston.

One Day Fair This Year—Dutch Treat Club at the Chateau—Lady Bowlers Meet—Softball League Opens—New Train Schedule on Sunday—Former Resident Visits District

A delightful luncheon at the Chateau, was enjoyed Saturday afternoon by members of the Malone Dutch Treat Club. About forty guests were present.

An excellent luncheon was served and music was furnished by a band led by Ronnie Hart and his nine-piece Chateau orchestra.

Bridge followed the business meeting and Mrs. S. G. Hunter received the favor for high score. Mrs. T. E. Sawyer was second high and Mrs. Hubert G. Genaway was recipient of the consolation award.

Mrs. Anna B. Kellas, president, who presided at the meeting, named the following as a committee for the July meeting: Mrs. Geo. J. Moore, chairman; Mrs. William J. Mahagan, Mrs. Arthur Monaghan, Mrs. Emmet Collins, Mrs. Leslie J. Donohoe, Miss Alice Burke.

Through an oversight on our part we regret that Mr. Stanton Small's success was not recorded in the recent report of McGill University research. Mr. Small, a student in second year Science, was successful in all examinations.

Mr. René Mercier, popular and promising young Montreal boxer is training here under the supervision of the Giguere brothers for a bout which will take place July 4th. Mercier is under a three-year contract with the local trainers. He has promise of outstanding success.

Corpus Christi was observed in St. Joseph's Parish Sunday with the usual procession on the streets. As in former years the repository was erected at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. O'Connor. The Sacred Host was carried by a Dominican priest who assisted Rev. Father Deroche that day.

There will be a change in time of trains on the New York Central effective Sunday, June 25th and trains will be due at Huntington and Montreal as follows:

No. 25 leave Huntington 5:38 a.m., arrive Montreal 7:35 a.m. daily except Sundays.

No. 5 leave Huntington 8:05 a.m., arrive Montreal 9:50 a.m. daily.

No. 3 leave Huntington 8:15 p.m., arrive Montreal 9:50 p.m. daily.

No. 2 leave Montreal 8:35 a.m., arrive Huntington 10:16 a.m. daily except Sundays.

No. 1 leave Montreal 9:00 a.m., arrive Huntington 10:47 a.m. Sunday only.

No. 32 leave Montreal 4:25 p.m., arrive Huntington 6:20 p.m. daily except Sunday.

No. 40 leave Montreal 6:20 p.m., arrive Huntington 7:55 p.m. daily.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Bowling Club was held Tuesday evening when ladies and men interested, and prospective members are invited to attend. Refreshments will be served.

A softball league has been formed in the district and games are being played every Thursday.

The opening of the league took place on Thursday last. The Beauharnois players were again the Valleyfield Canadians defeating them 11-9; Ormsdown defeated St. Martine 21-18; Huntington won from Brysonville here by a 19 to 5 score.

Most interest is evidenced in softball locally. The opening of the league was given by the town league has been formed with games played twice weekly.

This Thursday the town team plays at Valleyfield.

Tonight a number of the Masonic Brethren are to visit the Mason Lodge at Chateaugay, N.Y.

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Moffatt and family have been visiting at the home of Mrs. K. Reid.

Dr. Eva G. Reid of San Francisco, spent a few days this week at the home of Mrs. J. C. Reid.

The Misses Etta and Anna Pardiellian, Montreal, were week-end guests of the Misses Rankin.

Miss Beatrice Poissant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Poissant, graduated from the St. Anselm Convent on Tuesday. Miss Poissant also received a Special Prize and Honourable Mention in Music.

Mrs. Lester Thompson and children, Beatrice and Hartley of West Hartford, Vt., are visiting at the home of her father, Mr. D. A. Macfarlane.

Mrs. Cecil Brain and little son, of Newfoundland, are spending a few weeks at the home of her mother, Mrs. J. G. Reid.

Mr. E. E. Hampson of Toronto spent the week-end with relatives here.

Caughnawaga Bridge May Open Within Year

If present progress is preserved until the end, the Caughnawaga bridge will be open to traffic a year before the date fixed in the contract, which means that it will be finished in 1934 instead of 1935. Hon. Honoré Mercier, Minister of Lands and Forests, has stated.

Asked if there was any possibility of the enterprise costing more than $3,000,000, which is the sum mentioned in the bill authorizing its execution, Mr. Mercier expressed the conviction that it would not, if nothing unforeseen occurred, for at the present moment, he said, the expenses are well within the estimates.

Discussing the question of tolls, Mr. Mercier expressed the opinion that those charged on the Caughnawaga bridge would be on the same level as those now charged on Victoria bridge, and he claimed that the revenue produced from this source would be sufficient to meet interest amortization yearly charges, which he placed at approximately $200,000.

Shirking or Belittling As the babe is born to the household a great ovation takes place. The younger grows up in the minds of the family as the smartest little boy or girl you ever set eyes upon. That is but natural every mother and father should think this of their child. After the school age, the next biggest event in the family will be the son or daughter being married. Another grand event, and perhaps a parade of style, so that the bride will have something to long linger in her mind as a day when she was the outstanding fashion plate and figure of beauty.

After this period of youth, the more serious problems of life confront these very same people who then become the manhood and womanhood of the generation in which they are living. They resolve that they will do better by their families than it was possible to have done by themselves. They do strive to help their families and as we look about us we see remarkable achievements in this respect.

This editorial is not being written with a view to palaver the rising generation, but to point out to them, and also their elders that we are being somewhat negligent in one of our treasured responsibilities which too many people are forgetting, shirking or leaving undone until it is too late. The care we refer to here is that of our burial plots of our revered and departed members of the family. We have eulogized them as infants, as brides, as business men and as they passed on to another world. At this point of travel too many of the next of kin have ceased respecting these people by visiting the burial plot and seeing to it that it is kept in perfect order.

The winter frosts and the spring heaving of the ground is likely to have the monuments or lot markers standing anything other than erect. The plots may need grading, and depressions filled up. It is quite true that your lot may call for perpetual care, but that surely does not mean that it must provide for all manner of outlay. It is first necessary to have your family plot put in good order and by that we believe that should be interpreted as annually, and after that the cemetery caretaker will see to it that it is cared for throughout the summer.

Farmers who can spare a half day at the present time to do work upon their family plot in the cemetery might do that before the haying season starts. It is just possible that other people who have plots near yours, and who have no one to do the work, would be doubly pleased if the farmers would offer to do the necessary work for a consideration.

Years ago the Huntingdon Protestant cemetery was looked upon as a model, that honor we regret is not possible today, for we must acknowledge that Hillside cemetery and Riverfield must now take the lead. If the lotholders will make a greater effort to have special attention given to their lots we firmly believe the Cemetery Company will strive to have the open spaces about the cemetery, the driveways, trees, and fences kept in better order than they presently are in. With the lots more carefully cared for by the lotholders it will mean the caretaker will have more time to devote to other necessary work about the cemetery.

Penalizing A Lawyer Recent incidents indicate that men of integrity and position are not all to be commended. The J. P. Morgan investigation showed that the associates and friends of Morgan bought stock at below the market price, simply because they were on a select list. We also find that they were such keen financiers that they eulogized the United States treasury out of their income tax.

Senator Larry Wilson from Coteau du Lac is a very wealthy man and at Ottawa he made the statement that if the Government felt inclined to go out into the highways and byways and bring the large-scale tax-evaders in, make them pay and then punish them, a pleasantly large slice could be cut off the national deficit. But Mr. Bennett apparently didn't think Larry was serious.

Larry may be a man who has achieved wealth through importing liquors from Scotland, but he is honest, and spends his wealth in helping the poor and hard working people to be happy; and endows one commendable institution after another. An entirely different type of man from the American financiers referred to. Larry has a keen intellect, a bright outlook on life and is philanthropic.

On the contrary we find that at Iroquois, Ont., not far west of Cornwall, is a lawyer who was found to be unscrupulous, and because of such actions was sent to the reformatory for eighteen months determinate and one year indeterminate. The lawyer, G. H. Davy was tried before a jury charged with having forged a cheque for $3,500 upon the account of an illiterate Matilda Township farmer. The jury found him guilty, and Judge Tudhope sentenced him.

This lawyer has brought dishonor upon the legal profession, but the greatest harm he has done is to the public, who now feel they cannot place all confidence in these reputed men of integrity. Of course there are good lawyers and poor ones, but lawyers, no matter how poor they may be in preparing and defending cases, they can surely be honest in their dealings, and when they collect moneys or handle money for estates, see to it that it is not tampered with for their personal gain.

Judge Tudhope has rendered a judgment that should serve a severe lesson to the profession. Senator Larry Wilson pronounced a trend of thought that has run through the minds of many a man and woman on this North American continent. May this expression of Senator Wilson and the judgment of Justice Tudhope tend to have a beneficial effect in Canada.

Dilatation Of Market The fact that farmers like all other business people receive forms from the Governments to be filled in, does not mean one should be negligent about complying with the request. Were we always obliged to attach a small fee to the form, we might have more reason to complain, but quite often these forms are for the purpose of compiling information that means improving marketing problems.

We all quite well know that Britain has established restrictions on the importation of foreign bacon for the benefit of the bacon trade from Canada. It is therefore in the interests of Canadian producers to entirely fill this quota. If we do not fill it entirely, other countries will be called upon by Great Britain to complete the deficit in the Canadian production for the English market. In other words our Government must be in a position to inform the English market what Canada is prepared to supply. Definite figures must be established, and as these figures can be supplied by the farmers alone, the replying to the questionnaires sent out by the Government is always advisable.

In other lines, it is a matter of forestalling or preventing foreign competition on the Canadian market. This is particularly the case in regard to our poultry products. It is essential that commerce must know on what production of eggs and poultry it may rely during the coming months. If this information cannot be supplied, or if the estimates are too low owing to the fact that too few farmers have replied to the questionnaire, then our buyers must place their orders in foreign markets so as to be sure of a sufficient supply, and this would mean so much money to our farmers.

The London market is a remarkable one as to magnitude, and is certainly worth catering to. Not only is it well for our producers to inform our Governments what amount of produce they have to sell, but endeavour to produce the very best of quality. Just recently a Canadian who had been in the London area for nearly ten years was enjoying a piece of Canadian cheese that was aged and well cured. After eating it a remark was passed that during the high ten years in England they had never had a good piece of Canadian cheese. The Canadian cheese offered them was always green, curdy or unappetizing. Canada needs this produce market, and particularly so for dairy products. Our cheeseries should certainly make an effort to have their cheeses exported only when it is ready to market in its prime condition, and not before it reaches that stage.

At a time when business seems to be picking up, and optimism appears to take on a new life, it is essential that the entire agricultural class does its part and hastens to furnish the Government with the details required.

Provincial Public Works During the past three or four years, Canada, in common with other countries has been faced with a serious unemployment problem. Various efforts have been made to solve or at least alleviate that problem, and when the history of the crisis comes to be written, it will be noted that the governments of Canada pursued no fixed policy, but grasped, almost desperately, at any expedient which appeared to offer relief.

