Authorities await answer to final offer for Marion

By JANET COTTON
(Record Reporter)

SHERBROOKE — Quebec Provincial Police are awaiting another communique from the kidnapers of Charles Marion before signalling the go-ahead for the ransom drop-off.

Caisse Populaire officials made their "final position" to the kidnapers in a coded message broadcast on local television last night.

Officials, speaking through CKSH-TV reporter Normand Maltais told kidnapers their "instructions will be followed", but said the proposed interval between the ransom drop-off and the release of Mr. Marion "remains unacceptable." Officials say they want Marion released immediately after the money is dropped off.

In the coded message, understood by only Caisse Populaire officials, police and the kidnapers "Emissary A" was named as the second go-between who would accompany Mr. Maltais in the drop-off. Credit union officials had requested a list of possible intermediaries from the kidnapers after rejecting the proposal that Mr. Marion's son, Pierre, 31 accompany Mr. Maltais for fear he would become a second hostage.

Mr. Maltais, who was relieved from his television duties until the end of the Marion case, was placed under QPF supervision yesterday as newspapers across Canada bid for the story of his involvement in the 40-day-old kidnap drama.

Police demanded that Montreal Star reporter Crosbie Cotton, and Gazette reporter Steve Kowch leave Sherbrooke because they did not like "their way of investigating and reporting" on the Marion case.

Mr. Marion, credit manager of the Caisse Populaire de Sherbrooke Est, was abducted from his cottage in Stoke by two armed and hooded men on Aug. 6, in what has become the longest non-political kidnaping in Canadian history.

His abductors originally demanded a ransom of $1 million, but appear to have accepted the Caisse Populaire's final offer of $250,000.

Ontario's Davis challenges Quebec referendum rules

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis has challenged Quebec Premier Rene Levesque's proposals to limit the referendum on separation and said it was his right and the right "of every thoughtful Canadian leader" to take part.

In a speech Thursday to the Canadian Conference of Legislative Ombudsmen, Davis said the current white paper on the referendum appears to limit freedom of speech.

He said Ontario is prepared to send a representative before the appropriate committee of the Quebec national assembly to speak against such legislation and urged other provinces to do the same.

"The civility and tolerance that typifies the debate between Canadians must not and cannot be limited by artificial restrictions and limitations that could serve to seriously increase tension and pressure at a time when we should be looking for legitimate valves to release some of that tension and pressure," Davis said.

He said it is not legitimate for Quebec to seek to limit the scope and breadth of the debate which will precede any referendum.

"I believe that it is my right, as it that of every thoughtful Canadian leader, to visit the province during any campaign, and indeed before any campaign begins,

Energy chief predicts oil shortage by 1985

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie says he has to convince Canadians that shortages of oil may occur as early as 1985.

He said in an interview that only if consumers are convinced they face serious energy problems will they be willing to accept federal measures to cut down demand and increase supply.

The government intends to continue with such politically unpopular moves as higher prices for consumers and tax cuts for the multinational oil companies as part of its energy policy.

Gillespie said that the Western industrial countries "are confronted with a serious supply situation that comes to a head in the mid-1980s."

to make the case for Canada," Davis said.

He said that just as Premier Levesque must have the freedom to speak at length in the other nine provinces about inequities and injustices as he sees them, "so must all other Canadians have a similar right in Quebec."

It is legitimate for those seeking a new arrangement to elect a government committed to pursuing a view through a referendum, Davis said.

That is in the tradition of dissent and parliamentary expression of the public will, he said.

"But it is similarly legitimate for those opposed to those views or commitments to seek redress through the system and to respond by seeking to defeat that government at the next electoral opportunity."

He said it would not be legitimate for the federal government or anyone else to use economic prejudice against Quebec.

It similarly is not legitimate for the provincial government in Quebec to limit the debate on the referendum, Davis said.

SEES CONTINUING NEED

The Ontario premier said the need to stimulate the Canadian economy cannot be set aside as the debate on national unity becomes more heated.

"To do this would be to add a serious and entirely unpredictable dimension of discord and frustration to the entire national unity debate."

Canadians deserve governments that can deal with the economy and national unity at the same time without sacrificing either, Davis said.

Parizeau raps make-work, tax cuts

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government can do more to cure unemployment by encouraging investment in lagging industries than it can by instituting a winter works program or cutting taxes, Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau said Thursday.

As Parti Quebecois caucus members prepare to close themselves at a Laurentian mountain hideaway for the next two days, rumors persist that Parizeau will come under heavy pressure from cabinet colleagues and backbenchers to launch a more vigorous fight against unemployment.

Many members are reported to be pressing for inclusion of a winter works program in the supplementary budget due in October.

But speaking Thursday to the Montreal Bond Traders Association, Parizeau maintained: "You do not cure unemployment by throwing money at it."

"High unemployment concerns Quebec, Ontario, everyone," he said. "So the temptation is great to open the floodgates.

"But we know from the past that it's never had much of an impact on unemployment and it's had an immense impact on fuelling inflation."

URGES SELECTIVITY

He said unemployment exists "very specifically in certain areas," and the best way to deal with it is to pour money into the so-called soft industries—construction, the pulp and paper industry, the manufacturing of asbestos products, textiles, shoes, furniture and apparel.

for most of their supplies.

If voluntary measures to cut consumption and increase domestic supply fail, Gillespie says he will urge the federal government to impose controls on oil imports, rationing its use.

Other measures to increase domestic energy supply include building more nuclear power stations, developing hydroelectric potential in Labrador and the Bay of Fundy and boosting research into renewable energy such as the sun and the winds.

Gillespie also hopes to get a better rating this year for the country's conservation efforts from the IEA, which last year blasted the government for a weak commitment to reducing demand.

Since then, the minister says, domestic oil prices have increased and the government has embarked on a home-insulation program that he says is unique among the IEA members.

The $1.5 billion program, which went into effect Sept. 1, pays a grant of up to $350 to help homeowners re-insulate their dwellings.

Victim made threats, Durelle tells trial

NEWCASTLE, N.B. (CP) — Yvon Durelle, former Canadian and British Empire light heavyweight boxing champion, took the stand in his own defence Thursday and said the man he killed May 20 had repeatedly threatened his life.

Durelle, 46, was charged with second-degree murder after Albin Poirier of Baie Ste. Anne, N.B., was shot to death in the parking lot of Durelle's Fishermen's Club at Baie Ste. Anne.

Poirier, 32, was shot in the head five times with a .38-calibre revolver.

The trial, which began Monday, is being conducted by Mr. Justice Ronald Stevenson of the New Brunswick Supreme Court.

In his day-long testimony, Durelle testified that Poirier telephoned him three times on the night of the shooting and warned him (Durelle) to get out of town.

"You have three days to leave Baie Ste. Anne," Poirier told him.

During second call, Durelle said, Poirier asked him how many children he had.

Durelle is father of four.

S. African police arrest 1,200 blacks

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Riot police with dogs arrested 1,200 students at the black university of Fort Hare on Thursday to block a memorial service for Steve Biko, the black leader who died in a prison hospital after a hunger strike.

The service was the first of several planned by white students, black nationalists and church leaders across South Africa in a wave of anger at the death of the 30-year-old activist, described by one newspaper as "perhaps the most important black leader in South Africa."

The protests were fuelled by questions as to whether the prisons department had made any effort to save Biko's life.

A spokesman for the university, 350 miles south of here, said the white principal had turned down a request from the students to suspend lectures for the service.

But the students went ahead and gathered on the rugby field, singing black nationalist songs. They were quickly surrounded by police.

NO RESISTANCE

Offering no resistance, the students were shepherded to a grandstand and taken away in police vehicles. Witnesses said students made black power salutes as they were led away but no violence was reported.

increase supplies.

Meanwhile, the Canadian government is moving to increase supplies of domestic oil, natural gas and electricity in Quebec and the Atlantic provinces, now dependent on imported oil.

"I see this as more than a conference to endorse principles," the minister says. "It will focus world attention on the seriousness of the situation."

resign if inquest findings show that his department had not done anything to prevent Biko's death.

NOT FORCE-FED

Kruger told the Transvaal provincial congress of the ruling National party Wednesday that Biko was not force-fed during his hunger strike because prison guards would have been accused of brutality. He said it was Biko's "democratic right" not to eat.

But a spokesman for the minister said Thursday that Biko was fed intravenously before he died.

Kruger also rejected demands from white liberals for a special inquest into Biko's death.

Warned of trouble

Durelle said Poirier called a third time and warned him there would be trouble at the club that night.

"This is the night. There is no more time to run," Durelle said Poirier warned him.

"I put my gun in my pocket," Durelle said. "I presumed he would come around with a gun or something."

When Poirier came to the club that night Durelle said he told him to leave and when Poirier refused Durelle said he escorted him out.

"I'm going to run you down. I'm going to kill you," Durelle said Poirier warned him as they left the bar.

Durelle then told the jury Poirier tried to hit him with his car and, in so doing, struck two other cars, one of them twice.

"I fired a shot. The car started toward me," Durelle said in describing how he reacted after dodging what he said was an attempt by Poirier to hit him with his car.

"When I fired the first shot he bent down across the seat, his hands on the floor," Durelle said. I made five steps, partly running, I could see his shoulder. I thought he was trying to get a gun."

"I fired four more shots. He didn't move," Durelle said, later testifying that he went back to the club and told a customer:

"Call the RCMP. I shot a guy."

Durelle testified that on the night of the shooting he had called the RCMP four times and told them of the threats against him from Poirier.

RCMP Constable James O'Rourke, one of eight witnesses to testify Thursday, told of an incident June 2, 1975, in which he found Poirier in his Escuminac, N.B., trailer home, bleeding heavily.

O'Rourke said he went to the trailer because he had been led to believe Poirier was trying to kill himself.

O'Rourke said Poirier was lying wounded on the floor, with a large butcher knife nearby.

"He was conscious and he was bleeding at the side of his body. Part of his intestines and other organs were lying on the floor," O'Rourke said.

O'Rourke said he took Poirier to hospital and later returned to the trailer where he saw the word "dope" written in blood on the floor. On a nearby door was the sign of the cross in blood, he said.

Beer-can mariners complete voyage

SINGAPORE (AP) — "It certainly wasn't your normal sea voyage," the helmsman of Can-Tiki said Thursday as his boat, made of 15,000 beer cans, sailed into Singapore after a 12-day crossing from Darwin, Australia.

Clem Jones said the craft's two outboard engines were useless most of the way with six inches of water and fuel sloshed in the bottom of the craft and the three-man crew had only beer and cold canned food to sustain them over 4,600 miles.

"It was a tremendously hazardous experience... The beer was really in short supply," Jones told reporters.

Why did they do it?

"It's a promotion, a fun thing," said Jones, who is former Lord Mayor of Brisbane and head of the committee to reconstruct Darwin after a hurricane ravaged the northern Australian port city on Christmas Day 1974.

Jones said he and his companions—Lutz Frankenfeld and Paul Harding—hope their exploit will promote Darwin as an entry point for tourists who usually fly straight to larger Australian cities.

The double-hulled, catamaran-like Can-Tiki weighs about four tons and consists of 15,000 beer cans (empty) glued to a 23-foot glass fibre-and-plywood frame.

Before departing Darwin on Sept. 3, the vessel was declared unseaworthy by the Australian navy, which declined to provide an escort vessel.

"There was tremendous opposition from some quarters," Jones said.

He said the original plan had been to hug the coast through the Indonesian archipelago, but this was abandoned when the two engines failed.

So they used the ocean-liner route, cutting 150 miles off the trip. This meant navigating among many ships, but they had no close shaves, Jones said. He said neither he nor Frankenfeld had any significant boating experience before Can-Tiki and Harding, a veteran yachtsman, was navigator.

"Steering at night was no different from steering in the daytime, except you couldn't see," Jones added.

The roughest seas they encountered were three-to-four-yard swells about 700 miles out of Singapore, he said. The worst mechanical trouble hit Can-Tiki the first 24 hours out of Darwin.

"Two engines stopped and the electrical system acted up. There was no bow light, no masthead light," he said. "We rewired the boat on the way." The result was that the crew got a shock each time they put their feet in the water-fuel mixture sloshing around the bottom.

Frankenfeld, who built the boat, said he built his first beer-can craft four years ago, partly to support an anti-litter campaign. He said he has a beer-can aircraft carrier on the drawing board and once tried to build a beer-can submarine. He said the sub submerged smoothly but did not resurface.

The cans are not the pop-top variety, but empty containers with old-style plain top and bottom for extra strength. They were donated new by a brewery.

Bureaucracy pushing Amish out of Ontario

Everyone has a personal experience story of the frustrations of having anything at all to do with a government-style bureaucracy.

