Commanding Officer And Staff Of H'don Training Centre Honoured by Citizens of Town

Officers Complimented On Excellent Conduct Of the Camp

The hospitality of Huntingdon was extended to Lieut.-Col. C. C. Brooks, M.C., V.D., Officer Commanding Training Centre No. 41, Huntingdon, and his staff of officers, at a banquet held at the Huntingdon Chateau on Thursday evening under the sponsorship of the Huntingdon Board of Trade. Citizens of Huntingdon came to realize more than ever what a fine group of chaps the officers are, while the officers also learned that the original seeming alleged "aloofness' of the citizens wasn't the attitude of the citizens at all.

Chairman of the evening's program was Dr. H. R. Clouston. Sitting at the head table were the speakers, who included Lieut.-Col. C. C. Brooks, Rev. Thomas Knowles, Father Arthur Pigeon, Mayor Harry Hampson of Hinchinbrook, Mayor Daniel Faubert, James W. Ross, M.L.A.

In his opening remarks, Dr. Clouston expressed appreciation on behalf of the citizens of Huntingdon on the excellent manner in which the officers conducted the camp and the equally fine manner in which the officers and men had conducted themselves. Any fears that the citizens originally had of a camp being located in Huntingdon were based on the fact that they were totally unacquainted with what it might be like, not having had a military camp in Huntingdon since the days of the Fenian Raids, some 70 years ago.

He related some of the wild rumours concerning what the soldiers had done and might do since coming here and then proceeded to show how utterly false they were. Regret was expressed over the fact that the Town of Huntingdon had not arranged for an official reception of the officers on the first day they arrived. It was something the town had unintentionally overlooked.

When the trainees first came to Huntingdon they had the appearance of being somewhat sullen and downcast over the prospect of having to train for 30 days. Later on this changed. They realized that they were men who were "selected", who were "picked" men to take part in this training and they grew to a new understanding of their importance and of their opportunity. Furthermore, the training of these youths was the "biggest thing" in the lives of these youths to date. They learned how other youths lived and thought and acted and by living together in harmony with others they learned many things of life they would not have otherwise known. By the example of the officers, the youths learned things which would later on be of inestimable value to them. "The officers have done a real thing for these youths and in doing so, for democracy," concluded Dr. Clouston.

Toast to Officers

In proposing a toast to Lieut.-Col. Brooks and the officers, James W. Ross, M.L.A., pointed out that they would eventually find the citizens of Huntingdon were congenial and that they would thoroughly enjoy their stay here. Here the commanding officer and his staff were given hearty cheers, after which Lieut.-Col. Brooks expressed his appreciation of the same and in a captivatingly frank address won the hearts and admiration of the gathering by explaining the problems the officers had to face in the carrying out of their duties.

Mayor Harry Hampson of Hinchinbrook proposed a toast to Canada which was responded to by

PLANS FOR SEWER ON WELLINGTON ST. ARE ACCEPTED

T. J. Lafreniere of the Provincial Health Bureau, informed the members of the town council at their adjourned session on Friday evening that he had accepted the plans for the sewer on Wellington Street. He will obtain an ordinance from the Board of Health.

The specifications for the filter plant are expected to be in Huntingdon on Tuesday or Wednesday and a decision will be taken at Friday's adjourned session of the council.

Mr. Nish of Howick Heads Teachers

Dr. G. F. McNally Addresses Chateauguay Teachers' Association

On Wednesday, November 6th, a meeting of the Chateauguay Teachers' Association was held in the Gault Institute, Valleyfield. The principal speaker was Dr. G. F. McNally, Deputy Minister of Education for the Province of Alberta.

In the afternoon, a business session of the Association was held at which the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Mr. Nish of Howick;

Vice-President, Miss England of Dundee;

Secretary, Mr. Ross of Ormstown;

Treasurer, Miss Elliott of Valleyfield;

Press Correspondent, Mr. Carson of Huntingdon.

In the early evening, Dr. McNally addressed the teachers on the topic of "The Enterprise Programme of Teaching." Special references were made by the speaker to developments in this phase of teaching in the Province of Alberta.

At 9 o'clock in the evening a second meeting, at which both teachers and school board members attended, was addressed by Dr. McNally on the subject of, "The Larger Unit of Administration." Again the speaker referred particularly to the Province of Alberta illustrating his talk by means of a map which showed the administrative units into which the rural schools of the Province had been divided. Mentioning several districts of the Province, Dr. McNally clearly and carefully showed how the adoption of the plan of large administrative units had improved the educational and financial status of the rural schools in his Province.

At the close of his address, several questions pertaining to the problems of administration of schools in this Province, raised by members of the audience, were answered by the speaker. Members left the meeting imbued with a new vision of the part which can be played by "The Larger Unit of Administration" towards the development of a free commonwealth of peoples.

ORMSTOWN DIVINE REMINDS OF CAR DRIVING DANGERS

A local clergyman, during one of his sermons last Sunday commented on an article which appeared in the Gleaner a few weeks ago entitled "Season For Car Accidents Now in Full Swing." After discussing the various factors as outlined in the article, he pointed out that one had been omitted and described it as the "Fifth Column" to the motorist. It was none other than alcohol.

Wage Increase Declared At St. Anicet

Council Will List Properties For Sale if Arrears Not Settled by December

The secretary-treasurer of the Parish of St. Anicet was authorized at the last session of this council to send notices to the persons who have three years or more of arrears of taxes. If these taxes are not paid by December 1, 1940, the accounts will be transferred to the secretary-treasurer of the County of Huntingdon and their properties will be sold at the March sale of land for taxes.

Property No. 404 in the Parish of St. Anicet with the buildings thereon erected was ordered transferred from J. B. Saumier to the Misses Agnes and Anna Saumier.

The council accepted and confirmed the report as explained by the secretary-treasurer in connection with the expenses on the Leahy Road which amounted to $1,007.10.

It was moved by Coun. Albert Caza and seconded by Coun. Ovide Duheme that the resolution passed on November 7, 1938, allowing $1.25 per acre to clean the ditches in the municipality be changed to $1.75 per acre.

The secretary-treasurer was authorized to notify Alfred Malenfant that the living expenses of his daughter will be charged to his account.

At the request of the Bell Telephone Co., the following persons were appointed to answer emergency calls in the municipality: Denis Latreille, F. E. Latreille, Alfred Primeau and W. A. McNicol.

The council refused to sign the admission card to the hospital of James O'Connor.

The account of Mr. E. A. Quenneville, amounting to $3, and that of Fabien Castagner for $50, for work on the water course which passes near lots Nos. P441A-P442B will be charged to Robert Rolfe, the owner of this property.

The following accounts were ordered paid: Arthur Caza, $18; Alcide St. Onge, $3.75; Joseph Caza, $14.75; Robert Leduc, $2; Leo St. Onge, $14.75; Felix Lepage, $14.75; Arthur Caza, $2.40; Elie Legault, $10.20; N. D. Rankin, $18; Robert Leduc, $14.75; Edmond Duheme, $9.75; Napoleon Duheme, $20; Francois Fournier, $12.50; Arthur St. Onge, $14.75; Edward McGinn, $4.75; Edmond Robidoux, $49; Denis Latreille $8; E. A. Quenneville, $43.27; F. Castagner, $50; Corporation of the County of Huntingdon, $847.79; Albert Leblanc, $10; Ministry of Health, $732.32; Edmond Robidoux, $8; Elie Legault, $1; Israel Beau-

Great War Dead Remembered In An Imposing Service Here

Rev. Thomas Knowles Asks Civilians to Give Generously of Their Money For the Cause in Appreciation of Security Enjoyed

A brief but impressive Remembrance Day service was held before the Huntingdon County War Memorial on Monday.

This followed a parade in which the following took part: Officers of the Huntingdon Military Training Centre under Lieut.-Col. C. C. Brooks, Commanding Officer; members of the Chateauguay-Huntingdon branch of the Canadian Legion; Huntingdon High School cadet corps.

Mr. C. M. Oney was chairman of the program. The prayer was given by Rev. J. B. Maclean, D.D.

"Remembrance Day is being observed throughout the whole British Empire and the Allied Countries on this day," stated Lieut.-Col. C. C. Brooks in the opening address. "This celebration started early this morning as the sun rose in the different countries who remember and honor those who died for their country in the first Great War. Only two minutes of silence are being observed here, but in reality twenty-four hours of silence as far as the far-flung British Empire is concerned."

"This is one great opportunity we have to bring back to our memory those we lost during the Great War and it is very fitting that we should pay them tribute," concluded Lieut.-Col. Brooks.

The placing of wreaths at the foot of the monument erected on Prince Arthur Square then took place. Mr. Mackay on behalf of the Huntingdon Veteran's Association, James W. Ross, M.L.A., Huntingdon County, and Mayor D. Faubert, the Town of Huntingdon.

Rev. Knowles Speaks

Rev. Knowles of the United Church, Huntingdon, delivered the main address at the Remembrance Day service. After emphasizing the importance of remembering, he asked just what should be remembered. First, there was the sacrifice the men had made who laid down their lives. Not only the men who died should be remembered but those who suffered on the battlefields also. Second, there were those who suffer pangs of sorrow remembering on this day their loved ones who had been casualties. Third, there were those Veterans to remember who did their part in the last war, and civilians, too. The pluck, courage and tenacity of all these were not soon to be forgotten.

Who today is giving us this freedom, security and sense of protection? Why are we in Canada not afraid? The answer given was because of the men who are now fighting for us. It is to these men, then, that we owe gratitude. To these men that we owe our humble thanks.

Rev. Mr. Knowles stated he thought we should be ashamed to have to be asked to buy a poppy. We should, in fact, be more than willing to give and give wholeheartedly, to gladly give a generous amount in accordance with the salary we receive. And this because it should be the first charge of the country to see that the men who are serving us never go in want.

Pointing out that we as civilians have our task to do, he asked, "Are we big enough to face our task?" The soldiers cannot alone do everything. "Are we lazy or are we selfish?" Let us remember the part we have to play as civilians and be one great brotherhood fighting for the things that are right.

Let us remember God always, stated Rev. Mr. Knowles. In this connection he recalled the glorious epic of Dunkirk. How the men and the navy had done magnificent work and how it seemed that the hand of God played an important part at this time with the water in the channel so calm as to allow passage of soldiers even in a rowboat. He pointed out that God would help us if we are true to Him, and that we should never lose sight of this all-important fact.

Huntingdon High Bows to St. Lambert in Rugged Game

Locals Lose to Visitors by 11-6 on Muddy Field—Macdonald College Defeated in Saturday's Encounter By 11-0—Basketball Team Proves Supremacy

The Huntingdon High School football squad won and lost their exhibition contests on Saturday and Monday afternoons. The home team trounced the Macdonald College aggregation by 11-0 on Saturday but bowed to St. Lambert High School on Monday by 11-6 on a muddy field. The Huntingdon High basketball girls won their exhibition game with the Lacolle girls on Saturday 33-10.

In the hardest fought game seen in Huntingdon in recent years, St. Lambert football team defeated Huntingdon on Monday afternoon by 11-6. The contest was played on a wet and muddy field which hindered open playing to such an extent that the teams had to concentrate on hard-hitting, fast-moving line bucks and forward passes.

The game opened with St. Lambert kicking off and Huntingdon driving goalward. They plunged through for first downs repeatedly due to the fine work of Hayter, Boyd, Robertson and Hoy in the backfield and thrusts by middles Howden and Kapla. The local team seemed well on its way to a quick touchdown, but a fumble on the slippery grounds gave the ball to St. Lambert.

The visiting team's shifty backfield, featuring the fancy running of "Rucker" Letts, went into high gear

HUNTINGDON Y.P.S. ARE ENTERTAINED

The United Y.P.S. held their first recreation evening last Friday night, with 23 members present. Rev. Thomas Knowles opened the meeting with a sing-song. After the business discussion, Geoffrey Holmes, as recreation leader, took charge of the entertainment. Mr. Stanley Currie entertained with an amazing lot of tricks which kept the audience well entertained. Those present showed their gratitude by a hearty hand-clap. The meeting was then brought to a close with a delicious lunch served by the committee.

Hear Talk on "School Laws" At Dundee

William Winter Addresses Dundee Women's Institute

The members of the Dundee Women's Institute were interested in a splendid address given by Wm. Winter at the Community Hall, Dundee, on Wednesday, Nov. 6th. His topic was "School Laws" and he outlined in a clear manner the "Relations between child, parent and teacher. At the close of his talk, he gave an opportunity for questions and the ladies showed by their ready response that their interest was keen, especially on the topic of Central Board of Education. The speaker graciously answered all questions presented. On behalf of the members, Mr. Winter was thanked by the president, Mrs. Stirret Cameron for his kindness in giving so generously of his time and knowledge to the Institute body. A cash donation from Mr. Winter to the W.I. was also gratefully acknowledged by the president.

Further items on the programme were: a paper on Meats—their value and danger in the diet by Mrs. N. D. McPhee. Also a paper, "Darn for Victory" and a method used to get down from hen and turkey feathers was given by Mrs. Lyle Currie, Convenor of Economics.

The girls in grades X and XI in Dundee High School were asked to write papers on "Interior Decorations" and only two were presented by the judges Mrs. Peter Ferguson and Mrs. Chas. Fraser. Miss Doris Fraser and Miss Gladys Stowell each described their "Dream Bedroom" perfectly. As more girls in these grades were expected to send in papers, the contest was left over till the December meeting, before any prizes would be distributed.

Mrs. S. Cameron gave a report of the Sub-Executive held at Franklin. She complimented Miss Margaret McMillan of Dundee, in winning first prize on Schoolground Beautifying. Other items discussed were The Spelling Bee by Grade 7; Dramatics and Sending news of interest to Macdonald College Magazine.

Ten members responded to the roll call—My Favourite Supper dish. Routine business was transacted and the meeting adjourned, after which the hostess, Mrs. Hugh McNicol served delicious refreshments in the dining hall to the members and guests.

Knox Church, Robson, Observes One Hundred and Eleventh Anniversary of Founding

Original Collection Boxes Are Used on Occasion

The historic little Knox Church at Robson observed its 111th anniversary on Sunday when a large number of people filled the church for the morning and evening services. The special speaker for the day was Rev. Gerald R. Cragg, M.A., former editor of the United Church paper, "The New Outlook," and now Professor of Systematic Theology at Divinity Hall, Montreal.