When the Bennett government first assumed power, a special session was held and an elaborate programme of public works was put under way. Within a year, it was found that the expenditure of public money was producing little benefit, though it was fast plunging the country into bankruptcy. Then came a revision of opinion, and it was decided to restrict the scope of federal aid to the distribution of direct relief—the "dole" so-called, but scarcely comparable with the much-maligned "dole" of Great Britain, either in extent or in application.

Now, it appears, the province of Quebec and possibly some of the other provincial governments are considering the resumption of public works relief. News is that five of the provincial departments are preparing to provide work on projects which, if not entirely self-liquidating, are none the less calculated to advance the interests of the province and its citizens. Thus roads, bridges, reforestation projects, new experimental farms and other similar improvements are being planned and will probably be put into execution, even without the co-operation of the federal government.

It remains to be seen whether the Bennett cabinet will follow the lead given by Quebec province in this respect. In Montreal, there appears to be a great and growing movement in favour of substituting work for the dole. The metropolis had to face a bill of $1,500,000 for direct relief in May alone, and the great argument against this form of relief is that the taxpayers have nothing tangible to show in return for the money expended.

It has been charged against the relief works scheme that only a negligible proportion of the money is paid out in wages or salaries, that the contractors and suppliers of materials take the lion's share. This may be true, within limits, but it should not be forgotten that any improvement in the demand for materials is reflected in greater industrial activity, and with the present hopeful aspect of business, it might not take very much additional spending to get the machinery of business turning over normally once more.

Quebec's experiment in "spending to save" will be watched with interest by the rest of the Dominion, and if the plan succeeds, it will doubtless mean resumption of public works projects throughout the whole country, with or without federal aid.

Newspaperdom On Saturday this week, the weekly newspaper publishers of the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Valley convene at Alexandria for their semi-annual meeting. These newspaper publishers come together to have a frank discussion about their individual papers, so if changes are noted particularly in coming issues of the Gleaner some credit will be due to this meeting. The material changes in the various papers may not be very great, but all attending will certainly endeavour to profit by the meeting and discover their faults, and just see how, when, and where they can better display their news columns and advertising to the advantage of the reading public. It costs just as much to set up the type in an unattractive looking paper as it does in a fascinating edition. The Gleaner has for years endeavoured to improve its typographical appearance, and as one refers to old editions, of even five or ten years ago the change has been remarkable, and all for the better of the reading public.

Whilst this meeting will be devoting the major portion of its time to the newspaper, it will give time and consideration as to a way they can co-operate together to advertise this area for the benefit of the trading conditions in these valleys.

Editors of the Alexandria papers, viz. Col. Macdonald and Mayor Laurin feel that their conferees should be better posted upon the landmarks of Glengarry county, so have arranged a tour of same for Saturday afternoon.

Moulding Public Opinion The Board of Trade in any town is an organ that tends to mould public opinion, just the same as does a newspaper or any advertising campaign. Ten years ago Huntingdon was not regarded as the progressive town that it is today. We believe a good deal of credit in this respect is due to the fact that a public opinion has been moulded for the betterment of a progressive town. Many of our readers may have good ideas to set forth and all that is lacking is the channel to set them forth. The Gleaner will welcome any such letters that are for our betterment. We only ask that the letters be free from dealing in trivialities and that the privilege be not abused, or used to make personal attacks, or air petty grievances. In writing any such letters for publication bear in mind that your signature is essential. Pen names cannot be accepted.

Largest Microscope

The world's largest microscope, standing seven feet high and built exactly to scale, will be one of the outstanding scientific curiosities at the Century of Progress Exposition. The instrument, to be exhibited by a Rochester, N.Y., optical company, will be the only one of its kind in existence, and will show visitors the external features of these microscopic instruments which have been responsible, in large measure, for conquering many forms of virulent disease.

Guests Dine With Dead Man

Five members of the Royal Burnham Yacht Club dined together in a London restaurant. The host was not present, except in spirit. He has been in his grave five years. The giver of the dinner was Harry Warner, an enthusiastic yachtsman and the guests were friends and fellow members of the Royal Burnham. In his will he left funds with instructions that the income was to provide a dinner every year for eight friends whom he nominated to celebrate his birthday.

Seek Fiery Grave

Last February a Japanese school girl, disappointed in love, committed suicide by jumping into the volcano crater of Mt. Miharua, on Oshifa island, not far from Tokio. Since that time 55 lovesick young men and women have evaded guards and jumped into this crater, 400 feet deep, the bottom always hidden in flames and vapor. Bodies are never recovered. Six youths jumped to their death on Sunday, May 7. Now the guard has been increased to check this mad record for being buried alive by remaining in his grave 40 days. A stove pipe with the lower end placed over his face leads up to the surface of the ground, and for 25 cents you can look down and see the face of the "living corpse." The proceeds go to the Denver fire department unemployment fund.

Jeweled Pipes For Women

In London it is becoming the smart thing for women to smoke pipes. But the "tobacco stoves" must be distinctive, the bowl small, the stem long and slender, and the mouthpiece tiny. The feminine demand has led to greater variety in shapes and styles of pipes. Many made to order for women have gold bands or are studded with diamonds.

Aviator at 88

One of the "pupils" at a flying school in Oakland, Calif., is Calvert Blanchard, 88. Civil War veteran, who marched to the sea with Sherman. Blanchard expects to get his pilot's license this summer and will make an air tour of the country.

Suit Over Blarney Stone

When one attempts to kiss the Blarney Stone at the top of Blarney Castle, you are assumed to assume the peril of accident. This was the decision of the Circuit Court in Cork, Irish Free State, recently. James Burke sued Sir George Colthurst, presumably owner of the castle, for $1,500 damages for the death of his son who fell while attempting to kiss the famous stone last July, but the Court decided against the father.

Lost Thimble Back

Fifty years ago Mrs. Ralph Morse, Waldoboro, Maine, now dead, lost a gold thimble. At garden-making time this spring at the Morse home the thimble was turned up. The initials inside it were still readable and it still retained the lustre and shape it had when lost a half century ago.

Bans Jazz

Germany's new boss, Adolf Hitler, while receiving the world's censure for his acts, recently issued an order that ought to receive popular approval. He has outlawed jazz music over Berlin's radio broadcasting stations, declaring "those distorted negro rhythms" have neither harmony nor music.

Bishop For Devil's Island

White-bearded Father Coutray is on his way from France to be the first Bishop of French Guiana, which includes the dreaded Devil's Island, the penal settlement. The Bishop's flock will include about 4,000 murderers and habitual criminals serving long sentences. Only one cargo boat a month stops at Cayenne. Father Coutray, who has spent 25 years as a missionary, says he will live the same hard life as his flock, and he plans to know each man individually.

Most Crimes at 19

Investigation by the department of justice in Washington shows more crimes of all kinds are committed by youths of 19 years than of any other age. This report is based on 80,785 arrests. Of this number, 5,521, or 6.5 per cent, were females. Most of the crimes committed by youths were theft in some form. Of all persons arrested under 21, 45.8 per cent had stolen autos.

Provides Tea Party

During the past winter charity agencies of Boston have been supplied free of charge with nearly a ton of tea provided by an English tea merchant, descendant of the one whose cargo was dumped into Boston harbor more than 150 years ago. The Englishman, who requests his name withheld, merely wished the poor to use the tea to celebrate that history-making event.

American Tops Bridge Ideas

Originality in styles at a bridge party given by the wife of an ambassador in London recently, was led by an American woman. All the ashtrays were of white enamel with red hearts and diamonds and black clubs and spades in the center. Two guests wore the new glass necklaces filled with water in which floated small enamel hearts. The American had a red heart painted on her right thumb nail and a spade on her left thumb nail.

Children Protected

"The extent to which children in England were ill-treated 40 years ago was positively appalling. Today it is practically negligible." So says Mr. John Albert Colard, an inspector of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to children, who has just retired after 40 years' service in London. He states that for 15 years after he became an inspector the average number of cases investigated by the society was 3,500; last year the number was 514.

Thinning For Better Fruit

Specially written for The Huntingdon Gleaner
By Prof. T. G. Bunting,
Macdonald College

The thinning of apples is a simple process, relatively easily done, and not costly. It has for its objective the elimination of many culls and blemished fruit; the production of more uniform and larger sized fruit; an increase in the colour, and an improvement in the appearance; an increase in the percentage of fancy and high grades; a lowering of the costs of picking, grading and packing; a more regular bearing habit of the tree; reduction in number of wind-falls; less damage from breakages of limbs; and generally in improving the standards adopted in producing a high grade crop which will command attention and a premium on the markets. These several points will be considered in more detail separately, following a discussion on the technique of thinning.

Technique.—Thinning is done after the "June drop" which eliminates all fruits that have not been pollinated sufficiently to develop fully, and should start shortly after this "drop". It will vary in time with the seasons, but will range for a period in Quebec of two to three weeks after the middle of June to the middle of July. Early thinning is best for the apples are smaller and more easily removed. If done too early, there is danger of some "June drop" apples still being on the trees, entailing additional work, and it is not so easy to distinguish the best apple in the individual clusters.

With a heavy crop, all spurs should be thinned to one apple, in light crops, and apples with long stems, two apples may be left on some spurs, depending on the total number on the branches and the tree. In most varieties in full bearing there will be too many spurs flowering and bearing fruit, and in these cases all apples are taken off some spurs. Here it is best to thin the apples from six to eight inches apart, depending on the variety and the size of fruit.

In removing the apples, both hands should be used to expedite the work. Grasp the stem of the apple to be removed by the thumb and first finger and, with a quick motion of the other three fingers, break off the apple by the stem from the spur. In this way the apple that is to be left will not be loosened on the spur, or in any way injured.

In thinning, start at one point, preferably at the top of the tree, and go over the branches in some order, carefully working around the tree from the top downward, and throwing the upper thinned apples outward so that they will not strike lower apples that are to be left. In using a step-ladder, be careful not to damage the branches or fruit in any way.

The time required to thin a tree will vary with the speed of the workers, the nimbleness with which they can use their fingers to advantage, and, of course, with the size of the tree, including its spread and height and the number of apples to be removed. Well pruned trees and low headed ones are most easily thinned. Young people, especially girls, are well suited to this work, and much of it can be done during their vacation time.

Some varieties Transparent, Wealthy, etc.) cluster more than others (McIntosh and its seedlings), and naturally these clusters should be thinned to the one, or in some cases, the two best apples. Apples that are on long spurs, or branches that are likely to sway in the wind and be rubbed and blemished, are better removed.

Culls, Blemished Fruit and No. 3.—The chief and most successful way to remove them is by thinning at the proper season; in this way the selected or chosen fruits are given the best

Excess Oil

Opportunity to develop fully. Size, Color and Appearance.—These are all important aids in selling. A well satisfied customer is the best type of advertising, and it is the cheapest form.

