THE GAYNOR-GREEN CASE.

Important Move to Be Made By U. S. Government.

Secretary Will Appeal to British Government.

Washington, July 9.—The extradition of Messrs. Benjamin F. Green and John F. Gaynor, whose removal from Canada to the State of Georgia for trial on charges of misappropriation and embezzlement of over two million dollars in connection with river and harbor improvements at Savannah, Ga., has been sought for sometime by the United States, will take on a diplomatic phase in a few days, when Secretary Hay will communicate to the British Government the view of the officials of the Department of Justice that the Canadian authorities are pursuing an extraordinary and unwarranted course in the case. The delays and embarrassments in the extradition proceedings resulted in Mr. Marion Erwin, the special assistant attorney, who has been in active charge of the extradition proceedings for the United States, transmitting to the attorney-general, under date of Montreal, July 7, a special report on the case, in which he calls attention to the fact that the legal representatives of Messrs. Greene and Gaynor are closely connected through professional and family ties with the Canadian officials to whom this Government must look for extradition of the men whose custody it seeks.

Mr. Erwin in his report says that prior to instituting the extradition proceedings, he was given notice that the fugitives had "taken refuge at Quebec for the purpose of resisting extradition, and that they had employed as their counsel the firm of lawyers to which belonged the highest officials of the provincial and Dominion Government. He said that he was thus "precluded by the position taken by them from conferring with the law officers of the crown." He therefore retained two attorneys of the Montreal and Canadian bar who have ably assisted him.

It is understood that the Secretary of State will bring the matter to the attention of the British embassy at once.

TERRIBLE STORY FROM COLBORNE.

Husband Forced His Wife To Take Paris Green.

Colborne, July 9.—Isaac Lambert is under arrest here charged with murdering his wife, who died under suspicious circumstances some time ago. The stomach of the woman was sent to Toronto and an analysis of contents showed that death resulted from Paris green poisoning.

The eldest child states that the day previous to her mother's death the father quarrelled with his wife and threatened to kill her.

A relative was present at the time, and according to the child's statement, this man pried open with a knife her mother's mouth while the father poured Paris green down her throat. It is said that at the time the murder was committed the unfortunate woman had but a few rags for clothing and there was not a morsel of food in the house for her family of three little children.

The King's Condition Continues Satisfactory

WILL BE TRANSFERRED TO ROYAL YACHT.

London, July 10.—King Edward is not yet able to sit up, but every day he is removed to an adjustable couch which gives a welcome change to his position and which enables him to read with some degree of comfort.

It is understood next week, His Majesty may be transferred upon a yacht to the royal yacht the Victoria and Albert, in a specially constructed ambulance carriage, but all the arrangements for this transfer are kept secret in order to prevent a gathering of the public to witness the King's departure.

His Majesty maintains his steady improvement. With the departure tomorrow of the Duchess of Aosta, all the coronation guests will have left Buckingham Palace.

The bulletin on King Edward's condition posted at Buckingham Palace at 10 o'clock this morning says:—

"The King's condition continues to be satisfactory."
(Signed), Treves, Laking, Barlow.

CORONATION DATE.

London, July 10.—It is said, on good authority, that, subject to the approval of King Edward's physicians, the coronation will take place August 9th.

FIVE FIREMEN KILLED.

Met Death By Falling Wall In Toronto.

During Progress of a Fierce Fire.

Toronto, July 10.—Fire destroyed P. McIntosh's grain warehouse on the Esplanade this morning, causing a loss of nearly $200,000. By the unexpected falling of walls, the following firemen were killed instantly, their bodies being afterwards recovered from the debris:—

David See, a South African veteran who has a medal with five clasps, Harry Clarke, George Kerr, Walter Collard, F. G. Russell.

They were among the best men of the entire brigade. Two of them were married. Owing to the dangerous character of the building, no firemen were allowed to go inside, the men who were caught having been working at the foot of the wall.

The swelling of the grain caused the walls to burst out. A dozen other firemen had miraculous escapes.

The insurance on the building was not large, several policies having lapsed.

The amount was about $100,000. The cause of the fire is not known at present.

Appalling Disaster At Johnstown.

One Hundred Killed In Mine Explosion.

Exact Number of Dead Not Yet Known.

Johnstown, Pa., July 10.—Johnstown has again been visited by an appalling disaster. It is less frightful than the awful calamity of May 31, 1880, in cost of life, but it has brought sorrow to hundreds of homes. A mine explosion took place in the Cambria Steel Company rolling mill mine under Westmont Hill at 12.30 o'clock this afternoon.

How many are dead it may take several days to determine, but that it is a long list is certain. It may reach 200 or more men.

It was nearly an hour after the explosion before any general knowledge of what happened got abroad.

The officials of the mining Company state that the explosion was one of fire damp.

LATER NEWS.

Johnstown, Pa., July 11.—At 2 o'clock this morning Mayor Pendry stated that the first of the bodies of the dead miners would be brought from the mine at 3 o'clock. Mayor Pendry stated that General Manager Price told him the number of bodies in sight at 2 o'clock was sixty-five.

THE CRIME OF THE BOULEVARD BY JULES CLARETIE

CHAPTER III. Nothing in the antechamber indicated that a tragedy had taken place there.

"He is in the salon," said the concierge in a low tone. One of the folding doors stood open, and, stopping on the threshold in order to take in the entire aspect of the place, Bernardet saw in the center of the room, lying on the floor in a pool of blood, the body of M. Rovere, clothed in a long, blue dressing gown, bound at the waist with a heavy cord, which lay in coils on the floor, like a serpent.

The corpse was extended between the two windows which opened on the Boulevard de Clichy, and Bernardet's first thought was that it was a miracle that the victim could have met his death in such a horrible manner two steps from the passersby on the street.