In the morning Professor Cragg said: "It is one of the common mistakes that we misjudge the nature of goodness. We think of it as a tame, insipid, inocuous factor in life. But for Jesus, goodness was strong, dynamic and transforming. It is positive, not negative; but this is because it is based on insight into the character of God and the nature of life in His world. The Beatitudes, for example, are not rewards given to special types. They are a statement of the way of life, answer those who live as the children of God. The opposite is also true, and the distinctive character of hypocrisy (as Jesus defined it) is that men receive great truths and use them merely in trivial ways. To this temptation religious people are always especially susceptible, and the means of escape are two-fold. There is the need for greater commitment to the truth as we see it in Jesus Christ and the challenge to a more adventuresome spirit in translating these truths into practice."

The evening sermon was based on the story of the importunate friend. The parable was used not merely to illustrate Jesus' way of teaching, but to insist on three vital truths. If a man at his surliest will still rise to meet his friends' needs, will not God in His mercy and love, hear us when we call? Moreover, religion is seen as a matter of ordinary occasions and of daily life. It is not apart from our ordinary occasions, but in the very midst of them. Thirdly, though the setting is commonplace, the gift is Divine, since it is the love of God which is given us in Jesus Christ our Lord.

Church Organized in 1829

In the morning a number from Russelltown and Covey Hill were present and the Rev. W. H. Day took part in the service. During the morning service an outline of the church's history was given by the clerk of the session, W. Walter Barr, who has been an elder since 1900. Knox congregation was organized as a congregation of the Associated American Synod, and remained as such until about 1859 when it became connected with the Presbyterian Church in Canada. The Rev. Isaac Laws, who was the first minister (from 1829) served also at Covey Hill, Rockburn and Beech Ridge.

Among the ministers who were mentioned were the Rev. James Patterson, Rev. Wm. Robertson, Rev. Jas. Lee, Rev. Roderick McKay, Rev. F. W. Murray, Rev. S. Gorley Brown, Rev. J. G. Fucher and Rev. V. C. Rose.

The first burial in the cemetery was about 1841. Another item of interest is that the first marriage ceremony to be performed in the present church building which was erected in 1873 was in June of this year, when Miss Nessie Barr was married to Mr. Frank Deery of Montreal.

Mr. Troyer of the Presbyterian Church was present in the evening and read the lesson. The offering was received with the original collection boxes used by the early congregations.

The two numbers very ably rendered by the guest soloist, Mr. W. A. Trenholm of Montreal, were "The Stranger of Galilee" and "My Task."

Rev. C. C. Dean is pastor of Knox Church at Robson.

Hemmingford Rally of Y.P.U. Successful

South Shore Young People's Union Banqueted—Rev. W. O. Mulligan, Guest Speaker

Large delegations from Chateauguay, Beauharnois and Huntingdon Counties attended the rally of the South Shore Young People's Union which was held at Hemmingford on Tuesday evening, Nov. 5. More than 150 delegates and friends took part in the proceedings.

The Hemmingford Y.P. is the latest addition to the P.Y.P.U. and entertained the Union to a sumptuous banquet.

The business meeting was held in the Hemmingford Town Hall with Rev. Mr. Flint of Riverfield as chairman. The chairman of the various committees, missions, dramatics, athletics, social, publicity and finance, gave their reports and submitted helpful suggestions from experience.

At the close of the banquet the gathering retired to the Presbyterian Church where the devotional service was held. At the conclusion of the religious part of the program nominations, resolutions and any new business took place.

The guest speaker of the evening was Rev. W. Orr Mulligan, D.D., of Melville Church, Westmount. His theme was "Remember Thy Creator in the Days of thy Youth."

At the conclusion of the address the various secretaries reported on the year's programme. The following officers were also installed by Rev. Mulligan: President, Robert Ellis, Ormstown; vice-president, Henry Cassidy, Dewittville; secretary, Miss J. McArthur, Georgetown; corr. secretary, M. Barrington, Ormstown; treasurer, Miss I. Carmichael, Riverfield.

As chairman of the resolutions committee, Rev. A. B. Casselman, B.A., of Valleyfield, pledged the Union's loyalty to His Majesty the King and the British Empire. Among other resolutions Rev. Mr. Casselman moved a hearty vote of thanks to all who had shown such co-operation in making the rally a decided success and to Mr. Troyer and the Hemmingford society for their very kind hospitality.

Everyone departed with pleasant thoughts and memories of the evening and with joyful anticipation for the next rally which is scheduled to be held at Georgetown, following an invitation by Mr. P. D. McArthur.

OCTOBER PERMITS ARE TOTALLED AT VALLEYFIELD

The city engineer's office issued construction permits during October for a total of $41,700, it was announced over the weekend.

PROVINCIAL POLICE STAGE RAID ON VALLEYFIELD HOTEL

Police officers acting under authority of the Quebec Liquor Commission raided the Hotel Chateau Salaberry at Valleyfield on Wednesday, seizing the establishment's entire stock of beer and liquor. The hotel remained open with a room and meals service.

Valleyfield Sets Sales Tax For January

Announces 2 Per Cent Sales Levy For 1941—Water, Land Taxes Will Be Reduced

Valleyfield Council announced on Wednesday that a municipal sales tax of two per cent will go into effect in Valleyfield, January 1st, 1941. The council announced a special tax on bicycles from the same date.

These two decisions were taken at the conclusion of Wednesday evening's session on suggestions by Ald. Merel Laberge. The alderman also announced that water taxes would be reduced 25 per cent and land taxes by 15c on $100.

This would be the only issue to collect money which otherwise the Council does not receive. It would also give the city some of the money which is being earned here but of which none is given to the Council.

Seeking information in regards to repairing Bellerive Bridge, Ald. Dumouchel was told by Mayor Larin that he had been informed by Lt.-Col. W. G. E. Aird, general manager of the Montreal Cottons, which firm owns the bridge, that definite action could be expected within a few days.

Ald. Albert Dumouchel was appointed pro-mayor for the next three months, replacing Ald. Joseph Cholette. Lights will be installed on the following streets —Poissant, Edmond, Des Erables, 2nd Avenue and Village Billette.

Considerable Construction Is Underway

Bell Telephone Provides Telephone Facilities at D.I.L. Plant, Valleyfield

To provide telephone facilities for the Defence Industries Limited plant on Salaberry Island, and to assist in the erection of the new factory of the Nichols Chemical Company on Clarke Island, considerable telephone construction work is now under way in Valleyfield, according to Lucien Moise, Valleyfield representative of The Bell Telephone Company.

In anticipation of residential as well as industrial development in the Bellerive section of the city, 6,200 feet of cable from the exchange building are being erected to serve this quarter. The cable will run from the exchange to St. Laurent street, and thence along Chaussee street to the bridge. On Grande Ile it will run from Dufferin to Danis streets, and thence to Rang du Milieu.

This cable will be extended for 13,200 feet from Avenue de la Grande Ile along Rang du Milieu to the D.I.L. plant. Smaller cables will be erected on the factory property itself to serve the factory's private branch exchange, ten public telephones, and 30 residence telephones in the factory area.

To clear the sites of factory buildings on the property of the Nichols Chemical Company, a portion of the long distance line from Valleyfield to Montreal is being relocated on Clarke Island.

Boy Scouts Hold Annual Card Party

First Ormstown Troop's Party Well Attended

The fourth annual euchre and bridge party sponsored by the 1st Ormstown Troop, Boy Scouts of Canada, was held in the Ste. Malachie parish hall on Friday, Nov. 8. It commenced at 8.30, and cards were the order of the evening. Progressive euchre was played, while bridge and "500" were played at individual tables. The Scouts served refreshments at 10.30, after which the prizes were distributed. The bridge and "500" prizes were given out by Merrill Stalker and Melvin Winter, and the euchre prizes by Lindsay Cullen and John Moffat. The first ladies' prize was won by Mrs. Gow, with Mrs. W. Younie a close second. The ladies' consolation prize was won by Mrs. Wm. McK. English. Top honors among the gents went to Mr. H. McAdam, followed by Mr. Sproule. Dennie Keegan won the men's consolation. The door prize was won by Mrs. M. A. Gartshore. The Scouts wish to thank the mothers and friends of the troop who so kindly donated food, Mrs. A. McCaffrey for preparing the coffee and the merchants of Ormstown for donating the euchre prizes.

A poppy campaign was held by the Scouts over Armistice Day week-end. Poppy cards were left in the various stores, while Scouts made a canvass of the town on Saturday and of the school on Monday. John Taylor was in charge of the poppy campaign, and was assisted by Merrill Stalker and Melvin Winter. A substantial sum was collected to be sent to the Canadian Legion headquarters in Montreal to be used to relieve the want of World War veterans and their families.

CORRESPONDENT FOR GLEANER FOR TEN YEARS

The Ormstown reporter for The Huntingdon Gleaner for the past ten years, Miss Claire Finn, has taken up residence in Montreal.

During the time Miss Finn has acted as correspondent for The Gleaner she turned in excellent work, chronicling the activities of the Ormstown district. For the past eight years Miss Finn has been employed at the post office in Ormstown, in which position she came into contact with many people and is therefore well known in the district. An ardent curler and bowler, she was secretary of the Women's Curling Club at Ormstown for 11 years.

Asked what particular piece of news was most vividly remembered during her ten years of corresponding, Miss Finn stated that no particular item stood out. "I always wrote just the straight news items as they occurred," she stated, "and never went in for the feature type of story." She recalled how during the first year she acted as correspondent that she was very careful what she wrote, always fearing repercussions from the news items. The inevitable criticism that comes to a newspaper correspondent from the people who are mentioned somewhat bothered Miss Finn the first year of her work. But with the passing of time she learned that if all the criticism that came was taken to heart it would be just too bad. She learned to write as she saw and learned of things and let it go at that without any useless worrying. She realized people would criticize no matter what was written. Despite her experiences Miss Finn states she thoroughly enjoyed her work of corresponding for The Gleaner.

Food at the Barracks

INTERVIEWS with trainees who put in their time at the Huntingdon Military Training Centre appeared in the Montreal press last week. They first appeared in the "Montreal Star" and the remarks made by the trainees, as reported, were not what you might term complimentary to the food that was served at the camp. It was a reflection that we feel sure was not appreciated by those in charge of the camp. On such matters that matter, one would think such a newspaper as the Montreal Star would use more judgment than to print opinions of youths who perhaps had received a "confined to barracks" penalty for misconduct or disobedience to military camp orders, and in turn might willingly say anything at all without giving the matter proper thought. In the "Montreal Gazette," too, it was likewise. By way of illustration we reprint the statement of one youth as follows: "The food wasn't always properly cooked, not the way I would do it, but I gained nine pounds, so I guess it was all right. I would like to go back for another 30 days." He didn't like the way the food was cooked at times, yet he gained nine pounds! Couldn't have been too bad! And in addition to that he would like to go back to the same camp for 30 days! Those words certainly don't sound as if he was sorry about anything at the camp! Of the many who made statements that they didn't like the food they did, nevertheless, gain anywhere up to ten pounds, although some lost weight. Army officials will tell you that such is quite customary and that fellows who lose weight will likely restore it within a month or two later, providing they were not originally carrying a lot of excess weight for their own good. Surely this statement of the trainees must be a testimony to something or other.

Now let's look at the cooking situation at the Huntingdon Camp. To begin with the trainees arrived at the camp before the quarters were ready for them. The facilities for cooking are still lacking. The kitchens have not yet received their dish washing machines, and dish towels are against usage orders in this military camp. Furthermore, if they did have the dishwasher they haven't as yet the facilities for the boiling of the necessary water for the washing of the dishes by machine. Under the circumstances a great deal of time is spent in the kitchens cleaning the dishes for the 750 or more trainees. The stoves that were installed in the kitchens were not connected to chimneys that provided ample draft. How could any number of cooks provide food well cooked for 750 odd trainees and 240 officers and instructors, all with healthy appetites, without adequate stoves and kitchen facilities.

When the camp was opened it was not really ready for occupancy. Carpenters, tinsmiths and plumbers were still working long hours of overtime in order to rush the job. From this angle alone the cooks started off with a handicap. Then, look at another situation. The cooks receive, we understand, the sum of $1.55 per day. Just what kind of a cook can one expect for a camp at $1.55 a day? We wouldn't imagine that any camp cook that was a cook at all would work for that, unless he genuinely felt he was doing his bit of service to his country. If some of the money was taken from the wages paid to carpenters, plumbers, electricians and others working on the building contracts and used in the army it might be better. We make no hesitation in saying that the wages paid many of those working on the buildings was out of all proportion. On top of that we are entirely confident that many of them did anything but strain themselves when it came to actual work. This has to be taken into consideration in the matter of cooks. There was and still is a shortage of cooks at the Huntingdon Military Camp. When the trainees were here, the meals were late one day and as a consequence many of the boys went without their full rations. Officers saw the likeliness of a repetition of such lateness and they did not want it to happen, so they appealed on the field to the trainees to see if any of the lads had kitchen and cooking experience and, if so, would they lend their assistance. Four boys responded to the appeal in a willing manner and lent the camp yeoman service. They did not begrudge the lending of their talent in this direction.

The metropolitan press comments about the food at the camp were not quite just. We reproduce here the menus for a day at the Huntingdon Military Training Barracks which has previously appeared in the Gleaner: Breakfast—rolled oats with milk, bacon and scrambled eggs, bread and butter, coffee. Noon lunch—Macaroni and cheese, boiled potatoes, mashed turnips, apple sauce and cake, bread and butter, coffee. Dinner at night consisted of vegetable soup, roast pork, mashed potatoes, creamed carrots, bread pudding, fruit sauce, bread and butter, tea or coffee. Those menus do not sound too bad.

The statement of one trainee in the Montreal Star was that he spent $65. in the village on eats. All we can say about that is he must have been some eater, far more than he ever spent in Montreal on eats outside of those meals he had at his home. Bear in mind, all trainees had to remain at the barracks until at least 4.45 p.m. daily.

A picture appeared in the Montreal press showing hungry boys getting off the Provincial Transport Bus and rushing into a restaurant. The inference was that they must have been starved at the Huntingdon Camp, for the legend under the picture did not mention that these lads with robust appetites left Huntingdon at 11 a.m. and arrived in Montreal a bit late for their usual luncheon hour.

