CROPS ARE FAIR IN HUNTINGDON. REPORT SHOWS

The Agricultural Division of the Provincial Bureau of Statistics of Quebec, published on July 27th its fifth telegraphic crop report of the season, reproducing the summary of information received from the district agronomists of the Province.

Crop Condition.

District No. 12 including, Beauharnois, Chateauguay, Huntingdon, Laprairie and Napierville.

Haying is over and the yield is small. Grains have developed very well but they have been beaten down by heavy rain and the quality of the crops will be somewhat reduced. Corn and flax have also been beaten down. Pastures are in better condition. There has been a marked increase in growth of plants during the past two weeks owing to the warm humid weather and the rain.

AERODROME FOR VALLEYFIELD APPEARS EVIDENT

The rental of a farm owned by Mr. Louis Faubert, of Rang Ste-Marie, near Valleyfield, by a privately owned concern has created rumours in that region during the past few days. It seems that this company intends to erect an aerodrome, following the industrial boom in that section of Beauharnois county.

It is a known fact that the chairman of the Dominion Construction company, who are carrying out an extensive industrial building programme near Valleyfield, travels to that city in an aeroplane and has visited the premises repeatedly since the operations started in June.

It is also reported in Valleyfield that members of the Department of National Defence have inspected the grounds of the Valleyfield Exhibition for the purpose of using them for military training. It would not be surprised if this becomes a reality.

An aerodrome will be a necessity for members of the Department of National Defence in their journeys back and forth, should they decide to use the exhibition grounds for such a purpose.

Moreover, the government has taken over the island known as "Ile Aux Chats," it is believed for the purpose of constructing a sulphuric acid plant. The proprietors would have to leave with the least possible delay.

LOUIS DESROSIERS HEADS WAR SAVINGS COMMITTEE AT V'L'F'D

War Savings committees are given widely-expanded powers, under a new ruling by the Federal Government. The committees may now sell War Savings Certificates by direct solicitations, and obtain pledges for regular purchases. Also they may authorize any responsible group to undertake a door-to-door canvass of the whole community. To make it easy and simple for local committees to undertake the direct selling of certificates, a new combination application and pledge form has been printed, and will be distributed by the end of the month.

Under the direction of J. V. Desaulniers and J. A. Constant, regional committees to supervise the formation of local committees have already been formed in St. Jean, Joliette, Valleyfield and Sherbrooke with one being formed in St. Hyacinthe.

The officers of the Valleyfield Branch of the War Savings Committee are: Louis Desrosiers, chairman; J. A. McDonald, vice-president and G. A. Meloche, secretary.

A considerable activity of committees has been the organizing of "Sixteen Clubs." Members of these clubs simply decide among themselves that at every meeting, or at set times each week or month, they shall each undertake to purchase one or more War Savings Stamps. The sixteen stamps are enough to buy a $5.00 Certificate. Members usually employ the old-fashioned "draw" to determine which one shall get the certificate.

Red Birds Bow To H'don in Tennis Games

Beauharnois Lose Early Lead to Huntingdon Aggregation—Stoddard And McCartney Star

Huntingdon continued its triumphant march in the Valleyfield-Beauharnois - Huntingdon tennis league last week when they came from behind to register another imposing victory at the expense of the Beauharnois Red Birds. This is the third consecutive win to be added to Huntingdon's laurels in the tennis league and judging by their performance they are potential contenders for the final series in this loop. The final score was 4-3.

Glen Stoddard, Huntingdon's star in singles, made a surprising hit that evening. After losing the first match 2-6, he won the second set 6-4 while the third set went to his opponent, Colquhoun, 4-0. Stoddard rallied in the final set to win by the close score of 6-5. This was the first game of the evening between Beauharnois and Huntingdon and the large gathering applauded the masterful plays of the stars.

The greatest surprise of the evening was registered by Miss Bernice McCartney, of Huntingdon, who defeated Mrs. Miller of Beauharnois, who had not lost a game this season. The score was 6-2 and 6-5. Mr. Hill, of Beauharnois, who had not lost a game since the opening of the schedule, bowed to W. Sullivan by 6-3 and 6-4.

The men's combination of Clifford Morse and Zenon Daoust lost their game against Patterson and Gebbie through over-confidence.

The management of the Chateau tennis team announced that evening that the single championship for ladies and gents of the Chateau Tennis Club would start on Monday. The winner will be awarded the Corby's trophy. Mixed doubles for Walker's trophy are scheduled to take place some time towards the latter part of the month.

The score and players:

G. Stoddard defeats B. Colquhoun 2-6, 6-4, 6-5; Miss Luffman and Miss A. McDougall defeat Dr. Raymond and Miss I. McEwen, 6-3, 6-4; B. McCartney defeats Mrs. Miller, 6-2, 6-5; Dr. Brisson and L. Hampson defeat Demers and Brown, 6-1, 6-4; E. and J. Hunter lose to Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Currie, 6-1, 6-4; C. Morse and Z. Daoust lose to Patterson and Gebbie, 6-5, 5-6, 6-5; W. Sullivan defeats Hill, 6-3, 6-4.

GOOD FAIR THIS YEAR FORSEEN BY PRESIDENT

WILLIAM GRAHAM, president of Huntingdon Agricultural Society. Representatives of District Holstein Calf Clubs in company with the Holstein Fieldman met with the Agricultural Society and arranged for the bolstering up of the Holstein exhibit amongst Calf Club members. It is generally conceded the black and whites will have a considerably increased exhibit at the local fair. It is fully expected the Ayrshire Junior Calf Club members will also be out in generous numbers.

War Minister Explains Call-up Canada's Man Power During National Registration Week

Every unmarried man in Canada, medically fit and between the ages of 21 and 45 years, may be compelled to take 30 days' military training within one year, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, War Services Minister, told the House of Commons a few days ago.

"There is no reason why Canada should not train an army of 1,000,000 men under this system and still operate her industry and primary production to meet demands upon it," said Mr. Gardiner.

His was the fourth statement on progress of the war effort and he dealt in detail with national registration to be conducted August 19, 20 and 21 and the calling up of men for training.

"It is possible," said Mr. Gardiner "that requirements of the Department of National Defence will be satisfied by the calling up of single men from 21 to 35 and it may not have to go beyond this in the first year.

"This factor depends on the result of the national registration and the number of men the Department of National Defence can train within one year."

Compulsory training of each class must be completed within a year of the time the class is called and it is the intention of the department to make eight calls within the year, spacing them as equally as possible, he said.

Call Proclaimed.

As soon as possible after it has been ascertained what year classes must be called to meet the first demand of the Defence Department, a proclamation will be issued warning all persons within such classes, starting with the 21-year-old class, that they will be called for service within a certain designated time.

"This," said the Minister, "will be done to give them a chance of arranging their own affairs."

Mr. Gardiner quoted figures showing 4,700,000 people between the ages of 18 and 44 in Canada, of whom 2,400,000 are males including about 1,198,000 single men.

Between the ages of 44 and 59 the total male population is 950,000 and "in those over 60 years there is substantial productive and directive capacity, and I must not leave out of the national effort youths from 10 to 18—it is for the future of these that this conflict is being waged.

"If we trained 500,000 men within the next 12 months there is sufficient man and woman power to manage it, while at the same time greatly increasing the production of primary products and industry.

"There are 1,198,000 single men between 18 and 44, and we could withdraw 500,000 of these for training and leave 698,000 single men under the age of 44 in employment, or we could place 1,000,000 men in training by all methods and have 198,000 single men yet untrained."

The Minister reviewed his previous announcements as to how the National War Services Department will conduct national registration, segregating duplicate cards of single men between 19 and 45 into the various classes to facilitate calling up of men.

Duties Explained.

He explained that all duties in connection with the call-up fall to his department. The Defence Department will merely say how many men they can handle.

Canada's 243 electoral districts—basis on which registration will be made—will be divided into 12 groups, conforming as nearly as possible to the 11 military districts in Canada with a separate group for Prince Edward Island.

Twelve boards with jurisdiction over calling up of men will be constituted, each board to be heard by a judge of a Superior Court or a lesser court and nominated by the Chief Justice of the Province. This Judge will be chairman of the district board, which will embrace two other members, both representative citizens.

Only exemptions to the call-up will be: Judges of Superior Court, District or County courts; members of the clergy or religious orders; members of naval, military or air forces on active service;

Those who in the opinion of the

Scotch Lady of 70 Years Decides Not to Come to Huntingdon For Fear She Might Break Faith With Soldiers

Dr. J. R. McEwen and Mrs. McEwen extended an invitation to Miss M. W. Fairlie of Crail, Fife, in Scotland to come and remain with them in Canada throughout the war. This aged lady has been a regular correspondent with Dr. McEwen for many years. Though the following letter is somewhat personal, Dr. McEwen has given consent to our publishing it so that our readers may gain some idea of how this lady, though advanced in years regards ideals and the war.

14th July, 1940

Dear Dr. McEwen,

My very warmest thanks to Mabel and to you for your very kind thought, your letter of the 25th June and your most kind invitation. The beauty, wonder and interest of Canada, her greatness now and her certain splendid future, are well-known to me; but I am afraid they, along with many other wonderful and glorious things, some in my own land, are now unlikely to be actually seen by me. I was 70 on my last birthday in January last, and as you know, I am to some extent crippled. Travelling under these circumstances, even in Scotland with its familiarity, and its smaller distances, is not lightly undertaken, even when all is normal. There are so many encumbrances which such an one has come to regard as necessary to the condition of affairs that luggage becomes a problem for any lengthened stay away from one's own corner. Also one is apt to be a burden on other people for help during one's journeyings. Add to this the state of world affairs. Then there is another factor. It is very little that old and infirm people can do, you would suppose, to aid a country engaged in such a fight as Britain is waging with your help and that of the other members of the British Commonwealth of Nations and her Allies; but one thing we can do besides taking our tiny share in any financial and other needs which may arise. We, further on in life and

Huntingdon Girls Ousted From Loop For Playing Ineligible Player; Telephoned Protest

Brooklet Girls' Protest Upheld by Dundee and Beaver Girls—Eunice Anderson Appeared on Huntingdon Line-up After July 15th, Representatives Claim—Local Girls Claim "Sabotage"

Huntingdon girls were politely but emphatically ousted from the girls' league for having played an ineligible player after July 15. A turbulent meeting of representatives from Brooklet, Dundee, Ormstown, Beaver and Huntingdon was held on Monday evening at the Huntingdon County Building where the delegates upheld Brooklet's protest that Huntingdon had infringed the regulations of the league. They had to pay the penalty, that is, forfeit all games won after the girl in question appeared in the line-up.

When the girls formed their circuit in the early part of June, special rules and regulations were unanimously adopted. One of these pertained to the eligibility of players. It was then decided that a team would not be permitted to use any new addition unless the player or players in question had appeared in the batting line-up at least once before July 15. Dundee and Beaver upheld Brooklet's protest, claiming that catcher Eunice Anderson of Huntingdon had not played for the local team until the latter part of July. The representatives passed a resolution leaving the Huntingdon team holding the traditional "bag."

Although the Huntingdon aggregation finished the regular schedule in third place, they had won three contests after the infraction was committed. The delegates' decision, however, left them in sole possession of last place in the league standing.

Chairman Floyd Rugar of Ormstown openly stated that he could see no alternative than to abide by the telephoned protest of the Brooklet representatives.

It is expected that further developments will occur in this serious situation, as the Huntingdon teams seems intent on producing further evidence that they were "ganged" upon by certain representatives. They plan to hold a meeting within the next few days to enable them to protect their investment locally. Nevertheless, the verdict is rendered and Huntingdon Girls are out of the picture for this season.

Dundee are in first position, followed by Ormstown, Beaver and Brooklet. Valleyfield Falcons actually finished in last place until Huntingdon's promotion on Monday evening.

The playoffs are scheduled to starts next week between Brooklet Dundee, Beaver and Ormstown.

Leslie Ross Skips Ormstown Bowlers to Win Fisher Cup

Ten Rinks Enter Martin B. Fisher Bowling Tournament—Fawcett Skips Huntingdon Rink to Second Position

The Martin B. Fisher annual lawn bowling tournament took place in Huntingdon Saturday afternoon. With ideal weather prevailing the tournament went off most successful. Five rinks were entered from Valleyfield, two from Ormstown and three from Huntingdon. In place of playing the usual elimination schedule, each team played three games, and the highest plus score constituted the winner. In the event of a team winning a game by more than 10 points they were credited with only 10 points. Playing the tournament under such conditions was approved by all. The tournament started at 2 o'clock, two games were played in the afternoon and the final game in the evening.

Leslie Ross, of Ormstown skipped his rink composed of S. J. Cottingham, W. Finlayson and J. Rice to victory winning the Fisher Trophy for the second time for the Ormstown Club. His score showed that he won his first game by 4 points, second by 6 and the third by 8, thereby scoring 18 points and three wins. Alex. Fawcett, of Huntingdon skipped a rink, composed of A. L. Sellar, W. Dewhurst and J. R. Fox. This aggregation scored a plus score of 18 points also, but lost their final game by one point to R. Greene, of Valleyfield.

