SATURDAY MORNING AUGUST 25, 1860.

History of the Prince of Wales.

THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

His Royal Highness Albert Edward Prince of Wales, Duke of Saxony, Prince of Saxe Coburg Gotha, Duke of Cornwall and Rothsay, Earl of Chester, Carrick, and Dublin, Baron Renfrew, and Lord of the Isles, K,G., and Heir-Apparent to the throne ef England, was born at Buckingham Palace on the 9th of November, 1841.

The rank and position of His Royal Highness are thus explained in "Dod":—"The Prince of Wales has been at all times regarded as the first subject in the realm, the nearest to the throne, the most dignified of the Peers of Parliament, and though not exercising any political power beyond his vote as a legielator, yet regarded by all men as the most eminent personage in the State next after the sovereign; the Prince of Wales is the heir-apparent; the heir-presumptive may be brother, uncle, nephew, niece, or even a more distant relative of the sovereign; but the prospect which an hair-presumptive may possess of eventually succeeding to the throne gives him no place in the scale of precedency; the rank he holds is merely derived from consanguinity. But the station of the Prince of Wales is clearly and indisputably that of the first and highest of her Majesty's subjects."

It is obviously impossible, at the present time, to furnish anything worthy the name of a biography of the young Prince. The materials which, in future days, will be at hand to enable a biographer to write a history, are not yet to be found. The achievements of his manhood are yet to be enacted. At this time we can only congratulate the young Prince upon the wide field for good which it is his fortune to inherit; a field for which he has been most carefully prepared by wise training under the care of his royal mother. If the example of good and virtuous actions in a parent is to have its accustomed influence, and if the watchful culture of the better qualities of our nature yield but their average good, we may look for a worthy career in that of the Prince of Wales. That he may have a long, a happy, and a peaceful life, is the prayer of every English heart.

As already stated, the education of the Prince of Wales has been conducted under the care of her Majesty. In the languages, classics, natural philosophy, mathematics, jurisprudence, and other branches of study, his Royal Highness has been assisted by private tutors selected on account of their ability to convey instruction. It is understood that the Prince will continue his education by a course of study both at Cambridge and Oxford.

On the ninth of November 1858, the Prince having on that day completed his seventeenth year, was appointed Colonel in the army. The Gazette of the following Friday contained the subjoined announcement:—

"The Queen taking into her royal consideration that his Royal Highness Albert Edward Prince of Wales, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter and, by virtue of the statutes of the said Order, a constituent member thereof, has not as yet assumed the stall assigned to the Prince of Wales in the Royal Chapel of St. George at Windsor and having as sovereign of the said order, the inherent right of dispensing with all statutes, and regulations in regard to installation, her, Majesty has been pleased, by letters patent under her Royal sign and manual and the Great seal of the order, bearing date this day to give and grant unto his Royal Highness Albert Edward Prince of Wales, full power and authority to wear and use the star, and also to wear and use the collar and all other ornaments belonging to the said most noble Order, and to sit in the stall assigned to the Prince of Wales, in our Royal Chapel of St. George, at Windsor, and to exercise all rights and privileges belonging to a Knight Companion of the said most noble Order, in as full and ample manner as if His Royal Highness had been formally installed; any decree, rule, or usage, to the contrary notwithstanding."

Having thus fairly entered upon the duties of manhood, His Royal Highness determined upon pursuing his studies, for a time at least, at Rome. Accordingly, after a brief visit to his illustrious sister at Berlin, the Princess Frederick William of Prussia, he proceeded on his journey to Italy. On his way he performed the first public act of his life, by presenting colors to the Hundredth, or Prince of Wales' Royal Canadian Regiment of Foot, then stationed at Shorncliffe, near Folkestone. His Royal Highness took occasion to make the following appropriate speech to the assembled officers and men:

"Lord Melville, Colonel de Rottenberg, and officers and soldiers of the Hundredth Regiment: It is most gratifying to me that, by the Queen's gracious permission, my first public act since I have had the honor of holding a commission in the British army should be the presentation of colors to a Regiment which is the spontaneous offering of the loyal and spirited Canadian people, and with which, at their desire, my name has been specially associated. The ceremonial in which we are now engaged possesses a peculiar significence and solemnity, because in confiding to you for the first time this emblem of military fidelity and valour I not only recognize emphatically your enrollment into our national force, but celebrate an act which proclaims and strengthens the unity of the various parts of this vast empire under the sway of our common Sovereign. Although, owing to my youth and inexperience, I can but very imperfectly give expression to the sentiments which this occasion is calculated to awaken with reference to yourselves and to the great and flourishing Province of Canada, you may rest assured that I shall ever watch the progress and achievements of your gallant corps with deep interest, and that I heartily wish you all honour and success in the prosecution of the noble career on which you have entered.

The Prince arrived in the Eternal City in the latter part of January, 1859, and having spent some time in exploring ancient and modern Rome, proceded quietly to his studies. Before doing so he paid a visit to the Pope. His appearance at the Vatican is worthy of note, inasmuch as a prince of the blood royal of England had not made a simillar visit for some centuries. Agreeably to the expressed wish of her Majesty the reception was conducted with little ceremony His Holiness rose on the entry of the Prince, and coming forward to the door of the apartment to meet him, conducted him in the most affable manner to a seat, and entered into conversation with him in French. Colonel Bruce was the only other person present at the interview, which was brief, and limited to complimentary expressions and subjects of local interest, but perfectly satisfactory to all parties. On the Prince rising to take his leave, the Pope conducted him again to the door with the same warmth of manner which he had testified on receiving him. The stay of his Royal Highness in Rome being interrupted by the outbreak of the war in Italy, he travelled to Gibraltar, and from thence to Spain and Portugal. He returned to England on June 25, 1859. His subsequent departure and arrival in this country need not be reconuted here.

The Voyage to Quebec.

QUEBEC, August 17.

The Prince of Wales Squadron, consisting of the Hero, 91 guns, Commodore, perhaps the finest line-of-battle Ship of her class; the Ariadine, Capt. Vansittart, 26 guns, one of the fastest, most heavily armed, and altogether finest of British Frigates; and the Flying Fish, Capt. Hope, 6 guns, [Screw Steam Sloop,] left Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, last Saturday afternoon, passing cautiously through the Straits of Northumberland during the night, and steaming at full speed across a portion of the Gulf of the St. Lawrence the next morning, keeping in line the whole distance.

The fleet sighted the shores of Canada on Sunday 12th instant, at noon. It was drawing towards evening as the vessels passed between Bonaventure Island and Cape; and the magnificent scenery shewed on that account to perhaps greater advantage. The day was fine, and the sea so calm that we could hardly hear the surf. Either upon the above named precipitous Island, which lay within Rifle shot on the right, or upon Perce Island situated at about the same distance, on the left and well so named from the caverns of the sea, has tunnelled through it or upon the mainland, the ships course was skirting the features of the continent, there are very remarkable. In some places the green fields studded with white cottages, reach a considerable distance from the Beach towards a mountain which rises to the attitude of 1200 feet and more, while in others instead of gentle slopes, 2 rugged picturesque cliffs present their bold point directly to the waves.

Nor did the inhabitants of the coast forget their duty, every now and then a flash and a volume of white smoke was distinctly visible from the ships. While in a few seconds the boom would be heard, which made one certain that cannon of greater or less size were being fired as a salute. After passing this Gibraltar like scene and crossing Malbair the Squadron entered Gaspe Bay at sunset. The reds and yellows of the sky contrasted beautifully with the indistinct greens of the shore, and the hazy blues of the distant hills. Here the Lady Head and Victoria; the latter with the Governor General on board, met and dipped their ensigns to the Prince's fleet, after which the whole five vessels dropped their anchors for the night in the land-locked harbour. "Is the Governor General on board?' sang out from the Hero. "He is on board!" was the answer from the Victoria; but no furthor intercourse took place that evening.

It is understood that the Governor General chose the Gaspe Basin in which to meet the Prince as being surrounded by natural beauties, and that His Royal Highness' first impression of Canada should be favorable.

Monday, August 13.

At half-past eight o'clock, the Governor General and one of his aides-de-camp left the Victoria under a royal salute from that vessel, went on board the Hero, and the five steamers then proceeded into Gaspe Basin. As they were opposite the south-west arm, where are the fishing village and the house of Mr. Leboutillier, from whose grounds a salute being fired, a rather untoward accident occurred. A spit runs out there some distance from the shore and on the end of it the Hero grounded. The Lady Head dashed across to see what assistance could be rendered but the line of battle-ship prefered receiving help from her consorts only, so the Flying Fish was summoned to carry out an anchor into deep water, and after some delay a hawser was sent on board the Ariadne. The latter vessel then shot ahead, and the jerk—though it broke the cable—luckily got the Hero off.

Several boats had meanwhile put out from the shore with the Sheriff and other officials, bringing an address to his Royal Highness, and a request that the Free Port there to be established might be called Port Albert. The Prince stated in reply that he felt grateful for their kind wishes, but the change of the name depended on the local authorities. It is understood, however, that it will be made under the authority of the Government. Then the Canadian Ministers went on board the Prince's ship and were presented. By this time it was one o'clock, and the squadron steamed slowly towards the open gulf again. On the way out the Governor and the Ministers returned to the Victoria.

Cape Gaspe was rounded at a quarter to 4 by the whole fleet, the Canadian steamers leading the way, shortly after Cape Rosier and its light-house was seen, but then a thick fog came on and the vessels lost sight of each other and the island. When it lifted, in a couple of hours, no ship was visible from the Ariadne, in which the writer was; and as it was supposed that the Hero had gone ahead, full steam was put on and guns were fired every half hour.

At ten o'clock some rockets were sent up, and blue lights burned on the top mast yard arm, which were answered from the Hero in the direction anticipated, and the ships again joined.

The next morning, Thursday, the vessels crept along the shore close under the Stannes mountains, near enough to perceive distinctly their features, and to see the long street of houses which stretches all along the South shore continuously—the Hero leading, Aridne next, and the Flying Fish third. At noon the bearings of the Ariadne heated, and the white metal melted, so she had to make a new one. It was nearly 10 o'cleck at night before she again got under steam, having meanwhile tacked once or twice across the estuary, only just holding her own against wind and current. She passed Fatner Point at full speed at two o'clock in the morning, which is why the telegraph boat was not sent out—and found the rest of the fleet at half-past 8 o'clock, waiting at the mouth of the Saguenay.

As soon as she was observed by them, the Hero made for the entrance to that river, In a few moments, however, she was seen to strike sharply on Bar Reef, and as the tide had not quite run out her bows were soon so much out of water as to make her cant over slightly.—The Ariadne, at once, went to her assistance, but before it could be rendered, she had moved her guns aft, and the rising tide floated her off, very little damaged. The Prince then went on board the Victoria, which had joined them during the night, and, preceded by the Prince's little steamer, Tadousac, went up the Saguenay. The fleet, discouraged by the Hero's grounding, remained outside.

The day was very showery and cold, and the tourists suited themselves to the exigencies of the weather—the Prince wearing a pot hat and the roughest of clothes. The Governor General, Ministers, and the rest of the party, waterproofs of the same kind.

The Victoria went 45 miles up the river past Cape Eternité, and as the weather was unpropitious, her passengers sought consolation in cigars or refreshments. They all admired the scenery exceedingly, and perhaps the rain clouds added much to its usual wildness and grandeur.

Coming down they put on full speed, and reached the Hero at about nightfall. Among other things to wonder at, they saw the Magnet, one of the Lake steamers, whose two tiers of cabins above deck were a novel sight to most of them.