To those of us in Huntingdon who are "a little bit in the know," we feel some one or other has a grudge against Lt.-Col. C. C. Brooks, M.C., V.D., Officer Commanding, and his fellow officers and that these lads may have been encouraged or perhaps even asked to make some such statements to the press, hoping that such detrimental comments might slip through and be published.

Huntingdon Training Centre was the only camp so maltreated in the metropolitan press. How come? Every one of the eight trainee camps in Quebec had the same menus, but only Huntingdon had to submit to being changed, almost over night, from an English to a French-speaking trainee camp. Huntingdon Camp required more French help and cooks, and all of a sudden, whilst other camps had a better chance to get prepared for the influx of trainees; but, actually, they were little, if any, better off.

Valleyfield Camp is reported as being O.K. We are glad to hear that report, but remember it was just half the size of that at Huntingdon, and was ready for the men when they arrived. Valleyfield had its roads built and everything in shipshape. Huntingdon is only having its drill hall erected now and, according to information we gather, it will be anything but large enough for the drilling of the 1073 trainees that are to come here on November 22.

From the press we also learn that officers received presents from trainees. That is definitely against military rules, and Huntingdon officers so informed their trainees. It is also against the rules for officers to give out medals to trainees, yet such was done outside of Huntingdon, irrespective of whether it was against the law or not.

Huntingdon Military Camp and its officers have certainly been unfairly treated by a few trainees, perhaps some jealous military officers and undoubtedly, but perhaps quite unintentionally, by the Montreal press.

The Valleyfield Camp is well located. Being on a small hill, it is dry, has good roads through it and was a completed job before the trainees arrived. In comparison, Huntingdon Camp was far from finished when the trainees arrived and is still far from finished. The roads about the camp have not yet been built, yet such should have been done early in the fall. Should we continue to have mild weather and rain when the next lot of trainees are here, the quibbling amongst the disgruntled will quite likely be about mud, but we sincerely hope the Metropolitan press will not be party to slinging mud.

For further proof that the expressions of a handful of trainees reported in the Montreal press is not the true expression of the whole camp was demonstrated on Thursday when the boys were about to leave for Montreal. The trainees went to the officers and bid them farewell, expressing thanks for the training imparted to them. These boys were loud in their praise of Lt.-Col. C. C. Brooks and fellow officers of the camp. Then again, let us remind our readers that 67 of these boys signified a desire to join up immediately with the Canadian Army Service Forces. Ten more men reported back to Huntingdon on Tuesday (yesterday) and will aid in the training of trainees that will come here on November 22. On Saturday another trainee came to Huntingdon at his own expense and asked to be admitted to the staff. The young man was sent back to Montreal where he will enlist and in due time be returned to Huntingdon.

When the trainees left Huntingdon Camp and bid farewell to the officers they mounted the buses singing at the top of their voices, as they did when on their route march through the town streets into the rural country.

The unfavourable publicity given the food served at the Huntingdon Camp was unbecoming, to say the least. We always thought the metropolitan press editors checked the copy of their reporters more carefully than has been exemplified during the past week. We, the press, are not infallible to error but a retraction from the Montreal press for the publishing of such copy would seem justifiable to Lt.-Col. C. C. Brooks, Commanding Officer and his worthy staff of officers.

The Bootleggers' Market

DOWN New Brunswick way that excellent weekly newspaper, the Kings County Record of Sussex, tells of a situation which we hope will not be prevalent in Huntingdon. It seems that the R.C.M.P. are waging a determined warfare on bootleggers who are trying to find a market for their goods amongst the soldiers in that training centre. Thus far eleven of this illicit selling fraternity have been found guilty and sentenced to jail and fined. While we know of no definite attempts along this line so far in Huntingdon that is not saying that attempts along this line may not be planned by bootleggers. And we want no bootleggers' paradise in this community. The youths who come here to train are from good homes and should not be exposed to temptations such as the bootleggers would place before them. This is a situation which might well be watched since this community is in the line of fire for bootleggers operating between the border and Montreal.

The Late ROBERT SELLAR

I should say there was fully 20 acres cleared along the river bank, from Allan's Corners west. The embankment on Blyth's place was good when I came—a trench in front of it and a place behind for the men to stand. There was a small blockhouse on William Bryson's lot, where David lived. I am sure of that. Arms and old military fragments have been turned up on Robert Greig's lot. There was no road whatever on the south bank.

I was married in September, 1823, to a daughter of Peter McKellars by McWattie, who asked us to go down to Turcot's for the ceremony. It was not then the custom to be married in the house of the parents.

Old Morrison told McNab, who kept tavern at Lachine, to be on the lookout for McKellar and other acquaintances when they should land, and he directed them how to get to Chateauguay.

The fall of Wakefield's election a riot being apprehended, 100 regulars were sent up from Montreal. They stayed in the blockhouse and were not needed. Next day we took them back to Beauharnois in sleighs, for snow, or rather sleet, had fallen. We had a job getting back, for it thawed somewhat. Squire Graham is buried at Durham, where his body was brought from Michigan.

JAMES WHITALL — Was born in Herefordshire, 31st August, 1794; brought up to farming, went to London in 1815, was some time in a chemist's shop doing the rough work, then a milkman. Got married and came to Canada. Landed at Montreal 22nd May, 1832. Came up to see my brother, John, who had settled in the Chateauguay. Crossed from Cairns' and came out on road line at Watson's. Found the country very wet. Had to walk along logs. In crossing a creek a rotten piece of wood gave way, and up I was to my middle. I asked if there was no better road, and said if there was not, it was the last time I would travel it. When I got to my brother's lot No. 44, 3rd range, I found he was not at home, but had gone back to put up another house on a more favorable spot. Burton was with me, who had been with my brother as a coal hawker in London. When we got on a hill and saw my brother on the roof shingling, he puts his hand to his mouth and gives their cry, when my brother at once jumped up and said it was Burton. He was glad to see me. He had come out in 1828, worked awhile with a farmer on the Chateauguay, and hearing of land being given out, had come and taken lot 44. He was poorly off and glad to get the small legacy I brought him. Sammy Carruthers was helping him to finish his house, and proposed I should try his lot, No 45. That was Saturday; next day we walked over it, and I thought little of it. I asked my brother did he think I could make a living off of it, and he said he thought I could. Carruthers was anxious to sell, being in debt. I wanted to go to Upper Canada, but yielded to my brother's entreaties. There was a mortgage on the lot of No. 17, due Charles DeWitt, arrears of rent, and I paid for the crop he had in. Altogether it cost me £25. It did not raise enough to keep us for four or five years, and we lived mostly on potatoes. I have put a bag on my head, something like a nightcap, with some wheat, and walked along the logs that crossed the swampy lots to Dewittville to get it ground. The timber was all plundered in my lot, and the hemlocks and the like would not make ashes. I burned a heap once, when my brother's son came and told me the ashes were of no use. That sickened me with potash. Once, on felling some elm trees, my wife gathered the ashes and asked me what she should do with them. I told her to put them at the roots. I was not going to be bothered with them.

ROBERT WHITALL—I am the son of James, was ten years old when I came out. Am married to James Sparrow's daughter. He has told me when he came to New Ireland, they could get no provisions nearer than the Cedars sometimes, and he had to walk there, and bring it back on his back.

The first corn he raised, he put part in a bag and took it on his back to Buck's mill. They lived by potash, and went wherever they saw fit in the bush to find suitable timber. Chas. McNarland said it was all God's land, and they had a right to take what they pleased. My father-in-law was at Blakeley's tavern, near Oliver's old place, when an old pensioner came in. He had been up to see the lot he had drawn; it was all bush and wet. He offered it to him for a pint of whiskey. Having enough to do with his own lot, he declined, when Blakely bought it for his night's lodging and whiskey, the ticket being handed over. I think it was John Fern's lot, or one near it. I got no schooling here, beyond attending a night school in New Ireland kept by a smart young man named Ogilvy. He was being educated for a doctor, but got wild and had to take to teaching. I learned little with him. I know the Americans cut a road to the river, but never saw it. On McBride's lot there was a cut down the river bank and the story was that the Americans had crossed there. The concession road was chopped out when we came, but not made. Never heard of Vallé. There was Ouimet and Tessier on the river. Old McNarland asked Brown to cut a ditch and put up fence on side of his lot, when there was no one. Brown said the best way was for him to buy the 200 acres, and offered it for £40. After some demur, McNarland agreed, and having two yoke of oxen, soon made potash enough to pay it. We had a notion that wherever there was an unclaimed lot, Ellice represented it was his.

(Old Mr. Whittall is a large made man, with heavy features of Duke of Wellington type. Could tell he was English by appearance. Has all his senses, hearing being perfect. Were it not for a broken leg, would still be active. Is intelligent and talkative. Not bald, and his thick white hair gives him a patriarchial look. 28-11-82.)

Howick

A demonstration was given by Mrs. Kerr and a reading of a patriotic nature by Margaret Morrison. Wrappers were gathered for the Red Cross from Chipso, Camay and Crisco. Members are requested to save these for next meeting.

The meeting closed with "God Save the King," after which a delicious lunch was served by the Fertile Creek ladies.

Siros' Report to be Brought Before This Session of Parliament

WITH little of the customary color and pageantry, the second session of Canada's war parliament has been opened. The nation's federal representatives have come together at a grim and serious hour to discuss and administer Canada's part in the war. There was, however, no despondency in the Speech from the Throne delivered by the Governor-General, the Earl of Athlone, in the Senate Chamber. It gave a clear impression of sober confidence in the ultimate outcome of the conflict and showed the determination of the Canadian people to prosecute the war "to the utmost of our strength." There was no mention of the specific nature of proposed legislation except that measures would be for the "welfare of Canada" and the prosecution of the war to the full. "You have been summoned at this time," the speech said, "that opportunity may be afforded for the fullest consideration and discussion of Canada's war effort and of national problems which war has served to intensify or create." International tension, the speech pointed out, had been heightened by the alliance of the Axis powers with Japan, but events of greater significance had served to confirm our faith in the ultimate outcome of the struggle. "First and foremost has been the magnificent resistance of the United Kingdom." In the face of a common peril there had arisen," the speech said, "a closer association and an increasing measure of co-operation between the United States of America and the nations of the British Commonwealth." This week the debate on the speech will be in full swing

Conference Called on Sirois Report

The premiers of the nine provinces have been asked by Prime Minister Mackenzie King to come to Ottawa in January to discuss the recommendations of the Sirois Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations. The Dominion Government has carefully studied the proposals in recent months and favors their adoption. In his letter to the provincial premiers, the Prime Minister said that the impact of war with its financial burdens had "inevitably increased the competition between governments to secure revenues and has aggravated the overlapping, cumbersome and discrimina-

TRUTH GETS A CHANCE
(Montreal Star Editorial)

Premier Godbout must be an enigma to a great many people. As electors we have come to expect little more than polite platitude from politicians. The cynical approach most Canadians adopt towards party politics is largely based on that fact. But here is something new on the political horizon—a politician who tells the truth even when it might be in his own political interest to conceal the facts or to bring them out only under the light of half-truths. No prominent figure in Quebec's recent political history has ever told the electorate what Mr. Godbout told a St. Jerome meeting yesterday: "If you are not satisfied with the mode of government at Quebec, it is your bounded duty to vote against the government candidate." It must have upset a lot of people who approach politics with a shoulder-shrugging attitude, but it must have been a refreshing experience for them when they thought it over.

Then, again, the Premier approaches criticism differently from most politicians. He does not defend the actions of his Government; he says merely that some unpleasant things are necessary at the moment. Thus, he said: "I'm quite sure that when you pay your tolls on these bridges, you don't always think any too kindly of me. Well—I hope you won't be annoyed, but I must confess that I don't care much. For years here, small politicans tried to make people believe that they could spend and spend without it costing the citizens anything."

That is very plain speaking—and we could do with more of it. The people of Canada, of Quebec perhaps more than anywhere else, have little use today for what Lord Tweedsmuir called "the small beer of party controversy." We are in a fact-fac-

WHOSE MONEY IS it?

WHAT money? Why—the money in the banks! The money carefully put away by you and your neighbours in savings accounts. The money you could have spent today but wanted to keep safely against some future need. The businessman's money for use in his normal operations. There are more than 4,846,000 bank deposit accounts, savings and current. Within these two classes the great majority of deposits are small or of moderate amount. ¶ But you'd be wrong if you assumed from this, that the rest of the deposits are owned by the few! Quite the contrary! The railways, for instance, have deposits in the chartered banks—and that indirectly includes the whole population of the Dominion. The trade unions have deposits. Millions of policy-holders share in the ownership of insurance companies' deposits. ¶ And don't overlook the deposits of wheat pools; farm co-operatives; churches; municipalities and municipal hydro commissions, school districts; school children's penny bank savings deposited with the chartered banks; and commercial and mining corporations with very wide lists of shareholders, large and small, all over Canada. Truly, money on deposit in Canada's chartered banks is owned, in fact, by you and your fellow-Canadians.

In war, as in peace, Canada's Chartered Banks maintain, uninterrupted, their useful services — safeguarding depositors' funds; facilitating the nation's business — looking forward to peace with freedom as the only sure basis of enduring prosperity.

CHECKERBOARD LOVE

JOSEPH McCORD

"When you were telling me about these people at dinner I thought you were careful not to include . . ."

"The guest of honor? Maybe I was overly informative about the rest. You're right. Would I have been putting my finger on a tender spot?"

"That's ridiculous! Jeff told me ever so much about her, only he didn't happen to mention that she was married. Or had been. It did jolt me just a little when he introduced us. I wondered if I misunderstood."

"No. You didn't misunderstand. She was married about two years ago. Still is. But the mill is grinding."

"Oh! You mean she's getting a divorce."

"It's in the bag. I happen to know. I'm sort of a satelite of Brand, Blumenthat and Brand. We don't trifle with such cases as a rule, but Olive's papa is the great and only Harvey Harrison. Hence Mr. Cooper will be eased out of the scene without any fanfare of trumpets. And profitably, too."

"Then I'm sorry for her."

"Nmm . . . m." Vic was staring through the drawing room door. "People in her circle have quaint notions of marriage. It's like buying a fur wrap. If the style changes or you figure it isn't becoming, you work it off on the second-hand man and pick out something different. You wouldn't know about that."