The occasions when a reasonable matter is solved or taken care of expeditiously in a reasonable way seem rare enough to make us marvel at the fact that a parcel was delivered promptly or an error in a bill fixed immediately.

Too often the principle that a customer should be looked after immediately can only be found applied in the corner neighborhood mom-pop store.

Personal experience has taught that big government is often a big mess. Even some of the world's leading economic and political science thinkers now are starting to preach what the individual has known always — small can be better.

An example of how slowly the wheels grind in the halls of power showed up recently in a most unlikely place and under the most unlikely conditions.

In this instance, the somewhat independent individuals caught in the bureaucratic nutcracker made their own decision and acted — to the loss of all of us and the shame of those politicians we elect to maintain some reasonable order and decency in society.

The incident of procrastination was outlined in the briefest of reports in the newspapers. So common are such happenings that the papers instinctively know there isn't any point in using screaming headlines — although such strong attention is well-justified.

About a dozen miles north of Woodstock in Ontario's agricultural country, a group of Amish families settled some years ago to farm. These industrious farmers are well known as independent and living a way of life closely tied to the land. Simplicity is their rule, treated as a religion. No electricity, horse and buggy for transportation, simply made clothes. Their farms are beautiful showplaces with both soil and animals well-cared for.

Like other governments, Ontario has a system of farm product marketing agencies, designed to bring some order and stability out of the sometimes chaos of producing and selling farm products.

The Ontario Milk Producers Board is one of the oldest of such boards. The board decided in its wisdom that as of Hallowe'en (a most appropriate choice as All Fools Day), shipment of milk from farms in cans will be prohibited. All milk must be held in bulk coolers installed on farms.

The Amish community pointed out that this required the use of electricity on their farms. Please, could they be exempt from this provision to install electricity. They even had a solution — permit them to ship the cans from their farms to central communal bulk coolers where the big transports could pick up.

Needless to explain, there were the usual back-and-forthing of the citizen to the bureaucrats. Frustration probably grew on frustration.

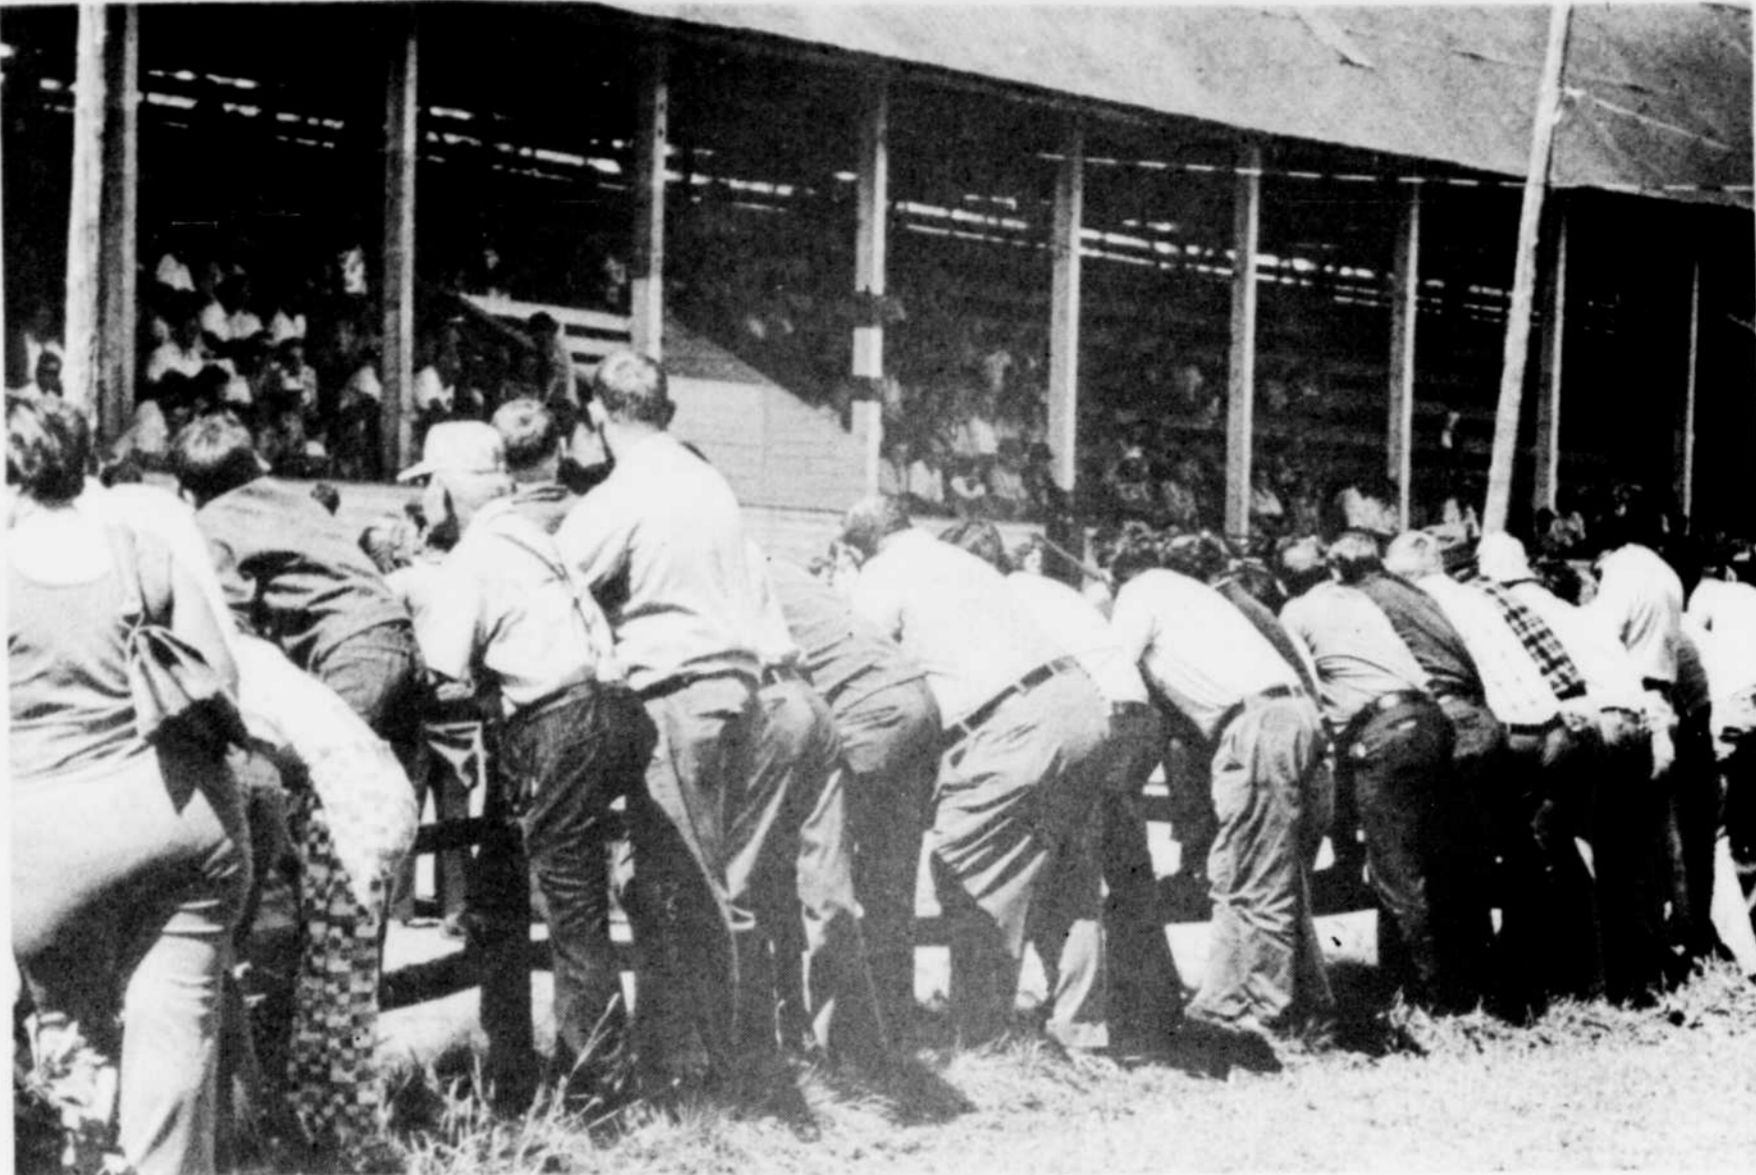

At last, came a decision — and it was favorable, quite logically. All favorable decisions are given to the politician to announce publicly so he can glory in their vote-getting power.

As reported, the agriculture minister himself decided the use of communal bulk coolers was permissible and the Amish could transport the cans from their electricity-free farms.

Happy ending? Not by a long shot!

Some of these do-it-yourself Amish had already acted — selling their Ontario farms and buying new farms in Pennsylvania in the U.S. Others may follow.

The rest of us can only be envious of the independence and awareness of freedom of the Amish in making their case and then acting when they became tired of waiting for the faceless, bureaucratic structure to move off the "pot" made famous in Canadian folk lore.

Were the old ways better?

Small is best and maybe the old ways are better suggests journalist Frank Caplan. Increasing government bureaucracy have brought severe frustrations to rural Canadians, striking at the heart of a system based on simplicity. photoprose

Benefits of engineers to be studied

MONTREAL (CP) — The Association of Consulting Engineers of Quebec has launched a $52,000 study of the economic benefits its members produce for the province, the group announced Wednesday.

Executive director Marcel Desrochers said the association wants to demonstrate to the provincial government that engineering consultants pump millions of dollars a year into the provincial economy by winning contracts in other parts of Canada and the world.

Paper's censorship unreasonable

TORONTO (CP) — The advertising manager for a Toronto bookstore says Richard S. Malone, publisher of The Globe and Mail, is undermining the credibility of the newspaper's book pages by censoring advertisements.

Gordon Montador said Wednesday that an advertisement for 10 books dealing with homosexual topics and paid for by the bookstore and seven publishing houses was rejected by Malone. Three revised versions of the advertisement also were rejected, Montador said.

Jearld Moldenhauer, owner of the bookstore, said no reason was given by the newspaper's advertising department.

Credit Unions: Bigger not better

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's credit unions, overtaking trust companies and challenging banks as providers of consumer savings services, are finding that bigger is not necessarily better.

"It has become clear to me that somehow in the credit union movement we have lost a sense of purpose," says Peter Podovnikoff, president of the B.C. Central Credit Union and of the National Association of Canadian Credit Unions.

"No longer does there appear to be a fiery spirit and dedication to come together to solve problems on a collective basis and to live by the principle of being our brother's keeper," he said in a recent interview.

Government gearing up for hard winter Jobless talks "bloody serious"

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance department officials continue to work on a new federal make-work program while Liberal MPs ended what one said were "bloody serious discussions" on the economy with a picnic in the nearby Gatineau Hills.

"We realize we're going to have to take some lumps this winter," said British Columbia MP Jack Pearsall (L—Coast Chilcotin) as Liberal MPs completed morning talks on unemployment and other economic concerns. "There are just no easy solutions." The Liberal meetings, part of a two-day private planning session prior to a mid-October opening of Parliament, ended with an afternoon picnic at Prime Minister Trudeau's Harrington Lake, Que., summer retreat in the Gatineau Hills about 20 miles north of Ottawa.

As it ended, Employment Minister Bud Cullen said cabinet would sound out several job creation options on Liberal MPs before adding to current federal plans to sink $458 million into make-work projects before the accounting year ends next March 31.

Meanwhile, senior finance department officials, who drafted employment plans that were rejected by cabinet earlier this year, were working on new proposals ordered by the government.

They spent the weekend at another Gatineau Hills retreat drawing up a job program that will likely form part of the government's policy-viewing throne speech address read—perhaps by the Queen—when Parliament resumes in October.

Cullen said any new program would have to get the blessing of the finance minister who replaces Donald Macdonald, the 45-year-old MP for the Toronto riding of Rosedale who announced his resignation from cabinet earlier this week.

GETS TOP PRIORITY

Trudeau is said to have put a higher priority on plans to offset the steadily rising unemployment rate—it stood at 8.1 per cent of the work force in July, or 878,000 workers—than on the struggle to keep the country together in the face of threats from Rene Levesque's separatist government in Quebec.

The prime minister may give some indication of his government's plans for the unemployed at a news conference today. He returned to Ottawa on Thursday from an overnight visit to Washington to witness the signing of new Panama canal treaties and a meeting with President Carter.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent has scheduled a meeting with reporters shortly before Trudeau's news conference, and officials in Broadbent's office say the NDP leader plans to launch another assault on the government's handling of the jobless situation.

Labor and business leaders, however, were cool to federal plans for a consultative forum that might have developed ways to reduce unemployment.