Whoever struck the blow did it quickly," thought the police officer. He advanced softly toward the body, casting his eye upon the inert mass and taking in at a glance the smallest objects near it and the most minute details. He bent over and studied it thoroughly.

M. Rovere seemed living in his tragic pose. The pale face, with its pointed nose, the well-trimmed gray beard, expressed in its fierce immobility a sort of menacing anger. This man of about 50 years had evidently died cursing some one in his supreme agony.

But what struck Bernardet above everything else, arrested his attention and glued him to the spot was the look, the extraordinary expression in the eyes. The mouth was open, as if to cry out; the eyes seemed to menace some one, and the lips about to speak.

They were frightful. Those tragic eyes were wide open, as if transfixed by fear or fury.

They seemed fathomless, staring, ready to start from their sockets. The eyebrows above them were black and bristling. They seemed living eyes in that dead face. They told of a final struggle, of some atrocious deed of looks and words. They appeared in their ferocious immobility, as when they gazed upon the murderer, eye to eye, face to face.

Bernardet looked at the hands. They were contracted and seemed, in some obstinate resistance, to have clung to the neck or the clothing of the assassin.

"There ought to be blood under the nails, since he made a struggle," said Bernardet, thinking aloud.

And Paul Rodier, the reporter, hurriedly wrote, "There was blood under the nails."

Bernardet returned again and again to the eyes—those wide open eyes, frightful, terrible eyes, which, in their fierce depths, retained without doubt the image or phantom of some nightmare of death.

He touched the dead man's hand. The flesh had become cold, and rigor mortis was beginning to set in.

The reporter saw the little man take from his pocket a sort of rusty silver ribbon and unroll it and heard him ask Moniche to take hold of one end of it. This ribbon or thread looked to Paul Rodier like brass wire. Bernardet prepared his kodak.

"Above everything else," murmured Bernardet, "let us preserve the expression of these eyes."

"Close the shutters. The darkness will be more complete."

The reporter assisted Moniche in order to hasten the work. The shutters closed, the room was quite dark, Bernardet began his task. Counting off a few steps, he selected the best place from which to take the picture.

"Be kind enough to light the end of the magnesium wire," he said to the concierge. "Have you any matches?"

"No, M. Bernardet."

The police officer indicated by a sign of the head a match safe which he had noticed on entering the room.

"There are some there."

Bernardet had with one sweeping glance of the eye taken in everything in the room—the fauteuils, scarcely moved from their places; the pictures hanging on the walls, the mirrors, the bookcases, the cabinets, etc.

Moniche went to the mantelpiece and took a match from the box. It was M. Rovere himself who furnished the light by which a picture of his own body was taken.

"We could obtain no picture in this room without the magnesium wire," said the agent, as calm while taking a photograph of the murdered man as he had been a short time ago in his garden. "The light is insufficient. When I say, 'Go! Moniche, you must light the wire, and I will take three or four negatives. Do you understand? Stand there to my left. Now! Attention!'"

Bernardet took his position, and the porter stood ready, match and wire in hand, like a gunner who awaits the order to fire.

"Go!" said the agent. A rapid, clear light shot up and suddenly lighted the room. The pale face seemed livid, the various objects in the room took on a fantastic appearance in this sort of tempestuous apotheosis, and Paul Rodier hastily inscribed on his writing pad, "Picturesque, bizarre, marvelous, devilish, suggestive."

"Let us try it again," said M. Bernardet. For the third time in this weird light the visage of the dead man appeared whiter, more sinister, frightful, the wound deeper, the gash redder, and the eyes, those wide open, fixed, tragic, menacing, snarling eyes—eyes that Minard's Liniment is the best t.

A LIFE IN PERIL. Story of a Girl Saved By a Newspaper Article.

She Suffered From Headaches, Dizziness and Night Sweats Her Friends Feared She Was Going Into Consumption.

From L'Avenir, St. Jerome, Que. Among the thousands of young girls who bless Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for safely carrying them through that most perilous period of their lives when they step from girlhood into the broader realm of womanhood, there is none more enthusiastic than Miss Gabrielle Thomas, a young lady known to most of the residents of St. Jerome, Que., and greatly esteemed by all her acquaintances.

To a reporter of L'Avenir du Nord, Miss Thomas said: "From the time I was fourteen until I was eighteen years of age my health was very bad. I was very weak; had no appetite and could do no work. At night I perspired greatly and frequently slept but little. I suffered from headaches, dizziness and could scarcely move about without becoming breathless, and I finally reached a state when my friends feared I was going into consumption. I was under the care of doctors, but their treatment did not help me. I then tried several advertised medicines, but with the same poor results and I had come to think I could not get better. One day I read in a newspaper the statement of a young girl, whose symptoms were almost identical with my own, who was cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I then decided to try this medicine and have reason to bless the day I did so. I had only used the pills a few weeks when I began to get better, and in a couple of months every symptom of my trouble had disappeared and I was as strong and healthy as any girl of my age. I have since always enjoyed the best of health and I shall be glad indeed if my experience proves helpful to some other suffering girl."

The happiness of health for both man and woman lies in the timely use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which act as a nerve tonic and supply new blood to enfeebled systems. They have cured many thousands of cases of anaemia, "decline," consumption, pains in the back, neuralgia, depression of spirits, heart palpitation, indigestion, rheumatism, sciatica, St. Vitus' dance and partial paralysis. But substitutes should be avoided if you value your health; see that the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" is on every box. Sold by all dealers or sent post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"The best man in the world," added his wife, wiping her eyes. "I am not inquiring about his moral qualities," M. Desbriere said. "What I want to know is, how did he live and whom did he receive?"