The trophy was presented to Mr. Ross for the Ormstown Club by Mr. Wilfrid Grant, President of the Huntingdon Bowling Club. The individual prizes were War Savings Stamps, $2.50 being presented to each of the four trophy winners, whilst War Savings Stamps to the value of $1.50 were presented to each of the members on Mr. Fawcett's rink.

The ladies of the Bowling Club arranged for the serving of light refreshments during the afternoon and evening.

The rinks with the aggregate scores and wins were:

Chateauguay Street Must Be Repaired Soon Council Agrees; Properties Taxed At 13 Mills

By-law No. 240, levying a rate of assessment on all taxable, assessable properties in the Town of Huntingdon was read a first and second time at Monday's session of the Town Council. This By-law levies a rate of 13 mills on all properties in the Town of Huntingdon except land under cultivation. The secretary-treasurer, E. C. Martin, reminded the members of the Council that the ordinary revenues of the Town under such a rate amounted to almost $28,000 and that the ordinary expenditures were in the neighborhood of $27,000. The revenues include about $3,000 in water rates.

Leo Legault complained of the poor drainage condition of the sewer on his property on King street. The water committee was asked to make the necessary alterations.

W. E. Lefebvre requested sewer and water connections from the Town for his residences on Chalmers street. He was informed that as soon as the Town assumed ownership of the street in question, the water committee will be authorized to fulfill his request. The petitioner was, however, asked to pay the water rates on the three houses until such a time as the buildings are occupied.

The Town of Huntingdon will proceed with the repairing of Chateauguay street, from the Canadian Bank of Commerce to Cemetery street, as soon as they have obtained definite figures on it. D. J. O'Connor, the proposed contractor for the repair job, informed the Council that it would cost in the neighborhood of $2,000 and that the sub-base material would be extra. The cost per yard is estimated at 90 cents. The Council is scheduled to meet the contractor this week and work will commence immediately.

The secretary was authorized to send another notice to Mr. Alex. Duheme, York Street, to repair his sewer so that it will be in a more sanitary condition.

The milk report showed that the supply is good but there are two dealers in Huntingdon whose licenses might be suspended if they do not ameliorate their sanitation system, it was intimated.

Francois Cleyn, manager of Spinners Ltd., and Mr. Brown, manager of Leach Textiles asked the Council to do some repair work on the road leading to their business establishments. The Huntingdon Woollen Mills requested that their sidewalk be replaced. The Provincial Roads Department will be asked to do some repair work on the Lower Bridge road.

Ald. Lunan asked the secretary to forward a request to the New York Central Railway authorities to extend the crossing on Lake street, which is narrow and dangerous.

A letter was read from the district manager of the Bell Telephone Company, Mr. K. V. Keirstead, informing the Council that this company would discontinue operating the fire siren when the dial system comes into force during the latter part of this year. It is probable that it will be installed at the Fire Station on Prince street.

Frank Monique was given permission to install a ten inch tile near his property on Wellington street.

The valuation roll was homologated with certain amendments. Mr. Lawrence Brown asked that the name of Henry Lazure be changed to his name on the valuation roll.

Mrs. Robert Barr was given permission to have a house moved.

The members of the Police Committee informed the Council that they would discontinue with the services of the town police-

Town Supervision as to Attractiveness

NO one will doubt but that Huntingdon is fast becoming a center of importance, at least as far as general trade and commerce is concerned. Ask any commercial traveller how he finds trade in Huntingdon and he will speak well of it. The commercial travellers see many places in the course of their round-trips and they will all tell you that if Huntingdon is careful as to the supervision it gives towards keeping the town attractive and not allow it to slip into a slip-shod and disgraceful manner it will continue to be favoured. Commercial men would willingly make Huntingdon their homes, if such were to be obtained.

As one looks at Chateauguay Street, and all other streets as a matter of fact, they can see where we are slipping as to maintaining the attractiveness of our town. Too many blatant signs are being allowed to be posted about the store buildings, posts and on building walls. We quite appreciate what advertising means to the owners of these signs, but they are being overdone as to the number being posted. A bit of town pride is essential on the part of the merchants and dealers in Huntingdon. If the merchants and dealers are not more respectful of the town in this respect it would seem to us the Town Council should be empowered to have such a matter investigated. Only a few years ago the Quebec Roads Department were empowered to remove obnoxious signboards that were defacing the beauty of our highways. If this power was the right of the Roads Department surely it is within the power of the Town Council to see to it that our town streets are kept inviting to the general public.

We all quite well know our main street is rough and disgraceful, but the renovation of this road surface will be taken care of almost any day. Because main street is in such a condition at the moment is no good reason why people should allow their premises to become slovenly kept.

In regards to the store fronts, a general painting spree would be very much in order. If we keep our trading places on a higher level than has been our practice in the past, they will hold trade; otherwise they are merely inviting temporary business firms to locate in Huntingdon who will in time gain much of the increased trade that is developing within our midst.

50 Years at the Helm

A SPARKLING, attractively presented edition of the Brampton Conservator marks the 50th anniversary of Sam Charters' accession to the post of Editor-Publisher of that excellent journal. Sam Charters, Editor-Publisher-Parliamentarian, and his sons who followed in his footsteps, made of the Conservator one of the finest weekly newspapers in Canada. The highest principles were always upheld and maintained by Sam Charters with the result that the Conservator's columns were virtually beacon lights in the guidance of public opinion in that rich section of Ontario. The issue contains many congratulatory messages amongst which are those of Rt. Hon. W. L. M. King and the Hon. R. B. Hanson, Leader of the Opposition. After contrasting the period of fifty years ago when the achievements of science, which have since more or less revolutionized things, did not exist a leading editorial concludes: "Yes, this has been a momentous half century in every way. From its achievements and its failings humankind will learn to make a better world—a world in which men will share in the fulness of life, and in which they will be given those greatest of Christian gifts—freedom and liberty." We congratulate the Brampton Conservator on the all-round excellence of the issue and join with others in paying tribute to a pioneer editor who made an indelible mark in the records of Canadian weekly newspaperdom.

County Statistics

THE latest issue of the Statistical Year Book for the Province of Quebec has reached the Gleaner Office and, as usual, contains a wealth of interesting information depicting the whole life of the people of this Province.

In this book, the latest ten-year period reflecting the population trend for the County of Huntingdon is from 1921 to 1931 when a decrease was recorded of 829. This was considerably larger than the 1911-1921 period when the decrease was 66. There is every reason to believe that when the figures for 1931 to 1941 are chronicled the trend towards a decrease in population will be changed and instead there will probably be an increase. The reasons will be varied but will all be directly related to the present war. The Town of Huntingdon itself has shown an increase of about 300 during the past year or more as a result of new industries which came here when war clouds gathered in Europe. Throughout the countryside here and there are new arrivals, most of them from Europe, who are buying up little farms and starting life anew here. This latter movement is bound to increase and after the war in particular one can not help but be certain that the County of Huntingdon and the Chateauguay Valley in common with all rural parts of Canada will experience quite an influx of Europeans starting life afresh on district farms.

General population figures for the Province are shown and reveal that those of French origin in the Province numbered 2,270,059 out of 2,874,255 or 79 per cent. Those of British origin numbered 432,729 or 15 per cent. From 1921 to 1931 the numerical increase was 513,000; to that increase those of French origin contributed 380,969 and the British 75,431. Huntingdon County's population in 1931 was given as 12,345. Their origin was given as follows: 5,914, French; 5,417, British; 23, Hebrew; 20, Italian; 29, German; 3, Polish; 803, Indian; 136, Others. Since those figures were released considerable changes have taken place.

Death rates from certain diseases in Huntingdon County during the years 1937-1938 are given. For infectious diseases the rate dropped from 50.8 in 1937 to 42.5 in 1938. There was quite an increase in the death rate for tuberculosis, from 59.3 in 1937 to 76.6 in 1938. For cancer there was an increase from 110.2 in 1937 to 127.7 in 1938. There was a slight increase in the death rate for heart diseases from 194.9 in 1937 to 195.7 in 1938.

Live stock marketed from Huntingdon County during 1938 was as follows: 1,603 cattle; 5,026 calves; 5,006 hogs; 218 sheep.

In 1938, butter production in the Province amounted to 79,758,453 pounds valued at $19,577,024; that of cheese was 28,569,124 pounds with a value of $3,822,843. The total capital invested in the 1,245 establishments amounted to $19,311,571. Salaries and wages paid represented an amount of $4,590,671. These figures should show quite an increase for this year since there is a definite demand for Canadian cheese in the United Kingdom with Canada not supplying that amount which the British Isles can consume.

The entire Statistical Year Book contains much information of vital interest.

From Peace River

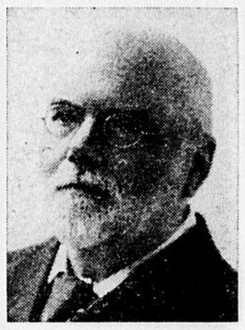
WEEKLY newspapers have what is known as an exchange list. For example, the Gleaner is sent to a weekly newspaper and that paper is sent back in exchange. Every now and then a new paper is added to the Gleaner's list. Each week there come to this office weekly newspapers from coast to coast in Canada. A new one has come from the "far north countree"—the Peace River Record, of Peace River, Alberta.

We always regarded the far north as a "man's country" but from the following item noticed in the Peace River Record it might be a "woman's country" after all, for there it seems no one pays any attention to a woman's age. The item follows: "A Peace River recruit is said to have reached Edmonton unable to give His Majesty's representative correct information as to his wife's age. This is understood because the ladies all do look young in the Peace River country and it is quite possible that many of them prefer to let even their husbands think of them as of the age they appear to be rather than their actual age."

In its editorial columns the Peace River Record warns that Canadians may be outnumbered by enlistments with the following explanation: "In our feeling of pride and security resultant from the loyalty shown by the men of our country enlisting generally, there is a feeling in parts of our Peace River country and no doubt in many other farming communities of Canada that the proportion of those of foreign birth to loyal Canadian-born men is steadily growing. This may not give cause for alarm with a competent police force constantly available in the event of trouble, but it suggests that foreign born residents should be amongst the first considered under the compulsory service act. Thousands of them could be placed in occupations at army pay to do useful services to the country and in locations where they could not possibly cause any trouble. Removal and segregation of foreign born would relieve a most undesirable tension which exists in many communities."

Excessive Speed

IN the columns of the Gleaner so far this summer have been chronicled accounts of automobile accidents on the Port Lewis Road which have surpassed in number those of any previous year. Accidents have ranged all the way from minor ones with the cars damaged a little and the occupants scratched up a bit to ones in which the cars have been badly damaged and one of the occupants breaking both legs and being in a serious condition for some time. One is led to believe that the only answer to the many accidents this year is the fine new road over which cars are driven at far too fast a speed. That the road is an excellent one and a real asset to the district is recognized. But the way some motorists abuse their privileges by tearing over some of the more dangerous turns at high rates of speed is something which turns the road into somewhat of a liability instead of an asset. Possibly it will take a few serious accidents before some motorists will be reminded that even over the best of roads some discretion has to be used in the matter of excessive speed.



Chronology - of - Chateauguay, Beauharnois and Huntingdon Counties

From Manuscripts of The Late ROBERT SELLAR

Archibald Cameron—My father came from Strontian, Argyleshire, in 1833. He meant to settle up the Ottawa, but the early setting in of winter stopped him, when he came up to see Colquhoun, who came out in the same ship with us, and who induced him to take up land. He took up a lot in the Beauharnois river road (west side) at the outlet of the Irish Concession, which had been opened some years before. All around was a dense bush, and from about ½ a mile above him there was no house until the Scotch Sett. There were quite a number of Scotch families settled beside us, on both sides of the River and we had a school of our own.

In 1838 we knew there was trouble brewing among the Canadians but were not prepared for the rising, when a body of them, in the morning of Sunday, entered our houses and made prisoners of the men. My brother had gone to the barn when they came up and finding the door only on latch, they quickly entered, seized the muskets we had as vol. and gripped my father in bed. They allowed him to get in his clothes when one took off his sash and tied his hands behind his back. (Sashes had about then come into fashion.) They entered the other English houses and had 6 prisoners in all. They also took a Canadian named Patenaude, against whom they were very angry, because he had always opposed their movement. He insisted having his hands tied, but was overpowered. When they came to cross the ford of the Beauharnois river (which was high and cold at the time) Patenaude, who had a great affection for my father, lay down and insisted in his clutching his back with his legs, and though his hands were tied, by stooping, carried him across. They were taken to Dumouchel's house and before him, and he offered to release them on giving their parole. My father reposed, saying he would take no pledge not to do his duty to his Sovereign, but, despite that, he was allowed to go with the rest. Their arms were, of course, kept, but were recovered after the collapse of the rising.

Dumouchel was a course, cruel, overbearing man. His house was burned and himself sentenced to transportation, but afterwards returned.