Annual Bearing.—This has been a debated subject with regard to the influence of thinning, some varieties, the Duchess, Transparent, and Wealthy, being notorious biennial bearers, while others, the Fameuse and McIntosh, are more regular bearers. This difference is due to several factors, including the fertility and sterility of the varieties, pollination, the manner of setting flower spurs with a large general vigour of the tree, depending on the soil, its fertility and moisture content. With due allowance for all these factors, thinning will have a very definite effect in the spacing of the apples on the trees and in keeping some spurs from fruiting in the heavier bearing year.

Costs of Picking, Grading and Packing.—In addition to the satisfaction to the fruit grower, retailer, and consumer, of having higher and more uniform grades of fruit to sell, the costs are actually lower in these operations following thorough thinning of the fruit, and the returns are proportionately higher. Again it is the culls and other low grade fruit at the bottom of most of the trouble in marketing large crops at satisfactory prices.

Breakages of Limbs and Trees, and Windfalls.—These too are costly and often disastrous. Thinning will not remedy this situation entirely, but it will result in many savings to both the tree and its crops, as well as to the harvesting and marketing operations.

High Standards.—Who have the better, the best, standards among the fruit growers? It is not difficult to name many of them. They are affected by the indifferent grower with his lower grades and poorer methods and standards. The strength of the chain is determined by its weakest link!

"I want a JOB"

You know me as a telephone. Actually, I'm a man-of-all-work, and I want a job.

What can I do? Well—
I can do your errands at the stores for groceries, household supplies, and all kinds of little items.
I can guard your home against emergencies.
I can help protect the children.
I can be a good night watchman, for I never sleep.
I'm good company, even when I'm quiet, for you know that I'm there when you want me. You won't be lonesome with me around.

I'll bring more visitors to you.
I'll work for a few cents a day, all day and every day. I'm more than worth the little you pay for my services.
Give me a trial, and see if I don't make good.
Come in or call our Business Office today to ask about service. You can call us without charge from any Public Telephone.

Weekly Toll of Accidents

How can the weekly toll of accidents be stopped? It is a question that should occupy the minds of every individual. It is being brought forcefully to the attention of parents and children at every turn in the way. Yet, last week-end the reports show that the toll was larger than ever. Surely, there is some way to prevent these increasing accidents each week-end by water, air, roads and railways. Why do these accidents occur? Is it not because someone has just lapsed for the moment? Some person has not used the proper precautions on the swimming beach. Someone has moved or done the thoughtless acts on the boat. Someone has been careless on the road with the car. You know the line. In every instance that is held you will see, revealed that there was some small lapse of the mentality which resulted in the accident. The problem is how can those responsible be kept at full efficiency all the time. If people would only stop and think for a moment of what the consequences will be, there would be fewer fatalities. This can not be done by signs alone, nor by lectures but it must be inculcated into being. It must become the habitual thing. In a work if you teach yourself to use your eyes they become active without the nerve action. Soldiers are trained by discipline to do the thing automatically. If we train ourselves to automatically stop at the crossing, give the right-of-way to the winds and dangers of the water and care for our safety, then there will be fewer accidents recorded. Something must be done to prevent these increasing week-end tolls.

The New Provincial Policy

PREMIER Taschereau can hardly be blamed for his determined stand against continuance of direct relief for the unemployed, and for the active measures he is now taking to provide relief only as pay work performed. The plan fact is that we have no general system of organization capable of distributing direct relief in a satisfactory manner, and that experience so far does not give any hope of evolving such a system. The plan now proposed is gradually to drop direct relief, and to substitute therefore employment at useful public work. It cannot be said that experience, either in this province or in any other part of the Dominion, has been satisfactory in executing public works as a means of providing employment, but at least this method does offer better opportunity for checking public disbursements, and does result in some useful return for money expended. Premier Taschereau's plan is still in the making. From the details which have so far been made public it would appear that it will be surrounded by strict safeguards against exploitation by interested parties, and by such other safeguards as will ensure the money being disbursed in the most useful way. It is also the suggestion that part of the wages may be paid during employment and the remainder during the winter months. The idea is that the cost shall be defrayed by the Provincial Government, the municipalities and the Dominion Government, each contributing one-third. If the plan is found feasible, and emerges with effective safeguards, it should prove a relief to the taxpayer as well as to the unemployed.

His Majesty Speaks French

BOTH French and English were employed by His Majesty The King in his address of welcome at the opening of the World Economic Conference in London. This circumstance has not been overlooked by the French language press in Canada, which justly points out that His Majesty sends an example which might be pondered here. French, of course, remains the language of diplomacy the world over, and it was to be expected that it would be widely employed at any world gathering. With a bilingual Governor-General at Rideau Hall, an example is set for the rest of us which can hardly be ignored. Certainly there is little excuse for the young English-speaking Canadian who will not trouble to learn French properly, and so potentially cuts himself off from the perfect understanding of some millions of his countrymen, unless indeed they speak English. Such neglect is the more stupid since there are many grounds upon which the English-speaking world should learn French. Apart even from the beauty of French as a language and the splendid literature to which it is the key, some knowledge of French or Latin is necessary to the man who would properly understand English. Its usage and origin. A bilingual man has immense advantages over the man who speaks only one language, even in the use of that one language.

What World Conference Hopes to do

DURING this and coming weeks the cables will carry thousands of words about the World Economic Conference. It may be well, therefore, to try to get a reasonably clear picture of what the Conference is trying to do. This is its agenda: 1. Monetary and credit policy. 2. The level of prices. 3. Resumption of the movement of capital. 4. Restrictions on international trade. 5. Tariffs and treaty policy. 6. Organization of production and trade. For dealing with these six problems or questions, preparatory experts have advised: 1. Early return to a revised international gold standard. 2. Determination of national and international monetary policies that will enable the gold standard to be preserved. 3. In the interim, measures to stabilize currencies in foreign exchange. 4. Action to enhance the use and price of silver but not bi-metallicism. 5. Measures to increase the level of prices by— (a) reduction interest rates; (b) easing of credit through central banks; (c) stimulation of private and public spending; (d) loans to countries with reduced purchasing power. 6. Abolition of foreign exchange restrictions. 7. Adjustment of international debts. 8. Resumption of international lending. 9. General reduction of tariffs by one or more of these methods— (a) by a general agreement of the Conference; (b) by collective agreements of groups of governments; (c) by bi-lateral negotiations; (d) by voluntary action on the part of individual governments. The Conference may not achieve all of these things, or even half of them. There is hardly a man or woman in all of the world who would raise money if by achieving some of them.

1,000 For A Perfect Lady

AT Howick, Que., a few days ago, there was an auction sale of Ayrshire cattle attended by a large number of eminent gentlemen who agreed to forget for a time being at least all they had heard about a depression. Bidding was brisk, as experts, enthusiasts, gentlemen of Burpee's Farm. The honors were carried off by a Montreal lawyer, who paid $1,000 for "Perfect Lady" and $2,400 in all for six animals. One of the competitors was the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, who is a Toronto doctor, and other purchasers included representatives of the Quebec and Dominion Governments. Altogether 36 animals were sold at an average price of $191, which is better even than it sounds because many of the head were young animals and ten calves were included. This is just another among the incidents of good cheer which greet newspaper readers these days. Certainly a farmer might well be exultant at the sight of a Montreal K. C. and a Toronto doctor bidding against one another for expensive thoroughbred cattle from a Quebec farm, and certainly it is a good thing for all of us to know that for goods of quality and value there is a strong demand without undue concern for the price. The Howick auction ought to give not a little encouragement to those who raise pure-bred stock and to the entire livestock industry. —Ottawa Farm Journal

Big Factor in Child Life

THAT the motion picture is a big factor in child life is well demonstrated in a careful and thoughtful report issued by the Motion Pictures Research Council, New York. The conclusion is that "the motion picture is powerful to an unexpected degree in affecting the information, attitude's emotional experiences and conduct patterns of children." "What children see at the movies they retain in memory to an entirely unexpected degree. The second and third grade children at the end of six weeks remember 90 per cent of what they knew on the day following the show. Three months after seeing the picture they remember as much as they did six weeks after seeing it. In some cases, as with 'Tom Sawyer,' they remember more at the end of six weeks and still more at the end of six months. More than 3000 children were tested in the memory studies, with 813,000 test items. All of the considerations of the findings lead inevitably to the increasing strength of the conclusion that the motion picture is an extremely powerful medium of education. If the commercial movies reinforce the training of the home, the school and the church, parents have cause for deep satisfaction. If they conflict with the teachings of these agencies, parents who believe in the teachings of the home, the school and the church will be seriously disturbed. And parents by assisting public opinion have much opportunity in influencing the circulation of best films for children. —Kamloops Sentinel (B.C.)

Neglecting Rural Cemeteries

THE various cemeteries throughout the district require care to maintain a well-kept appearance. In past years the attention has been paid to this question, the result being that the grass on a great many plots has not been allowed to grow into hay. This not only gives the cemetery as a whole, a slovenly and forgotten appearance, but is discouraging to others who improve and maintain their plots by keeping the grass trimmed and plant flowers and shrubs. The fact that those near and dear to us have passed on is no reason for any thoughtlessness in allowing their graves to become ill-kept through inattention to little details. We may all indicate the respect and veneration in which we held those departed, by maintaining the plots around by spending a few hours during the summer months in cutting and trimming them. The cemetery boards are not in a position financially to have this work done, but surely the relatives will be sufficiently interested to see that the work is carried out and the cemeteries made into beautiful spots. —The Canadian Statesman (Ont.)

Well Done, United Church!

THE United Church of Canada at its Hamilton Conference has earned the gratitude of the whole country in coming out so strongly in favour of abolishing stock market speculation. That the conference had good reason to take this stand is evident from the way in which the stock market has been swamped with orders from prohibiting margin trading and the past few weeks. The government could easily put a stop to stock market speculation by prohibiting margin trading and the lending of money out on call by our financial institutions. The depression from which we are now so painfully trying to struggle is overwhelming and such an action would be both humane and constructive. Again we strongly urge that the government act in this matter without further delay. Canada may well be proud of the fact that she has led the world in church union and that her United Church is showing such vision and courage in attacking evils in our social and economic system. —Cobourg World (Ont.)

