THE REBELLION SPREADS.

The Uprising in Southern China is Getting Worse—British Torpedo Boat Intercepts Advance of Two Thousand on San-Chun, Killing Many.

London, Oct. 17.—Hong Kong despatches tell of the continued spread of the southern rebellion.

The Hong Kong correspondent of the Daily Express sends a report that the British Torpedo boat destroyer Handy, shelled two thousand rebels who were advancing on San Chun, killing 40 and wounding hundreds.

There is no confirmation of the reported capture of Pao Ting Fu, of which, according to the Shanghai Echo, M. Dechine, the French consul there, has received news.

The report is generally discredited in London, especially as there is no direct telegraphic communication between Shanghai and Pao Ting Fu.

It is reported that the Empress Dowager has issued a decree removing Li Hun Wi, viceroy of Nankin, from his post and ordering Gen. Yung Lu to join her at Sian Fu.

The Shan Tung Boxers are returning to their homes.

Twelve thousand of them were utterly defeated outside of Tsang Chao, near the Chi Li border by 5,000 of Gov. Yun Chi Kai's troops under Gen. Mei.

Tien Tsin, Oct. 16, via Shanghaif Oct. 17.—The expedition against Pao Ting Fu has met with no opposition up to Oct. 14. Reports received by courier say that a column of 500 Frenchmen, marching to Hsien-Hsien to relieve a party of French priests, met with no opposition in the six days march to the south.

The fourth brigade of the British is now arriving.

The Americans have evacuated the arsenal which has been turned over to the provisional city government.

PENDING CAMPAIGN

Notes of the Contest From Various Parts of the Country

PREMIER IN TORONTO — SIR CHARLES AT DIGBY— PARTY CONVENTIONS IN STANSTEAD THIS WEEK.

Bedford, Que., October 17.—At the Liberal convention held here, Mr. D. B. Meigs, of Farnham, was nominated to contest the county of Missisquoi against Dr. Comeau, also of Farnham. The nomination caused no surprise, whatever, as the matter was to all intents and purposes settled beforehand. There was no other name mentioned at all prominently as a possible candidate.

NOMINATIONS IN STANSTEAD.

The Conservatives of Stanstead County will choose their standard bearer at Ayer's Flats, tomorrow (Thursday).

The Liberal delegates will meet at Ayer's Flats, on Friday, at 1 p.m., to select their candidate.

Several dates for the above conventions have been mentioned in the press, but Thursday (Conservative), and Friday (Liberal), are correct.

LAURIER IN TORONTO.

Toronto, October 17.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues opened their Ontario campaign in Toronto last night. The gathering was one of the largest of its kind held in Toronto in many years.

Such mottos as these were conspicuously displayed in the hall: "The British preference a link of Empire," "A new device I give unto you, union, peace, friendship, fraternity," "The choice is between Foster's deficits and Fielding's surpluses," "Don't stop the growing time."

A brass band (in khaki), a string orchestra and a male quartette which sang somewhat out of time kept the big audience in good humor till the arrival of the Premier and his party. The tricolor was prominent all over the hall, and the British flag was displayed from various arches.

The speakers were Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Richard Cartwright and Hon. Mr. Fielding.

The street parade before the meeting was a feature of the demonstration.

The students, some 2,000 in all, joined in the demonstration, irrespective of politics, with their college colors, flags and flambeaux. The procession started from the Rossin House, at 7.30 in six divisions. Sir Wilfrid, in his carriage, led, with six returned soldiers from South Africa, dressed in khaki, mounted on horseback, as a bodyguard. Sir Wilfrid was cheered loudly as the cavalcade moved off, and showers of rockets, of red, white and blue, were discharged as the first division passed the Liberal headquarters. A feature of the parade was the presence of a number of gaily decorated automobiles.

MR. H. H. COOK AGAIN.

Toronto, October 16.—Mr. H. H. Cook, ex-M.P., today addressed an open letter to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in which he reiterated his charges against the Government and invites the Premier to either deny or explain them away.

