Report says Canada refused Banks' return

TORONTO (CP) — The Telegram says the United States was informed by its Ottawa embassy June 13 that the Canadian government had little interest in having Hal Banks extradited to Canada to face a perjury charge.

The newspaper quotes what it says was a confidential memorandum sent to U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers by George H. Aldrich, the U.S. state department's legal adviser.

"Our embassy in Ottawa advises that the Canadian federal government does not have any great interest in reopening the case," wrote Mr. Aldrich.

The newspaper says the same memorandum recommended that Canada be informed that "as a matter of law, the Canadian government is free to make a second request through the courts for the extradition of Harold Banks."

Banks, former head of the Seafarers' International Union, was convicted in 1964 in Canada of conspiracy to assault a ship captain and was sentenced to five years in prison. However, he disappeared in Montreal in July, 1964, while on $25,000 bail pending an appeal hearing.

The perjury charge, laid by the Ontario attorney-general's department related to evidence given by Banks Jan. 9, 1963, to a federal inquiry investigating labor violence on the Great Lakes.

He was arrested Aug. 29, 1967, in New York city but efforts to have him extradited to Canada to face the perjury charge have failed.

Justice Minister John Turner told the Commons Oct. 27 that the U.S. state department informed the Canadian embassy in September that it would not reopen the case although Ottawa could if it chose.

Aldrich, reached by phone in his Alexandria, Va., home said he had no recollection of the memo

In June he was preparing to join the U.S. team of negotiators at the Paris Vietnam talks but he recalls handling a query regarding the Banks case.

"I was in a position at that time where I could have been called on to write such a memo," he said, "but I just don't remember."

Meanwhile, Senator Paul Fannin (Rep. Ariz.) said in a statement released through his Washington office that "I shall continue to press for a response to my request that the Banks decision be reviewed and all the aspects of the making of that decision be thoroughly aired."

Fannin, in Phoenix, Ariz., added: "It seems to me that time is ripe for Canada and the U.S. to come to grips with this question in a clear and open manner."

Last month Fannin made a lengthy Senate speech on the Banks case, saying that Democratic "holdovers" in the Nixon administration have blocked his attempts to get a review of the case.

"This latest information," he said Tuesday in reference to the state department memo, "bears out my statement."

He added:

"These latest disclosures coming to me from Canada are still another awkward chapter in the mishandling of the whole Hal Banks affair. My office has already been in communication with the state department and others in the executive branch of government, endeavoring to uncover the reasons behind the unseemly casualness in the handling of this matter."

"The whole case, since I first became aware of it, has been a chronicle of semi-secret informal meetings, documents shrouded in official secrecy and casual inquiries followed by verbal replies."

Remembrance Day Some want to forget it

Traditional mourning services were held across the country Tuesday as Canadians remembered their war dead, but there were also suggestions that battles be forgotten and Remembrance Day be set aside to think of peace.

A couple placed an advertisement in a Toronto newspaper urging people to change Remembrance Day to "World Peace Day."

A group of Toronto students said there should be no bowed heads on Remembrance Day and organized a ceremony remembering peace heroes. They discarded the traditional hymns and instead sang Give Peace A Chance.

Elsewhere across Canada, the day was observed in quiet solemnity as thousands attended church and military services, placing wreaths at cenotaphs in towns and villages across the country.

The weather was dull and overcast in most provinces with rain or snow falling lightly.

In Ottawa, Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener placed a wreath at the National War Memorial in honor of 110,000 war dead after regular and reserve members of the services marched on parade.

STOOD SILENT

Watched by a crowd that numbered in the thousands, Mr. Michener stood bareheaded for several moments in silence.

Wilhelmina Gray of Vancouver, who lost two sons in the Second World War, placed a wreath on behalf of Canadian mothers.

Among the diplomats from foreign embassies who placed wreaths were representatives of Germany, Italy and Japan, Canada's enemies in the Second World War.

After the brief ceremony, Mr. Michener took the salute at a march past of Legion and Canadian forces units on Parliament Hill. The legionnaires, many of them old and some limping, marched behind the flags of Canada, Britain and the legion's own Dominion Command.

Schools were closed in most provinces; provincial and federal employees had the day off and banks and some private firms were closed.

Stock exchanges were open, but the tickers stopped at 11 a.m. as employees observed two minutes' silence. Many other companies did the same.

Rain and drizzle forced most services in New Brunswick indoors. Ceremonies in Saint John included one at the city memorial for the ship Jervis Bay, an armed merchantman lost in convoy duty in The Second World War.

REMEMBER KOOTENAY

In Fredericton, hundreds of area residents turned out for services at the cenotaph.

Seven official wreaths were laid during ceremonies including a wreath by Lt.-Gov. Wallace S. Bird on behalf of the Queen and another by Premier Louis Robichaud on behalf of the people of the province.

In Nova Scotia, a wreath was placed at the Truro cenotaph in memory of the nine Canadian sailors who died in an engine room explosion last month aboard the destroyer-escort Kootenay.

Halifax's main parade and service was cancelled for the second consecutive year because of rain and fog, but short services were held elsewhere around the city.

Lt.-Gov. John A. Harnum placed the wreath at the Newfoundland war memorial in overcast, dull weather.

In Ontario, the 7th Toronto Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery, fired a 21-gun salute at the province's legislature buildings.

Premier Ed Schreyer joined in the Manitoba ceremonies which included a sheaf of wheat placed at the cenotaph by the Manitoba Association for World Development as a symbol of peace.

Twenty-five wreaths were placed at the Edmonton cenotaph in one of several quiet ceremonies across the province. Alberta and Saskatchewan both had cloudy skies and a few snowflurries.

It was raining in Vancouver as veterans of the Boer War led other veterans to the cenotaph.

Rev. Daijun Yakumo conducted a special service for fallen Japanese soldiers.

Six top execs killed in crash

FIRST LOOK — Students from the North Shore of Labrador took a tour of the S.W. Hooper plant yesterday, for some, their first look at modern industry. Bill Gorham (in suit at right), production manager of the plant, shows part of the plant's operation to some of the 30 students and Wes Nichol. The tour was the first of activities to be held in connection with Youth Appreciation Week. Sponsored by the Lennoxville Optimist Club, Dave Watson, president, and Stan Rowe, chairman of the Youth Appreciation Committee, helped to organize the tour.

WOLFE COUNTY MURDER Found guilty as accomplice

SHERBROOKE — (BSL) — A 22-year-old Wolfe County man yesterday was found guilty of being an accomplice in the murder of an 80-year-old man during an attempted robbery on Feb. 24.

Jacques Leblanc of St. Martvrs will be sentenced Dec. 2. The charge carries an automatic life-imprisonment penalty.

Evidence during the two-day trial in St. Francis District Assizes Court showed that Leblanc, along with two youths, was surprised by the murdered man, Henri Dubois, in a bedroom of Dubois' home.

One of the youths testified that both youths shot Dubois in the chest, then buried his body under snow and brush on a hill outside the village of St. Martvrs. Provincial police were led to the burial place on Feb. 28, by the two youths, both juveniles, who pleaded guilty to murder in an earlier trial and are presently serving 18-month sentences in a house of correction.

Leblanc was found guilty after the jury deliberated for 25 minutes.

Crown prosecutor Andre Langlais produced seven witnesses while defense attorneys Andre Rodrigue and F. E. Barnard offered no defence and opted for the right to address the jury after the prosecutor.

In his summation, Mr. Langlais said it was proven that Leblanc was with the two youths at the time of the murder and offered no opposition to the murder. He did not report it to the police.

Two top writers start in today's RECORD

Art Buchwald, America's great humor columnist, and Joseph Alsop, one of the world's best news analysts, today join the RECORD.

The Art Buchwald Column and Matter of Fact by Joseph Alsop will appear three times a week, starting on today's editorial page.

Buchwald's column appears in more than 350 newspapers around the world and is avidly read by millions. The writer has been called the most comic American observer of the world scene since Mark Twain.

Although most of Buchwald's columns are written from Washington, the writer will go anywhere he thinks there's a good story — and do just about anything to get it. He has chased goats up and down the mountains of Yugoslavia, climbed trees to get a bird's-eye view of the races at Longchamps and traveled to Turkey for a firsthand impression of a Turkish bath.

Buchwald is the author of a dozen best-selling books. He also appears regularly on the lecture circuit because he enjoys meeting people. He took an $18-a-week job as a junior reporter on a New York paper, quickly demonstrated his talent for perceptive and polished

Mc Parland, Brinco president dead

LABRADOR CITY, Nfld. (CP) — A jet aircraft crashed into the side of a nearby openpit mine Tuesday night, killing eight persons, including the top officer of the corporation building the giant Churchill Falls hydroelectric power project.

The crash of the two-engine de Havilland 125 aircraft killed Donald J. McParland, president and chief executive officer of British Newfoundland Corp. Ltd., and president of Churchill Falls (Labrador) Corp.

Mr. McParland, on a speaking tour that started Monday, was the second Brinco president to die in office.

An RCMP officer at the scene said darkness blotted out much of the crash area, but "pieces of plane were strewn over a large area—as well as bodies."

The aircraft, owned by Brinco, crashed into the mine face of what is known as the "Smallwood mine," owned by Iron Ore of Canada.

Labrador City is about 350 miles northeast of Quebec City in the Labrador section of Newfoundland. The city itself is about five miles from the Quebec border.

DOT officials from Moncton, N.B., and Ottawa were expected to begin an investigation this morning and RCMP said they would go in today "to gather up the remains."

BOARD TO MEET

A Brinco spokesman said that while "we have management in depth" to run the billion-dollar operation, "you can presume there will be a meeting of the board as soon as possible."

The others killed:

—Eric G. Lambert, vice-president of finance for Brinco and Churchill Falls.

—John Lethbridge, executive assistant to Mr. McParland.

—Fred E. Ressegieu, general manager of Acres Canadian Bechtel of Churchill Falls and vice-president of Canadian Bechtel Ltd.

—J. Herbert Jackson, assistant general manager of Acres Canadian Bechtel and vice-president of Canadian Bechtel Ltd.

—Arthur J. Cantle, assistant general manager of construction for Acres Canadian Bechtel at Churchill Falls, Que.

Wreckage was strewn over both the top and bottom of a 150-foot cliff.

ATTEMPTS LANDING

No one saw the accident, but there were reports from area residents of a loud noise followed by a flash of fire after the plane attempted an instrument landing.

TODAY'S CHUCKLE — Sign of the times: City traffic in the country and country music in the city!

Stirring trouble in strike

MONTREAL — (CP) — Union spokesmen said Tuesday outside agitators are responsible for stirring up trouble in a strike of 1,100 truck drivers and helpers now going into its third day here.

Tuesday was calmer than Monday, when seven men were arrested, but at least two incidents were reported during the day.

One truck driver was beaten up by a gang using iron bars and had to be taken to hospital. And a truck was reeked in a goon raid on a company yard.

At the headquarters of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, conducting a strike against 40 cartage and moving firms, spokesmen reiterated the union's desire for an orderly strike.

Some of the smaller grocery stores in Montreal, without truck fleets of their own, were already starting to run short of commodities such as bread, pastries, butters and fresh fruit and vegetables that are delivered either daily or at the beginning of every week. Many groceries take delivery of supplies of Monday.

No progress was reported towards settlement of the dispute between the teamsters and the Quebec Trucking Association, which represents 32 of the 40 firms affected by the strike.

A spokesman for the trucking association said none of the trucks damaged Monday belonged to firms hit by the strike.

Union members decided on a strike Sunday, by a vote of 635 to 270, when they rejected a management offer of a wage increase of 81 cents an hour. Current hourly wages range from $2.22 to $2.87 in a 45-hour week.

But union spokesmen said the union's main demands are a guaranteed eight-hour day and the right to refuse to haul a dangerous load.

It is so easy to play when you see all the cards. That is, some hands are easy to play. Here is an old-timer that was played in an important team match in 1937. Both South players arrived at five diamonds doubled.

The bidding in the box was that at one table. We don't know how it went at the other table nor do we know the play. All we do know is that each declarer wound up going down one after West started out by leading the king and ace of spades.

The bidding should have located all the cards for South so we must assume that it is really hard to find the winning line of play. See if you can work it out!

South must start proceedings by ruffing that second spade with some diamond other than the six. He must now realize that East is marked with both the diamond and club kings for his opening bid and he must force an entry to dummy by leading his six of diamonds and overtaking with dummy's seven or leading the eight or nine and overtaking with dummy's 10.

After this start East might just as well throw in his hand and start the next deal.

Suppose he forces declarer by leading out his queen of spades. Once more declarer must ruff high so as to be able to enter dummy with a second diamond. Then he takes the club finesse; cashes a second club; ruffs another club to clear the suit. Ruffs back to his own hand. The sensational play is to ruff the ace of hearts, draw the last trump and spread.

Your Horoscope

JEANE DIXON

FOR THURSDAY, NOV. 13, 1969

Your birthday today: Practicality becomes the motif for the coming year. You may find you have to think for others, including some whose interests do not coincide with your own. Romantic interests take more of your time and attention for the next couple of years. Today's natives have a poetic streak, are usually restless but inclined to work it out in solitude. They tend to seek dramatic dwelling places.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get started early and put in a full day. Close transactions, taking into consideration the latest information. Add to your savings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Projects, new studies begun now have better prospects over the long run. If you have delayed answering correspondence, finish it! GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Investigation, search for more details seems indicated as your main approach to present potentials. Do not hesitate to travel to get what you want. Rearrange your budget to regularly save more.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The relatively slow pace of today gives you and your group a chance to test a new idea. Creative enterprises thrive. Travel is easier. Compare notes with others with similar interests.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your work demands all the extra know-how you can master. New ideas, better management are at a premium. Put everything at your disposal into it—while the chance exists.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Personal plans mainly prevail. Begin an educational series or a thorough review to update your information. Family agreements can be reached with comparatively little difficulty.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Try to settle all outstanding negotiations, issues of conflict, or adjustment of claims. Home and social affairs take on a generous, expansive mood. Visitors bring welcome news, perhaps interesting gifts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your intuition today will guide you to some practical way of improving your income with reasonable effort. Be sure to try out the idea before your enthusiasm wears off.

