Lockdown at Massey-Vanier

By Matthew McCully

Students and staff from both the English and French sides of Massey-Vanier Regional High School were put under lockdown yesterday afternoon as a precautionary measure due to information received by the school.

No injuries were reported.

According to a Sûreté du Québec (SQ) spokesperson police arrived on the campus yesterday around 1:30 p.m. and set up a perimeter around the school.

By 3:30 p.m. the SQ, still unable to identify the nature of the lockdown, confirmed that no suspects had been apprehended and no one was injured.

By 4 p.m. students were gradually being evacuated by the school while the SQ remained on site to continue its investigation.

The Eastern Townships School Board sent out a message to reassure parents during the incident.

"The Sûreté du Québec police are on site and have the situation under control. For this reason, we ask that you do not go to the school so that the authorities can complete their investigation. We are working in collaboration with the authorities and will inform you when the lockdown is lifted," the message read, attributed to ETSB Director general Michel Soucy.

By press time no further information was available about the reason for the lockdown.

Lion clientele recommended for testing

Stanbridge East Sports Association

A little town with a big community (and heart!)

The Stanbridge East Sports Association (SESA) has been a staple in the community for decades, bringing countless activities and fundraisers to residents past and present.

Though the organization has been around for many years, it has been incorporated by patent since 1984. It is a non-profit organization made up of volunteers, without whom, SESA would not be the gem it is today. It is what makes this community easy to live in and hard to leave!

SESA's mission is to improve the quality of life and social integration of the community by offering places and occasions of gathering for all residents of Stanbridge East and surrounding areas. To also break isolation.

Another objective is to operate and manage a community service of leisure and social action for children, teenagers, young adults, families and seniors.

Though COVID-19 has put a pause on a number of our activities, we refuse to let it stop our goal of bringing our community together!

Christmas 2020 will look a little different, for example. Our annual Santa parade must be one of the only parades to have more people in it than watching, and it is usually followed by a visit from Santa, during which he gives a surprise to children of Stanbridge. Since that model doesn't work this year, we will be having a "drop off Christmas" instead.

How, you may ask? With a little help from our Stanbridge East fire department, of course! They have volunteered to escort Santa on his delivery, once again proving that this little town has big hearts and a sense of community!

Other great news for the residents of Stanbridge East:

Generously funded by a grant through New Horizons for seniors, SESA is presently able to offer different types of activities, workshops, tools to help our communities' seniors cope with isolation in these ever changing times. We are offering Tablets to borrow on a weekly term, free of charge. No WIFI? No problem! Upon reservation, you can use the WIFI at the community centre, with all COVID-19 precautions taken. Need to freshen up your computer skills? Kayla Colosimo will offer one-on-one tablet courses. We are also happy to announce we will be teaming up with near by schools to offer intergenerational pen pals. Interested? You may sign up by calling 450-248-7998 or emailing kaylacolosimo.sesa@gmail.com. Are you a family member of a senior you are worried about how they are coping and would like to surprise them by having a child send them a letter? You can send us their mailing info, we will set them up with a student.

We would like to hear your suggestions, needs and ideas to better help our residents get through and cope during this time. Yoga? Social distancing walks? Self-help workshops? Learn a new skill? We're open to all new ideas.

The community centre will continue to be open during this hard time, with all precautions being taken and followed. For more information on any of our activities or programs, we invite you to like us on Facebook (Loisirs de Stanbridge East Sports Association), send us an email at stanbridgeeastsports@gmail.com or call us: 450-248-7998

Organizations that apply can receive a $2 grant for every provincial income tax return filed by their volunteers. They can also receive a computer as part of a donation program.

Organizations and volunteers needed to complete income tax returns

Record Staff

The Income Tax Assistance – Volunteer Program is looking for volunteers and community organizations ready to offer free assistance to those who need it during the income tax season.

Run jointly by the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) and Revenu Quebec since 1988, the Income Tax Assistance – Volunteer Program is available to Quebec residents who need help completing their income tax returns themselves, have a simple tax situation and cannot afford the services of a professional.

Each year, thousands of volunteers help eligible individuals claim the benefits and tax credits to which they are entitled. Their participation is especially important given the current pandemic. The situation caused by COVID-19 could result in more people being eligible for the program, making the participation of volunteers and community organizations all the more crucial.