The next day (Thursday) was cold, but sunny, and the Prince again went up the river in the Victoria, and was landed about 15 miles from its mouth on the Ste. Marguerite. There tents had been built by Mr. Blackwell, the lessee of the river, and fishing tackle provided. The party, consisting of the same persons as were on the steamer the day before, engaged in fishing and shooting. The Prince had no luck Lord Mulgrave and some others caught a few trout. All enjoyed themselves. In the afternoon, after lunch, the whole party ascended the Ste. Marguerite with the tide, in birch canoes, the Prince, paddled by two French Canadians, leading the van.

The Flying Fish, with the greater part of the officers of the squadron, also went up the Saguenay a long distance; and, as they passed the tents where the Royal standard was flying, they fired a Royal salute of 21 guns. The echoes among the rocks close at hand and from the more distant hills were strikingly sublime, and much delighted the Royal party.

Among the incidents of this day were the introduction by His Excellency the Duke of Newcastle, and the presentation to the Prince by him, of Mr. Geo. MacBeth, who had come down to urge the acceptance by His Royal Highness of an invitation to a Ball in London. Mr. MacBeth was most courteously received by the whole party, and H R. H. was at once pleased to signify his acceptance. The Prince enjoys dancing much, and an invitation to a Ball is, therefore, perhaps the most acceptable compliment of the kind that can be paid him.

This may be the proper place to state, that the Prince appears on all state occasions in a uniform of a Colonel in the army, but not as Colonel of the 100th or Canadian Regiment as generally imagined—wearing the orders of the Garter and the Bath.

His complete suite consists of the Duke of Newcastle, Colonial Secretary; Earl of St. Germains, Lord Steward of the Household; Major-General Bruce, Governor of H.R.H.; Major Teesdale, R.A, and Captain Grey, Grenadier Guards, Equerries, and Dr. Acland, Regius professor of medicine, and Medical Attendant. With the Duke travels Mr. Englehart, his private Secretary. Accompanying the Prince are also, His Excellency, the Earl of Mulgrave, Lieut.-Governor of Nova Scotia and Aid-de-camp, Capt. Stapleton, Grenadier Guards. Several other gentlemen accompany the party, but not in any official capacity, besides there are six or seven servants and a courier.

The Prince has frequently expressed himself delighted, not merely with the heartiness of the reception he has met with from the inhabitans of the Lower Province, but with the good taste displayed in most of their arrangements. Chiefly, however, he has been surprised by the evidences of civilization and national prosperity.

His Royal Highness by no means confines his observations to the ceremonials laid down in the official programmes or his physical exercise to the prescribed plans. He takes frequent opportunities of conversing with those who have the honour of being presented to him, and often proceeds into the country in plain clothes on a tour of inspection. He has invariably charmed those with whom he has conversed, and shown himself possessed of discrimination and an excellent education. He rides well, dances gracefully, and seems passionately fond of music. His manner, in public, is courteous; in private, animated.

THE PRINCE AT QUEBEC.

We received late on Saturday evening the following detailed telegraphic account of the Prince's reception at Quebec:—

Quebec, August 18.

This, Saturday, morning broke very inauspiciously. The skies were lowering, and at length it rained heavily. The streets became muddy, and the spruce trees planted all along the side walks becoming wet, walking was disagreeable. Just as at St. Johns and at Halifax, so here in Quebec the weather seemed made on purpose to vex the would be sight-seers. But, with the same good luck with which His Royal mother invariably meets, the Prince was favored in the afternoon—the time fixed for his actual landing—for the clouds rose higher, the breeze freshened and the sun almost shone out. At 3 o'clock the Hero, Ariadne and Flying Fish came round Point Levi, and their appearance was the signal for a general salute from the Nile and Valorous in the harbour, and from the citadel and other batteries on shore. The scene then presented was very magnificent. Three fine ships of war were steaming up under one of the strongest fortresses of the world. Clouds of smoke were not only half enveloping the men of war but capping the lofty steeps which frown down upon the water. The citadel, the cavalier and grand batteries, Durham Terrace, and the roofs of all the houses facing the St. Lawrence were black with the multitudes of people. The yards of all the ships were manned by tars to be numbered by the thousand.

The wharves were covered with people, the river was alive with steamboats of all sizes—which as well as the men-of-war and every prominent point on shore—were gaily dressed with many colored flags.

A baloon or two were floating in the air, and when an hour afterwards H. R. H. landed, a similar scene was visible, but, first, the preparation for his reception must be written off.

On the Champlain Market wharf, and immediately opposite the fine new market building, a grand stand had been erected, capable of accommodating over a thousand. This was filled chiefly by ladies. In front of this and immediately opposite the landing stairs, from which a crimson carpet led to it, was a pavillion under which about 50 people could conveniently stand. Its floor was slightly raised, its pillars draped with flags, its roof composed of green spruce boughs, and surmounted with various gonfalons and the royal standard. This was the central point of the whole display. To this pavillion, just before the landing of the Prince, came first the Mayor of Quebec attired in silken robes, leading his council in full dress, and attended by his clerk and other civic officers.

Then came the Cabinet Ministers of Canada in their new uniform, with swords, black cocked hats, black coats and trowsers, set off with heavy gold lace, collars, cuffs, stripes, and other trimmings. This the third-class civil service uniform of the British empire becomes them well.

Next came the Anglican Bishop Mountain, of Quebec, with his Chaplain, Secretary, and some of his other clergy, with their gowns. Then the Roman Catholic hierarchy appeared in their robes.

The Archbishop being unwell, the administrator of this diocese. Mgr. Baillargeon, Bishop of Tloa, came in front, and with him Mgrs. Bourget of Montreal; Guignes of Ottawa, Larocque of St. Hyacinthe; Horen of Kingston; Pinsonneault of Sandwich; Farrell of Hamilton; Lynch of Toronto; Cook of Three Rivers. They were all dressed in Episcopal purple soutanes and Roman cloaks, and wore heavy gold Crucifixes and other symbols of their position; and then came the Superiors of the Seminaries of Montreal and Quebec, and several of their Clergy.

Then came the Governor General, Sir E. Head, who drove down in his carriage with servants in full livery, &c., and a brilliant staff. Next came the Adjutant General DeSalaberry, Gen. Williams, Commander of the Forces; Earl of Mulgrave, Lieut.-Governor of Nova Scotia, each with several officers about them. Last almost of all came Lord Lyons, in the same costume as the Canadian ministers, and two of his secretaries somewhat similarily dressed. A number of Members of Parliament and private citizens, as well as members of the Press, completed the list.

Precisely at 4 o'clock, the Prince's standard being lowered from the masthead of the Hero, told the multitude that H. R. H. was leaving for the shore, and presently his barge was impelled towards the land, while the salutes from all the ships and land batteries were again renewed and all the church bells were set violently a ringing.

His Excellency, Ministers and the Corporation went to meet H. R. H, and he soon stepped lightly ashore and advanced to the appointed place under the cupola. There the Mayor stood in front of him, Sir E. Head at his right, his Equerries with their hats on, immediately behind, and right and left from them Earl St. Germains, Duke of Newcastle, Colonel Bruce, Admiral Milne, and the Ministers of the Crown in this Colony. A small circle then formed itself around, while the Mayor read the address to the Prince—first in French and then in English, the English version being as follows:—

May it please your Royal Highness:—The Mayor, Councillors and Citizens of Quebec are happy in being the first among the Canadian subjects of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen to present their respectful homage to your Royal Highness. They will long continue to regard as a memorable epoch the day on which they have been permitted to receive within the walls of their city, this visit from the eldest son of their beloved Sovereign, the heir-apparent of the British crown. When we became aware that Her Majesty, finding it inconvenient or impracticable to proceed to so great a distance from the central seat of the Government, had deigned to testify the regard which Her Majesty entertains toward her Canadian subjects, by sending our future Sovereign in her stead; we felt grateful and proud in receiving such a mark of distinction from her, whose public and private virtue commands the admiration of the whole world.—We feel assured that our most Gracious Queen was desirous to show by the act of condescension that she knows how to appreciate and honour in an especial manner, the most important of her Colonial possessions. In this Province your Royal Highness will find a free people, faithful and loyal, attached to their Sovereign and to their country. In this the most ancient City of Canada your Royal Highness will be in the midst of a population devoted to your interests, testifying by the heartiness of their acclamations and good wishes, that though they derive their origin from various races, and may differ in language and in religious demonstrations, yet they have but one voice and one heart in expressing their loyalty to their Sovereign, and in welcoming him who represents her on this occasion, and who is one day destined—according to the naural order of events—to become her successor. The people of Quebec rejoice in beholding your R. Highness in the midst of them. They are happy, because they have the opportunity of expressing in a direct manner, their respects and attachment. Happy, because he who will hereafter in all human probability, wear the crown of this great empire, will be enabled during his brief sojourn in Canada, to judge for himself of the loyalty of the whole Canadian people in general, and of the citizens of Quebec in particular. Your Royal Highness will also have the opportunity of forming an adequate opinion of the extent of the country, its productions, resources, its progress and the great future reserved for it; and will be enabled to perceive that Canada with a population of three millions inhabitants, though only an appendage of the United Kingdom, possesses institutions as free, and a territory three times as extensive. In conclusion, we entreat your Royal Highness favorably to accept for our most Gracious Sovereign and yourself, along with our loyal and respectful homage, the assurance of our sincere attachment, with the most fervent wish that this visit to Canada may prove as gratifying and agreeable to yourself as it is to the citizens of Quebec.

Hector Langevin, Mayor.

This finished, the Prince received the parchment originals and handed them to the Duke of Newcastle, from whom he received the reply, which he read in his usual clear and deliberate manner, emphasizing all the leading words:—

Gentlemen,—It is with no ordinary feelings of gratification and interest in all around me that I find myself for the first time on the shores of Canada, and within the presence of this, its most ancient city. I am deeply touched by the cordiality with which I have been welcomed by the inhabitants. For the address which you have just presented to me, I beg you to accept the hearty thanks which in the name of the Queen I offer to you. Be assured that Her Majesty will receive with no little satisfaction, the account of my reception amongst you, proving as it does, that her feeling towards this people are met on their part in the most devoted and loyal attachment to herself, her throne and her family. Still more will she rejoice to learn from your own lips that all differences ot origin, language and religion, are lost in one universal spirit of patriotism; and that all classes are knit to each other and to the mother country by the common ties of equal liberty and free institutions. For myself, I will only add that I shall ever take a deep concern in all that tends to promote the prosperity of this beautiful and interesting city.

THE ENTRANCE OF THE PRINCE OF WALES TO THE CITY.

Yesterday, H. R. H. having remained at anchor in the river during the night, arrived at the Bonsecours Pier in accordance with the programme. Upon his reaching the wharf he was received by the Mayor and members of the Corporation who were waiting his coming.

From an early hour thousands of spectators began to throng the wharf, till every available point whence a tolerable view of the river could be obtained was crowded to excess. Presently the steamer Terrebonne, laden with passengers, came up the river and took up her position among the many others there present. Next the Rifle Band with the Guard of Honour, came on the ground a little before nine o'clock. The rain, which had been heavy early in the morning, had entirely ceased, and the clearing of the sky greatly tended to increase the prevalent cheerfulness. The beautiful Pavilion was quite finished; an elevated platform covered with scarlet cloth, with five steps leading up to it, was on the right hand side, with two columns on each side; and on a small dais on the platform was placed the Royal Chair. The platform was simply decorated at the sides and rear with fine pine boughs. At nine o'clock precisely, His Worship the Mayor made his appearance clad in the showy new robes and official hat lately brought from England for this occasion. The City Clerk was also present in official dress. His Worship seemed by no means at home in his robes, and twice tripped in their skirts.

The Anglican and R. C. Bishops, the body of the clergy, the City Council in full dress, and others who were about to take part in the procession, were soon all in or about the pavilion.