Huntingdon County Council

A regular session of the Huntingdon County Council took place on Wednesday June 14th, members all present, W. R. Stewart, Warden presiding. The following resolutions were adopted: A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. W. R. Stewart, for the banquet tendered this Board on March 8th last, on the occasion of his appointment as Warden of the County. Petitions were read before the Board regarding the Laguerre River Drainage Ditch, said petitions were left over for further consideration. The Pinsonneault Creek question was also left over till the adjourned meeting, to be held on June 22nd next. A resolution asking the approval of a loan was forwarded to the Quebec Municipal Commission. W. A. White was appointed Special Officer over Branch No. 4 of the Beaver Creek. Notice of Motion was given that a By-Law be prepared in September to raise money to defray current expenses. The Health Unit question was left over until the adjourned session. The Secretary was authorized to call for tenders for coal for the County Building and Registry Office. The Secretary was instructed to see about having the County Secretary's office painted. The complaint on the Brethour Creek was left over till next meeting. The request of J. L. Benoit was left in the hands of Arthur Sullivan, Special Superintendent. A committee was appointed to interview the Minister of Agriculture in connection with the St. Louis discharge. Oliver Bonnevillie was appointed special officer on the Donahoe and Dion discharges. The meeting was adjourned until June 22nd next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon. The following bills were ordered paid: Oliver Bonnevillie, $97.37; W. E. McNair, $4.95; Christie Newman, $5; F. Allard, $4.50; F. Boldoux, $3.50; Stationery 70c; Harry Holiday, $16; Jas. E. Barrett, $17.78; W. E. Lefebvre, $58.61; W. H. Platt; $3.45; Leslie Sherry, $1.50; Thos. Chambers, $7.75; John A. Kensington

Soft-Ball Game.— A soft-ball game was played on June 17th, between Clyde's Corners and Kensington on the local diamond. Heavy hitting was very much in evidence on both sides, but tight fielding by the Kensington team, kept down the scoring of the opposition. Kensington received seven home-runs to their credit—W. Woodside, G. Salter and C. Stark each receiving one apiece and C. Duncan and N. Stark each receiving two apiece which added greatly to the scoring. The final score was 37-6 in favor of Kensington. The line-up was as follows: Kensington—Roy McNicol, c; Nicol Stark, Capt. p; Clarence Duncan, lb; Wilfred Woodside, 2b; Carman Stark, 3b; Oswald Watson, ss; Emile Richer, lf; D. Elliott, cf; Graham Salter, rf; Earl McNicol, Leonard Leblanc, Guy Quenneville, subs. Clyde's Corners—Ozell Thornton, c; Paul O'Lea, Capt. p; Bob Ferguson, lb; Ed. HEALTH

Nowadays, the problem of securing a well-balanced diet has become a matter of particular concern. When there is only enough money available to buy the food which is needed, every cent must be spent to the best advantage. Children should come first when consideration is being given to the food budget for the family. The child's needs, as regards food, are greater than those of the adult. If the child does not receive a well-balanced diet, he will not develop as he should, and he will be handicapped for the remainder of his life. It is fortunate that we have information which enables us to plan a well-balanced diet at a minimum of expenditure. It is not a question of spending more to secure such a diet, but rather of buying to the best advantage, which means the inclusion of the essentials in proper proportion. The money that is available for food should be used approximately as follows: 28% for milk; 20% for fruit and vegetables; 22% for bread and other cereals; 15% for meat and cheese; 9% for butter and other fats; 5% for sugars. The comparatively large amounts set aside for milk may be noticed. This is done because of the nutritive value of milk and its richness in vitamins and minerals. Milk cannot be replaced economically or practically by other foods. Importance is also given to fruits and vegetables. These foods also are rich in vitamins and minerals. They supply natural laxative material and maintain the proper chemical reaction of the blood. Milk, fruits and vegetables are called protective foods, because they protect the body against the serious upsets and disabilities which arise out of an unbalanced diet. The adult does not suffer as much as does a child, but even for the adult, the deficiency of these foods over a period of time gives rise to loss of vitality and energy, and finally to a physical breakdown. For the protection of the child, milk, fruits and vegetables must be included in his diet. They are in no sense luxuries. They are essential to proper growth and healthy development, and to the maintenance of health. By planning expenditures so as to provide these foods on a regular basis, and so safeguard health, which is as valuable today as it ever was. The children of today must be provided with sound bodies for their adult years.

INDIGESTION

Indigestion or dyspepsia is one of the most common afflictions of the human family. It is a name which is commonly used to describe a certain group of abdominal symptoms—pain in the stomach, gas, nausea and vomiting. In such cases, indigestion may be a symptom of a general disease like tuberculosis, or again it may result from a local condition, such as an infection of the stomach. Other causes are abnormal conditions of abdominal organs other than the stomach itself. Disease of the gall-bladder or of the appendix may be responsible for the occurrence of the group of symptoms popularly known as indigestion. Lastly, the cause may lie in the stomach itself. Too much food, the wrong kinds of food, overindulgence in some particular food, and hurried eating are but some of the common dietetic causes which directly affect the stomach and incite it to rebel. It is obvious then that no single remedy can cure all cases of indigestion. The first rule of proper treatment is to remove the cause. When there are so many possible causes, the treatment must vary from case to case, depending upon what is the cause in the particular case to be treated. If it is found that the condition is due to faulty habits of eating, these must be corrected. Food should be eaten slowly and quietly. Those who suffer from indigestion are often the victims of hurried and worried lives. A variety of plain foods should be eaten. In general, greasy and

AFTER FIFTY

As the years pass, the body changes, and the man of fifty or over should realize that he cannot expect to maintain his former physical activity, and to a different kind. Many business men have a mistaken idea as to what exercise is. They think of exercise as something to keep their muscles in shape. This is a very narrow and erroneous view because exercise is concerned with more than the muscles; it gives an opportunity for pleasurable activity and so improve the functioning of the whole body. It is questionable if any exercise is of real value which does not become play in the sense that it gives pleasure by being carried on for its own sake with no thought of its being an exercise. He still requires exercise, swinging clubs or indulging in routine exercises, but unless these give a sense of satisfaction and achievement, they are not apt to be continued. The man who takes up golf never gets what he should out of it, until, with increasing skill, he begins to find a real pleasure in the improvement of his game. The business man who makes excuses for the time he spends for the good of his health or who gives to golf knows down in his heart that he plays because he likes it and because it is a fine thing for him in every way, and no excuses are called for. Play is the thing. We should play for play's sake and because it gives pleasure, not with the idea of preparation for work. Play is just as important a part of life as is work. After fifty, the man should remember that youth is the time for those activities which call for speed, strength and endurance. Even in golf, youth will be served. Not only is enough enough, but more is harmful.

Whitewash Looks Clean

Whitewash mixtures have been found valuable for sanitary use in many farm buildings. A whitewash mixture for use on interiors and a waterproofer mixture for outside use is recommended. To make whitewash stick well, it is suggested that 8 ounces of alum be added to either mixture given below. To give a gloss to the whitewash, 2 pounds of cheap soap dissolved in hot water should be added. To greatly improve the disinfectant qualities, add 2 ounces of crude carbolic acid. To intensify the white appearance, add 1 teaspoonful of ultra marine blue to each bucket of whitewash. Here are formulas for interior use: Slake 50 pounds of lime in 12 gallons of hot water. Beat 2 pounds of rye flour in half a gallon of cold water, then add 1 1/2 gallons of boiling water. Dissolve 2 1/2 pounds of common salt in 2 gallons of hot water. Mix the salt solution with the flour solution and then pour it into the solution of lime. For exterior use: Slake 50 pounds of lime in 10 gallons of hot water. Dissolve 2 1/2 pounds of common salt and 1 pound of zinc sulphate in 2 gallons of boiling water, and mix with the lime solution. Add 1 1/2 gallons of warm skim milk. Stir well. Apply with calcimine brush or spray. One gallon of whitewash will cover from 300 to 400 square feet of space, depending on how heavily it is applied.

Hotels Long Centers of Public Life in America

After the Revolution that made us a nation, the life of American cities was for more than a century and a quarter publicly centered and vividly reflected in the essentially democratic institution called the hotel. The club, an Eighteenth-century aristocratic outgrowth of exclusive use by superior persons of the private parlor of the tavern, smacking, therefore, of privilege, had to wait till the 1830s or so for a serious revival. The hotel—which succeeded the tavern—became every citizen's club. In a little city there was one hotel, says a writer in the New York Times. Every visitor must come to it and every really live inhabitant must drop around to look the stranger over. In a bigger city there must be several hotels. But usually one hotel was the hub of community activity in any city. From decade to decade it was apt to be a different hotel as progress, fashion and favor determined. Nevertheless, at any given period, when you said Boston or Baltimore or New Orleans, or later, Chicago, St. Louis or San Francisco, the name of a particular hotel popped into the mind of every traveler or informed person.

Advertising is the spice which makes the news more palatable. Because of advertising, luxuries and necessities that once cost a king's ransom are yours at little prices. Valleyfield by "Grumpy"

Molson's Band Concerts.— Saturday night was the inauguration of the band concert given in the Salabery Park by the Molson Breweries. This company has for almost a century given these musical concerts in all the principal districts of the province. This year the series of band concerts will be held in Valleyfield by the two local bands, the Harmonie de Belleville and the Valleyfield Band. The end for which these concerts are given is to please the public and to teach them to appreciate good music and to encourage the musicians, Saturday being the first night of the series, the Valleyfield Band began the program but was unable to finish as the electric lights in the park were defective.

On Sunday night the Harmonie de Belleville Inc gave their first concert under the presidency of A. Vinet, President, L. J. Marsot, Director and Dr. I. Frappier, Master of the concert. The musicians rendered the following program: O Canada, C. LaValle; Thunder and Blazes, Puck; Echo from the Metropolitan Opera House, Tobani; Solo, O. Obituary.— The late Mrs. J. W. Pickup.— There passed from our midst on June 12th, one of our oldest residents, in the person of Mrs. James W. Pickup, formerly Mrs. Mary Talbot, in her eighty-third year. She was born in Blackburn, Lancs., and came to Valleyfield many years ago, passing away after a lingering illness. Her husband predeceased her several years ago. The funeral was held on June 14th from the home of Mrs. Arthur May, Boulevard du Havre, to St. Mark's Anglican Church, at 2.30 p.m. The Rev. R. H. Parkes conducted the service, assisted by Rev. J. G. Greig. There remains to mourn her loss, three daughters, Amy (Mrs. Arthur May, Valleyfield), Ada (Mrs. Chew, Montreal), Mary (Mrs. Wilkinson, Montreal), three sons, Henry, Fred, and a large number of grandchildren.

The late S. J. Robinson.— Samuel J. Robinson, 64 well-known local resident died suddenly at his home here early Monday morning. Mr. Robinson was a native of St. Andrews East, the younger son of the late Joseph Robinson and Elizabeth Erian, and was educated at the model school of his native village. His first work was in the office of the Lachine "Watchman", where he remained several years. From there he went to work on weekly publications in Eastern Ontario, and afterwards worked with the Huntingdon Gleaner. This was before the days of linotype machines, and as a case-hand he was on a par with many of the fastest stick-handlers of his time. In 1906 when the William Rennie Seed Company opened their present Montreal store he accepted a position as their Quebec representative, and successfully covered nearly all the Province of Quebec, including the Eastern Townships and the North Shore to Ottawa, selling pocket seed to rural stores, and other farm and field seeds. Both as printer and traveller he became well known throughout the rural towns of the province. In 1911 he married Marguerite M. Cunningham, then in St. Catharines, Ont., but originally a native of Huntingdon, only daughter of the late W. E. Cunningham of Huntingdon. Mrs. Robinson survives him.