SIR CHARLES AT DIGBY.

Digby, N.S., October 17.—Sir Charles Tupper arrived here yesterday afternoon and was presented with an address by Mayor Shreve. A big Conservative rally was held last night and addressed by Sir Charles, Mayor Shreve and Dr. J. E. Jones, the nominee of the party.

NOTES OF THE CAMPAIGN.

The Conservatives have chosen Dr. Severin Lachapelle to oppose Mr. Madore in Hochelaga.

Dr. Cartier, ex-M.P., has been selected to run against Hon. Mr. Bernier in St. Hyacinthe.

George Wellings, a popular Single Taxer in East Toronto, will run as an independent candidate in East York.

Mr. Prefontaine, mayor of Montreal, has declined the candidature of Terrebonne, and will devote his whole time to Maisonneuve, where he is opposed by Ald. Ouimet.

Mr. A. E. Kemp, President of the Toronto Board of Trade, has consented to allow his name to go before the Conservative convention for East Toronto.

"Le Soleil" states that the Liberals of the Quebec section of the province will complete their organization for the Federal elections within a few days and that they will then have a candidate in every constituency in it.

The Conservative convention in Beauce has nominated Mr. Charles Bolduc, of St. Francis, Beauce, as the party candidate.

St. Martine, Que., Oct. 16.—At the Conservative convention held here Saturday, Archibald MacCormack, of Ormstown, was chosen as the candidate in the approaching elections. Mr. Bergeron was present.

The Liberal convention for Chateauguay will take place at St. Martine, at the County Court House, Tuesday, the 23rd October, at 10 a.m., for the selection of a candidate for the House of Commons.

The Sherbrooke Liberals have called a public meeting to be held in Pelletier's Hall tomorrow evening. Hon. Sydney Fisher and Hon. Chas. Langelier will be among the speakers.

COMPTON LIBERALS

GEORGE B. CLEVELAND, OF JOHNVILLE, THEIR CANDIDATE.

Bury, Oct. 17.—(Special.)—Compton County Liberals held their second convention here today for the purpose of chosing a candidate for the coming election.

Mr. George B. Cleveland, of Johnville, was the choice of the convention.

The many friends of Miss M. French will be glad to hear she is improving.

Miss S. E. Dennis entertained twenty-four of her friends last Saturday, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

SHERBROOKE BOY FOR CONGRESS.

We have at hand a copy of the "New Mexican Review," published at Santa Fee, containing an account of the nomination for Congress of Bernard S Rodey, by the Republican Convention. Mr. Rodey is an old Sherbrooke boy, leaving here for the West some twenty-five years ago. His old friends will rejoice at his success in the West and hope for his election. The selection of Mr. Rodey by the Republican party of New Mexico was unanimous. The "Mexican" says: "Mr. Rodey's appearance in the convention was the signal for the beginning of one of the most enthusiastic popular ovations ever tendered a public man in New Mexico. The delegates and hundreds of spectators present rose as one and voiced their sentiments in several rounds of deafening cheers. All the delegates waved flags and guidons and flags and handkerchiefs fluttered in all parts of the hall."

Mr. Rodey made an eloquent speech of acceptance, pledging his faithful service for the Republican party and the State of Mexico.

Rome, Oct. 17.—(Special.)—In a cablegram, Admiral Caldiani, commander of the Italian Asiatic Squadron, says the International squadrons contemplate taking drastic measures, should the occasion for so doing arise.

This means nothing less than the capture of the entire Chinese fleet.

After this is accomplished all the principle ports and towns along the coast will be occupied.

COMPLIMENTARY DINNER TO DR. N. A. DUSSAULT.

Quebec, October 17.—On the occasion of his approaching marriage a number of Dr. Dussault's friends entertained him at dinner on Saturday evening at the Chateau Frontenac, when a most pleasant time was spent, a feature of the evening being the presentation of a valuable cabinet of cutlery to this popular young man. Dr. Dussault has only been in this city for eighteen months and since his arrival here has made a large circle of friends who all join in wishing him and his young fiancee all the success they deserve.