At 12 minutes past 9, the Kingston having advanced almost opposite the lower end of St. Helen's Island, a Royal Salute of 21 guns was fired from the battery on the Island. The enthusiasm of the crowd was now vastly increased, and viewed from the pavillion, the wharf, Bonsecours market and adjacent buildings presented a rare spectacle. The market was decorated on a large scale by a long line of flags stretching from the dome to each wing.

THE LANDING.

At 20 minutes past 9, the Royal standard came full in sight, the steamer being as yet obscured by the intervening barges, &c. another minute, however, the Kingston itself, with the Royal standard floating from the mast head, swung round opposite the steps, amid hearty and prolonged cheers from the wharf and adjacent vessels. Standing in a conspicuous position in the fore part of the vessel were, first Gen. Williams, next the Duke of Newcastle, then the Prince in his Colonel's uniform that he has worn throughout his visit, and then Admiral Milne in Naval uniform. Three more enthusiastic cheers were given. The Kingston presented a very neat and finished appearance, having painted on each side an elegant Prince of Wales' plume.

At the landing steps, the Mayor and Montreal officials were in readiness to receive H.R.H. Considerable difficulty, however, was experienced in bringing the steamer alongside. Meantime, the vast multitude watched the manœuvring with breathless interest, and the curiosity of all to obtain a good view of the Prince seemed to be at last gratified. At this moment, the steamer "Ida" came up the river, and the circumstance was observed by many with gratification, that just while the Royal steamer was coming alongside, the sun struggled through the clouds, and a glimpse of the blue sky was for the first time obtained.

The wind was blowing toward the shore, but somehow or other the Kingston could not be brought to the right point, and the landing steps had to be removed some yards further down. The strip of scarlet cloth which had been laid from the landing steps to the dais had also to be removed, and suited to the new landing steps. All this was done on the spot with an axe wielded, apparently by an amateur, whose exertions seemed greatly to amuse the Prince.

Just as the Prince, accompanied by the Duke of Newcastle, General Williams, and others, stepped on shore, the Band struck up, and another royal salute of 21 guns was fired in quick succession by each of the Royal Squadron in the harbour. The Royal procession advanced to the platform, where, without loss of time, the whole assembly being uncovered and and standing, the Mayor began to read the address given below, first in English and then in French, the City Clerk standing behind.—It is only necessary to say of this part of the ceremony that his Worship was not behindhand on this important occasion. Indeed, his handsome robes and exuberant address had previously attracted considerable attention from the correspondents of American papers, and other strangers present. Immediately in front of the dais were stationed the City Council, Clergy, and Volunteer Officers.

TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES, ON THE OCCASION OF HIS VISITING MONTREAL.

May it please Your Royal Highness,—

We, the Mayor, Aldermen and Citizens of the City of Montreal, most respectfully beg leave to approach Your Royal Highness, to felicitate you, on behalf of the Citizens of Montreal, on your safe arrival in this Province; and to offer to Your Royal Highness our most cordial and hearty welcome to this city.

We avail ourselves of this propitious occasion, of a visit from the Heir Apparent of the British throne, to express to your Royal Highness our devoted loyalty and attachment to the person and Government of our most Gracious Sovereign, your illustrious Mother; to declare our humble but fervent admiration of her wisdom, moderation and justice, as our Sovereign, and our love and veneration of the virtues and graces which adorn her private life.

As circumstances did not permit our beloved Queen to honour this distant but important section of Her Empire with a personal visit, Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to confer on her faithful Canadian subjects, the next dearest boon it was in her power to bestow, by authorizing this most welcome visit of your Royal Highness. This gracious manifestation of Her Majesty's consideration and regard is hailed with thankfulness and joy by all Her loyal and devoted subjects in these Provinces; but we beg most respectfully to assure your Royal Highness, that by none amongst the millions who compose their number, is it more highly esteemed, more fully appreciated, or more enthusiastically felt and acknowledged, than by Her Majesty's devoted and loyal subjects, the Citizens of Montreal.

The immediate object of your Royal Highness' most gratifying visit to Canada is to open the Victoria Bridge—that magnificent monument of enterprise and skill—with which the fame and prosperity of this City will evermore be most intimately connected—most permanently identified. In this stupenduous work, your Royal Highness will not fail to observe how natural obstacles, almost insurmountable in their ponderous strength and complicated variety, have been triumphantly overcome by the combined power of British enterprise and capital, and of Canadian energy and skill. And we beg to assure your Royal Highness that this wonderful achievement of engineering and mechanical perfection will henceforth possess a new claim on our interests and regards, associated as it must evermore be in our memories and affections with this auspicious visit of your Royal Highness, and the interesting ceremony of its perfect consummation by your Royal Highness' hands.

We earnestly hope your Royal Highness' visit to this City will be one of unmixed satisfaction and delight; and we pledge ourselves for the Citizens of Montreal, that they will one and all, esteem it the highest gratification and honour, to use every means in their power, to render your too short a stay amongst them, agreeable, happy, and comfortable.

We pray that your Royal Highness will be pleased to communicate to our most gracious Queen, your Royal and beloved Mother, our feelings of ardent loyalty and devotion to Her Royal person and crown; and our lively gratitude and acknowledgements for this last gracious evidence of Her Royal condescension and favour—your Royal Highness' most welcome and grateful visit to this City and Province.

To which H. R. H. was pleased to reply as follows:—

Gentlemen,—The Address you have just presented to me, in which you proclaim your loyalty to the Queen and attachment to the British Crown demands my warmest acknowledgments.

The impression made upon me by the kind and cordial reception which has been accorded to me on this first visit to Canada can never fade from my mind;—and deeply will the Queen be gratified by the proof which it affords that the interest which she takes in the welfare of this portion of Her Empire, and which she has been anxious to mark by my presence amongst you, is met in their part by feelings of affectionate devotion to herself and her family.

For myself I rejoice at the opportunity which has been afforded me of visiting this City—a great emporium of the trade of Canada—and whose growing prosperity offers so striking an example of what may be effected by energy and enterprize under the influence of free institutions.

That this prosperity may be still further enlarged is my earnest hope, and there can be little doubt that by the completion of that stupendous monument of engineering skill and labor which I have come in the name of the Queen to inaugurate, new sources of wealth will be opened to your citizens and to the country; new elements of power developed, and new links forged to bind together in peaceful co-operation the exertions of a wide-spread and rapidly increasing population.

The Prince listened attentively to the address, occasionally allowing his eyes to wander over the vast throng around. The address in French being ended, his Royal Highness proceeded to read the reply in English, which he did in the unaffected and sincere manner already often described. This ceremony being concluded, the crowd gave three more cheers, and the Royal party descended from the dais, and entered the carriages which were in waiting.

The procession was too long to enable us to see whether all the details as agreed upon were actually carried out; but the following was the official programme slightly altered, and we believe represents the facts with tolerable fidelity.

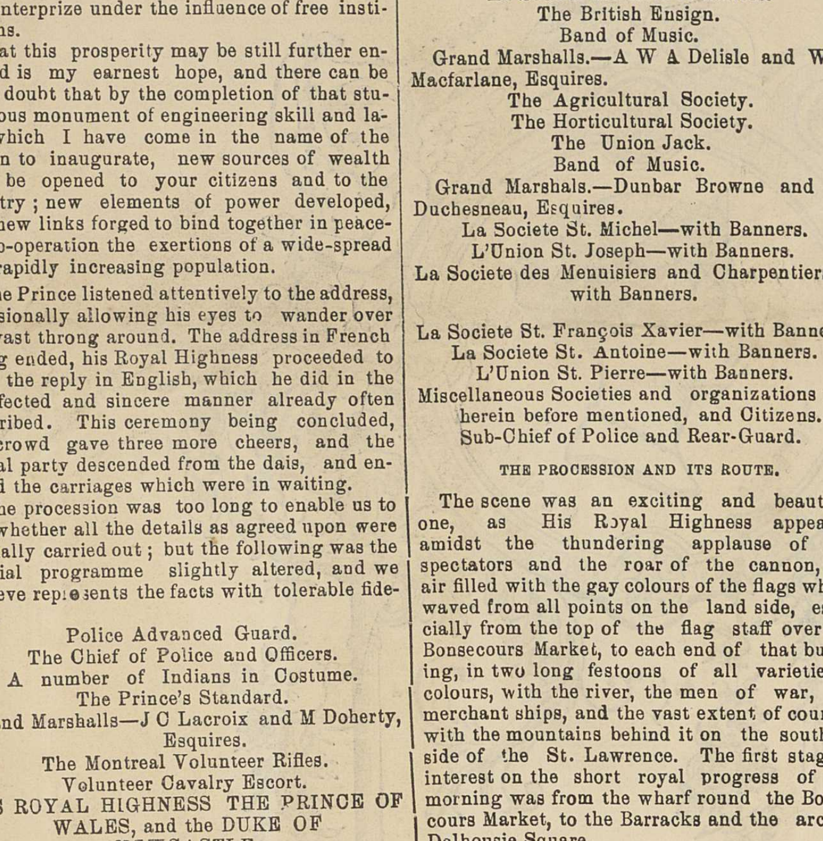
THE PROCESSION AND ITS ROUTE.

The scene was an exciting and beautiful one, as His Royal Highness appeared amidst the thundering applause of the spectators and the roar of the cannon, the air filled with the gay colours of the flags which waved from all points on the land side, especially from the top of the flag staff over the Bonsecours Market, to each end of that building, in two long festoons of all varieties of colours, with the river, the men of war, and merchant ships, and the vast extent of country with the mountains behind it on the southern side of the St. Lawrence. The first stage of interest on the short royal progress of the morning was from the wharf round the Bonsecours Market, to the Barracks and the arch in Dalhousie Square.



Dalhousie Square.

ARCH IN DALHOUSIE SQUARE.

This arch is in an entirely different style from most of the others. Its main characteristic is that it is floral. The whole design is surmounted by a coat of royal arms with supporters, and above them a trophy of flags. An arch, painted pink, spans the roadway, with the letters God Save the Queen upon it. This is draped with acorns on the points of the curtain, and festoons verdure. The smaller arches are of evergreens, their faces being relieved by large vases filled with flowers. Over the smaller arches are ith scutcheons on the words Welcome and Albert, w charged on the right hand with a plume, and the left the City arms; the whole surmounted by vases of flowers and gonfalons.

Turning round the corner at that point, he advanced through the crowded and decorated thoroughfare of Notre Dame Street East, till the procession now reached Jacques Cartier Square, once the site of the beautiful gardens of the French Governors, now covered with a fine growth of maple trees between the broad carriage ways on each side. Tnere were several striking and beautirul objects—some which must be flattering; and all suggestive of many memories and contrasts to the mind of a British Prince. The column surmounted by the statute of the great seaman who more than once saved Britain, at the Nile and Trafalgar, dominates the whole of the locality. At his feet and pointed towards the river, stand the two large cannon which had been taken in war, where Britain had for her ally the nephe and representative of that man whose victories foiled. Across the road Jacques Cartier Place runs elson's and face to face with th to which the site of the at right angles; the statue of Nelson is arge property once owned by that famous Society of Jesus, who took so important a part in the early history of Canada; and upon this site there now stands a large and beautiful Court House, ornamented with a fine fountain, through which a number of dolphins, presided over by Neptune in an erect posture, play the water of the St. Lawrence into the interior of the city. Here was the first sight which H. R. H. obtained of the value of the costly but magnificent water works, of which Montreal may be so justly proud.