"Few people. Very few," the porter answered. "The poor man liked solitude. He lived here eight years. He received a few friends; but, I repeat, a very small number."

M. Rovere had rented the apartment in 1888. He installed himself in his rooms, with his pictures and books. The porter was much astonished at the number of pictures and volumes which the new lodger brought. It took a long time to settle, as M. Rovere was very fastidious and personally superintended the hanging of his canvases and the placing of his books. He thought that he must have been an artist, although he said that he was a retired merchant. He had heard him say one day that he had been consul to some foreign country—Spain or South America.

He lived quite simply, although they thought that he must be rich. Was he a miser? Not at all; very generous, on the contrary, but plainly he shunned the world. He had chosen their apartment because it was in a retired spot, far from the Parisian boulevards. Four or five years before a woman, clothed in black, had come there—a woman who seemed still young. He had not seen her face, which was covered with a heavy black veil. She had visited M. Rovere quite often. He always accompanied her respectfully to the door when she went away. Once or twice he had gone out with her in a carriage. No, he did not know her name. M. Rovere's life was regulated with military precision. He usually held himself upright. Of late sickness had bowed him somewhat. He went out whenever he was able, going as far as the Bois de Boulogne. Then, after breakfast, he shut himself up in his library and read and wrote. He passed nearly all of his evenings at home.

"He never made us wait up for him, as he never went to the theater," said Moniche.

The malady from which he suffered and which puzzled the physicians had seized him on his return from a summer sojourn at Aix-les-Bains for his health. The neighbors had at once noticed the effect produced by the cure. When he went away, he had been somewhat troubled with rheumatism, but when he returned he was a confirmed sufferer. Since the beginning of September he had not been out, receiving no visits, except from his doctor, and spending whole days in his easy chair or upon his lounge, while Mme. Moniche read the daily papers to him.

"When I say that he saw no one," said the porter, "I make a mistake. There was that gentleman."

"What gentleman?"

Mme. Moniche shook her head, as if she ought not to answer. "Of whom do you speak?" repeated the commissary, looking at both of them.

Signs or counts and useless gestures. Bernardet listened, noting each word, the purposes of this portress, the melodramatic gossip in certain information in which he verified the precision—all this in the daytime expression of the dead man's eyes had been reflected in the kodak.

He tried to distinguish as best he could the undeniable facts in this first deposition, when a woman of the people, garrulous, indiscreet, gossiping and zealous, has the joy of playing a role. He mentally examined her story, with the interruptions which her instantaneity made when she accused the individual. He stopped her with a look, placing his hand on her arm and said: "One must wait. One does not know. He had the appearance of a worthy man." The woman

Then, at some time or other, the individual had made another visit to M. Rovere. More than once the portress had tried to learn his name. Up to this moment she had not succeeded. One day she asked M. Rovere who it was, and he very shortly asked her who she was, and she watched the individual with a very doubtful

"Instinct, monsieur; my instinct told me."

"Enough," interrupted M. Desbriere. "If we had only instinct to guide us, we should make some famous blunders."

"Oh, it was not only by instinct, monsieur!"

"Ah, ah! Let us hear it!" Bernardet, with his eyes fastened upon Mme. Moniche, did not lose a syllable of her story, which her husband occasionally interrupted to correct or to complete a statement or to add some detail. The portress, with mouth open and fiery, ferocious eyes, seemed also to listen.

Mme. Moniche, as we already know, entered M. Rovere's apartment whenever she wished. She was his landlady, his reader, his friend. She was his housekeeper, but his wife was good. So it was nothing strange when the woman, urged by curiosity, suddenly appeared in his rooms, for him to say: "Ah, you here? Is that you? I did not call you." An electric bell connected the rooms with the concierge lodge. Usually she would reply, "I thought I heard the bell."

And she would profit by the occasion to fix up the fire, which M. Rovere, busy with his reading or writing, had forgotten to attend to. She was much attached to him. She did not wish to have him suffer from the cold, and recently had entered as often as possible, under one pretext or another, knowing that he was ill, and desiring to be at hand in case of need. When one evening about eight days before she had entered the room, while the visitor, whom Moniche called the individual, whom the portress had been accustomed to see the two women standing before Rovere's door, the door wide open and both looking at some papers spread out on the desk.

Rovere, with his sorrow, thin face, was holding some papers in his hand, and the other was bent over, looking with eager eyes at—Mme. Moniche had seen them well—some rent rolls, bills and deeds. Perceiving Mme. Moniche who stood hesitating on the threshold, M. Rovere frowned and mechanically made a move as if to gather up the scattered papers. But the portress said, "Pardon," and quickly withdrew. Only —ah, only—she had time to see, to see plainly the iron safe, the heavy doors standing open, the keys hanging from the lock, and M. Rovere in his dressing gown, the official papers, yellow and blue, others bearing seals and a ribbon, lying there before him. He seemed in a bad humor, but said nothing. Not a word.

And the other one?"

The other man was as pale as M. Rovere. He resembled him, moreover. He was, perhaps, a relative. Mme. Moniche had noticed the expression with which he contemplated those papers and the fierce glance which he cast at her when she pushed open the door without knowing what sight awaited her. She had gone down stairs, and about what she had seen. It was some time afterward. The individual had come again. He remained closeted with M. Rovere for some hours. The portress had heard them through the door talking in low tones. She did not know what they said. She could hear only a murmur, and she had very good ears, too, but she heard only confused sounds, not one plain word. When, however, the visitor was going away she heard Rovere say to him, "I must tell you something later."

Did the dead man possess a secret which weighed heavily upon him and which he shared with that other? And the other—who was he? Perhaps an accomplice. Everything she had said belonged to the commissary of police and to the press. She had told her story with omissions, with timorous looks, with

THE CRIME OF THE BOULEVARD.