The dinner, which was presided over by Hon. V. W. Larue, was prepared in the Chateau's best style and thoroughly enjoyed by those present.

TWO JOLLY COMPANIONS.

The performance of "Two Jolly Companions," by Gorman Bros., last night, at the rink opera house, was exceedingly well patronized, considering the inclement weather. In spite of the frigid atmospheric condition in the hall, everybody seemed to be highly entertained. J. G. Gorman as Larry Brannigan and Fred Wenzel as Jacob Lougenslonger, were in their element in Irish and German acts. Mr. Robert M. Edwards, who was in Sherbrooke last year with "For Her Sake" company, and Albert Hall as "hustlers not horses," were very popular. The feature of the performance was the many interesting specialties and musical numbers which were introduced. Of the vocal numbers those by Nedra Perry (and her pickannies) were best received. There was also some splendid dancing. The company goes from here to Valleyfield and from thence to Ottawa.

As tomorrow is Thanksgiving Day, and a national holiday, there will be no issue of the RECORD.

BARNSTON BOY'S BRAVERY.

Pte. W. J. Jay, of 5th Dragoons, a Volunteer for a Dangerous Service.

Private W. J. Jay, of the 5th Dragoons, and whose home is in Barnston, was one of a number of volunteers for a very hazardous special service in South Africa.

The incident will be recalled as one which excited much admiration at the time it was performed. The Vet River is about 80 yards wide and very deep and swift where the little party crossed to hold a body of Boers in check until the main body could land. Those who volunteered for the hazardous service with Lieut. Turner were: Pte. F. Berg, Montreal; Pte. R. Russell, East Angus; Pte. W. J. Reid, and Pte. R. Reid, of Holland Landing, Ont.; Pte. Rae, Montreal, and Pte. W. J. Jay, of the 5th Dragoons. Each man carried his rifle and 100 rounds of ammunition, when the crossing was made under a perfect hail of bullets, but not a man was hit. Not only the press correspondents, but even General Huttonf highly eulogized this exploit.

THE BOOK AGENT.

Studies Human Nature and Is Skilled In Diplomacy.

The book agent is a student of human nature. He attacks man at his weakest points. What is calculated to minister to a man's vanity more than to have a gentleman, well groomed and of pleasing address, approach and offer to sell him some literary production? The fact that the book agent is there presupposes that the man is a lover of literature, that he has leisure to read books and that he has money to spend for them. The joke about the book agent being unwelcome will have to be relegated along with the mother-in-law joke. The facts will not sustain it. The book agent approaches a man, presents himself and proceeds to business. "I am introducing a new work, Mr. Jones, something that I know you will appreciate." Is Jones going to throw a man out of the third story window who thinks he will appreciate a new book? Not much.

The agent continues: "Mr. Brown suggested that you might like to look it over. He takes a set in half morocco." The fact that Brown thinks it will interest him pleases Jones still more. He values Brown's opinion. He likes to have Brown think he appreciates good literature. Brown must also think he can afford it. He looks over the book, predisposed in its favor already. Then comes the objection that he cannot afford it. The book agent treats that excuse as a joke. His actions say: "I know you can afford it. Brown knows you can afford it." The book agent evidently believes that he is talking to a man of means, and Jones does not care to have him believe anything else. Perhaps the set of books sells for $80. He talks to Jones as if that were an insignificant sum, not worth hesitating about, although, if the truth were known, the book agent really thinks the $20 he will get as commission for making the sale is so large a sum that he can afford to lay off the rest of the day and go fishing.

Jones hesitates, the book agent drops his fountain pen, Jones picks it up and he is lost.

The agent folds up his prospectus and after assuring Jones he will never regret the purchase starts for the door. But a thought strikes him, and he comes back. "By the way, Mr. Jones, do you think of any of your friends who might like this work?"

TOO CHIVALROUS.

The Man Who Insisted on Giving Up His Seat In a Car.