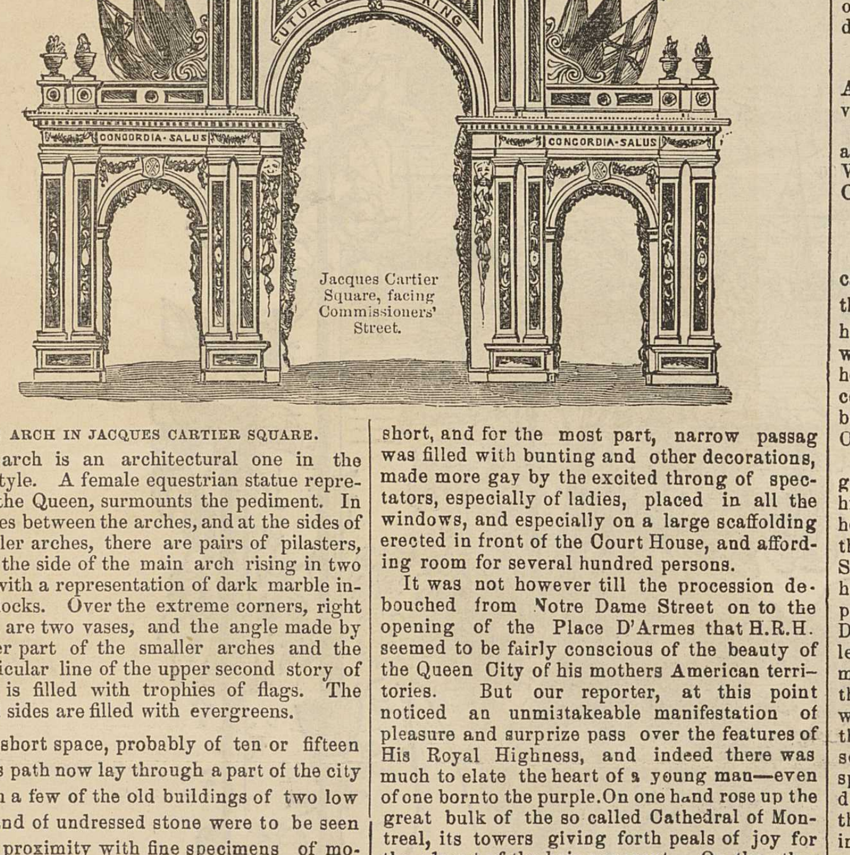
Jacques Cartier Square, facing Commissioners' Street.

THE ARCH IN JACQUES CARTIER SQUARE.

This arch is an architectural one in the Italian style. A female equestrian statue representing the Queen, surmounts the pediment. In the spaces between the arches, and at the sides of the smaller arches, there are pairs of pilasters, those at the side of the main arch rising in two stories, with a representation of dark marble inlaid in blocks. Over the extreme corners, right and left, are two vases, and the angle made by the upper part of the smaller arches and the perpendicular line of the upper second story of pilasters is filled with trophies of flags. The roof and sides are filled with evergreens.

For a short space, probably of ten or fifteen acres,his path now lay through a part of the city in which a few of the old buildings of two low stories and of undressed stone were to be seen in close proximity with fine specimens of modern architecture rising to the height of four stories, the roofs supported on a few apparently slight and elegant pillars, and the walls between almost wholly of glass, behind which are stored the finest descriptions of fabrics, jewellery, and other choice kinds of merchandize. Like the former part of the route, thise short, and for the most part, narrow passag was filled with bunting and other decorations, made more gay by the excited throng of spectators, especially of ladies, placed in all the windows, and especially on a large scaffolding erected in front of the Court House, and affording room for several hundred persons.

It was not however till the procession debouched from Notre Dame Street on to the opening of the Place D'Armes that H.R.H. seemed to be fairly conscious of the beauty of the Queen City of his mothers American territories. But our reporter, at this point noticed an unmistakeable manifestation of pleasure and surprize pass over the features of His Royal Highness, and indeed there was much to elate the heart of a young man—even of one born to the purple. On one hand rose up the great bulk of the so called Cathedral of Montreal, its towers giving forth peals of joy for the advent of the heir-apparent. On the other hand was the substantial image and domicile of the largest financial corporation on this side of the Atlantic—a palace worthy of the extent of the business transacted within its walls, and of the immense interests which are swayed by its management.



Place d'Armes, opposite French Cathedral.

THE ARCH IN THE PLACE D'ARMES.

This Arch, situated in the Place d'Armes, is in the me-diœval style of Gothic architecture; the roofs being of the high pitched French shape, and the arches pointed. The towers are ornamented with niches, filled with stained glass in three tiers, the whole surmounted by tin roofs, arranged in scales. The upper part of the facade above the arches, at the place from whence the roof rises is battlemented, the battlements being surmounted by trophies of flags. The roofs rise in three flat-topped pyramids—one over each arch, and the outline on both places is ornamented with fret work, which, as well as a few inches at the top, is gilt. The tops of the battlements and the staffs of the flags and pennons, which rise above the edifice are gilt. The high pitched roofs are painted, in horizontal bars of French grey and red. The spaces between the windows and in the corners, formed by the rectilinear lines of the building and the curved lines of the arches, are fitted with various designs, ornamented with gay colours, while the main ground colour of the building is red. The windows are filled with stained designs of warriors in armour, &c. The legends on this arch are on one side,—Welcome Prince of Wales, and on the other Bien Venu au Prince de Galles.

Next to the Montreal Bank just described and on the right hand of it was to be seen another financial Palace, belonging to the City Bank, of hardly less imposing architecture than the former. On another part of the square rose a mass of Italian architecture, serving as the offices of the London and Liverpool Insurance Company, the City and District Savings Bank, and the Ontario Bank, all of magnificent extent and refined details. A glance, too, might be obtained of the remainder of the quaint old Seminary—the Chateau of the Clerical Seigniors of the Island, and of the newer portion which they have lately added to their buildings, while in the centre of the frame formed by these handsome buildings, was an enclosure filled with verdant trees and shrubs, with a fountain of water constantly tumbling from its crown into the basin beneath. Above and intermixed with all these objects, were the many coloured decorations on the houses; and the flags waving in every direction; and from all corners rose one great shout of welcome. Well might even a Prince feel some additional sentiment of elation at such possessions and at homage thus rendered.

This is the financial quarter, and the architecture is of a suitable character. On turning out of the square into Great St. James Street, a fine broad avenue was entered, formed since modern ideas have had sway, upon grounds formerly occupied by a part of the fortifications of the old city. Here next neighbour to the Montreal Bank, on that side i the Banque du Peuple; on the opposite side of the way, a little farther west the Post O fice, and Bank of British North Ameria, like t e other Banks a large and handsome specimen of architecture; then on the right hand side, the Colonial Life Insurance Office, one of the m ost tasteful of the modern structures of the cit ; and farther on, upon the same side, the Com mercial Bank, and the Upper Canada Bank, the last however, occupying only a good dwellin house converted to Bank purposes. Pa by all these; the handsome building b to the Mechanics Institute; the gothic iron the large Methodist Church; and also passing through the waving clouds of bunting, which hung from and between these buildings, H. R H. next approached Commissioners Square, where the fine jet d'eau was throwing the wat r of the St. Lawrence fifty feet into the air. Here on the left hand, becomes a glimpse o the river and the bridge through the vista of McGill Street, till turning to the right, he ook the route up towards the ascent n the spires of three churches—rise in c ximity, representing the Unitarian, Congregatio al, and one of the Kirk of Scotland congreg tions. Nothing of special moment was met from this point till the procession arrived at e corner of University and Dorchester Street where the English Cathedral and the Exhibit Building appeared together, the one on t left the other in front. From this corne but a step to the Exhibition Buildin e the Prince alighted.

Haymarket Square.

THE ARCH IN COMMISSIONERS' SQUARE.

This arch is in the Grecian style of architecture. Its architrave is supported by four Corinthian columns, between the two central ones of which is the main arch; smaller arches being placed on each side. On the top of the pediment are the City arms with their supporters—an Indian in a standing and another in a sitting posture, the whole in their heraldic colours. These are surrounded by a trophy of flags and the royal standard waves above all. Below this is the legend "Welcome to Canada" on a veined marble slab, having on one side the crest of the Governor General, and on the other that of Sir F. W. Williams. The architrave itself is richly coloured, and over each extremity there is a vase, the lower part painted red. The also a rich pattern of bright colo Over each side of the central ar cumbent figures. THE ARCH IN ST. CATHERINE STREET.

This Arch is in the Moorish style of archi- ure. It consists of three arches, one over adway and smaller ones over the pathways side. These arches are formed in the ro eas between, and towers—the central one of about sixty feet, and those at the sides of some forty feet in height.—These towers have on each front two long windows of stained cloth, to imitate stained glass, in Arabesque pattern. They are surrounded by small cupolas covered with tin, arranged in scales. Between the central towers the walls of the arch are carried up to a peak, like the gabel end of a house; and the upper outline of the walls, between the small and large towers, are lean-to's. The central peak is surmounted with a Prince of Wales' plume, having above it the standard of England. From the two higher towers there fly Union Jacks: and the lower towers are capped by scutcheons, while the upper outline of the walls on each face is broken by a number of pennons of various gay colours.—Over the crown of the main arch there are female figures in niches on each face, and the rest of the space in the walls above the arch es is filled up with stained Gothic windows, having Arabesque designs. The colour of this arch is a dark red brick, with bands of blue along the tops of the walls, and over the windows and arches, from the insides of which there will depend festoonsof foliage. The flagstaffs are ona line of fretwork, joining the upper outline of the walls, and the words of the legends are gilt. A classical taste has been indulged in in the choice of mottoes, our old frend Virgil having been drawn upon for the following:—

"Omnis in Ascanio caroistat, curo parentis."

And:—

Accipio, agnoscoque libers! ut verba Parentis, vultumque recordor.

The other mottos and legends on this arch are as follows:—Victoria and Albert; Bien Venu; Welcome to Montreal; Arts, Manufactures and Commerce."

INAUGURATION OF THE EXHIBITION.

At 10 minutes to 11 o'clock, the sound of cannon in the immediate vicinity, announced the approach of His Royal Highness to the Exhibition building. The special guard of honor which received H. R. H. at the door by which he entered consisted of Captain J. W. Taylor's company of Montreal Light Infantry, with the battalion colours, Major Dyde acting as Field Officer.

Precisely at 11 o'clock, H. R. H. entered the great hall from the reception room, attended by his suite, and was conducted to the dais, where he stood, in front of the chair of state, while the Choir, consisting ot our admirable Oratorio Society, sang "God Save the Queen" with happy effect. The Governor General took his position to the right of H.R. Highness, and the Duke of Newcastle and Lord Mulgrave to the left, the other members of the suite, and the members of the Provincial Governmet being in the immediate rear. On the left of the platform were seated a goodly muster of the members of the Legislative Assembly, and on the right several Legislative Councillors. The front space was occupied by a large and elegantly dressed assemblage of the elite of our citizens, the ladies occupying prominent seats, and shewing such an interest in the handsome and happy appearance of the Prince as evidently caused His Royal Highness to look, sometimes to the right, and then to the left, &c., &c. At the close of the Royal Anthem, His Excellency the Governor-General descended from the dais, and taking a position in front of H. R. H., read the following address:—

"May it please your Royal Highness:

"The people of this Province are aware of the interest which Her Most Gracious Majesty and the Prince Consort honored the Exhibitions of 1851 and 1855.

"They know that among the object which excited attention on those occasions, the productions of Canada hold an important place; and they venture to hope that your Royal Highness will, on the present occasion, condescend to meet their wishes by opening the Exhibition, which is to take place in this building.

"They believe, Sir, you may find that the objects submitted to your notice afford some evidence of the industrial progress of Canada, and some promise of her future progress.

"On the part, therefore, of the Provincial Government, I pray Your Royal Highness to do us the honor of opening in the city ot Montreal, this Exhibition, and we trust that such condescension on your part may stimulate our people to greater exertions, and may be long remembered among the gracious acts which are destined to mark the visit of the Heir apparent of the Throne of Great Britain."

GENTLEMEN:

"Most readily I assent to the request you have made, a request the more agreeable, because it is conveyed to me by my kind friend, your excellent Governor General.