Government has become increasingly upset with business reluctance to use tax cuts offered in the last federal budget—Macdonald introduced it March 31—as an incentive to expand operations and create jobs.

Despite nearly $1 billion worth of business tax incentives, companies have shied away from new investment, prompting talk among Liberal MPs that the government may have to abandon spending restraint and pump money into job creation if it is to cope with the unemployment problem.

Commercial licensing expert

From Expo 67 to Muhammad Ali

MONTREAL (CP) — Richard Gareau has been establishing himself as an expert in commercial licensing programs ever since he worked for the Expo 67 corporation, where he was heavily involved in the writing of concessions and licensing contracts.

"I am told that I am the only lawyer in the world who works in the field of commercial licensing," the 46-year-old Gareau said in a recent interview.

"Right now I'm working with Muhammad Ali on a world-wide licensing concept to market health foods and food supplements under the Ali banner. The labelling and advertising material is currently being approved in Chicago by Ali's lawyers."

Gareau said Ali was his most challenging client because the program is not short-term, as were those for Expo 67 and the 1976 Summer Olympics. He was director of concessions and licensing for the Olympic organizing committee.

"This has long-term possibilities, so he (Ali) is especially exciting to me," Gareau said. "I can put together deals that will make him money and assure him of a continued presence in the public mind long after his fight career."

KNOWS ALI'S VALUE
"I've been thinking of Ali for a long time because I've felt that he was one of the hottest human properties in the world."

Gareau, who holds a degree in commerce as well as one in law, set up a company in 1971 called Universal Innovations Ltd. with two other men—experts in marketing and merchandising—to deal with the legal and marketing aspects of licensing.

"The most difficult part is explaining to people how it works and the importance of planning."

Universal Innovations will help a client create an emblem or symbol that identifies the event, landmark or person and then protect it legally.

For example, Gareau created an emblem, "a personal insignia," for Ali and brought out a photograph of the boxer in an Uncle-Sam-wants-you pose.

The company will also make up a graphics manual showing how the emblem can be used.

SEARCH FOR FIRMS
Finally comes the search for the firms interested in buying a licence to use the emblem.

Loto agents flee tax crackdown

I dropped by my favorite lottery agent last week, slapped down the usual collection of coins and discovered there wasn't a ticket to be had. Ordinarily, Loto-Quebec products sell as briskly as Christmas supplies on Boxing Day, so there was nothing mysterious in the sudden liquidation of the week's quota. It was when the storekeeper announced he had never stocked any to begin with that the tale began to assume a peculiar tone.

The way this particular agent tells it, the Quebec Department of Revenue appears to be closely studying the tax reports submitted by Loto-Quebec vendors. Sales from the various tickets distributed by Loto-Quebec reap a five-per-cent commission for the agents and like any other piece of merchandise must be recorded in their annual declaration of revenue.

It seems a growing number of ticket agents have displayed a reluctance to include their commissions on the income statement. Three establishments in Cowansville, for instance, have been slapped with fines as high as $1,000 for failure to report such earnings, and according to the agent with whom I spoke, one dealer had been conveniently neglecting his Loto-Quebec income for several years before the practice was uncovered.

Though the agent in question claims he owns a clean slate, he has unloaded all but Loto Canada tickets because he doesn't want to go through the careful auditing which a number of fellow vendors have received. He believes the crackdown has created a bitterness among agents, which may result in reduced dealerships.

An administrative aide at Loto Quebec explained the reporting of lottery commissions, like the sale of pack of cigarettes, is based on the integrity of the individual. If he is not prepared to produce an accurate statement of income, the consequences must be endured.

The next time you put down two bucks on the Inter, don't be startled if the Loto agent whips out a pocket calculator.

Calloused hands make good tools

One can never cease to marvel at that unique quality of the Townships which simultaneously enables it to produce a contemporary image while preserving many of the traditions established by our forebears.

In Farnham Centre during the past two weekends, a group of neighbors have resurrected a custom from another generation which doesn't appear to have made the slightest intrusion on an age which boasts advanced technology and awesome mechanization. They have proven, as always, that calloused hands still rank among the most effective machinery on the market.

Three weeks ago, a farmer in the community near Brigham, saw his barn ravaged by flames and reduced to a base of smouldering ash. The livestock was spared, but it appeared they would be devoid of lodging for several weeks, as efforts were made to assess the damage to one of the finest animal shelters in the county.

At the point, a handful of friends reached back into another generation and joined forces for an old-fashioned barn raising. For the next two weekends, even a family of beavers would have smothered their heads in shame at the sight of such activity. The air crackled at the sound of nails meeting two-by-fours. Slabs of timber yielded pliantly to the perpetual motion of shiny saws. Eager hands worked feverishly to reconstruct what was destruction scant days earlier.

The brother of the burned-out farmer held up the punctured skin on a pair of hands as evidence that barn raising is not without its hardships. But, he preferred to remember the spirit of collaboration, and the triumph of turning smooth slabs into a definite shape, much like the satisfied sculptor who has animated a piece of clay.

There's something to be said for old customs, whether they are barn raisings or quilting bees. They offer a sense of fulfillment which a lot of us still seek in vain.

Heavy security for bank move

They held moving day in Cowansville last Saturday. It wasn't your average transfer of personal belongings, mind you, since the move required the services of four QPF squad cars, five security guards from Montreal, and one Brinks' truck.

The Royal Bank of Canada were the tenants changing their address, and though the move was merely a few doors down the street, the precautionary measures were taken due to the value of the property being transported.

If you missed the scenario, a repeat performance is likely in a month or two when yet another bank, the Imperial Bank of Commerce, transfers its belongings into the shopping centre.

Course in making change

Nowadays, you can take almost any vocational course which captures your fancy. There's a seat in the classroom whether you're partial to styling hair or welding metal. The Davignon School Commission, which offers popular courses to French speaking students in Brome-Missisquoi, may have come up with a new one, however.

According to their brochure, sent to homes in the area, a course in the vocation of gas attendant will be offered in conjunction with the continuing education program. The course resume explains that there is much more to the instruction than simply learning how to pump gas - the student will learn all phases of garage station management.

Presumably, in this era of the dollar-a-gallon gas bill, the first lesson will dwell upon making change for a twenty.

Condemned killer nabbed after escape

By JOHN McCAGHEY (Record Reporter)
COWANSVILLE — The condemned killer of a penitentiary instructor was recaptured here yesterday morning shortly after he escaped from Provincial jail.

Mario Gauthier, 21, of Montreal, was picked up at a police roadblock in Ste. Angèle de Monnoir, 45 minutes after he used a loose wire to scale a 16-foot-high fence surrounding the prisoners' exercise area.

Gauthier was convicted and sentenced to be hanged on a charge of capital murder following a jury trial here last spring. He had been found guilty of killing Georges Nadeau, found dead of 23 massive skull fractures in the paint shop at the Cowansville Federal Penitentiary.

Gauthier never denied his guilt during the trial. His defense was based on temporary insanity, and the Quebec Court of Appeals upheld a motion for a new trial.

The church that faith built has seen it all

North Hatley's Baptist Church began life as a one-room schoolhouse.

By LIBBY BENNETT
NORTH HATLEY — On the corner of Capelton Road and Main Street, there is a small wooden building covered with brown-stained shingles with white trim. There is nothing remarkable about its appearance, nothing to make it an object of interest, except possibly the fact that it is a Baptist church and in this province that is a rarity.

North Hatley citizens pass by every day without looking at it a second time. They'd look if it weren't there for it is used as a landmark. "Turn at the Baptist Church," or, "Meet me at the Baptist Church," they'd say.

And yet, for over 70 years this little building has dealt with the citizens of North Hatley in practically every phase of life.

Its career began as North Hatley's first schoolhouse. In 1895 it stood near the road on the west side of the lake beneath an oak tree on the land later purchased by H.L. Bond.

Its first and only teacher was a young girl named Maude Kezar. Miss Kezar lived in Ayer's Cliff after many years of teaching in the States.

The building provided for her use was just a square shell, with benches along the sides and a stove in the middle of the one room. She taught there for two years.

It is assumed that at that time H.L. Bond, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, bought the land. In 1897 it was moved to a lot owned by G.A. LeBaron, a part of the large tract of land known as Dreamland Park. This particular lot was called Camperdown. The story is that Indians used to come to the lot in the early spring and fall to camp while they traded with the few settlers in the area.

At the time the school house was moved onto it, there was a small wooden shed used variously for storing materials, sheltering horses and a gathering spot for horse traders and itinerants. Miss Kezar held her classes in the school house for two more years in spring and fall. During winter, classes had to be moved to a building that afforded more protection, for the school house had no foundation, no platform or steps leading into it. Only planks led up to it and Camperdown is below lake level and was often a quagmire.

After Miss Kezar and her pupils were moved into a new academy, the first little school house stood empty on Camperdown lot until Mr.

LeBaron decided to make it into a summer dwelling. He tore down the horse shed and partitioned off the interior, made an entrance and a large veranda, and painted the name Camperdown in big bright letters on the roof.

In 1902, Baptists in the area met and declared their purpose to be a Baptist Church. It was agreed to pay G.A. LeBaron $25 to bind the purchase of the lot and building. On Jan. 20, 1908, the deed of sale was drawn up and registered in the office in Stanstead.

They met in the building for the first time on Sept. 8, 1908. In every annual meeting from that date on, mention is made of some form of improvement to either the building or the land. A pulpit was donated to the little congregation by Baird Bros. of Plattsville, N.Y., before they ever had a building to put it in. They got chairs, an old reed organ and a little stove. They filled the land with gravel through Mrs. C.S. Houghton of Boston, who was president of the Village Improvement Society, they were given shrubs to beautify the lot and a row of cedar trees to mark the boundary between their lot and the Improvement Society lot.

In 1939 they were given beautiful old golden oak pews and three handsome pulpit chairs from a Baptist church in Beebe which had closed down.

In the 1930s they laid a cement floor over the wooden floor, but this only served to trap the water which in winter froze and didn't contribute anything to the comfort. The Baptist always had a large Sunday school. In 1953 they decided the time had come to make proper provision for their Sunday school classes and young people's meetings. Money was borrowed to raise the building and make a new assembly room.

It has often been remarked that the exterior of the building was neat and attractive, but that the interior was a disappointment. In 1965, the Church again borrowed money, this time to renovate the interior.

While Baptists were struggling to improve their property another church group had formed. Newcomers to North Hatley belonging to the United Church of Canada had no church home. They had been holding services in the Community Hall but did not find this arrangement entirely to their liking. They knew the Baptist Church was not used on Sunday mornings, and so they approached the officers of the church with a proposal that they might have their services there.

Arrangements were made and in 1959 the North Hatley United Church held its first Sunday morning service at 9:30 in the Baptist building.

New law increases regional power

SHERBROOKE (GM) — The Parti Quebecois government will propose vastly increased powers for county councils in a white paper to be deposited in the national assembly before Christmas, Claude Plante, secretary to Quebec Planning Minister Jacques Leonard told an information meeting here yesterday.

Mr. Plante was speaking to mayors and councillors of the region at the Hotel Le Baron meeting of the Eastern Townships Regional Development Council (CRDCE).

Mr. Plante said it is the intention of the government to decentralize many aspects of the administration of the province, but added this would be done only after lengthy discussions with the municipalities and citizens of the various regions of Quebec.

He further stated that in the government view, the decentralization in the hands of the county council would eventually include areas far beyond land use planning and other similar jurisdictions traditionally governed by municipal corporations.

Mr. Plante said areas such as education and cultural affairs could eventually be controlled by the county council on a local level if the population so desired.

Mr. Plante sat on a panel composed of Mr. Pierre Viau, legal adviser to the Union of County Councils, Mr. Clement Fortin, councillor of Orford Township and second vice-president of the CRDCE and town planner

Claude Lavoie.

More than 60 municipalities were represented at yesterday's meeting and it was evident from discussions in the workshops and plenary sessions that this matter would be of great interest to the mayors and councillors of the Eastern Townships.

Mont Gale residents seek Bromont split

BROMONT (JC) — The Bromont municipal council has received its second request for de-annexation in four months.

A petition, signed by 81 per cent of the residents of Mont Gale asking for de-annexation from the village of Bromont was presented at council's last meeting.

The Mont Gale residents want to be annexed by the village of Adamsville, joining about 20 west-end taxpayers who requested de-annexation from Bromont so they might annex with Adamsville in June.

No decision will be made on the request until the Bromont council has received a de-annexation request from Adamsville.

If Bromont council votes unanimously to accept the Adamsville annexation conditions, the request will be forwarded to the Ministry of Municipal Affairs who will make the final decision.

Goodbye, Paul

Paul Reid, a voice synonymous with the finest cross-section of music and poetry, at least to those of us who live within the southern sector of the Townships, bade farewell to his audience on Labor Day evening.