Virtual clinics

To continue helping people in their community while respecting public health guidelines, participating organizations will once again be able to hold virtual tax return preparation sessions by video conference or telephone, or by using an envelope system adapted to comply with public health recommendations.

Virtual clinics are a particularly good option for people who do not have access to in-person services near their homes, either for reasons related to the pandemic or because of other physical limitations.

Grant and computer donation program

Organizations that apply can receive a $2 grant for every provincial income tax return filed by their volunteers. They can also receive a computer as part of a donation program.

Online training will be provided to all volunteers. They will also have free use of tax preparation software as well as dedicated lines to reach CRA and Revenu Quebec agents available to answer their questions. In addition, administrative regulations have been eased, allowing volunteers to assist individuals while limiting personal contact.

Success despite the pandemic

Despite the upheaval caused by the pandemic, over 144,000 people used the services of the Income Tax Assistance – Volunteer Program last year. Thanks to the program, they were able to claim the benefits and tax credits to which they were entitled. Over 550 organizations and 3 155 volunteers participated in the program last year. A total of over 300 000 income tax returns were completed and filed with the CRA and Revenu Quebec.

Defense lawyers work overtime to tackle trial delays

By Michael Boriero - Local Journalism Initiative Reporter

Criminal cases in Quebec are normally given a trial date within a month or two of an initial arrest, but the justice system is experiencing a significant delay, after the province shut down for several months due to the pandemic.

Trials originally fixed between April and September are being pushed back to 2021, according to Julie Beauchemin, a criminal defense lawyer and partner at Beauchemin Fleury Pharand Law Firm in Lac-Mégantic.

One of her clients, who is currently detained, had their trial moved to next May. They are in a very precarious situation, the lawyer explained, but they don't fall under the Jordan decision, which states a trial can be set aside due to unreasonable delay.

"I think those delays will enter into the category of exceptional circumstances and therefore they are not calculated in the total delay," said Beauchemin.

With the Jordan decision, if a legal proceeding takes more than 18 months in provincial court and 30 months in superior court, it can be thrown out. But this is not the case during a pandemic. Although, Beauchemin predicts some lawyers will begin to file Jordan motions in 2021.

"Right now, in my part, I did not put in any motions regarding [the Jordan decision], but I cannot tell you that all the lawyers are going to just stay back and do nothing," Beauchemin said.

While it has been difficult to juggle a flood of postponed cases from last spring, the Eastern Townships-based lawyer said the hardest part has been defending clients using video conference. There are a lot of emotions in criminal law, Beauchemin continued.

"In terms of credibility, it's very difficult for us to show the character of the person," she said. "It is very difficult to connect with the judge and sometimes cameras are not close enough, so we don't see the judges faces and I think it's very hard to tell their opinion."

Charles Shearson, a partner at Shearson Perron Law Firm in Sherbrooke, said it took some time for lawyers to warm up to the idea of moving a trial to video. But as COVID-19 cases mounted, they eventually decided it was the best decision given the situation.

People can still ask to have an in-person hearing or trial, he continued, some cases demand it, but lawyers need to ask permission first and provide a justifiable reason for breaking pandemic protocols. However, he said, video conferences have been a relatively positive solution.

"Apart from that, things with video conferences are, I find, going smoothly, but obviously the fact that all those months were put forward there is a considerably greater amount of cases, so [it is] tough to get dates in a reasonable amount of time," Shearson said.

The Sherbrooke lawyer also mentioned a new phenomenon that has occurred in the last few months. Lawyers are becoming more proactive, trying to reach a settlement in less time. There is more leeway for bargains and deals, he explained, which wasn't always there pre-Covid.

But Shearson pointed out that the pandemic broke the justice systems equilibrium. His firm is swimming in cases trickling in from March, April and May, pushing many of the cases from September, October and November. The delays are causing undue stress on some clients.

"It's difficult for clients who want their cases to move forward, I mean, if you're accused of things which are sexual in nature or fraud [...] obviously, those are the people who want their files moved roundly and fast," said Shearson.

the school have been linked to the outbreak at the Lion. The university reported 16 cases in its residences and at least 12 cases off campus. The school has two sectors under observation by Public Health as outbreaks, or situations where individuals are known to have caught the virus from one another.