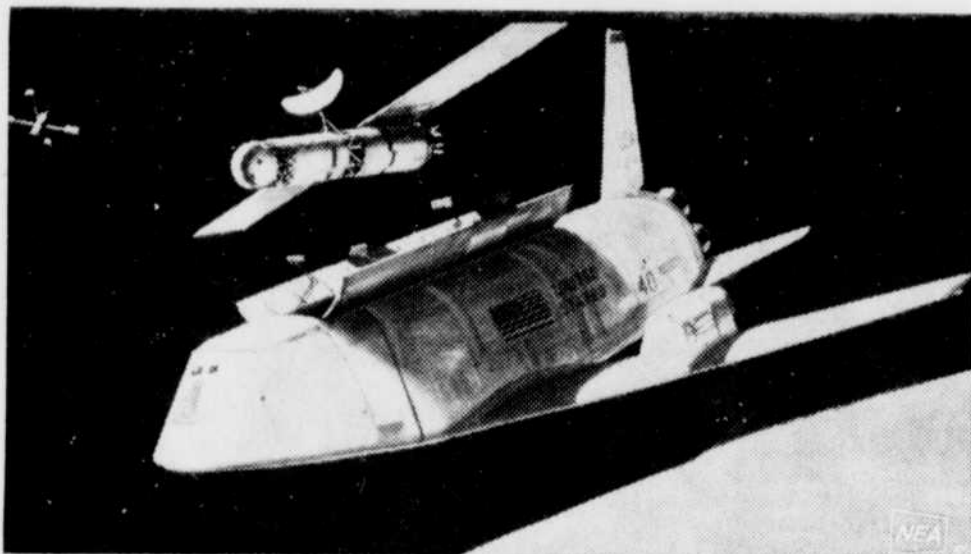

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Discreet inquiry can bring you more enlightenment than a week's search of published reports. Your work gives you the extra chance to ask good questions. Take the quality of your sources into account.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lay aside the chronic puzzles. And seek fresh information. You may find some long-held assumption is not valid.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Confidential, special arrangements are quite feasible today. Try for permanent advantages rather than short-term excesses. Reschedule your activities to provide more chance for relaxation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your search for knowledge is strongly rewarded. In every little trip and incident along the way there is a lesson spread out for understanding. Meditation early this evening opens the door.

SPACE TRUCK is what this proposed vehicle would amount to. The giant fixed-wing shuttle would carry a satellite into space, send it on its way toward another planet and then dock with a space station in permanent orbit to pick up cargo or men for return to earth. It is one of several concepts of a reusable space shuttle being studied for NASA.

19th time China misses on UN vote-again

UNITED NATIONS — (CP) — For the 19th time the General Assembly has barred Communist Chinese participation in the United Nations.

The 126-member assembly Tuesday defeated the annual Albanian resolution calling for the replacement Nationalist China with the regime in Peking. The vote was 48 for, 56 against and 21 abstentions, including Canada.

Last year's vote was 44 for, 58 against and 23 abstentions.

The assembly voted 71-48-4 that the matter was an important question needing a two-thirds majority for passage.

For the first time, neither Canada nor the Soviet Union spoke in the debate, not even to explain their vote.

Canada's reason was that she is in the midst of recognition negotiations with the Peking regime in Stockholm. She is certain to vote yes after there is an agreement. For three years Canada has abstained.

Prime Minister Trudeau said in a press conference here that the Stockholm talks are, "I hope," in the process of "winding up."

RUSSIANS COOL
The silence of the Soviet Union and three other East Bloc delegations, Bvelorussia, Ukraine and Czechoslovakia, reflects a new low point in Sino-Soviet relations.

Italy, which like Canada is engaged into recognition talks with Peking, switched her vote this year to abstention from no. She also dropped a proposal of previous years that would have had Secretary-General U Thant appoint an ad hoc committee to investigate whether China wanted to join the UN.

Air Canada plan blocked by British

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada has been officially notified by the British Board of Trade that its radical plan to lower transatlantic air fares has been rejected, a spokesman said Tuesday.

The proposal, submitted Oct. 20, would have put a new fare structure into effect Dec. 1 for groups of 50 or more travelling on an excursion basis.

The spokesman said the proposal "has been rejected as submitted."

"However, the company is optimistic that agreement will be reached" on a "compromise" proposal.

Under Air Canada's original proposal the company would have bypassed a regulation of the International Air Transport Association stating that cheap group fares may be extended only to members of existing clubs or similar organizations.

The airline wanted to make this type of fare available to any group of 50 or more which could be brought together for a trip.

Under the original proposal, the lowest return fare between Montreal and London would be $165.75. Air Canada's present low is $250.25 between Montreal and London.

Trudeau optimistic on China recognition

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday that Canada's Stockholm talks with Communist China are in the process, "I hope," of winding up.

The prime minister told a press conference that he is optimistic about the outcome of the talks that are aimed at achieving recognition between Canada and Peking.

Describing the talks as "constructive," he declined to go into details, saying that it would be indiscreet at this time.

Trudeau met some of the UN press corps briefly after a two-hour session with Secretary-General U Thant which included lunch.

The primary point of discussion was Canada's concern over environmental questions, particularly Arctic pollution.

Trudeau said Thant had allayed his fears about how developing countries would consider his proposal for an international regime that would control pollution.

On other matters he said that Canada is "extraordinarily" concerned about the nuclear weapons race and that Canada shares of "moderately optimistic" feeling of Thant about an end to the Nigerian civil war.

Earlier Trudeau met the employees of the Canadian consulate in New York and the Canadian mission here. He shook about 150 hands and chatted for about one hour at each place.

Laporte : Need economic anchor

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre Laporte, a candidate for leadership of the Quebec Liberal party, said Tuesday French-Canada needs a new nationalism anchored to economic realism if it is to survive in the 1970s.

Speaking to a service club, the Liberal house leader said "the entire strength of the Quebec people" must be diverted to an all-out drive to double the current number of jobs in the province by 1975.

French-Canada, he said, must make up its mind to become involved in business and industry on a large scale or face the threat of disappearance.

QUEBEC (CP) — Immigration Minister Mario Beaulieu announced Tuesday the nomination of Rene Marleau and Francois Dupre as director and assistant director of Quebec's immigration services in France.

Besides Mr. Marleau and Mr. Dupre, the office will include an information officer, three persons responsible for orientation of immigrants and office and administrative staff.

Tough times in the palace

LONDON (AP) — The Queen is unable to make ends meet on her salary of £9,134 ($23,748) a week, the British government said Tuesday and Parliament is appointing a committee to consider a royal pay increase.

Prime Minister Wilson told the House of Commons that efficiency experts examined the Queen's household twice in the last six years to cut down royal spending but next year the monarch—who never handles money herself—will go into the red.

"Accordingly, detailed discussions took place between treasury officials and the Queen's advisers," Wilson said, announcing that a new select committee will be appointed at the beginning of the next Parliament to rule on royal pay. By the time the next Parliament begins—it would be in 1971—Her Majesty may already be spending more than her salary.

The necessity for Buckingham Palace penny-pinching was discussed in the United States last week by Prince Philip. He disclosed on television that the royal budget is under strain and said with a smile that the Royal Family might have to move out of the 600-room palace.

His remarks ignited a row in Britain over the cost of keeping the Queen.

Rain contributes to accidents; one injured, three cars damaged

SHERBROOKE — (HS) — Accidents yesterday injuring one person and damaging three cars were blamed on wet pavement and rain.

A 26-year-old housewife, Mrs. Nicole Ruel, 1052 Chalifoux St., was taken to St. Vincent de Paul Hospital late last night following a two-car collision at the corner of Chalifoux St. and 10th Avenue.

She was injured while travelling with her husband Fernand, 30, after a collision with a car driven by 38-year-old Roger Boisjoli, of 148 King St. in Richmond, also accompanied by his wife.

Mrs. Ruel was taken to hospital by a Security Corps ambulance and treated for minor injuries.

Both cars were reported heavily damaged. Earlier, four young Americans, travelling on Depot St., collided with the lane dividers at King St.

The driver, 21-year-old Jean Barselou of Newport, R.I., told police he did not see the luminated dividers when he crossed on King St.

None of the passengers was injured although the car was seriously damaged.

LEGISLATURE Disagrees on Bill 63, quits party

QUEBEC (CP) — Jerome Proulx, a 39-year-old teacher, Tuesday announced his resignation from the Union Nationale caucus in disagreement with the government's language legislation.

Mr. Proulx, elected in the 1966 general election as member for St. Jean, rose in the national assembly of Quebec on a question of privilege to announce his resignation.

He said the bill, which guarantees the right of parents to have their children educated in either English or French, is against the best interests of Quebec's French-speaking people.

Mr. Proulx, who voted against the bill during second reading along with another government member, Antonio Flamand (UN — Rouyn-Noranda), said he will continue to sit as an independent.

Mr. Proulx said outside the chamber that Premier Bertrand had asked him to resign at least twice.

He is expected eventually to join Rene Levesque's separatist Parti Quebecois.

Mr. Proulx is the second member of the assembly to resign from his party caucus in protest against the language bill.

Yves Michaud, member for Montreal Gouin, quit Liberal ranks earlier when his party caucus decided to vote for the bill at second reading and continues to sit as what he calls an independent Liberal.

Want retroactive language grants

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government is seeking compensation from the federal government for second-language teaching in Quebec during the last 100 years.

This Quebec position on the federal government's new $50,000,000 program to promote language training across Canada emerged Tuesday from discussion in the national assembly of Quebec.

Opposition Leader Jean Lesage asked the government to explain its attitude on the federal proposals made public last Thursday and asked if it would insist on recovering some of the past expenses.

Cultural Affairs Minister Jean-Noel Tremblay said the federal proposals are preliminary, "involve constitutional implications" and require further analysis by Quebec.

Mr. Tremblay said Quebec had informed the central government that its grants would have to take history into account.

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said the Ontario government has asked that the federal grants be retroactive to cover a second-language program already under way in that province.

Parade ban no answer

Residents of the Province of Quebec, and especially those living on the Island of Montreal, have become thoroughly disgusted with the repeated parades and demonstrations being staged by small groups in protest against some move or other by the authorities.

If the demonstrators would content themselves with a march that ended up in orderly fashion, the populace might be prepared to regard these demonstrations as tolerable even if they caused a degree of inconvenience to the public at large.

But in almost every case, the Montreal marches have resulted in wild disorders and damage to public and private property and at times have even threatened human lives.

Thus the decision of Montreal Executive Committee Chairman Lucien Saulnier to seek a by-law allowing the banning of any parade which the municipal authorities believe may end in disorder may find favor with many citizens.

But there are legitimate doubts as to the basic wisdom of such a course of action, aside from the question as to whether the Montreal City Council has the constitutional rights to adopt it.

The right of dissent and protest has long been one of the basic freedoms which the people of this country have enjoyed. This right is recognized under the Criminal Code, with the reasonable proviso that these demonstrations must not endanger public order and good government.

It would seem that the existing legislation provides all the legal machinery required to control any potential cause of trouble and it would be unwise to give the troublemakers any additional cause for protest by passing a general law designed to cover an individual situation.

If approved by the Montreal Council, the by-law undoubtedly will be challenged in the courts and its application could be delayed for months or even years. In the meantime, the agitators would be provided with an excuse for staging weekly protest marches in the name of liberty.

Mr. Saulnier deserves sympathy but he should ponder the probable results of his action.

Youth deserves some fun

Youth Appreciation Week now being observed by the Optimist Clubs throughout Canada and the United States may be greeted with mixed feelings.

Probably never before in the history of mankind has youth as such been given such prominence, such appreciation, such an attentive ear by those who are no longer youth.

Youth today is neither as bad or as good as its accusers and defenders claim. It never was that bad or that good.

The main burden of youth today seems to be that the mass of it is being labelled by the acts and attitudes of the minority.

Youth is in reality a very aware outfit just now, better informed and more tuned in with the times than the rest of us were in our younger days.

We do not despair of youth at all but rather wish for it to enjoy its youth.

Somehow or other the young people do not seem to have so much plain fun any more; they have become—or at least think they have—serious adults before their time.

They should observe the old philosopher's advice to have fun while they may. The burdens of modern living will come to them soon enough and they will be better able to bear those burdens if meantime they have had a bit of fun.

TIMELY QUOTES

You cannot go on being bystanders on so many major problems. It is already clear that the federal courts will not hesitate to step in, if necessary, and you will be supplanted.

Matter of Fact By Joseph Alsop

Hanoi's fourth policy review

WASHINGTON — For the fourth time since American intervention in Vietnam in 1965, the Hanoi Politburo appears to be divided by a debate about its war policies. The outcome can perhaps prove the acid test of the new American policy adopted by President Nixon.

The evidence for the debate in Hanoi is both fragmentary and curious. It takes the form of speeches by First Party Secretary Le Duan, and Le Duan's hated rival, Truong Chinh, both replete with the customary communist gobbledygook. Both speeches were obscure, and Truong Chinh's speech was rather oddly addressed to the staff of the North Vietnamese propaganda magazine, Vietnam Pictorial.

Yet most U.S. analysts agree that these speeches reveal a sharp difference about priorities. "Building socialism" in North Vietnam was put first by Truong Chinh, who rebuked the Vietnam Pictorial for devoting whole issues of the magazine exclusively to the war. Winning the war at all costs was put first by Le Duan, who also rather openly admitted disagreements in the leadership.

"Between two comrades in the party," said Le Duan, "there can be diverging views. That is normal. (but) it is necessary to discuss these views to reach unanimity. The collective working system must be firmly maintained. It is inadvisable to adopt the opinion of one person and force all others to follow it."

As to the subject of these "diverging views," it has to be deduced from the past record. Yet there can be almost no doubt that Le Duan is pressing for further huge drafts on North Vietnamese manpower, in order to fuel the war in the South; while Truong Chinh is resisting this pressure.

"PROTRACTED WAR"

The record is so decisive because it is so clear. In 1965, the Hanoi Politburo was rent by its first debate, in which the Chinese Communists also participated. The question was whether to respond to U.S. intervention by "reverting to protracted war." This simply means returning to classical guerrilla war, fought with small units at low cost.

The Chinese, plus Hanoi's official military doctrine, plus certain members of the Politburo, were on the side of "reverting to protracted war." Truong Chinh almost certainly favored this course. But the majority, unquestionably led by Le Duan, instead decided to go forward with big unit war, which had already begun before the United States intervened.

This meant ever-increasing demands upon North Vietnamese manpower, since the Viet Cong in the South could not conceivably carry the burden alone.

Hundreds of thousands of North Vietnamese troops were sent to the South, beginning in late 1965. Yet by the summer of 1967, another crisis-stage had been reached. That summer there was exactly the same debate about "reverting to protracted war," with the exact same outcome.

North Vietnam's manpower exports to the South, to fuel the Tet and subsequent offensives, were enormously increased once again. In 1968, in fact, what Hanoi did was almost equal to this country sending off to war every able-bodied man who had reached draft age in 1965, 1966 and 1967. Yet the results in Vietnam, if not in the United States, were both militarily and politically disastrous.

PATTERN OF LOGIC

Both these earlier debates, in 1965 and 1967, have been traced in detail in captured documents of the very highest level. The pattern of the third debate, at the end of 1968, has been inferred from fragments of intelligence. Yet it fits the earlier pattern with perfect logic.