The car was bowling merrily up the street, when a fat, elderly woman rose and signaled to the conductor. He rang the bell, and the woman proceeded to execute a masterly walk down the car.

Just as she had covered half the distance to the door an exceptional bit of playfulness on the part of the motorman gave a phenomenal corkscrew movement to the car and brought the woman's triumphal progress to a sudden halt. She stood swaying and tottering before a red cheeked, pleasant faced man who was absorbed in an evening paper.

As he paused in his reading to refold his paper he caught sight of the wabbling figure before him, and, wadding his paper into a hopeless mass, he sprang hastily to his feet.

"Take this seat, madam," he said.

"Oh, no, thank you," said the woman, reeling and clutching at a strap.

"But I insist."

"Really, sir, you are very kind, but"—

"I couldn't think of allowing a lady to stand."

"But I"—she begged feebly.

The man was losing his temper.

"Sit down," he said, still polite, but now stern.

"But, sir, I"—

He took her by the shoulders and firmly, though gently, put her in his vacant place. The other passengers laughed. The conductor grinned and rang the bell. The driver started the car, which had stopped at the crossing. The polite and masterful man expanded his chest and beamed self approval.

"But, please, sir, I wanted to get out. I'm in the wrong car!" wailed the fat woman in hopeless protest.

As the car stopped again she struggled to her feet and made for the door, looking apprehensively at the chivalrous man, who dived into his old seat and went into eclipse behind his paper.

An Impression.

An English writer, telling of a trip of an ocean steamer, said that out of 220 cabin passengers we had only one little girl on board, aged about 10. Of course we all made much of her. One day I was making a sketch from memory of Fastnet rock. My little friend was by me, and she asked:

"How can you sketch a thing that you do not see?"

"I remember it. I have an impression of it," I said.

"What is an impression?"

I explained by making an impression with the round end of the pencil on the back of the hand and then saying, "There is an impression, and one is also made by seeing—only in a different manner—on the mind or brain." With this explanation the little girl seemed to be satisfied. The next day I was talking with a bishop on board and said to him, "My little friend here can tell you what an impression is."

"And what is an impression?" he asked.

"Oh," said she, "it is just a round hole made on the back of your hand by pressing a pencil on it!"

Knew When He Had Enough.

A story is told of a citizen of Glasgow which shows that contentment is a virtue really existent in some cases. One of the inhabitants was making his way homeward on a certain evening and taking a good deal more than his share of the pavement when he encountered a Glasgow town councilman walking along in a respectable fashion. The councilman, noticing his unbalanced condition, stopped and shouted with wrathful dignity:

"What d'ye want?"

To this his fellow townsman blithely replied:

"I want naething. I'm as fu' 's I can haud."

PATON--GRUNDY.

A Fashionable Wedding in Sherbrooke Last Evening.

TOOK PLACE AT 6 O'CLOCK IN THE CHAPEL OF ST. PETER'S CHURCH.

The marriage of Miss Ethel Sabina Grundy, daughter of Mr. Frank Grundy, manager of the Quebec Central Railway, to Mr. William Edward Paton, took place last evening at 6.30 o'clock, in the chapel of St. Peter's church.

The ceremony was performed by the rector, the Rev. Dr. Dumbell, and a large number of friends were present. The little building was beautifully trimmed with potted plants, palms and flowers, a large marriage bell being suspended from the chandelier, with ropes of vines leading from it, while the windows were banked with flowers, and even the pews were decorated with huge bouquets.

The bride, who looked extremely pretty in an exquisite gown of white satin, chiffon and lace, with tulle veil and orange blossoms, entered the chapel upon the arm of her father, who gave her away. She carried white roses for her bouquet.

The bridesmaids, Miss Andrea Paton and Miss Eva White were dressed respectively in pale blue satin, covered with white lace, and white silk and chiffon. They wore black picture hats and carried bouquets of red roses.

Mr. M. J. Taylor, of Toronto, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. A. H. M. Simpson, Mr. M. A. Macfarlane, Mr. J. A. Lomas and Mr. F. W. White.