None of the English settlers were treated in like manner except at Chateauguay Basin. The Canadians took nothing from the houses save arms.

The Irish Concession was honorably distinguished by always having a good school. The son of one of its settlers, Abbott, is now a U.S. senator. A great many have left. There are a few Scotch families among them.

Beaudry was drowned about 1804. He was crossing in a canoe and as it neared Lachine wharf he, eager to land, stood up to jump out, when the canoe bumped heavily against the wharf. He lost his balance and being a heavy man and unable to swim, was carried away by the current and drowned before the Indians could catch him.

The French came pouring into the Beauharnois river after the Rebellion, and mostly from Chambly and Longueuil. The Scotch families have all left. They went mostly to Upper Canada, the London district, and began leaving before '50.

The proces verbal for the Tullochgorum road was got up in '51. I was well satisfied the land was good, and moved in after my brother-in-law, in 1854.

John Cameron came to Howick as the first singing master. While being driven in a cart up the English river, he was thrown out and broke his leg. For the benefit of his family, the first concert was held at Reeves' which was crowded. Cameron had a remarkably soft, sweet voice, but otherwise was coarse. Though unfit, he was made teacher at Howick and was very cruel to the scholars. On leaving he went to Montreal and set up as tavern keeper, on St- Urbain street, his house, the White House, becoming the general resort for Chateauguay people. At the concert a son of John Stewart's got an unmerciful threshing from a brother of Jock of the bush, which did Stewart much good, as he never acted the bully afterwards. Old Stewart, the Big Bear, was reported to have fled from Edinburgh for resurrectionism. He was a bad man and his family was the scene of constant strife. One day, much provoked by his treatment, he rushed to the river side, declaring he would drown himself. The sons came out to see him do it. He hesitated, and said he would take off his trousers when one of them cried, "Never mind your breeches, Jump in!"

John Donaldson—The school on the Ormstown concession was put up in 1830 and a man named Hall was the teacher for a year. Miller came out in '31 and lived a while on the river, being ultimately engaged to teach in our school, which he did for 10 months, being ultimately engaged to teach in our school, which he did for 10 months, preaching during that time in it and on the river. The Ormstown concession was surveyed by Manuel and the lots were taken up even before he was fairly done. They were all taken up between the spring of '27 and the summer of '28 mostly by young men, few of whom were married or even had handled a spade, being weavers, shoemakers and the like.

Corkindale, father and son died of cholera in '52. One had gone to the Basin with a barrel of potash and brought back the infection. No others died of it.

Wolcott Thayer, Burke, N.Y.—American, 79 years old today and was born in this town. My father came to it 4 years before, but went back to Massachusetts to get married. My mother's name was Newton, and one of her sisters married Vosbury, who was a Dutch shoemaker. He was not a Catholic. I do not think he was anything. My father was captain of Militia in 1812, but the only service he was in, the entire militia being called out to meet the invasion by Prevost in 1814. The Battle of Plattsburg was fought before they reached the front. I remember well the camp at Chateauguay, having visited it often. A reward being offered for Hampton's black horse, a wild fellow named Hamilton bribed a sentinel to let him pass to the stable when he took it and rode off, but the alarm being given was caught. During the war a great many hard cases came along the frontier, and who remained after it.

The people on this side were as much scared as those on the other and a great many left for Vermont. I was told by one who went with Hampton north, that they were attacked at night by the Canadians and lost a good few men. No, I never heard that they fired on themselves in the dark. The Indians hid behind the trees and threw their tomahawks as they were passing by, so that Hampton ordered them to scout along the roads to drive them off. Our army came back very tired.

Soil stabilization with salt and clay as a foundation for highways and as a surface veneer for gravel soils is now a firmly established practice in Canada. During 1939 there was a decided increase in this use of salt both for highways and for runways at Canadian airports.

Canada's Industrial Tempo Now at Highest Point in History—Parliament Reviews Work As It Closes Session

A session, which in its setting at least is one of the most important in the history of the Dominion, is coming to an end. What parliament has achieved during the session for the good of Canada can only be determined in its true light in the future. Parliament has met and deliberated on the vital affairs of the nation at a time when the country is engaged in a desperate struggle to preserve its liberty. The work of this session cannot, therefore, be judged on the merits of any particular piece of legislation. It would have to be judged on the general aid and direction it has given the government in the conduct of the country's affairs in this critical hour, particularly those affairs directly connected with the war.

During the past week the members of the war cabinet spread before the eyes of parliament a picture of the country's war effort. The prime minister covered the ground in a general way while defence ministers and others directly concerned with the administration of war services, explained what has been done by their departments to gird Canada for war. Whatever the shortcomings of the picture—it was subjected to criticism by the opposition—it gave the impression that Canada is now fully alive to the grave danger and equally grave task facing this country and is throwing her resources unreservedly into her war effort. Without attempting to give even in the briefest form the contents of these speeches, some points standing in boldest relief were these: Canada will soon have a complete corps of two full divisions with ancillary troops in Britain, Col. Ralston stated; two other divisions are being equipped and trained in Canada for use wherever and whenever needed. Canada now has an army of about 134,000, over 31,000 being outside Canada. Canadian troops are taking part in the defence of the West Indies, Iceland and Newfoundland. After national registration which will take place on August 19 and two or three days following, unmarried youths of 21 and upward will be called up according to ages for a 30 day period of training. The minister of national war services, Mr. Gardiner, said in relation to registration: "There's

A Cabinet Minister's Daily Duties

(Toronto Daily Star)

A dispatch from Ottawa suggests Quebec is so antagonistic to registration and conscription for home defence that Mr. Lapointe may quit the federal cabinet. From Mr. Lapointe himself comes a most emphatic denial. He says: "As long as Mr. King is prime minister, I will be there beside him. Believe nothing you hear to the contrary. As long as God gives me health, I will serve this nation and its people while there is opportunity to do so I have no thought of laying aside my work until this war is won by a victory for the Empire and for Canada. I know the heart of my province and I can unreservedly say the same for Quebec."

Mr. Lapointe is one of the great Canadian Liberals of this generation, and no one is better able than he is to sense and interpret the feeling of his native province. The rumor about him arose because of his absence from parliament through illness; illness brought on by disregard of his doctor's orders some time ago that he must "take it easy." But it is not his nature to do that at any time, and in time of war his duties have multiplied. Describing these as "a terrific strain," he gave a revealing picture of his ministerial activities:

"I have to attend to my departmental duties all morning. We have cabinet every day at 10 minutes to 12 noon. We usually sit until after two. There are grave decisions to be made every day. Then we snatch a hurried lunch and attend the House at three o'clock. We are busy in the Commons until six. Right after six the war committee of the cabinet meets. It has heavy responsibilities. We have to rush to be back in the House by eight. The Commons sits until 11. After that there is often much work to be done. You will see why I have not found it possible to follow doctor's orders and take things easy."

Canada will be glad to know that now, after an enforced rest, Mr. Lapointe will soon be able to resume these manifold duties; would, in fact, have resumed them ere now had it not been for the insistence of Premier King that he rest a little longer so as not to risk a relapse.

MORE CANADIAN CHEESE WANTED BY GREAT BRITAIN

Hon. James G. Gardiner, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, in a statement on June 24th intimated that according to cable advice received the British Ministry of Food is desirous of obtaining the largest possible quantity of cheese from Canada this season.

The need for Canadian cheese affords milk producers in the cheese producing areas of Canada a special opportunity to make a war effort. The maintenance of milk supply through the summer months will be of first importance and where possible the diversion of milk from other use to the manufacture of cheese will add to the supply.

Some need for processed milk products is also indicated, but this is limited as compared with cheese. Butter consumption in the United Kingdom has been greatly reduced through substituting vitamin reinforced margarine and it is not contemplated at present that butter will be required from Canada.

RASPBERRIES TO THE FORE

There is no denying the fact that succulent sun-ripened berries, and fruits fresh from field and orchard are among the most delicious foods a person can eat. Canadians will unanimously agree to this as they enjoy the home produced fruits on the market at this season.

Raspberries are abundant just now. This year the crop is good, the quality excellent, so why not make the most of the situation? See that raspberries are on the table every day while they are at their best, and with a thought to the future, turn some into flavourful jams and sparkling jellies. The Consumer Section, Marketing Service, recommends the following recipes.

Raspberry Mousse

3 cups fresh raspberries; ½ cup fruit sugar; pinch salt; 1 tablespoon gelatine; 2 tablespoons cold water; ½ pint whipping cream.

Press berries through sieve to remove seeds. Add sugar and salt. Soak gelatine in cold water. Dissolve over hot water. Stir into fruit pulp. When mixture is partially set fold in cream, whipped until stiff. Allow to set. Serves six.

Raspberry Tarts.

2 egg whites, pinch salt, ½ cup fruit sugar, 1 pint fresh raspberries.

Add salt to egg whites and beat until stiff. Beat in sugar. Fold in raspberries. Pile in baked tart shells. Bake in slow oven, 300° F., until meringue is firm—about 30 minutes. Makes six tarts.

Raspberry Jelly

4 cups raspberry juice; 7½ cups granulated sugar; 1 cup liquid pectin.

Use 3 quarts raspberries. Press through sieve, then drain through jelly bag. Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan. Mix well. Bring to boil and stir in pectin. Boil hard ½ minute. Remove from heat and skim. Pour into sterlilized glasses. Seal with hot paraffin.

Raspberry and Red Currant Conserve

4 cups stemmed currants; 4 cups raspberries; 6 cups sugar.

Mix and let stand one hour. Heat slowly stirring often, until boiling point is reached. Boil 10 minutes. Pour into sterilized jars, and seal at once.

Raspberry Vinegar

Cover raspberries with vinegar. Allow to stand over night. Strain and measure. Add 1 cup sugar for each cup of liquid. Boil 20 minutes. Skim and bottle.

Ethics of Etiquette

WHEN MEN CALL

Men usually make their social calls on Sunday afternoons and on convenient evenings during the week. It is also considered good form for business women to make their calls at such times.

A man is expected to make calls of condolence, inquiry, and congratulation upon all his intimate friends, men and women, whenever such occasions arise. He is also expected to call promptly upon a hostess who has entertained him at a dinner or a dance. He does not call again unless invited to do so by the hostess.

Here again, etiquette is tempered with common sense. If Mrs. Blank invites Mr. Brown to dinner, and Mr. Brown has long been a friend of the family, it is not at all necessary for him to make a "duty" call and leave his card. But if this happens to be the first time Mr. Brown is dining at the home of Mrs. Blank, courtesy demands that he make the call. It is expected of the well-bred man.

Men who are invited to balls, dinners, theatre parties, garden parties, etc., and do not accept must not only send their regrets to the hostess but must, within ten days or two weeks, call and leave their cards.

Etiquette pardons the social sins of the man who is in business and whose time is not his own. But not even the most generous etiquette pardons the man who accepts invitations to dinners, parties, dances, and luncheons without once during the season visiting those homes where he was entertained. There may be an excuse for social carelessness when one's time is busily occupied; but what excuse can there be for lack of ordinary courtesy and civility?

The married man escapes many social duties by having his wife make the calls of obligation. But calls of inquiry upon a friend who is ill, or of condolence upon a friend who has suffered a bereavement, are best made in person.

Dahlia's Whatnots

The papers say that Miss Agnes McPhail is to run in the by-election in the constituency left vacant by the death of that honored son of Athelstan, Rev. Walter Brown. We would gladly wish her success if it were not for the fear that, right in the House of Commons she might criticise some war-weary leader and bring down upon herself the pains and penalties enumerated in that Defence Act—I can't recall the precise name. You remember how impartially she used to let fly those peace-shattering shafts of censure; one minute Mr. King caught it, the next it was Dr. Manion. But really it seems a bit difficult to know just where democratic free speech ends and injurious criticism begins. Just last week in England Mr. Churchill uttered a sharp warning against "war hysteria witch-hunting" against Fifth Columnists and making crimes out of silly twaddle, as Fascism does.

—o—

The Halifax Herald makes a comment to the effect that, as Canadians watch their children enjoying their holidays without any threat of evacuation, they should remember that this is due to Great Britain, "last citadel of democracy in Europe." As I have said before, certain things which seem objectionable to us in the attitude of "our Hebrew brethren" are probably the direct result of persecution acting upon successive generations of Jewish childhood throughout many centuries. But a modern writer includes both Hebrew and Christian children in the thought that happy childhood is the saddest casualty of the war, and that millions of children grown to adulthood will look back on childhood as a time of terror, a time of separation from their parents, either for their own safety, or because the parents were killed. Some of them will remember fleeing from their burning homes and tramping weary miles; some will remember hunger; some a cruel enemy that left them handicapped for life. And how indelible childish impressions are!

It is heartening to read our government leaders' speeches in which they tell us of splendid progress made in defensive measures and of their belief in their ability to speed up preparations still more. I take courage from such statements even in the face of the cynic's jeers. He says this "blowing" reminds him of the man who got first prize for his carrots at the local fair, but modestly prophesied: "That's nothing to what they'll be next year."