In brief, the hideous losses and disastrous failures of the three great "victory offensives" of 1968 seem to have changed the majority in the Hanoi Politburo. Defeated twice before, the advocates of "reverting to protracted war" now gained the upper hand. The manpower tap was therefore turned off, reducing infiltration to a comparative trickle. Hence the indigenous VC in the South were required to carry a much larger share of the war's burden.

The trouble is that this step, which might well have been successful in 1965, soon proved to be near-fatal in the very different circumstances of 1969. The immediate consequence was the progressive destruction of the whole VC structure in the South, now well advanced in many provinces.

This progressive destruction of Hanoi's unique, irreplaceable asset in the South has in turn led, unquestionably, to the fourth debate inside the Politburo. As already stated, Le Duan is surely pressing for further huge investments of North Vietnamese cannon-fodder, just as he did before, in order to sustain intensified big unit fighting in South Vietnam. This is the only remedy, albeit a hideously costly, rather dubious remedy, that Hanoi really has open.

The first party secretary's remark about "diverging views" and the "collective working system" sound encouragingly defensive. But if Le Duan wins the argument, it will still be a test for the President, for the tragic reason that more fighting unavoidably means more casualties.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Pigeons have been fighting man for possession of the streets for as long as anyone can remember. The World Almanac says the Columbian livzie (city pigeon), a native cliff-dweller in Asia, Africa and Europe, had little trouble adjusting to statues and skyscrapers it encountered in the rising cities. Despite efforts ranging from shooting and poisoning to forced migration, the birds seem to be winning the street war.

President Nixon's telegrams

WASHINGTON — The most interesting thing to me as far as President Nixon's speech on Vietnam went, was to see the large stacks of Western Union telegrams on his desk in the White House. The President called in the press, news and TV photographers to prove he had the vast support of the American people the day after he made his speech.

What surprised me was how President Nixon got the telegrams so fast. Anyone who has dealt with Western Union in the last few years knows that sending a telegram via Western Union is no problem — it's getting them to deliver the telegrams that takes a bit of doing.

This is how the conversation usually goes.

"I'd like to send a telegram."

"What is the party's name and telephone number?"

"What do you want to know his telephone number for?"

"So we can phone the message to him."

"Look, if I wanted to phone him, I'd call him myself. I want to send a telegram."

"What we do is call your party and then mail him the telegram. He should have the wire in a few days."

"If I wanted to write him, I'd send him a letter. I want to send a telegram, and I want it delivered to him."

"Well, why didn't you say so? We'll deliver it for you for an extra 75 cents charge, above the cost of the telegram."

Now, I'm not attacking the Western Union Co. for trying to make the delivery of a telegram a profitable business. The snappy WU boy of yesteryear, dressed in his uniform, is a thing of the past; and WU probably makes more money selling candygrams than telegrams.

All I'm doing is raising the question of how President Nixon managed to get Western Union to deliver the telegrams on the same day without making the sender pay the extra 75 cents.

What probably happened was that right after the President's speech, he received a phone call.

"Is this President Nixon?"

"Yes, it is."

"What is your first name, please?"

"Richard — the middle initial is M."

"We have a telegram for you. May I read it?"

"Yes, go ahead."

"Wholeheartedly support your wonderful speech, which laid it on the line and gave courage to the Great Silent Majority. Keep socking it to them."

"That's wonderful. Who signed it?"

"It's signed Julie and David."

The president hung up and the phone rang again.

"President Nixon? We have a telegram for you."

"Read it."

"You certainly took care of the effete snobs and bad apples. My prayers are with you. Love Spiro."

All night long the phone kept ringing and either the President, Mrs. Nixon or Tricia had to write down the messages. They were groggy at breakfast, and finally the President realized he wasn't going to get any work done. So he called a meeting of the National Security Council and it was suggested that the attorney general ask Western Union if they might deliver the telegrams to the White House instead of phoning them in, despite the fact that most senders had not paid the extra 75 cents.

Western Union, in a wave of patriotism, agreed to the request, on the condition that the President wouldn't tell anyone that he was getting his telegrams on the same day without payment of an extra fee.

The President agreed, but he was so overwhelmed by the number of wires he received that he forgot his promise and called in the press. Now Western Union is in a helluva jam because the Great Silent Majority has suddenly discovered it can send a telegram and have it delivered on the same day without paying 75 cents.

It's the first break the Great Silent Majority has had in years.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Bright Future Possible For Heart Attack Victim

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

For those who, with or without trying to prevent it, suffer a heart attack, what does the future hold?

It can be reasonably bright but, because so many of them have heard so much about the seriousness of the disease, they are often prey to a depression that can interfere with their recovery. After a heart attack the victim is likely to attribute every pain in his chest, neck or arms to a recurrence, unmindful of the fact that such pains may have other causes, such as anxiety, arthritis, gall bladder disease or hiatus hernia.

Actually, with proper care most persons who have had a heart attack can live out their normal life span. In fact, the attack often acts as a timely warning which, if heeded, will prolong one's life. The question whether one can return to his usual work after the attack is often raised. It has now been shown that in most cases those who do so live longer after the attack than those who don't.

Other factors in preserving life after a heart attack include appropriate treatment of any other disease that may be present; maintenance of the normal weight for your height; restricting your intake of salt, sugar and foods high in cholesterol; retraining from smoking; avoidance of emotional stress; getting moderate physical exercise daily and getting a good night's sleep supplemented by one or more short naps during the day.

Q—What steps must I take now to donate my eyes to an eye bank?

A—Since the state laws differ regarding the legal disposition of body organs after death, you should write to the Eye Bank of Sight Restoration, Inc. (210 East 64th St., New York, N.Y. 10021). This organization can refer you to the eye bank in your state where you can obtain the details you need.

Q—At your suggestion, I wrote to the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, 1790 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10019, for more information about glaucoma. My letter was returned. Have they moved?

A—Yes. The new address is 79 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Parker were recent guests of Mrs. Ruby McCurdy in Lennoxville.

The hostesses were Mrs. Ivy Hatch and her daughter.

Mrs. Annette Malboeuf was a recent supper guest of her niece, Mrs. Hartley McIver and Mr. McIver and son, Danville, on the occasion of Mrs. Eric Malboeuf's birthday. Mrs. Eric Malboeuf made a decorated birthday cake trimmed with roses and candles to match, for the occasion. A pleasant evening was spent, after which Mrs. McIver expressed her thanks for the gifts.

Among those who attended a bingo at Sherbrooke, under the auspices of L.O.B.A. 636 Francis Valley Lodge, where a pleasant evening was spent, were Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Malboeuf, Valcourt, and sister-in-law Mrs. Regina Malboeuf of Manchester, N.H., Mrs. Lucille Vidal and Mrs. Annette Malboeuf of Richmond.

Sutton

Mrs. J. Schuitebor, Ottawa, was a weekend guest of her grandmother, Mrs. Clyde Jersey.

Miss Ina Gardner spent a few days with friends in Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Nellie Sherrer has gone to Greenfield Park, where she will make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Dempsey.

Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Phelps were in Lennoxville Oct. 28, guests of the latter's sister, Mrs. Parsons, and visited their brother-in-law, Mr. Parsons, who is in hospital.

Mrs. Grace Smith, New Market, Ont., has been spending several days with Messrs Ernest and Paul Jenne.

Mr. and Mrs. David Jones entertained a few relatives and friends on October 26 in honor of his aunt, Mrs. Thelma Bickford Morel's birthday. Luncheon was served, including a decorated cake. Mrs. Morel received several gifts for which she expressed her thanks.

Relatives and friends were sorry to hear that Mrs. Ware Derby, Sutton Junction, the former Shirley Boule has returned to the B.M.P. Hospital for further treatment.

Misses Laurie Page, West Sutton, and Sally Derby, Sutton Junction, spent a few days with Mrs. Bernice Boule.

Several relatives and friends were here to attend the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. George Sherrer held in the High School gymnasium.

Miss Carol Cooke spent October 27 in Montreal.

Miss B. E. Harvey was also in Montreal on Oct. 29.

Mrs. M. E. Darbe, Miss Cecile Darbe and Mrs. J. L. Brown, West Brome, were calling on Mrs. J. Prentice and Mrs. B. Russell on Oct. 24.

Sympathy is being extended to Mrs. Richard Domingue and family, Abercorn, and to Mr. and Mrs. Adelard Domingue and daughter in their second bereavement within twelve days by the death of their husband, son and brother, Richard Domingue, who died at the B.M.P. Hospital, Oct. 31.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brett and family have returned from Germany and are guests of his parents, Rev. J. H. M. and Mrs. Brett.

Funeral service for the late Mr. Fay Sturgeon, Brome, was held at the Sutton Funeral Home on Oct. 30, with burial in Fairmount Cemetery. Mr. Sturgeon was a former resident of Sutton and an employee of the C.P.R.

For and about Women

It's Christmas at Le Carrefour . . .

By MARGUERITE BLADON

The Centre Hospitalier auxiliary is so excited about all the Christmas goodies on hand, they have decided to hold a pre-Christmas party, and you are all invited to come and have yourselves a ball!

Let me describe some of the things that caught my roving eye... little brass pots for melted butter, great for a lobster party, in three sizes too... a hookah that actually works... a T'Ang horse that you could turn into a gorgeous lamp... and if not he'd beautify any table... a silver filigree belt to enhance an enterprising miniskirt... beads in all colours that become headbands by simply tightening the thongs, very in 'y'know!

Incense burners and all kinds of heavenly scents... cotton bedspreads from India that could double for wallhangings... a hand painted picture done on a leaf my dear, a divine soapstone Buddha... pure silk evening scarves trimmed with a gold thread, very posh, and oh! so expensive... beautiful evening bags in black and white beading, velvet, or peau de soie... a dress length straight from India trimmed with a huge hem of tiny silver mirrors... rosewood birds, originally combs, to hand over a fireplace... a set of eight white horses, all action and grace... a pair of porcelain figurines... copper flower containers, and ivory bud vases... elephants (trunks up of course!) leather match boxes, billfolds, car secretaries, purses... tie racks, tobacco jars, and Parkeys... Wine glasses so delicate you almost hate use them... carafe sets, crystal pieces, always in demand this time of the year... and a tiny china thimble for somebody's beloved Grandmaman.

For the handicraft experts, everything from hand-loomed ties to Laplanders for the chic apres-ski crowd... Goggles, and tuques... kitchen accessories... bathroom accessories... and the toys! Dreamy, and worth every penny because they are all fun as well as educational... gift wrapping's thrown in for a nominal fee... pretty white and gold boxes, very festive... Toiletries for mesdames and also messieurs... everything for your Christmas tree, from the stand up... indoor lights, outdoor lights, garlands, door trimmings, mobiles, balls and wrappings, and cards, for every age. Have a good look at the lovely Italian creches, they are knockouts... and here's more good news. They will take telephone orders at 563-5555-local 375... they will welcome worried husbands, and children who need advice and suggestions. Parking is free, and a smiling commissionaire will show you where it is... they will be open from 9:30 a.m. until 9 p.m. Steaming coffee is served when you need a break, and by the way the cafeteria is excellent... and there's more!

Every time the alarm clock goes off some lucky person will win a huge bottle of excellent Christmas wine. How's that for fun? And to top it all off, you are to take 25 cents off every purchase over one dollar just to help you save a little this time of the year... if you can't come by car then the bus service is fine, and they leave the bus terminal at 10:10 a.m. — 1:30 — 3:40 — and 4:40 p.m. The date you ask? Nearly forgot!!! November 18th and 19th, and you won't regret it.

25th wedding anniversary

CLEVELAND — Mr. and Mrs. Steve Perkins entertained a number of relatives and friends on the occasion of the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Lariviere.

On arriving, Mr. and Mrs. Lariviere were presented with corsages by their daughter, Mrs. Marc Girard (Betty) and Mr. Girard.

Cards were enjoyed at six tables by the adults while the children played games. Prizes for cards were won by Miss Sandra Johnston and Mr. Lloyd Oakley and consolation prizes by Miss Elaine Fowler and Mr. Isaac Morrill. Each child was given a prize.

At midnight, lunch was served in the dining room which was decorated with streamers and white wedding bells and included a prettily decorated wedding cake made and decorated by Mrs. Steve Perkins.

Mr. Perkins presented the honoured couple with several gifts for which both Mr. and Mrs. Lariviere expressed their appreciation. The evening concluded with the singing of "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" with Clifford Perkins at the piano.

Guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Blake (Dorothy Lariviere) and Allan of Montreal; Mr. Wm. Healy and Mr. Kenneth Healy of Brockville; Mrs. Russell Walden, Sharon and Deana of Kokomo, Ind. and Mr. Isaac Morrill of Asbestos.

Panel of Canadian Women combats bigotry at home

TORONTO (CP) — Molly Posen, an attractive blonde grandmother, is demonstrating how one woman with neither funds nor professional experience can help combat racial and religious experiences in her own community.

With four or five housewives of diverse racial and religious backgrounds—known as the Panel of Canadian Women—she appears before several public gatherings a month. "We tell them what it's like raising a family when you're a Jew, an Indian, a Japanese or a black."

She says audiences find it easy to identify with the panel because they are ordinary people, rather than experts in discrimination.

The setting can be a church hall, a service club, an ethnic club or a home-and-school meeting.

The meeting opens with each of the panelists giving a brief talk.

"We come as friends and neighbors," says Mrs. Posen in her opening remarks. "Only by frank communication can we dispel fears, myths and misconceptions about people of other races and religions."

LEARN PREJUDICE She says Canadians are mostly unaware of their prejudices and seldom utter racial slurs in public.

"But what's really important are the things said or demonstrated behind closed doors. Children learn prejudice at home."

She tells how a six-year-old playmate of her daughter's explained that they were moving "to get away from the Jews."

Catherine Searles, a dentist's wife, tells how her parents tried to protect her from anti-Negro sentiment.

"But they weren't around all the time to stop the name-calling—names like black cloud, coon, nigger and chocolate face. When I was a kid, I'd become furious and fight back. My children today get called the same names but I advise them not to respond by fighting. I tell them that all people are different in some way and get called names at times. But I think it's a sad commentary that I have to make these weak excuses for bigotry."

Mr. Leone Dubois was sponsor for his son. The ushers were Mr. Duncan Kemp, cousin of the bride, and Mr. Ronald Dubois, brother of the groom.

Mrs. Stone, mother of the bride, chose a gown of beige lace with brown accessories and a corsage of orange colored roses. Mrs. Dubois, mother of the groom, wore a green dress and coat ensemble with matching accessories. Her corsage was orange roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Riverview hotel, Bedford, for 140 guests. The bride's table was centered with a three tiered wedding cake complemented with bouquets of carnations and baby mums with tall white tapers. The bride's cake was made by Mrs. B. Monette.