CHAPTER V. Some time passed before the arrival of the attorney, and through the closed venetian blinds the murmurs of the crowd collected below could be heard.

The red ribbon in his buttonhole seemed a little too large, like a rosette worn there through coquetry. M. Ginory, on the contrary, wore clothes too large for him; his necktie was tied as if it was a black cord; his hat was half brushed; he was short, stout and sanguine, with his little snub nose, and his mouth, with its heavy jaws. He seemed beside the worldly magistrate like a sort of professor or savant or collector, who, with a leather bag stuffed with books, seemed more fitted to pore over some brochures or precious old volumes than to spend his time over musty law documents.

"What do you mean by that, Bernardet?" the magistrate asked. Bernardet shook his head as if to intimate that the explanation was too long to give him there. They were not alone. Some one might hear them. And if a journal should publish the strange proposition which he wished to make, it would be a scandal.

M. Ginory looked curiously at the little man, whose attitude was humble and even supplicating and seemed to seek a favorable response, and whose eyes sparkled and indicated that his idea was no common one.

"Go on, Bernardet." M. Ginory, who had listened to the officer with curiosity, began to laugh and remarked to Bernardet that, according to this reasoning, illustrated medical science would find itself sacrificed to the instinct, the divination of a provincial physician, and that it was only too easy to put the academicians in the wrong and the independents in the right.

"Oh, monsieur, pardon. I put no one in the right or wrong. Dr. Bourion believed that he had made a discovery. Dr. Vernois was persuaded that Dr. Bourion had discovered nothing at all. What I contest is that for 26 years no one has experimented, no one has made any researches, since the first experiment, and that Dr. Bourion's communication has been simply dropped and forgotten."

"Yes, I know," said M. Ginory. "In 1890 I was too young, and I had no desire to prove the truth of this discovery. I adore photography as I adore my profession. I pass my leisure hours in taking instantaneous pictures, in developing them, printing and finishing them. The idea of what I am about to propose to you came to me by chance."

"By chance, monsieur, I found it on a book stall, and it has kept running in my head ever since, over and over and over again."

"Why do you say that to me? Because I looked astonished at what you have told me? I am not only surprised, I am charmed. Go on, go on!"

M. Ginory, who had listened to the officer with curiosity, began to laugh and remarked to Bernardet that, according to this reasoning, illustrated medical science would find itself sacrificed to the instinct, the divination of a provincial physician, and that it was only too easy to put the academicians in the wrong and the independents in the right.

"I ask your pardon in my turn, Bernardet," replied M. Ginory, a little quizzically. "I have also studied the question, which seems to me a curious one."

"No, monsieur, but you are a man of too great intelligence to say to yourself that there is nothing in this world class, that every matter can be taken up again. The idea has come to me to try the experiment if I am permitted."

"You are obstinate, Bernardet." "You are obstinate, M. Ginory, and very patient. The pictures which I took with my kodak will give us the expression, the interior, so to speak, those which we would take of the retina would reveal to us the secret of the agony. And, moreover, unless I deceive myself, what danger attends such an experiment? One opens the poor eye and holds an autopsy at the morgue, when one enlarges the gash in the throat in order to study it, when one dissects the body, is it any more respectful or proper? Ah, monsieur, if I but had your power!"

M. Ginory seemed quite struck with all that the police officer had said to him, but while he still held to his conviction of the last being whom the murdered man saw before he died. They kept it still; they still retain that image. They will tell that the throat is cut. Eh, parbleu! We know it well. We see it for ourselves. Monche, the porter, knows it as well as any doctor, but when one questions these eyes, when one searches in that black chamber where the image appears as on a plate, when one demands of these eyes their secret, I am convinced that one will find it."

And in that "we will see" there was already a half promise. "Ah, if you only will, and what would it cost you?" added Bernardet, still urgent, indeed almost suppliant.

"Let us finish this now. They are waiting for me," said the examining magistrate. As he left M. Rovere's study he instinctively cast a glance at the rare volumes, with their costly bindings, and he re-entered the salon where M. Jacquelin des Audrays had, without doubt, finished his examination.

"One might well take it for the work of a professional butcher." "Yes, without doubt, M. Ginory, but one does not know. Brute force—a strong blow—can produce exactly what science can."

"That is still another way to use the retina," said Ginory, laughing. "You read one's thoughts."

M. Ginory, the examining magistrate, was, moreover, convinced that for the present, and the sooner the better, the corpse should be sent to the morgue. There only could a thorough and scientific examination be made. The reporter listened intently to the conversation, and more and more agitated by that word morgue, which among the people produces the same terror that that other word—which means, however, careful attendance, scientific treatment and safety—hospital, does.

The Insurance Question.

The representatives of the various insurance companies in Montreal, that do business in Sherbrooke, are reported to be more amused than astonished at the attitude of the business men in Sherbrooke who are agitating against the increase in insurance rates.

The article we refer to appears in another column, and is characterized by the leading business men as a very lame argument. The Montreal men admit that Sherbrooke has to pay for the heavy losses experienced in other parts of the Dominion, but claim that this is the basis of all insurance; that the greater number must help to support the losses of the few. In order to keep some of the companies from insolvency an advance in the rates was ordered.

"All cities fared alike. Sherbrooke, not unlike other cities, had some properties that were greatly susceptible to fire; upon these an extra premium was exacted." That is where the injustice comes in. The rate of insurance has been raised twenty-five per cent., and in some cases even more, on some of the best blocks in the city, where there has never been a fire, and are considered A 1 risks by the insurance people. In one instance where the premium has been raised, solid brick walls divide the building and fourteen one inch streams could be trown over the building within a few minutes of an outbreak. Is that the insurance companies' idea of isolation.