"All those who have tested positive or who have been in close contact with a positive case are in isolation. Many of those who received a positive test result have left campus and Lennoxville and are isolating elsewhere. Those in isolation on campus are having meals delivered and they will remain in isolation as required. Those who have contracted COVID-19 are all recovering well," the message reads.

So far, no BU employees have contracted the virus, but the school has made the decision to extend the suspension of in-person activities on campus until the end of classes on December 6.

In the Eastern Townships there were 40 new cases of COVID-19 reported on Tuesday, 26 of which were in Sherbrooke. There was one new death in the region, and three new hospitalizations brought the regional total to 28. Five people were in intensive care.

The province, meanwhile, reported 1,124 new cases, bringing the total number of people infected to 134,330. The data also report 45 new deaths, for a total of 6,887. The number of hospitalizations increased by 21 compared to the previous day, for a cumulative total of 655. Among these, the number of people in intensive care decreased by 2, for a total of 96.

During his afternoon update, Québec Premier François Legault encouraged Quebecers to plan for no more than two gatherings over the four-day holiday period granted by the government last week. The premier also singled out the Asbestos and Granit regions on a shortlist of parts of the province that are particularly hard hit at the moment and where people should be making a particular effort to stay home as much as possible.

Quebec government says it will table expanded language law during next session

By Jacob Serebrin
The Canadian Press

Quebec's minister responsible for the French language said he will introduce a bill strengthening the province's language law when the legislature returns from its winter break.

Simon Jolin-Barrette said he's concerned that the use of French in the province is in decline, particularly in Montreal. "Quebec was born in French and it will remain that way," he told reporters Tuesday.

The state of the French language in Quebec, particularly in Montreal's downtown core and among immigrants, is a constant preoccupation of nationalists, who have demanded for years the government reinforce the 1977 language law, known as Bill 101. Politicians and media personalities regularly lament how they are greeted in English in downtown Montreal stores.

Quebec's office of the French language, which is the enforcement arm of Bill 101, reported in 2019 that on the island of Montreal, the percentage of people who have French as a mother tongue declined from 52.1 per cent to 46.1 per cent between 1996 and 2016.

Jolin-Barrette said Tuesday he wants to ensure that francophone Quebecers can work and obtain services in French and that French remains the province's common language. He gave few details about what his law will look like but promised Quebecers it will maintain the place of French as Quebec's only official language.

"The objective will be very clear: protect, value and promote the language of the Quebec nation, French," he said.

Jolin-Barrette, who is also the justice minister, said he hasn't decided whether the expanded law will apply to English-language CEGEPs. The province restricts access to English-language primary and secondary schools for francophones, but those rules don't apply to the junior colleges or universities.

Later in the day, Premier Francois Legault said expanding Bill 101 to CEGEPs isn't part of the government's plan, for now. Legault said restricting access to those institutions "is part of the discussions."

Both Legault and Jolin-Barrette said they want federally regulated companies such as banks to be subject to the language law. Jolin-Barrette said that while Quebec wants Ottawa's co-operation, he said he believes the province has the power to make that change on its own.

Jolin-Barrette said the new bill won't prevent English-speaking Quebecers from accessing services, including government services, in their own language.

"Never, never, never, that's not the goal," he said. "It will never be the goal. I want to be really clear. In North America, Quebec is a distinct society, the English-speaking community is part of Quebec. We will always respect, always respect, the institutions of the English community."

He said the new law also won't affect the "inalienable" right of Indigenous Quebecers to preserve their own languages.

Jolin-Barrette also suggested he wasn't ready to force companies with fewer than 50 employees to conduct their operations in French, as is required for larger companies. He said he didn't want to increase the bureaucratic burden of small and medium-sized businesses.

He defended his government decision to proceed with a language reform during the pandemic, saying the law hasn't been updated in 15 years. "I think it's urgent to act," he said.

Earlier in the day, Opposition Leader Dominique Anglade told reporters she's concerned that people aren't being served in French in stores but said the government should take an "inclusive" approach to encouraging the use of the language.

"I understand that a lot of people would like to really focus on the pandemic, but, if they want to table it today, we will be ready to discuss this today," Anglade said.

The Parti Quebecois said Tuesday that it plans to introduce a motion calling on the government to require immigrants, other than refugees, to know French when they arrive. Additionally, the sovereigntist party said it wants the government to redirect $750 million earmarked for McGill University and an English-language CEGEP to the French education system.