Will the nights ever be the same without the melodious and tender voice of Paul Reid as he chose either records, tapes, or poetry to soothe his CJAD audience's ears through the evening hours?

Paul will be remembered by many for their own particular reasons, some from close contact, the majority from the ambience which filled the ozone as he worked from the small newscasters' studio he preferred as he warmed the hearts of his audience.

Poetry intoned with the ear of the creator.

Music that calmed the sweat of a haggard day.

Slow sensible talk which alleviated average woes.

That was the world of the gentle giant - Paul Reid - a man who disclaimed almost any honor showered upon him, yet, in combination with John Robertson, showed a government how a civilized and concerned community could react to sustain a sheltered workshop when the government halted funding. The radio appeal overcame the deficit by a very handy margin, and let the government be damned.

Paul was a man of stature despite his own imaginary shortcomings. He somehow thought education was by the book and not through the soul - how wrong he was!

Montreal and his listening area will miss him terribly, especially during his Christmas shows in December and July when he completely captivated an audience of a third of a million people.

The call: "This is Paul in Montreal," went off our airwaves Monday night. The voice will continue to enthrall audiences in Hamilton and parts of Ontario's banana belt for years to come.

Nights at 1407 Mountain Street will never be quite the same without Paul's feet propped on the desk, the aroma of a good cigar wafting to the ceiling and a crock of scotch beside him to smooth his pipes.

We can only wish you and yours a very happy time at CHML, Paul.
You'll be sorely missed here, old friend.

JOHN McCAGHEY

Old ways remembered along St. Lawrence

STE. ANNE DES MONTS, Que. (CP) - The people remember the old ways of French Canada in this Gaspé farming and lumbering town on the shore of the St. Lawrence River.

One recent Sunday, for instance, Danielle Guilbeault dressed herself in 19th-century wedding finery, married Pierre Pelletier in nearby St. Joachim de Tourelle in an old-time mass said in Latin and rode off with him in a horse and buggy.

The wedding was inspired by a regional movement to preserve traditions. Organizing it is priest and historian Roland Provost who attended the wedding and later was host at a reception ball and square dance at Chateau Lamontagne, an old mansion filled with historical mementoes on a coastal bluff in this town of 6,000.

"Of course, we understand that things must change, but we believe that traditions are not so much a question of material things or styles but rather a conception of life," Father Provost said afterwards in an interview.

WAS MISSIONARY

He was sitting at a tiny desk in the basement of the chateau, dressed in a rumpled suit with his tie awry, a mild, pleasant man who was for 12 years a missionary to the region's Micmac Indians. He's 63 but looks years younger.

"I suppose we're trying to show the younger generation that people in the old days had just as much fun as they do now," he said.

Surrounding him - and stacked to the wooden - beam rafters - were 30,000 books in French which he began collecting in 1973 as Federal Local Initiatives Project and which will become La Bibliotheque Gaspesienne when opened soon, the largest public library in the Gaspé Peninsula.

He said he bought books himself rather than candy with the money he saved as a boy growing up in Montreal. He has lived in the region since 1948 and now is "un Gaspésien."

Father Provost and his 11 helpers have collected the odds and ends of history, including oral history and legend, from homes in the towns and villages that hug the north coast of the peninsula. Many such artifacts are on display in the 22-room chateau built in the old Anglo-Norman style of the island of Jersey in the English Channel.

St. Anne des Monts itself lies on a stretch of raised beach between the hills and water's edge. On a clear day, the hills behind can be seen 80 or 90 miles out to sea. It's a quiet town that usually generates only brief news of court cases in the back pages of the weekly La Voix Gaspesienne, published 60 miles away in Matane.

But the region is so rich in folklore that historian Marius Barbeau, visiting in 1918, recorded 800 folk songs in a two-month period, 300 from one old fisherman alone.

Although the Gaspé has long been invaded by television, tourists and America rock 'n' roll songs on French-language radio stations, words in old French persist, especially to describe characteristics of the rugged environment and the inhabitants' sea-going life.

For instance, "plein" is used to denote a landing place for boats instead of the more conventional "rivage," and "caye" is used for reef instead of "recif." "Ecore," not found in modern-dictionaries, means a land wall along the sea and

"gueri," meaning cured in the conventional sense, also describes an overgrown path or road.

The region is a sanctuary for characteristics of the Quebec soul, said Father Provost. One is the famous "joie de vivre" which trundled out its colors at the recent wedding ball and square dance. Somewhat in conflict with this trait is the Quebecer's penchant for complaining "which is usually done in a funny way or with at least, an air of resignation."

CULTURE SPREADS

Gaspé culture has spread other parts of the province as well. Father Provost remembers being told, when he misbehaved as a boy in Montreal, "Ne fais pas ton Jean Levesque" (Don't do your Jean Levesque). Not until years later did he learn where the expression originated: Jean Levesque had been a well-known Gaspesian strongman, lumberjack, bully and show-off.

However, economics as well as culture preoccupies Father Provost, who believes some of his own archeological discoveries could create jobs and bolster the tourist industry. Winter unemployment in the region is as high as 35 per cent.

In 1970, he first discovered primitive weapons and tools cut by humans at Ste. Marthe, 20 miles east along the coast. The rock tools, were analysed and found to be 7,000 to 8,000 years old. He said this established the site as one of the oldest known locales of North American natives after the glacial age.

STUDIED ARCHEOLOGY

After discovering similar rocks in the 30-mile stretch between Ste. Marthe and Cap-Chat, he went to France to study archeology to determine whether the discoveries could be exploited to improve life in the Gaspé "and procure work for the people instead of having them go elsewhere."

Talk of unemployment reminded him of a Gaspé adage popular among the clergy: "There's one devil to tempt someone who works, but 100 to tempt someone who doesn't."

Many of the Indian artifacts are on display in a room set aside in the chateau.

"It would be wonderful if we had a university to support us for searches and development," said Father Provost.

"But the matter is in the hands of Quebec civil servants now and we are so far from the capital that our voice is lost by the time it arrives there."

In fact, residents feel generally isolated and cut off from Quebec City in all respects, he said. "As for Ottawa, well, we just don't talk much about it."

"If Ottawa does good or bad, Quebec gets the credit or the blame."

IT'S GREAT PIERRE... LABOR AND BUSINESS BOTH AGREE THEY'LL BE JUST AS SUCCESSFUL IN CONTROLLING WAGES AND PRICES AS WE HAVE BEEN!

Electronic gives C.B.C. wider domestic news coverage

TORONTO (CP) - New electronic equipment is being installed in CBC-TV newsrooms across the country and more attention will be given to domestic events in current affairs broadcasts rather than foreign affairs, Knowlton Nash said recently.

Nash, director of news and current affairs for the English network and a long-time journalist and former CBC Washington correspondent, briefed reporters and critics on the 1977-78 TV program schedule.

He said the news and current affairs department anticipates a "tough, rough and competitive year."

Nash said that because of the election of Premier Levesque's Parti Quebecois government last November, the focus of current affairs programs has switched to domestic constitutional issues.

The English and French TV networks of the government-owned broadcasting corporation will collaborate on four new quarterly report programs dealing with national issues.

The first, Sept. 25, will be an English-Canadian look at French Canada, running 2½ hours. A few days later, the French network will broadcast a similar look at English Canada.

Later in the series, the networks will collaborate on programs broadcast on the same issues on the same nights, but broadcast at different hours so viewers can watch both.

STRENGTHENING STAFF

In the field of news, Nash said the CBC is strengthening its staff in Ottawa and other parts of the country. It also is introducing new light-weight videotape recording cameras which will be more portable, useful in low light situations and avoid the time consumed in developing film from conventional motion picture cameras.

There also will be a nine-part special series in which individuals will report on their personal explorations of Quebec affairs.

When Parliament resumes and begins broadcasting House of Commons debates, there will be a new one-hour Sunday program condensing the week's parliamentary news. Some special Commons debates may be broadcast live on the full network.

Nash said the new emphasis on domestic affairs will mean cutting back on CBC-TV foreign affairs broadcasts. The latter will be concentrated mainly in the program The Fifth Estate and special programs being prepared on West Germany and Rhodesia.

The Watson Report, Man Alive, and Ombudsman also return.

Peter Kent will continue as anchorman on the nightly news report, The National, and with the addition of a Sunday evening network newscasts, there will be network news broadcasts twice a day, seven days a week.

Jack Anderson's Washington Merry-Go-Round

Bureaucratic detente sinks small bus company

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON - The top brass of the Justice Department's Antitrust Division and the Interstate Commerce Commission got together in the backrooms the other day to discuss their mutual animosities. Everyone shook hands and, immediately afterward, the antitrust officials began pulling their punches to spare the ICC from embarrassment.

Here are the fascinating events that led to the detente between the two bureaucratic baronies:

The ICC's reluctant regulators had been fuming over some stinging criticism from the Justice Department's trustbusters. The Antitrust Division uncharitably had blasted the ICC for several anti-consumer decisions.

This stirred the ICC's new boss, A. Daniel O'Neal, to seek a peace conference with the Justice Department's acting antitrust chief John Shenefield. They sat down together behind closed doors, each attended by aides.

An O'Neal aide asked the antitrust officials, please, to stop issuing "cheap-shot press releases" against the ICC. O'Neal put it more delicately; with apparent sincerity, he offered to incorporate more antitrust philosophy into ICC decisions.

By all accounts, the trustbusters were so overcome by O'Neal's cooperative attitude that they rushed out and reversed an earlier decision to challenge another ICC ruling.

This was a ruling to deny a small bus company, Latin Express Service, the right to provide limited service between Miami, Fla., and Union City, N.J. The company wanted to serve Spanish-speaking travellers who had difficulty on Greyhound and Trailways buses.

Latin Express, for example, would have provided bilingual drivers and food with a Spanish flavor. Yet ICC denied the little company permission to run only two or three round trips a week. The ICC ruling, incredibly, claimed this limited service might harm the busing giants, Greyhound and Trailways. The Antitrust Division, which is supposed to encourage competition, objected to the ridiculous ruling. One fuming antitrust official called it "so outrageous as to boggle the mind". It was "absurd," he said, "to think Latin Express could have diverted enough revenue from Greyhound or Trailways" to endanger them.

The Antitrust Division, therefore, decided to challenge the ICC decision, and another sharp statement was started through the bureaucratic machinery. But then the trustbusters, basking in the warm glow of their meeting with O'Neal, changed their minds about the Latin Express case.

A spokesman acknowledged, quite candidly, that the antitrust chiefs didn't want to attack the ICC so soon after the truce with O'Neal. So the spirit of detente prevailed, much to the outrage of some antitrust officials who thought the Latin Express decision was a travesty.

Unfortunately for O'Neal's sensibilities, however, the top trustbusters forgot to tell the press office about their change of heart. The unwitting press office, therefore, issued another blistering release.

"For the second time in two months," declared the embarrassing release, "the Department of Justice has challenged an ICC decision denying a small bus company authority to provide new inter-city service."

The release quotes the antitrust deputy chief, Joe Sims, as proclaiming: "The Commission's decision points up the impossible burden placed on new applicants for motor carrier operating authority by the ICC, even when the proposed service is highly specialized and the applicant is very small."

The only trouble with the press release was that the ICC ruling was not challenged as advertised, and the decision to drop the challenge was made by Joe Sims.

Footnote: A Justice Department spokesman confirmed most of our facts but said the Latin Express case did not involve significant new antitrust issues.

CIA MEMO - The Central Intelligence Agency had no comment last May when we quoted from House investigative files that the CIA was in contact with Lee Harvey Oswald in Dallas on the eve of the John F. Kennedy assassination.

The files described an interview with a Cuban CIA operative, named Antonio Veciana. He told House investigators that he had seen Oswald in the company of a CIA agent who went by the name of Morris Bishop.

The CIA, though maintaining official silence, reacted to our story in an internal memo. We have obtained a copy of the memo which, in fairness, we are now pleased to publish.

This memo, written nine days after the column appeared, is addressed to the CIA's "Deputy Director for Operations". It states:

"The Jack Anderson column of 6 May 1977 alluded to the CIA man, Morris Bishop, in Dallas. The CIA did not have contact in Dallas with Lee Harvey Oswald."

"We have run exhaustive traces to identify Morris Bishop without success. The name Morris Bishop has never been used as a registered alias or pseudonym nor has anyone with that name ever been employed by the CIA."

WHO'S NEWS - Henry Kissinger has told associates firmly that he won't write a kiss-and-tell book about his eight years as America's top diplomat. He wants to provide a meaningful account of the tumultuous events that he helped to guide.