Another thing that must be taken into consideration is the fact that there is no city in the Dominion of Canada, with the same population, that spends so much for fire protection as Sherbrooke. In view of this fact policy holders here should be treated accordingly, and not be called upon to pay in the same proportion as cities and towns that have neither the equipment and water supply that is to be found here.

It is time that the citizens joined in the agitation against increased rates. They have the weapon of retaliation in their own hand in municipal insurance. Sherbrooke is splendidly situated for the carrying out of such a scheme. Leading business men favour it, and are willing to take the risk. The insurance companies have reaped enormous profits in Sherbrooke during the past number of years at the expense of the citizens who have invested their money in up-to-date fire fighting appliances and extension of the water system, and the consideration they get from the companies is increased rates. It is certainly time for a change.

The Council of the Township of Shefford, besides approving a number of bills, on Monday passed a by law to secure a proper observance of the Sabbath. The by law is aimed at Sunday games and Sunday shooting and fishing. The chief offenders are said to be sportsmen from the surrounding towns, who in future will be snuffed by the minions of the law if they venture to hunt, fish or play golf or base ball in the limits of the municipality on Sunday.

Railroad Meeting at Inverness.

The meeting of the directors and promoters of the Wolf, Megantic & Lotbiniere Railroad, on Monday last, was well attended by representatives of different parts of the country, and over sixty shares of the company's stock were subscribed in a short time. At the request of a delegation that waited upon the secretary last week, a delegation consisting of Messrs. W. H. Lambly and Louis J. Frechette, was appointed to meet the officials of the Portland and Rumford Railway with the view of making such arrangements with that company, that they may be allowed to extend their road, which is already within twelve miles of the boundary line to Quebec, by way of Scotstown, South Ham and the route for which the Wolf, Megantic & Lotbiniere Railway Company hold the charter. It is thought that the proposed connection will give a more direct route from Portland than that by way of Lime Ridge and Maine Central and that more favorable arrangements can be made with that company than can otherwise be secured. By the efforts of Mr. Frechette the report of the survey made some years ago, which represents a great deal of money, has been secured, and prospects are bright for an interesting report at the next meeting, which will probably be held in August.

Inspection of Cattle.

Ottawa, July 9.—An arrangement has been effected under which the Governments of Canada and the United States have each appointed a veterinary inspector for the purpose of testing cattle for shipment from Great Britain to either country, and it has been mutually agreed to accept certificates issued by either inspector. Dr. T. A. Geesey is the official inspector for the United States, and Dr. A. G. Hopkins is the official inspector for Canada. Collectors are notified that they may accept any certificates of tuberculosis test, signed by either of these inspectors and accompanying animals shipped to Canada through United States ports.

The Summer Girl's Complexion

"A good complexion is not to be had for the asking," says Priscilla Wakefield in the August Delineto, in answer to a girl who complains that all complexions do not take kindly to the sun's rays. "The first requisites for a clear skin are fresh air exercise, regular bathing, careful diet, and plenty of sleep. Eat fruit and vegetables, drink milk, and take a generous quantity of water between meals and before retiring, two glasses each time. Avoid candies, pastry, pickles, hot breads, tea and coffee. Take a bath every day and rub the body well with a rough towel. Wash the face carefully and never with very cold water. Wipe with a soft towel, rubbing up and not down. If very tired or overheated, wash the face with water almost hot and containing a little glycerine. A lather of castile soap rubbed in well will remove dust, and perspiration from the pores of the skin. The soap must be rinsed off thoroughly. A good remedy for sunburn is to bathe the face with a mixture of sliced cucumber soaked in milk. A mixture of lemon juice, pure borax and powdered sugar is excellent for freckles, or a combination of sour cream and finely grated horse-radish. Rose-water and elder-flower water are beneficial in softening the skin."

Mrs. Martin received a letter stating that he had been killed in an accident in a mine and later married Sird. Martin heard that his wife was dead, married twice since in the west and has several children living by each wife as Mrs. Martin has by each husband. What steps will be taken is not known.

Slick Swindlers.

Do a Farmer Out of Savings of a Lifetime.

Toronto, Ont., July 9.—One of the most heartless of recent "confidence" swindles has just come to light, involving the loss of the saving of a lifetime. Silas Toole is an old and respected farmer of Whitechurch township, York county. A week ago he was visited at his farm by a couple of well-dressed city-looking men, who said they were nephews of Sir William Mulock, the postmaster-general, and M.P. for North York. They were looking around for farms for investment, and Toole's farm had so favorably impressed them that they were willing to pay $10,000 for it. A bargain was struck, and the young men said they would return in a few days to make the transfer. They asked that in the meantime Toole keep careful watch over a satchel they would leave with him containing the purchase money. Toole said he would, and after showing him what looked like a large roll of bills, they locked the bag and handed it over to him. Late the same day they called again, and said they had made a bargain to buy the farm of Joshua Wilson, near-by, for $5,000. They had not the price with them, however, and asked Toole to advance the money till they got back to city. The poor old man, thinking he had $10,000 of their money in keeping, actually went to Newmarket, drew out $5,000, and handed the money over to the rogues. Three days ago, hearing nothing from them, he opened the satchel left in his care, and found that he had been swindled out of a lifetime's savings. He came to city today and gave Inspector Stark a description of the men. It has as yet afforded no clue to their identity.

Votes $10,000 to Striking Coal Miners.

Toronto, Ont July 9.—At the Moulders Convention this morning a vote of $10,000 was passed for the striking coal miners, to be paid if President Mitchell decides to call for help from other labor bodies. Some of the Southern delegates raised the question of the color line, there being announced that later on they would present a resolution for the exclusion of colored men from the union in the Southern States. Objection was taken by a number of delegates from the north, but debate was postponed till the motion is presented.