Each year the Lennoxville and District Women's Centre takes part in the 12 DAYS OF ACTION TO END VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN. Between Nov. 25 and Dec. 6, The Record will be publishing an article in each issue to raise awareness and shine a light on this critical social problem.

By Brenda Hartwell

On Dec. 6, 1989, 14 young women were brutally murdered during a mass shooting event at l'École Polytechnique de Montréal. Why? Because these promising young women dared to study engineering, which was traditionally considered to be a male domain.

This misogynistic act of targeted violence shook our country and led Parliament to designate Dec. 6 as The National Day of Remembrance and Action on Violence against Women. Since that time, various organizations have worked tirelessly to raise awareness concerning the serious consequences of gender-based violence and how it impacts society. People across the world have organized to mark the days preceding Dec. 6 with either a 12-day campaign devoted to ending violence against women or a 16-day campaign that addresses violence against all genders.

Despite the hard work of the past 31 years to raise awareness in the hopes of influencing attitudes and affecting change, violence against women remains a serious problem in Canada and throughout the world. While anyone in Canada can experience violence, women and girls experience violence in greater numbers. Indigenous women, LGBTQ2 individuals, women living with a disability, and women living in rural and remote regions are at an even greater risk.

If we look at statistics, it is obvious that there is still much work that needs to be done to keep women and girls safe in this country:

- Women in Canada are more likely than men to experience intimate partner violence. According to 2018 police-reported data, women accounted for almost eight in ten victims (79 per cent) of intimate partner violence. (Burczycka, Marta, 2019. Statistics Canada)

- In Canada, women also account for the vast majority of victims of intimate partner homicides. According to police-reported data, women accounted for close to eight in ten victims (77 per cent) of intimate partner homicides committed in 2018 in Canada (Burczycka, Marta, 2019. Statistics Canada.)
- Women in Canada are more likely than men to be sexually assaulted. Between 2009 and 2014, the vast majority (87 per cent) of sexual assault victims were women or girls, most of whom (70 per cent) were under the age of 25. (Rotenberg, Cristine, 2017. Statistics Canada. Police-reported sexual assaults in Canada, 2009 to 2014: A statistical profile.)

6,000+ women and children sleep in shelters on any given night because it isn't safe at home. Approximately every six days, a woman in Canada is killed by her intimate partner. (<https://canadianwomen.org/the-facts/gender-based-violence/>)

These facts are disheartening, but we must not throw up our hands in despair. Instead these facts should galvanize us to be more determined, to work harder in an effort to move society forward so girls and women can reach their full potential, free from the threat of violence.

The first step is to further raise awareness. People need to understand that this is not a women's issue; it's an issue that impacts society as a whole. Women, who are victims of psychological or physical abuse, are less likely to achieve their full potential as contributing members of society. Every year, billions of tax dollars are spent to deal with the issue of spousal abuse. Every woman who is murdered leaves behind a grieving family, the members of which may deal with long-lasting psychological problems. Statistics show that children who witness violence in the home have twice the rate of psychiatric disorders than children from non-violent homes.

We must be particularly vigilant during these pandemic times, because isolation combined with economic stressors increase negative coping mechanisms such as substance abuse and this can trigger family violence. Maintaining social contact is extremely important, especially with family or friends you suspect may be at risk of conjugal violence. One of the most important things we can do during periods of quarantine is to keep in touch with women we know, so we can ensure that they are not in danger. You may be a lifeline to someone in need of help.

Isn't it time all genders worked together to end the cycle of violence that infects our society? Let's imagine a just and safe society, and then let's roll up our sleeves and build it!

EDITORIAL

Although health delivery is within provincial and territorial jurisdiction, clearly there is an urgent need for a better coordinated federal strategy and additional funding.

Paid sick leave vital for pandemic response

“Paid sick leave is extremely important. If someone has to choose between providing for their family or going to work when sick, they’ll likely go in and may infect others.”

– Dr. Thomas Frieden, former director of the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

Dr. Sanjay Gupta on CNN recently termed the COVID-19 pandemic a “humanitarian disaster”. It has caused nearly a quarter of a million deaths, and in the US each day some 200,000 new cases are reported. It has claimed the lives of 1700 health workers there. In Canada, as of late July, about 20% of cases were in this group – double the global average and four times the rate in China.