Dr. Roger E. Brinner has taken a leave of absence from Data Resources, Inc., to become a senior staff economist for President Carter's Council of Economic Advisers. Data Resources does an annual $100,000 business with the council. A spokesman said Brinner would be hired anyway because of his "high professional competence" but that special guidelines have been drafted to avoid any conflict of interest.

Letters

Cowansville correction unnoticed

Editor,

Please find enclosed a Xerox copy of a letter sent me by Mr. Georges Bernier, Town of Cowansville, concerning the inquiry I made after reading a story published in your paper, Sept. 2.

On Friday, Sept. 2, Record reporter Nelson Wyatt was credited with a photo on page 5 with the accompanying caption, stating that the old Imperial Bank of Commerce building was to be demolished at a future date.

Soon after this, I contacted Mayor Rosaire Raymond by letter, informing him of same and a few days later he telephoned me to say that he knew nothing of any such plans. However, he asked me to forward to him the press clipping, which I did, and the letter from Mr. Bernier is the follow-up.

Since the Town of Cowansville has kindly furnished me with as much information to date, I believe an explanation is in order from you also. Your readers rely on you for accurate information in their daily paper. Please try to determine where this story originated from and publish it in a future edition of The Record.

Your prompt handling of the matter is anticipated and appreciated by all of us here in Cowansville.

George Kammerer,
Cowansville

Ed. note - The Sherbrooke Record ran a correction on Mr. Wyatt's story several weeks ago. We again apologize for any inconvenience this error may have caused.

CALL FOR TENDERS
 The City of Sherbrooke is calling tenders for the supply and installation of traffic lights at the corner of Galt West & Laval Streets.
 Plans and specifications are available at the office of Brissou and Latendresse, 1115 Prospect Street, Sherbrooke, J1H 1B2, against a deposit of $25.00, reimbursable to unsuccessful tenderers upon return of the documents in good condition.
 Sealed tenders, marked "Tender for the supply and installation of traffic lights at the corner of Galt West & Laval Streets" must reach the City Clerk's Office, at the City Hall, 145 Wellington Street North, Sherbrooke, on or before September 26th, 1977, at 11:00 hours.
 Tenders must be accompanied with a bid bond or a certified cheque, payable to the City of Sherbrooke, in the amount of $2,000.00.
 Tenders must also be accompanied with a certificate of an insurance company guaranteeing the issuance of a performance bond equal to fifty (50%) per cent of the amount of the tender for the labour and fifty (50%) per cent for materials.
 The City of Sherbrooke does not bind itself to accept the lowest nor any of the tenders.
 Robert L. Belisle, City Clerk.

Vintage cars on display
 BULWER — On Sunday, Sept. 11th, anyone looking out their windows, in this area, around eleven o'clock, would notice something a little out of the ordinary.
 The Eastern Townships Vintage Automobile Club members gathered at the Golden Eagle in Birchton and travelled in procession to the Old Blacksmith Shop in Bulwer, where many old and interesting items were seen. Mr. Ross had a fire in his forge and made a horseshoe, while everyone watched.
 Later, the people walked down the hill and had a tour of the Country Store. On display at the store is a 1916 calendar from the Blacksmith Shop, owned at that time by R.B. Parker. There were other interesting items, such as the old cash register and many items on the top shelf.
 From the store, the procession proceeded to the Museum in Eaton, where they enjoyed a picnic lunch and visited the museum.
 Cars in the parade were a 1917 Model T-Ford Touring Car, a 1920 and 1921 models of the same, a 1925 four-door sedan Star, 1928 Willis Overland Whippet, a 1930 Model A Ford, a 1934 Rolls Royce, 1937 Chevrolet, and a 1951 Pontiac.
 There were newer cars in the parade also, some were being driven by members whose antique cars weren't roadworthy at the moment.
 Everyone had an enjoyable time, including the guests and the hosts.

Death

In Memoriam
BUICK — In loving memory of Jim, who left us two years ago today.
 We cannot forget your smiling face.
 Your happy carefree ways,
 Your smile that won so many friends
 In the happy bygone days.
 One of the best this world could hold,
 Your cherished smile, your heart of gold.
 Always so good, unselfish and kind.
 What a wonderful memory you left behind.
FRIENDS FOREVER

In Memoriam
WHITCHER — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Claude, who passed away September 17, 1971.
 The days we do not think of you are very hard to find.

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC CITY OF SHERBROOKE
 To the property owners who are entered on the valuation roll in force in the City of Sherbrooke on August 15, 1977, with respect to an immovable situated in zone B-56 as described below, or in zone A-77 adjacent to said zone B-56.

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given by the undersigned, City Clerk, that at a special meeting held on September 12, 1977, the Municipal Council of the City of Sherbrooke has withdrawn by-law no. 2490 amending zoning by-law no. 1071 so as to create zone BC-19 by reducing part of zone B-56 and to permit the construction of single family and two family detached and attached houses and multi family houses of a maximum of four (4) tenements and to permit class on (1) commercial usages in the quadrilateral formed by St. Francois, Mena'sen, Goretti and Holmes Streets. Zone B-56 is bounded as follows as it appears on the plan annexed to by-law no. 1971, extract of which is reproduced in the present notice:

that all proceedings relating to said by-law no. 2490 are therefore cancelled.
 Robert L. Belisle, City Clerk.

HAVE YOUR CHILDREN THE RIGHT TO ATTEND AN ENGLISH SCHOOL?

The Charter of the French language was adopted August 26, 1977, by l'Assemblée Nationale du Québec. Consequently, French is, in principle, the language of instruction in Québec's schools.

However, English schools continue to exist and the law specifies under which conditions a child can receive his instruction in English.

If a child meets one or the other of the conditions mentioned below and if his parents want him to be admitted to an English school, they must apply to their School Board in order to obtain the required forms.

Note that, in all cases, parents must fill in the form called "Request to receive instruction in English". This form must be signed by both parents except if the child is in the custody of only one person.

Here are the four conditions of eligibility to an English school and the formalities to be observed according to the condition that applies:

- 1 the father or mother received his or her elementary instruction in English, in Québec.
- 2 the father or mother was domiciled in Québec on August 26, 1977, and received his or her elementary instruction in English, outside Québec.
- 3 the child, in his last year of school in Québec, before August 26, 1977, was lawfully receiving his instruction in English in a public kindergarten class or in an elementary or secondary school.
- 4 the child has an older brother or sister who meets the preceding condition.

To that end, all that is necessary is to make a request for eligibility to receive instruction in English, as if the child were to actually attend an English school. The certificate of eligibility which will be issued in the name of the child will be valid for subsequent years.

If your children have been accepted in English schools and that they do not meet one or the other of the conditions mentioned above, you must know that they are not lawfully enrolled and cannot be lawfully enrolled.

We especially wish to draw your attention to the fact that according to section 225, the provisions of bill 101 apply to all children enrolled for the 1977/1978 school year, whatever the date on which they were enrolled.

All certificates of school attendance must be signed by the general director of the school board concerned or by the director of the institution if a private school is involved. In the case of studies made outside Québec, the certificate must be signed by competent authorities.

When a birth certificate is required, the parents must supply an original document or a copy certified by the director general of the school board.

The Charter of the French language, therefore, gives the right to receive instruction in English. However, although this right is acknowledged under the law, some parents may wish their children to receive their instruction in French. In such cases, it must be stressed that these children retain the right to receive their instruction in English and can transfer that right to their children.

With the Gaiters

By Bill Anderson

There are probably many fans who attended last Saturday afternoon's Bishop's Gaiters football game who would never survive a second heart-stopping thriller such as we were fortunate to witness. As this column is going to the presses the Gaiters will be mounting the bus to take them to Kingston for what Coach Bruce Coulter could only describe as, "the same situation we faced last weekend." The Purple and White will be facing the league's unknown quantity, and supposed quality, the Queen's University Golden Gaels in what could be the game that decides the final outcome of the 1977 season.

"We knew last week that McGill was a vastly improved club, and were fortunate to emerge with the victory," said Coulter in a post-practice interview, "but it is the general consensus of the coaches around the league that Queen's will be the team to beat." Queen's did not participate in the season opening Football Festival held at McGill two weeks ago but it is common knowledge that they have lost only two starters from their last year's club which finished second to the University of Ottawa in the OQUAA Western Division.

The Gaiters must, however, possess a psychological edge over their opponents going into Saturday's encounter. This will be the first game of the season for the Gaels, who undoubtedly had figured McGill to be easy victors over Bishop's last week owing to our rather poor defensive record at the Festival. In their season opener last year the Gaels faced an unknown Gaiters club who stormed Kingston with a ferocity seldom seen in College Sport. The Gaiters totally dominating offensively, squashed Queen's hopes for a divisional title early and seem quite prepared and willing to administer an encore performance.

"The defense is ready to get in there and stick," exuded middle-linebacker, Kevin "The Animal" Scott, while relaxing after Thursday's late practice. "We are getting stronger and more confident with each day, and barring any serious injuries, we should be ready for anything they might try to run against us." The defense has been keying on most of Queen's normal formations all week in preparation for what should be their toughest assignment of the year. In Coach Coulter's words, "the boys have had great practices all week and seem to want this one."

As we all know, all of the wanting in the world can not win a football game, unless the offence puts some points on the board. Operating at what this reporter would call less than peak efficiency, the Jim Etchevery-directed offensive unit managed 22 points last weekend, and with an extra week to iron out the wrinkles which produced numerous procedure penalties, they loom ominously as a potentially devastating machine over the waiting Queen's defensive squad.

"We will try to run the ball more with (Bruce) Wilkins this week," said Coulter in obvious respect for "the Moose's" efforts of the previous week. (Wilkins carried the ball nine times against McGill for 96 yards, as well as catching three passes, including one that went for a seventeen yard touchdown.) The Gaiters will undoubtedly take to the air again when the opportunity presents itself. Etchevery's favorite targets this year are Bruce Gair (two TD's last week), and his brother, Steve "Etch". In the event that these two receivers are shadowed too closely, Jim can turn his attention to the likes of Kevin Bennett at split-end and all of his backfielders, including the awesome Wilkins.

Rangers rookies down Beavers 10-5

By LENO O'DONNELL
SHERBROOKE — The Beavers ran into their toughest opponents so far this year when the New York Rangers Rookies ran away to post a 10-5 verdict in their favor.

It was a case of too much experience against youth and although the Rangers had this in their favor the young Beavers tried to hold their own. Ricky Vaive, who seemed to be the target of the New Yorkers, didn't back away and held his end with Duguay. Jimmie Mann seemed to be another target they were gunning for, but he didn't step away. New York had everything in their favor and they didn't need to resort to rough-house tactics to win.

Larry Mensour potted two goals while Denis Halle, Jeff Leverman and Ricky Vaive notched the others for the Beavers. The Delage squad takes on Three Rivers this evening in their final exhibition game and tomorrow night they open the season playing hosts to Shawinigan, with game time at 7:30 p.m.

New York opened the scoring 51 seconds after the face-off when Gosselin and Deblois got away on a break. Gosselin faked shot in centre and then flipped the puck to right wing and Deblois and he made no mistake rifling it into the upper far corner. It was a fine passing play and caught Sherbrooke forwards off guard.

Hardy Astron, Rangers' goalie, made a nice save on Charles Tuplin in close and also smothered the rebound. Both clubs commenced to hit hard, especially along the boards, but no penalties were called by referee Pierre Gibeau.

Wayne Groleau got in on right wing and let his drive go and Ricky Vaive was there to poke home the rebound after 7:03 minutes of play to knot the count 1-1. The New York were playing their positions well and this gave the Beavers some trouble but didn't slow them down any.

Luc Locas missed from front as his shot just went by the open corner. New York began to force the play with everybody up inside the Sherbrooke end. Ron Carter managed to slide the puck out to centre and when goalie Astron came out almost to the blue line, Carter passed to Barry Scully and he lifted it into the open net to put Beavers ahead 2-1. The Rangers had the man advantage at the time.

Barry Scully came right back a minute later to tie the score, but when Donnelly went off Denis Halle teamed up with Ricky Vaive and Jimmie Mann to break the tie once again. With just over a minute left, New York tried but Audycki and Mann got the hoist for staging a little game of fistcuffs just before the end of the period. Each club had 13 shots at the net.

The Beavers had the man advantage to open the middle session but they got caught on poor passing in their own end and Marois put the Rangers ahead when he intercepted a pass, rounded defense and flipped the puck in to the open net. The Rangers came right back three minutes later when Demers was in the cooler.

Sherbrooke was having trouble at this stage and just couldn't get untracked as the Rangers held the upper hand. They were all over the local team who just couldn't do anything right. James finished off a play and at the ten-minute mark Coach Delage sent Alain Reindeau into the fray, but this didn't stop the Rangers, who were flying at this point.