CHEESE. Montreal, Wednesday evening.—The cheese market on spot is steady in tone at the decline, and while buyers have made clear their decision not to follow an advance from the present level, they have at the same time demonstrated their willingness to trade within the range quoted during the past two days. In fact a good volume of business is passing and the fact makes it evident that cheese is wanted on the other side and will continue to be provided it is not held unreasonably high. In the country today the bids made when contrasted with those of the corresponding days last week reflected an undertone of firmness in fact, and there were whispers about the streets today that a considerable short interest for first half of July shipment has been established.

BUTTER.

The butter market ruled fairly steady today at the decline, with a good business moving within the quotation appended. Traders who are inclined to the pessimistic side are disposed to make the fact that the Montreal stock at present is 50 per cent. greater than it was last year, a strong bear argument. Against this, however, it can with equal reason be held that the conditions governing the market make a larger supply absolutely necessary, because we are doing a larger butter business in England and the surplus of United States butter available for export is very small indeed. All things considered, therefore, the larger stocks are not so great a bear factor as some would represent them.

SHERBROOKE MUST HELP PAY.

Insurance Men Say Advance Has Been Made to Make up For Losses Elsewhere.

The Montreal Herald of Wednesday night says: "Assessment rather than astonishment characterizes the mental attitude of the leading fire insurance men in Montreal over the prospect that has been made in Sherbrooke over the advance in rates in that municipality."

"The people in Sherbrooke have during the past year, in common with fire insurance patrons all over the Dominion, been subjected to an increased premium. They feel that they are being called upon to make up the losses experienced by the insurance companies in other large centres."

"The principal agents in Montreal when seen by a Herald reporter this morning, did not deny that the surmise of the Sherbrooke people was well founded. The basic principle of all insurance, it was pointed out, is that the greater number must help to support the losses of the few."

"That is what has occurred in the present instance. Last year was an exceedingly severe one on all the fire insurance companies, both in Canada and the United States, several of the companies being as a consequence forced to go into liquidation."

"In order to make up the losses—to maintain the solvency of the remaining companies—a general advance in rates was ordered. No particular locality was singled out; all fared alike. Sherbrooke, not unlike other cities, had some properties that were greatly susceptible to fire; upon these an extra premium was exacted. But these were, both in Sherbrooke and in other cities, isolated instances."

"One of the agents told The Herald that a single year could not be taken as an adequate criterion of the losses involved. The Sherbrooke people maintain that the payments of insurance premiums on buildings is between $70,000 and $80,000, while last year the total loss was only something between $2,000 and $3,000. Local agents say that all this may be true, but that it would be utterly impossible for the companies to readjust the tariff every six months to suit the exigencies of some single locality."

The precise words of "Coming events cast their shadows before" occurred to Campbell in a dream. He awoke and found himself repeating them aloud and afterward used them in "Lochiel's Warning," a minor poem of much merit.

The Willing Worker.
"Why is it," asked a modest young breadwinner, "that when I stay at the office after hours to voluntarily do an extra amount of work somebody who is in charge pounces upon me as his justifiable victim and gives me still more to do?"

"That has happened to me time after time in my business, and at each repetition I have taken a vow that if I am ever in charge of an office I shall give any one of my subordinate who sits down and does work which isn't specifically required of him credit for what he does do and let it go at that, without adding insult to injury, as it were, by giving him something further to do."

"Of course it's an old saying that the man who does the most work is the man usually 'worked,' but it's discouraging, don't you think? Strangely enough, though, he goes ahead and lets himself be 'worked,' with only a weak objection to ease his feelings."

ARTIFICIAL ICE.
Principle Upon Which This Commodity is Manufactured.

The principle upon which the manufacture of ice is based is that a gas when compressed gathers heat enormously, and if robbed of this heat and allowed to escape at a future time it seeks to regain its heat by withdrawing heat from its surroundings. Ammonia gas is generally preferred to others because it can be liquefied with comparatively little pressure. On removing the water from common ammonia by distillation anhydrous ammonia is obtained. This is compressed by a combined steam pump and a compressor, and the resulting liquefaction induces heat, which is economized by circulating water about the vessel or pipe containing the liquefied ammonia. Thus the ammonia is cooled and the heat largely transferred to the water, which is then pumped back to the boiler that supplies the steam pump. The liquid ammonia is then carried in a pipe to expansion coils that afford plenty of room for its evaporation, when it begins to return to the gaseous form and to draw heat from its surroundings, which gradually reduces the temperature. Proper vessels of water are placed in contact with the expansion coils, and in due time ice is formed.

THE SAVIOUR'S BLOOD.
A Relic of the Crucifixion Preserved at Bruges.

Many cities profess to possess as a relic some of the blood of Christ, preserved from that which flowed from him during the crucifixion. St. Louis brought particles to Paris which he had received from the emperor of Constantinople. The Church of St. John Lateran, in Rome; the Imperial monastery at Weingarten, a church in Mantua and the Chapel of the Precious Blood, in Bruges, all put forward similar claims.

The precious blood at Bruges enjoys the widest fame and is reported to have been collected from the Saviour's wounds by Joseph of Arimathea and St. Nicodemus when they took down the body from the cross. It was brought to Bruges by Thierry of Alsace in 1147. He had received it from his brother-in-law, Baldwin, king of Jerusalem.

Nearly six centuries ago the extraordinary devotion paid to this relic at Bruges by the inhabitants and visitors had induced the ecclesiastical and civil authorities to institute a solemn procession in which it should be borne in the streets.