"We're getting quite too serious," Audrey decided. "Could we dance?"

"The very thing I was going to suggest," Vic declared. "It's my one social grace."

Victor Quinn proved to be an accomplished dancer and Audrey felt a momentary regret when Jeff cut in after one circuit of the big hall. "Not sorry you came?" he asked almost at once.

"What do you think?"

"That if you're bored you're hiding it very well. You must have cast a spell over Vic. He always suspects lone females of being on the prowl."

"Perhaps I am. I like him a lot."

"Queer chap in many ways. No money to speak of, but an entree that no amount of dough can get you. He's been a self-appointed monitor to me and I don't mind telling you I owe him a lot. He probably has admitted it to you. One day, he'll make his mark . . . a high one. Say, Cygie?"

"Yes?"

"I know you haven't had any chance yet to get acquainted, but —"

"She's lovely, Jeff."

With her mother and father for an interested audience, Audrey had been detailing an account of the Castle dinner over her morning coffee and a cigarette.

"Oh, Miss Audrey!"

The girl turned to see the cook's face peering through the kitchen door.

"What is it, Julia?"

"A man at the back door what wants to see you."

"For goodness' sake!" Audrey half rose from her chair, sank back with a laugh. "It's Vic, Mom. Show him in, Julia."

It was none other than Victor Quinn who strolled in smilingly and called a cheery greeting. "Hello, Audrey! You're looking very well indeed this morning."

"I am. Mr. Quinn, my mother."

"Mrs. Swan, I am delighted to meet you. Please don't get up."

"Oh, we've finished breakfast long ago," Audrey smiled. "We'll find more comfortable chairs. It may be pleasant out on the porch.

"But I want to stay here," Vic expostulated. "I want a cup of coffee. That's what I came for. Don't tell me I'm too late."

'Of course you're not!" Martha exclaimed, taking refuge in a burst of hospitality. "You sit right down here with Audrey. I'll have some hot coffee for you in just a minute." She caught up the pot and started out with it, then paused at the door to ask. "Can't we fix you some bacon and eggs, too? You must be hungry after your walk."

"Well . . . "

"Of course you will."

"Do you mind telling me what all this is about?" Audrey demanded.

"That bunch up on the hill doesn't seem to go in for getting up at all. I prowled all over the place without seeing any sign of life until I stumbled over a serf working in the garden. By way of making conversation, I asked him who lived in the pleasant looking house I could see in the distance. He told me. And here I am. Oh, thank you!"

The last was for Julia who had come paddling in with bacon and eggs. Audrey poured her guest's coffee and made toast.

"You know, Audrey . . . " Vic paused for a satisfying bite. "I don't recall ever taking part in a domestic scene like this. Not in years, at all events. I can't tell you how it makes me feel."

"I'm sorry we haven't a pet rabbit for you."

"But I'd rather have you and your nose," he grinned impudently. "And that reminds me . . . I think you'll see a cavalcade of sorts heading this way after a bit. Jeff gave a glowing account of your equine menagerie and Olive was all set for an inspection."

The sound of the telephone bell came from the hall. It was Jeffrey Castle. "Hello, Audrey. Would it be all right if some of us rode over after a bit? We want to have a try at your bars, if you don't mind. We'll all go for a ride later, so be ready to join us."

"Maybe."

"Sure you can. Say, Cygie, Vic is missing this morning. Nobody's seen him."

"He's here."

"The devil you say! So it's as bad as all that!"

"You win," she admitted to Vic who stood smiling at her from the doorway. "Let's go."

When the stables were reached Audrey introduced the guest to her father and admitted to a little feeling of relief at Vic's attitude. He displayed a keen interest in all that was shown him. The two men were still deep in their conversation when her ear caught the pounding of hooves in the lane.

"Company coming," she announced. "Let's go out to meet them. You come too, Dad."

Audrey could not keep her admiring eyes from Olive's smiling face and trim, erect figure. She was even more attractive in her riding clothes than in a dinner gown, the girl acknowledged to herself. Olive was mounted on Eileen.

Jeff was looking particularly well in new whipcord breeches, his shirt open at the throat, bareheaded. The group chatted with gay informality, with the exception of Anthony whose preoccupied attention was directed mainly to Eileen's restless movements.

It was Olive who created a diversion with a direct question to Jeff. "Where are those jumps you were telling me about, Jeffrey? I'm anxious to try them. So is this mare," she added as Eileen tossed her head fretfully.

"Over there in the paddock," he replied with an indicating wave of his crop, then an uncertain look directed at Audrey. "Aren't you saddled yet?"

"Go ahead," was her smiling rejoinder. "I'll be with you presently." She turned and rested her arms on the top of the fence, watching the others ride away.

"Why doesn't Mr. Jeffrey tell that young woman to go easy on the curb?" Anthony's usually mild voice carried a growl.

"That's what I'm thinking," Audrey agreed in a tense little voice.

Vic took his place at the fence, held by the undercurrent of anxiety in the words he had just heard. The trio stood in silence, watching. They saw the horses reined up some fifty yards from the first set of bars, then Eileen shot forward, urged into a swift gallop.

Suddenly Anthony Swan was scrambling over the fence.

Sensing that some calamity was imminent, Vic lifted Audrey unceremoneously in his arms and dropped her on the other side of the white barrier, vaulting over after her. He caught her hand and the two raced after Anthony, who had sprinted ahead.

It happened before they could reach the scene. Eileen, head thrown high, barely had her forelegs over the top bar when she crashed down, turned an almost complete somersault and flung her rider in a heap. By the time the others came up, Jeff had dismounted and was holding Olive's limp figure in his arms. Eileen had attempted to get to her feet but had rolled on her side and lay still.

WEEK AT OTTAWA

tory character of much of our tax structure." It was the view of the Government, the letter said, "that adoption of the Commission's recommendations is necessary to put our country in a positioin to pursue a policy which will achieve a maximum war effort and at the same time to lay a sound foundation for post-war reconstruction."

The commission's recommendations included the assumption by the Federal Government of provincial debts and the responsibility of maintenance of unemployed who are able to work. Provinces were to surrender to the Dominion their right to collect income taxes, corporation taxes and succession duty taxes. The present statutory subsidies to provinces were to be discontinued but there were to be substituted national grant to provinces to help those in difficulty to balance their budgets. Unemployment insurance was one of the recommendations of the commission and Parliament has already passed the necessary legislation and is putting a nation-wide plan of contributory job insurance into effect. The Dominion-Provincial conference in January will discuss the whole comprehensive program of readjusting the financial relationship of Dominion and Provinces, which was the result of three years' intensive study by the members of the commission and a body of experts.

Roosevelt Re-election Received With Pleasure

Although there could be no official expression of opinion at Ottawa on the result of the presidential election in the United States, it was quite evident at the opening of the session that the spirits of members of parliament have been buoyed up by the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt. From practical experience they had come to know that the president has a profound sympathy with the British cause and they saw in his re-election to the White House a contiunance on an expanding scale of material assistance to Britain. Word from Washington that after a conference with President Roosevelt, the head of the British Purchasing Commission, Mr. A. B. Purvis, is flying to Britain, has confirmed this view. Purvis told reporters he expected to return with more orders for war materials from Britain. There has been practically no reference by anyone here in regard to domestic issues in the United States. Canada has nothing to do with that, and there has been no critical comment on the defeated candidate for the presidency but human nature being what it is, there has been no hesitation about expressing pleasure that a tried and trusted friend is at the head of the great republic for another four years.

During the present week it is expected parliament will hear from the Prime Minister and ministers guiding the country's war effort, a full account of the progress that has been made in the war program. Members will hear of the growth and training of land forces, of the instruction of young men under the compulsory training plan, of Canada's contribution in the air and on the sea. They will also be informed on the progress that has been made not only in the construction of plants but in the actual production of war materials for this country and Britain. Equipment in this highly mechanized war is recognized as a vital issue, and that the extent of the output of armaments may be the decisive factor in the outcome of the conflict. It will be on the war program with financial problems arising from it that parliament will be likely occupied for the entire time until the adjournment for the Christmas recess.

FIBRE FLAX SEED EXPORT

According to a report by the Agricultural Supplies Board, negotiations carried on with the Government of Northern Ireland have resulted in an agreement by the Government to take all Canadian surplus fibre flax seed of the 1940 crop at the following prices: Certified No. 1 seed, $6 per bushel; No. 1 seed, $4.25 per bushel; No. 2 seed, $4 per bushel. These prices represent an advance of 60 cents per bushel for Certified No. 1 seed. The prices for the other grades mentioned are the same as those paid for seed of the 1939 crop.

It was moved by Coun. Crutchfield, sec. by Coun. Murphy: That the following bills be paid: Messrs. Trainer, Blair and Tessier, $8.75; Charlie Douglas, $1; Harold Douglas, $40; Erville Lindsay, $3; A. W. McNaughton, $3.30; Barrie Memorial Hospital, $9; County of Huntingdon, $1,284.59; Warren Thompson, $8.60, and that the bills of Erville Lindsay and A. W. McNaughton be collected from the interested parties.

It was moved by Coun. Oliver, sec. by Coun. Ross: That this council accept the bridge over the Hinchinbrook River, in the village of Athelstan, as it is built, and binds itself to maintain it free of toll in the future.

It was moved by Coun. Crutchfield, seconded by Coun. Murphy: That on request of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada, this council appoint Mrs. Reese, Athelstan, and Mr. E. A. Mason, Gore Road, to handle emergency calls in this municipality.

Howick

A regular meeting of the Howick W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Alfred Greig on November 5, with the president, Mrs. George Graham, in the chair.

Knitted blocks were brought in; one blanket was ready to be completed, and another well advanced, for the Red Cross.

Moved by Mrs. Roy, seconded by Mrs. Alex Younie: That the secretary send Christmas cards to absent and former members; also a sum voted to the V.O. of Nurses for Christmas remembrances.

Mrs. Roy Blair, Provincial President, was present and gave an interesting account of the executive meeting held in Franklin.

Potatoes in a cellar during the winter months should be picked over several times before spring and any sprouts that have formed should be removed. This will keep the potatoes firm and lessen the danger of spoiling.

ing era, and Mr. Godbout more than anything else believes that it is high time Quebec faced facts that have been deliberately kept buried or revealed only under subdued lighting.

One of these relates to education, and the Premier was speaking on behalf of the Hon. Hector Perrier, the new Provincial Secretary and Minister of Education, who is standing for election in Terrebonne county. The facts of education in this province must when they are brought into full daylight. Mr. Godbout and his Government intend to introduce reforms. Telling the people the truth will inflict only wholesome hurts. We hope this kind of political courage will find emulators elsewhere. It is likely to become a very popular game with the Canadian electorate.

THE VITAL MONTHS AHEAD

(The Canadian Statesman)

Mr. Ralston has just returned from inspecting coast defences. A Canadian Press despatch dated Oct. 31 quotes him: "There is neither time nor excuse for complacency or slackening of effort. On the contrary it challenges us all to drive on relentlessly to make the very utmost of the vital months ahead."

These are inspiring words. Since last May we have been constantly expressing the same thoughts, using almost the same diction. And yet, in all truth, in this district we cannot see that they have caused a ripple. We still pursue a casual everyday existence. We don't seem to be driving anywhere or anything—let alone "relentlessly."

If anyone cares to dispute this, let him come on.

We have a file here we should like to show to Mr. Ralston. It contains about 40 letters. It represents replies received from Ottawa—replies from a dozen departments. Every one of them breathes "wait and see what develops."

These replies have come to a man whom we know possesses ability and knowledge out of the ordinary. For 10 months he has been writing Ottawa offering his services in any capacity, scorning pull and political angles—with the above results.

There has been no "slackening of effort" in this case.

All of which throws a sidelight upon these officially inspired preachments.

Prime Minister Churchill had to submit to the authority of a provincial mayor when he recently entered an underground air raid shelter smoking a cigar. The mayor asked him to put out his cigar—and the man who has probably more authority than almost any other person in Britain's history did what he was told.

STRONG WIND BLOWS DOWN FRAMEWORK OF DRILL HALL

A wind of near cyclonic proportions swept across this district on Monday evening and early Tuesday morning. Numerous tree branches were blown down and the odd bit of damage done here and there. Lights were out in Huntingdon for a period of about ten minutes during Monday evening when the service was temporarily stopped. The most damage done was at the Training Centre here where the framework of the large drill hall in course of construction crashed to the ground. The damage as a result will be considerable financially and will naturally delay the work for awhile. An enquiry was held on Tuesday with the results of the same being forwarded to Ottawa.

Commanding Officer

Father Pigeon. The latter stated he knew of no better way to make better Canadians than by asking them to be better Christians. Maintaining that "any man on a public platform today is vested with a great responsibility," Father Pigeon stated, "I will speak to you of the religious side of war." In this connection he commended "the example of our beloved King and Queen, who never addressed an audience over the radio before first offering a prayer to Almighty God." He commended, too, the religious qualities of the Governor-General of Canada, and also those of President Roosevelt, who concluded his last election campaign speech by offering up a prayer to Almighty God.

"This is a war between principalities and powers and there are many invisible things at work; this is a war of right against might."

Should Find Cause First

Stating that we should first try to find the cause of the war in order to get at the remedy, Father Pigeon referred to a recent letter of Pope Pius XII, who stated that the first cause is the denial and rejection of a universal law of morality as well for the individual as for international powers. "When God is disregarded the voice of conscience is stilled; when His laws are disregarded we do not feel as brothers—and there is no charity. The country that has not religion is sooner or later destined to ruin." Father Pigeon enumerated a number of things we should do as Canadian citizens and as Christians. We should give our country full, comprehension in our schools. We should be better Christians. We should have religion in our schols. We shuld observe the Lord's Day. In concluding, he said: "Let us shed less tears on the sins of Europe and more on our own sins; it will result in greater good for all later on, for we will be better Christians if we are to be better Canadians."

In proposing a toast to the British Empire, Mayor D. Faubert expressed his pleasure in the better understanding created by Lieut.-Col. Brooks through the latter's explanation of difficulties faced by the officers in the execution of their duties. In responding to the Empire toast, Rev. Thomas Knowles stated, "I am proud to make a toast to the British Empire, the greatest on earth." He related how his relatives, like all British citizens, were bravely and courageously facing Hitler's attack on England back on the banks of the Mersey River, his home. He told of how everyone was making a real effort and, incidentally, how his own son had just recently joined the Royal Air Force.