"I am not ignorant of the high position attained by Canada in the Great Exhibition of 1851, which was opened under the happy auspices of the Queen and the Prince Consort, and as carrying out the desigu of that memorable undertaking the smaller, but to Canada most interesting collection of the products of your Land, and of works of Art and Industry, has my entire sympathy, and claims my best wishes for its success,

"I hope and believe it will realize all the objects for which it has been designed."

The Right Rever the Anglican Lord Bishop of Montreal t offered up the following prayer:—

Almighty God, the Grea d Governor of to approach the Throne race, confessing thee as the author of our being, and the giver of all good gifts, by whose mercy alone it is that we are enabled to think or do anything that is acceptable to thee. We acknowledge with grateful hearts all thy past mercies to us, and especially thy goodness manifested in the abundance of the fruits of the earth, now awaiting the ingathering of the harvest. We also bless thee, O Lord, for that continued public tranquillity in the land, which has given us the opportunity of pursuing with any measure of success those enterprises that belong to peace, and promote the prosperity of the people. We beseech thee now to look favourably upon this work of our hands; and while we give thee hearty thanks that we have been allowed thus far to carry forward the execution of our designs, we beg thy blessing on the undertaking, which we are this day assembled to inaugurate. Let us not rest with pride and self-complacency upon the results of human intellect and human ingenuity; but make us always to remember that what is of the earth is earthly and perishable, and that "all flesh is as grass, and the glory of man as the flower of grass, which withereth and falleth away;" and enable us all so to exercise our several talents, as shall best promote thy glory, and the edification and well-being of thy creatures; that we may give account of the trust committed to us with joy, and not with sorrow.

And we beseech Thee, O Lord, so to guide direct our hearts, and so over-rule our purposes that while endeavoring to make known thy power and wisdom in the works of creation and to develope the gifts of thy creatures in the advancement of science and art, we may allow no strife or vain-glory to disturb our unity of action nor hinder our success. And in order thereto, may we be taught by thy Spirit "not to think too highly of ourselves,but in lowliness of mind each to esteem others better than themselves." Grant that "this mind may be in us, which was also in Christ Jesus;" for which we pray in His name, who died for us that we might live unto Him, and who now liveth and reigneth with Thee and the Holy Ghost in the unity of thy God-head, thy only Son, our Lord Amen.

Our Father, which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses,as we forgive them that trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom the power and the glory for ever and ever. Amen.

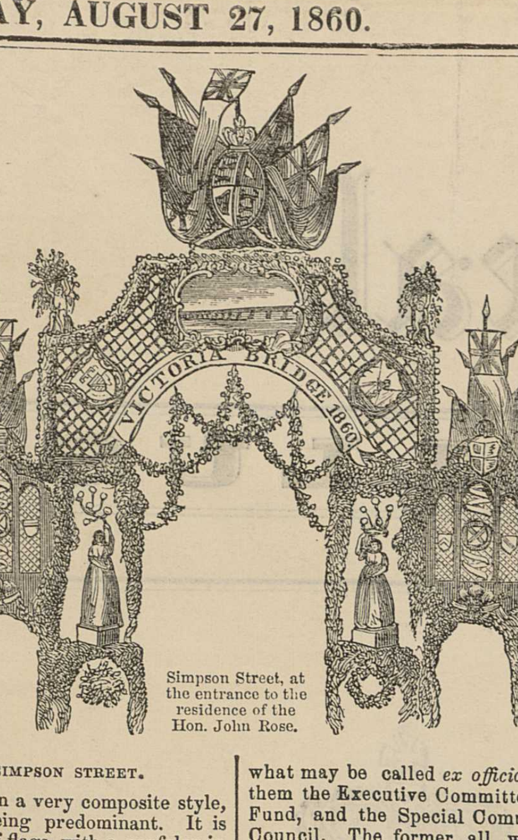
The Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ the love of God, and the fellowship of the Holy Gost, be with us all evermore. Amen.

Archdeacon Gilson stood immediately behind the Bishop, attired, as was his Lordship, in clerical costume, and reverently responded Amen.

A Royal procession was then formed, consisting of H. R. Highness and suite, and their Excellencies Sir Edmund Head and Lord Mulgrave, and their respective suites, preceded by the sub-committee of the Board of Arts and Manufactures, and proceeding to the north-west end of the building, thence to the south-east, and along the south-west side, examined the various interesting objects on view. We observed that as His Royal Highness neared the Mineral department (in the south-east end) he was appropriately met by Professor Dawson, Principal of the University of McGil College, who entered into conversation with his Royal Highness and Sir Edmund Head, while H. R. H. was examining several mineral specimens. The Royal party having crossed from the south-east end ascended the staircase in the east corner, proceeded along the gallery of the north-east side passing through the fine art court, where his Royal Highness was attracted by an admirable water-colour painting of the ship "Hero" at the mouth of the Gaspé Basin. His Lordship Bishop Fulford, as President of the Fine Arts Association, having intimated to the Prince that the association would feel honored by his acceptance of any particular picture with which he might be pleased, His Royal Highness remarked that as this would be a memento of his visit, he would be happy to accept it. In passing along the east gallery, his Royal Highness presented himself on the balcony, to the full view of the immense crowd in front who cheered with indescribable enthusiasm. As his Royal Highness approached the different compartments of the building he was also loudly cheered; and we noticed that the first cheer was started by the honorable members of the Legislative Assembly. The party then descended by the staircase in the west corner, and returned to the dais, when H. R. H. having taken his former position, declared the Exhibition opened. The choir then sang the "Hallelujah Chorus," at the conclusion of which H. R. H. and suite retired in the same order in which they had entered, and by the same door.

THE DEPARTURE FROM THE EXHIBITION BUILDING.

H. R. H. then immediately proceeded to his own residence under escort of the cavalry. He remained there only a very few minutes and immediately left for Point St. Charles, passing through the arch in Simpson Street.



Simpson Street, at the entrance to the residence of the Hon. John Rose.

THE ARCH IN SIMPSON STREET.

This arch is got up in a very composite style, the floral character being predominant. It is crowned by a trophy of flags, with a gonfalon in the centre of the fasceau. Immediately below this is an oval picture of the Victoria Bridge, which rests on the crown of the arch on which appears the words Victoria Bridge in black letters on a pink ground. The space above the arch, forming a back ground to the picture of the bridge, is filled with lattice work of verdure, with two shields on the shoulders of the arch, the one bearing the rose, shamrock and thistle, and the other the beaver and maple bough. Each of the smaller arches is crowned by a trophy of flags, below whichare stained windows. On the front next Sherbrooke street, these windows have in them, to the west Buckingham Palace, and to the east Osborne House, while on the other face the designs represent, to the west, Balmoral, and to the east, Windsor Castle. Below the windows, and on the key of the arches are plumes of feathers; and on the sides of the main arch are niches with female figures.

MONTREAL RESIDENCE OF THE PRINCE.

The mansion where H. R. H. is to reside during his stay in Montreal is that of the Hon. John Rose, the Commissioner of public Works, who, in that capacity, has had charge of the arrangements for the Prince's reception, Mr. Rose being obliged to reside at the seat of government. However, the house has recently been tenanted by Sir W. F. Williams, who volunteered to resign it for the Prince, during H. R. H's stay in town. The house is finely situated on the lower plateau of the mountain, standing in about three acres of ground, which are beautifully decorated by ornamental trees, and parterres of flowers. The mountain rises up steeply behind it; but the house itself is high enough to afford a prospect even the entire city, the river, and the country beyond. The house itself is about fifty feet square, with a wing, two stories high with handsome porch and entrance, the whole being surmounted by a pediment. Being perfectly white, it forms a very pretty object among the dark trees, in which it is embowered. It is approached by two streets, and the entrance gates have been renewed, and decorated with carved plumes of Prince of Wales, feathers. The exterior of the house has been newly decorated for the reception of the royal guest, and it would probably have been difficult to find a residence in the city, upon the whole, more agreeable. At the entrance are two handsome coloured lamps, and the outer door and vestibule door are in enamelled glass. The entrance hall is papered with an imitation of a fine yellow marble, having, at the end, niches containing female figures bearing gas lights. On the left hand is the library. This room is fitted up with a paper of rich dark green, with perpendicular stripes of gold. The carpet is a new Brussels, the ground of a dark green colour, with the pattern formed of two devices, arranged in alternate rows. One of these consists of a number of short lines crossed by others all of various light colors to give relief to the ground,and with colors changed alternately. The other and more conspicuous device consists of a light colored border enclosing a fleur de lys; the ground within the border alternately yellow and brown, and the fleur de lys alternately white and yellow. The curtains are of a green damask; and the sides are surrounded with books on rosewood shelves; other shelves with books standing out on the floor of the room.—On the other side of the passage is the dining room. The carpet in this room has not been changed. It is a Brussels with a large pattern, in which red and white are the predominating colours. The mantel piece is of black marble, and the room is hung with pictures. The paper is a rich red flock, and at the end furthest removed from the window, there is a large mirror. The table and side-board are of mahogany, and the chairs of the same wood, with black er covers. We believe that all is exact it was when used by the proprietor. The curtains match the paper in tint.

The drawing-room is a very handsome apartment at the northwestern corner of the house. It has two windows opening on to the mountain northwards, and a very large bow window looking towards the West. The curtains here are of a fine grey chintz, having stripes formed by a pattern of moss rose leaves and flowers; and they are trimmed with silk and lace. The curtain rods are of wood, painted white and gilt. The mantel-piece is of white marble, with a fine mirror in an elegant but by no means florid frame; and there is a console table and mirror between the windows. The carpet in this room is velvet, of a small flowered pattern, in which all the brightest colours seem to be confused without giving to the eye any distinct conception of design. The papering is very elegant. The ground represents a grey watered silk with a few sprigs of gold. The bands of the pannelling are of very light pink with gilt and light blue lines for borders. The furniture and knick-nacks are of the ordinary kind used for drawing rooms; but in simple taste, becoming the bachelor quality of the Prince. The whole of the furniture and decorations in this apartment are new. All the wood work in the lower story, except the drawing room which is white and gold—is painted oak on the inside and mahogany outside. The stairs to ascend to the bed chambers are lighted from the roof by two sky-lights, having below them stained glasses, flush with the ceilings, the chief decoration being two Prince of Wales' feathers, chiefly in ruby colour. These lights throw a fine mellowed colour over the stairs. The stairs and the passage at the head of them are carpeted with dark green—the pattern black.

The Prince's bed-room is the South-eastern apartment of the upper story. Its furniture consists of a bed; wardrobe; washstand; writing table; sofa; cheval glass; easy chair, and four small chairs. All the furniture is of a clear bird-eye maple. The bedstead is a four poster without curtains; having the headboard raised a little above the footboard. All the posts are surmounted by carved crowns, and the pillars are fluted and otherwise carved. The headboard rises from the sides to the middle, where the peak terminates with a large crown. The royal arms are below encircled with ivy; a little lower is an elegant fillet composed of the leaves of the rose, shamrock, thistle and mapleleaf; and again below that, the Prince of Wales' feathers and motto, both of a very neat size. In the centre of the footboard, there is a carved oval, having within it the Prince of Wales feathers and motto, surrounded by foliage. The Wardrobe is surmounted by the Prince of Wales' feather and motto, below which there is a band of open work across the front, and two folding doors with arched mouldings and carvings within them. The chairs and sofa are covered with green and gold damask; the small chairs having open worked backs. The cheval glass has its frame decorated by a carved coat-of-arms and crown like the bed; and the washstand has a white marble top. All the rest of the furniture is of the same curled maple as the bedstead—all in very simple taste. The carpet is a green Kidderminster, with a very small pattern, consisting of white and red spots arranged in diamond form. The paper has a light ground panelled with broad stripes of lilac bordered with pink and white.