Yet three provinces continue to ignore the needs of physicians, Ottawa has offered MDs little financial support and the pandemic is surging across most of Canada. Record numbers of new daily cases have been recorded in Alberta (1549), Manitoba (543), Quebec (1448) and Ontario (1589). Premier Legault has warned that Quebec will likely extend red zone restrictions past November 23. The Greater Toronto Area and all of Manitoba are at the red alert level. PEI and Newfoundland and Labrador have opted out of the “Atlantic bubble” due to increased numbers if cases in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

The recent Ontario budget discussed increasing availability of PPE, but contained not one word concerning assuring adequate sick benefits for physicians and many other health professionals. In fact, despite repeated requests by the Ontario Medical Association, the Ontario Ministry of Health has refused to engage in any discussions around “sick pay” for physicians.

The Canada Recovery Sickness Benefit is a good start. It pays $500 per week for up to two weeks, even to self-employed workers. However, it is an inadequate amount to replace the lost income of physicians, most nurses, and many other health professionals. More is needed if they are to be deterred from working; thus additional federal support is required.

Dr. Deena Hinshaw had warned that it was “absolutely critical” that all persons in Alberta stay home when they had any symptoms. Yet in Edmonton, some nine percent of active cases admitted to working while they had symptoms.

Manitoba Premier Brian Pallister stated several months ago, “We want to encourage people not to work when they are ill and we want to make sure that they are not hurt financially

Ironically, his is one of three provinces – Alberta, Manitoba, and Ontario – that continue to ignore the need for their physicians to be financially protected if they themselves are personally impacted by the coronavirus.

Most physicians are self-employed and rely on private insurance, but those older than age 65 generally cannot qualify. For even younger ones, there is usually a waiting period of at least two weeks.

Most provinces have recognized this fact. Most British Columbia physicians are covered – up to age 70 – by a government-funded disability insurance plan. This now includes quarantine or COVID-19 illness from day one for all BC physicians. Quebec, most other provinces, and the Yukon all cover their MDs for lost income from day one of self-isolation or illness. Only Alberta, Ontario, and Manitoba have left their physicians totally unprotected.

In a policy statement last March, the OECD supported “extending paid leave coverage to non-standard workers, including the self-employed.” This would include physicians. The Decent Work and Health Report in August also stated that universal, paid sick days were a “necessary, evidence-based protection” to mitigate the second wave of COVID-19.”

Although health delivery is within provincial and territorial jurisdiction, clearly there is an urgent need for a better coordinated federal strategy and additional funding. Finance Minister Chrystia Freeland recently argued that to ensure the recovery is “as broad, robust and complete as possible,” there will be a need for “targeted, carefully thought-out investment on a meaningful scale” She should thus agree to raise the Canada Health Transfer to the provinces and territories. They in turn should agree to provide pandemic sick benefits to all practicing physicians as well as, if necessary, topping up federal benefits for part-time nurses and other health workers so as to adequately replace their lost income. This will encourage them to self-isolate, if necessary, and help control the pandemic.

Infected health providers are a major potential cause of spread of the virus. If the premiers act quickly to guarantee their financial protection, this may help to reduce the likelihood of a total lockdown, with its dire effects on the lives and livelihoods of most Canadians.

Ottawa physician Dr. Charles S. Shaver was born in Montreal. He is Past-Chair of the Section on General Internal Medicine of the Ontario Medical Association.

The views here are his own.

Death

Denis (Bohdan, Danny)
Marak
1941-2020

It is with profound sadness that the family announces the passing of Dan at his home in Sutton, Quebec on November 20, 2020. Predeceased by his wife Jill (2015). Son of Ivan and Stephania Marak. He leaves behind his children, Tracy (Tony) and Kelly; his grandchildren Tiana and Tiffany; his sisters Mary (Stan) and Alice; his nieces and nephews, Laura, Derek, Stephanie and Greg, and many friends. Dan spent many years at Collins and Aikman, retiring as Vice President of Finance. He felt passionate about his work and the industry he supported, making lifelong friends during his tenure there. Dan loved to travel and was an avid sports fan, playing hockey and baseball. For many years he enjoyed season tickets at the Olympic Stadium and Montreal Forum, often enjoying the game with his daughters and maybe a Molson or two. As per his wishes, cremation will take place and a celebration of life will be held at a later date. Danny also loved his cats and dogs and rescued many. Donations in his memory can be made to the SPCA.