"We are fighting an enemy that knows nothing about honor, an enemy that will do anything to gain their ends," said Rev. Mr. Knowles.

Enthusiastic approval of the remarks of Father Pigeon to the effect that religion must always be at the forefront of the accomplishing of any great cause was given by Rev. Mr. Knowles.

"Do Your Part"

Stating that more people need sand in their system to staunchly forward the Empire's cause, the speaker remarked, "Men who are not willing to do their part should be made to do it. We are just playing with the game of war. We should get on at it more vigorously."

He unhesitatingly denounced those who made profits out of the war while thousands of boys were over there risking their lives for the Empire's cause. Pleasure was expressed over the decision of the citizens of the United States in the recent election campaign for "we know that their war effort will not now be broken."

"We have an Empire that has not deserted her principles," concluded the speaker. "She is sticking right on. I think you have reason to be proud of her, proud to be a member of the great British Empire. Now, go and do your duty."

The singing of the National Anthem brought to a close an evening that was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Many fine compliments were heard about the excellence of the meal provided by Mr. A. Langevin, manager of the Huntingdon Chateau. There was a total of 105 present.

and forced the battling Huntingdon team back to its own five yard line. St. Lambert met with strong resistance but Letts finally carried the ball over the line in the first minute of the second quarter. The attempted convert was broken up, making the score 5-0 in favor of St. Lambert.

Hoy paved the way for Huntingdon's lone touchdown by crashing through the St. Lambert line for seven yards. Then Mann plunged through the right side for a touchdown. "Red" Hayter's "educated" toe booted the placement squarely between the uprights, giving the local high school a 6-5 lead.

St. Lambert scored their second major late in the third quarter and the convert was successful, thus giving the visitors six extra points.

Huntingdon attempted desperately to tie the score but were unsuccessful. Van Vliet and Letts suffered minor injuries in the first quarter and were able to resume their position on the field.

The Huntingdon High School team is scheduled to meet other city and district squads in the near future and assure their staunch supporters that the games will be as keenly fought as Monday's encounter.

WRITES RE FOOD AND THE TRAINEES

The following letter appeared in the Montreal Star on November 9, 1940:

Sir,—I was very interested in the complaints voiced by the trainees returning home from their 30 days' camp. What are we coming to? Some say the food is "not so good as at home"; another says he spent $65 in the village on eats in a month! Well I wonder what they would have said of the "delectable dishes" served up to us in the last war. How would they like to drink tea out of a mess-tin having previously contained soup or bully stew, and with a few bits of meat floating around on the surface? Did it taste good? After a 25-mile march I'll say it did. As for monotony in meals, it was nothing for us to have more or less the same meal practically every day for a week. And on many occasions the one plate had to do for second courses (when served). Also in France, more than once, a horse was missing from the lines, and not a young one either. Need I say more?

When I joined the Army to assist in ensuring the peace for the young "men" of today I decided to stand or fall by the Government. That is to say, I would take everything as it came. The Government would have to feed, house and clothe me. This they did (after a fashion). When I entered I was a weakling. After 3 years they sent me home a man. I ate everything they gave me, whether it appealed to me or no. I was so starving hungry at every meal that I never paused to consider whether the food was good or otherwise, nor even what it was. I just ate all I could get. My military service "made" me. I did not let it "break" me, as I am sure it would have done many of the trainees of today, if we may judge from their complaints.

So my advice to the next lot of recruits is to go and do your duty with a smile, don't kick, expect nothing and be thankful for, and make the best of, what you get. We (the old hands) did it all before you and were not pampered as you are being today. I received my first leave after 6 months; until then not even a late pass. I didn't need one. I was too tired every night.

By the way, I received one shilling (25c) a day at the start. Even Einstein with all his theories would never be able to solve this mathematical problem to the satisfaction of the trainee who spent $65 in one month for eats.

Go to it, boys! Let's see that you still have some British blood in you and can "take" it with a smile.

What's in the Wind

by PAULA DICKS

Education Week.—

Salute the Revolution! Quebec is on the march. And the Prime Minister stands away out in front. A target for reactionary snipers.

His friends pray that he will yield to pressure in this matter no further than he did in the famous franchise issue. The same enemies to progress are his adversaries today.

I heard from an unquestionable source that even the Cabinet is not one hundred percent loyal to the Leader. Others there are who covet power, be it obtained by whatever high or low alliances. The rumor some weeks ago that Premier Godbout would enter the King Administration as Minister of Agriculture (afterwards denied by Ottawa) lends colour to the whispers regarding an alleged movement to oust Godbout from Quebec because of his programme for real reform.

No one is better informed than Premier Godbout as to the price we are paying for ignorance. Untold millions are at stake. Our very lives, our homes, our farms and property are in the balance!

Whether or not the young generation now in our schools gain a knowledge of arithmetic, geometry, electricity, radio-telegraphy and general mechanics.

It is the new CULTURE. Would you lose everything rather than swallow half a mill or even five or ten more mills on your taxes.

Rural Technical High School.—

The Huntingdon High School is to receive mechanical equipment up to $5,000 from the Provincial Government, as and when they instal and operate it. Capable instructors for this work will also be supplied under the Dominion-Provincial Youth Educational Programme.

This is likely to bring far-reaching results in our local educational attitude. By the New Year definite classes will be in progress in Huntingdon.

Alberta Shows How.—

At the Gault Institute last Wednesday, Dr. G. F. McNally, Deputy Minister of Education for Alberta, told a gathering of local educationalists about the Alberta situation. They had many of the same problems that face Quebec but when a school teacher became Prime Minister things began to happen.

Large Administrative Units were put into operation in rural sections. After three years' trial Dr. McNally states that the benefits in better organization, increased facilities for teaching the children, better salaries and security for teachers are universally recognized and approved.

There was practically no disorganization in making the change. Careful plans were made for each district in advance. School Inspectors were given the title of Superintendent and the staff increased as necessary in order to give much closer supervision.

Along with larger units in Alberta came the introduction of a new course of study calling for more activity on the part of pupils. It was very much simpler to introduce the extra equipment through Divisional Boards. Local school boards continue to function as before, except that the control of the finances and the teacher are under the Divisional Board. Local boards make recommendations as they see fit to the Divisional Board or the Superintendent.

Provision is made for any town, village or consolidated or separate school district to enter a Division upon terms to be agreed upon. Provision is also made to protect the interests of Roman Catholic or Protestant school districts that may find themselves included in school divisions in which they are a minority.

All teachers attend the same Normal Schools regardless of their religion. Superintendents of schools perform their duties under the same regulations. Protestant Superintendents may be assigned to Catholic Divisions or vice versa.

Financing.—

The Divisional Board draws up an annual budget showing the amount of money it is proposed to use for each class of expenditure and requisitions the collecting authorities for the amount. Collections are all made by the municipal authorities under the divisional system and approximately 75 schools form a division.

A uniform tax rate has been established and no debts have been incurred through introducing the new system. Elimination of waste effort has made for economies. Business-like administration has not removed all the financial burdens but has relieved the pinches. The small Boards frequently under-estimated expenditures and did not requisition municipalities for sufficient funds or they did not themselves levy a sufficiently high rate. Borrowing money put them only deeper in debt. Many divisions had heavy back debts to pay. Some were paying salary arrears to as many as five teachers. At time of setting up larger units in Alberta $244,428 in teachers' salaries remained unpaid. Two-thirds of this amount was repaid by 1939. The average salary for rural teachers has been established at over $800. a year, under Divisional system.

Other advantages have been lowered expenses in officials' salaries; savings up to 25% in purchase of fuel in bulk; rapid transfer and efficient use of interchangeable equipment.

Benefits to Pupils.—

The Divisional System in Alberta has increased very greatly the opportunities of rural children. At the same time it has given the people of the Province a larger return on their educational dollar.

In the Southern part of Alberta where roads are always passable, bus service operates for the Consolidated Schools. In other parts of the Province dormatories are provided at the Central High Schools to house the rural pupils. For instance, at Lethbridge in 1937 there were 54 children from rural schools getting a high school education. In 1938 the attendance was 154. In the present year 394 children from rural sections attend the Lethbridge High School.

There is a general policy of providing a high school course for every pupil who wishes to take advantage of it. If a pupil cannot attend a high school he has the privilege of taking a correspondence course, the fees for which are paid from the funds of the division.

All divisions co-operate with the cities, towns and villages in or near the division to secure advantage of already organized facilities. Thirty-four divisions pay all fees for all pupils, including those in Grade XII, attending High Schools. One division pays fees to a city district of $50. per student.

Enlightenment vs Quebec Blackout.—

Our educational authorities have a staggering task ahead if they attempt to equal the Alberta achievement. Imagine this province when high school training in the modern style; carpentry and commerce; music and mechanics; household science and dramatics, can be available to every child—French or English—and it must be done. It is their birth-right, too long withheld. All the silly obstacles of race, language and religion must be swept away. Just as seems to have been done in Alberta. Out there in the wide open spaces where men are men—and women have been voting for a quarter century!

Women, indeed, might do well to write frankly to the Prime Minister, telling him of their approval of his effort to reform education, and more power to his elbow! Just by way of gratitude and to show where support will come from when needed!

J. R. Lemieux Is Promoted By the R.C.M.P.

Officer is Native of Valleyfield—Transferred to Saskatoon For Tour of Duty

Sub-Inspector James R. Lemieux, officer in charge of the Criminal Investigation Bureau of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police "C" division, with Montreal headquarters, was congratulated by fellow-officers over the week-end upon his promotion to commissioned rank.

The appointment of Inspector Lemieux marks the promotion of another French-Canadian officer in the famed police corps. He was a detective-sergeant for a number of years.

He is well known in Montreal and in the Eastern Townships where he served for years both as a preventive officer and as a member of the R.C.M.P. He was stationed at various times at Sherbrooke, Thetford Mines, Cummings Mills, and Joliette.

Following his promotion he will be transferred to Saskatoon for a tour of duty in the west before returning to Eastern Canada.

Born in Valleyfield, a son of the late Wilfrid Lemieux, chief of police of that municipality for 33 years, Inspector Lemieux was educated there. In 1930 he joined the preventive service and later transferred to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. He won quick promotions during the past six years.

Thankoffering Meeting of W.M.S.

St. Paul's W.M.S. autumn thankoffering meeting was held in McDougall Hall, Thursday, Nov. 7. Miss Elizabeth Sadler presided. The devotional exercises were taken by four ladies, one from each group, Mrs. Lorne Elliot, Mrs. Robert McDougall, Mrs. Frank Martin and Mrs. Alec Younie. A solo, "The Stranger of Galilee," was sung by Mrs. T. S. Osmond.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Astburg, president of the Montreal Presbyterial, was introduced by the president. The report of the board meeting held at Immanuel College, Toronto, last May, was the subject of Mrs. Astbury's talk and proved to be very interesting and instructive. Mrs. Graham moved a vote of thanks to the speaker.

The thankoffering was taken up. Miss Mary Bazin gave the dedicatory prayer. A trio was sung by the Mesdames T. S. Osmond, Anderson and J. A. McNeil. The meeting closed with the hymn, "In Christ No Est of West," nd pryer by Miss Lydia Bazin.

Mission Band Meeting

The "Busy Bees" Mission Band began the story of Trinidad at their meeting last Friday. There were 22 members present, also some visitors. The treasurer reported that the thankoffering taken at the last meeting amounted to $10.21. Anyone having gifts to add to those brought in at this meeting will please do so before November 19, as the bale will be packed then.

W.C.T.U. Notes

At the meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union held at Mrs. Taylor's last Thursday, a loving tribute to the memory of Mrs. Henry Wilson was given by Mrs. W. McGerrigle and the words of the hymn, "Brief Life is Here Our Portion," used in the memorial service which Mrs. Wilson conducted at the recent provincial convention, was read by Mrs. Hamilton Elliot, the ladies present standing.

A message of congratulation and good wishes was sent to Mrs. Young on her return home from the hospital in Montreal. The devotional part of the meeting was led by Mrs. McGerrigle, who as president conducted the business. Mrs. Todd's report on Flower Missions work showed that 189 baskets of flowers had been sent during the past summer which were gratefully acknowledged by the City Mission. Mrs. Orr reported that 29 jars of preserves had gone to the Friendly Home, and read the reply received from them. These had been carried free by the Daniels Transport Company, which is much appreciated by the Union.

Ten dollars was voted for the work of the Quebec Temperance League, and the Ambulance Fund is to remain open a little longer. Any member wishing to join in this Dominion-wide fund can leave a donation of 25 cents or more with the treasurer. Mrs. A. Greig, superintendent of Morale and Humane Education, gave some interesting readings on her department, assisted by some of the members.

"Tidings Day" was observed by the use of a playlet showing the value of the knowledge gained from this publication of the Canadian W.C.T.U. The Supt. of Legislation brought to the notice of the members the suggested restrictions to the Liquor Law, presented to a committee of the cabinet by a deputation from the Canadian Temperance Federation. It was decided to send a letter to the prime minister endorsing this request.

As Mrs. H. Elliot was unable to give her report of convention at the last meeting, it was received at this time. The next regular meeting will be at Mrs. W. G. McGerrigle's, the roll call to be answered by Christmas thoughts. The prayer meeting is to be at Mrs. J. A. McNeil's, Nov. 18. Sick visiting committee: Mrs. W. G. Roy, Mrs. A. Ross, Mrs. A. Rember, Mrs. G. Sadler.

STEAMED PUDDINGS

STEAMED puddings carry an inexpensive wallop which will knock out even the biggest appetite. For an economy budget, where nutrition, variety and good flavour are all included, these steamed pudding recipes are important.

Steamed Date Pudding

¼ cup butter or other fat
2 eggs
1-3 cup finely chopped beef suet
¾ lb. dates, chopped
½ cup molasses
¾ cup milk
½ teaspoon soda
2 cups whole wheat flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
Spices: ¼ teaspoon each—cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger

Cut clean white fat from beefsteak and use for the suet. Chop very fine. Cream butter, all well beaten eggs. Beat well. Then add the suet, molasses, dates and flour. Add sifted spices, baking powder, soda and salt. Stir in milk. Mix all well. Pour into greased mold. Steam two hours. Serve with foamy lemon sauce.