—o—

It did seem a shame to you, did it not, that Britain must agree to close the Burma road, by which war supplies have been carried to China and especially since Japan seems to favor the German-Italian axis so strongly. Perhaps J. B. Priestley, British writer of novels and plays and radio broadcaster, puts the matter in the commonsense light. Referring to American criticism of the Burma policy, he says: "People who are not prepared yet to fight for anything anywhere, should not rebuke others because they cannot undertake to fight for everything everywhere."

—o—

A friend of mine, a member of a United Church in a city in Ontario, tells me that his church is left open for several hours every day to permit people to enter and pray. On Wednesday, during the noon lull in business, a prayer meeting is conducted by the minister. The hour is one that attracts the employees of a large industrial plant in the neighbourhood. But somebody disapproves because the leader of the meeting has seen fit to pray for Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin—not for their temporal success, of course, but for their spiritual regeneration. My friend upholds his pastor's attitude, and questions whether Christians in general do not need to change theirs in this regard. He argues that if Nebuchadnezzar, gone mad with pride and ambition so that he was reduced to living with the beasts of the field, became a changed man, then the case of the dictators' souls may not be absolutely hopeless. If our puny petitions can avail aught towards the stupendous miracle of their conversion, let us begin, as the Bible exhorts us, to pray for our enemies. The successful evacuation of Dunquerque was considered by thoughtful men to be an answer to that Empire Sunday of Prayer, but men—yes, and women—had to man the medley of craft that did the rescue work. So now, if we pray for Hitler and the R.A.F. bombs keep hitting military objectives, perhaps the stony ground will be broken up and the persecutor become penitent like Saul of Tarsus.

What's in the Wind

by PAULA DICKS

Welcome to Canada!

We listen for the coming
Of their feet upon our shore,
These little "children guests" of ours
Escaping from the war.
For One, who lived upon this earth,
Pronounced a great decree:
"He who receiveth one of these Himself receiveth Me."
He said: "Forbid them not to come.
Such is the Kingdom's grace.
Who looks into a child's pure eyes
Beholds the Saviour's face."

—By Dorothy Sproule, in Montreal Star.

The more one considers the migration of children on the vast scale proposed to be undertaken, the more apparent it becomes that each step should be carefully considered, especially from the individual's point of view.

In this community there are but few homes wherein the burden of even one extra child can be accepted without reservation. Question 21 on the Pink Form, "Offer of Home for Refugee Child During Duration of War," is: "Are you offering a free home?"

There are some worthy citizens who have been active in the matter of child refugees who state that all those expecting to be paid for the care of children should be disregarded at once.

I am informed on good authority, however, that this is definitely NOT the attitude of the British people. They quite rightly feel that there should be no agitation to induce people of Canada to undertake obligations of this kind, without any prospect of being reimbursed.

The first consideration in this attitude is the welfare of the child itself. Its position in the community will not be very desirable on the basis of a complete indigent. With the best humanitarian intentions it will be impossible to fully protect a strange child from the resentment of other children. All experienced people know that it takes the greatest tact to introduce a child on the "poor relation" basis into a home where there are other children.

This very human reaction will certainly be magnified when the object is a non-relative and a foreigner.

It is futile to hope that refugee children will be absorbed into wealthy homes. Rich women don't want to be bothered with the care of children. Moreover, only 7 per cent of the people of Canada are in receipt of incomes over $3,000 a year. Therefore, the only available refuge to be found is in the homes of the poor where "there is always room for one more," as the saying goes.

But just to complicate matters for the efficient social workers and the well-meaning millionaires who are on the National Committee on Refugees, there is a genuine wish on the part of the parents of British children that they be cared for in homes where the ordinary conditions of life prevail. Where they will experience the ups and downs and bumps of real life.

But is there any reason why the hard-working mothers of Canadian families who are always short of money, should be expected to deny themselves and their own children still further by caring for evacuee children without recompense?

Bless their hearts, nearly all of them want to do this. But it is the utmost impertinence to suggest that it is in some way unpatriotic for these women to admit that they need a little help towards providing the groceries.

A Sound Policy Needed

Now, why is there all this hush, hush ,and beating around the bush about admitting what is the obvious truth?

We have hundreds of well-equipped homes in this district, directed by possibly the best cooks in the world. All that is needed is the assurance that funds to provide necessities are forthcoming along with the guests.

Money Can be Found

It has been suggested to me by a British woman greatly interested for many months in the problem of evacuating children to America, that millions of dollars have been volunteered to provide funds for exactly this purpose.

What I would like to see and what the women of Canada and especially the Women's Institutes should demand is a real effort to meet the situation and put the whole scheme on a business footing.

Athelstan

The members of the Athelstan Presbyterian Women's Missionary Auxiliary held a very successful tea on Wednesday afternoon. Plans had been made for serving tea on the manse lawn, but a high wind made sitting outside rather unpleasant, so the tea tables were set up in the house. The sum of $14 was realized.

Y.P.S. Picnic

The Young People's Society held their annual picnic on Saturday afternoon. The picnic this year took the form of a hike, with Log Lodge their destination. Boating and swimming were the favorite pastimes.

Rev. Jean Faurot of Montreal occupied the pulpit here and in Elgin Presbyterian Church on Sunday. It was announced that Rev. W. O. Rhoad of Kensington, P.E.I., will have charge of next Sunday's service.

Mrs. John Shearer entered Montreal General Hospital on Saturday for observation and treatment. Her many friends hope the change may be beneficial, as Mrs. Shearer has been in poor health for the past year, with a complication of troubles.

Mrs. Allan Anderson spent Wednesday the guest of Mrs. Gardner.

Mrs. E. A. McHardy and Mrs. Gardner are spending a few days at Port Lewis.

CRITIC AT THE HEARTH

As a schoolgirl, Mrs. Peter Cazalet was more helpful than most daughters who criticise their parents.

Her father, P. G. Wodehouse, used to try out his jokes on her. If she said "Not funny," he thought again.

One of his earlier books had a dedication acknowledging her assistance. It ran like this: "To my daughter Leonora, without whose constant aid and encouragement this book would have been written in half the time."

Chicken Dinners ...

Nothing is more delicious than a well cooked chicken, whether broiled, fried or roasted. Proper cooking is essential, of course, to retain every bit of the delicate flavour of the chicken. A moderate cooking temperature for broiling, frying and for roasting is the secret of tender, juicy chicken, beautifully browned.

The flavours of bacon fat and butter are particularly good comparisons of chicken, and are well worth combining.

Here are the cooking methods suggested by the Consumer Section, Marketing Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture:

Broiled Chicken

Select broilers weighing 1½ to 2 pounds. Split down the back, clean and sprinkle with salt. Pre-heat broiler rack for 10 minutes. Place broilers, skin side down, on greased broiler rack, about 3 inches from heat. Brush with butter and broil 15 to 20 minutes. Turn. Brush skin side with butter and broil about 15 minutes longer, or until birds are nicely browned and tender.

Oven-Cooked Broilers

Select broilers weighing 1½ to 2 pounds. Split down the back, clean and sprinkle with salt. Place on a greased rack in shallow baking pan, skin side down. Brush with butter and cook in a moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit, for 25 minutes. Turn and cook for 20 minutes, or until birds are tender. The birds may then be brushed with butter and placed under the broiler flame for 5 minutes to improve the colour and flavour.

Fried Chicken

Select plump, young chickens weighing 2 to 3 pounds. Disjoint and cut birds into portions for serving. Dry and roll in flour seasoned with salt and pepper. Use a heavy frying pan with ⅛ inch or more melted butter or bacon fat. Add chicken and brown well on both sides, using moderate heat. Cover pan and finish frying chicken over low heat until tender. This will take 25 to 30 minutes.

Note: If top stove space is limited, after chicken is browned on both sides, the cooking may be completed in oven at 325 degrees F., using covered pan and allowing approximately 45 minutes in the oven.

Roast Chicken

Select A or B. Milkfed chickens. Clean. Sprinkle inside of chicken with salt and fill loosely with well seasoned stuffing. Truss bird and place in uncovered roasting pan, breast side down. Roast in moderately slow oven, 325 degrees F., allowing 30 to 35 minutes per pound, dressed weight. A 5-pound chicken requires approximately 2½ hrs. Baste frequently during roasting with melted fat. Turn bird on back to brown uniformly during the last hour of roasting.

Note: Chickens may be satisfactorily roasted at 350 degrees F., allowing 20 to 25 minutes per pound, dressed weight, or approximately 1¾ hours for a 5-pound chicken. If roasting at this temperature, the birds should be basted more frequently. It is found that the shrinkage is slightly greater with the higher temperature.

Notice of motion was given by Coun. Tannahill, at the regular monthly meeting of the Godmanchester Council on Monday morning, that a by-law be prepared and brought in at the regular session in September, levying a rate of assessJury Fund, $12; Shawinigan Water perties within the limits of the municipality, to defray the administration expenses for the next current year.

The sale of brush in the Township of Godmanchester will take place on Friday, August 16th, at 10 a.m. at the intersection of the Connaught Road and No. 9 sideroad.

Romeo Brossoit came before the board in regards to his bill for work done on the Cowan Creek. He was advised that the council could do nothing in the matter as the collection roll had been homologated.

W. L. Carr was appointed auditor for the books of the municipality. Joseph Chartrand, special officer on the Hall Creek, was ordered to complete his work on the above water course and bring in his report at the regular meeting in September.

A letter from the New York Central Railway was read, acknowledging receipt of a resolution from the Council with reference to the cutting of brush along the right-of-way.

A letter from David D. Clerk, chief Drainage Engineer, Quebec, was read stating that his department would not send an engineer to take the levels of the Hall Creek.

The collection roll on the Joseph Carr discharge was homologated without amendments.

The following bills were ordered paid: Joseph Viau, $18; Building & ment on all taxable, assessable pro- & Power Co., $2.50.

Courage and Brave ...

remembering the last war and others, with great national crisis behind us, and our experience of our own smaller personal ones, can and do help to steady and encourage some who might find it more difficult to keep brave hearts and faces without us, and the plainly obvious fact that we have come through these things and have still a smile for present dangers counts. Courage is sometimes as infectious as panic. That being so, to go away just now would seem to me too like desertion. Most of us are not taking even the usual summer holiday. We are staying as the Government wishes us to do, in our own place meantime. I do not think there will be any need to leave it because of a German invasion. Anyhow I shall stay in my ain Countree till she gets through with this War.

It is good you have the two girls with you, and your grandson will be a huge interest. What you say about his changes of expression reminds me of similar things on other baby faces. They make you wonder at times what unearthly knowledge they possess just at first before it slips away from them.

I am sorry to hear of Mrs. Cairns not being so well. When Nellie and I began to correspond some fifty years ago, we had notions of each showing the other her Country but that is likely to remain a dream. I do not hear from her frequently.

Certainly those French-Canadian Doctors had some grounds for their views in connection with some portion of the French people; but those who are rallying round General de Gaule, and the Admiral who made that lightning dash through the night to Paris when he heard of the Armistice, destroyed important secret plans and got out of the City just before the Germans went in, got across France to Marseilles in all and every kind of vehicle including a fire engine, found a ship and manned it to Gibraltar and then got the loan of a plane to fly over here, are of a different calibre. That Admiral deserved the command of the remains of the French Fleet in our hands and its Air force manned by men who flew their machines over just in time. De Gaule's army is being recruited by men who have taken great risks to reach it; and we are still broadcasting The Marseillaise with the Allied National Anthem on Sunday evenings. There seems little doubt that traitors had a good deal to do with the collapse; but France will rise again, despite its present Government and the Hitlerite Germans.

By the way talking of traitors, you might see a tale in one of our papers about some Belgian wounded who were taken into one of our hospitals and into a ward named The Leopold Ward. When they saw the name, with one accord they spat on the floor.

My little Doctor has won back to Britain with wounded but his wife told me he had a narrow escape of becoming a prisoner in Germany. They were left behind to take the wounded of the retreating army and they knew if they could not get out the wounded it meant being taken. They were surrounded and thought they were done for when by some miracle the Germans chose another road and they got away. He had a Short Leave 48 hours recently but naturally the brief time was for his immediate family. His brother's health has given away and he is away for a rest with a Locum in his place at present. I am glad Dr. Peter escaped with his colleagues and the wounded. It is deplorable to think of any of our men in the hands of these brutes.

We are having a spell of very wet weather just now after a long dry time, and it is interfering with my fruit gathering and I fear spoiling some which is ripe but cannot be gathered on account of the wet.

I have improved in general health considerably recently, and my arm is a little more useful but I am still typing with one hand.

From one of the bundles of your interesting papers for which I have to thank you, an envelope containing some seeds dropped out. There was no indication of what they are but I guessed they might be Canadian Maple. Is that so?

I must finish and get my tea and I feel that I have not sufficiently thanked Mabel and you. Believe me your kindness is greatly appreciated, and I am sorry to say no thank you and miss the opportunity of meeting you all but I have told you how it looks to me.

I hope you all keep well and that John Travis Dancy thrives apace.