M. Harry Fletcher presided at the organ, and the music was remarkably fine and effective, a full choir singing the 128th Psalm and the bridal hymn, "Oh perfect love."

When the ceremony was concluded the wedding march pealed out, and the newly married couple came down the isle amid showers of blossoms, followed by the rest of the bridal party. The invited guests, who almost filled the chapel, went immediately to "Hillcrest," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grundy, where the reception was held, and an exquisite breakfast served. The table was decorated with white chrysanthemums and brilliant with lights, looking most attractive. The health of the bride and groom was proposed by the Rev. Dr. Dumbell, in a neat little speech, and was responded to by Mr. W. E. Paton.

The bride's going away gown was of dark blue cloth, coat and skirt, and a blue velvet toque to correspond, the costume being very becoming. The presents, of which there were a great number, were unusually handsome, the gift of the groom being a beautiful diamond ring.

Among the guests from out of town were Mrs. H. S. Holt and Master Holt, Mr. and Mrs. John Turnbull, from Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. George Cook, from Quebec, and Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Smith, from Compton.

Mr. and Mrs. Paton left for their wedding journey to Boston, New York and other cities of the United States in the private car of the manager of the B. & M., which had been placed at their disposal. Upon their return they will reside at "Simcoe Lodge" until their own house is ready for occupation.

CALL TO MONTREAL.

The many friends and pupils of Prof. O. Stewart Taylor will be glad to know that the fame of the Redemption concerts has extended to Montreal and already an urgent request has been made him to extend the work to that city, organize there and make a yearly festival on the lines of the one held in Maine. Should he decide to take hold of the work it would necessitate establishing himself in Montreal permanently, and this would make it a comparatively easy matter for those who have become so deeply interested in their musical work this summer to continue their studies with him. With the large population and great wealth of Montreal an organization of this kind would make itself felt through the entire Dominion.

The "Y's" will meet with Miss McDonald, Prospect St., Friday, at 4 o'clock.

For most all my life. I tried everything and doctored with a dozen doctors. Got no relief until I used Smith's North American Indian Rheumatic and Kidney Cure. After using three bottles, my rheumatism left me. I know other parties in my section who have used it, and all were cured by it.

I had the sciatic rheumatism for some years. I tried hot water, electricity and several doctors. All did me no good. At last I got some of the North American Indian Rheumatic and Kidney Cure. When I had finished 3 bottles my rheumatism all left me and I never had an attack of it since, now over three years. If I should ever be troubled with rheumatism again I should use the same remedy. I believe it to be a good cure.

Oct. 16.—The first severe storm of the season arrived this evening, and our balmy Indian summer like morning was succeeded by a thunder storm, and a rapid change of temperature, to which, however, we Canadians are too much accustomed to be surprised, we merely grumble, and say to ourselves, "This is nothing to what we shall have before long."

Mr. W. H. Dawson, of the Jenckes Machine Co., Sherbrooke, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Dawson.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Ozro Baldwin is suffering from an attack of typhoid fever.

An unknown party was slightly injured near McNally's Crossing, by the night express. He was carried into McNally's house, where it was found that his injuries were not serious, as he had had time to get almost clear of the track before the train came along. One boot was torn off, and he was somewhat bruised and thoroughly frightened.

There was an alarm of fire this afternoon for a slight blaze at Mr. Francis Laroche's house, but it did not amount to much and was extinguished without the aid of the fire engine.

DIXVILLE.

October 16.—Mr. Ozro Baldwin is quite sick.

Mr. A. H. Moore, M.P., of Magog, and Mr. T. T. Shurtleff, of Coaticook, were in town on Monday last.

The Rev. Albert and Mrs. Stevens were in town on Saturday last. They visited the Rev. G. H. A. Murray and Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Baldwin.

The election excitement is not very high in this part of the country just yet.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Baldwin are visiting Mr. and Mrs. M. K. Bolger at Quebec. They are expected home soon.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cleveland have returned from Richmond.