Two husbands were discussing the idiosyncrasies of their wives and complaining that their wives thought they knew everything. "I'll say this, though," said Mr. A., "there's one thing my wife admits she doesn't know." "What on earth is that?" asked Mr. B. "Why she married me."

I. O. D. E.— At the monthly meeting of the Julius Richardson Chapter, I. O. D. E. held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of the Honorary Regent, Mrs. W. S. Richardson, twenty-eight members and five visitors attended. The Regent, Mrs. G. W. Henderson, was in the chair. The Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, and the reports from various conveners showed that the usual good work of the Chapter was being carried on. It was decided that, as in previous years no business meetings would be held during the months of July and August. A committee was appointed to carry on summer social activities. After the adjournment of the business meeting, Mrs. Norman Holland, Provincial Educational Secretary, gave a most instructive talk on "India" in connection with the Empire Study Plan of the Order. Mrs. Walsh, of Beauharnois, conveyed to Mrs. Holland the Chapter's appreciation of her talk. Mrs. Holland was accompanied by Mrs. Chapman, Municipal President.

Field Day.— On Saturday afternoon, June 10th, an outstanding field day was held by the Protestant girls in Beauharnois and Chateaugay competed. Of the three silver cups donated as prizes, the cup for the boy's aggregate was won by Angus Dickson of the Julius Richardson School.

Centenary Celebrations.— At the Sunday services in St. Andrew's Church the Rev. Professor W. A. Gifford, Ph. D., of Montreal, was the preacher. On Monday evening a sumptuous banquet was given in the Church Hall by the Ladies' Aid which was attended by all members and past friends and guests from the surrounding communities. Two hundred and eighty guests were served. The hall was decorated with an abundance of pink and white flowers, the same colour scheme being carried out in the table decorations where pink candles and paper decorations lent a very festive air to the occasion. After the banquet everyone adjourned to the church where they enjoyed a musical programme and speeches by visiting ministers. Former ministers present were: Rev. Dr. J. D. Anderson of Beauharnois, and Rev. Conn of Avoca. Greetings read from former ministers and others included letters from Rev. J. C. Nicholson, Rev. Geo. McLennan, Rev. Mullen and Rev. Robt. McVey, also Rev. Maclean of Huntingdon and Rev. W. Ross of Ormstown. Ministers present from former ministers communities included Rev. Walsh of St. Georges Church, Rev. Greig of Valleyfield, Rev. St. Aubin of Valleyfield, Rev. Miller of Huntingdon, Rev. Woodsie of Athelstan, Rev. Houghton of New York, Rev. Dunan of Franklin, Rev. Lloyd of Russellton, Rev. Moore of Howick, and Rev. T. A. Halpenny of St. James Church, Montreal. Mr. J. A. McDonald, Grand Master of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Quebec, also spoke.

The celebrations of the centenary were brought to a close on Monday evening when the Ministerial Choir of Montreal, gave a most enjoyable concert in the church hall, assisted by Mrs. McCrea and Mrs. Katsunoff. Those taking part were Rev. Messrs. Katsunoff, leader; Dr. Monroe, Stafford Jones, Newton, Hinton, McLeod, Tucker, Fairbairn, McCrea, Dobson and Brown. Singing with three soloists, after which Mr. and Mrs. McCrea sang the duet "Day is Dying in the West." The Chairman, Rev. W. T. Prittie, then called on Rev. Lloyd for a speech in which Mr. Lloyd expressed his appreciation of the long and arduous part of the anniversary services. Messrs. Katsunoff and Stafford followed with the sacred duet, "Abide With Me." The choir then gave their second part with a very fine trilogy of songs, "Now is the Month of Maying," "Annie Laurie" and "Stars of the Summer Night." Rev. Stafford of Lachine was then called upon for a solo and sang "The Cobler's Song," and as an encore, "The Man of Galilee." Rev. Mr. Newton congratulated the congregation on having attained this anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. McCrea sang, "Garden of Happiness" which was again well received and the leader sang a Russian Folk-song and a Negro spiritual "Keep Inching Along." Rev. Dr. Monroe, secretary of the Ministerial Choir—their work and pleasure at being present. Before the last part of the concert, the singing of three numbers, "Thy God Reigneth," "Down by the River Side" and "I Want My Life to Tell for Jesus," the chairman thanked all those who took part in the evening's entertainment. The program was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem. A full house greeted the choir and was on hand promptly at the hour called. Every number was appreciated and many would like to have been present on the good nature of the choir, but the members were advised by the leader that their proceedings would last only until ten o'clock. However, everyone spoke highly at the generosity of the programme. The choir was afterwards entertained by the Ladies' Aid Society to refreshments and then returned to Montreal by motor cars.

Matrimonial. Helm-Howarth. A very pretty wedding took place at the United Church, Huntingdon, Que., on Wednesday, June 14th. Rev. J. H. Millar officiating when Jennie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Howarth, was united in marriage to Thomas Gordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Helm. The bride who looked charming in a dress of white crepe de chene with wreath and veil, carried a bouquet of roses and a bouquet of the valley, was given away by her brother, Mr. Albert Howarth. The bridesmaid, Miss Eveline Nickson, a friend of the bride, wore a gown of pink crepe de chene and crinoline hat to match, and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. The flower girl, little Miss Iris Howarth, cousin of the bride, wore a green organdy dress with hat to match and carried a posy. All dresses were ankle length. The best man was Mr. Edgar Helm, brother of the bridegroom. The wedding music was played by Miss Elsie M. Sellar and during the signing of the register, Mrs. E. C. McCoy sang "The Bells of St. Mary's." The ushers were Messrs. Clarence and James McCoy. The church was beautifully decorated with pink and white peonies, roses, syringa and ferns. Following the ceremony luncheon was served to twenty-five guests. The bride and groom left immediately after a wedding trip, motoring to Walkerville, Toronto, London, and other points in Ontario. The bride's traveling outfit was a blue dress and coat with hat and shoes to match and she wore a muskrat fur neckpiece. They were the recipients of many beautiful presents from friends and relatives in Huntingdon, also from friends and relatives in Lancashire, England.

Smart-Little. On Saturday evening, June 17th, the marriage took place of Miss Vivian Little, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Little, Austin, Que., to Mr. Clive A. Smart, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Smart, Starks Corners, Que. Being old friends of Rev. J. E. Lloyd they motored down to Russellton for the ceremony, which took place in the old historic church at Russellton. This service was unique in that it was the first marriage in the memory of the oldest church member to take place in the church itself. The bride entered the church on the arm of one of her old schoolmates, Mr. Alton Oimstead, who is now employed at Mr. Robt. Whyte's, Covey Hill, to the strains of the bridal chorus played by Mrs. Wm. F. Gilmore. The bride was handsomely gowned in white silk crepe trimmed with lace and veil and wreath of orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of white carnations and maiden hair fern. Miss Ethel Jewell, friend of the bride acted as bridesmaid and was gowned in teaose beige crepe with hat to match, and carried pink carnations. The groom was dressed in a tuxedo and carried a bouquet of white carnations and maiden hair fern. The ceremony was officiated by Rev. J. E. Lloyd. NOT A PAIN AT 78

She Feels Like 48. Aches and pains are not inevitable in old age. When they do come, there is always a cause for them—a cause that can be overcome. Here is a little lesson on growing old, by a woman of 78.— "For the last five years I have taken Kruschen Salts and I tell you truthfully I could not live without them. I am 78 years old. I have not a pain in my body, and I feel as young as I did at 48. I give the credit to Kruschen Salts. No one will believe my age."—(Mrs.) C. M.

Bell Pitch Explained. The pitch of a bell is directly dependent upon the ratio between the thickness of the bell at the point of striking and the diameter of the bell. Various metals and combinations of metals have been used to produce bells, but the most satisfactory combination is a bronze procured by amalgamating thirteen parts of copper with four parts of tin.

The Week-End

Mahatma M. K. Gandhi's civil disobedience campaign against British rule in India, was suspended for a further six weeks Saturday.

The campaign was first suspended when Gandhi was released from prison at the beginning of his recent fast of purification. Saturday's order will end the period of suspension July 31.

Gandhi's weapon of passive resistance is one of the most remarkable revolutionary methods in world history. With it Gandhi united millions of Indians in his Nationalist Congress. Combating it, the British Government at one time held thousands of leaders and disciples as political prisoners.

Five men were killed and a sixth was wounded in a gun battle in front of the Kansas city, Mo. Union station Saturday.

The battle marked an attempt of gangsters to liberate Frank Nash, Oklahoma outlaw who was being returned to the Leavenworth Federal prison from which he escaped in 1930.

The gangsters opened fire on the officers as they crossed the sidewalk in front of the Union station.

Bullets sprayed the front of the station. Lives of many on the sidewalk were imperiled by the cross fire of bullets.

The gangsters struck suddenly, and bullets fell several of the officers guarding Nash before they could return the fire.

Three of the dead were Otto Leed, sheriff of McAllister, Okla., and two Kansas City policemen.

Nash was arrested in Hot Springs, Ark., after he had been trailed there by Government agents.

Fearing an underworld attempt to free him, Nash was taken secretly by automobile to Fort Smith, and there the officers boarded a train from Kansas City.

A threat to take their children away from non-Nazi parents, if they resist the programme of the third Reich was made by Chancellor Adolf Hitler in a speech at Erfurt, Germany, on Sunday.

"Our enemies ought to realize that the goal is ours," he told an audience of 185,000 gathered to witness a review of 60,000 Nazi storm troops.

"If the older generation cannot get accustomed to us, we shall take their children away from them and rear them as useful for the Fatherland."

After 14 years, the Chancellor asserted, evidently referring to his party's rise to power since the treaty of Versailles, a miracle had taken place.

"Why shouldn't a second miracle succeed in the next 14 years?" he asked. "The day will come when complete freedom will shine all over Germany—our great nation cannot, for eternity, be the parish of the world."

United States delegates to the World Economic Conference proposed a sweeping attack on tariffs and trade barriers Saturday.

In a written list of suggestions submitted to the economic commission of the conference, the United States negotiators asked all nations to enter into a general horizontal cut of 10 per cent in tariffs, it also proposed encouragement of bilateral tariff reduction agreements, and extension of the truce whereby 41 nations representing 80 per cent of world trade have agreed not to raise tariff barriers while the conference is meeting.

The commission had invited all nations to submit its proposals for world economic betterment.

Under a blaze of sunshine which seemed almost to have been specially designed for the occasion, since it appeared shortly before the ceremony and disappeared again very soon after, His Excellency Earl Bessborough, Governor General of Canada, personally supervised the laying of the cornerstone of the new St. Mary's Hospital, and declared the stone well and truly laid, while His Excellency Mr. Gauthier, Archbishop Coadjutor of Montreal pronounced the divine blessing on the stone and on the work of the hospital, Saturday morning.