The Dressing-room adjoining the bedroom is furnished in a still plainer manner than the bedroom. Its meublement consists merely of a sofa and four chairs, all of rosewood, with green and gold damask to match the furniture of the bed-room. The carpet is green with a small yellow spot.

The Duke of Newcastle's bed-room is situated on the side of the house opposite to that occupied by H.R.H. The general style of the furniture is the same; but it has been apparently chosen with a view to mark the gradation of rank by some slight difference in elegance. Thus the washstand, instead of a white marble top, has a black one; the bedstead has hardly any carving upon it, and is, as well as the other furniture, of what upholsterers call "white wood" instead of maple; and the chairs, instead ot damask, are of dark green "wrept." The paper is pannelled with lines of gilt and white gold flowers and sprigs. The carpet is of a commoner description than that in the Prince's apartment, of a dark green ground, with a pattern consisting of small oblong spots of white, red and yellow, arranged in groups diagonally. Another apartment intended for Lord St. Germans; and a very small one for the Governor General, with a single sized bed, are both fitted up in the same style as the apartment intended for the Colonial Secretary. The decorations and the stained glass have been prepared by Messrs. McArthur and Spence; the furniture is from the factory of Jacques and Hay of Toronto, and the new gates, with the beautiful carving thereon are the work of Mr. Maxwell. Mr. Baylis has furnished the carpets, and the whole of the arrangements in the house and grounds have been under the superintendence of Mr. Lawford, of Messrs Lawford and Nelson.

PREPARATIONS AT THE BRIDGE.

But before his arrival a large company had assembled. There were first of all a number of what may be called ex officio visitors—among them the Executive Committee of the Citizens Fund, and the Special Committee of the City Council. The former all wore a plume on a blue ribbon. The arrangements at the Point had all been made under the superintendence of Mr. Scott, the architect usually employed by the Grand Trunk Company, and he had done his business well, for, with a crowd of several hundreds of persons all pressing forward, there was not the slightest confusion. Except a little pressure at the doors, everything passed off with the most perfect order, each man finding his seat on the cars and afterwards on the scaffoldings of the Bridge with the greatest ease and comfort. By about 1 o'clock all were seated in the following manner. A space formed by the walls of the bridge at the commencement of the tube had been enclosed so as to form an oblong pit, having one end closed at the top by the first pier, and at the bottom of which ran the rails, of course passing under the pier. At the Southern end of this enclosure, and against the pier, a scaffold was erected almost at the level of the top of the pier, reached by a stair from the level on which the rails are laid. On each side of the rails were seats appropriated to the members of the Legislature. Upon the walls were galleries; and the top of the pier itself, the last stone of which was to be laid, was appropriated to members of the press Canadian and Foreign. The gallery was hung with red baize. Over the pier there was an arched board with the royal arms and below it the words "Finis coronat opus." This board served to conceal the wheel crank and other machinery which were intended to lift the stone from its wooden supports preparatory to its being deposited on its bed. The whole of the gallery was erected under the direction and at the desire and expense of Mr. James Hodges, who wished to give his Canadian friends this last token of his regard. To that part of the structure, therefore, they were admitted by his invitation. The company who came at the invitation of the Manager were accommodated on the embankment in two rows of seats, one on each side of the track. Every place on all parts of the Bridge were numbered, and, as we have said before, all the visitors had found their places before H. R. H. arrived. In the interval some flags, with appropriate designs, had been handed to the ladies, who seemed well pleased with these pretty toys,

THE PRINCE'S ARRIVAL.

On the Prince's arrival at the Station at Point St. Charles, he was met by the Hon. John Ross, President of the Grand Trunk Company, Mr. Blackwell, and the members of the Executive Council of the Province, and here the Hon. Mr. Ross presented to him the following address, to which in the usual manner he made the reply subjoined.

To His Royal Highness Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, &c., &c.:—

May it please your Royal Highness—

The Directors of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada beg leave to offer to your Royal Highness a respectful welcome to the Province.

The Canadian Parliament has made the completion of the Victoria Bridge the occasion on which to invite our most gracious Sovereign to visit her Canadian possessions, and, in welcoming your Royal Highness to Canada as her representative, they have referred, with just pride, to this great work as evidence of the results achieved through the union of British capital and skill with Canadian enterprise and progress

The Victoria Bridge, as your Royal Highness is aware, has been constructed in the face of the greatest engineering difficulties. It is the connecting link of eleven hundred miles of railway, extending from the extreme Western limits of Canada nearly to its Eastern boundary, and also affording an outlet to Provincial trade to the Atlantic when the rigour of our climate closes the natural channel by the St. Lawrence.

This great national highway has been carried through by a vast outlay of British capital, fostered by the most wise policy and generous aid of the Canadian Parliament, and, as now completed, will develope and promote not only the interchange of commerce and intercourse between the various districts of this widely extended Province, but will also secure to it, a large share of the rapidly increasing tread of the West.

Canada now possesses a complete system of railway communication, combined with an internal navigation of unrivalled extent; and, in your future progress to the West, your Royal Highness will observe the best evidence of the wisdom and energy which have thus been applied to the developement of the resources of this great Province.

The Directors have now to express their profound gratitude to their most gracious Sovereign and to your Royal Highness for your consideration in honoring this enterprise with your presence, and they pray that your Royal Highness will now be pleased finally to inaugurate the completion of the Victoria Bridge, and thus to permit the greatest engineering work of modern days to be associated with the auspicious occasion of the first visit of the Heir Apparent of the Throne to her Majesty's loyal Province of Canada.

To which he made the following reply:—

Gentlemen,—It is with mingled feelings of gratification at the duty which I am called upon to undertake, and admiration of the magnificent spectacle of successful science which is before me, that I proceed to comply with your invitation, and, in the name of the Queen, to inaugurate a work as unsurpassed by the grandeur of Egypt or of Rome, as it is unrivalled by the inventive genius of these days of ever-active enterprize.

I regret that the great man, whose name is now doublyenrolled in that page of my country's history in which its worthies are inscribed, has not lived to see this day. I regret that ill health prevents the presence of another who labored with him to plan and execute this vast design; but to them and to the eminent firm and those employed by them, in carrying out the works, no less than to your ceuntrymen, whose energetic exertions first gave birth to the scheme of which this bridge is the consummation, the thanks of the great community of North America are due.

Your Sovereign has testified her appreciation of the magnitude and importance of the enterprise, by deputing me to come so far to commemorate on the spot, on her behalf, the completion of a monument of engineering skill, which will, henceforth, bear Her name and convey to future generations another proof, in addition to the many which exist, of the successful industry of the great people committed by Providence to Her rule.

May this ceremony be auspicious to all concerned. May the Railway and this Bridge, which is its connecting link, realize all the expectations of its promoters, and continue throughout the great future of this Province a source of permanent and ever increasing prosperity.

At half-past one o'clock precisely, H. R. H. arrived at the bridge, riding, with his suite, from the station in a beautiful carriage open at the sides, lined with crimson velvet, and with panels appropriately decorated. This carriage was driven by Mr. McKenzie, the superintendent of the machinery of the Company. The Prince immediately ascended the stairs to the scaffold at the top of the pier. He was met by Mr. James Hodges, and was accompanied by the Duke of Newcastle, General Bruce, Lord St. Germains, General Williams, and the respective suites of His Royal Highness, the Governor General, and the Commander in Chief. Mr. Hodges then, hat in hand, presented to the Prince, who also bowed and was uncovered, a wooden mallet and a silver trowel.

THE TROWEL.

TO COMMEMORATE
The completion of the Victoria Bridge by His Royal Highness Albert Edward Prince of Wales.
MONTREAL, 1860.

On the reverse was an engraving of the bridge. The handle was wrought into the form of a Beaver, which was attached to the blade by a Prince of Wales' plume, the edges of the blade being decorated with a border of the Rose, Shamrock, Thistle and Maple Leaf.

LAYING THE STONE.

His Royal Highness took the trowel, and with a few dexterous strokes levelled the mortar, previously roughly spread. The stone was then lowered under the directions of Messrs. Mathew Turner and Daniel Wilson, who have been Mr. Hodges' foremen in the masonry department from the beginning of the bridge. While the tackle was being adjusted, H. R. H. looked with evident interest on the broad river scenery before him, and made smiling observations to the Duke of Newcastle and the Governor General. At length the large mass was lowered to its permanent resting place. It was a stone 10 feet long by six broad and two deep, weighing several tons. The Prince concluded this part of the ceremony by giving one or two formal taps with the masonic gavel, and the Bridge was completed, and to be henceforth known by the name of Vi ctoria

THE COMPANY ON THE PLATFORM.

On the platform at this time, we observed the Duke of Newcastle, Lord Germains, the Governor General, General Bruce, Admiral Milne, Captain Hope of the Flying Fish, Major Teesdale, Captain Grey, Lord Lyons, Commodore Seymour, His Lordship the Bishop of Montreal, Dr. Mathewson, the Hon. James Young, most of the Members of the Executive Council, Dr. Acland, Mr. Engelhart, Secretary to the Prince; Sir Allan McNab, Mr. Blackwell, most of the Directors of the Grand Trunk R. R.; Mr. Shanley, Mr. Trembinski, Sir W. Logan, Sir H.Smith,the Speaker, the commanders of the Styx and Valorous, and several other gentlemen. The Band of the Canadian rifles was in attendance, and played "God Save the Queen," as the ceremony was concluded.

THE LAST RIVET.

The last stone having been laid, H. R. H. and a large number of the official gentlemen in attendance upon him, took the royal car and proceeded to the central arch, where the last rivet was still to be driven,—an operation which was executed by the Prince with great spirit and good-will. Three rivets were first driven by the men, the Prince having first selected the hole which he would fill. This happened to be a tolerably high one—about the level of his head, and some of the bystanders suggested that a more convenient one should be selected. But the Prince adhered to his own choice. Those who have seen the rivets driven know that it is done with a very rapidly repeated stroke, and when H.R H. observed the dexterity of the workmen, he observed that he was afraid he should prove only a bungling hand. However, the last rivet being pushed through, he took the small hammer, and after giving two or three taps to steady the bolt, Mr. Hodges having applied the cupping tool and given him a large hammer, of several pounds weight, he speedily completed this very last touch to the great structure.

DEPARTURE OF THE GUESTS.

The Royal carriage having then passed through the bridge to the south side of the river; the guests embarked and proceeded to the station. Those who had no invitations to the luncheon speedily dispersed, and those who had, took the road to the shed where lunch had been provided. Six hundred guests sat down to an admirable dejeuner prepared, so far as the eatables were concerned, by Messrs. Hogan and Penn, but in other respects, under the direction of M. T. S. Scott. The company in general were seated at long tables, the roof being decorated with stripes of various colours. At the head was a dais, at which sat Sir E. W. Head as President. He had on his left the Prince, the Duke of Newcastle, Lord Lyons, General Bruce, Admiral Milne, and his flag Lieutenant Sir Basil Hall, Major Teesdale and Captain Grey, Equerries to the Prince; Sir E. Tache, Mr. Engelhart, and some other gentlemen. On his right were Lord St. Germains, the Lord Bishop, the Mayor, Dr. Mathewson, Commodore Seymour, Sir H. Smith, and some other gentlemen.

Monseigneur Bourget, with several of his clergy, arrived soon after the repast had commenced, and took their places on the floor of the Parliament, their presence, apparently, not having been expected.

In about half an hour His Excellency tose and proposed the health of Her Majesty, which was drank with loud cheers.

In a few moments after, he again rose and proposed the health of the Prince Consort; and as speedily after the health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

As soon as the cheering had subsided H R. H. rose and proposed the toast of the Heath of the Governor General; Success to Canada; and prosperity to the Grand Trunk Railway. The few words thus said were pronounced in a very natural unaffected manner, and H. R. H. then gave the time for three cheers; but with perhaps, a Princely absence of the animation usual on such occasions.