With all kindest regards and remembrances and thanks,

Yours ever,

M. W. Fairlie

FIBREEN SILO

THOUSANDS of farmers have discovered that feeding ensilage, stored in a FIBREEN SILO, is one sure route to bigger dairy and beef cattle profits. You can build your own quickly and easily. The cost: Less than $21.95 for a 21-ton silo, larger sizes at proportionate low cost. Each succeeding year it is only necessary to replace the inexpensive Fibreen lining and your silo is as good as new. A FIBREEN SILO supplements a permanent silo . . . is indispensable if you have no silo. All you need is Treated Fibreen (as the lining) and snow fencing or corn cribbing. Treated Fibreen was specially developed to resist the bacteria and fungi present in all ensilage. This exclusive treatment, its toughness, strength and water-proofness makes it an outstanding success. A FIBREEN SILO fits into present conditions because feeding authorities state 7 acres of ensilage equal 10 acres of stalks. Over 200,000 FIBREEN SILOS used successfully in the past few years. Hundreds of testimonial letters have been received from satisfied farmers. Copies sent upon request.

American Tourists Know the Facts

"We think that the British will finally win the war but how and when she will do it we do not know," was the sum and substance of the opinion of a New York City resident to the Gleaner the other day. He decried the common rumor that many Americans were not coming to Canada because of fear of running into difficulties by entering a country at war. "Most of my friends in New York City are of the opinion that there is no danger entering Canada whatever and I do not think this is keeping them from coming over." He had heard that the number of viisting Americans was not as large as last year and by way of illustration pointed out that while crossing the ferry at Valleyfield he learned that they had enjoyed only about half of the volume of business they enjoyed last year from American tourists.

Sgt. Cleland Had Thrilling Experiences

Huntingdon Academy Graduate Has Enviable Record With R.A.F.— Bullets Came Close

The following is a letter received a few days ago by Mrs. Charles Cleland, formerly of Hemmingford and Huntingdon, from her son, Coburn, a graduate at Huntingdon Academy in 1935. Coburn has been with the R.A.F. since the beginning of the hostilities in September and was recently promoted to the rank of Sergeant.

The letter reads as follows:

No. 2 School of A.C.
B. Flight,
R.A.F. Andover,
Hants, Eng.

Mrs. Charles Cleland,
2 Oldfield Ave.,
Montreal, Que.

Dear Mother and All,

As you can see by the above address I am back at Andover once more. I have been made a Sergeant and I am an instructor at the school at Army Corporation. I go up with pupils who are passing and see if they are fit for operational work. I have to give them any tips I have had in my experiences. So I am no longer with the 59th squad. There are only three of us alive of the 99th, so it is all new people in that squadron again. My pilot is here doing the same work with new pilots.

We have had some thrilling experiences together and many narrow escapes but Lady Luck seemed to be travelling with us. By the way, I made one more reconnaissance flight than anyone else in the 59th. Bullets came within three inches of me. One day we had to land without wheels and another time our oil tanks were shot and one engine stopped. We had to fly 100 miles back to our base with one engine. What a life anyway! But I will be taking it easier for a while. So long and with love,

COBURN.

P.S. I could tell you lots more but we cannot do so. Will tell you after the war is over.

War Minister ...

Defence Minister have already received military training within the previous 12 months at least equivalent to that to be given men being called up; members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, provincial and city police; members of city fire brigades; officers of all penitentiaries, prisoners, asylums or mental hospitals.

The Government, said Mr. Gardiner, intends to recognize an Order-in-Council of 1873, which granted certain privileges in regard to military service to Mennonites and an Order-in-Council of 1898, which gave certain privileges to Doukhobors.

List Required.

Every employer of labor will be required to furnish the national registration board for his district with a list of all single male employes between the ages of 21 and 45, the Minister said.

"Any industry shall be entitled to submit a plan to the district registrar for the calling up for military training, within the period of one year, of its single male employes fro mthe ages of 21 to 45," Mr. Gardiner added.

Any plan submitted, however, must provide for the training of all employes within the year but can be adjusted by the industries in such a way as to enable all to be trained within the year in a manner which will interfer in the least possible way with the conduct of business.

Men subject to call from any industry will be divided into equal groups so the same number of men will come up for training on each call.

Mr. Gardiner said the district registrar, on receiving a call-up plan from any industry, would submit it to the board and the board would fix a date for hearing a representative of the industry and either approve, reject or vary the plan.

A list of the main seasonal industries within the jurisdiction of each board will be submitted by the Department, giving also the periods "during which it is inadvisable to call men for training from such industries."

"It shall be the duty of the board so to adjust the call of men within its jurisdiction to interfere as little as possible with the conduct of seasonal industry," said Mr. Gardiner.

Postponement Privilege

The board also will have the right, in the case of a college or university student, to postpone his call until the end of the scholastic year, provided the college or university has a system of compulsory military training.

"All men called up will have to pass the same type of examination as they would have to pas sif volunteering for service in the Non-Permanent Militia," Mr. Gardiner said. "Medical examiners will place all persons examined in their proper medical categories in their proper medical categories in accordance with the practice of the Defence Department and it is intended to call up all men in the category of C-1 and above that."

Each man called will receive a notice in writing saying where to submit to medical examination and where to go for training.

"Several penalties will be provided for failure of any person called up to submit to medical examination and to take his period of training if medically fit," added the Minister.

"Severe penalties will be provided for the medical man who fails to make a proper examination or fails to report the true facts of the state of health of the individual."

All employers will be required, under penalty, to put the employe back in his job at the conclusion of his period of training, or into a job the equivalent of the one he had.

Obituary

The late Mrs. Ella Metcalfe

The death of Mrs. Ella Metcalfe took place at her home at Covey Hill early Monday morning, July 29th, in the 87th year of her age. She had enjoyed remarkable health up till last winter, when she was stricken with paralysis while on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Grew of Mooer's, N.Y. From this she rallied, and became quite active again, always having been very energetic and industrious. But on the Friday preceding her death she suffered another stroke and failed to rally in spite of attentive care.

On Wednesday afternoon the funeral service was conducted at her residence by her pastor, Mr. J. G. Troyer, who had visited her during her last hours, and was attended by friends and neighbours gathered to express their esteem for one who had spent a long and useful life in their midst. The hymns chosen were, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and "What A Friend We Have in Jesus."

The pall-bearers were F. Sweet, M. Houle, G. Hebert and Geo. Moore.

Among the friends present were the Misses Inez, Pearl, and Ida Grew and Mr. Jesse Grew of Mooers, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. Carl Adams and son Russell, Mrs. Russell Saunders of Baldwinsville, Mass.

The floral tributes were very beautiful. Interment was made in the cemetery at Wesley United Church where her husband, who died twenty years ago, and their infant daughter, are buried.

Mrs. Metcalfe was one of four sisters and two brothers, who reached adult life, children of the late John and Margaret Buchanan, who came to Covey Hill from the North of Ireland, and who, in the midst of pioneering trials, saw their several other children hurried into early graves by scarlet fever.

The deceased is survived by one son, Ernest at home, and by one sister, Mrs. Grew of Mooers, N.Y.

Mrs. Metcalfe was a woman of boundless energy, and her helpful spirit made her a valued worker in the Presbyterian W.M.S. Her kind heart and sympathetic attitude retained the affection of younger people who enjoyed visiting her. She possessed a breadth of mind not always found in people of her generation, and the mutual helpfulness and goodwill which existed between herself and her French-Canadian neighbors was pleasant to observe.

The late Miss Clara Lacasse

On Friday, July 26th, at Hemmingford, P.Q., their passed ter of Oliver Lacasse in her 26th year. The funeral was held Saturday morning at the Parish church. ANNUAL DRIVE OF GARDEN CLUB

The annual drive of the Garden Club was held on Wednesday last, when five cars of members and friends went to the lovely summer home of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Birks at St. Bruno. It was a most enjoyable afternoon spent in viewing the many varieties of beautiful flowers and the well-planned vegetable gardens. The stately trees all through the grounds added greatly to the beauty of the scene. Another spot of keen interest was a rock garden on a neighbouring estate.

Mr. and Mrs. Birks entertained at tea in the living room of their most inviting home, "Yorkshire House." A vote of thanks was tendered to the host and hostess, after which the party left for their homes at Ormstown.

CAR HITS DITCH NEAR ATHELSTAN

When a car containing seven residents of Montreal went off the Huntingdon-Athelstan road into the ditch on Saturday afternoon the occupants escaped with minor cuts and bruises. The party was proceeding to Powerscourt and their car was going around a turn on the road near the farm of Archie Hayter when it careened into the ditch. Obituary

The late Miss J. A. O'Sullivan

A funeral service for Miss Julia Ann O'Sullivan, a school teacher in Fort Covington, N.Y., for the past 29 years, who died at her home there Sunday afternoon, was held in St. Mary's Church, Fort Covington today at 9.30 a.m., with Rev. J. Lauzon officiating. Burial was made in the family plot at St. Chrysostome, Que.

Born in St. Chrysostome, the daughter of John O'Sullivan, Miss O'Sullivan was educated at Lachine Convent, and remained for two years afterwards as a postulante, but ill health made it necessary for her to retire. For 26 years she taught in the public schools of Canada before moving to Fort Covington to work. During her years there she was a great help to the community as a translator, reading and writing letters in French and English for the people.

She is survived by four brothers, Charles and Albert, of Montreal; William, of Chicago; and Daniel, of Cincinnati; and six sisters, Mrs. Patrick O'Connor, of Steven's Point, Wis.; Mrs. William Cross, of Schenectady, N.Y.; Mrs. Martin Brennan, of Sarsfields, Ont.; Miss Blanche O'Sullivan, of Edmundston, Alta.; Mrs. Alexis Quenneville, of Glenelm, Que.; and Sister Mary Francesca, of St. Joseph's Convent, Sudbury, Ont.

EXPRESSES THANKS FOR ASSISTANCE

Dr. J. E. Lattimer, Professor of Agricultural Economics at Macdonald College, who recently conducted a survey in this district regarding matters pertaining to the price of milk, has the following to say of his visit:

"I wish through your columns to thank the farmers of Huntingdon and surrounding area for their assistance in the recent survey of the cost of fluid milk production. At a time when the weather was bad for making hay and every hour valuable this help really signified more than at a less busy time and was for this reason more warmly appreciated. In this district famous for good cattle, and good crops, the efficiency of milk production will compare very favorably with other areas. At a later date when results are more fully analyzed I would like the opportunity to discuss this point in more detail. In the meantime it is possible to say that the problem is not one of production but rather one of marketing as many shippers are limited to such a small allowance per day that they must seek other markets for a considerable proportion of their product. This adds to costs. Costs are a necessary item of information for those responsible for regulating prices. I am pleased to take this opportunity of expressing appreciation of the co-operation of the farmers visited in providing the information necessary for the well-being of this type of dairy farming."

HEARTS WALKING

Mrs. Harry Pugh Smith

CHAPTER V

Jim was staring down into her lovely pointed face and it seemed to be wiped quite free of sophistication and affection. He had not until then realized that she was very young, much younger than her pose.

"You forgive me?"

"Certainly!"

"Certainly!"

Again she laid her hand on his arm and he learned that ecstacy can cut like a knife. "Will you dance the next dance with me?" she asked softly.

"I'll be delighted," he stammered, "only I've been you I'm an awful dub on the dance floor. I'm no lady's man."

"Perhaps that's why I like you so much."

Nothing in his experience had prepared him for the rapturous emotions which surged through him at the feel of her supple fragrant body. Once when he bent his head a little bronze curl brushed his cheek thrilling him from head to foot. He had a wayward desire to press his lips to the seductive hollow in the slender ivory column of her throat.

"You dance beautifully," murmured Miss Sanders when the music ended.

He still did not trust himself to speak. Howard Leigh was coming toward them with a scowl and still Jim said nothing.

"I'll see you in the morning," she asked, "for our first lesson?"

Jim swallowed hard. "Yes," he said unsteadily, although he knew that the first lesson was behind them.

It was not apparent on the surface that Janet Phillips no longer occupied the same position in respect to her old crowd which she had once held. She did not suffer for lack of partners at the dance that night.

Gordon did not look happy. In spite of his mother's persuasions, Gordon had never liked Priscilla.

Even when it was her whim to be amiable, he never knew what minute she might turn upon him. Janet understood the distressed pucker between his eyes and why in spite of himself he glanced longingly at her from across Priscilla's sleek blond head. When some one cut in on him he could not resist the temptation to tap Janet's partner on the shoulder.

"Hello, Gordon," said Janet.

Gordon drew a breath of relief as his arms closed about her. It was as if he had escaped unpredictable perils and rediscovered security.

Involuntarily Janet's voice took on a soothing note.

"You musn't feel conscience-stricken about me, Gordon," she said gently.

"I feel terrible about letting you down!" cried Gordon in a choked voice.

Janet still found herself in the anomalous position of defending him from herself. "It isn't as though we were ever formally engaged, or as if you had jilted me at the altar," she said kindly.