Bobby Gardner and his band supplied the music for dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Dubois left for their wedding trip through the New England States. The bride travelled in a brown dress and coat ensemble with a corsage of green carnations. They will live in Bedford.

Out of town guests were from Ridgeway, Ont., Ajax, Ont., Montreal, Cowansville, Knowlton, Sutton, Granby, Shawinigan, Danville, Chambly, St. Johns and Henryville.

CURLING CLUB TEA

A large number of active and social members enjoyed the opening tea held recently at the Lennoxville Curling Club.

The guests were received by the president, Mrs. H.S. Peterson and Mrs. Austin Scott. Mrs. R.E. Mosher poured at a tea-table decorated in an autumn theme.

Members of the executive and the entertainment committee acted as hostesses. The included: Mrs. I. Saunders, Mrs. E. Sims, Mrs. C. Mallalieu, Mrs. S. Rowe, Mrs. A. Hallam, Mrs. S. Abbott, Mrs. F. Lord, Mrs. H. Brown, Mrs. A. McAteer, Mrs. W. Johnson, Mrs. E. Lennon, Mrs. R. Clavet, Mrs. H. Porter, Mrs. C. Savage, Mrs. G. Pariseau, Mrs. P. Tinker, Mrs. R. Mooney, and Mrs. H. Peterson.

LENNOXVILLE ASSOCIATION FOR RETARDED

The Lennoxville Auxiliary for the Retarded held its last meeting for the year in the Ladies' Parlor of the United Church.

Mrs. D'Arcy Bennett opened the meeting with prayer. After the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, the treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Thompson, gave a report on the Bazaar and Tea which proved to be most successful.

The president thanked all the members and associate members for their help and support in this worthy project.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Arnold McLeod and Mrs. Thomas Saunders.

Highlights

Plans have been completed for the St. Patrick Mission Circle tea in St. Patrick's Church Hall, on Saturday, November 15 from 4 to 1:30 p.m. There will be chicken, potato and jellied salads, rolls and squares on the menu.

A food table, surprise boxes, and a gift table of aprons, doll's clothes, hat boxes and many attractive items for Christmas gifts will be displayed.

Pourers at this event will be Mrs. R. McVeigh, Mrs. W. Copeman, Mrs. Stella Veilleux and Mrs. Fred Shelley.

Pourers at the Annual Christmas Tea and Bazaar at the Trinity United Church Hall on Nov. 19 from 3 to 6 p.m. will be Mrs. Gordon Loomis, Mrs. Robert Cutts, Mrs. Russell Wheeler and Mrs. D. MacLennan. The tea is sponsored by the Trinity United Church Women.

A set of memorial chimes were dedicated at the Lennoxville United Church recently. The chimes were obtained through the many contributions given in memory of loved ones, by numerous members and friends of the congregation. The memorial chimes committee, headed by Mr. Robert Stafford and Mr. Alex Rowat, was responsible for guiding the project to its successful conclusion. The dedication service was conducted by the minister, Rev. A.B. Lovelace, assisted by the organist, Mrs. Fred Fox.

MR. AND MRS. JEAN-YVES DUBOIS following their wedding in Ste-Jeanne-D'Arc Church, Stanbridge East. The bride is the former Margo Jean Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Stone. Mr. Dubois is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Dubois, also of Stanbridge East.

Dubois-Stone wedding

STANBRIDGE EAST — A pretty autumn wedding took place in Ste-Jeanne-D'Arc Church when Margo Jean, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Stone, became the bride of Mr. Jean-Yves Dubois, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Dubois. The church was decorated with autumn flowers and foliage. Rev. Wilfred Micelette officiated at the double ring nuptial mass. Mrs. A. M. Cantin played the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white peau de soie floor length gown, fashioned with a round neck line. Guipure lace trimmed the long sleeves and chapel length train which fell from just below the shoulders. Her three tier elbow length veil fell from a coronet of tulle roses. The bridal bouquet was pink roses and stephanotis.

Mrs. Dennis Breault, matron of honor, wore a floor length gown of Italian brocade. Her headress was in rose design with a short matching veil and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and stephanotis. Miss Roxanne Breault as junior bridesmaid, and her sister, Susan, as flower girl, wore identical floor length gowns of turquoise Italian brocade with rose design headress. Their bouquets were pink roses and stephanotis.

SURPRISE! — Mrs. Kate Bailey was the guest of honor at a birthday party at the home of Mrs. Oscar Sargent, Mansenville.

Surprise birthday party

MANSONVILLE — On Nov. 4, Mrs. Oscar Sargent was hostess at a surprise birthday party for Mr. Kate Bailey. The guests assembled before Mrs. Bailey's arrival with her granddaughter, Mrs. Cedric Bailey, Jr., supposedly to spend the afternoon with Mrs. Sargent. Mrs. Bailey was first alerted when she noticed the number of coats hanging in the hallway.

On entering the room where the guests were assembled, Mrs. Sargent pinned a carnation corsage on the guest of honor's shoulder, while the visitors joined in singing the birthday song.

Mrs. Bailey was presented with a money tree and many cards. A few amusing games were played.

At the beginning of the lunch hour, Mrs. Bailey thanked everyone, saying what a happy surprise it had been for her.

Mrs. Sargent was assisted in serving by a number of the ladies present. The birthday cake, complete with lighted candles, was presented to Mrs. Bailey by her granddaughter. A few pictures were taken as a fitting memorial of a happy afternoon.

90TH BIRTHDAY PARTY — Mrs. Hosanna Lamothe, at a family gathering celebrating her 90th birthday.

90 years of living celebrated

MANSONVILLE — Mr. and Mrs. Leon Lamothe entertained at a family gathering on Nov. 2 in honor of the 90th birthday of Mr. Lamothe's mother, Mrs. Hosanna Lamothe. The birthday cake was made by her daughter, Mrs. Flora Drouin.

Among those present from a distance were her sons: Leo Lamothe and Mrs. Lamothe, Farnham; Eugene Lamothe and Mrs. Lamothe, Ville Jacques Cartier; her sisters, Mrs. Mabel Godin, North Troy, Vt.; Mrs. George Godin and Mr. Godin of Richford, Vt.; and Mrs. Irene Fillion and Mr. Fillion of Woonsocket, R.I.

Others from nearby were Mrs. Emma Cote, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Cote, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cote, all brothers and sisters-in-law of Mrs. Lamothe, as well as a large number of grandchildren and great grandchildren.

"BRONCO" KICKS OUT. A Bronco of Navy Light Attack Squadron Four goes into action somewhere over South Vietnam's Mekong Delta. The small, twin-engined prop-driven plane was borrowed from the Marines when the Navy needed something between a racehorse jet and a workhorse helicopter for operations in the delta where jets can't slow down sufficiently for close air support and helicopters are too vulnerable.

Beast proves to big a burden for federal government

OTTAWA (CP) — Unable to obtain even an acceptable definition of the beast, the federal government has decided to back away from educational television broadcasting.

The decision, announced Wednesday by Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier in the Commons, throws back to the provinces responsibility to arrange transmission as well as production of educational television programs.

It also aroused a suspicion in J.P. Nowlan (C—Annapolis Valley), a member of the Commons broadcasting committee. He suggested the decision is a retreat by the government in the face of provincial jealousy over the constitutional control of education.

The main change from the present situation is that all cable television operators will be required in future to keep open at least one channel for ETV. Any control the federal government will be able to exercise over the content of such programs will be through the Canadian Radio-television Commission.

Recent technological developments were offered by Mr. Pelletier as the reason why the government will not attempt to revive Bill C-179 which was presented in the last session March 10.

PLANNED UHF UNITS

The bill would have created a Canadian Educational Broadcasting Agency to set up and operate for the provinces a series of ultra-high frequency stations. The proposal came as a result of recommendations of a federal task force study of ETV and detailed hearings by the Commons broadcasting committee.

Since then, however, developments in the use of cablevision and in progress made with video tape recording and laser beam transmission have rendered UHF less attractive. A note to Mr. Pelletier's statement claims the cost of UHF is nearly four times as high and the technique is less effective.

As well, Mr. Pelletier said, the provinces will have available services provided by the CBC, to be paid for by the government. Also successful have been measures worked out to get programs on the air in specific parts of the country.

As treated by the bill, legitimate programming was to be presented in a "structured context" which meant audiences would be enrolled in courses or required to take an exam or be given a diploma.

The provinces, particularly Quebec, have protested the definition is too narrow. Mr. Pelletier told the Commons discussions will continue in an effort to reach an acceptable solution.

Meanwhile, he reassured the Opposition, the government will stick to its policy of refusing a broadcasting licence to provincial governments.

Nighttime walks on lunar surface

NEW YORK (AP) — Apollo 12 will make man's second journey to the moon's surface next week, but those who want to see it all on television should be prepared to miss plenty of sleep. And for the first time viewers will see live color pictures from the moon.

Many of the critical manoeuvres of the 10-day mission, including two walks on the lunar surface, will come at hours likely to discourage viewing.

United States networks are preparing round-the-clock coverage, but it will not be as extensive as that devoted to the flight of Apollo 11 last July.

Not only will the moon walks come at night and in the early morning, but much of the exploration will take the astronauts beyond range of the camera. At one point, the astronauts plan to descend into a crater, which also will take them out of radio contact.

The spaceship, carrying astronauts Charles Conrad Jr., Alan L. Bean and Richard F. Gordon Jr., is due to blast off from Cape Kennedy at 11:22 a.m. Friday. Conrad and Bean are scheduled to land the lunar module on the moon at 1:57 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 19.

All times listed here are Eastern Standard.

The first moon walk will last from 6:02 to 9:32 a.m. Wednesday and the second from 12:30 to 4 a.m. Thursday. Lift-off from the moon is set for 9:27 a.m. Thursday.

In Canada, the CTV network is scheduling 2½ hours of coverage during the 10-day flight, while CBC will offer 18 hours.

Both networks will cover the lift-off from 10 a.m. until noon Friday. They also will cover key activities such as the space walks and splashdown.

Magog held Armistice Day service

MAGOG (Special) — Magog citizens observed Armistice of the two World Wars last Sunday, when Mayor Maurice Theroux said: "People should try and work together in peace as they have proved able to do during the two wars."

Magog's chief magistrate praised the annual remembrance service, calling it a necessary and worthwhile reminder of the benefits we now enjoy because of sacrifices made by men and women who paid the supreme debt for our freedom and peace.

Kenneth Bryant, a former officer in the Canadian Forestry Corps took the salute for the march past, and was accompanied on the reviewing base by Douglas Powers, President of Unit 203 of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans Association; Mayor Theroux; Father O. Poulin who directed prayers in French; and Jacques St. Onge, who represented the Dominion Textile Company Limited.

Women of No. 72 Ladies' Auxiliary, A.N. and A.F. were also on parade.

Capt. Harold Flanders was parade marshal, and directed the service.

English prayers were offered by Rev. Vernon Bell, who paraded with numerous former servicemen and women who took part in Sunday's remembrance service.

Also playing an important role, was the girls' band from the

MAGOG REMEMBERED — The annual Armistice Day ceremony held at Magog took place last Sunday afternoon, when Kenneth Bryant took the salute in a march past by district veterans who paraded with Unit 203 of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans' Association; their ladies Auxiliary, No. 72; the girls' band from Sacred Heart Convent; 4th Lake Magog Boy Scouts and Cubs; the

Sacred Heart Convent, led by Rivard St. Jacques.

Lake Magog Boy Scouts, Cubs; Navy Cadets from the Magog Technical School; the French speaking scouts of the community; and the Magog Girl Guides and Brownies also took part, in what proved to be a colorful, and solemn ceremony.

Bastford says: Credit competition good for consumer

OTTAWA (CP) — Competition between sources of consumer credit is a good thing for the country, Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Bastford told the national convention of the federated council of sales finance companies here Tuesday.

He said the government's action in recent years in setting standards of disclosure — "the so-called truth-in-lending laws that have been passed in Canada and abroad" — had resulted in real progress.

These laws had been beneficial to the credit industry because they had stimulated competition.

Mr. Bastford said his department is making a detailed review of the Combines Act. Although it was too early to prophesy in detail the outcome of the revision, there was a strong case for promoting competition in all fields not subject to some other form of social control.

One aspect of competition in consumer credit was the extensive use of advertising.

"Through various blandishments and siren songs the consumer has been invited, enticed, and persuaded to borrow money, to expand his commitments, or to consolidate or refinance his debts," Mr. Bastford said.

As a result, many people had set their sights on achieving higher and higher standards of living.

Mr. Bastford said the government intends to take legislative action against improper use of promissory notes. They were never intended for use in consumer credit transactions as a companion to a conditional sales contract.

LEST WE FORGET — Capt. Harold Flanders, CD, a distinguished soldier and veteran of the Second World War, was parade marshal in Sunday's Armistice service held at the Magog cenotaph.

MAGASIN LACROIX

294 Main St. West — MAGOG
Tel. 843-3209

MAGOG — (Special) — Last Thursday evening, at the regular November council meeting, Mayor Maurice Theroux and his aldermen threw open the door to storekeepers to set and maintain their own hours. Immediately, several Main Street West merchants advertised that they would remain open until 9:30 Thursday evening as well as Friday evening.

Several approaches have been made to city hall here regarding store hours, some storekeepers favoring the opening extra hours, and some opposing the practice. Mr. Theroux and his council said it would now be up to the businessmen to formulate a policy among themselves and then present same to the city.

For the storekeepers, who have been striving for Thursday opening, the extra evening of business will help them keep their own against outside opposition, especially from Sherbrooke where extra store hours on Thursday were recently allowed by the authorities there.

While some merchants still object to the extra evening of opening, it is apparent that most places of business on Magog's Main Street West will be open this Thursday evening. And, as one storekeeper said, there is no use of adding on extra hours unless we can draw a crowd. He immediately decided on Thursday evening specials, and so have others of the shopkeepers in this area, known to some as "Magog's Golden Mile".

Already store window signs have been posted, some declaring Thursday night specials, as the city prepares to meet outside competition.

"We won't be outdone," one clothing store merchant said, and his enthusiasm is being echoed all along the Golden Mile. So, Magog joins the rush for Thursday business, and are confident the practice will be appreciated by the shoppers who buy here.

Msgr. Leon Bouhier was buried Monday

Telephore Lavoie

MAGOG (Special) — Donald Lizotte, now a detective with the Magog Police Department will take over from Director of Police and Fire, Telephore Lavoie, on January 1st, 1970, when Mr. Lavoie goes into retirement.

Notice of the change was made last Thursday at the November council meeting.

Normand Hartson, 30, now on the police force will be transferred to the detective role with the City of Magog.