Denis Halle got away but Sullivan pulled him down. This gave the local team a two-man advantage. The locals had the extra man for four minutes, but again just couldn't capitalize on it. Stefanski got away and beat Reindeau on a nice corner when the local goalie came out to cut down the angle, but misjudged it.

Larry Mensour potted his second marker of the evening with Begin and Hallee setting him up. The Rangers bounced right back 20 seconds later when Sullivan tipped in a shot from the front of the net to beat Reindeau in close. Each club took 13 shots on goal again in the second.

Sherbrooke opened the third frame with a man advantage but again failed to take advantage. A scramble developed in front of the Sherbrooke end and Stefanski battled home the puck as Sherbrooke was all mixed up at this point.

Ballingall got the thumb for roughing and holding, giving the Beavers a break. It backfired when Deblois got away from a Sherbrooke gang play and made the red light flash to make the score 9-4.

Ron Duguay extended the lead when he was in on a pass from Keating deked the goalie to lift the disc in to the open net. Ricky Vaive split the defense but missed his chance to tally. Gosselin went off for interfering in front on the net.

Terry Ballingall went for five when he speared a Sherbrooke player, and the Beavers finally came through when Jeff Leverman rifled a pass from Luc Locas for Sherbrooke's fifth goal. The Rangers were certainly dishing it out and fans gave them the raspberry several times. Their checking was high with their sticks up, and the referee could have called more penalties. Despite the experience and weight in favor of the New Yorkers, the Beavers gave a good account of themselves.

Clement Fortier, president of the Quebec Summer Games, will accompany Guy Bureau, president of the Sherbrooke Beavers, and Beavers' mascot Ti-Croc who, with Ktine, mascot of the Summer Games, will officially open the Beavers' season at the Sports Palace Sunday evening.

Georges Guilbault, general-manager of the local club, said the Lake Megantic Maroniers-Marinieres Drum and Blue Corps will be on hand and will give a concert prior to the game. They will entertain the fans between 7 and 7:30. The Corps is comprised of 70 young boys and girls and are provincial champions at the recent tournament held with bands from all over Quebec.

Manager Guilbault also announced at a press conference yesterday afternoon that the 2,000 workers at the Games will be admitted free for the tilt between the Beavers and the Dynamics of Shawinigan. Game time is 7:30.

Season ticket holders, who have not secured their tickets can do so the weekend. The ticket booths will be open Saturday from noon until 5. On Sunday the sellers will be on hand from 1 until game time.

1000 MILE MARATHON — Walter Boyce and his Triumph TR-7 (above) leads the Canadians into the 1000 mile marathon race starting today in Montreal. Blast off was set for Place Ville Marie at 1 p.m.

Montreal hosts 1000 mile marathon

MONTREAL — Top international auto rally teams are arriving in town this week to prepare for the FIA World Championship series Criterium de Quebec, Sept. 15 - 18.

The 1000-mile marathon event, the first of its type to be held in North America in nearly three years, has so far attracted 51 entries, among them cars and teams from Britain, mainland Europe and Japan.

Leading Canadian in the event will be five-time national champion Walter Boyce, of Ottawa - the only North American ever to have won such an FIA world championship rally, the Press On Regardless, in 1973.

Boyce (in car number 9) and his American team-mate, John Buffum, of Burlington, Vt., (in car number 10), will both be fielding British Leyland factory-entered Triumph TR7s.

Buffum, North America's reigning rally champion, will have as his co-driver one of the very few women to compete in the Criterium - his ex-wife Vicki, also a Vermont resident. Boyce's co-driver will be Montreal aerospace scientist Robin Edwardes, whose intimate knowledge of Quebec-region roads could well prove an advantage.

Their Triumph TR7s were specially prepared for the team last winter at Leyland-ST, British Leyland's special tuning unit at Abingdon, in England.

Apart from being equipped for left-hand drive, the two TR7s are identical stable-mates to those rallied by Leyland's European team. These latter British-based cars will also be in action during the Criterium weekend - contesting the Manx Trophy Rally, on the Isle of Man.

Preliminary Criterium action took place in Montreal last evening (the 15th) when time trials were held at Nuns' Island confirming today's starting order.

The official start will be at 1 p.m. today, at downtown Place Ville Marie. From there, the cars will move north, through the Mont Tremblant area, into the Laurentians.

Film-maker for the Rolling Stones

Robert Frank: The truth can't be told

MABOU MINES (N.S.) — Early in March, when only the wind was moving on the bluff overlooking the Atlantic, a sheriff's sedan crawled up the corduroy road to the home of Robert Frank.

The sheriffs from Port Hood and Halifax — emissaries from a distant world of officialdom — had been sent by the Rolling Stones to make sure the 52-year-old Canadian filmmaker would not show the movie he made of their 1972 sex and drug odyssey in North America.

To Frank, the intruders symbolized the power of the Rolling Stones, a power so awesome that it could track him down to this remote Cape Breton outpost where he had come "to get away from it all and see clear ocean; to be more alone."

An intimate of Beat Generation writers Jack Kerouac and Allan Ginsberg, Frank had had his fill of American society in the 1950s whose lives he documented in underground films, and of the early 1970s when he trained his camera on rock superstars like the Rolling Stones.

Five years ago, he retreated to Canada, became a landed immigrant, and settled down in a ramshackle house on a treeless seaside cliff. It was his refuge from "disintegration," private tragedies, "insanity," and many other things which he can never put into words.

Now the sheriffs were on his doorstep telling him that the film he made of the Rolling Stones' 1972 tour of Canada and the United States had so offended the British rock group that they wanted to confiscate all copies and ban it from public theatres for at least two more years.

Frank was not only angry but confused. When he had shown Mick Jagger, Keith Richard, Bill Wyman, Charlie Watts, and ex-Stone Mick Taylor the completed two-hour film in 1973, he had agreed not to put it on general release until scenes to which they objected had been edited out.

Sure, he had defied them by showing it to college audiences, twice in California in 1975 and twice in Canada in 1976, hoping that the resulting public interest and reviews would persuade the Stones to release it.

But why, he asked himself, were they now pulling this "heavy number," sending the cops to search his home, to haul away photographs taken on the tour, and launching legal proceedings in Halifax over ownership of the film?

The Stones feared 'Scorn and ridicule'

(The sheriffs did not find the film because he had left his copy in New York beyond the reach of Nova Scotia law.) Little did Frank know on March 7 that events 1,500 miles away in Toronto had made it imperative for the Rolling Stones to assure that the film should no longer be shown under any circumstances.

Lead guitarist Keith Richard, in town with the group to quietly record an album, was charged on February 28 with possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking and possession of cocaine. His problems were aggravated by global publicity when Margaret Trudeau, the since-estranged wife of Canada's prime minister, attended the Stones' March 6 concert at the seedy El Mocambo Club, partied with them that night, and then trailed them to New York.

The legal papers served on Frank the next day said the Stones were worried that his film could damage their multi-million dollar careers. They clearly feared American authorities would take a dim view of the explicit sex and drug-taking and might well bar future performances in the U.S., their most lucrative market. The March 7 affidavit by group leader Mick Jagger claimed the film subjected them to "scorn and ridicule". Frank, it said, omitted the joyful, musical dimensions of the tour, "distorted events through subjective editing, and included in the film footage events which are private to the Rolling Stones which should never be exhibited without our consent."

But Frank insists the real reason the Stones wanted the film to be confiscated was the "panic" they felt about the upcoming narcotics trial of Keith Richard in Toronto.

"I think they honestly felt the film would hurt Richard and his trial," said Frank. "It is a very serious charge that he is facing and Canadian laws are strict. In New York, he would probably get away with it."

Richard, 34, free on $25,000 bail, recently had his preliminary hearing postponed until December 2 after his lawyer told the Toronto court his client was undergoing treatment of heroin addiction in New York City. If convicted on possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking, he faces a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

prisonment. And that could spell the breakup of the Rolling Stones.

Thus in early March, before Richard's admission of drug addiction, the rock group plainly feared that the movie might influence the outcome of the Toronto court case.

"They wanted to prevent any possibility that the film would be shown in Canada while the trial was going on," Frank told me during a rambling six-hour interview at his home by the sea.

By Frank's account, the contents of the film are even more provocative than its title. It graphically implies that the Stones and their entourage revel in a jetset junkie's paradise of marijuana, LSD, cocaine, and heroin.

The group is portrayed in 'queasy inertia'

The Stones were so worried that the notorious film would leak out that they made an out-of-court settlement with Frank in Halifax on May 17. "They didn't even want the film to be shown in court and risk publicity," he said.

The Stones' Nova Scotia lawyer, Robert Murrant of Dartmouth, is under orders from his clients not to discuss the out-of-court settlement. But according to Frank, he keeps the original film on the condition he doesn't show it until March 7, 1979 and thereafter, only four times a year. The Stones meet the estimated $100,000 in legal fees. Meanwhile the Stones, who each keep a copy of the movie, have the right to edit out scenes which they regard as offensive or personally damaging.

Is it true that the Stones paid Frank $1 million to keep quiet about the film?

"That's ridiculous," he sputtered, pointing to his spartan surroundings. "It's typical of people's thinking. Because they are the Rolling Stones, it is assumed that everything is so much better — the girls are much better, the dope is much better, and the money is much bigger." He said he was paid only about $15,000 for seven months of work.

Frank, a native of Switzerland who emigrated 30 years ago to the U.S., had photographed the cover for the Stones' album Exile on Main Street in late 1971. So when Jagger decided to film their 1972 tour, he again hired Frank.

Speaking as an artist of considerable international reputation, Frank insisted that the film is a "document" and argued that is why the original version should be shown.

"It is valuable as a document because it can never be made again," he said. "It shows the Rolling Stones travelling through America and it shows America as it was then. That time is gone. It is not the same anymore. And I don't think they would ever allow somebody like me in on it again."

"My film is very different because it is totally without compromise in the sense of trying to tell a story or justify what happened. It is just there."

Frank said some of the scenes which Middle America (or Canada) might find "revolting" include:

- Mick Jagger snorting white powder from the tip of a knife.
- Keith Richard being injected by a blond girl who then injects herself.
- A naked woman fondling herself on a hotel bed and talking about the joys of sex and drugs.
- Male members of the entourage stripping girl "groupies" on the Stones' chartered jet.
- Mick Jagger suggestively caressing his genitals.
- A couple having intercourse 30,000 feet in the air while Jagger and Richard egg them on with a throbbing beat of tambourines and maracas.

In Frank's terms the film is not shocking. "People see sex and violence on television shows," he said. "Is it shocking to see someone shooting up?"

According to Frank, the film is full of sexual innuendo and flashes of bare flesh but except for scenes in a hotel room and in the plane, there is no other depiction of the sexual act.

"There are scenes of people sniffing coke, people shooting up, and people smoking dope. But I don't think that's wrong. What's shocking is how hard they all tried to have a good time."

In Frank's unlaundered version, the Stones, their friends, and associates are seen taking hard drugs. But Frank said the Stones are now doctoring the film so that "wherever it can be implied that they are taking dope, it has been edited out... like the one of Jagger snorting coke."

Frank's own film is not a paean to the Rolling Stones. The peacock-strutting, purse-lipped Mick Jagger, who sends the teenagers swooning with songs of sex, violence, drugs and scorn for middle class morality, is conspicuously absent.

Instead, his camera catches the rock idols in unguarded moments — looking insecure, arguing with their wives in boring hotel rooms, and being hounded by autograph-seekers and media vultures descending to analyze the "social phenomenon". It is a sterile isolation, relieved only by the forced gaiety of their notorious parties.

The film depicts a 'queasy inertia' with the Stones "going through the motions," said a June 1975 review in The Village Voice, a New York newspaper, after Frank illegally showed the movie in Berkeley, California.

"The most appalling scene of the film," wrote Greil Marcus, "is not the woman shooting up, not the girl outside Winterland, San Francisco dully stating to the camera that she has no ticket, that if she doesn't get one she'll jump off the bridge, that her baby has been taken away by the state because she was on acid, and what's wrong with a mother on acid who loves her baby, for Christ's sake the kid was born on acid — the worse scene is backstage in New York as, in color, Truman Capote and Andy Lee and their troupe make their entrance, trying and easily succeeding in showing they are far less interested in the Rolling Stones than in each other and then Mick, in black and white now, running for his dressing room, raging, looking sick, yelling F... You as a photographer pursues him, and then slumping down, cursing: 'Bloody bunch of voyeurs!'"

Beyond the possible impact the film might have on Richard's drug trial, Frank thinks it was unsettling to Jagger because "sometimes the truth is hard to take. It is very powerful. And the end result surprised him because it was so unrelenting."

Notwithstanding his legal hassle, Frank is remarkably generous toward the Stones: "I think they were fair. I was totally free to make the film the way I wanted. Even at the very end when I was cutting the negative, Jagger objected to only one scene — some executives from Atlantic Records smoking dope in a men's room."