Mrs. Robert Gibson is reported very much worse this evening.

The bears were sadly lacking when the St. Cyr hunters sallied forth this morning, as also the dance and supper in the evening, which had to be postponed on account of unfavorable weather. However, according to reports, two deer were shot by the game seekers.

We are looking forward to the football match, St. Francis College vs. Danville Academy, which is to take place on the Fair grounds, Thanksgiving Day. Ball to be kicked off at 3 p.m.

J. H. Wynne, Esq., of the C. P. Co., has gone to East Angus for a few days.

There will be a meeting of the farmers of Central Brompton on Wednesday evening, at the home of Mr. D. Stuart, to take measures for the erection of a cheese and butter factory on the premises of Mr. Robt. Aitken. The location is admirable, it being central, close to the main road and an abundant supply of spring water easily available.

SOCIAL DUTY.

The doorbell rings,
The portal swings,
My lady comes a-calling,
In velvet dressed,
Her veil close pressed;
The formal talk's appalling.

The style, the day,
The church, the play—
Whatever line she fancies.
Ten minutes pass;
She says, "Alas,
Time flies!" and off she dances.

No real word said
From heart or head,
No thought to live in beauty.
Her list she checks;
What name's the next?
She's doing social duty.

THE SECOND LOVE.

"Some day, when I am gone," she used to say,
"You'll bring another here to take my place
And vow you never loved me anyway,
And she'll be young and have a pretty face,
And all that I, alas, have helped you save
Will only be for her enjoyment then,
And you will be her foolish, willing slave,
The unsuspecting jest of other men!"

He heard her doleful plaint and labored on.
She used to kiss their little one and sigh:
"What griefs will come to you when I am gone!
Ah, but for you I would not fear to die!
Poor little one, how can I leave you here
To be abused when I am gone above—
To hear your father call another 'Dear'
And see him give another all his love?"

* * * * * * *

A little mound is green upon the hill,
And thrice the winter's snows have drifted there
Above one who is lying cold and still,
Dumb to the petty griefs that people share.
Another has the key that opes his door;
All that he earned another shares today;
The child he worshiped misses him no more,
And there is much the gossips have to say.
—S. E. Kiser in Chicago Times-Herald.

The Man On the Bridge.

A Gritty Englishman In the "Woolly West."

I must say I felt considerably proud when the people of Amber made me city marshal. There was more in it than in prospecting, anyway, or, to put it plainly, there was as much wealth as I chose to gather in, with every prospect of a public funeral in case I happened to get shot. The trouble was where to draw the line, for if I just let things slide the boys would massacre each other until there was nothing left but the town site, and if I did my duty the first thing would have been to clap the whole population in jail or run them all out of the country. The main difficulty was about unlicensed or prohibited business; but if I had turned the law loose on every offender I should have closed up all saloons, gambling halls, restaurants, dance houses and theaters—in fact, the whole city of Amber. The usual thing was to blackmail everybody instead of running up jail expenses, but the question was where to draw the line. You see, if I didn't blackmail enough, people concluded I was useless, and if I assessed them too much they kicked like the bulls of Bashan. As Dan McPhail said once in the vigilance committee when I jacked him up for cumbering the sidewalk with packing cases to show what a stock of goods he had to "sacrifice:"

"This job requires tact."

Now in case there's any benighted pilgrim here who doesn't know Amber Gulch, I'd better explain that's it in the Bitterroot mountains of Idaho, between Dead Mule pass and the Northern Pacific railroad. Well, as I was saying, I was city marshal of Amber in the fall of '90, when an Englishman turned up from goodness knows where, dead broke.

"Look here," says he, "you're city marshal."

"I air."

"Well, look here," says he, "I'm broke. I've tramped here out of Washington territory, and my partner at Spokane Falls has stolen all my clothes except what I've got on."

"What made you come here, anyhow?" says I.

"Look here," says he; "I got stranded in the farming country, with winter coming on, and I'd have starved to death for all the work I could get. So I made for the nearest mining camp."