MAGOG (Special) — Msgr. Leon Bouhier passed away at Magog last Wednesday, at the age of 90. He served as priest in charge of Magog's St. Patrick's parish (St. Patrice de Magog), from July 20, 1933 until September, 1966, when he retired and turned over his charge to Msgr. Harve Noel.

Nantes, France, Jan. 13, 1879, and came to Canada at the age of 22 to join a brother living here. He completed his studies at the Seminaire de Sherbrooke, and was ordained a priest by the late Msgr. Paul Larocque on Feb. 24, 1904. Msgr. Bouhier's first charge came in 1908, when he was given the task of creating two parishes, to be named St. Alphonse de Winslow and Ste. Margaret de Linwick.

In July, 1921, Msgr. Bouhier was appointed to the parish of St. Elie de Orford and remained there until being transferred to Magog.

Msgr. Bouhier's funeral took place Monday morning from St. Patrick's church here.

REGISTER DEER AT MAGOG

Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m., 55 deer had been registered in at the Provincial Games Department depot which is located next to the Magog Tourist Information Office. Pictured left to right, Peter Ross of Bishop's University is seen assisting in the checking of a deer brought in by Leslie Fekete of Montreal, who is seen watching Ian Juniper, biologist in charge of the checking post; and at right Ernest Fekete of Montreal, who shot the 172 pound animal with a Winchester model 88, cal. 308 rifle near Fitch Bay. This was deer number 53 registered, and measured 73 inches from nose to tail end, had a 29 inch neck, 43 inch chest, and carried horns with 8 points that measured 13½ inches across.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Gail Borden helped to solve the problem of keeping food from spoiling. The World Almanac notes. He invented a meat biscuit for pioneers which won praise but lost money. He then developed condensed milk which achieved popular acceptance because it was successfully used by Union soldiers during the Civil War. In addition, he worked on concentrating fruit juices, tea, coffee and cocoa.

O'Keefe Quebec Mixed Curling Championships to be held outside Quebec City

MONTREAL — The O'Keefe Quebec Mixed Curling Championship will be held outside of Quebec City this season for the first time since the start of the mixed competition in 1961 and for the first time since 1965, it will be an open race for the title honors with new winners guaranteed.

The week long 1970 provincial title match will be held in Kenogami, from February 2nd to 7th, with the top rink advancing to the national mixed finals in Vancouver, March 9-14.

Major reason for the switch to the Saguenay region is to honor the 50th anniversary of the Kenogami Curling Club where the Monday to Saturday double round-robin series will be played.

Ironically the Saguenay rink headed by Earl Carson of the Bagotville Canadian Forces Base club which has made the provincial mixed finals almost their exclusive property for the past three years at the Quebec Winter Club in the provincial capital, will not be around to make a fourth try on home region ice. Both Carson and second Al Sully were transferred to other Canadian Forces bases out of the province, earlier this year.

The most important change in the series of province wide competitions leading to the 1970 O'Keefe provincial and national mixed championships, details of which were announced today by the brewery, concerns play at club and regional levels.

As in previous years, the province has been divided into zones where regional playdowns will be held, starting in December, to determine the 14 rinks which will make the trip to Kenogami.

This season however preliminary competitions will be on a club basis with each club in a region providing one entry in the regional final. Club regional finalists must be selected in a round-robin or double knock out series held on club ice under the supervision of the mixed series regional officer. Only rinks selected in such actual club competition will be eligible to participate in regional playdowns.

Previously any number of individual rinks from each club could enter directly in the regional finals, which were held as open competitions.

One additional change has been made in the regional play set up. The northern and southern Eastern Townships zones which formerly held a combined final to select two provincial championship entries, will each hold separate regional title events this year.

The northern Eastern Townships final will be played at the Asbestos Golf and Curling Club, January 17, the southern at the Magog Curling Club, January 18.

The St. Maurice Valley zone play leads off the regional series with a championship final at the Wabasso Curling Club in Trois Rivieres, December 6.

All other regional finals will be held in January, including Montreal zone competitions which are in four divisions: Lakeshore, with a final on January 10 at Pointe Claire Curling Club; Laurentian, January 17, at Rosemere Curling Club; Central, January 17, at Greystone Curling Club; South Shore, January 24, at the St. Lambert Curling Club.

The Quebec City and district championship will be held at the Victoria Curling Club, from January 6th to 11th.

Five more of the 14 regional finals are also scheduled for Sunday, January 11, North Shore zone, at Baie Comeau Curling Club; Lower St. Lawrence zone, at Matane Curling Club; Western Quebec zone, at the Hull Winter Club; Southwestern Quebec zone, at the Beauharnois Curling Club, near Beauharnois; Northwestern Quebec zone, at the Matagami Curling Club.

Winding up the series, one week before the provincial playdowns begin in the same district, is the Saguenay — Lac St. Jean regional championship at the Saguenay Country Club, in Arvida, January 25.

This year for the first time competitors will be permitted the use of brooms made of inverted straw, although brooms with an inserted leather or plastic tongue are still forbidden at all levels of competition.

The O'Keefe Quebec mixed series is rated as the largest organized mixed curling series in the country. A total of over 1200 rinks are expected to take part in preliminary play at the province's 132 clubs.

Eligible to compete are rinks composed of players 21 years of age and over as of January 1, 1969, with the men playing the positions of skip and second, the ladies, lead and third.

The two men must be members in good standing of the same curling club and the ladies must curl regularly at the same club as the men. The club must be a member of a provincial association affiliated with the Canadian Curling Association.

Competitions at all levels, including club and regional events, must be 10-end games.

Montrealer defeated

LONDON (CP) — Joe Bugner, Britain's up-and-coming heavyweight prospect, stopped Eddie Talhami of Montreal in the fourth round of a scheduled eight-round contest at London's Royal Albert Hall Tuesday night. Bugner, 19, was slow at the start but then landed a tremendous right hook that dropped Talhami for a count of three in the fourth.

The Canadian rose with blood dripping from his mouth despite shouts from his corner to "stay down."

He ran into another barrage from Bugner and referee Harry Gibbs stopped the fight after 1:34 of the fourth round.

Bobby Hull, management air differences

Bobby Hull has fallen victim to a few simple statistics.

The records for last season show the colorful left winger finishing with 58 goals and 49 assists scored for second place in the scoring race and the most goals ever counted by a National Hockey League player in one season.

The records also show Chicago Black Hawks finished last in the East Division with 34 wins and 33 losses.

This led general manager Tommy Ivan to the observation that "individual records do not win championships" and as a result Hull has been given the cold shoulder in his contract dispute ever since the club went into training camp.

Hull pursued his farming interests while the Hawks went through a rigorous exhibition schedule and started their first six regular-season games without a win.

The Golden Jet of hockey finally showed up in Chicago last week and said he was ready to play, but the Hawks didn't agree.

"If and when full agreement with Bobby is reached, coach Billy Reay and I will decide when Hull is in condition to be of benefit to the team and allow him to rejoin the club," Ivan said Tuesday. "From what we have seen of his skating so far, it will not be this weekend."

EXPLAINS HAWKS' STAND

Ivan issued a statement explaining the Hawks' stand.

"After last year's disastrous season, it was the responsibility of myself as general manager and Billy Reay as coach, with the full approval and backing of William W. Wirtz, president of the club and all the other owners, to use our best effort to rebuild the club into championship contention."

"To accomplish these results we have changed our policies requiring players to subordinate outside activities and give hockey their full effort."

"We decided early in training camp to insert as many rookies as the club could stand and rebuild completely. Understandably, we must be patient because of their inexperience but our main concern is to get a maximum team effort with aggressive as well as defensive play."

The new strategy started earning results when the Hawks beat Montreal Canadiens 5-0 Oct. 25. After a loss to Oakland Seals they followed up with consecutive victories over Los Angeles Kings, New York Rangers, Pittsburgh Penguins and — by a 9-0 score — Toronto Maple Leafs.

WANTS TEAM EFFORT

"After all," said Ivan, "hockey is a team game and we learned last season that individual records do not win championships."

"I would just like to say that we do not detract from Hull's great ability as a hockey player or discount some of his spectacular efforts in the past or his contributions to the club."

"However, the Black Hawks are dedicated to bringing a championship to Chicago fans and Bobby will have to support our new policies."

Hull admitted he has learned something from "this whole silly mess."

"No matter who you are, you're always in a position where someone else can put you down."

Negotiations in the dispute which involves financial arrangements outside Hull's four-year contract were "progressing nicely", Ivan said Tuesday, but are not fully ironed out.

Meanwhile, Hull said the Hawks will fine him about $17,000 for the 12 games he has missed so far and that they want to demote him to their Dallas farm club in the Central Hockey League to play himself into condition.

WILL MEET BERNIE

In other developments, general manager Wren Blair of Minnesota North Stars confirmed Tuesday he will meet today with Bernie Geoffrion to discuss a coaching job with Minnesota.

Geoffrion, a former star right winger with Montreal and New York, started last season as coach of the Rangers but an attack of stomach ulcers knocked him out of the job. He has since been an assistant coach under Emile Francis.

Blair has been handling the double role of manager and coach at Minnesota.

Fog should disappear for EFC playoff

TORONTO (CP) — A heavy fog that rolled across lakeshore areas Tuesday prompted fears that Sunday's Eastern Football Conference playoff game here might suffer the same fate as the Grey Cup game of 1962.

But the weather man said the fog will disappear with the coming of cooler weather and Toronto Argonauts and Ottawa Rough Riders should be able to see each other on the field Sunday.

"I think we'll see the last remnants of fog disappear by mid-morning," meteorologist Gordon Gee predicted Monday night.

The 1962 Grey Cup between

Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Winnipeg Blue Bombers played at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium here was called because of fog with nine minutes remaining. The game was completed the following day with Winnipeg defeating the Ticats 28-27.

Meanwhile, Argo coach Leo Cahill was worrying that his defensive squad's reputation for knocking out quarterbacks could work against the team in the two-game, total-point final series.

Quarterback Sonny Wade of Montreal Alouettes was injured in the last season game against Argonauts and in last Sunday's semi-final, the Ticats lost two quarterbacks. Veteran Joe Zuger was knocked unconscious but returned later in the game for punting duties and rookie John Manel suffered an eye injury against the Argos defence.

Cahill said he was worried that league officials might be led to believe that Argos were deliberately trying to injure opposing quarterbacks.

Ed Learn, whose tackle knocked Zuger out, said:

"I still say the play was all right. I was committed before he hit the ground."

STILL ANOTHER BREAKTHROUGH

GLASS-BELTED POLYESTER HIWAY-BYWAY

The Tire that Makes Fun of Winter Driving

It was in the cards. We had to get this year-new miracle construction in to your favourite winter tires — Hiway-Byways. It's just too good to miss. If you were one of the wise ones, you drove on Glass-Belted Polyester tires this summer. If you're one of the lucky ones, you will have them on your new 1970 car. And since it makes good sense — and safety — to match glass with glass, you'll be smart to install Hiway-Byway Glass Belts on your rear wheels for the coming winter.

Hiway-Byways are built to take it — snowdrifts, hard-packed surfaces, water covered ice, high-crowned side roads. Stops are quicker, get-aways faster, control surer. Tough Polyester reinforced with fabulous fibreglass belting gives you mile for mile greater value than anything going on winter roads. Discover the peace of mind that Hiway-Byways can bring you. You'll never gripe about snow storms again. If you do, we'll buy back the unused miles. It's that simple.

If, for any reason, you must pass up the new Glass-Belted Polyester tires, you can still get Hiway-Byway snow tires in the tried and true conventional Nylon — without the new Glass Belts. Yours is the choice. Canadian Tire satisfies all needs, so why look any further.

DREAM COMES TRUE — Nancy Greene has never had much difficulty in winning the support and admiration of the Canadian public. Last year, while acting as the official spokesman in Canada for MARS Bars, she gained the admiring support of no less than the MARS Candy people... and this year, they plan to help her out with one of her biggest dreams. Since the Olympics, one of Nancy's major ambitions has been to develop "Little Leagues" in Canada to give the 7-14 year-olds better training in competitive skiing. Today, more than 6,000 youngsters are benefiting from Nancy Greene Little Leagues all across the country... and after their work-outs this winter, it will be the MARS Candy people providing them with some hard-earned candy bar refreshment.

Obscenities take over football fan's repertoire

MONTREAL (CP) — With Canada's college football season rapidly rounding the corner into its final stages, it appears the cheers of former years, "go, team, go" and "hold that line", have disappeared from the repertoire of the average college fan.

Today's varsity warriors are spurred on by a new set of cheers, more often than not a string of obscenities.

Apparently it's all because football is an "out" thing for today's "aware" college student.

"It's an establishment game," says Don Taylor, who teaches social psychology at McGill and also is a rabid football fan. "But there's a definite appeal to students because it represents a miniature world with all the competition and violence that is part of the real world we live in."

"The student is drawn to football games, but he feels a bit guilty so uses these cheers. They are peculiar to college crowds and there's much more than crudity involved."

"The obscenities are used in a clever way, such as in a rhyming chant and it becomes a form of intellectual protest."

TORONTO BLUES BEATEN
The concept of competition also appeals to the alumni, 2,000 of whom helped cheer the McGill Redmen to the Ontario-Quebec Athletic Association title last Saturday with a 17-0 win over Toronto's Varsity Blues.

SEMI-FINALS COMING

The Redmen journey to Halifax this weekend to tackle the Atlantic Intercollegiate Football Conference champion University of New Brunswick. In the other half of the semi-final round, University of Windsor Lancers move to Winnipeg to take on the University of Manitoba.

The two survivors of this weekend's sudden-death semi-final rounds meet in Toronto Nov. 21 in the Canadian final.

"Alumni are more willing to spend money on a football team than a library," Taylor says. "It's a form of competition out in the open and it measures one university's library against another."

Drinking has always been associated with football. McGill regulations prohibit alcohol at Molson Stadium, but a survey of broken bottles after a recent game indicates little attention is paid to the regulation.

Only Queen's University at Kingston, Ont., appears to have an effective control system. There, at Richardson Stadium, all students are frisked on the way into the park.

"Drinking is traditional," Taylor said. "There's also a social question involved."

"In today's large university, a student isn't likely to know his professors or more than a handful of his fellow students."

"Football games give him an opportunity for social interaction as part of a group."

TAKES DIM VIEW
While Taylor looked kindly on traditions — both old and new — he takes a dim view of a group of Queen's students who tried to tear down the goalposts on a recent visit here and engaged in several fist fights with McGill students.

"It was rather frightening," he recalls. "This was more than good natured tradition. This was a violent act and it shows that there's something wrong."

Harry Griffiths, athletic director at McGill, said the actions of the students are not restricted to football games.

"We're just going through a phase when students are trying to shock the establishment," Griffiths said. "I don't know how you can isolate football games."