A confraternity of the precious blood, consisting of thirty members, with a provost and four chaplains, was established to guard it at all times. The procession takes place annually, and the blood, contained in a crystal cylinder and inclosed in its shrine, is carried about with much pomp and ceremony.

She Coaxed in Vain.
He was a popular young dentist, with a clientele among the smart women, one of whom had been protesting for an hour that he was killing her. But he kept steadily at work with a soothing word occasionally, and as he said, "That will do for today," he added, "Now, I didn't really hurt you, did I, Miss Y?"

"N-no," she admitted reluctantly, "but I always felt as if you were just going to."

"That is it," said he. "Now, there is one infallible sign for which a dentist always watches when he is working on a lady's teeth and which she gives involuntarily when she is hurt. She can't help giving it, and when I see it I always stop."

"Tell me what it is?" she inquired eagerly.

"We never tell," he replied, with an inscrutable smile.

"Why?"

"Because you would immediately try to counterfeit it."

"Dust Devils" of the Desert.
Travelers in the celebrated Death valley of California have described the wonderful contortions of the sand pillars that small whirlwinds sometimes send spinning across the hot plain. Even more remarkable are the "dust devils" seen by Mr. H. F. Witherby, the English explorer, in the valley of the White Nile. Sometimes two of these whirling columns, gyrating in opposite directions, meet, "and if they be well matched the collision stops them and a struggle ensues as to which way they shall twist. Gradually one gains the mastery, and the two combined begin to gyrate alike and then rush on together." Some of these whirls will strip the clothes from an Arab's back or twist a goat round and round like a top.

The Perfect Silence.
There is no sensation in the world like that which comes over you when walking through a grove of redwoods. Their great trunks rise hundreds of feet into the air and are lost in the dense roof of foliage like the columns of an Egyptian temple grown to superhuman height. On the ground there is no underbrush, but only ferns of a size and shape that suggest a prehistoric period and fallen trunks that have lain rotting for 3,000 years. There is no sunlight, and no birds sing. If a storm arises, it is an hour before a drop reaches the ground. Here all is as it was since creation, and there is no time. It is the perfect silence.

A Happy Thought.
"Yes, Jones struggled along with historic plays and melodramas, but they wouldn't take. Now he has a wonder, a record breaker."

"You don't say! What's the plot?"

"I don't know, but the play ends in the middle of the last act."

"The mid—say, what are you giving me?"

"Straight goods. The idea is to fool the people who always begin putting on their wraps before the curtain falls."

Different Kinds of Coats.
"I am sorry I kept you waiting so long, Harry, dear," murmured the wife as she entered ready for the theater.

"It took me so long to put on my coat."

"Did you put on only one coat?" he asked blandly.

She turned quickly and found his gaze resting on her cheeks.

She Drew the Line.
He—Won't you make up that quarrel, Miss Black, an' 'low me to escort 'o' home? Yo's too good a church member not to fo'gib dem what has offended 'o'."

She—I fo'gib dem, Mistah Johnson, but I doan' 'low dem to escort me home—Judge.

Her Hope.
He—When we get better acquainted, I shall call you by your first name.

She—All right. And I hope our acquaintance will reach the point where my friends can call me by your last name.

There are people who never give away any milk until after they skim it, and then they want credit for cream.

JINGLES AND JESTS.
A Slight Slip.
Take a little snow
And a little rain
And some sleet, you know,
Freeze with might and main.
Venture on the street
On the frozen sleet;
Slide, like all of us,
Break a rib and cuss!

Problem Solved.
Lady (seeking a cook)—You have good references, I suppose?
Applicant—No, ma'am. I haven't any at all, ma'am.
Lady—But I really do not like the idea of engaging a cook without references.
Applicant—Oh, that'll be all right, ma'am! You can pay me in advance!

Meeting the Demand.
Farmer Oatcake—Yep; I call my breed o' hens the Pierpont Morgan variety.
Mr. Askit—That's a funny name. Why?
Farmer Oatcake—Because they lay three eggs a day durin' Lent.

The Modern Miracle.
We marvelled once when in a night
The blackest hair was turned to white
On some poor nervous fellow,
But nowadays how many girls
In half a day change raven curls
To rich and golden yellow!

Theater Reform.
"Manager Joltum has a great scheme for bringing about a theater reform."
"What's that?"
"Yep; he will have the ushers pass around cards bearing the notice, 'All except baldheaded ladies will kindly remove their hats.'"

The Best of Reasons.
"Why do you bring me this?" thundered the weary editor, thrusting the manuscript back into the hands of the poet.
"Because," replied the bard timidly, "I have no stamp."

My Mothers.
Of all the things I'd rather be
Than what you are now, I declare
I really think—just let me see—
Ah, yes, I think I'd rather be
A little multimillionaire!

Observing Johnny.
Johnny (visiting)—Can't I have another biscuit?
Johnny's Ma—Why, Johnny, what an appetite you have!
Johnny—H'm! You're two ahead of me, ma.

Troublesome Witness.
Mother (angrily)—Did he dare to kiss you more than once?
Daughter (evasively)—Well, mamma, I know it wasn't less than once.

Saved From Perdition.
He'd formed the purpose dire
A suicide to die,
His pistol, though, missed fire,
And, therefore, so did he.

Where the Danger Lies.
They were looking down from the roof.
"Are you afraid of a fall?"
"Not if it isn't stopped too suddenly."

His Preference.
Miss Lippincott—Mistah Johnsing, does 'o' play de game of pingpong?
Mistah Johnsing—No; I devote all my spare time to craps.

Usually So.
All free advice may seem quite nice,
But if you'll think it o'er
You'll find it's worth about the price
You paid for it, or no more.