"I wouldn't have hurt you for the world. My one consolation is that you're too good for me," he said with a mournful smile.

It was Janet's cue to bolster up his self-esteem by a denial of his statement, but she had a sudden vision of truth. "Yes," she said, "I am."

She wished some one would cut in, but her friends were too tactful. She muttered an excuse when the music stopped and escaped to the dressing room.

She arrived at the ballroom to find that her partner for the next dance had looked everywhere for her before retiring in dudgeon to the bar. Had Janet followed her inclination she would have hunted up Jim and asked him to take her home. She felt sure he was bored to death and eager for an excuse to go, but at that moment a couple drifted by her on the dance floor. Janet could scarcely believe her eyes. From the rapt expression on his rugged face, her brother with Miss Helen Sanders in his arms was anything but bored.

"Oh, no!" cried Janet.

She did not realize she had spoken aloud until some one who had come up behind her addressed her. "Shall we finish this dance?"

She turned sharply. Tony Ryan stood at her elbow. Evidently he had only that moment arrived. She intended to make an excuse for not dancing with him. However, he gave her no chance to do anything of the kind. He merely put out his arms and danced off with her as if he believed any girl would feel flattered to be singled out by the famous Tony Ryan.

Janet was glad when the music ended, glad when Priscilla came skating across the room to assert her prior claim to the visiting celebrity, glad when everybody crowded around Tony Ryan so that Janet was edged to the extreme rim of the group and finally extricated from it entirely by Ted Hughes with whom she had the next dance.

The last dance of the evening was the only one in which no cut-ins were allowed. Every one was supposed to dance it with his escort, but Janet had not seen Jim for an hour. She had a notion he was lurking outside with a cigarette. However, she made a circuit of the veranda without locating him. She was perched on the porch railing staring somberly at the setting moon, when Tony Ryan again came up behind her.

"Want to dance?" he asked.

"No," said Janet without turning her head.

There was an interval of silence which Janet found trying. In the end it was she who broke what had begun to seem a contest between their wills.

"It must be nice to return to the old home town in the role of conquering hero," she remarked in a light, disdainful voice.

He laughed. "It's a complex, I suppose. I could never convince myself that I had outgrown Shanty Town until I came back here and had the seal of approval put upon me by the elite of Bay City. Queer, isn't it?"

She gave his a grudging glance. "That at least needn't worry you any longer."

"I always get what I go after," he said quietly.

"Modest, aren't you?"

"No, just sure of myself. There's a difference."

"Who am I to take exception to your pride in your accomplishments," she inquired bitterly. "You are on your way up, I am on my way out."

He stared at her curiously. "Yes?"

She shrugged her shoulders. "As you may know, a generation ago my family was prominent locally. Now my mother works in a store and so shall I when I finish my course in interior decorating."

He was studying the dead end of his cigarette. "If you're an expert on interior decorating, I might have a job for you.

"A job?"

"Perhaps you aren't interested in jobs."

"Oh, yes," said Janet with a hostile smile, "I'm interested in any chance to earn money. It's so important to make money. Nothing else matters."

"I've bought the old Radcliffe mansion."

"My grandfather's house!"

"I signed the papers a couple of hours ago."

"But," cried Janet breathlessly, "it's dreadfully run down. That's why Mother let the property go practically for back taxes. We couldn't afford to live there and no one would rent it. People don't care for those huge, old-fashioned places any more."

"I do," said Tony Ryan. "It's like this," he explained. "When I was a ragged alley rat I promised myself that some day I'd buy the best of everything. At that time the old Radcliffe mansion represented my idea of the most elegant thing of its kind."

"It broke Mother's heart to give up the place," said Janet icily. "It's one of the few times I ever saw her cry. Since then I've gone blocks out of my way not to pass the house. It isn't pleasant to be reminded that the glories of your past are past."

"If it would be painful, forget it."

"Don't be ridiculous," said Janet. "Paupers cannot afford sentiment."

"That's settled then? Shall we fix a day to go out and look things over? Tomorrow?"

"If you like."

"I'll pick you up at two at your home."

She gave him a curious glance. "Won't you rattle around like a marble, alone in that huge place?"

He shook his head. "Of course I shan't live there long alone," he said.

She stared. "You're going to be married?"

"Naturally," he said, "one can't select a wife as quickly as a house."

"You haven't selected one yet!" cried Janet in a dismayed voice.

He grinned. "All I know is that she'll have to be out of the top drawer."

Janet decided she hated him. "Locally you'll find Priscilla Leigh our highest priced article," she remarked disdainfully.

"So she's given me to understand," said Tony Ryan.

So far as Berenice and Bill Carter were concerned, the party at Lou Fletcher's that same evening was not a success. They ran the radio and danced and made a great deal of noise. The people in the adjoining apartment knocked on the wall, but no one paid any attention. They were a quiet middle-aged couple and did not belong to "The Bunch," as Berenice's friends called themselves.

The Sheltons were middle-aged too. "But we don't let it get us down!" cried May, shrieking with laughter when Guy draped a tapestry from the wall about his shoulders and pretended to be a bullfighter in action.

Guy was screemingly funny, or so Berenice thought, but Bill sat in the corner and sulked just as she had expected him to do.

She went over to Bill. "Ready to go?"

"What do you think?" he asked.

He did not trouble himself to tell the Fletchers he had enjoyed the party, Berenice seethed with anger.

"I hope you're satisfied," she said when they were alone in their own apartment.

Bill stalked into the dressing room and began to hunt for his pyjamas. "If I refuse to go to their darned parties, you're sore. If I give in and go, you're sore. It's got so it's hell around here any way you take it."

"If you could manage" cried Berenice in a choked voice, "we'd never have any friends."

Bill let down the in-a-door bed with an angry thud. "Can't you see that this sort of thing is playing the devil with us?" he asked.

When Bill's voice quivered like that, the hard core of defiance in Berenice's heart gave way. She was never able to resist his tenderness.

"If I weren't crazy about you I wouldn't care what you did," he said unsteadily.

"I know," whispered Berenice.

"I had something to tell you when I came home," said Bill, "only you weren't in a receptive humor."

They were sitting on the edge of of the bed. He still had his arm about her and Berenice's head was cuddled against his shoulder.

CHAPTER VI

"I don't know why we ever fight," she sighed. "What did you have to tell me?"

"The boss had a talk with me today."

"Oh! cried Berenice radiantly. "You've got the raise at last. Now we can have a car like every one else."

Bill swallowed hard. "No," he said, "I didn't get a raise. They're cutting salaries again. We'll have to find some way to get by on ten dollars less a week."

She stiffened and drew away from his embrace to stare at him. "You mean we'll have to move? Back to cheap housekeeping rooms without a bath or anything?"

"If you ask me," said Bill in a grim voice, "we were better off there than here, and a darned sight happier."

"When you preach you make me so mad I could die!" cried Berenice in a stifled voice.

"You don't sweeten my disposition any," remarked Bill savagely, snapping off the light.

Driving out to the club in his battered flivver early the next morning, Jim Phillips, after a nearly sleepless night, had arrived at a decision, not a happy one, but one from which he was determined not to swerve. He had made a complete idiot of himself the night before, he did not propose to repeat the performance.

By eevry standard on which he had painstakingly built his life he could not afford to fall in love with Miss Helen Sanders.

He succeeded so well in convincing himself that Miss Helen Sanders was merely a shooting star which had flashed across his horizon only to disappear, he considered it extremely unlikely that she would keep her promise and appear for the promised golf lesson.

Nevertheless, knocking golf balls idly against the side of the caddy house, he kept his eyes steadily on the drive leading down to the gates and when the Leighs' scarlet and white coupé turned in at the club entrance Jim's heart gave an agonized bound.

"H'lo!" murmured Miss Sanders, bringing the machine to an abrupt stop with a scream of brakes and a flurry of gravel.

"Hello," said Jim in a voice that did not sound like his.

She was alone in the coupé except for the elaborate bag of golf clubs which Howard had procured for her the day before. She was wearing a backless blue silk blouse with a halter neck tied under her chin and a pair of blue shorts. A blue silk bandana handkerchief caught her bronze hair back from her face. Her slender golden limbs were bare. She looked disgruntled and sleepy and she smothered a yawn as she climbed out of the car.

"Of all ungodly hours to get up!" she complained. "I left everybody else fast asleep."

"That's why I didn't expect you," said Jim.

She gave him a sultry glance. "Maybe that's why I came, to prove you can't be right all the time."

Jim led the way without comment toward the big canvas curtain tacked up at the end of a wire enclosure behind the caddy house.

"You're a long way from being ready to hit a ball yet," said Jim. "Let's see you swing. No, no! that isn't a baseball bat. Hold it this way, and for heaven's sake cut out the débutante slouch and get some backbone into your stance."

Jim ignored the back glances she gave him from time to time. He went on quietly showing her where she was doing everything wrong. It was tedious work.

He had to confess that she had proved an apt pupil. She back-slid occasionally, but in the main she seemed to have acquired a surprising grasp of the essentials in the time allotted.

"All right," said Jim when the hour was up, "that will do for today."

She flexed the muscles of her left arm. "I seem to be sorer than I realized."

Jim grinned. "Wait till tomorrow. You'll know all about Charley-horses then."

Jasper National Park is Great in Area and Superb For Its Mountain Scenery

Was Originally Outpost For Northwest Company—Recreation Facilities, Magnificent Motor Drives and Jasper Lodge Have Made it a Mecca For Tourists

General Description:

Situated in Western Alberta, Jasper National Park is the largest national park in North America, containing an area of 4,200 square miles of superb mountain scenery. The park area extends along the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains and within its southern portion lies part of the vast Columbia Icefield, a remnant of the great Ice Age 150 square miles in extent. From this immense icecap, lying hundreds of feet thick on the shoulders of towering mountains, issue numerous glaciers that give birth to rivers the waters of which eventually reach the Pacific, Arctic and Atlantic Oceans.

Showspot of the new interpark highway, at the very tongue of the Athabaska Glacier at Columbia Icefield, is within the borders of Jasper National Park, the portion of the highway from Jasper to this point having been accessible to motoring tourists since the summer of 1938, two years prior to the official opening this year.

Mountains in Jasper National Park, a veritable sea of peaks, many of which lift their snowcaps more than 11,000 feet above sea-level, consist of a series of roughly parallel ranges running from the southeast to the northwest. The remarkable folds, upheavals and faults in the rock strata are visible everywhere in the park, as are the evidences of erosion caused mainly by the recession of glaciers which at one time filled the valleys.

Cutting through these ranges from the south to the northeast corner of the park is the broad valley of the Athabaska River, which is fed by its main tributaries, Sunwapta, Whirlpool, Miette, Maligne, Snaring, Rocky and Snake Indian Rivers.

History:

Jasper National Park is historic ground. More stirring scenes in the upbuilding of Canada have been staged in it than in any other portion of the Rockies. Among those who have left the narrative of their experiences within its boundaries are David Thompson, the fur trader, and one of the greatest geographers of the world; Gabriel Franchere, Ross Cox and Alexander Ross, Participants of John Jacob Astor's attempt to monopolize the fur trade; David Douglas, the unwearied botanist who met an untimely death in the Sandwich Islands; Edward Ermatinger, the young trader; Pierre Jean De Smet, the ubiquitous Belgian missionary to the Indians; Sir James Hector, the explorer, most accurate of observers; Dr. Wm. Cheadle, first of the tourists; and Principal Grant, of Queen's University, seeking a route for a trans-continental railway.

First set aside for public use in 1907 and its present boundaries fixed in 1914, Jasper National Park owes its name to Jasper House, a trading post established about 1813 by the Northwest Company on Athabaska River, and Jasper Hawse, a clerk. There is an intriguing story in this connection. The Indians called the region "Glittering Mountains," the white man gave it the one word "Jasper." Jasper Hawse was sent out to the mountains by the North West Company. He was an American who had drifted into the fur trade as a poorly-paid book-keeper. But while explorers and others toiled over muskeg and fallen timber, climbed precipices, scaled mountains and forded icy streams to make history, Jasper simply stayed at home. In the end it was he after whom the Jasper area was named.

It was not until 1922, when the Canadian National Railways began construction of Jasper Park Lodge in the very heart of this great alpine park, that the outside world began to hear of and to appreciate its beauties. In the intervening years hundreds of thousands have visited Jasper and many more thousands have gazed upon its charms during the several hours it takes Canadian National's crack, fully air conditioned Continental Limited, eastbound and westbound transcontinental trains, to cross from one of its limits to the other. Jasper is only an overnight ride from Vancouver and a few hours from Edmonton.

Jasper Park Lodge and Recreational Facilities:

Since its opening, Jasper Park Lodge has grown from a modest group of tents and cabins to become the world's largest and most outstanding bungalow summer resort. It can accommodate more than 660 guests. Its 18-hole golf course has been ranked among the first ten in the world and its Totem Pole golf tournament every September is one of the outstanding tournaments of the Pacific northwest; its tennis courts are of championship calibre. It has an exceptionally large, open-air heated swimming pool.