"May each tear and each fond memory be a note of love rising to meet you."

In Memoriam

MARSH - In loving memory of our mother Phyliss Marsh who passed on November 25, 1999.

*Mom,
May the winds of Heaven blow softly
And whisper in your ear
How much we love and miss you
And wish that you were here
Missing you today and every day.*

Card of Thanks

BABBIN, Buddy (Ralph Jr.): January 13, 1963 – October 26, 2020. Mere words cannot express all the love and gratitude we feel for those who visited, phoned, sent cards, gave monetary gifts and flowers during Bud's hospitalization and funeral. Our "Smiley" has joined Tim and Ralph. Buddy did not have an easy time but always had a smile. Special thanks to Natasha who visited at a most needed time, and to the staff of ICU CHUS were most kind and informative and wonderful to us and Buddy. He refused to go to Hospital until it was too late. We thank the neighbour who called the ambulance when Bud told him he thought he was having a heart attack. Dorothy always tried to keep track of Buddy and see that he had food - he could not have had a better sister! She took care of all the arrangements. Thanks to all who attended funeral and graveside service and to our minister for such fine services.

Today is the 330th day of 2020 and the 65th day of autumn.

TODAY'S HISTORY: In 1783, the last British troops withdrew from New York City, three months after the signing of the Treaty of Paris.

In 1947, studio executives agreed to blacklist the "Hollywood 10," who had been cited for contempt of Congress the previous day for not cooperating with the House Un-American Activities Committee.

In 2002, President George W. Bush signed legislation creating the Homeland Security Department, naming Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Ridge as its first secretary.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAYS: Andrew Carnegie (1835-1919), financier/philanthropist; Virgil Thomson (1896-1989), composer/music critic; Joe DiMaggio (1914-1999), baseball player; Augusto Pinochet (1915-2006), Chilean president; Joe Gibbs (1940-), football coach; Ben Stein (1944-), TV personality/author; Amy Grant (1960-), singer; John F. Kennedy Jr. (1960-1999), publisher; Cris Carter (1965-), football player/sportscaster; Jill Hennessy (1968-), actress; Christina Applegate (1971-), actress.

TODAY'S FACT: Augusto Pinochet came to power in 1973 in a CIA-supported coup that deposed Salvador Allende, the first elected Socialist president of Chile.

TODAY'S SPORTS: In 1980, Sugar Ray Leonard regained the WBC welterweight boxing title when his opponent, Roberto Duran, quit in the eighth round.

TODAY'S QUOTE: "People who are unable to motivate themselves must be content with mediocrity, no matter how impressive their other talents." - Andrew Carnegie TODAY'S NUMBER: 60,000 - U.S. Customs and Border Protection employees in 2020, making it the largest organization overseen by the Department of Homeland Security.

TODAY'S MOON: Between first quarter moon (Nov. 21) and full moon (Nov. 30).

Dear Annie

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 2020

Dear Annie: I am in my mid-20s and fortunate enough to have a job that I've been able to do remotely since the outbreak of the pandemic back in March. Working from home has its drawbacks, but on the whole, I've come to really enjoy it.

For one, I used to drive an hour and 15 minutes each way for work. During the time I used to be sitting in traffic in the morning, I am able to wake up, make myself a nice breakfast, call my parents and even meditate. I log on for the day feeling ready to go. After work, I jog or walk two miles, and then make dinner, all before the time I used to get home.

And I've actually gotten to know my co-workers better during this pandemic than I did before, as we make more of an effort to catch up with one another and set up "happy hours" via Zoom, when we ever went out to happy hours together in real life.

I know that I am incredibly lucky to have a job at all right now, especially one where I'm able to work from the comfort and safety of my own home. (I want to acknowledge the fact that there are front-line workers who have had to risk their lives every day just to keep an income, and others who have been laid off for months now, with dwindling unemployment funds.) So, I don't mean to sound like I'm whining, but I really don't want to return to the office and that commute. Moving closer to the office is not an option, as I can't afford the rent in that part of town.