Marmalade Pudding

(Serves 6 to 8)

1 egg
½ cup milk
½ cup finely chopped beef suet
1¼ cups orange marmalade
2½ cups dry bread crumbs
1 teaspoon soda

Dissolve soda in a little water. Beat egg, add milk and beat again. Add all other ingredients. Pour into greased mold. Steam for two hours. Serve hot with hard sauce or with foamy orange sauce.

Baked Indian Pudding

1 quart milk
2¼ tablespoons yellow corn meal
3 tablespoons molasses
Butter size of an egg
1 egg
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ginger
¼ teaspoon salt

Bring to boil. Sprinkle in corn meal, continuing to stir. Cook 15 minutes in double boiler. Add molasses and cook another five minutes. Remove from heat; stir in butter, spices, salt, sugar and well beaten egg. Turn into greased baking dish and bake in slow oven (300 degrees F.) for about two hours. Serve very hot with vanilla ice cream or hard sauce.

Gingerbread Men

½ cup shortening
½ cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon soda disolved in—
¼ cup hot water
½ cup molasses
3½ cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon ginger
½ teapsoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cloves
¾ teaspoon salt

Chilling time: Two hours.
Oven temperature: 400 deg. F.
Baking Time: Twelve minutes.

FROSTING

2 tablespoons hot milk
½ tablespoon butter
1½ cups confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
Yield: Two dozen (about).

Cream the shortening and sugar in a bowl. Dissolve the soda in the hot water; stir into the molasses; add. Sift the dry ingredients together; add, mixing to a stiff dough; chill. Roll out one-fourth inch thick; cut with a gingerbread cutter. Bake upon ungreased cooking sheets in a quick oven. When cold, frost with white and colored frosting, making a face, jacket and shoes in each man. For the frosting: Blend butter and hot milk; add sugar slowly until spreadable; flavor. Color all or part with vegetable coloring.

COURTESY IN THE STREET

In the street think a little of others and try not to inconvenience any one in any way. Never walk directly in front of an oncoming person but move a little out of the way. Don't carry an umbrella or stick carelessly. Avoid getting into the way of people who are obviously hurrying to get somewhere.

A man does not sandwich himself between two women when walking with them in the street. He takes the curb side of the pavement whether he is walking with one woman or with several.

In walking with one woman a man does not link his arm in hers, grasp her by the elbow or offer her his arm, unless it is to guide her through a crowded street or protect her from traffic. He does not, if he is a gentleman, chew gum or smoke. Nor does he talk in a loud and boisterous manner.

Never call a person's name in public if it can be avoided. In conversing, do not make personal remarks or expose your private affairs to passers-by. Remember that the well-bred person never attracts attention to himself.

When greeting people in public bear in mind that a quiet, unobtrusive manner shows good breeding. You can be cordial without making yourself conspicuous. Greet your intimate friends with a cheerful "Hello!" but do not shout it so others turn around to see what has happened. Greet acquaintances with a courteous nod of recognition or a friendly "How do you do"

Dahlia's Whatnots

The President.—

He is unique in two ways—he is the first president of the U.S. to have entertained a King of England, and the first to be president a third term.

Numbers of Americans did not want Roosevelt back in the presidential chair. There was one Willkie who opposed his re-election whole-heartedly, the people from New England whom I have met did not want him back, nor did many of our neighbours just over the line, but the Canadians whose opinions I have heard were all glad he was back—with one exception. The latter feels that if he were an American he would be a Republican. Moreover, he resents Roosevelt's statement that his administration would never send a man into a European war. He says that this attitude towards Britain on the part of American leaders makes him think of a man who lived in his neighbourhood many years ago. This man and his wife lived in a comparatively isolated wooded spot. One day, a bear was sighted in close proximity to their dwelling. The man hid in the house while his wife got the gun and shot the bear. In relating what occurred the husband said, "Sal and I shot the bear." In my friend's view, Sal and Britannia are identical, while the brave raconteur coincides with Uncle Sam.

Mr. Wendell Willkie's campaign was a remarkable one. His meeting in Madison Square Garden in New York Saturday night was notable for the numbers and almost uncontrollable enthusiasm of the crowd, roaring: "We want Willkie!" Was it those three W's that made it easy to keep on yelling? But as has been said before, when repetition of speech does not strengthen, it weakens. It struck me that evening, that Willkie himself weakened what was in many respects a magnificent speech, by repetition. Not only did he repeat a telling word three times, e.g. Victory! Victory! Victory! but he repeated repeatedly, at least three or four times, using different telling words, it is true, but yet, to my ear, giving an impression of theatricality. However, it may have been that he was swayed a little by stage excitement and was not calculating the effect as much as it seemed to a detached listener. And if he keeps on in the same stride for a few years as he has been going for the past few weeks, the chances are that he may reach the portal of the White House yet. By then, if not already, he may realize the inutility of vain repetitions, as implied in Holy Scripture. By-the-way, it was noticeable how frequently, as voting day approached very near, speakers wound up by some reference to the Almighty. As is expected in the world chaos, with all the war of armed hosts, so in this political fight, "the Lord was the last resort," so an amused critic said.

Mr. Willkie's natural driving force and his experience in lobbying for his business interests no doubt helped greatly towards his measure of success, and, he assuredly gave the Rooseveltians a good many anxious moments.

Hate the Root of Murder.—

The Sermon on the Mount labels it so. A vengeful spirit towards England seems to turn the warm-hearted Irish people into cold-blooded spectators of U-boat murder, as they adhere to neutrality. Hate dries up the milk of human kindness and withers the fair blossom of humanitarianism. One of the greatest handicaps of Britain at present is that she is prevented from using Irish ports or sites for air-bases.

Whether consistent or not with the above statements, history gives the impression that Ireland's truest patriots have shown a loyalty permeated by deeper religious sentiment than can be credited to either Franco the Spaniard or Mussolini the Italian. These dictators make their religion subservient to their politics. Last week Herr Himmler, the head of the infamous Gestapo or German secret police was in Spain conferring with high officials there. Speaking of this meeting, the Ottawa Journal exclaims, What a spectacle! This is Catholic Spain! The Catholic Spain which Franco was to save by smashing the republic! A couple of years ago if any one suggested that the Spanish Republicans were fighting for democracy and freedom, he was assailed as an Atheist. Today what do we behold? Franco leading poor Spain behind Himmler, blasphemer of Christianity, and sworn enemy of both Catholicism and Protestantism.

The Rev. Father Raymond T. Feeley, S.J., of the University of San Francisco has written a pamphlet, published by the Paulist Press of New York. I condense his quotation from Himmler's writing. Which of us coming upon a Crucifix does not feel a sense of shame? The gods of our ancestors were different. How different is yon Pale Figure on the Cross, whose mien of suffering expresses only humility and self-abnegation. The corruption of our (German) blood by the intrusion of this philosophy must be ended.

Father Feeley proves conclusively that Nazi-ism is contrary to any form of Christianity. He says: Nazi-ism is waging a death struggle against both the Catholic and Protestant Churches. Another quotation given by him from a high Nazi organ says: How high Horst Wessel towers over that Jesus of Nazareth! How unattainably high all Horst Wessels stand above Jesus!

And now it is at the heels of such blasphemers that Franco and Mussolini are leading their followers. God save Ireland and her religious fame from such debasement!

De Valera, half-Spaniard, probably knows his Irish too well to attempt to sink them to such a level as Father Feeley has warned his readers against.

Miss Hazel Allen left for Montreal recently, having obtained a situation there.

The Sunshine Mission Band met on Sunday in the Church Hall with an attendance of 21. The response to the roll call was Psalm 23:1. The Scripture lesson was read by Bobby Ness, while Raeburn Orr led the prayer. Stories were read by the leaders present and arrangements were made for the annual meeting. Scrap-book, dime cards and donations of toys and second-hand clothing will be received at that time.

Mr. and Mrs. Nigel Bruce, Stanley and Jimmie, of Valleyfield were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Bruce.

AUBREY-RIVERFIELD W.I. THANKED FOR CONTRIBUTIONS

The Aubrey-Riverfield W.I. met on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. Edgar McKell, with about 30 members and friends present, who responded to the roll call with "Why I am proud to be a Canadian." Current events were given by the six convenors, and the question as to whether the work should be divided into six, or as formerly, into nine departments, was discussed. It was decided that six departments were quite satisfactory as previously several had overlapped. The secretary reported a shortage of funds, so it was decided to hold a "Hostess Tea." The committee will include the following ladies: Mesdames J. Gruer, F. G. Easton, W. G. Allen, A. A. Allen, A. Bennie and J. Angell, with Mrs. Flint and Mrs. C. W. Orr in charge of entertainment.

An interesting report of the semi-annual W.I. executive meeting at Franklin was given by the president, Mrs. Annie Gruer, while Mrs. D. Flint gave a very excellent and thought-provoking paper on "Remembrance Day," followed by two short poems by Mrs. S. Reddick. A word contest sponsored by Miss L. Rorison on "Women's Institutes" was then held, each contestant having five minutes in which to construct words from same. Mrs. A. Bennie was the winner with 49 words.

Nurse McKell, Supt. of Barrie Memorial Hospital, who was present, thanked the ladies on behalf of the hospital for their donations of jam and jellies, saying how much they were appreciated and enjoyed by all. The secretary reported the purchase and payment of a new mattress for one of our hospital beds. Twelve quilts were also made and sent to the Red Cross. Library books were distributed and suggestions made to facilitate the passage of these books from one member to another. The meeting closed with the National Anthem, after which refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. E. McKell, Mrs. Ewart and Mrs. Jas. E. Orr, and a social hour enjoyed.

Hallowe'en Party

On Friday evening, Nov. 1, a very successful Hallowe'en party was held by the Georgetown Bible Class at the home of Miss Jean Wilson. The Riverfield Young People were invited and there was a very good attendance from both societies. Nearly all came in costume and after much discussion on the part of the judges, the prizes were awarded to Mrs. Mervyn Forrester and Miss Kathleen Ness, whose costumes were considered the best. After the prizes were awarded, a few games were played, lunch was served and dancing enjoyed for the rest of the evening.

Friends and relatives of Mr. James Hadley will regret to hear of his illness. He is at present a patient in the Barrie Memorial Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Hunter of Montreal West visited over the week-end with relatives.

U.S. HAY CROP

The 1940 hay crop in the United States is estimated to reach 93 million tons, compared with 84½ million tons in 1939, and with the ten-year average (1929-38) of 79 million tons. The 1940 crop has been exceeded only three times in the past, 1916, 1922 and 1927.

St. John's Church Fowl Supper Proves Attractive

When the new Huntingdon High School was being built, St. John's Anglican Church accorded the school a great service when they placed the basement of the church at the disposal of the school for class room purposes. The high school had an opportunity to reciprocate to St. John's Church through providing it with the domestic science room facilities of the school for the holding of their annual fall supper. Wednesday evening saw seven large tables spread in this room providing covers for 100 at a sitting. The spacious, well ventilated and bright room left little further to be desired in the way of accommodation for such a supper. It was indeed nice that the ladies of St. John's Church saw to it that an extra special in the way of a fine supper was served. The little extra charge made for the supper was quite in order, and generally approved by the great number that enjoyed the supper. The tables were tastefully arranged and an abundance of delectable foods were served to all who came. As a result of the supper the gross receipts amounted to $125, which in turn will net the church something in excess of $90. Our school board might well place the domestic science room at the disposal of St. John's Church on many future occasions for such purposes in appreciation of the accomodation provided the scholars when the new school was under construction; and if such is done the ladies of St. John's Church can rest assured future attendance will be even greater at their suppers.

9 Drown as Tug Capsizes At Valleyfield

Five Manage to Reach Safety as Tug Sinks in Beauharnois Canal

Nine men were drowned and five others narrowly escaped the same fate at noon on Tuesday, when the Marine Industries Limited tug Aberdeen capsized and sank in the Beauharnois Canal, about four miles from Valleyfield.

The 55-ton tug, used in drawing steel wire cable down the canal, was backing toward the control gates of the lock when the current swung it against one of the dam's piers and it capsized. It sank almost immediately, before most of the crew, many of whom were on deck at the time, had a chance to jump clear.

The victims are:

Capt. Albert Mondor, 44, of Lanoraie, Que.

Fernand Fortier, 23, Valleyfield.

Oscar Vinet, 25, Valleyfield.

Leo Lemoine, 27, St. Hyacinthe.

Anatole Sigman, 48, Sorel.

Gerard Cournoyer, 20, Sorel.

Marc Edouard Pontbriand, 17 St. Joseph de Sorel.

Roland Sylvestre, 34, St. Barthelemi, Berthier County.

Jerome Laperriere, 29, Pierreville, Que.

Those rescued were:

George Wrightman, 48-year-old day superintendent of the job, of St. Catharines, Ont.

Capt. Philemon Larose, 43, of Pierreville.

Patrick Joly, 45-year-old engineer of the tug, of Sorel.

Albert Peloquin, 38, second engineer, of St. Joseph de Sorel.

Napoleon Rajotte, 22, a deckhand, of Ste. Anne de Sorel.

Of the men whose lives were lost only Captain Mondor and Fortier were married. Fortier was well known here as a wrestler.

Capt. Philemon Larose, master of the tug, stated on Tuesday, he could not account for the accident.

"Anything can happen in a 20 to 25-mile an hour current," he said.

The tug was about 100 feet from the shore and a lesser distance from the control gates of the lock when the catastrophe occurred, according to Louis De-Rome, general superintendent of the Marine Industries Ltd. plant at Valleyfield.

When the 79-foot craft went down, the five men who succeeded in getting clear of the tug floundered frantically around in the icy water, but managed to keep afloat until other workmen and employees of the Beaunarnois Light, Heat and Power plant succeeded in hoisting them out of the canal.

Search parties were organized immediately as word of the tragedy reached company officials. A half dozen boat crews probed the bottom of the canal with grappling hooks all afternoon and evening in a vain effort to locate the bodies of the victims. Efforts were made this morning to have a professional diver aid in the search.

Divers approached last evening refused to descend into the rapid waters of the canal because of the risk of fouling life-lines in the lock-works.