Underneath the stone a copper box was built into the foundation, containing documents and relics concerning the origin and development of St. Mary's Hospital. The new hospital building will have a capacity of 200 beds and, as was made clear by T. Taggart Smyth, the chairman, will be a general hospital, as in the past, open to patients of all creeds and tongues, and to doctors in good standing, regardless of language or other considerations.

The Mont. St. Louis Cadets provided the guard of honor, and gave the royal salute as His Excellency drove up. The band played a military march as Lord Bessborough, accompanied by his aide-de-camp, Capt. Colville, reviewed the guard. His Excellency then proceeded to the platform which was erected on the foundations of the new hospital.

Unable to make any forecast yet as to farming production in the province of Quebec in 1933, Hon. Adolphe Godbout, Minister of Agriculture, however, stated today that never before had more modern methods been employed and it was quite safe to announce that the quality of the farming products to be offered would be superior to any previous year.

The Minister of Agriculture added, he was impressed by the good results of the "buy at home" movement, which had been given encouragement to farmers to meet outside competition because the merchant and consumers had shown their willingness to co-operate by buying Quebec products first when supply, quality and prices were at least equal to those of outside products. He expected that the year 1933 would show a further gain to the farmers due to that co-operation of the public and to the good spirit manifested by the farmers in responding, in spite of the crisis, to the appeal for their co-operation.

"It is too early yet to make any forecast regarding the 1933 crop in this province, as far as the quantity is concerned, stated Hon. Mr. Godbout, "but I am elated to state that farmers have improved their methods to such an extent that quality will be available in all cases where consumers will take advantage of it."

Hume Cronyn, K.C., former member of Parliament and former president of the Huron and Erie Mortgage Corporation, died at his home in London, Ont., tonight, aged 68.

Mr. Cronyn was a son of the late Verschoyle Cronyn, K.C., for many years Chancellor of the Diocese of Huron and a grandson of Rt. Rev. Benjamin Cronyn, first Bishop of the diocese. His mother before her marriage was Sophy Blake, a member of the noted family which produced Hon. Edward Blake.

Born in London in 1864, Mr. Cronyn was educated there and at the Galt Grammar School and the University of Toronto, graduating as Bachelor of Arts in 1882 and receiving his degree of LL.B. in 1889. He began to practice law in 1889 in his father's firm, Cronyn and Betts. After his father's death he continued with the firm until 1907 when he was appointed manager of the Huron and Erie Company, later to become its president.

A Liberal in politics, Mr. Cronyn was chosen as Unionist candidate in 1917, and was elected. It was believed he was offered a Cabinet post but was unable to accept owing to his other interests. At the close of his parliamentary term he refused a second nomination.

A decree outlawing the Nazi party and all affiliated organizations in Austria was issued tonight by the Government of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss at Vienna.

The action was taken after Minister of Security Emil Fey informed the cabinet police had definitely established that Nazi storm troops were responsible for recent bombings in Vienna and for the serious wounding of 16 Fascist auxiliary police at whom hand grenades were thrown today near the city of Krems.

The decree drew a retort from a spokesman for the outlawed party that "the Dollfuss Government has

CHAPTER XIX

Friday morning before Jerry left for work there was a telegram brought to the door. It was from Peter Baird.

"Arrive Municipal Airport 2 This Afternoon. Please Don't Meet Me."

Wasn't that Peter? He was always so thoughtful. He had undoubtedly figured the whole situation out and decided Sarah would have the children on her hands while Jerry would be at work. And he didn't want to cause any unnecessary inconvenience even if he had been away all these years.

As though Jerry wouldn't be there when the plane came in! She would not miss that moment for worlds.

Jerry phoned the office and received permission from Harriet to take the day off. She spent the morning dressing and sticking up the children, helping Sarah put the apartment in shape and working on this dinner. They would be scandalously extravagant and have a cocktail of orange and grapefruit sections, roast chicken with dressing, mashed potatoes and new peas, then apple pie and cheese and coffee.

That was the sort of meal which would make Peter Baird ask for a second helping all the way around. And that, after all, is the final compliment to any woman's cookery.

Jerry pondered a long while whether to take Kitten, whom she had stayed home from school, and Jackie to the airport with her. At last she decided that the excitement and the long ride on the jerky 63d street car would not be good for them. She would go alone. She put on her rough brown wool ensemble with the perky little hat to match, gave a last dash of powder to her nose and was off for the airport.

How slow the street car seemed! Jerry wished she could take a taxi or at least get out and push this impossible Toonerville trolley. It was taking her nearly as long to get from Blackstone avenue to Cicero as it was for Peter to fly from New York to Chicago.

Jerry scarcely gave a thought to the sword of Damocles hanging above her head. Monday morning she would have to tell Joe Middleton whether or not she would accept. If she did not give him an answer, it meant dismissal.

But this was Friday, and today Peter Baird was coming home.

For all the slowness of the car Jerry sat at the airport half an hour before plane time and had a chance to look around the port. She was thrilled by the big hangars which almost inclose the field along two sides, she was intrigued by the great shining trimon planes which come soaring down out of the blue sky to make perfect three-point landings.

She watched planes leaving for everywhere and wished that she was one of the smartly dressed passengers climbing into one of the snugly passenger cabins to be snatched away a moment later for a ride through the air to almost any place.

Jerry had never been up in a plane, and she thought aviators just too romantic, and she wished that some time she could have a little two-seater job with "Jerry" painted on the side of the plane. Jerry thought it would be gay to have her plane enameled bright red and silver wings and propeller. She would learn how to fly herself and go soaring all over everywhere and up to some little cabin on a Wisconsin lake.

But here she was wanting things again. Why must a girl forever be wanting things? Life would be so much more simple if she could just be contented with what she had and not dream and long for all the pretty things she could never have. The fur coats, the long sleek car, and the boy friend who was lovable and had a million dollars.

But she should have anything like that. But she could have a swell big brother by the name of Peter Baird, who was going to drop like a gift from the blue in a few minutes now and take her in his big arms and kiss her.

At last the plane appeared out of the sunlit smoke to the southeast, circled the field once and landed.

And first to step from the plane was Peter, so brown and tall and young that Jerry gave a little cry and ran forward to meet him.

"Why, little Jerry! You're almost a young lady," Peter said. He picked her up to kiss her, as he always had when she was a kid, and she kicked one heel just the way she always kicked to when he kissed her, which were awfully happy riding back to the apartment in a taxi that Peter insisted upon taking.

"I thought this home-coming was going to be very sad," Peter said. "And I have been thinking about Mary Ann most of the time since she left Para. But somehow you have helped to dull the edge, Jerry."

"Oh, I'm sorry if I have seemed too gay, Peter!"

"No, Jerry. You are just the sort of tonic I need. I can't go on forever sorrowing over her. You see, down in the jungle I had a long while in which to do nothing but think. And I had prepared myself for almost anything."

"But nothing so terrible as that?"

"Yes, I thought she might be dead, or more possibly married again. Of course, when I learned that she was dead."

"You don't need to tell me, Peter. I know what you went through."

"But Jerry seeing you again is like old times. It's grand to be back. You are still living at the Blackstone avenue place, I take it, since my telegram reached you there. And the children? Are they there, too?"

"They are, Peter. And they have heard so much about their long lost daddy in the last week that they'll feel they always had you with them."

"The children were shy at first, and Sarah cried because she said she couldn't see Peter and she didn't remember Ann. But by the time dinner had reached the chicken both children were chattering like magpies and asking a thousand questions."

"What did you bring us, daddy?"

Kitten wanted to know. She flirted with him outrageously and even made a shy little face at him to see if he would laugh or scold.

"I brought half of South America in one of my trunks which are coming later by train," Peter said, "but I've got some little things in my bag."

"Why, daddy, you must be rich," Jackie said.

"Not rich," Peter said, "but not poor, either. I brought out a few trinkets from that Inca temple which the archaeologists and museums were willing to bid for. That's why I was here as quickly as my letter. I stopped off in New York to turn the stuff into money."

"But Peter," Jerry said, "we had it all figured out that you would be desperately poor. We've even fixed a room for you here and everything."

"That's perfect," Peter said, "if I am not crowding. Later, perhaps, we can make some adjustments."

After supper, while Jerry and Sarah did the dishes, Peter sat quietly watching the children. He knew that most children make friends slowly and that after a few hours or minutes of shyness they will make the first overtures.

And so when Jackie asked him to build a real mine shaft with his mechanical ruler set Peter got down on the floor happily and began assembling wheels and lifts and other structural parts into a marvelous mine shaft that lifted lumps of sugar instead of ore.

And then there was a game of checkers with Kitten and, last of all, a pillow fight which got so boisterous that Jerry came running in to warn them that if they didn't all quiet the people downstairs would come up to see what was the matter.

"Let 'em come. We'll throw them downstairs again, won't we Jackie?" Peter said.

"You're swell," Jackie said by way of reply.

"Anghow, it's the children's bedtime," Jerry said sternly.

"Oh, you're going to let us stay up the night our daddy comes home, aren't you?" Kitten asked in a very abused tone of voice.

And after Sarah and the children were in bed, Jerry, who had been waiting all these days for Peter's advice, sat up until midnight telling him about Joe Middleton.

She didn't spare herself at all, and she didn't spare Joe. She told him every step of the whole affair from the day she had taken the job while desperately in need of work, up through the wrist-watch and gown episodes.

She told him about the trip on the yacht, the wardrobes of dresses and the struggles she had with Joe, then about the kidnapping and the fight in the cell and her recent discovery as to the identity of the gangster.

She told him, too, about the lovely house at the north shore and about Joe's final ultimatum. And then she asked Peter what to do.

"You say he is called the Tiger?" Peter asked.

"Yes, Peter."

"Well, I eat tigers," Peter said.

CHAPTER XX

Saturday morning Jerry went to work as usual. She and Peter had decided on a plan of action which called for no disturbance of her general routine, at least for the present.

They had arranged to have lunch with Harriet and Wilson at noon and during the afternoon which Jerry had free on Saturday, they contemplated high adventure. Peter had proposed and Jerry agreed, that the first step must be a thorough investigation of the deserted steel mill.

Jerry was so gay about the office Saturday morning that Joe Middleton thought she must have decided to accept.

"So you've come to your senses at last," Joe said. "I didn't think you would be so silly as to turn down my rather generous offer. How about a little kiss to seal the contract?"

"Don't," Jerry said. "Don't touch me."

"Now listen, Jerry." Joe warned her. "You must not be too high hat with Sugar Papa. Why shouldn't I have a kiss? Why can't I pick one very small flower when I am buying the whole garden?"

"Don't be too sure you're buying the garden," Jerry snapped.

"Jerry, there has been many a couple who would have gladly tossed away her ancestral estates into the English channel just for a kind word from Joe Middleton. I remember once when I was stopping at the Ritz in Paris and had engaged the entire floor."

"Please don't expect me to believe any more of your tall stories, Joe."

"Take a letter," Joe said, changing his demeanor as he might have changed from a tuxedo to a tailcoat. He was now very much the business man.