"I had to take that scene out. It was total hypocrisy. But that was it."

How does he feel now that the film has been effectively censored in its entirety?

"So you see it two years from now," he shrugs. Even if it is the bastardized version that the Stones have chopped up, he knows that people will want to see it not only for its title, or because it is about the Stones, or because it was made by Robert Frank, but also because it has become a legend in its own time as the movie that could not be shown.

To retreat to Mabou Mines is to choose another world: simple, stark, yet beautiful. The sense of time warp is completed when you see a hillbilly with long, undisciplined hair and splattered clothes running down the hillside shooting off crows.

He is Robert Frank, the moviemaker who defied the Rolling Stones, the photographer who wandered over four continents, the man who walked with Jack Kerouac and Norman Mailer, and who was once called "the graphic spokesman of the Beat Generation."

Here he lives at the end of a dirt road in an old farmhouse which he bought with 70 acres for $13,500 in 1972. It overlooks a sweep of the Atlantic embraced by two parentheses of land containing dead coal mines.

His cameras are in the closet. He is content to watch the fishermen bobbing in the sea all day and to hear the strains of their shanties as they drink all night.

His life is his house with the old Quebec wood stove, the creaky hinges, the gonging of the clock, and the frail plants growing in dusty bottles on the windowsill. June, his second wife who is an artist, is painting in the barn. Oh yes, the cat just had four kittens. And might we please have serviettes tonight, just for the guest?

Frank has been gradually accepted in this tiny community where he is known as "The Jew" because Scottish blood runs as thick as the accents and everybody is either a MacDonald, a Rankin, or a Beaton.

The only bitterness he holds toward the Rolling Stones was for invading his private haven with a sheriff's posse and so creating a stir in the county. Until then the most exciting court case concerned the Port Hood man who was found after a bank robbery with a stolen car, a gun, and the exact amount of missing cash. He got off scot free — the story goes — when all the witnesses swore he was much too drunk to have done it.

Talking about the past is awkward for Frank whose sentences all begin with "Well, hu..." and are punctuated by long pauses. Because, as a photographer, he is a visual medium, the raw elements have drawn him toward silence, and at age 52, it is an outrageous conceit to have all the answers.

"Twenty-five years of looking for the right road," he wrote at 47 in his book, Lines of My Hand. "If there are any answers, I have lost them."

Travelling through 31 cities with the Rolling Stones in the summer of '72 was an indoctrination into a stellar society that Frank never knew existed.

"It was like being on a spaceship," he said. "I thought the Stones would be ordinary people. But I discovered that they don't breathe the same air. They live above somehow. They travel through thin air and you are dragged along with them."

With a coveted STP pass (identifying him as a member of the Stones Touring Party) Frank was invited into this closed world of gilt-edged anarchy. He accompanied the Stones from the June 3 opening performance in Vancouver, where fans rioted when tickets were oversold, to the July 26 grand finale in New York, where pies were hurled and naked girls jumped from cakes in a 29th birthday bash for Jagger.

Frank was one of the few outsiders allowed on the Stones' private jet along with their wives, girlfriends, bodyguards, backstage crew, and the "girl-crazy rock and roll doctor" whose main job was to prevent drug and alcohol hangovers and venereal disease.

Frank was on the plane for the celebrated last flight from Philadelphia to New York when two or three carefully screened girls were invited aboard. He filmed associates of the Stones making love to the girls as a blase stewardess walked by. He also shot film of a man fastening a seat belt around a naked girl on his lap as the plane came in to land.

For Frank it was like 'being in a spaceship'

"There was more action on the plane that time than any other trip," he said. For the most part, elaborate security precautions were taken to prevent a recurrence of the sort of violence at the 1969 Altamont rock festival when a man was stabbed to death not far from where the Stones were performing.

In 1972 the Stones had only one brush with the law after their plane, flying from Montreal to Boston, was diverted to Providence, R.I. by fog. Since there was no security at the airport Richard got involved in a shoving match with a persistent photographer. Richard and Jagger were charged with assault and Frank, who was filming the incident, was arrested for assaulting a police officer, an allegation he denies. The three were released on bail to continue the tour. The charges were dropped on April 1, 1977.

The media made a fuss about the rebellious lifestyle of the Stones, depicting the tour, which drew 750,000 fans and grossed $4 million, as a string of orgies.

But Frank — always the detached, unflappable observer — saw the tour as a "downer". He dismisses Hugh Hefner's Playboy Mansion in Chicago as "just a fancy whorehouse" and insists he never saw an "orgy" on the tour "unless you call a girl being screwed by two different guys an orgy."

Frank said that admission to the Stones' parties was strictly controlled but bashes thrown by members of the entourage were more accessible. "They were just like any trendy party. People smoked dope and people talked. The only difference was there was greater pressure on the gate to get in."

The Stones guarded their offstage privacy so jealously that Jagger often shot sequences himself and then gave them to Frank for inclusion in the film.

"There is one good scene in the house they rented in Hollywood which had a mirror above the bed," he said. "You see this guy on the bed rubbing his crotch and then slowly unzipping his pants. The camera zooms up to the mirror and you see it is Jagger himself with a camera."

For the most part, the two-month tour was an endless chain of airplane trips, sterile hotel rooms, and stuffy concert halls with little evidence of pleasure or good-natured fun. The notable exception was the afternoon the Stones goofed off to play billiards and drink whiskey in a Southern pool hall.

To Frank, the routine was monotonous. "You'd see the Stones in the morning (2 p.m. was 'morning' to the Stones) in the hotel lobby before the afternoon concert. You'd drive to the hall. Then there was the concert. Then you'd go back to the hotel. Sometimes there was a party, sometimes there wasn't."

Everything was geared to the performance: "It is the moment they wait for. They perform and all the tension is gone. But everyone else is constantly hanging around waiting for something to happen. You don't have that release."

Stones' film-maker Robert Frank.

"You are just a little pebble. You are not a Rolling Stone."

When Frank was hired to do the film, he "didn't know anything about rock and roll and furthermore, I couldn't give a damn." Jagger knew that. But he had been impressed by Frank's work which included the classic underground film, 'Pull My Daisy, chronicling the lives of Beats, and his book of photographs, 'The Americans, the result of a journey through 48 states after winning the Guggenheim Fellowship in 1955.

At that time, Jack Kerouac wrote of Frank's photographs: "Anybody doesn't like these pitchers, don't like poetry, see? Anybody don't like poetry, go home see Television shots of big hatted cowboys being tolerated by kind horses."

To help him make the Rolling Stones movie Frank turned to Danny Seymour, a young friend who then lived in the same building in The Bowery, the lower east side slums of New York inhabited by winos and derelicts.

Danny was 26, from a well-to-do family, "a very hip guy," said Frank. "He knew more about dope and life in America than the Stones did. His life was more real — I mean that kind of street life — than the Stones' could ever be."

Frank stated that Danny, who revered pop musicians as "truly creative artists of our culture," was heavily into dope on the Rolling Stones tour. By the end he was in such bad shape he could no longer work on the film. He died shortly after, lost on a boat somewhere between Colombia and Bermuda.

Through Danny, Frank tried to understand the veneration of the Rolling Stones as radical symbols who inspired youthful fantasies of revolution, hedonism, and the overthrow of middle class morality.

"Danny idolized Keith Richard because he lives day by day," said Frank. "He doesn't give a fuck. Jagger is always in control whereas Richard is not. And, in that way, he is a more honest person."

Frank's initial disdain for the Stones turned to sympathy when he witnessed their lonely isolated world where they try desperately to live up to an image and find consolation only in their wealth and presumed power.

"It is a hard existence. You have to be ruthless to survive," he said. "And the power means a lot. They enjoy seeing people fall off the sled (fail) as they ride on."

Frank is convinced that the Stones were more offended by the way he betrayed their jealously-guarded image with the "brutal truth" than by the sex and drug-taking in his movie.

"I think Jagger vastly prefers a film like Performance (he plays the part of a recluse millionaire rock star) in which he wears a mask," he said. "In my film, there are two or three moments when he doesn't wear a mask and he is very vulnerable."

One example is the scene in a hotel room where Jagger squabbles with his wife, Bianca. It is sad, homey, not very glamorous. Or the scene where Stevie Wonder is prancing in the spotlight and the camera catches Jagger looking lost, perhaps jealous, and not quite sure what to do.

"These unguarded moments add up to an image of him as shifting, unsure, and not totally in control," said Frank. "And Jagger prides himself on always being totally in control."

Frank, an artist working on a different wavelength, nonetheless respects and admires Jagger. "In front of my viewfinder, I watch people disintegrate. I am untouched. I don't participate. But Jagger is out in the thick of it, taking risks, running the show, and holding the group together."

"Jagger is a survivor in the sense he watches things disintegrate around him. He manoeuvres them, plans them, and knows he's always going to get out alive."

Frank admits he, too, is a survivor of "insanity, suicide, and success" but in a different time and a different space from the Stones.

"It may sound presumptuous but I feel like a survivor when I see what happened to the people I knew. Some killed themselves. Some went under. Some got fat. Some got married. Some are dope addicts. Some got killed. And some just disappeared like I did."

And, once again, he turns the conversation back to the people of Mabou, people who are concerned about the wind, the water, the fish, and the potency of the rum.

Congratulations

Congratulations are extended to Mrs. Nellie Wheeler and her twin sister, Mrs. Tillie Marchand of Richmond, now in the Youville Home, Sherbrooke, who will be 95 years old on Sunday, Sept. 18.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smith of Waterloo, Que., who will be observing their Golden Wedding Anniversary on Tuesday, September 20.

Marriage announced

DUNHAM — Miss Elizabeth Joan Page, daughter of Virginia Ella Page and the late Edwin James Page of Cowansville, Que., was united in marriage to Ronald Eugene Bergeron, son of the late Eugene and Cora Bergeron of Fairfax, Vt., on Aug. 13, 1977.

The Rev. Peter Joyce officiated at the double ring ceremony on the lawn at Motel 2 Lac Dunham, Que.

The bride was given away by her brother Kenneth E. Page. Sister of the bride Bertha V. Dudley was matron of honor and Herbert L. Dudley was best man for the groom.

The reception was held at Motel 2 Lac, following which the couple left for Quebec City and Ontario. They will reside in Swanton, Vt.

EAST ANGUS — The groom and Mr. Wesley marriage of Bridget, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Petelle of Montreal, Que., to Barry Lynn only son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Beattie of East Angus, Que., took place quietly on Sat., Sept. 3, at 11 a.m. in Emmanuel United Church.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by Rev. Gordon Simons with Miss Linda Beattie, sister of the groom, presiding at the organ. The attendants were Miss Wendy Beattie, sister of the Other guests included Miss Audrey Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Waldron, Rev. Terry Blizzard, Miss Robin Heilig and Mr. Perry Beaton.

Following the wedding ceremony a luncheon was served at the Holiday Inn, Sherbrooke, Que.

After a short honeymoon the happy couple flew to Calgary, Alta., where they will make their home as Mr. Beattie has recently secured.

Bridal Shower

WATERLOO — On Tuesday evening, Aug. 30, Miss Jo-Ann Arnott, an October bride-to-be was guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower, given by a friend, Mrs. Yves Menard of Granby and her cousin, Miss Carol Brousseau.

The shower was held at the home of the bride-to-be's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E.C. Salsbury, Bolton Pass.

Upon entering the living room, a salmon-pink gladioli corsage was pinned on Jo-Ann and she was led to a prettily decorated chair which was completely surrounded by beautifully wrapped gifts.

Jo-Ann's mother, Mrs. Elwood Arnott and future mother-in-law, Mrs. Angelo Bec were seated on either side of Jo-Ann and she was aided in opening her gifts by her maid-of-honor-to-be, Miss Dianna Butcher and little Miss Carrie Davies. The gifts were passed around for everyone to admire and Jo-Ann thanked each and everyone for their thoughtfulness.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Y. Menard, Miss Carol Brousseau and Miss Pamela Galbraith.

The evening was brought to a close with a beautiful shower cake, in the form of a bride, made and decorated by Mrs. Gary Paige and Mrs. John Davies, cousins of the bride.

Guests were present from Waterloo, Knowlton, Bondville, Bedford, Granby and Bolton Pass.

Bleser-Rogerson

SUTTON — Grace Anglican Church was the scene of a quiet wedding, Saturday August 13 at 3 p.m. when Arline Ingalls Bleser, widow of the late Nicholas Bleser, and only daughter of Mrs. Edna Garland, and the late Lloyd Ingalls, of Abercorn, was united in marriage to William Rogerson Jr., eldest son of William Rogerson of Richmond, Vt., and the late Mrs. Rogerson. Canon M. Brett officiating at the double ring ceremony.