Minor hockey

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The London Free Press reported today that St. Catharines Black Hawks defied an ultimatum from nine other teams in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series and dressed forward Glenn Irwin for Tuesday's game against Toronto Marlboros.

The nine teams threatened Monday to form their own league if St. Catharines' owner Fred Muller did not return Irwin to the Edmonton Oil Kings in the rebel Canada Hockey Association in Western Canada.

The OHA Tuesday certified Irwin to play but the nine teams in the junior circuit contended Muller violated the rules by taking Irwin from the 'outlaw' league and planting him, along with five other players, in Sorel, Que.

The owners of the nine teams charged that Muller also violated the rules when he went to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to acquire Irwin's release from Sorel, thus going over the heads of the junior A council.

"He knew he had to go through our league first," said Doug Pratt, manager of London Knights. "Either Muller runs the league or we do."

The nine owners are to meet Thursday to determine further action.

In Tuesday night's game at St. Catharines the Black Hawks beat Toronto Marlboros 5-1.

Beavers thrashed 10-1

QUEBEC — A devastating performance by Guy Lafleur lifted the Quebec Ramparts to a 10-1 crushing of the Sherbrooke Beavers in a regularly scheduled Junior A league game last night.

The Ramparts scored almost at will on the hapless Beavers and tallied five unanswered goals in the third period after Lessard went into the nets for Sherbrooke.

Normand Dube, the steadiest man on the ice for the Beavers, scored their lone marker.

Lafleur led the attack with four goals and three assists, while teammates Pierre Chouinard with two, Michel Briere, Jean Landry, Jacques Richard, and Rejean Giroux all counted once.

In other league games last night, Three Rivers put down the Drummondville Rangers 10-6, Rosemount edged Sorel 4-3, St. Jerome blanked Laval 7-0 and Cornwall defeated Verdun 4-2.

Tonight at the Sports Palace, the Beavers will host the Shawinigan Bruins. Game time is 8 p.m.

Murray gets another chance with Leafs

Randy Murray, 24, has studied for two seasons and tonight he must prove that Toronto Maple Leafs were wrong.

The National Hockey League club twice denied him the opportunity to show what he can do, but now coach John McLellan says: "there's a job open, all you have to do is prove yourself."

Murray, a six-foot, 185-pound native of Chatham, Ont., will play defence against Pittsburgh Penguins in one of four scheduled NHL games and his success will depend on how well he has studied.

Montreal Canadiens are at Oakland against the Seals, Detroit Red Wings visit New York Rangers and Minnesota North Stars are at home to Philadelphia Flyers in other games tonight.

Detroit plays at Boston against the Bruins Thursday night, while Pittsburgh visits St. Louis Blues.

GETS SECOND CHANCE
Murray's opportunity comes three years after he was first turned down by the Leafs.

He completed his junior eligibility with London Nationals of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. But there were no openings on defence in the Leafs' leading farm clubs.

Murray went to Charlotte Checkers of the Eastern Hockey League, a semi-professional team that had a working agreement with the Leafs.

He spent a season at Charlotte,

N.C., and earned a regular spot with Tulsa Oilers of the Central Hockey League in 1967-68 and 1968-69.

He attended the Leafs' training camp at Peterborough last September, played hot and cold and went back to Tulsa.

Now, injuries to defencemen Jim Murray and Rick Ley have given Murray his third chance to crack the big team's lineup.

McLellan says he is an asset when playing tough and a problem when trying to get fancy.

He will be paired with Brian Glennie as one defensive unit, while Tim Horton and Mike Pelyk will team up and Pat Quinn will be the alternating fifth man.

Ley is out of action with an knee injury and Dorey has an injured back.

Quinn's defensive work against Chicago Black Hawks last Sunday was probably responsible for his relegation to fifth choice.

He was on the ice for eight of Chicago's goals in the Hawks' 9-0 victory.

The Leafs, in last place in the East Division, had the worst defensive record in the 12-team league following Sunday's loss. The Leaf defence had allowed 45 goals in 13 games.

McLellan is undoubtedly hoping he can help the team.

"All you have to do is prove you can do it better than the guys we have here at the moment," McLellan says.

Chuvalo to defend title

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — George Chuvalo of Toronto has agreed to defend his Canadian heavyweight boxing title against Charlie Chase of Montreal, his No. 1 challenger, in a January bout. It was announced here Tuesday by R. B. (Dick) Pearson, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Professional Boxing Federation.

Chuvalo was given until

Dec. 1 to defend his title when the CPBF held its annual meeting last month in Moncton, N.B., but Pearson indicated a January match would be acceptable to the federation.

Chuvalo is scheduled to fight Jerry Quarry of Bellefleur, Calif., at Madison Square Gardens in New York Dec. 12.

Shell ups gas prices

TORONTO (CP) — Shell Canada Ltd. Monday announced increases in its wholesale prices of automotive gasoline and diesel fuels.

The increases are effective immediately.

The wholesale prices of both fuels were increased one cent a gallon in Quebec, the Atlantic provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia, the Yukon, the Northwest Territories and eastern Ontario.

Prices were increased 4 cents a gallon in Ontario west of the Ottawa Valley.

Shell also increased by one cent a gallon the consumer price of distillate heating oils in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, British Columbia, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories.

The company said in a statement that general increases in costs have made the price increases necessary. It said it expects payroll costs to increase by an average 8.75 per cent this year and again in 1970, as the result of a recent wage settlement with the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers' International Union.

Shell had earnings of $35,146,000 for the nine months ended Sept. 30 compared with $39,081,000 for the corresponding 1968 period.

Bedford

At a meeting of the elders of the Bedford Pastoral Charge, a leave of absence for the month of November was granted to the Rev. W. Lake. In his absence Mr. Edward Powers will conduct services at the usual hours at Stanbridge East, Mystic and Bedford, while through the cooperation of the Philipsburg elders, their services will be conducted by the young people of the church. Mr. Powers is an accredited student for the ministry, now working at his Arts course at Sir George Williams University. He is a young man with experience in Presbytery, young people's work and has had one year's experience with a pastoral charge, but he has not received formal training and will be an unordained supply. Rev. O. R. Davidson of Farnham will be on call in case of emergency situations.

The elders of the various charges who may be contacted are: Bruce Kidd, Stanbridge East, 248-7125; Warren Watson, Mystic, 248-7183; Alan Fields, Philipsburg, 248-7213; Lennox Ames, Bedford, 248-2027; Mrs. Onis Blair, Bedford, 248-3580 will be glad to receive notices for the bulletin, not later than Thursday of each week.

Chris Miller who is attending the regional school at Chateaugay was with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Miller for the weekend.

Mrs. J. Bokus, Ayer's Cliff, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bokus.

Miss Donna Paton, who is attending the Chamberlain School in Boston, Mass., spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Paton.

Mr. Joseph Moreau is a patient in Hospital Lagace.

Mrs. F. E. Draper was in Montreal to attend the funeral of Mrs. K. Rutledge, who died in Hamilton, Ont., after an extended illness.

Mr. and Mrs. William Jackson were in Chateaugay on Nov. 2, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Boileau.

The flowers in St. James Church on Nov. 2 were in memory of Mrs. Grace Preston, given by her children.

Mr. Fernand Coderre has been transferred to Montreal and together with Mrs. Coderre and little son, is now living there. Mr. Coderre has sold his home on the Philipsburg Road to Mr. andre Patenaude of Mystic.

The opening of the curling club took place on Nov. 1 with a dinner, which was largely attended. Those in charge were Mrs. Douglas Traynor and Mrs. C. Darby, while the decorations, in keeping with the spirit of Halloween were done by Mrs. Harry Jones. Tickets were sold by Mrs. L. Lippert. The bonspiel for the Dow Trophy will be played Nov. 24-Dec. 8, while the annual turkey bonspiel will take place Dec. 8-20.

Mr. Richard McCaw and Miss Barbara Bureau, Montreal, were weekend guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. S. McCaw.

On Nov. 3 the final visit to Bedford of the McLennan Travelling Library took place, closing a service of 15 years to the community, and unless government support is forthcoming, the Library will cease to function in May, 1970. The loss of the library will be keenly felt, especially in the country districts. Those wishing to obtain books may do so by going to Stanbridge East, the nearest place at which the library will call. The services of the library has had to be curtailed, owing to lack of funds and only certain towns will be visited. The next visit of the library to Stanbridge East will be in January, 1970.

Mr. James Cavers, Philipsburg, is a patient in Hospital Lagace.

Recommends garden patches become leisure gardens

LONDON (CP) — The dig-for-victory land allotments that helped feed Britain during the food scarcities of two world wars have turned into "horticultural slums," says a report to the government urging a clean sweep of the whole concept of allotment use.

The Thorpe committee, headed by Prof. Harry Thorpe of Birmingham University, says these garden patches, usually linked to the efforts of low-income earners to grow some of their own food, should be turned into leisure gardens primarily for family recreation.

Allotments have been a way of life in Britain ever since the days of Queen Elizabeth I when the provision of a small plot of land formed part of the charity for the working poor. There the family could grow a few vegetables and perhaps a few pears and apples or even a few flowers to be sold to the more affluent folk. At the height of the Second World War about 1,400,000 Britons held plots of about one-quarter acre or so. They dug with a vengeance as the government pleaded for more home-grown food to overcome the rigidities of wartime diet.

But, as an indication of how Britain has changed, only 600,000 plots or allotments are still rented under the token annual payment of about 15 shillings ($1.95). And of these about 20 per cent are derelict and only 42 per cent still produce fruit and vegetables.

FEAR OUTCRY

In many cases garden plots are located on what now has become valuable land, priced at about $20,000 ($52,000) an acre if used for housing. The local borough councils have the right to terminate rentals and switch the plot holders to other areas but in many cases they are reluctant to do so because of the outcry from local allotment organizations.

The Thorpe committee report may be the lever to force a more rapid switch. The committee recommended that the tenants be relocated on less valuable land and be encouraged to use their plots to grow flowers, shrubs and grass instead of only fruits and vegetables.

And instead of paying only 15 shillings a year in rent, the tenant should pay about $5 ($13) annually. Those who neglect their plots should be given the boot.

The government said it would consider the recommendations but, careful to avoid controversy, emphasized that it would consult fully with local councils and allotment organizations before reaching a decision.

It appeared likely, however, that with housing pressures ever eating into the shrinking green fields of England another English tradition may soon fade into the history books.

Bill to let spouse keep property

MONTREAL (CP) — Persons in Quebec wishing to marry but not willing to relinquish their savings and private property to "community ownership" may soon be able to do so.

The change in Quebec marriage contracts was proposed Monday in a report on matrimonial regimes released by the province's Civil Code Revision Office.

Under the new proposal, couples could still opt for the "community ownership" setup when they marry, but they would be entitled to choose the new arrangement, officially dubbed "partnership of acquests."

Specifically, they would retain complete control over their individual possessions and remain fully responsible for their debts. Each partner would have complete autonomy, except for the need to contribute to the necessities of the household.

This partnership would consist of "all the savings effected by the consorts during the marriage

At present, husband and wife in Quebec retain ownership of immovable property acquired before marriage, but virtually all other possessions are owned jointly.

LIST CHANGES

Other changes proposed by the office:

—On dissolution of the marriage regime by separation or death, the partnership would be subject to partition; that is, each consort or his heirs would have the right to one-half of the savings effected by the spouse during the marriage.

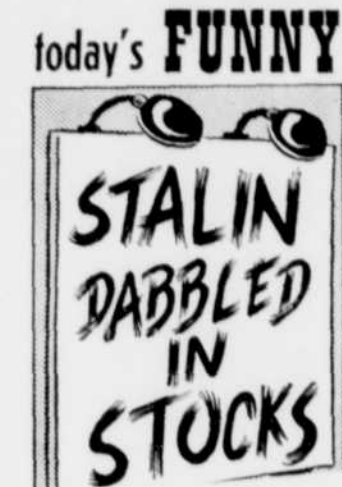

—The right to switch from one contractual regime—community ownership or partnership by acquests—to the other during the course of the marriage.

In explaining the reasons for its recommendations the revision office said:

"It appears that most Quebecers are opposed to the idea of sacrificing, through marriage, a part of their juridical autonomy, and do not believe that the union of their persons must necessarily involve a total or even partial merging of their patrimonies."

The Civil Code Revision Office was formed in 1953 to handle the task of updating the 100 year-old Code. Its recommendations are presented to the Quebec justice department for legislative action.

Long-distance flat-rate plan studied by Bell

MONTREAL (CP) — Bell Canada customers will soon be able to pay a flat monthly rate for their incoming long distance calls, it was announced today.

The new service, available from Dec. 1, is mainly designed for businesses with a large volume of incoming long distance calls.

The monthly rate for 24-hour daily cross-Canada service for a Montreal customer would be $3.275. For a $65 monthly rate he can receive up to 10 hours of calls each month. The Toronto charge for the same service is slightly lower.

For full-time service within his own area code, the Montreal or Toronto customer would pay $420 each month.

Lord Dowding, Commander-in-Chief, British Fighter Command, 1936-1940.

Sir Lawrence Olivier in the role of Lord Dowding in the forthcoming motion picture "The Battle of Britain".

Lord Dowding tells his story after 29 years

DOWDING AND THE BATTLE OF BRITAIN By Robert Wright. The Ryerson Press, Price: $8.50.

The telephone caller simply and abruptly informed the Commander-in-Chief of Fighter Command that he was to relinquish his post "immediately" — strange congratulations for the man who had just won the Battle of Britain.

Now after 29 years of puzzled speculation comes the story of what actually happened in those troubled weeks in 1940. The memoirs of Lord Dowding, the Chief of England's Fighter Command from its inception in 1936 to the 1940 air victory will soon be available from The Ryerson Press. Written by Robert Wright, who was Dowding's personal assistant for a time in 1940, DOWDING AND THE BATTLE OF BRITAIN recounts in fascinating detail the backstage clashes, the lack of understanding between the Air Force and the government leaders of the day and the remarkable foresight of Dowding who engineered the British victory in the face of the overwhelming German Luftwaffe only to be dropped when that victory was secured.

It was Dowding whose 1931 proposal that money be spent on the building of combat planes rather than gliders led to the development of the Hurricane and Spitfire. It was Dowding who brought organization into the whole system of Air Force control, getting the fighter stations into operation and linked with radar throughout his command. It was Dowding who argued with Churchill and won in the matter of concentrating on the defence of Britain rather than sending more fighters to an almost defeated France.

Yet "Stuffy" Dowding, who never went to the mess for fear of intruding on his pilots' privacy, had to endure the cavalier treatment of the Air Ministry with which he "never knew where I stood." Eight times Dowding was told he was to be placed on the retired list only to have his plans upset by last minute shuffles which extended his command by a matter of a few months at a time.