The Band having played A la Claire Fontaine H.R.H rose and bowing several times to the company retired; the repast having up to that time occupied probably three-quarters of an hour. After a short visit to the works, he drove immediately to his residence.

Nothing could have exceeded the admirable arrangements of everything at Point St. Charles, the chief credit of which was due to Mr. Trembicki, except the preparation of the stagings and the interior of the hall, which were, as we have saic, in Mr. Scott's hands. The gallery was erected at the cost of Mr. Hodges, as a last tribute of good will to his numerous friends in Montreal.

THE ARCH AT THE WHARF.

This Arch was erected by the Harbour Commissioners, as their contribution to the general adornment of the city, and the design is worthy of the important property represented by the Commissioners. The design is by Mr. Fabrland, a French architect, and it has been erected and decorated by Mr. Gauthier. The Arch is sixty feet square and sixty-three feet high, without reckoning the trophies of flags which surround it. Twelve columns each, of three feet square, serve to support the Arch, the ceiling of the interior, and the roof. These columns are formed and decorated with drapery,—the general ground colour being a bright blue, and the panels of crimson, broidered with white and orange—the colours being arranged with excellent taste. The intercolumniation is enriched with green garlands suspended from the capitals. The bases of the columns, like the shafts and the cornices, are formed of drapery of the colours already described, arranged in the same manner, and large acorns diversly coloured are suspended from various points on the frieze.—At the corners of the arches there are statues of the size of life, having above them escutcheons, surmounted by flags arranged as trophies. In like manner, there is over the centre of each arch a scutcheon, with a fasceau of flags, which are again surmounted by an oriflamme. Prince of Wales' feathers are placed above each scutcheon, and are, of course, white, making with the flags and other ornaments a very pretty relief to the rectilinear arrangement of colours on the main body of the arch. The ceiling within the arch is pannelled, and, like the rest of the edifice, is formed and ornamented with draperies of various colours. The space within, of about sixty-two feet square, is covered with a rich carpet, upon which is placed the throne, draped with crimson and gold. The wharf in the neighbourhood of this arch is set with Venetian poles, having upon them scutcheons, flags, oriflammes, and verdant garlands. The whole design is in a style which is novel to most of the spectators. The following are the mottoes placed on this arch:—

We regret to be obliged to postpone the publication of our Wood Engraving until to-morrow, it having failed to reach us from New York in time for to-day's edition.

THE ARCH IN THE MAIN STREET OF THE ST. LAWRENCE SUBURBS.

The City Council have provided six arches, and the Harbour Commissioners one—all being erected at the cost of public funds. But as it was impossible that they could put one at each man's door, an opportunity was afforded to private enterprize to supply deficiencies. The inhabitants of the St. Lawrence Suburb have had the liberality and public spirit, therefore, to erect the elegant edifice which now stands at the corner of the St. Lawrence Main and of Dorchester streets. This is a castellated Gothic structure, having a central turret 44 feet high, and smaller octagonal turrets over the footpaths of 34 feet. The arches are all Gothic, the main one twenty-eight feet high. Over the main arch is a double Gothic window, with three smaller ones above, but in the same curved line as the arch. Between the latter and the windows is a semicircular label, with the word "Welcome." Over each of the smaller arches is a Gothic window bearing an armorial shield and other devices, while crossed machicolations help to fill the blanks between these windows, and between the smaller arch and the sides. The whole building is to be surmounted by a flag staff rising sixty feet above the street, from which

"St. George's pennon broad and gay
May proudly wave."

The whole structure is of a red sandstone colour. In the upper windows the stained glass bears the portraits of H. R. Highness and Queen Victoria, and the smaller ones simply represent amber coloured glass and lead work. The windows over the two side arches will have worked upon them on one side the Prince's Feathers; on the other the St. George's Cross, and on the other side, one the arms of Canada and the other the English standard. The word "Welcome" on either side is worked in blue letters shaded on a white ground, The machicolations are stained red, and at night the effect of the whole was extremely brilliant.

THE ILLUMINATION.

PLACE D'ARMES.

This beautiful Square, with its fountain playing in the centre, surrounded by the foliage of the maples and shrubs in the ornamental ground, was beautifully decorated with transparencies over each entrance. Over that one near Great St. James street, there was a brilliant picture, about twelve feet square, of the British arms and supporters in all their heraldic colours. Over Lyman's corner was a French Imperial crown, the colours of the velvet and of the jewellery being preserved. We know not whether it was with any feeling of satire that the artist placed two live bombs in the act of exploding at each corner of this design, which was otherwise relieved by peaceful foliage. On the St. François Xavier street corner were placed the Provincial arms, with the Indian supporters, not only of the size of life; but with extremely life-like action; and on the City Bank corner were the City arms. The whole of the enclosure was also decorated with variously coloured lamps arranged in festoons and otherwise, making the whole square a gem of light and colour.

COMMISSIONER SQUARE.

This Square has been decorated with very fine fountains. The jet d'eau consists of one large column about fifty feet high, with a splendid head; two ball fountains; two revolving fountains, making figures of eight; and two forming simple threads of water. These were illuminated, and perhaps one of the finest effects in the whole city was that produced by the lighting of the fine column of water in the centre of the Square. The first transparency we noticed was placed on the line of St. James street. It consisted of a fine portrait of her Majesty, surrounded by a wreath of roses, surmounted by a crown, and with trophies of flags on each side. At the bottom was the representation of a marble slab with a scroll, and the words "Vivat Regina." On another side of the Square was a portrait of the Prince Consort, i the same style as that of the Queen, with the legend—"The Prince Consort, promoter of arts and manufactures."

The Prince of Wales, in like manner, occupied another side of the Square. The fourth was adorned by a shield, charged on one side with the Prussian Eagle and on the other with the British Lion, a wreath of laurel over the shield, and a crown surmounting the whole. The supporters were two figures, supposed to represent Literature and Science, each with appropriate emblems at their feet. There were trophies of flags on each side of the picture, a red ribbon at the bottom, and a Plume, with motto propor, below all.

CUSTOM HOUSE SQUARE.

The Custom House had all its Architectural Outlines illuminated with gas, with a crown in the centre of both fronts---that on St. Paul Street, and that towards the river. The latter had the word "Welcome" added.

The Harbour Commissioners' Office was decorated with a splendid flag on the roof, and a beautiful plume of brilliants.

The Montreal House.---Was lighted up from basement to garret, and its proprietor had decorated the enclosed space on the front of the square with evergreens and variegated lamps, which with the fountain made a beautiful display.

In this Square there was a fine transparency. It consisted of two portraits—that on the righ of Champlain—that on the left of M. de Maison neuve. Both were excellent works of art. The heads were encircled by wreaths of laurel, and in the angle of the two circles at the top was the national emblem—the beaver. The portraits were flanked by trophies showing the fleur de lys of the flag of the French Monarchy, and at the bottom were marble slabs, having the words "Samuel Champlain, premier Gouverneur du Canada; and Paul do Chomedey, Sieur de Maisonneuve premier Souverneur de Montreal.

JACQUES CARTIER SQUARE.

In this Square there were three transparencies. The first one was a portrait of Lord Nelson with a laurel wreath; vessels in the back grounds, whose masts showed above the portrait; but whose hulls were concealed by trophies of flags. At the bottom there was a slab with the words, "Honour to the Immortal Nelson." The effigies of the other famous mariner, Jacques Cartier, were surrounded in a precisely similar manner, forming another transparency. The only difference in the surroundings of the two worthies was that among the flags in the latter case the fleur de lys was conspicuous. The last of these three transparencies was an allegorical painting by Mr. Raphael. Its design was a figure of Brittania, with a mural crown, placing wreaths on the heads of a female figure representing Europe, and a male one in Indian costume, representing America, both mounting the steps to a throne. The base of the steps had for a legend—"Union of Europe and America;" and there were trophies of flags on each side.

The whole of these beautiful works were confided to the care of Mr. Ramsay of Recollet Street, who prepared the general plans of the decorations for the City Council, and they were executed under that gentlemans direction, as well as several works for individuals by Mr. McPhail; Mr. Raphael from the studio of Mr. Notman; and Mr. Mitchell of N. York.

GREAT ST. JAMES STREET.

The City Bank is the first building at the East End of this street and was very brilliantly illuminated and decorated. On the roof were a number of Venitian gonfalons; and over the pediment a plume in gas. In the recess behind the intercolumination of the first story was a square of a blue colour on the wall, and the letters E.E. P.W. upon it. In front of the recess was a female figure, and the letters V.R. The pillars were wreathed with lines of gas jets, having behind them in maple leaves, which by reflecting the light added greatly to the brilliancy of the effect produced. On the recess behind the intercolumniation of the porch were statutes of the Queen and Prince Albert. At the corners of the cornice right and left were emblematic transparencies; and over the side doors trophies on the right a knight with a transparency of the Prince of Wales supported by a sailor and soldier, and on the left with one of the Queen supported by female figures.

The Montreal Bank—was also very splendidly decorated. A large flag waved from the roof; over the the pediment was a plume, with stars above each corner of the building. The architectural outlines were all indicated by jets of flames and the pillars were wreathed with lines of light ascending in a spiral form. Festoons of gas lights were also suspended between the capitals of the columns. The windows were each illuminated by a transparency. The central one represented the Royal arms; the pair on each side of it plumes with the motto proper; the next pair right and left agricultural and naval emblems; and the outside ones to the west, mechanical, and to the east, military emblems. The windows of the first story were similarly decorated. The whole of the light was produced by gas.

The London and Liverpool Assurance Office—Ontario Bank—and City and District savings Banks—These institutions are all situated in a fine building, exhibited in a wood cut elsewhere. The whole edifice was illuminated according to one general design, which, though simple was very striking. It consisted of defining the leading architectural lines of the building by lines of gas light; the perpendicular lines being made more brilliant by the reflection produced by placing tin behind the jets. A beautiful star of chrystal and ruby shone from the angle of the building like a large jewel eclipsing in brilliancy everything near it.

The People's Bank.—This bank was gaily decked with flags. Over the portico was a large transparency twenty feet long by thirteen feet high. On the upper part ef this was the arms of Canada, and below them portraits of the Queen with the Prince of Wales on her right and Prince Albert on her left,surrounded by scroll work. This design is projected into the street and at the west end of the oblong thus formed is a portrait of Jacques Cartier, with the City arms in a corresponding position at the east end. In the Bank windows were a crown with V. R. and a plume with A.E.

Bank of British North America—A crown brilliantly illuminated with gas, on the highest point of the building. In the centre Prince of Wales' plume of large dimensions, as a transparency much increased in effect by the pediment of the buildings being set with jets of gas within colored globes; next, a fine transparency of St George and the Dragon, supported on either side by shields and trophies, also illuminated. Over the door a full length portrait of the Queen; covering the window to the right of this portrait were the Royal arms; on the left, the arms of the Bank. On the window to the extreme right of the building, an effective transparency of the Canadian emblem, the beaver well executed with the word "welcome" underneath. On the extreme left window the the emblem of great Britain, the rose, shamrock and thistle being fufly and finely prominent. Crossing the building at full length were jets of gas encased in variegated globes. The lower pillars of the building were beautifully entwined with gas; over the door immediately below the centre window was a star of brilliants, and over the centre window another star of somewhat larger dimensions. The effect of these latter ornaments was very striking. Two Royal ensigns and a Union Jack of most ample folds waved over the building.

Commercial Bank.---This institution was illuminated with gas. Over the door was the word "Welcome," with P W. Over one side door, there was a star with feathers, and over the other door a star and crown. The windows were filled with full length transparencies, of which the centre one represented the Prince with the Queen on one side and Prince Albert on the other. The side transparencies were the British and Canadian arms.

Adams & Co., and Mr. Moretti.—A transparent motto---Our Queen and Country---with three plumes.