E. De G. Power, vice-president of Marine Industries, Limited, arrived from Montreal shortly after the accident. His statement on the disaster said: "The tug Aberdeen foundered in the control works of the Beauharnois Canal with the loss of nine lives. Five other men aboard the boat were saved. She struck a concrete abutment above the Valleyfield locks in a heavy wind."

Depth of the canal at the point where the tug sank is about 25 feet, it was learned.

Dr. O. E. Caza, coroner of this district, has been notified of the tragedy and he stated an inquest will be held as soon as the bodies are recovered.

None of the bodies had been recovered at a late hour on Tuesday, but divers were on the scene ready to start at dayoreak this morning. Gates of the dam have been closed to aid in today's search for the nine bodies.

Some of those rescued, as well as some of the missing men, were carired through the water gates as they struggled to save themselves.

EYEWITNESSES TELL STORY

"We had just finished dinner and most of us were on deck when the accident happened," Second Engineer Peloquin told reporters on Tuesday as he and others rescued sat in their underwear in a room in the Market Hotel.

Peloquin said he was below deck when the boat started to tip and waited there until water reached his hips. He and Capt. Larose clung to a fender, the latter encouraging Peloquin as they were carried through the gate. They were rescued by means of a rope thrown from a barge below the dam.

Rajotte, who has been called to report for military training on November 22, could not describe what happened to him. As the tug tilted he attempted to run toward the part still out of water. Later he saved himself by clinging to a floating derrick.

Another member of the crew, Luc Plante, 39, of St. Joseph de Sorel, was not aboard when the tug capsized. Away on a week-end holiday, Plante told of arriving too late to board the boat.

The Late F. X. Dorais

Mr. F. X. Dorais of Athelstan died at the Valleyfield Hospital early Monday morning where he had been a patient for several months since suffering a paralytic stroke at the home of his sister, Mrs. F. Roy, with whom he made his home for sometime. The deceased has been a lifelong resident of the community and was highly respected by all who knew him. His wife predeceased him several years ago. He is survived by two sisters and two brothers. The funeral service was held Wednesday morning in St. Joseph's R.C. Church and interment made in the Huntingdon Cemetery.

Dundee

Mr. and Mrs. Basil Hewson and daughter, Ola, motored to Dunwegan, Ont., and spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hewson and family. Mr. J. J. Fraser accompanied them as far as Lancaster, Ont., where he spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Athol MacDougall. He also visited his sister, Mrs. Margaret MacDougall, in Lancaster village.

Mr. James Colquhoun is at present on the sick list. He was taken ill on Thursday while visiting relatives at Brasher, N.Y., in company with Mrs. Colquhoun and Mr. Archie Colquhoun. On the way home they called at Dr. Blackett's office, who diagnosed the case as grippe. On Saturday and Sunday Dr. Blackett made calls at the home and found the patient to be suffering from a slight attack of pneumonia. At present he is reported to be somewhat improved. Nurse Mrs. Jas. Stewart is in attendance. Mr. Colquhoun's many friends and neighbors wish him a speedy recovery.

Mr. Archie Colquhoun motored to Summerstown, Ont., on Saturday where he attended the wedding of Mr. Allan MacGibbon of Summerstown and Miss Elizabeth Haining of Scotland, which took place at Summerstown Church.

The card party and dance held in the community hall on Friday night drew a larger crowd than usual. Cards were played at 16 tables. The prize winners were: Ladies', Mrs. N. D. McPhee; gents, Mr. Reginald McGibbon. All report an enjoyable time. Music was furnished by the Elliotts and Messrs. Tom and Jack MacFarlane, also Mrs. Stirrat Cameron.

The Fort Covington Men's Dart Club started playing the season's games on Tuesday evening in the fireman's hall, Fort Covington. Ten teams were on hand for the opener. Dundee is represented on the schedule this year by only two teams instead of three as last year. Several of the boys have not as yet received passports, therefore are unable to participate. The Dundee teams are known as Dundee Tigers and Dundee.

All night service has been discontinued at the Dundee port of entry for the winter season.

Havelock

Mr. and Mrs. Prime and two children of St. Lambert were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. Ellerton.

Mrs. E. Ellerton and son Bruce visited friends in Huntingdon on Saturday.

Miss Marion Hall of Huntingdon, spent a couple of days at her home here.

Quite a number from here attended the anniversary service at Knox Church on Sunday evening.

One of Covey Hill's oldest residents, Mrs. S. McDermid, made a beautiful evergreen wreath and placed it on the Soldier's Monument at Havelock on Monday.

Obituary

The late Mrs. David Wilson

Death has claimed another old and esteemed person, Mrs. David Wilson, who passed peacefully away Tuesday, having suffered a severe stroke on Sunday. Mrs. Wilson had been in poor health for some time, having fallen over two years ago and caused injuries from which she never recovered.

Mrs. Wilson was a good christian woman, and took a very active part in all church work, and was beloved by all who knew her. She is survived by her three sons, James, John of Watertown, N.J., and Arnold of Sorel. Another son, Robert, died in his early youth. Her husband, David Wilson, died six years ago. The funeral will be held from Russelltown Church on Thursday.

Glenelm

Mrs. Mabel Carrigan, Grace and Michael, were callers of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Carrigan Sunday evening.

Mrs. Russell Carrigan and little son, Harold, spent Tuesday the guest of Mrs. Mabel Carrigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Forget of Athelstan were guests of Mrs. John Heim recently.

Mrs. W. F. McDonald and Mrs. Mary White were Saturday guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Seward.

Miss Wilma Simpson, Huntingdon, spent the week-end with her friend Miss Lydia Lewin.

Mr. W. S. McKinnon spent the week-end at the homes of Mr. W. J. Seward and Mrs. W. H. Crawford.

Mr. Raymond Wilson, Ottawa, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Wilson.

STEALING CARS AT ORMSTOWN ON THE INCREASE

Two youths decided to go for a joy ride on Sunday evening, November 3rd. As neither of them had a car they drove off in the first one that they came to. It was a '29 Ford and owned by Mr. Robert Ellis. Luck seemed to go against the lads as they had an accident resulting in considerable damage being done to the car. Upon returning to Ormstown they left it in Mr. R. E. Walsh's sawmill yard.

Mr. Ellis reported the matter to the local authorities, who in turn turned it over to the Provincial Police. The two young men were soon rounded up and taken for another type of ride to Valleyfield.

No one for a moment believes that the lads had any notion of stealing the car, however, of late the public's patience has been tried to the limit with tricks such as this one. Furthermore, it is time that some sort of check up be made with the hope that those responsible will take heed lest it be too late.

Huntingdon

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Hartwell of Osnabruck, Ont., were guests a few days last week of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Pringle. They also visited with Mrs. Hartwell's mother, Mrs. T. S. Baird, at Ormstown.

Huntingdon High School

The Committee of the Boys' Band met on Tuesday evening to discuss plans and other business of this organization.

—o—

The Huntingdon High School students entertained more than 90 boys and girls at supper on Saturday evening in the Domestic Science Room. Macdonald College and Lacolle students who played football and basketball that afternoon partook of the bountiful supper which was served. Dancing was later enjoyed by the local and visiting students. On Monday evening the local students entertained some 75 students from St. Lambert and Huntingdon at a luncheon which was also served in the Domestic Science Room.

SANATORIUM TREATMENT IS INADEQUATE IN THE PROVINCE

At the last meeting of the Societe Medicale de Valleyfield which was held at the Huntingdon Chateau on Thursday evening, it was moved by Dr. T. J. Quinlin, Ormstown, seconded by Dr. B. Bibaud, Valleyfield, and unanimously adopted that:

"WHEREAS, at the present time there is a campaign against Tuberculosis being conducted throughout the Province of Quebec,

"AND WHEREAS the provision for the Sanatorium treatment of patients is inadequate in the Province and must be remedied by the building of further institutions for such treatment,

"BE IT RESOLVED: That this Society recommends to the Minister of Health that this area would be a suitable locality for the erection of a Sanatorium,

"And would urge him to consider this in any plans for the building of such institutions in the future,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Minister of Health, members of Parliament for this district and the local papers."

HEAR ADDRESS ON COMMON SILAGE PROBLEMS

Professor L. C. Raymond of the Department of Agronomy at Macdonald College, was in charge of the lecture period at the Ormstown Study Club at its weekly meeting of November 6. Speaking to a group of more than fifty men, Prof. Raymond on the subject of "Common Silage Problems," he briefly dealt with corn as a silage crop, and the various difficulties which the farm encounters.

Dealing with the experiments being conducted by making silage out of some of the farmer's common legumes Prof. Raymond continued, "You must remember that the making of silage is an attempt to preserve green crops without the large loss in their original feeding value which hay-making entails. The plant leaf upon being cut will continue to live as long as air is present in the mass. During all this time sugars are being used by the plant tissues and so when the air is exhausted this loss of sugar ceases."

Prof. Raymond further pointed out that, when the air supply is limited some of the sugars are developed into lactic acid. The development of this acid prevents the formation of other substances which would make silage unacceptable animal food. Proteins which would otherwise be destroyed by chemical change, remain unchanged once the normal acidity of the silage has been reached. Consequently the sooner after ensiling the acidity develops, the smaller the protein loss.

At the conclusion of his talk Mr. Raymond willingly answered many questions which further indicated the enthusiasm which he had aroused amongst his hearers.

The executive of the Study Club is extremely pleased with the results of their efforts, and sincerely trust that the enthusiasm which has been so noticeable up to the present amongst its members will continue throughout the entire course.

Glenelm

Mr. Ted King, who has been employed at the Kensington Creamery for the past four years, left Thursday for Valleyfield where he has obtained a new position. Mr. Shearer of Athelstan replaces Mr. King.

Silent the voice we long to hear,
Far, too far from sight or speech,
But not too far for our thoughts to reach."

Ever remembered by her husband and family.

IS THAT CHAP IN THE MIRROR REALLY YOU?

A mirror can't lie. If your eyes are muddy in the whites and dull in the irises and your tongue's coated as well, then you're not the man you used to be.

But there are other symptoms. Food doesn't interest you. Little things get on your nerves. You fall asleep when you should be awake. You try to get out of visiting friends or going to the movies. Worse, you are too tired for your job. You're not lazy—you just can't get going.

What's the cause? Your bloodstream isn't clear. There are toxins in it. Poisonous waste is in your system. Get rid of it. Kruschen is the thing for that.

There are several mineral salts in Kruschen, balanced in exact proportions to assist the organs of evacuation to get rid of waste matter every day. Kruschen is more than a laxative. It is a diuretic as well—helps to flush the kidneys and at the same time keep the colon moist, so that action is easy and gentle. A pinch of Kruschen every morning is all you need.

Kruschen costs only 25c, 45c or 75c, at all druggists. Good health for less than a cent a day.

For Your Own Sake, Try PICOBAC

If you're looking for the greatest possible satisfaction at the lowest possible cost (and who isn't?), then buy Picobac — and smoke it.

That's sound advice because it's a simple fact that Canadians buy more Picobac than any other brand. They buy it most because they like it best. So the chances are that you, too, will find it just what you're looking for — a mild, cool, sweet smoke that exactly suits both your taste and your pocket.

"It DOES taste good in a pipe!"

District News Notes --

Covey Hill

Remembrance Sunday was observed here by appropriate church services, with addresses and hymns of a timely character. Referring to the American Civil War, Mr. J. G. Troyer quoted Jefferson's statement made about 100 years before the war. "When I remember that God is just, my soul trembles." The war found Lincoln saying: "The judgments of the Lord are righteous altogether." The speaker commented on present-day interest in youth and the prominence given to young people's interests, adding that the present war, especially air warfare, demanded the service of youth.

A serious accident, which fell short of being a tragedy only, it seemed, by a miracle, occurred on Sunday evening a few acres east of Covey Hill Corners. Mr. Leonard Hall, while driving a small truck, ran into a buggy ahead of him, driven by Mr. Paul Laroche, who had with him Mrs. Laroche and the latter's mother, Mrs. Robidoux. The two vehicles, truck and buggy, were moving west and were both badly damaged. Mr. Laroche's buggy carried a light.

A number of our young people attended the rally of the P.Y.P.S. at Hemmingford on Tuesday evening.

Rifleman James Beattie spent Armistice Day visiting relatives on the Hill.

Howard Sutton, his friend Mr. Alexander, and Norman Richard of the Victoria Rifles, also Howard Maxwell of the Black Watch, have been Armistice week-end guests at Mr. Roderick Sutton's. Mr. and Mrs. Sutton entertained at a party for their visitors and other young people on Monday evening.

Rifleman Leo Vaillancourt spent a recent week-end at his parents' home.

Mrs. Hart and baby Mildred were in Montreal for several days last week.

Once upon a time there lived on Covey Hill a boy who had some good qualities not invariably found even in country boys. He told the truth and laughed at a joke even when the truth or the joke was against himself. He was kind and conscientious and energetic enough to get up out of bed of his own accord to feed any animal which he had forgotten. And when he went with the old red cow on the first long lap of her sad last journey, he took a few apples to give her a lunch on the way. And when he saw Jim hitched to a wagon on a city street he was pretty sure that a look of recognition passed over Jim's intelligent countenance, despite years of separation.

Trooper Herbert Curran of the Tank Corps of the Three Rivers Regiment is stationed at Camp Borden, 55 miles northwest of Toronto. He has already driven one of the tanks sent us by Uncle Sam. His duties call for a knowledge of telegraphy, with the ability to send messages while driving his tank.

Matrimonial.—

The marriage of Miss Ruth Ellen Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Wright of St. Lambert, to Mr. Frank Gough, third son of the late Mr. and Mrs. H. B. B. Gough of Montreal, took place quietly in the Church of St. Barnabas, St. Lambert, on Saturday, October 26th.

This happy event is of particular interest to Covey Hill readers among whom the groom has had many warm friends since spending several years here as a boy, and having made holiday visits since. Mr. Gough, who has attained success in Montreal in the commercial line is a native of Jamaica, and is connected, we understand, with the Irish General Gough, an officer prominent in the British army during the first World War. Mr. Gough and his bride have the best wishes of their friends here.