During this time conflicts were building, particularly with Air Vice Marshal Trafford Leigh-Mallory, commander of the No. 12 Group of fighters who once said he "would move heaven and earth to get Dowding sacked from his job." Argument flared between Air Vice Marshal Keith Park, commander of No. 11 Group, the front line of defence, who wanted the No. 12 Group into the air as soon as possible during combat to protect the airfields; and Leigh-Mallory, who wanted extra time to mass "Big Wings" composed of several squadrons in order to attack the enemy, claiming that Park's group was "hogging" all the glory. Dowding, at the request of the Air Ministry, wrote a report on the controversy in which he supported Park, censured Leigh-Mallory and his ace pilot Douglas Bader for taking tactics into their own hands and pointed out that by the time a Wing was in the air, the enemy were already at or near their targets. The use of squadrons to build a wing diverted them from their normal task of defending their own area including some highly important industrial districts, he said.

Dowding's reply was the sudden phone call in November, 1940 telling him that he was to retire at once, that he was to take no disciplinary action against Leigh-Mallory and Bader. Park was as abruptly posted to a training command.

GOD IS ALIVE! QUO VADIS, BROTHER? by Rolf E. Alexander — Pageant Press Inc., 403 pages, Price $6.95.

In these days when some Theologians are telling us that God is Dead, it is refreshing to hear from another source that GOD IS ALIVE.

The Author affirms that we are filled with a constant and never-ending hunger to find the Path, the Reality, the Truth.

One of the strong points of the book is that man should not ask what the world can do for him, but rather should ask what he can do for the world, in his small but individual way. This keynote flows throughout the book in a steady stream, relating all incidents and all happenings to a common Silver Cord, the tie that binds us all to the Word of God.

Rolf Alexander has undertaken an entirely new approach to what he calls "the urge within Man which orders him, knowingly, or unknowingly, to investigate the reason and purpose of his being and the task he has to fulfill." He introduces his work as "A spiritual scientific study of TRUTH, GOD'S LAW, the Laws of Nature for those who are ready and desirous to understand and to know."

Everything in the Cosmos, the author says, is subject to and governed by the LAW. Every human mind works by the Law. If we know the Law there is nothing we cannot know or achieve.

GOD IS ALIVE is a provocative book. The writer is not content with just drawing on modern science to interpret the fundamental tenets of the Christian religion. He dwells upon the mystical intuitions which have played so important a role in the age-old religious heritage of the East. In the former interpretation Alexander shows a wide grasp of the results of modern scholarship as he comes to grips with the moral law as it is contained in the Gospels. In the latter, he concerns himself with the subject of Incarnation, and quotes from those who have been incarnated to support his belief in the incarnation. The reader will find it difficult to relate these two interpretations of religious experience in an intelligible way.

GOD IS ALIVE, however, is worth the time it takes to read and I recommend it.

No-Loads and Load Funds In Bear Market: A Tie

By CARLTON SMITH and RICHARD PUTNAM PRATT

The no-loads—those mutual funds whose shares you can buy without a charge for sales or brokerage commissions—continue to mystify a good many investors and would-be investors.

Put the question, if you're among the mystified, to the mutual fund salesman who comes calling: "How is it that these no-load funds can be sold without a commission charge, while you're going to take 8½ per cent off the top of my money?" And he's apt to reply, with a knowing look: "Well, you know, in this world you always get what you pay for."

It's a sly way of insinuating that no-load funds are little hole-in-the-wall operations that won't give an investor the kind of results he'll get in the big, well-publicized funds with big sales forces. In fact, two of three surveys in recent years showed no significant differences in profit yield to investors between no-loads, as a group, and the load funds, as a group.

Another measure of management ability, in the view of some professionals, is how well a fund holds up when the market has slumped and stock prices are widely depressed. In short, can the manager not only "beat the market" when it's rising, but also outperform it by declining less when everything's in a dive?

The market has considerably afforded us an opportunity to take such a measure of fund performance currently, with a slump that will go down in history as one of the well-remembered bear markets.

At the end of this year's third quarter, the market was down 12¼ per cent for the year, as measured by the broad-gauge New York Stock Exchange composite index.

Mutual funds as a whole, in the same nine months, were down nearly 13½ per cent, according to the performance analysis that's computed weekly for more than 400 funds by the Arthur Lipper Corp., an institutional brokerage firm. The Lipper computers assume reinvestment of all dividends and capital gains distributions.

Of the 404 mutual funds listed in Lipper's special end-of-third-quarter report, 70 were no-loads. Our own computation of average 1969 losses for the two groups, eliminating the few new funds that weren't in business the full nine months, shows:

Load funds: Minus 14.39 per cent.
No-loads: Minus 12.78 per cent.

The difference of roughly 1½ per cent isn't particularly significant—certainly not enough to warrant saying that the no-loads have "outperformed" the load funds in downside resistance ability.

And that's precisely what is significant: No significant difference. The load funds and the no-loads, as groups, seem to turn in just about the same performance, in good markets and bad.

Something to remember the next time you hear somebody attempt to explain away no-loads with the little leer that accompanies the line about "getting what you pay for."

Educational Jottings

by John DE Nora

Ungrading-clarification

What is ungrading? Does it make sense to say that educators gave birth to ungrading when we began trying to deal with the inflexibilities which we recognize exist in the schools? Furthermore, does it make sense to say that today there is a tremendous attempt to focus much more on the learners? The pupils are the learners and we are presently clarifying the educational purposes as they relate to the pupils.

There are two essential educational changes which have to be dealt with if ungrading is to become a reality. The first one is called substantive change which is development of curriculum and what we do directly with children. The second is on an organizational level and it is a model which is used for the implementation of change. In this particular case our model is ungrading.

Let us take this model and establish certain activities which one looks for in an ungraded school.

1 — Three types of pupil groupings exist. These are, a one to one basis, small groups, large groups.

2 — The groups have been formed so that children are able to compete with themselves and have an opportunity of succeeding in areas of strength.

3 — Timetabling is such that children have the opportunity to work on needed skills and areas of weakness.

4 — Pupils may go ahead in areas of special interest and skills.

5 — Pupils work and play both with pupils who are similar and with those who are dissimilar.

It is well to reiterate that these five points focus on the children who are the learners. The teachers involved in an ungrading organization spend much of their time changing their educational behaviour and also attempting to change the attitudes of those parents who continue to view us as accurate transmitters of information. These two changes must happen if the total ungrading process is to become a reality. It is not desirable in the world of today, to view teachers as transmitters of information, rather, they should be viewed as stimulators who are there to direct pupils towards the areas of information which they need to have.

Let us recapitulate. The ungraded school breaks the brade barriers and gets closer to the needs of the learners. Because this happens the total school organization is restructured so that a vertical progression up and through the school becomes possible for all pupils.

This is where the action is at the present. In future articles, horizontal and vertical organization of schools are going to be discussed.

Punishment and reward

TORONTO (CP) — A group of retarded children in a special class at Deer Park United Church nursery are being punished and rewarded in a project aimed at preparing them to function in society.

The system is called "behavioral conditioning" and, if it works, should get the children into regular schools once they are toilet-trained, can sit quietly in chairs, stop throwing tantrums and are stimulated to work and learn.

Garry Baker, staff member with the Ontario Mental Retardation Centre, instituted the system of rewards in the form of small tokens with which the child can buy himself candy at the end of each morning.

A child gets a token for behaving properly—sitting quietly in his chair, or joining in the group games and songs—and for doing what he is asked to do.

But if he hits another child, tips over his chair, screams or talks loudly, he gets a stern reprimand and risks having a token taken away. He also has to pay attention or gets a reprimand.

ISOLATION WORKS

Isolating the child from the group as a form of punishment has also been found to work effectively.

Dr. Carl Rubino, chief psychologist for the retardation centre, says that in behavioral conditioning "you simply select the type of behavior you want to change, and you reinforce what you want to encourage while not reinforcing what you want to discourage."

"By reducing unwanted behavior it makes it possible for these children to function in society and receive the emotional warmth and support that would otherwise be denied them."

The teacher—there are 10 teachers for the 10 children—will concentrate his efforts on one undesirable trait in each child until that is eliminated, then move on to another.

Mr. Baker rejects criticism that they are not treating the causes of misbehavior, only changing the behavior. "We don't really have to know why the kids throw tantrums" if the system eliminates the tantrums, he says.

THE BORN LOSER

HALF AND HALF — A design engineer explains to Michel Champagne, an undergraduate from the University of Sherbrooke, the intricacies of testing fuel components of the PT6 gas turbine engine and the JT15D turbofan produced by United Aircraft of Canada Limited. In the industry-university training program, Champagne spends half of the year in the classroom and the other half in practical on-the-job training at the company.

U. of S. students on work-study program

An academic year that is only half spent in the classroom is proving most rewarding for two engineering students at the University of Sherbrooke.

The other half is spent in practical on-the-job professional training at United Aircraft of Canada Limited, a manufacturer of aero engines where a premium is placed on engineering skills for the company's extensive research and development programs.

The two students, Michel Champagne, 23, Montreal, and Wilton Ievers, 24, Quebec City, are working and studying for their degrees under a plan whereby students spend alternate four-month terms at work and in class. In all, there are six four-month terms in industry and eight four-month terms in University.

"It's total involvement," said Ievers.

"Instead of the usual summer holiday from classes, we are either in class or training on the job. We get two weeks off, not four months."

The University of Sherbrooke is one of two Canadian universities where the engineering curriculum is based on a year round program of study and related work. The University of Waterloo was the pioneer in the program.

Two graduates of the U. of W., Douglas Jermyn and Andre LeBlanc, who spent their undergraduate work terms at United Aircraft of Canada, have continued to work for the company following their graduation.

The company has developed two engine types. Its PT6 gas turbine engine, 4,400 of which have been ordered, has found application in 27 different aircraft types. It is the most widely used powerplant for light twin turboprop aircraft in the western world.

The second major engine development at United Aircraft of Canada is the JT15D turbofan, intended for use as the powerplant for the light jet transport of the 1970s. The JT15D will power the Cessna Citation, the first executive jet of that company, and the SN-600 Corvette, France's new light jet transport scheduled to be flown early in 1970. The first flight of the Cessna Citation took place on Sept. 15.

"My working tour of United Aircraft is a painless way of achieving my university degree," said Champagne, who already is a qualified aeronautical technician as a graduate of Institut Aérotechnique du Québec (located at Montreal International Airport, Dorval).

"I'm learning from the text books and I'm working with the engineers who are actually developing the engines."

Ievers, a graduate of St. Patrick's High School, Quebec City, completed his first year engineering at Queen's University, Kingston, before enrolling at Sherbrooke to take advantage of the year round work-study program.

"I study the theory at university," he says, "and then I can observe how these theories are converted into practice."

"The moment of truth comes when you stand at the console in the test cells and watch an engine under test."

"For my part, I'm impressed by the engineers who have taken me under their wing."

West Germany Faces Winter of Discontent

DUSSELDORF, West Germany—(NEA)—This is the winter of West Germany's discontent.

On paper, West Germany never had it so good. Soaring production figures, huge export orders, Europe's most stable currency—these are some of the fruits of the so-called economic miracle. So are the Volkswagens and color television sets which the average worker enjoys.

However, alongside the boom, this country faces coal shortages, power failures and wildcat strikes this winter.

Millions of Germans will shiver with cold and grope their way around in the dark during the winter months, due to a million-ton coal shortage. Their trains may not run on time, or their mail may not be delivered because of lightning strikes by disgruntled public service employees.

Government officials, employers and trade unions all are to blame for the present muddle and confusion.

Take the coal shortage, for example. In the absence of a coherent energy policy, the federal government has allowed 78 coal mines, producing 53 million tons of coal annually, to be closed down during the past 10 years. Coke ovens were dismantled and 285,000 coal miners, over half the total labor force, were dispersed to other industries due to government shortsightedness.

As a result, not only will households shiver without coal this winter, but the steel plants of the Ruhr are faced with the prospect of working at half capacity. Meanwhile, coal prices have risen by 10 to 19 per cent.

Or take the trade unions. Up to now, West Germany has had fewer work stoppages than any country in western Europe. The German Labor Federation has kept a tight rein on its 6.5 million members, who are organized into 16 industrial unions. Strike action has been avoided by promptly referring disputes to arbitration courts. But now all of this has changed.

Early in September, a wave of wildcat strikes spread through heavy industry. It began in the steel plants of North Rhine-Westphalia, where workers downed tools without consulting their union and promptly won an 11 per cent wage increase.

The wildcats then spread to 370,000 coal miners in the Ruhr and Saar regions, who likewise won a pay increase.

Currently, 1.2 million railway, postal and public service workers are demanding renegotiation of wage agreements that are not due to expire for a year. (Present contracts were negotiated in the trough of the 1966-67 recession, when unions were more worried about job security than pay, they point out.)

Over drinks at the Dusseldorf Yacht Club, a bewildered steel executive explained his dilemma: "Today a delegation of workers marched into my office and demanded that the company's Christmas bonus be doubled—they actually pounded their fists on my desk. Such a thing has never happened to me before. Always I have dealt with the union leaders, who are gentlemen."

The steel executive's complaint echoes the fears of many German employers that union leaders are now out of touch with their rank-and-file members. The closed shop is unknown in West Germany, hence there is no shop steward system, nor indeed any direct contact between the leadership and the men on the plant floor.

German reliance on voluntary agreement and deep distrust of government intervention of any sort has led to near anarchy in some situations. Nowhere has this been more apparent than in the coal industry, where, in the absence of a fuel policy, owners have been closing down uneconomic pits right and left without regard for national need.

This situation has now been remedied somewhat by the creation in July of a Ruhr Coal Consortium with headquarters in Essen. Twenty-nine mine owners, representing 95 per cent of the industry, have agreed to pool their resources for the purposes of production planning, marketing, labor recruitment and rationalization. A union representative will be named to their five-man board.

While a consortium can plan production and allocate manpower, it cannot mine coal. In the absence of anthracite, a large part of West Germany's population will be wearing overcoats as they huddle around their color television sets this winter.

Willie Woos Reds, Worries U.S.

BONN, W. Germany — (NEA) — Willy Brandt is expected to hit the Moscow trail as one of his first acts as West Germany's new chancellor.

A pilgrimage to the Kremlin has become almost routine for Europe's left-of-center statesmen. After becoming Britain's Labor prime minister, Harold Wilson lost no time in donning his fur hat and heading for the Soviet Union. Sweden's new anti-American, pro-Viet Cong premier Olof Palme is expected to follow suit soon.

In Social Democrat circles, the Moscow trip is regarded as a harmless gesture, good for getting headlines and for diverting attention of left-wing supporters from more pressing domestic issues.

But in Brandt's case, because he has been so closely identified with a pro-Eastern policy, the new German chancellor's call upon Russia's Kosygin is likely to be widely misinterpreted and could bring Brandt into sharp conflict with U.S. policy.