Jerry held her pencil in readiness, waiting.

"Miss Jerry Hartford, Middleton Radio Company, Chicago. Dear Miss Hartford: You have the most beautiful eyes. You have the most delectable little nose faintly snubbed, and sprinkled over the bridge with a constellation of infinitesimal freckles."

"I won't take another word" Jerry pouted.

"Oh, you won't!" said Joe. "I rather think you will, Miss Hartford. After all, it is part of your work as my secretary to take any letters I care to dictate. New paragraph."

"There is a saucy, sweet defiance in the lift of your chin which keeps me awake at night, drives me to drink, makes me gamble sums of money I can't afford on the ponies and is swiftly and surely preparing me for a nice little room in a psychopathic hospital."

"I have everything, Miss Hartford, and I use that word with circumspection."

"This has gone about far enough," Jerry said with decision.

"That isn't even the start, Miss Hartford. New paragraph."

"I have promised you a house, a trust fund and everything else your capricious little heart desires in return for nothing but your friendship. I have even intimated that some time in the future I might sue for a divorce and intrust to your care the errie name, Mrs. Joe Middleton."

"Perhaps you think all this is very amusing. Possibly you are under the impression that you can play with fire and not be burned."

"Just for your own information, you are now being rather closely shadowed by private detectives. All of your movements are known to me and are reported to me hourly."

"You know too much about my life for your own good. You are hoping to trap me and expose me to the dull, plebeian world and their ignorant, vicious tools, the police."

"The Tiger does not wait for the attack. He strikes first. The terms of our little proposition are now changed a trifle."

"You will still have until Monday noon to give me your answer. But if you are still defiant the result will be something considerably less mild than mere dismissal."

"Sign that, Sincerely, Joe Middleton."

"That would make excellent evidence," said Jerry, her eyes blazing.

And she gave me that notebook for one moment," Joe said, in a tone that made Jerry realize she dare not disobey.

He tore the leaves containing the shorthand notes of the letter from the book, touching the name to them with his cigarette lighter, and held them by one corner until they had burned.

"And now," Joe said, "that will be all for today. I feel I need a rest and may run up to my place on Lake Geneva over Sunday."

Jerry hoped that Joe would leave the office before noon, when Peter was to call for her. She had had no idea her employer would come down on Saturday morning or she would not have suggested that Peter come to the office. She looked at the clock, but it was already 11:30 and too late to warn Peter by telephone. He would be on his way downtown by this time.

Jerry looked out of the window of her office down upon the roofs and streets of Chicago and upon the narrow, sluggish river, where just now a big freighter, pulled by a little tug, was being pulled beneath successive bascule bridges.

And suddenly, noticing the criss-cross structure of the streets bound by the river and lake and L tracks, she thought of the city as a spider web in which she was inextricably caught.

Was she dragging Peter into the same web with her? Or could he, with his superior strength and intelligence free them both from the dangerous strands?

CHAPTER XXI

The bridge was rising so slowly and the cab moving so fast that the leap from one leaf of the bascule bridge to the other was too sensible to call Joe's hand now. He would wait until they had made their little investigation at the steel mill and had held a conference of war with Harriet Wilson at lunch that noon.

But they must be terribly careful now. Jerry was thankful to Joe for letting her know she was being shadowed. They would have to out-trick the private detectives at every turn.

How slowly the minutes dragged. Jerry wondered why Joe did not leave his office. Was it possible that he knew about Peter Baird, and knew that he was coming to call for her at noon?

Certainly Joe could not know of their long conversation in the apartment the night before. He might have had a man follow her to the airport. He might know of Peter Baird's arrival. But how could he know of the plans they had made to visit the steel mill?

Jerry was right in supposing Joe had only guessed that a movement was on foot to trap him. The detective had tried, but failed, to discover a vantage point from which to overhear the conversation at the apartment.

And so Joe did not know that Peter Baird was coming, and he left at 11:45 much to Jerry's relief, leaving orders with Harriet Wilson not to be disturbed over the week-end.

When he was gone Jerry called Harriet into her office and told her of the new threat.

"And do you know he is having me shadowed?" Jerry said. "We must be desperately careful this noon. I feel that night here in this office."

"Shhh!" Harriet warned. She tipped to the office door and pulled it open quickly. Outside a young man, whom Joe had added to the staff only three days before, was leaning over to pick up a paper which had blown to the floor.

"I want you to take a message to our retail store on Madison street," Harriet said. "And don't return with-them promise to be careful.

"I'll see this thing through alone, Jerry," Peter said. "It's too dangerous for you."

"You'll do nothing of the sort, Jerry said. "This is my battle we are fighting, and wherever you go I go. Besides, you wouldn't even know the spot unless I were there to help locate it."

Harriet, too, felt that Jerry should stay out of the whole affair as much as possible.

"Peter and I are old campaigners," Harriet said. "You're just a useless little tenderfoot, Jerry."

"I'm not useless, and I'm not a tenderfoot," Jerry protested, "and if you two don't let me in on every bit of this fight I'll accept Joe's house and then where will we all be?"

"About 1,000 miles up the Amazon without a paddle," Peter said. "Don't be absurd, Jerry."

"That's right, bully me," Jerry said grinning at Peter with a great deal of sisterly affection.

And so at last they had everything decided. And Peter and Jerry knew exactly what they could count upon from Harriet, and Harriet knew just what Jerry and Peter would do over the week-end. They were all determined that Joe would have his answer, and a very final answer at noon Monday.

After luncheon Harriet went to her home on the north side, but Jerry and Peter did not dare risk a trip to Blackstone avenue where some one would surely be waiting.

Sarah had already been warned they would not be home until late that night, and possibly not then. Investigations such as the one they planned were apt to take queer turns.

Peter had purchased two very good revolvers and a quantity of ammunition. The one he chose for himself was a Colt automatic .45 very flat blue and wicked. He had purchased

BIG CIRCUS OFFERS GIRAFFE-NECK WOMEN

Golden Jubilee Tour of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey brings mighty feature in weird Burmese Belles—Gala 7-Fold Program, including New Spectacle, The Durbar and Almost Countless New-Imported Acts

The Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Circus, on its Ringling Brothers' Golden Jubilee tour will positively exhibit in Malone Wednesday, June 28, and a golden opportunity will be afforded the residents of this vast territory to see one of the wonders of the world—the renowned royal Padung giraffe-neck women from Burma, the most sensational importation ever achieved by even The Greatest Show on Earth.

Outstanding among the Jubilee features is the mighty spectacle, The Durbar, gorgeous, dazzling, bejeweled reproduction of India's great coronation ceremonial at Delhi, where thousands of potentates with their royal elephants and huge oriental retinues parade for the pleasure of the newly crowned ruler of Great Britain and India.

Among them is the Marcellus Flying Ballet Plastique from Paris, the great Fabrique in his lead of youth, the marvelous Con Colleano, returned from his recent European triumphs as the tumbling, forward somersaulting star of the tight wire; the incredible Alfredo Codona, world's only triple mid-air somersaulting start to catch; the Wallendas and Gretonas, dome-high tight wire thrillers; the Uyenos, the Yacopis, the Danwills, the Rubios and the Ben Hamids, leading unit of fifty in the quadruple somersaulting acrobatic display.

The great combined circus will arrive on four long trains of mouth-length steel railroad cars, bringing over 1,600 people, 50 elephants, 1,009 menagerie animals and 700 horses.

Concert Largely Attended.—The concert in the Knights of Columbus Hall on Thursday night was attended by more than 400 persons, the majority of which came to hear Ernest Loiseleur, comedian, who had sponsored the affair.

- 1. Les Gars de la Marine, Le Révé Passé; The Montreal Quatuor. 2. Arioso de Benvenuto Cellini—Diaz, and Le Plus Joli Révé—Arezzo; by Hercule Lavoie, baritone. 3. Pour un Balser—Tosti, and Pallasse (Les Sanglots)—Leoncavallo, by Emile Gour, tenor. 4. Choeur de l'Enclume—Verdi, by the Quatuor. 5. Les Millions d'Arlequin—Driga, and La Bayadère—Calmar, by Chas. E. Brodeur, baritone. 6. Les Pêcheurs de Perles—Bizet, by Emile Gour, tenor and Hercule Lavoie, baritone. 7. Les Deux Grenadiers—Schubert, and Les Couplets de Voltaire—Gounod, by Gerald Desmarais, bass. 8. Choeur des Soldats "Faust"—Gounod, by the Quatuor. Avila Legaré replaced Ernest Loiseleur as comedian-singer but it was easily to be seen that the audience wanted Loiseleur. Legaré was assisted by the Quatuor in lumbermen's costumes. Towards the close of this part of the programme in one of the numbers, Hercule Lavoie was thrown and, at the time, his confrères thought he had suffered a fractured leg so the remainder of the programme was cancelled. Upon medical examination after it was found the leg had been only wrenched.

A group of Valleyfield young ladies were in charge of ticket sales.

Successful Food Sale.—The Young Women's Auxiliary held a very successful food sale in the Presbyterian Church basement on Saturday afternoon, the many good things provided by the young ladies finding ready sale.

The late Mrs. Henry Thompson.—The funeral service of the late Mrs. Henry Thompson was held in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday afternoon and was conducted by the pastor, Rev. P. McK. Sampson, preaching from the following text, "For I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I've committed unto Him against that day."

Mrs. J. A. Stephenson and son of St. Agnes spent the week-end at the home of Mr. E. E. Wells.

Mr. and Mrs. John Farquhar of Watertown, N.Y. were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Elder.

Mrs. Fred Ross left on Saturday for a two weeks' vacation with friends at Old Orchard Beach, Maine.

Miss Grace and Morley Rowat of Montreal spent the week-end at home.

Miss Gladys Ross who has been teaching for the past year at Drummondville has returned home for the summer vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hutchings and family and Mrs. Saunders motored to St. Lambert on Saturday and spent the week-end with friends.

Miss Connie Barnden of St. Lambert with a number of young girl friends are occupying Mrs. Chalmers' cottage for a short vacation.

LITTLE STORIES OF BIG RESULTS

In 1903, Mr. W. E. W., then a young man twenty-one years old, decided to invest in life insurance and purchased a policy with this company, because:

The Entire Earnings of the Mutual Life of Canada are owned by the Policyholders

Thirty years have passed and his policy matured last month. The result of Mr. W. E. W.'s investment which is given in detail below emphasizes the value of the principle of "mutuality."

Policy No. 52,093—$1,000 Endowment in 30 years (Issued in 1903—Annual Premium $31.30)

Mr. W. Paid to the Mutual Life:

30 Annual Premiums of $31.30 ..... $939.00

Less Dividends (including Special Extra 1928 Dividend) ..... $416.18

Net Amount Paid by Mr. W. .... $522.82

Face Value of Policy Paid in Cash ..... $1000.00

Gain to Policyholder ..... $477.18

The average premium paid under this "Participating-in-profits" policy for the 30 years was only $17.43, which compares with $26.65 under a "non-participating" policy which does not return profits to the policyholder.