Humanitarianism of President Roosevelt Strong Factor in His Victory at the Polls—Posterity Will Chronicle Roosevelt Among the Greats

By DONALD C. MACDONALD

IT seems that everybody is against Franklin Delano Roosevelt except the electorate. Certainly the vast majority of business men were against him—Wall Street echoed with doleful utterances of the sad fate for the good old United States should that man go back to the White House again; more that 95 per cent of the daily papers were against him; likewise, 65 per cent of the rural weeklies supported Willkie. He had to hurdle the third term tradition, and face the people after eight years of depression, a world phenomenon for which he was not responsible, but for which, presumably, he'd have to answer at the polls.

"Nobody wants him but the people." That wasn't said about Roosevelt, but it might have been. Actually those words were uttered about Abraham Lincoln when he was sent to the White House in 1860. Then, as now, the United States was facing one of the most crucial periods of her history, and then, as now, they came out of the homes, the factories, off the farms to cast their votes for the man who embodied the hopes, the aspirations and the grim courage of a democratic people.

Triumph of One Man

In 1940 they voted for a man rather than a party. The issues of the campaign were confused. Isolationists and interventionists were scrambled in the Republican campaign. Foreign policy was mangled on all platforms. The people were assured of peace and threatened with war by both sides. They were warned of threatening depression and dictatorship. Hiram Johnson, California's inveterate isolationist, and William Allen White, chairman of the committee working for greater aid to Britain, both stumped for the same candidate. Bennett Champ Clark and Claude Pepper, who had clashed many a time within the last few months in senate debates, were found electioneering for the same candidate.

Indeed, the issues, the men, the motives—all were confused.

Amid this confusion the people turned to the one thing they knew, the one thing which had grown in their confidence throughout the last eight years, the one thing they trusted — the humanitarianism of Roosevelt, the man. They voted for a man rather than a party, a man whose moves within the past eight years have been, with the possible exception of Winston Churchill, proven most often to be in the general direction of truth and right. They voted for a man who is alive to this changing world and who is determined that democracy can be remoulded to fit the emergencies of this careening era; the man who symbolized the hatred of a free and democratic people for dictatorship, autocracy and intolerance.

Vindicating Democracy

But there were two other features of the American election which to me were an inspiration because they vindicated the adaptability of democracy. The first is the man, Wendell Willkie. Roosevelt was great in victory, but Wendell Willkie was even greater in defeat. He put up a fight which even the most partisan of the Democrats respected, and indeed, feared. As long as democracy is capable of producing men of such convictions and ideals it is giving the lie to the Nazi claim that it is decadent. In fact, when you have a campaign in which there are two buttons, one on which is written "Vote for Willkie," and on the other, "Vote for Roosevelt"—that is democracy. It isn't, as we have seen across the Atlantic on election day, a case of putting up one man, and when the question is put "Do you vote for Hitler?", then the whole nation must say "Ja," or face the consequences.

The second feature is that bitter though the campaign was — and there have been none more bitter for many a year—once the verdict of the people became evident, leaders of every political stripe, Republican and Democrat alike, called upon the people to forget their difference and work for what they all cherish. The popular feeling was expressed as "Let's get on with the job of helping our friends and rearming ourselves." With resolution and determination the nation has settled down to that job.

Throughout the world the results of this election have been acclaimed in a manner never before equalled. The British and Commonwealth press expressed deep satisfaction. China, fighting for her life against a foe that may well crumble of its own weakness if time is given, rejoiced even more. In France, publicly there was a discreet indifference, privately, renewed faith. In Berlin and Rome there was glum silence. For it meant that in America the forces of isolation and appeasement were routed once and for all. The democracies cannot lose now. They have merged into a single destiny for all mankind as it strives toward victory and a happier world. "There comes a tide . . . ," Shakespeare said about the affairs of men four hundred years ago, and in Churchill's words that echo with an equal grandeur, "Let it roll. Let it roll on, full flood, inexorable, irrestible, to broader lands and better days."

Restoring Great American Dream

But quite apart from the international significance of the victory of Roosevelt, it has another vital connection with that rapid evolution of democracy in the United States during the last eight years, so that it can meet the needs of the modern world. By 1929 conditions in the United States had come dangerously near to a denial of what James Truslow Adams has termed the "great American dream"—a dream, the essence of which is the recognition of the worth of the individual, the common man. Capitalistic enterprise, with all its resourcefulness and initiative had made the United States what it was, but it had also created a privileged position for men of wealth, so that a few behind the scenes too often guided the destiny of the nation. When workers went on strike because they did not feel that they were receiving their just dues, the reply of the owner was too often that of a divine-appointed. For example, said one: "The rights and interests of the laboring man will be protected and cared for, not by the labor agitators, but by the Christian men to whom God in His infinite wisdom has given the control of the property interest in this country, and upon the successful management of which so much depends." To such men, the great American dream was just so much drivel. In their own way they regarded the individual as just a cog in their machine, as Hitler regards the individual as a cog in his machine.

The New Deal, notwithstanding all its mistakes, changed that. The fact is that within eight years Roosevelt has achieved a social revolution that had to come sooner or later in the United States. He brought it sooner—and peacefully. If it had been left till later—it may not have been achieved by peaceful means. Of course, in every social revolution, somebody is nicked, and it usually is those who have the wealth—thus the opposition of the wealthier and business classes to Roosevelt. But F.D.R. has restored the great American dream, has restored the intrinsic worth of the common man by placing the power of the state on the side of the majority of the people, thus balancing the power of those who through position or wealth had an undue influence upon the destiny of the nation.

But in spite of the embittered attitude of many Americans toward Roosevelt today, in my opinion, the day will come when the great-grandchildren of those same antagonists will look upon Roosevelt as they do upon Washington, Jefferson or Lincoln. They won't care two hoots for the fact that great-grandfather had his pocketbook nicked in the social revolution that Roosevelt wrought. They will have forgotten all the inevitable animosities that are aroused with such great changes; they will remember only the ideals of the man. And those ideals, alike with Lincoln's, will be seen as restoring the great American dream, of making the great American Republic more truly a government "for the people, by the people, of the people."

A Democrat Turned Republican

But where does Wendell Willkie fit into all this? In this way, Wendell Willkie supported Roosevelt when he was elected in 1932. He was still supporting him in 1936 when the New Deal was returned at the polls. In other words, for over four years after its inception, Wendell Willkie accepted the social revolution brought about by the New Deal. He switched over to the Republican party in 1938, because he thought that the New Deal was going wrong.

At Philadelphia last June, the powers- that-be in the Republican party, the Old Guard which would, if it could, turn the hands of the clock back, were going to nominate a mouth-piece—a Taft, or a Dewey, or a Vandenberg. And what happened? A political miracle took place. Wendell Willkie who, a few short weeks before, had been a political nonentity, was catapulted into the position. And by whom? By the people, the American people, the vast majority of whom accept the social revolution represented in the New Deal, but some of whom think, with Willkie, that the New Deal has gone wrong of recent years.

Willkie was beaten at the polls, not because he was not a great man, but because the party behind him wasn't great enough. Many of its outstanding leaders did not see eye-to-eye with Willkie; their disappointment at his nomination in Philadelphia was forgotten only because they disagreed with him less than they did with Roosevelt. In the Republican party were isolationists, blind as the ostrich, which, to avoid facing the stormy world around it, sticks its head in the sand; reactionaries who mouth their support of democracy, but who sigh for the day when the few, not the many, controlled the destiny of the state, with the first consideration being the interests of the few, not those of the many.

It is rumored that Wendell Willkie is going to announce his intention of keeping the struggle alive till 1944, then take up the battle once again. If he can imbue his party with his ideals, he may some day yet be President of the United States.

P.Y.P.S.—

The regular monthly meeting of the Presbyterian Young People's Society was held at the home of Herman Roy on Thursday night. At the business meeting it was decided to have the McGill Travelling Library again this year, Mrs. Roy to be the custodian. As some of the young men are eligible for compulsory training shortly, plans for the proposed concert in aid of Red Cross are being dropped for the present. For educational part of programme a geography quiz was used. The usual games were played, followed with a lunch.

Mr. Dalton Ross of Magog was the week-end guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ross. Miss Carol Ross of Montreal, also spent the week-end at home.

Miss Marjorie Ross of Macdonald College, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ross.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Hampson and Miss Betty Hampson, Mr. D. F. Grant, Miss Arline and Master Donald Grant motored to Shawville on Friday, where they visited friends over the week-end.

Post Office Urges Care In Wrapping

Parcels Addressed to Troops Overseas Sometimes Fail to Arrive

Much disappointment has been caused recently to Canadians serving overseas by the arrival of parcels of oranges, grapes and apples, with the fruit decayed, and of packages of jam with the glass jars broken, it is reported by the Canadian Postal Corps.

The Post Office Department points out that not only the contents of the parcels containing jam, but other mail is often damaged by the sticky substance, and that lack of care in preparing such parcels for mailing is the cause of much anxiety when they finally reach their destinations. The postal corps was able in some cases, however, to salvage and forward to the addressee some of the contents, if all was not ruined.

Though parcel post, the Department points out, is not the proper medium for the shipment of fruit or vegetables overseas, those who use this service should never include such commodities in a parcel with other articles. The only proper way to mail fruit or vegetables is to wrap each item separately in paper, and pack the shipment in a strong tin box. If each article is dipped in wax before wrapping in paper, it has a better chance to reach its destination. The tin box should be wrapped in thick paper, with an additional wrapping of linen, calico or canvas, well sewn on.

Caution is issued against mailing jams and jellies in glass bottles for these often break and cause damage to other mail and may injure those handling the mail.

Such substances as butter should be put up for mailing in sealed tins enclosed in strong cardboard containers, and it is recommended that absorbent material be used to wrap the tin.

Parcels should be wrapped in several layers of thick paper and securely tied with strong twine. A slip containing the address and also the sender's return address should be inserted with the contents as a safeguard.

Customs declarations should accompany each parcel which should be correctly addressed and prepaid, and bear the return address of the sender.

Mail to those on military service outside Canada should be addressed as follows:

Regimental number,
Rank and name,
Unit, i.e., company, squadron, battery, holding unit, etc.
Full name of regiment or service,
C.A.S.F.
Base Post Office,
Canada.

It is emphasized that parcels sent to members of the forces still in Canada should not be addressed care of the Base Post Office, but to the unit and camp in this country.

Farm Notes

Mr. Edwin Cadreact, Milton, Vt., recently purchased 27 head of purebred Holstein-Friesian cattle from breeders in Quebec. Mr. Walter H. Arthur, Athelstan, Que., supplied 13; W. C. Foster, Huntingdon, three; D. A. Elder, Glenelm, six; John McCaffrey, one; P. A. Finlayson, Ormstown, two; Max J. Arthur, Huntingdon, two.

Two bull calves were shipped from Glenness Farms recently, sons of Brampton Radiant Lord. One went to Mrs. Lillian Smith, Allan, Saskatchewan, and the other to Mrs. Richard Beebee, Constable, N.Y.

To counter balance this, however, two handsome two-year-old Jersey heifers were received from R. G. Frank, Melbourne, Que. They are daughters of Dreaming Flyer. Dreaming Flyer's sister, Edgley's Dreaming Countess, a few years ago was grand champion at the National Dairy Show, U.S.A., after sweeping everything before her in Canada.

Jerseys have been on the farm of Mr. R. G. Frank since 1880, and in one of the two heifers mentioned there is still some of the old St. Lambert blood brought to Canada in 1868 by the late Sheldon S. Stephens, brother of the late George Washington Stephens, who represented Huntingdon County in the Quebec Legislature about 45 years ago. Some of the St. Lamberts were bought from Queen Victoria's stables in Windsor. The St. Lambert strain for over 30 years was famous throughout America and is still famed among those familiar with Jersey history.

Seignorial Dues ....

APPEARING in last week's issue of the Gleaner was an editorial dealing with the disappearance of seigniorial dues. This editorial was based on a Canadian Press news despatch which colorfully proclaimed that these dues which had been a system existent in Quebec for the past 300 years were now to disappear. The story was carried in many newspapers and, naturally, many editorials appeared in the daily press concerning this important change. The Gleaner, too, ran an editorial because these dues are of interest to a number of our readers.

When a resident of this district heard the news over the radio he stated he was sure that it was not correct and that it was creating a false impression. Of late he has collected the sum of $1,500 in seigniorial dues and has had no official word that they are to be done away with. Consequently he still believes the Canadian Press despatch to be erroneous and that, of course, is possible.

All along the seigniorial dues have been collected by the agent of the seigniory, who happened to be Mr. Roger McGowan for the seigniory of Beauharnois. These dues were forwarded to the owners of the seigniories. Very few people, if any, happen to know just who are the owners of the seigniories, but it is believed a finance company in Montreal is in charge of collecting these dues for the owners. What has taken place now is that the Provincial government has borrowed the sum of $2,000,000 to purchase outright the rights of the seigniors. In future, commencing in 1941 to be exact, these rents will be collected by the secretary-treasurers of the municipalities where old seigniory land is located. The individual aforementioned who has of late collected the sum of $1,500 states that this money will then be handed over to the county councils who will in turn forward it to the "Syndicate National du Rachat des Rentes Seigneuriales," the department apparently appointed recently by the Provincial government to handle the dues collected.

Obituary

The Late John E. Doria

John E. Doria, a highly respected resident of the town of Trout River, passed away Thursday noon at his home there. Mr. Doria had been seriously ill for the past three months with heart trouble and complications. He was born in Elgin, P.Q., and was in his 59th year. He moved to Trout River when a young man and had always resided in that vicinity.

He was in the U.S. service and worked as janitor in the U.S. customs building at Trout River for the past eight years. Fourteen years ago he married Agnes Coughlin, a former Malone girl, and a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Coughlin. Only two years ago while on a trip down-state Mrs. Doria was instantly killed in an automobile accident. Since that time Mr. Doria had been in impaired health and under a doctor's care.

He is survived by four sisters, Mrs. Hattie Whitbeck, Clarksville, N.Y.; Mrs. Ed. Jury, Mrs. Amy Doria, and Miss Pearl Doria, all of Springfield, Mass., and two brothers, Wallace Doria, of Chateaugay, and James Doria, Binghamton, N.Y.

The funeral was held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Union Church in Constable, the Rev. Edward George officiating. Pall-bearers included customs and immigration officers from the Trout River Customs House. Burial was in the family plot in Constable Cemetery.