Mrs. Shirley Cowan presided at the organ. The bride given in marriage by her son Gerald Bleser, was attired in a beige floor length gown of silk and lace, and carried her prayer-book with roses attached.

She was attended by her eldest daughter Lynne Bleser Fuller as matron-of-honor, wearing a floor-length gown of deep pink, and carried a small arrangement of gladioli. The groom had as his best man, his brother John Rogerson of Higganum Ct., the men all had white carnation boutonnières. The bride's mother wore a blue and white gown, with a corsage of pink baby carnations. Colin Fuller greeted the guests at the church door.

Following the signing of the register, and taking of pictures outside the church, the wedding party and guests departed to the Horizon Hotel, for the reception. Following congratulations and punch, all sat down to a turkey dinner for some 70 guests. The best man proposed a toast to the happy couple, responded to by the groom.

Seated at the head table were the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. John Rogerson, Mr. William Rogerson Sr., Mr. and Mrs. H. Garland, Mr. and Mrs. Colin Fuller and Gerald Bleser. The happy couple left for Montreal and St. John, N.B.

The bride's going away outfit was a blue pant suit. Relatives and friends were present from Higganum, Unionville Ct., Burlington, Vergennes, Richford, Vt., Waterloo, N.Y., Dunham, Sutton, Abercorn and Glen Sutton, Quebec. They are residing in Richford, Vt.

West Sutton

Mrs. George Robinson, and Mrs. James Robinson attended the shower for Miss Noreen Russell, Route 4, on Friday evening, Aug. 19, at the home of Mrs. Gerald Page.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley O'Brien and two sons, Erin and Shannon, attended the wedding in Sutton, at the home of Mrs. Emily O'Brien, of his brother, Carol O'Brien, who was united in marriage to Joan Kammerer. Mr. O'Brien acted as best man for his brother. Congratulations to Carol and Joan.

Local boy in Hollywood film

The young man in the picture is Casey Stevens and he's shown on the movie set of "No Place To Ride", a new major motion picture that is now being filmed in Utah, Arizona, and Hollywood. Know who he is? Probably not at the moment, but you will soon. He's a young man from Dunham, Quebec in the Eastern Townships, and also a former Montrealer, who has gone off to Hollywood to be in the movies and he's starting off extremely well, in fact, he promises to be one of Hollywood's hottest newcomers to the acting scene.

Casey (his former name was Steven Paul) had been acting throughout high school and had done commercials and written songs in Montreal and later, Toronto, before making his final decision to run off to the movie capital of the world. Well, it didn't all happen that fast. In fact, he first did college at Champlain, in Lennoxville, Quebec, and then went to LaSalle College in Montreal, to study Hotel Management. Quickly discovering that he didn't want to be a hotel manager, he joined the airlines and flew around the world for a couple of years as a steward (Italy, Poland, Spain, Morocco, Germany, Jamaica, Nassau, England, Scotland, and Switzerland were among the many places he travelled to).

When he realized that flying still wasn't the life for him, he gave up his glamorous "jet-set" existence, changed his name, and turned to the stage, performing for two years in Toronto. However, Toronto didn't exactly greet newcomers with open arms and he found the people in the hiring positions, especially the CBC, unreasonably cold and unwilling to give newcomers a chance.

Displeased with Toronto and its brusqueness, Casey set off to India to study yoga and see what he really wanted to do. He returned to Montreal three months later in a very different state of mind than when he left, and his urge to act was stronger than ever and he managed to land a bit part in a film with Sophia Loren.

He hasn't stopped moving since. Casey left for Hollywood, the day after Christmas (this past one) and flew into Los Angeles, knowing only one friend from Montreal from years before. Before the week was ended, he had secured a position in a Beverly Hills' mansion managing the personal arrangements for an eccentric billionaire, complete with movie stars galore.

One week and one paycheque later, he had escaped his newly acquired post and entered into one of the top acting schools in America (The Peggy Feury Studio). Finishing his study, he found himself with no money and no work. All wasn't over yet. Within the next few weeks, he not only found an agent who liked him, but also a young lady poet cum singer-songwriter named Cat Freshwater, whom he married soon after. It wasn't too long before he auditioned for a film (his very first audition in Hollywood) and he got the part.

In the film, he is co-starring as "Pete," a young motorcyclist who goes off to the desert for a day and ends up in a nightmarish situation, getting shot by an angry farmer and you'll have to watch the rest of the film to find out the ending. It's due for a fall release in Canada, by the way.

What does this prove? Not very much, except that a 22-year-old man can leave a small town like Dunham, Quebec, and build a mountain. And Casey Stevens is doing just that!

Ann Landers says...

It's worse than junk

Dear Ann Landers:

I am an 18-year-old normal, healthy guy who has had only three dates in my life. It's not because I am shy. It's acne.

There are times when my face is so horrible I wouldn't inflict myself on a girl. I never know when the acne is going to be better - or worse - so I'm afraid to set up anything for the future. When my complexion is bad, I just stay home. This can be very lonely.

I've tried several ointments, soaps and so-called "cures" advertised on magazines. Nothing works. I have spent at least $200 on this useless junk and would gladly spend $500 more on something that could clear up my face and shoulders. (P.S. Some guys have told me what certain girls think of me and that should give me confidence but it doesn't. I don't need compliments. What I need is a cure. Thanks.)

Henry The Hermit

Dear Herm:

If you do not know of a good dermatologist (skin specialist) call the County Medical Society and they will suggest a couple. Then go - and quit horsing around with the junk you see advertised. It's worse than useless. It's a gyp. Get going and good luck.

Dear Ann:

Will you print one more letter about telephone solicitors? I'm still boiling. My phone was installed for my convenience. I pay the bill. When you call I must stop what I'm doing to listen to you. You are intruding on me and I see no reason to be polite.

If you want to sell me something, advertise in a newspaper or magazine or on TV, but please leave my phone alone.

Suzie Q.

Dear Q.:

You've had your say and it will be the last - although angry letters are still coming in. That issue was almost as hot as the meatloaf. Let's bury it already.

Dear Ann:

You wrote recently that your biggest beef with the medical profession is that when doctors can find no organic problem they often tell the patient, "Stop worrying about yourself. There is nothing wrong with you." You say patients who have no organic problems but feel rotten should be advised to get psychiatric counseling. Well, here's my story:

In 1965 (when I was in my early 30's) I had severe stomach pains. They were so bad I considered killing myself. I went to five different doctors. They all said it was impossible to have such agony on BOTH sides. Three of the five suggested psychiatric help.

As a last resort I went to a private mental hospital. The doctors had convinced me I was crazy. After two weeks they decided I didn't need hospitalization, but suggested I stay in therapy.

Two years later, still in terrible pain, I went to a sixth doctor who found a tumor on my left ovary. I had immediate surgery and they discovered my appendix (on the right side) was about to burst. That explained the terrible pain on both sides.

Thank God I am alive and well, but I lost a lot of faith in doctors after my experience.

Been There

Dear Been:

Your letter is unusual. Most people complain that the doctors today are knife-happy - too many unnecessary operations. I'm glad you are now well and free of pain. Too bad it took so long. Thanks for sharing.

Sloppy-joe potato pie

Now that school is in full swing there is even less time than usual to prepare a hearty meal quickly. A variation on a pizza, among the favorite eating pleasures of the school crowd, combines Cheddar cheese soup, ground beef and a canned sandwich sauce for Sloppy Joes. Frozen hash browns are used as a pie crust for a change of pace from pizza dough.

SLOPPY JOE POTATO PIZZA
 1 bag (32 ounces) frozen

- shredded hash browns, thawed
- 1 can (11 ounce) Cheddar cheese soup
- 1 egg
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 8 ounces shredded Cheddar cheese
- 1 pound ground beef
- 1 can (15 1/2 ounce) canned sandwich sauce for Sloppy Joe
- 2 tablespoons minced onion
- 2 tablespoons sliced ripe olives

To thaw potatoes quickly, place in sieve. Pour hot water over the potatoes. Drain well. In a large bowl, mix together hash browns, soup, egg, salt and pepper. Spread potato mixture over a buttered large pizza pan. Bake in a 450-degree oven for 20-25 minutes. Meanwhile, saute ground beef and onions; drain fat. Stir in canned Sloppy Joe sandwich sauce and simmer 5 minutes. Sprinkle two-thirds of the cheese over the baked potato crust. Spoon meat mixture over cheese and top with remaining cheese and olive slices. Bake 5 minutes longer. Makes 1 pizza.

UCW meeting

BEDFORD — The U.C.W. held its opening fall meeting in the church hall on Thurs., Sept. 8, with Mrs. Oakes presiding.

The meeting was opened with a devotional period, the theme of which was "Blessed are the Meek". Mrs. Norris and Mrs. Gasser assisted with the readings.

A letter from Miss Pollock, director at MacDonald House was read, explaining the new set-up at the clothing depot; there was also an appeal for layettes and bedding.

Final plans were made for the rummage sale to be held on Wed., evening, Sept. 21st from 7-9 and Thurs., afternoon, Sept. 22nd 2-4. Special prices will be in effect on Thursday.

Tentative date for the Christmas Sale is Thursday, Dec. 1st.

Next meeting will be held Oct. 20th.

Mrs. Percy and Miss

Perault were the hostesses, and a social hour followed the business session.

Today, everyone uses Blackwood. It stands to reason that experts have done considerable tinkering with this fine convention. The first bit of tinkering was to provide that the response of five clubs would show no aces or four aces. It is assumed that if you can't tell which of those two hands your partner holds you shouldn't be playing bridge.

Today's hand was played some years ago in the finals of the Life Master Pairs. Everyone played the hand in spades and made 13 tricks. A few unfortunate underbidders

YVES MARTIN, Recteur

CANADA PROVINCE OF QUEBEC TOWN OF BROME LAKE

PUBLIC NOTICE

(By-law 24-B-77)

Notice is hereby given to owners of taxable immovables located in the East Hill Ward of the Town of Brome Lake who were inscribed on the valuation roll in force on September 12, 1977, that at a meeting held September 12, 1977, the municipal council adopted By-law No. 24-B-77 for the purpose of changing the zoning of part of lot 954 from Rural Residential to Industrial.

That the owners of immovables, located in the East Hill Ward, if they were of full age and Canadian citizens on September 12, 1977, and physical persons; also, those who will satisfy, in the prescribed day, the stipulations of Paragraph 3 of Section 399 of the Cities and Town Act in the case of corporations, commercial partnerships or associations, are eligible to vote on this by-law and to demand that it be submitted to a poll according to sections 399 to 410 of the said Act.

That this demand will be made in conformity with the registration procedure prescribed by sections 398a to 398d of the Cities and Towns Act and the persons eligible to vote on the said by-law will have access to a register from nine to nineteen hours on Thursday and Friday, September 29 and 30, 1977 respectively, at the municipal offices at the intersection of Lakeside and St. Paul Roads.

That the number of owners required to register to demand that By-law 24-B-77 be the object of a poll by secret ballot is 34 and in default of this number having registered the said by-law will be deemed to be approved by all the eligible voters concerned.

That all persons qualified to vote on the by-law may take cognizance thereof at the Town Offices during normal business hours and during the hours of the registration mentioned above.

That the results of the registration will be announced at the Town Office on September 30, 1977, at 19:15 hrs.

Given at Brome Lake September 14th, 1977.

Legion Ladies' Aux. meet

STANSTEAD — Twenty-one members of the Auxiliary of Stanstead Legion Branch No. 5, met in the green room on Tuesday, September 6 for a six o'clock buffet supper of delicious casseroles, salads, relishes and desserts.

After all had done justice to the ample meal, the business meeting took place, with Mrs. Gladys Chartier in the chair, to open the session.

After the usual form of opening, Mrs. Chartier submitted the treasurer's report in the absence of the treasurer and Mrs. Barbara Dubois presented the minutes of the June meeting.

The Auxiliary are offering three student bursaries, each $75.00. Applications should be made to Mrs. Gladys Chartier, R.R. 1, Beebe, before October 30, or one may phone Mrs. Chartier at 876-5021.

Mrs. Clara Wesselink, chairman for the March of Dimes, announced a sum of $500.00 sent to Montreal Legion Headquarters March of Dimes.

With the dart season opening again, sandwiches were solicited to be sold at the games at the Legion Home. This is how the bursary money is raised.

Serviettes are to be ordered with the Legion crest to have them in time for the Remembrance day dinner held annually for Veterans.

Plans were finalized to cater for the wedding reception for the Haskell-Webb wedding on September 10. Mention was also made for the Dart team Christmas banquet to be planned in October.

October hostesses will be Miss Henny Wesselink, Barbara Dubois and Christie Winter.