American diplomats have talked to have no objection to Bonn establishing closer trade, travel and communications links with Communist East Germany. This is seen by them as being all to the good.

They are even prepared to swallow Brandt coming to terms with Poland about the disputed Oder-Neisse boundary which divides the two countries.

What has U.S. foreign experts worried is that Brandt may make an independent deal with the Soviets. Unless such a deal were firmly embedded in a larger U.S.-Soviet detente, it could endanger the American position in western Europe, and notably in Berlin.

Ironically, these worries are not shared by the West Germans. They have talked to them. They couldn't care less what foreign policy Brandt pursues as long as the present bubble of prosperity is not pricked in the process.

Germany is in the midst of the biggest boom in its post-war history. Production has soared to fantastic heights, while exports have kept pace. With unemployment now well below 1 per cent, over 2 million workers have been imported from Italy, Turkey and Yugoslavia to fill the job vacancies.

In the Rhine-Ruhr region alone 242,656 jobs went begging during the month of September. With column after column of job vacancy ads in the newspapers, the shops of Bonn, Dusseldorf and Cologne are glutted with consumer goods.

The steel industry, which is now producing a record-breaking 46 billion tons a year, has stopped taking orders, so great is its backlog. West Germany's steelmakers, like the rest of its tycoons and economists, have been caught off-balance by the intensive boom.

West Germany may be an economic giant, but it is a reluctant one. Characteristically, Bundesbank officials, instead of rejoicing at the unrivaled prosperity, are actually frightened by it.

The mood of the German people themselves I find strangely chastened since my last visit here. One has only to suggest that the Federal Republic has now become the focus of power for western Europe to be greeted by hoots of derisive laughter, if not by incredulity. Germans are no longer interested in power politics.

In a recent poll, only 6 per cent of the West Germans regard their country as a great power, while just over half consider it a medium power and one-third see it as a small power. The question of the German army acquiring atomic weapons figured at the bottom of the list of issues which German voters considered important in the recent election campaign.

However, the feeling here is that Chancellor Brandt will be misreading the public temper badly if he takes advantage of the present preoccupation with pork-chop economics to play politics with the Russians.

The German temper can change overnight. All it would take would be another sudden move on the part of the Russians to blockade Berlin, or to throw what is left of Czech independence to the wolves.

Old Bonn hands recall the election of September, 1957, nine months after the brutal Soviet suppression of the Hungarian uprising. On this occasion, the Social Democrats were thrown for a loss, and Konrad Adenauer's Christian Democrat party polled an absolute majority for the first, and so far only, time in German postwar history. Chancellor Brandt will undoubtedly bear this in mind when and if he makes tracks for Moscow.

"If we stop all advertising, will prices go down?"

Professor Poole knows the business world from both the academic and practical sides. For a number of years he was on staff at the University of Alberta, the University of Manitoba and Queen's University. He joined a Canadian marketing organization as research manager and later was Vice-President and Manager of a large advertising agency. He is now Professor of Business at Queen's University, Kingston.

Question: What do the critics say about advertising?

PROF. POOLE: From an economic point of view there are several criticisms. Advertising is wasteful, for one. That it raises prices. That it creates excessive profits for some companies and makes it difficult for new companies to enter the market.

Question: Your first point was economic waste. Is advertising wasteful?

PROF. POOLE: If we accept that we are living in a basically free enterprise economy, there is inevitably some duplication and waste of resources. It happens in advertising. It also happens when you find four gas stations at one intersection. Or three department stores in the same shopping plaza.

Any form of free economy does have its waste. But there is another side to it: the competition between companies encourages new product development, improved quality, better service.

Question: Some people say that if we stop all advertising, prices will go down. What about it?

PROF. POOLE: The editors of the Harvard Business Review asked the same question. They found that 85% of businessmen did not think that eliminating advertising would change the cost of products.

Here's the crux of the problem: advertising is one factor—and frequently a rather small factor—that determines how a product is sold. It's a selling tool. Like salesmen, store displays, packages, the type of store it's sold in, and so forth.

If you eliminated advertising—the other selling factors would play a larger role. Isn't it logical that a manufacturer would have to add more salesmen or build bigger store displays or find some other ways to compete? Probably the new methods wouldn't be as effective and they could be more costly. Advertising is really a very inexpensive way to sell products.

Question: What about the argument that advertising makes people buy things they don't need?

PROF. POOLE: You can say that all people really need is a basic diet, clothing and shelter.

Advertising doesn't make people buy. It informs, persuades, and broadens the area of choice. It encourages people to spend. And it encourages people to save. A good example is the campaign for Canada Savings Bonds.

And remember something called the Edsel. Millions were spent on advertising but people still chose not to buy it. The Mustang, on the other hand, was a great success because it filled the need of the day.

Advertising can't reach into somebody's pocket and take the money. It can only open a wider area of choice. And isn't that what our free, market-oriented economy is all about?

Question: What do you expect from advertising in the years ahead?

PROF. POOLE: I hope that the industry by itself can weed out any advertising that is deceptive or misleading.

And I hope that advertising can be used to sell ideas as well as products. There is no doubt that advertising is a powerful method of communication. And an efficient one in terms of cost. Why can't we use advertising—its experience and people—to promote concepts that are important from a social viewpoint?

I'm thinking of things like safe driving. Or recruitment of policemen, nurses and social workers. Even understanding between nations.

NOTE: You, the consumer, can do something about "bad" advertising.

Write for your copy of the industry's Code of ethics. The address is Advertising Standards Council, 159 Bay Street, Toronto 116, Ontario.

Read the booklet. Keep it handy. If you see an advertisement that you think breaks or seriously bends the rules, fill in and mail the complaint notice enclosed with the Code booklet.

Air Exec Is Real Life Rover Boy

SINGAPORE — (NEA) — One of the Rover Boys, late 20th-century version, made a whirlwind descent on Singapore Island the other day, bought several yards of duty-free silk and then flew out across the Straits of Johore.

He also stopped just long enough to set up a corporation and make his social presence felt. In real life, he is Thomas G. Lanphier Jr., who was once an assistant secretary of the Air Force to Stuart Symington. And he is currently engaged in a freight-forwarding venture called Rapidair which is setting up depots all over the world—particularly in the Orient.

The Far East has been Tom Lanphier's bag for more than a quarter of a century. It was April, 1943, and then Capt. Lanphier of the 20th Fighter Squadron, based on Guadalcanal, swooped down on a Japanese bomber over Bougainville.

It was a special bomber. It contained Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto, commander of the Japanese naval forces and leader of the infamous bombing of Pearl Harbor. By breaking the Japanese code, the Americans knew of his travel plans to Bougainville.

Leading an attacking

Thomas G. Lanphier Jr.
Back to the Far East.

group of four planes, Lanphier caught Yamamoto without a fighter escort—150 Zeroes, still on the ground, were scheduled to be airborne in 10 minutes. Lanphier peeled off and took on the bomber alone. A couple of bursts sent the Japanese plane down in flames, killing Yamamoto, and achieved a great propaganda coup for the beleaguered American forces in the Pacific.

Four years after the war, in 1949, Tom Lanphier, civilian and editor of the Idaho Daily Statesman in Boise, landed in Tokyo, Japan, at midnight. He was on an around-the-world tour as president of the Air Force Association. Tired, he was asleep as the plane squished to a stop in the middle of the airport. Everybody disembarked, leaving Lanphier alone on the plane. A stewardess shook him gently.

Tom looked out the window and saw 50,000 Japanese, standing silently around the plane.

As he went down the ramp, a little gray-haired lady stepped forward and uttered soft words of greeting. It was the widow Yamamoto, whose husband Tom had shot down. Still, there was complete silence, and a wild fear clutched the visitor.

"What's going on?" asked Tom of the American ambassador, who was at the widow's elbow and shepherd him through the throng.

"They're honoring you," said the ambassador.

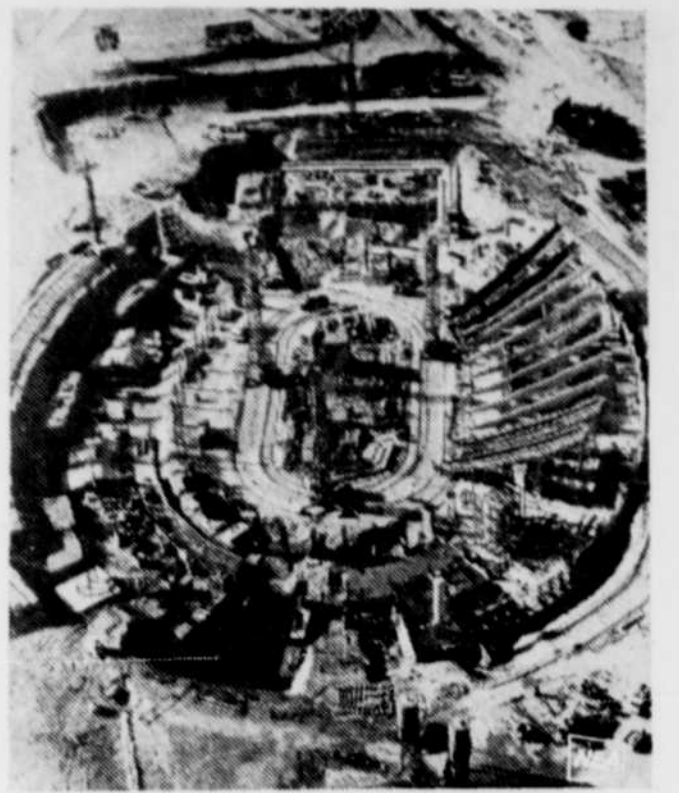

"My son," said Mrs. Yamamoto, "goes to Harvard."

Ever since then, Tom Lanphier has been a big man in Japan and is feted whenever he visits that country.

"They have a code," Tom now explained, "that when you kill the king (e.g., Yamamoto), you are then the king."

Tom is an example of the bustling breed of businessmen who ply the routes of international commerce. He has been a corporate executive in the airplane industry, and he recharges his batteries occasionally in the somnolent setting of La Jolla, Calif.

Rapidair Freight developed from a conversation with one of his sons-in-law last December. Ron Mix, a strapping 250-pound all-pro tackle with the San Diego Chargers, is married to one of Tom's four daughters.

OLYMPIC SITE begins to take form in Munich, Germany, where the 1972 Olympics will be held. This bird's-eye view shows construction on the huge indoor sports hall which will seat 12,000 for the gymnastics and handball competitions.

UP to date advice on tax savings

MONTREAL (CP) — Few Canadians take advantage of the areas left open to them by the government to reduce their tax burden.

With this in mind a unique service is being introduced across the country to encourage Canadians to save money while taking advantage of existing tax legislation.

The new service also will provide top advice on estate tax and succession duties and on estate planning and retirement programs.

Recognizing the need for up-to-date tax advice, the Montreal Trust Co., in association with the Investors Group of Winnipeg and the Imperial Life Assurance Co. of Canada, is opening what the company described as "foresight planning units."

The first of these units has just opened in Toronto, with Montreal being the site of the next one. Similar offices are planned for other major centres.

CONCEPT IS NEW

All the units will be controlled by a central unit at the trust company's head office in Montreal, where research will take place on new ideas and changes in tax legislation.

John McRae, Montreal Trust sales manager involved with the setting up of the units, described the service as "unique... something that is available nowhere else. It's a new concept."

"New wealth has been accumulated in Canada since the Second World War. Many Canadians who have a share of this wealth have not been taking advantages of tax legislation to assure the greatest possible return on their money."

But, said Mr. McRae, the program will not concentrate strictly on those who now have money to invest and put aside into retirement programs.

"About 75 per cent of our market will consist of persons under the age of 30 in the next five years. This is a most important market and we'll try to help them plan savings programs."

TAX BENEFITS

How can the tax legislation bring greater returns from investments?

For example, a person in the 25-per-cent income tax bracket would wind up with $10,300 after taxes on a $10,000 chequing account at current interest rates.

Pilot courses in French

EDMONTON (CP) — Twelve Alberta schools are offering instruction in French on a pilot project basis. Six Edmonton separate schools offer the classes; the other six are in the northeast area of the province where there are large concentrations of French-speaking residents.

Under the Alberta School Act, bilingual schools can give 50 per cent of class-time to instruction in French; the remainder must be in English.

Jacques Moquin of Bonnyville, past-president of the Alberta French Teachers' Association, says schools have not reached the 50-per-cent mark. Delays are caused by lack of Alberta-approved texts in French and lack of other educational aids.

Ulu for oomiak's

SAVOONGA, Alaska (Reuters) — Marie Toolie wields a deft ulu.

Like most Eskimo women, she finds this unique knife, a crescent blade attached to a palm-fitting handle, endlessly useful when cutting or scraping is needed in preparing food and clothing from the animals of the sea.

The ulu has been important in Eskimo culture since time immemorial. Before explorers, whalers and other visitors introduced metal, the Eskimos shaped this tool, and others as well, from bone, stone, or walrus-tusk ivory.

Today when many modern

By placing the same $10,000 in a special savings account, he would end the year with a total of $10,450. If he invested in bonds, he would be left with $10,600 but if he invested in Canadian stock he would end up with $10,790—having had to pay only $10 in income tax on the $10,000 investment returns.

In other words, he would pay $100 income tax on the interest of $400 from the chequing account, $150 in tax on the $600 interest from the special savings account and $200 in tax on the $800 in interest on the bond investment.

But by investing in Canadian stocks—they must be Canadian to qualify for tax benefits—the investor, presuming he would obtain the same return as from bonds, would not have to pay any tax on $600 of the $800, this being considered a capital appreciation and therefore tax free.

The $200 taxable dividend has a 20-per-cent tax credit which means that a person in the 25-per-cent income bracket would have to pay taxes on $50. But since the 20-per-cent tax credit amounts to $40—his total tax would be only $10.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The Grand Canyon's 4,000-foot cliffs make it the deepest of the 19 canyons along the 1,400-mile course of the Colorado River. The World Almanac says. The canyons were formed over 600 million years by the river's eroding layers of rock while the land moved upward in a slow upheaval. Clearly seen strata and fossils on canyon walls reveal more of the earth's history more vividly than anywhere else in the world.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—On what articles of apparel were zippers first used?

A—In 1924, the Goodrich Company gave the trade name "zipper" to galoshes with slide fasteners.

Q—How do squirrels maintain their balance?

A—These animals are extraordinary leapers and balance themselves in the air with the help of their large, bushy tails.

Q—According to Indian legend, what river was formed from tears of sorrow?

A—The Amazon, formed when the moon wept because she could not marry the sun.

Q—What is the only substance capable of scratching a diamond?

A—A diamond can be used to cut another diamond. The only other material that can scratch a diamond is borazon, an artificial substance first made in 1957.