Situated on the shores of lovely Lac Beauvert, it is headquarters for trail rides and motor trips into the vast alpine regions of the park; for fishing trips to such famous lakes and streams as the Maligne and Amethyst, for summer and winter skiing at Columbia Icefield and on the glaciers near Maligne Lake. It has achieved its distinction without losing any of its charm and picturesqueness or sacrificing any of those conveniences which discriminating travelers expect to be provided by any first-class hotel.

Motor Drives:

Major Fred Brewster, pioneer guide of the Canadian Rockies, a resident of Jasper, who in 1912 first rode with pack train the route now followed by the Columbia Icefield Highway, recently graphically described the new highway. He wrote:

"This new Columbia Icefield Highway has many claims to fame. To construct it through the heart of the Rocky Mountains was an engineering weat itself. In some sections the driveway is almost 5,000 feet above sea level and part of it was blasted through sheer rock. The Columbia Icefield, only 65 miles from Jasper, is the highspot of the route and is the largest glaciated area in the world accessible to tourists.

"Imagine your are motoring over this new highway. Even though you are high in the mountains the day is warm. Wild flowers show their bright heads from between patches of snow. You may see Big Horn sheep or mountain goats on a distant ridge. But some 5000 feet above you again is a new world, everywhere you see a mass of mountain peaks. They are snow-crested and their sides glitter with low-hanging masses of ice—ice alive with veins of fire kindled by the sun."

In addition to the new highway to Columbia Icefield, Jasper boasts more than 200 miles of fine motor highways leading to varied points of scenic interest, to the famous Glacier of the Angel on Mount Cavell; to Maligne Canyon, the wild, ragged rift in the surface of the earth into whose depths a river tumbles out of sight; the Hot Springs of Pocohontas whose curative powers are renowned; and to Athabaska Falls where the mighty river of the same name hurls itself off the shoulder of a mountain into the valley below.

The gain in the case of field crops was 15.3 per cent, while for farm animals the gain was 24.8 per cent. Small increases were also shown in the value of poultry products, flax, and wool. Thinking Back ... and ... Looking Ahead

Nazi Utopia in Imaginary Embryo Stage—Should Britain Lose it Would Mean A Chaos Indescribable For Redistribution of Earth's Surface

By DONALD C. MACDONALD

"Make no mistake about it—the structure of western civilization is built around these two empires. Should Anglo-French power collapse, and finally, should the strength of the British fleet become ineffective, the world will crumble into a chaos indescribable."

On June 12 I wrote the above statement in this column. It is repeated not in any sense as a claim to originality, but as the starting point in our consideration of the trend of world events as revealed last week.

The New Europe

With the collapse of the French portion of the Allied power the world as we have known it started to change with incredible rapidity. The lines of a new Europe have been drawn more distinctly in the last six weeks. What remains of France is merely a semblance of her former self, a place where Hitler may drive all his refugees, and thereby absolve himself officially of any responsibility for their survival. In like manner, Poland has had its wealth and industries absorbed into the Reich, while its marshy unproductive east has become a "death hole" into which Poles and Jews are driven to a slow death. Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway, all live uneasily beneath the conqueror's heel.

Rosenberg, one of Hitler's spiritual advisers, and the chief exponent of the myth of a pure-blooded, superior German people, is trying hard to realize his favorite dream of uniting all Scandinavian Europe into a puppet kingdom of Nazi Germany, with the Swedish royal family on the throne. Spain has shown her true colors as an Axis sympathizer, and has issued a claim to Gibraltar. The Balkans have yet to be melted down and poured into the forms of the new Europe.

Nazi Utopia

Thus has the continent been recreated, with the Germans as the "superior" people, to provide the soldiers, while all about them will be satellite peoples, in Italy ruled by puppet Mussolini, in Scandinavia, to be ruled by a puppet Swedish monarch, in Spain, ruled by puppet Franco, the whole structure based on a continent of lesser breeds, the Poles and Czechs, the Slavs of the Balkans, the French, and Dutch and Belgians.

It is, indeed, a sorry spectacle that this continent, the home of western civilization, now presents. But Dr. Goebbels had a beautiful picture of it to quieten the fears of German civilians who have received notice of another cut in the bread ration. Said he, "With Holland our vegetable garden, France our vineyard, Denmark our dairy, Poland our slaughter house, the East our wheat fields, the Southeast our orchards, and Italy our little harvest-helper, what more do we want except some real coffee and tea?"

Clouds in Far East

In the Far East developments are following each other at a rapidly accelerated pace as the Japanese, in a professed admiration for Nazi methods and a determination to copy them, are hastening to bring about their New Order in Asia while European powers are deeply involved at home. Tokio is to be a collaborator with Berlin in the redistribution of the earth.

A few weeks ago Britain announced the closing of the Burma road, the sole remaining commercial artery through which was flowing the life-blood of Chinese resistance. Officially it was stated that this action had been taken with the hope that Japan and China could be brought around the peace-table and an end to the war agreed upon. I find it difficult to believe how the British Cabinet, dominated as it is now by anti-appeasers, ever hoped that they could achieve anything by this appeasing of Japan. For at Tokio there is a new government in power, headed by Prince Konoye, and controlled by all the radical naval and military groups who have been clamoring for more aggression for a long while.

With French and Dutch power gone in the East, their Empires are ready prey for the vultures of Tokio. The sole remaining power in the Far East is that of Britain, and, as Churchill said in explaining the closing of the Burma road, Britain is facing a life and death struggle at home. There her attention must be concentrated. If Japan went out in earnest to remake the Far East, it would be impossible for Britain to protect all European possessions.

American Reaction.

There is but one possible deterrent to British action, and that is the U.S.A. There has been an element of unfair criticism of British policy in the Far East, emanating chiefly from certain radio commentators. They drew a rather sharp rebuke from the British novelist, J. B. Priestley, in a broadcast to America. "I earnestly assure American listeners," he said, "that most people here are ready to fight to the death for ideals and aspirations that are common to the people of both Britain and the United States. All of you cannot be expected to see this completely as we do . . . but we do implore your commentators to spare you and us some of their ringside seat manners and remarks. People who are not prepared to fight yet for anything anywhere should not rebuke others because they cannot undertake to fight for everything everywhere."

Officially, the reaction in Washington to developments in the Far East has been very positive. The President has signed a bill which places an embargo on the export of oil and scrap iron. Not only does this end the supply of oil going to the Nazis through Spain, but it also hits Japan squarely between the eyes. She has been getting 75 percent of her oil, and 90 per cent of her scrap iron, both the sinews of war, from the United States. If Britain was forced to close the chief source of supply to China, going through the Burma road, then Washington apparently considers that everything is fairly well evened up if the same is done for Japan. At the time of writing, there are ominous rumblings of what Japan is going to do in retaliation.

The other great power working for world unsettlement is still the mysterious Russia. Premier Molotoff's recent speech indicates in its professed sympathy for the Axis powers and hostility for the "imperialist democracies" of Britain and the United States, that Russia considers the end of the war still far off. It is a left-handed compliment to Britain, for in continuing to side with Germany, who is at heart the eternal foe of the Soviets, Stalin has in effect said (through his premier) that he considers Britain capable of withstanding anything that Hitler can throw at her. Therefore he has plenty of time to change sides. By changing sides I do not for a moment mean that Russia will ever fight as our formal ally, for if the British can finish off Hitler themselves, Stalin will leave them do it; only if and when it becomes assured that Hitler is going to win, will Stalin do another "stabbing in the back" act, not out of any love for our cause, but out of fear for what the future would hold for him should Hitler triumph completely, and be free to turn to the East again.

The Battle of Britain

It all boils down to this. The king-pin in the present world structure is Great Britain. All that we cherish by way of the Christian religion and our heritage of freedom will disappear should Britain be crushed. This is not the first time that Britain has faced alone a tyrant who boldly proclaims his ambition to conquer the world, but never before did she face the situation with such heavy responsibilities. Is it not as Lord Halifax has said that "just because the things we are defending are worthy of any sacrifice it is a noble privilege to be the defenders of things so precious?"

For if we should fail in this moment, the war will not end. The flood-gates will be opened and "the world will crumble into a chaos indescribable." This war would then be followed by a much greater war, in which Italians, Russians, Spaniards and Japanese will have to strike, in some instances with Hitler's consent, in others not only to get in with Hitler on the redistribution of the earth, but to get in before him. This war would then spread to the four corners of the earth, and mankind would be doomed to the worst oppression and tyranny history has ever beheld. The world would have to be redeemed from another Dark Age by those parts of the British Empire and Commonwealth that would be able to survive, in conjunction with the United States of America. That would be a process too long to contemplate with any ease of mind.

But it is something we need not contemplate. As we watch the British people in their little island fortress across the waters, confident, defiant, yes, even taunting the tyrant, we cannot fail to realize an exhilarating joy and heartfelt thanks that there is being realized before our eyes the historic exhortation of their Prime Minister: "Let us therefore brace ourselves to our duty and so bear ourselves that if the British Commonwealth and Empire last for a thousand years, men will still say 'this was their finest hour'."

RASPBERRY CROP ABOUT 11,000,000 QTS.

Reports from growers in the areas in which raspberries are grown in Canada in commercial quantities indicate that the 1940 crop will be as large as in 1939 when it totalled 10,861,000 quarts of which Ontario accounted for 5,673,000 quarts, Quebec, 2,217,000 quarts, British Columbia, 2,852,000 quarts and the Maritime Provinces 119,000 quarts. The quality of this year's raspberries is notably good. The crop is now on the market and large quantities will be available, particularly in Ontario and Quebec, until about the end of July.

Production of fertilizers and fertilizer material in Canada totalled 540,302 tons during the fertilizer year ended June 30, 1939, compared with 516,459 tons in the preceding 12 months. These totals do not include calcium cyanamide, the figures for which are not available for publication.

"What position did you hold in your last place?" asked the merchant.

"I was a doer, sir."

"A doer! What's that?"

"Well, sir, you see, when my employer wanted anything done he would tell the cashier, the cashier would tell the bookeeper, the bookkeeper would tell the clerk and the clerk would tell me."

"And what would happen then?"

"Well, sir, as I hadn't anyone else to tell it to, I'd do it."

"SEE WHAT I MEAN? THEM NAZI'S WOULD STOP AT NOTHIN!"

Huntingdon Locals

It is most gratifying to note that so many former graduates of Huntingdon Academy are not forgetting the call made for financial aid towards the renovation of the "Old Stone School". Mr. Neil Henderson, Jr., Secretary-Treasurer of Finance Committee wishes to acknowledge the following receipts for the week: Mr. C. W. McClatchie, Huntingdon, $5; Mr. and Mrs. J. Clarence Cluff, Montreal, $5 and from Mr. C. N. Crutchfield, Shawinigan Falls, $10.

Caleb S. Holiday To Be Fittingly Remembered.

Caleb S. Holiday was Principal of Huntingdon Academy for something over twenty years. During his principalship the Academy gained a great deal of publicity due to the high standing his graduating classes attained at the June examinations. The family connection of the late Caleb Holiday have decided to pool their contributions towards the "Old Stone School" restoration fund and make a presentation to the school in memory of the late Principal Caleb Holiday.

The grounds about the High School are now being levelled off so as to make them more suitable as a campus.

Pictures of Former Academy Principals Wanted.

Principal Macmillan will have a fine office in the renovated Stone School. It would seem most appropriate for the walls of this office to be adorned with pictures of former principals of the High School. Whilst we have not discussed this matter with Principal Macmillan we are certain he would appreciate receiving pictures of all former principals. In connection with the late Caleb S. Holiday, he never had his photograph taken but we know good snapshots were taken by some pupils. The Gleaner would appreciate receiving the loan of such snapshots or protographs of all former Academy principals so that we may reproduce them in a special school edition of the Gleaner to be published on August 28.

Little Boys and Girls "Doing Their Bit"

A group of young girls and boys in Huntingdon are doing "their bit" in Canada's effort to stamp out Hitler. The boys sell lemonade, while the girls present plays. The proceeds are turned over to the Huntingdon branch of the Red Cross Society. Young boys erect at different intervals during the week, temporary stands where they cater to the public by selling home-made lemonade. A group of young girls, reportedly headed by little Miss Jeanette Pierce, secured a barn at the rear of Mrs. Retta Gentle's home and presented plays to a large gathering last Friday afternoon. Garbed in suitable costumes, the little girls are said to have entertained their audience à la Garbo. Net proceeds amounted close to $1.00.

no reason why Canada shouldn't train an army of a million men under this system and still operate her industry and primary production to meet demands upon it." There would probably be eight calls for training within the year, the department of national defence issuing the calls as required. Classes would be called up in consecutive order. Mr. Power, minister of defence for air, gave an encouraging picture of the rapid development of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, despite the difficulties that have had to be overcome. There are now between 19,000 and 20,000 officers and men in the Royal Canadian Air Force. There are now 22 air schools in operation; about 2700 students are undergoing instruction, and the number will steadily expand. Students from Australia, New Zealand and Britain would join Canadian students in this course of advanced training which will swell the air fleets of the commonwealth. It has been frequently stated that the joint training plan will be Canada's major contribution to the allied cause and Mr. Power said: "We are determined to make it so."