He had an old slouch hat, a shirt, overalls and a pair of boots; hadn't seen a square meal for months; looked me straight in the eyes, and what he said was true.

"Well," says I, "what do you want?"

He looked up the street, then down, collecting his thoughts, then at me straight.

"I've written three times to the Spokane police to ask them to recover my clothes. I got no answer. Now I want you to write."

"Go to that store," says I, pointing to Dan McPhail's, "rig yourself out and tell them to charge it to me."

He thanked me, turned his head away, wiped his eyes with one finger, then faced me again. "I'm not that kind of man. Will you write the letter?"

Of course I did. He had proved that even though he was only an alien Britisher he was straight goods, and I liked straight goods in any man. Moreover, I got his baggage from Spokane within the week.

Next thing I knew that young man—he was 24 or less—went to McPhail, said that he had earned $10 writing for newspapers and wanted to start trading.

"Where?"

"On the bridge."

Now, the Amber river runs down the side of the gulch with the town on the south and only the railroad depot against the cliffs on the north. The bridge is right at the foot of Main street, joining the town to the depot. There's only one sidewalk, so that the whole crowd to and from town has to go over on the right hand of the bridge. It's a wooden trestle business, and half way across, over the middle of the Amber river, there's an angle where the sidewalk bends round. The tenderfoot wanted to trade at that angle. McPhail represented the county, the city and the vigilance committee. He knew that the thing was plain against three different laws, and yet that Britisher was smart. He had chosen the best stand for business in Amber Gulch.

"You can't trade," said McPhail, "on the bridge."

"No," says the Englishman, "and I don't want to. Who does the air over the middle of the bridge belong to?"

"The Almighty," says McPhail. "If you want to trade there, you'll have to take out a license from heaven."

"Will you interfere?"

"No," says McPhail; "I guess not. I never interfere outside my jurisdiction."

"Thanks," said the Britisher.

Next day I found that Englishman on a plank which he had chucked across the angle of the bridge. Underneath was the river, raging among the big bowlders, all ice and spray. But mind! He didn't mind. He was hanging on in midair by the skin of his teeth peddling cigars across the hand rail.

"Have a smoke?" says he, and presented me with a cigar, then struck a match on the seat of his breeches and gave me a light. Pay for it? Not much! Why, the Britisher thought he was under an obligation to me. He met his obligations. Once I saw a man pay him a silver dollar that was in dispute, and the Britisher flung it at his face. Next time I passed the man on the bridge had two dry goods boxes for a counter, a trading license stuck up, a lot of apples, two kinds of cigars and some trinkets which didn't catch on. In three days he was full of grub, color in his face, a coat on his back and doing a roaring business.

After a week or so he began to build, and the beaver wasn't in it for cunning. On three bits of scantling across the angle he put a floor, walls, a roof, then a glass front along the hand rail with sliding sashes. He had a dog kennel door under the hand rail to crawl in by, a box stove to keep him warm and cook his meals on and enough floor space to roll out his blankets at night. In six weeks the man on the bridge was worth $150, doing a business at 100 per cent profit of $8 a day.

Then a crash came which burst all the banks and reduced our population to half. The crazy man on the bridge began to have a bad time. His trade went down to nothing, and instead of three square meals a day he began to fill up vacancies by eating his own stock—5 cents' worth of candy for breakfast and a smoke for dinner. Besides that, Long Shorty, one of our special brand of toughs, thought that the man on the bridge was having more than his share of prosperity. One morning, late in December, Long Shorty put two heavy timbers across the river behind the man on the bridge and began to build a house on them beams. He planked over his floor, set up his frame of scantling and began to fill in the walls, then went to the city council and told them that he intended, at his own expense, to lay down an extra sidewalk to cover the space over the river between the bridge and his new saloon.

Of course that meant sweeping away the man on the bridge, shanty and all, by permission of the city authorities, so I sent one of my deputy marshals to see how the Britisher felt.