Am I the only one wishing I could keep working from home? And should I try talking to my boss, when the time comes for us to return to the office, to see if I might be able to continue working from home? I know that, in general, he's never loved the idea of remote work. - Working From Home Works

Dear Working From Home Works: You're right. You are lucky - and not just because you've held onto your job and health during this tumultuous year. You're lucky because you've been given a unique opportunity to evaluate what is important in your life, what helps you to feel healthy and grounded. Don't squander the lesson. When a return to the office seems imminent, talk to your boss. In the past, he didn't like the idea of remote work, but that was before the world turned upside-down. He might have gained some insights this year as well, about what's possible with remote employees. It won't hurt to ask; it will hurt not to.

If you get shot down, then decide how much of a priority it is to you to be able to work remotely, and plan your next career move accordingly.

The ancient are still excellent

By Phillip Alder

Back in 1968, Eddie Kantar wrote two primers for near beginners: "Introduction to Declarer Play" and "Introduction to Defense." They have just been modernized by Barbara Seagram and published by Master Point Press. She did an admirable job, except I wish she had limited the word "hand" to one containing 13 cards, and used "deal" to refer to all 52 cards.

Today's deal comes from the defense book. How should East-West play to defeat four hearts after West leads the spade ace: four, three, five?

There is no bidding in the book. In particular, to give the defenders a chance, often the declaring side must overbid, as North-South have done here. However, this would not be an uncommon sequence, South bidding game because he thinks they have a double fit.

When on defense with a good player, always look carefully at his or her card at trick one and first discard. Both will be trying to steer you in the right direction.

In this situation, when West leads the ace from ace-king and the queen appears in the dummy, third hand signals high with a doubleton (or a singleton!), or plays low with three or more cards in the suit. Here, East plays

		North	11-25-20
		♠ Q 6 4
		♥ K Q 9 8
		♦ A Q 7
		♣ 8 5 4
West		East
♠ A K 9 8 2		♠ 10 7 3
♥ 4 3		♥ 5 2
♦ J 10 9 8		♦ K 6 5 2
♣ 7 6		♣ A J 10 9
		South
		♠ J 5
		♥ A J 10 7 6
		♦ 4 3
		♣ K Q 3 2
Dealer: North
Vulnerable: Both
South	West	North	East
		1♣	Pass
1♥	Pass	2♥	Pass
4♥	Pass	Pass	Pass
Opening lead: ♠ A

the three.

Now West must resist the temptation to cash the spade king. Yes, he would win the trick, but simultaneously he would establish dummy's queen, on which declarer can discard a diamond loser.

Instead, West should shift to the diamond jack, which establishes four winners for the defense: two spades, one diamond and one club.

Your Birthday

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 2020

Get ready to push forward. Greater opportunities are heading your way. If you take care of unfinished business, you'll find it easier to pursue your goals. A cash infusion will come to you from an unexpected or unusual source.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) – Set up an area at home conducive to achieving your goals. Whether you are working on fitness, learning something new or expanding your interests, an allotted space will encourage success.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Keep your opinions to yourself to avoid getting into a debate with a friend, peer or family member. Spend your time making positive changes. Personal growth and physical fitness are favored.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) – Pour your energy into getting ahead. Send out resumes, upgrade your skills or make professional or lifestyle changes. Take control of your life, and learn the lessons of the past.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) – Spend more time sorting through documents, legal paperwork, contracts or financial investments. Once you know where you stand, you'll be able to make positive changes. Take better care of yourself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Put everything in perspective and follow the path that suits you best. Offering equality and appreciation will help you get what you want. A contractual or legal matter will be beneficial.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Spend less time worrying about what others are doing and more time working toward your goals. Anger will not be helpful. It's up to you to bring about the changes required for you to excel.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Being mysterious will be to your advantage. Don't put yourself in a vulnerable or risky position. If you keep your opinions and intentions to yourself, you'll accomplish what you set out to do.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Spend more time developing your ideas and focusing on what will help your financial situation. Argument will be a waste of time. Thinking ahead will lead to positive results.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Don't feel you that you must agree with someone who is making decisions you don't like. Do your own thing, and concentrate on honing and updating your skills. Be energetic and enthusiastic in all things.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – A change of scenery will help stimulate your mind. You will get a tip on how best to use your skills to keep up with the latest trends and economic climate. Romance is favored.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) – Refuse to let anyone drag you down. An energetic approach to life, love and happiness will pay off. Embrace the future with an open mind. You will discover a new way to use your skills.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) – Make personal changes that will improve your life. Researching alternatives will help you make a better decision about where you want to live and how you want to spend your time.