Still Obedient.
Gustave Dore was always a child, so far as his mother was concerned. He is not only loved, but obeyed, her, and when she died he said, with sad sincerity, that he no longer knew how to live. An incident which shows her influence over him as a grown man is connected with a little party given by him to show some of his friends an album of his own drawings.

At a dinner over which Mme. Dore presided a quarrel arose between Gustave and his brother Ernest. Suddenly Mme. Dore turned to the former and said, as though he were a boy of ten: "Hush, Gustave! I am ashamed of you."

Dore, who had worked himself, regardless of the presence of his guests, into a fierce passion, became at once calm and silent, and bowing to his mother, resumed his dinner.

But the incident did not end here. When the guests had retired to the great salon, the brothers disappeared, to return in a few minutes each holding a copy of the colossal album that was to be submitted to the company. Mme. Dore followed, smiling at her "little boys," who were none the less children because they had passed their fortieth year.

Notions About Sleep.
One of the rudest acts in the eyes of a native of the Philippine Islands is to step over a person asleep on the floor.

Sleeping is with them a very solemn matter. They are strongly averse to waking any one, the idea being that during sleep the soul is absent from the body and may not have time to return if slumber is suddenly broken.

If you call upon a native and are told he is asleep, you may as well depart. To get a servant to rouse you, you must give him the strictest of orders. Then at the time appointed he will stand by your side and call: "Senor! Senor!" repeatedly, each time more loudly than before, until you are half awake. Then he will return to the low note and again raise his voice gradually until you are fully conscious.

A Wasp's Nest.
The female wasp spends the winter in a torpid condition, and when spring arrives she hunts up some sort of sheltered spot appropriate for a nest. Having selected the retreat, she proceeds to lay within it the foundation of a home. For this object earth will not serve her turn. The substance of which the walls and chambers of the house are to be composed must be none other than the finest paper, made of wood pulp, mixed with a sort of sizing, worked to a paste and finely spread in sheets.

The Origin of Whist.

THE following statement, culled from the current number of a magazine, is an egregious blunder: "The originator of the game of whist (sic) Edmond Hoyle (1672-1769), Cotton writing in 1674 tells us that Whist was so well known at that time that 'every Child almost of Eight Years old, hath a Competent Knowledge of the recreation.' Hoyle was then two years of age. But we must go a great deal farther back for the origin of the game, which is indeed the origin of the obscurity of the centuries. Previous to 1526 the game of Triumph (whence trump), which embraced the essential features of Whist, had considerable vogue in England. It furnished Bishop Latimer with an illustration for a sermon preached at Christmas, 1529. Shakespeare's familiarity with the game is evident from Antony and Cleopatra, Act IV., Scene XXV. The game acquired the name of Whist, or Whisk, in the forefront of the seventeenth century. Butler uses the present appellation in Hudibras (1663). About 1728 a little circle of players, presided over by the then Lord Folkestone, was wont to meet in the Crown Coffee House. This was the inception of scientific Whist. Hoyle was probably a member of the coterie in question. The publication of his treatise (1742-3) and his efforts as a professional teacher first sought to establish the game in the favor of the upper classes of English society.

"What do you think of the movement for shorter honeymoons?" I asked my fellow-traveler, an experienced gentleman from Chicago. "That's right," he declared, without a pause. "Short honeymoons and more of them. That's my platform."—Ex.

Drainage

Sweat is the sewerage of the system. The foot soles are among its chief outlets, and shoe soles should be its scavenger.

Accumulated sweat is an irritant poison—a sort of caustic which gnaws the foot, and burns the leather.

The RESILIA is the only shoe having a drainage system to carry off foot moisture as created.

In it the perspiration passes down through the porous leather insole, to the cross channels or sewers beneath, where it is carried off and dried up by contact with the air.

This prevents the concentration of sweat, and with the ventilating device keeps the feet dry, clean, hardy and healthy.

Observe cross channels in centre-sole.

FOR SYSTEMIC CATARRH

Peculiar to Summer Pe-ru-na Gives Prompt and Permanent Relief.

Clem G. Moore, Editor of the Advocate-Democrat of Crawfordsville, Ga., writes the Peruna Medicine Company as follows: "Gentlemen—After four years of intense suffering, caused by systemic catarrh, which I contracted while editing, and traveling for my paper, I have been greatly relieved by the use of Peruna. I gave up work during these years because of torture, tried various remedies and many doctors, but all the permanent relief came from the use of Peruna. My trouble was called indigestion, but it was catarrh all through my system, and a few bottles of Peruna made me feel like another person, noting the improvement after I had used the first bottle. Peruna is undoubtedly the best catarrh remedy ever compounded."—CLEM G. MOORE.

Judge Wm. T. Zenor, of Washington, D.C., writes from 213 N. Capital Street, Washington, D.C.: "I take pleasure in saying that I can cheerfully recommend the use of Peruna as a remedy for catarrhal trouble and a most excellent tonic for general conditions."—Wm. T. Zenor.

Mrs. Amanda Morrill, 136 Reid street, Elizabeth, N.J., writes: "I have been sick over two years with nervous prostration and general debility, and heart trouble. I have had four doctors; all said that I could not get well. I had not walked a step in nine months, suffering with partial paralysis and palpitation of the heart every other day, and had become so reduced in flesh as to be a mere skeleton weighing only 85 pounds."

"Up to this date I have taken Peruna for seven months. It has saved my life as I can safely testify. I have not felt so well in five years, having walked over one mile without ill result, and have also gained thirty pounds since commencing to take Peruna. In fact, I cannot praise it too highly."—Mrs. Amanda Morrill.

Peruna never fails to prevent systemic catarrh or nervous prostration if taken in time. Peruna is the most prompt and permanent cure for all cases of nervous prostration caused by systemic catarrh known to the medical profession. If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis. Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.