Canada's industrial tempo is now at the highest point in our history, Mr. Howe told the house, while describing Canada's contribution of war supplies and munitions to the war effort. Plants under construction involving a capital cost of about 120 million dollars would have a productive capacity of 500 million dollars. British orders are pouring into Canada and while extending facilities for manufacture, Canadian factories are working at full steam to fill these orders and at the same time fill requirements of Canadian forces. Naval ships, particularly patrol vessels, munitions of all kinds, explosives, aircraft and tanks are among the instruments of war being moulded and fabricated by Canadian workshops. About 600 mechanized units for the armed forces are being turned out daily by Canadian factories, and across Canada, hangars and airdromes for the air training schools are being built ahead of the schedule laid down by the original plan.

By a vote of 46 to 26 the senate passed the unemployment insurance measure which with the governor general's signature becomes law. It is the major piece of civil legislation of the present session, and will take under its wing about 2,100,000 workmen. The principle of the legislation met with practically no opposition from any quarter during discussions in either house of parliament or in committee. The argument was advanced that the time was inopportune, that no social legislation of so extensive a kind should be enacted in wartime, that more time should be given to its consideration. Speaking in the House of Commons, Mr. Ilsley said that about $4,000,000 would be placed every month in the fund, and before this was paid out in benefits it would help materially in financing the war. The banks of Canada, acting as trustees for the fund would invest the funds in Canadian securities. The employment service to be set up by the unemployment service might also do as much in getting men settled in positions for which they are suited as the national registration system. One of the main points advanced in favor of the unemployment insurance measure was that when the war ended and war industries were closed, the fund would aid in tiding men over the period of subsequent unemployment.

Another measure of outstanding importance passing parliament in its final hours and related only partially to the war effort, is the wheat bill. It has evoked a lengthy debate. The measure, which amends the Wheat Board Act, provides for a continuance of a 70-cent guarantee for wheat, extension of present pegged prices, a processing tax of 15 cents a bushel on wheat manufactured into flour or other wheat products for domestic human consumption and measures to encourage and assist farmers in storing a part of their new crop on their own farms.

Tells How War Events Affect Farm Markets

Canadian Cheese in Great Demand in Britain; Also Certain Forms of Concentrated Milk

An outline of the situation, as it exists at present in regard to agricultural supplies and the war was given by Hon. James G. Gardiner, Dominion minister of agriculture, when the conference of Dominion and provincial representatives opened in Ottawa a few days ago.

Mr. Gardiner said the purpose of the conference was to continue the discussions which were begun at the start of the war. It was then, he explained, impossible to lay down a definite policy or program for any time ahead other than that farmers should continue to do what they had been doing before the war. Since then events of such an unforeseen character have occurred that it is now impossible to change the policy with regard to agriculture and it is impossible to forecast events for even a month ahead.

Referring to the possibility of a market for Canadian food products in Great Britain, Mr. Gardiner said the statement of the British Minister of Agriculture and also of the British Prime Minister was that Britain is not worrying at present about its food supply. Whether there will be cause for concern next year time and events will disclose. Over there they are trying to step up the production of their own food supplies. What is happening throughout the world is undoubtedly going to affect the sale of Canadian farm products detrimentally or otherwise.

Mr. Gardiner gave an outline of what has been done in connection with the marketing of the 1939 Canadian commercial crop and also outlined the principal points of the bacon agreement between Canada and the British Ministry of Food, under which the Dominion is supplying 5,600,000 lbs. of bacon weekly. For the time being, Britain does not want additional quantities, Mr. Gardiner explained that Britain and Canada are the only markets at present for Canadian bacon.

The one bright spot in the marketing situation is that dairy products, especially Canadian cheese, are wanted by Great Britain, and also certain concentrated forms of milk are also in demand.

Mr. Gardiner, in referring to wheat, said there is now at least 250 million bushels of wheat in the elevators in Canada. The 1940 crop may total 400 million bushels. Allowing 150 million bushels for food and seed and other purposes to meet the entire needs of the people of Canada there will be after the year's harvest a total of at least 500 bushels on hand. There is storage space in terminal, country and other elevators of 440 million bushels. Britain in peace time only buys 200 million bushels from all countries, and it cannot be expected that all its purchases of wheat in war time will be made in Canada. Britain is now the only possible market for Canadian wheat. France and other European countries are now out of the market.

The result of the present situation is that about 300,000 families in Western Canada are going to be affected by the cutting off of wheat exports or sales. Mr. Gardiner said the problem with which Western farmers would be confronted would require careful study by the government.

CHEESE PRODUCTION

In the first six months of 1940, a total of 47,480,089 lb. of factory cheddar cheese was produced in Canada, an increase of 15.2 per cent over the production in the corresponding period of 1939. The province of Ontario accounted for 34,908,625 lb. of the 1940 production; Quebec, 8,347,241 lb.; Manitoba, 2,269,472 lb.; Alberta, 1,143,745 lb.; and the remaining 810,835 lb. in Prince Edward Island; New Brunswick, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

Precautions Needed For Bathing Hole

Near Drownings at Hemmingford Call For Attention to Bathing Facilities

Recent happenings at "The Fort," favorite swimming place for the Hemmingford area indicate that some new precautions must be taken to ensure safer bathing. Dozens of people congregate at these waters located west of Hemmingford to cool off or to enjoy a good swim during hot August days. Not long ago a youth slipped from a log which was supporting him and after being immersed came to the top of the water frantically calling for help. His companions brought him to the cement wall where he lay for a long time—too frightened to move. On a more recent Saturday a group of boys were in a boat which upset in over nine feet of water. One boy, a non-swimmer, sank to the bottom and when he rose to the surface he dragged a younger lad down with him in his clutch, and coming to the surface once again took down an additional boy. "I had a 'dickens' of a time getting loose from him!" stated young Douglas Brown, first dragged down into the water. That a triple drowning did not result was due to a boy on the wall grasping the wrist of one boy and hanging on till help arrived.

In view of these circumstances, Mr. J. Gordon Troyer, former Instructor of Advanced Swimming in Hart House, University of Toronto, has issued the following statement which he believes will ensure safety at the "Fort."

Says Troyer: "The waters of the river dammed back at the mill at the Fort deepen gradually from the south toward the mill. From the south the increase in depth is gradual, commencing from a few inches and increasing to a depth of nine feet or over. Safe bathing may be indulged in at the shallow end. There are no sudden holes in the bed of the river. Judging from some of the foolishness which I personally have observed at the Fort I believe that unless some precautions are taken without delay there will be fatalities at this point. I cannot urge too strongly that the three following suggestions for improvements be made by some interested society or group of persons:

"First, the water depth should be painted on the wall for its whole length. This will require little labor or expense. Secondly, a division of the water area should be made at the three-foot level. Thirdly, two signs should be made. The one marked plainly, "This area for non-swimmers," should be placed to the right of the three foot depth level. The other sign should be marked, "For swimmers only. Non-swimmers forbidden in this area." This sign should be carefully obeyed and should apply also to non-swimmers in boats. As a great deal of swimming may ensue at this point during the balance of this month, not one day should elapse before these precautions are taken.

"Non-swimmers might feel it a hardship to be kept in three feet of water but this will be an inducement for them to learn to swim, and anyway, three feet of water is sufficient depth for anyone to learn to swim well. As there is no supervision at this point, parents should always supervise their small children even when they are in the shallow water. Real supervision means unremitting supervision, and every second a small child is in the water he or she should be constantly observed. The standard rules about not swimming within one hour, or better two hours of a meal, not entering the water in a heated condition, etc., should also apply. An additional safeguard would be the placing of a cork buoy on a post at the nine foot level. This buoy should have a rope attached and be used only in case of emergency."

Mr. Troyer's suggestions are being carefully considered in Hemmingford, and they were made the subject of a church announcement this past Sunday.

Huntingdon

Titled Britisher Visits Huntingdon.

Guests at the Chateau are Lady Tute and Captain Skinner and Mrs. Skinner of Nassau, Bahamas.

Lady Katherine Tute is the wife of Sir Richard Tute, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court for ten years, and recently retired. Sir Richard is now engaged on special duty in Washington. Lady Tute is greatly interested in plans for establishing British children in homes on this continent.

Sir Richard and Lady Tute were recent guests at Rideau Hall, Ottawa. H.R.H. Princess Alice said that Lady Tweedsmuir told her that Huntingdon district would be a most desirable locality of homes were offered there. Lady Tweedsmuir spoke very highly to Princess Alice of the English and French people and their homes in the Chateauguay Valley.

Lady Tute therefore desired to spend some time here while waiting for the return of her husband. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Brown drove her around to some of the country homes that had already been offered for British children. Captain and Mrs. Skinner havealso been driving Lady Tute about, and they all agree with the opinion of Lady Tweedsmuir. They have been well pleased also with the accommodations at the Chateau, and think the community is fortunate in having such a splendid hotel.

Captain Skinner is a veteran of the World War and now Secretary of the Porcupine Club at Nassau. He has volunteered again and hopes to find some position of service in the present war effort. Mrs. W. L. Carr, who is convenor for the National and International Relations for the Chateauguay-Huntingdon W.I., entertained the viistors from Nassau at afternoon tea on Tuesday.

Ormstown Calf Club Holds Field-day at "Balsam Lodge"

Winners compete at Ste. Martine Today Along With Representatives From Each Club in Twenty-Two Counties

On August 7 three members from the various calf clubs in the twenty-two counties in the Montreal area meet at Ste. Martine Agricultural School to compete in the judging of various breeds of cattle. The winning team in this competition will later compete at another centre, usually Sherbrooke, to decide the provincial winners.

Previous to the district competitions each club holds an eliminating contest to decide which members shall represent the club. The Ormstown Calf Club members held their elimination contest at Peter Dickson & Son's Balsam Lodge Farm on August 1, when about twenty-five members competed, under the supervision of Mr. Vincent of Montreal, who is in charge of junior club work in this section of the province.

Mr. P. N. April, regional agrnome; Mr. Appelman, county agronome; Mr. Douglas Ness and Mr. George Collum assisted Mr. Vincent.

The winners at this contest were: 1st, John McCaig, Ormstown; 2nd, Ewan McDougall, Ormstown; 3rd, Donald McEwen, Allan's Corners, who constitute the team going to Ste. Martine.

The Ayrshire class for this contest was drawn from the Balsam Lodge herd and of peculiar interest in this group was "Balsam Lodge Lady of the Lake," a flashy big two-year-old that freshened at the age of 27 months and in her first seven months of milking has already produced 9,016 pounds of milk with an average butterfat test of 4.2, twice-a-day milking.

The Holsteins for this contest were supplied by Chas. Collum & son, and Peter Finlayson & Son.

Farmer Fined For Infraction Pedigree Act

Ontario Farmer Furnished False Evidence to C.N. Livestock Records; Fined $100. and Costs

As the result of an investigation by Detective Corporal Swords, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Thomas R. Kerr, Campbellford, Ont., appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., at Campbellford, Ont. and was charged with fourteen infractions of the Livestock Pedigree Act and of the rules and regulations of Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association.

These charges included failure to keep a private herd record, over a period of years and with furnishing material false evidence, to Canadian National Live Stock Records, regarding tattooing and other identification of animals and with respect to dates of birth, ancestry, etc., of the animals concerned. As regards identification by tattooing in the ears it was found that whilst applications for registration showed that several animals had been tattooed with certain letters and numerals no trace of any such operation could be found in the ears of these animals.

Thomas R. Kerr entered a plea of guilty on all fourteen charges and was fined $100 (the minimum penalty) and costs, each on two of the charges, and in each instance the alternative sentence, in default of payment of the fines, was one month's imprisonment with hard labour, both such sentences to run consecutively.

He was given suspended sentence on the other twelve charges, subject to his posting of a Bond for $500.00 for a period of two years. It is understood that the fines were subsequently paid.

In his summing up of the charges Magistrate Langley emphasized the necessity of keeping accurate, honest records and of the filing of accurate information in connection with the registration of purebred livestock.

Ormst'n Girls Winners Over Brooklet, 9-4

Alice English Star For Winners, Allowing Two Hits—"Billy" Taylor Makes Fine Catch

On Friday night, under the lights at Ormstown, the Ormstown girls defeated the Brooklet Girls 9-4, before a large number of softball fans.

The game was marked by some nice fielding plays by both teams and some fine base running by the local girls. M. McCormick had several stolen bases to her credit.

The pitching was very good. A English on the Ormstown mound allowed but two hits, while her team-mates chased two visiting pitchers from the box for 13 hits Alice earned a shut-out by her effort but errors by her mates allowed the visitors to score. Fielding highlight of the evening was a one-handed catch and start of a double play by "Billy" Taylor, 2nd baseman of the Brooklet team.

Other games of the week: Ormstown 14, Kensington 11; Dundee 16 Ormstown 4.