"Oh, that's all right," says the man on the bridge. "Long Shorty rests one end of his bridge timbers on railroad land and the other end on private house property. If I get his timbers sawed off at both ends, the gentleman will have to swing his saloon with ropes."

"What from?"

"The clouds," says the Britisher, and gave my deputy a cigar.

Now, if that youngster had kicked up a fuss, and gone after Long Shorty with a gun, I'd have let them worry it out between themselves, but the man on the bridge, although only an alien and a tenderfoot with nothing to live on but his native grit, was the only law abiding inhabitant in my district. So I went to Dan McPhail and says I, "Dan, I guess I'm going to have my spring cleaning."

"Good gracious," says Dan, so we set to work making out a list of the proposed exiles, gamblers, bums, crooks, etc., who would never be missed from Amber, to the number of 25. We called a session of the vigilance committee, posted a guard around my little calaboose and ran in the gentlemen one by one, until we had a full house. Then we started the whole bunch—25 head—and herded them with stock whips and chunks of ice through the streets to the municipal boundary, where we turned them loose with a remark "that the world was all before them where to choose." One or two who objected we chucked into the river to cool off, but for the most part they went like lambs, including Long Shorty, who understood that I'd plug him full of holes if he ever showed his ugly mug in Amber Gulch.

Going back into town I interviewed the man on the bridge who had stuck up a crazy poster suggesting a necktie social or lynching bee, which was officious of him and might lead to harm.

"Take that down," said I, wondering if he'd thank me for running his enemy out of the country—but not a bit of it.

"All right," says the man on the bridge—curse his cheek! "I see that the people has risen in its might for vengeance on the evildoers. Where did you hide?"—London Black and White.

Disgusted.

In the "Personal RecoHections of Sutherland Edwards," English music critic, is an amusing story about Cruikshank, who had become a violent teetotaler in his old age. One day Cruikshank seized a man who was trying to pick his pocket and, not content with giving him in charge, administered to him a lecture on the evils of intemperance.

"I feel sure," he said, "that you have been demoralized and ruined by the love of drink. I, on the other hand, have not touched a drop of intoxicating liquor for the last 20 years."

"What!" cried the horrified prisoner. "I've let myself be took by a teetotaler? Why, if I'd known you was a water drinker I'd have knocked your bloomin head off!"

Black Coffee.

At the average family table black or after dinner coffee is simply the breakfast coffee served in small cups and handed around without cream. The object of a sip of clear coffee following a hearty meal is to provide a slight stimulant to the system, and for this purpose an infusion of the berry is better than a decoction. The French understand this, and in the simplest French home black coffee is perfectly made and offered after every dinner. The point to be insisted upon is that the water shall be boiling thoroughly at the time it is poured over the coffee.

Black coffee, too, must be made in a French coffeepot, or, at least, the principle of this utensil must be preserved and a filter provided through which the water may percolate over the ground coffee. It is not necessary, as often asserted, that to produce the perfect cup of black coffee the berry shall be finely ground; ordinary grinding will suffice, but boiling water is a sine qua non. Allow a tablespoonful of ground coffee to a cup and a pint of water to every four tablespoonfuls. Make it not more than five minutes before it is to be served.—New York Post.

A number of years ago, before he was famous, Theodore Roosevelt was asked how he pronounced his name when it was introduced in this country and what it meant. Here is his answer: "My name is pronounced Ro-sa-velt, the s with almost a z sound; introduced about 1629; Dutch; means field of roses."

Invigorating, Appetising WINE

Vin St-Michel has no peer

It is an old French wine, agreeable to the taste, rich and mellow to the palate, that contains natural ingredients which make it a powerful blood-making tonic wine, as well as a soothing beverage for the stomach. A wine glassfull of VIN ST MICHEL taken before each meal creates an appetite and makes the digestive organs act naturally and properly digest the food eaten, whether the stomach is in good order or not. Vin St-Michel assures a good digestion and a good digestion means a stronger nervous system, abundance of energy and capacity to enjoy the good things of life.