This outstanding result is one reason why so many people choose a "participating-in-profits" policy in the Mutual Life of Canada when they insure.

You, too, can become a policyholder in this successful and sound Canadian company. Mail the coupon below for further information regarding the Mutual Life and its policies.

In a general way it can be said that carnival is held just before the beginning of Lent, but it exists no more in its ancient form. In Rome it is now almost wholly limited to masked balls in the theaters and its manifestations in the streets are sparse and very attenuated. On the Riviera, however, there are floats, mainly with flowers, while this aspect of carnival, once so important, has altogether disappeared in Rome.

Agricultural Society Meets.—Division B. of Huntingdon Agricultural Society held a meeting in the Town Hall on Saturday for the purpose of appointing judges and making other plans relative to Havelock Fair. As the space for exhibits has been so crowded of late years, and as no funds are available for additional buildings, it was decided to ask the Government for the loan of two large white tents, one for fruit and flowers, and one for sheep.

Driver and Car Injured.—A young man by the name of Rabouin from Moore's Fork, while driving on this road at high speed Sunday evening lost control of the machine which took the ditch and was badly damaged, while the driver suffered some severe cuts and other injuries.

Presentation to Miss Theobald.—By an oversight, mention was previously omitted of a very pleasing feature of our school closing. We refer to the presentation to Miss Theobald of a beautiful purse containing a gift of money, accompanied by an address of appreciation.

Serious Illness of Mr. F. Dowling.—Mrs. Steele and Mrs. Thos. Waddell have been informed that their brother, Mr. Frederic Dowling of Jess Lake, Minn., is very seriously ill and undergoing hospital treatment.

Mrs. McKinney's condition has improved greatly during the past week. Mr. Geo. Harrington has been accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Massey of Montreal, made a flying visit to their relatives here on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Churchill spent the week-end at the home of Mr. D. Massey, Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Kelly of Birmingham, N. Y., visited Mrs. Wm. Kelly on Saturday and were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Hamill.

Mr. F. Johnson of Montreal, spent the past three weeks at Mr. Hamill's. Mr. Thos. Barr of Plattsburg, was a recent visitor on the Hill.

Mr. Geo. Harrington has been spending some time in Burlington, Vt. Miss Lillian Hamill has returned home after a visit to her aunt at Malone.

Mr. and Mrs. Lethwaite of Montreal spent the week-end at Mr. R. C. Whyte's.

Mr. Bertram Bourdon and Miss Dorothy Stuart of Montreal, spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Bourdon.

Mrs. A. J. Hamill has greatly improved the appearance of her house by having it repainted.

Bright Color Contrasts

Summer suits are not content with being well cut, well made and of sound color, they demand strong accents to bring out the best there is in them. Beige and red, for instance, do wonders for each other; yellow beige and brown combine with far friendliness; dark blue, with off-white and red are another perfect trio; red and white have always chimmed together while blue and yellow find innumerable ways to enhance one another's attractions.

Some Spirited Tie-Ups

For the spirit color tie-up of a beige frock and red accessories try an extra-long scarf of sheer wool in red with a blue purse and beige belt. A boutonniere of blue or of red will touch up the high lights. A yellow wool scarf fits in well with a beige or brown outfit and two bags may be well added to this also, one of beige, one of blue and the other of brown alligator. A blue and white striped scarf is lovely with navy and a handsome blue bag is just smart enough to train along, while a deep red carnation finishes off the ensemble.

In both the red and white and the blue and white combinations, piggy gloves, sometimes with suede palms to keep them shapely, are an unbeatable pick-me-up for the outfit.

Eye For Values

A collector of manuscripts and first editions of early Americans found a sermon in pamphlet form in a second-hand bookshop. It was the only known copy of the old sermon except the one which the collector already possessed. He paid $500 for the second copy, then took it home with him and threw it into the fireplace. The destruction of the second copy added several times its purchase price to the one the collector originally held, he explained.—Nation's Business.

"Tiger"

For Jerry a little pearl-handled 38 six-shooter with such an easy action that he was sure her little hand would manage it nicely.

"Not that we will ever have to use 'em," Peter said, "but just in case we might."

Jerry felt herself getting more and more excited as they rode southward on the South Shore electric. She took a last look at the Midway as they shot by, and 63rd street with its bustle of Saturday shoppers and its screeching L.

Now they had passed the South Shore Country Club and were speeding on toward Jerry knew not what.

Pullman, with its great car works, the first of the steel mills scattered along the lake. Ugly, squalid, unpainted houses on marshy flats which were the final word in desolation. Gas tanks like huge, black cheese boxes, smokestacks like black exclamation marks. Bessemer converters shooting off their geyserlike fireworks in a ruddy glow of light.

And now they were so far out that Jerry did not know the towns more than by name. She had been through them on her way to the Dunes, but she had been very careful never to leave the train at any of these stops.

And so Peter became her guide. She did not recognize the station at which they left the train and she would never have been able to find her way through the tortuous streets which lead between countless rows of company-owned houses down to the uninviting waterfront.

There was a depression that really was depression. Jerry did not realize that there could be so many thousand half-starved children. Great-eyed Mexican children, tired-eyed mothers, disconsolate men sitting on steps everywhere, talking, talking.

That's what it meant when the steel mills shut down or were only running a fraction of capacity. What could these people do? Where could they go? Why in the name of decency weren't they taken care of in some manner?

Jerry's heart went out to these people, but she was afraid of them, too. She was afraid that because she and Peter were well dressed they might be held up almost anywhere.

"You see," Peter explained, "when I was taking my technical courses in mining engineering we were often brought down to the steel mills. I learned to know these towns quite well."

"And you think that you know which mill it is from my description?"

"I've got a pretty good idea," Peter said, "but of course I may be wrong."

They were walking along an ill-kept street bordering mill property now. It was late afternoon and the smoke shooting up from the blast furnaces blackened the gray sky.

Jerry thought that only William Blake or Dante could competently describe these huge conical piles of masonry bound by massive iron bands, starting seventy-five feet in the air and belching smoke and fire. What creatures of another world the men seemed working around those furnaces with the fire shining on their faces and gleaming in their eyes.

Through the open doors of the mills that were operating they saw the huge ladles, capable of holding 100 tons of open-hearth steel being carried by cranes high above the half-naked men.

"What if that molten metal should spill on the men?" she asked.

"In that case," Peter said, "I am afraid they would remelt the metal and curse the fellow for spoiling the heat."

"How terrible, Peter."

"Steel is a he-man's game," Peter said.

They came at last to a spot which seemed to be at the end of nowhere.

A high board fence, half rotted through in many places, surrounded a group of rusting buildings which houses silent mill units that looked as though they had stood there since the beginning of time.

They stepped quickly through a hole in this fence and progressing cautiously, with Peter in the lead, followed a line of willows along a deserted ship canal where once huge ore boats had unloaded, and coal and limestone and dolomite had been brought to the mills.

A row of old blast furnaces, protruding from a building of rusted sheet metal blocked their way, and to the side they saw, through fallen and broken sections of another wing, rusted rolling mill machinery.

"Let's stop a moment," Jerry, and load our guns," Peter suggested. He pulled forth from his pocket the businesslike .45 and the pearl-handled .38, and showed Jerry the mysteries of her little gun.

"But I'm not entirely sure this is the place."

Church News.—An interesting report of the meeting of Conference which was recently held in St. James United Church, Montreal, was given at the morning service on Sunday by the pastor of Zion United Church, Rev. G. A. Haughton. The evening service was conducted by Mr. Smith, who delivered an interesting sermon. A goodly number were in attendance. Mr. Smith also conducted the Bible class. Such assistance to the pastor, and helpful to the pastor, and is much appreciated by all.

S.S. Picnic Planned.—The children, especially of our Sunday Schools always look forward with much interest to the annual picnic, which in the case of the Zion United S.S. has for many years been held at Fraser's Point. Once again this picnic is being planned for the date decided upon being June 30th (Friday).

Crop Growth Retarded.—Rain is needed in this vicinity, as little has come this way for some time. Growth is much retarded owing to drought and cold weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cooper, Capitol Hill, Calgary, were visiting this week at the W. F. McDonald home. Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDonald and Mr. and Mrs. George Elder accompanied them on a trip to Lachine and Verdun where they visited relatives, while Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McDonald motored them to Ottawa on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell McDonald celebrated the anniversary of their wedding by motoring to Chateaugay, N.Y., where they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dear.

Mr. and Mrs. Dear have just received of the passing away on June 15th, in the west, of Mrs. James Marshall (Annie Gillies).

Mr. Wm. Arthur has left to visit his son in Craik, Sask.

Church News.—The June meeting of the W.M.S. was held in the hall on Tuesday and was in charge of the Home Helpers secretary, Mrs. D. McKell. An address was given by the Rev. K. House on "The Importance of the Individual," the President in the chair. After the meeting, tea was served and a social hour enjoyed.

The newly organized Young Women's Auxiliary will hold their first meeting on Saturday in the church hall at 2 o'clock.

Dr. Hamilton of Chicago is again visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Orr, Mrs. Jack and son, and Mrs. McAloney are also their guests for the next two weeks.

Rations For Work Horses

If a teamster is to get a profitable return from the work of his horses, and to keep them in good condition for their work, care must be taken in preparing and feeding a suitable ration. Many mixtures and rates of feeding have been tried and compared at the Dominion Experimental Farm, and it has been found that a grain mixture of five parts of whole oats and two parts bran, fed at the rate of one pound per one hundred pounds of live weight in the horse is a safe grain ration for horses at moderate work. As fodder either clean timothy or mixed timothy and clover should be fed, at a rate of about one pound per one hundred pounds of live weight. During seasons of heavy work the proportion of bran may safely be reduced to one-half, and the ration increased to one and one-quarter pounds of the mixture per one hundred pounds of live weight.

The feeding practice followed at the Central Experimental Farm is to feed three-eighths of the day's grain mixture and one-quarter of the day's hay in the early morning and again at midday. For the evening meal the ration given is one-quarter of the total grain mixture and one-half of the day's hay. When this plan is followed the horses go to work comfortable and with little danger of digestive trouble owing to distended stomachs while at work. On days that the horses are idle the grain ration is reduced one-half, and bran mashes are given on Saturday night, and on nights previous to occasional idle days.

In the feeding of driving horses the same general precautions may safely be followed, with the exception that hay should be fed more sparingly.

In a bulletin issued recently by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa the feeding of roots is recommended when other green feed cannot be procured. While carrots are perhaps most desirable, sugar beets, turnips and mangels are relished and useful. From three to six pounds of roots per day for horses at light work and less quantities, or none at all, while heavy work is being performed is recommended in the bulletin. Watering has been found to be best done before feeding, with, if necessary, a moderate drink before going to work. Copious drinking, when the horse is over-heated is a dangerous practice, liable to cause permanent injury in foundering.