The Post Office.---Variously coloured lamps indicated all the horizontal lines of this building, while the perpendicular lines were in gas. Over the windows were V a star, R a star, and A; a plume in the centre; and running across the face of the building on the lower story, the words in red light---"Prince of Wales."

Montreal Insurance Companies Buildings.---These buildings let to several tenants for offices, had a few simple decorations.

The St. Lawrence Hall.---This favorite hostelry was decorated in a unique manner. On the top of the front was a flag, from the staff of which festoons of drapery reached the sides of the building, from thence festoons in a horizontal direction crossed its whole face. Below the upper windows was a line of escutcheons with armorial devices; below these again, was a triangle of drapery having the apex below the central window of that story, and the base along the architrave of the pillar over the entrance. A large mass of red drapery occupied the centre of the first and second stories, and below it were the words "Welcome Prince of Wales." The whole was made brilliant by plenty of light, and a plume of diamonds and produced a very happy effect.

"Dolly's"---Flag on the roof---transparency of Canada receiving the Prince at at the hands of Britannia, with the Bridge in the back ground---words "Welcome our Future King."

Colonial Insurance Office.---A flag from the balcony on the third story. In the second story, P and W in the side windows; with a plume above, and a crown below on the middle windows---the whole in gas.

Mr Scott.---Chinese lamps.

Dawson & Son.,—A plume of coloured gas—V A, with festooons of colored lamps, and below these, three transparencies. The Prince was in the centre surrounded by the words—"Beloved for his own sake and for the sake of his noble mother." On the window west of this—"Welcome to the son of our Queen," and to the east—"Welcome hope of England."

Messrs. Hilton, Gee, Brewster, Muir and Hood.---Variegated lamps arranged in different forms,

Mr. McLaren over Mr. Milne's Bible Depository exhibited a plume with the word "Welcome." The Montreal Arms, and the words Victoria Bridge, Stephenson, Ross and Keefer.

Mr. Adams.---Chinese lamps.

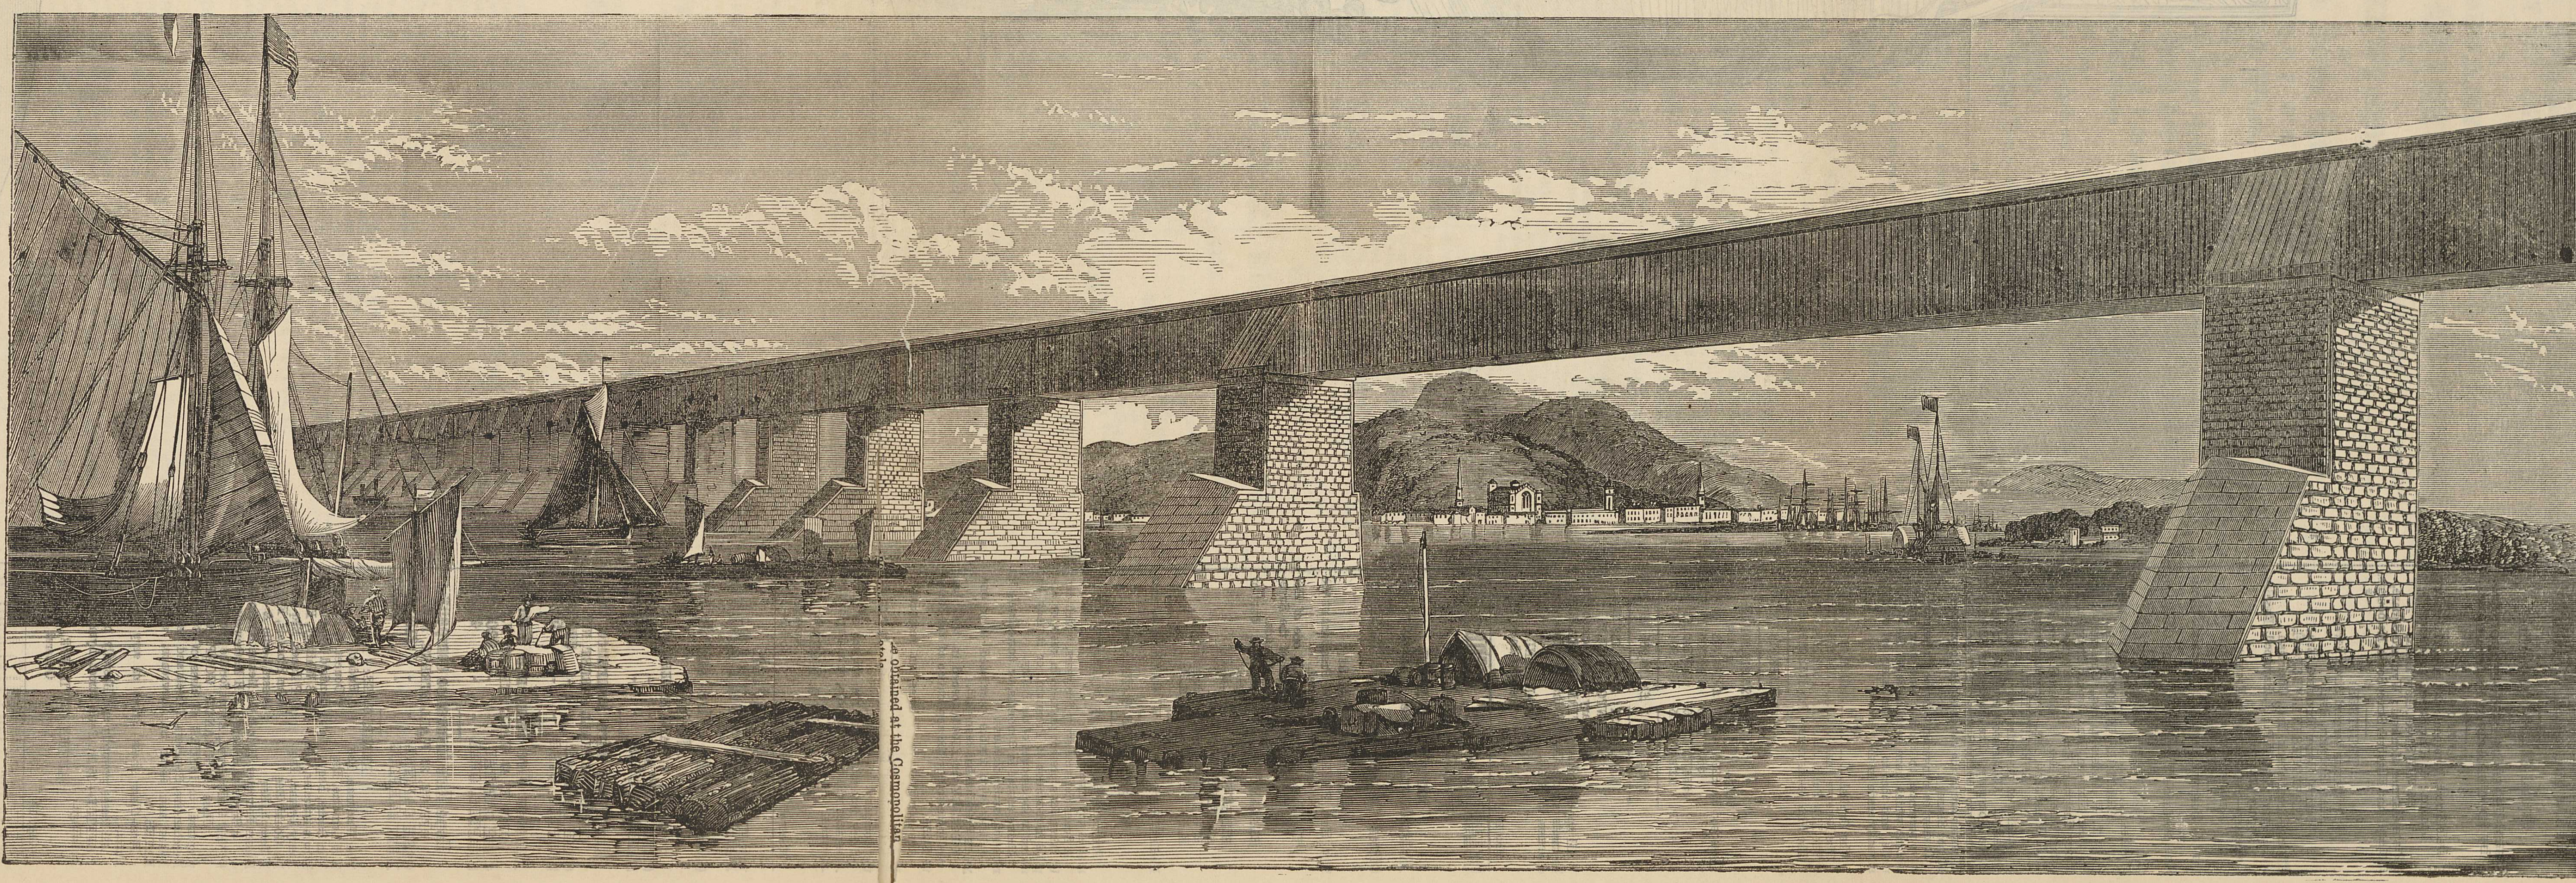
VIEW OF THE VICTORIABRIDGE FROM THE CENTRE SPAN.



THE VICTORIA BRIDGE.

This magnificent work was commenced 20th July, 1854. Its length including the abutments is from bank to bank 10,284 feet. The height above summer level in the central opening, is 60 feet, descending at the rate of 1 in 130. The tube which forms the girder and roadway, is 6600 in length, 22 feet high, and 16 wide, except at the extreme ends where the height is onby 19 feet. This is supported on piers of the following dimensions:—The centre piers are 24 feet in width, the remaining ones 16 ft. These dimensions are directly under the girder. Transversely the piers are 33 ft. under the girder. The dimensions at the junctions with the cutwater are 16 x 33 ft. extending towards the foundation up stream makes the area of the course whence the cutwater is commenced 16 x 90 feet. The foundations vary. In some cases, they are as low as 23 ft. below the water.

The bridge contains twenty-five piers, the centre one of 330 ft., the others of 242 ft. The embankment on the north side is 1200 feet and on the south 800 ft. The stone abutments are 277 feet at the base and 242 ft. in length, divided into cells filled with gravel and strengthened by the walls. The following are some of the quantites of materials employed in this great work:—3,000,000 cubic feet masonry, some of the stones being 17 tons weight, and the lightest 7 tons weight; about 10,000 tons of iron; 200,000 of rivets, and 158 acres of paint. The cost will be about $6,000,000. The work was designed by Mr. A. M. Ross, and constructed for the contractors, Messrs. Brassey, Peto & Co., by Mr. James Hodges; the late Mr. R. Stephenson being the consulting engineer. The first stone of the last pier was laid on the 15th August, 1859, and the whole was completed during that year. Owing to the extremes and variations of our climate, and the expansion and contraction of iron consequent thereon, one of the most necessary precautions was that by which this circumstance was to be prevented from becoming dangeious. This has been accomplished by placing the ends of the tubes upon rollers, so that those vast masses of iron extend and contract them selves without displacing the smallest part of the structure. It will be seen from this that the ends are not in contact; a few inches of the space between them being allowed for the movement caused by heat and cold. Another curious phenomenon connected with the state of the thermometer, is the difference of shape in the tubes at different periods of the day and seasons of the year. It will be readily understood that the upper part of the iron tubes must in a warm day, with the direct rays of the sun shining upon it, become more intensely heated and consequently expand more than the lower portion, and that this elongation of the upper side must give a bowed shape to the whole column. These facts will afford some idea of the numerous observations and curious calculation based upon them which have been necessary in in order to give permanence to an iron structure of such dimensions poised so high in air. The force of the current and the weight of ice coming down with it in the winter had also to be guarded against; but the greatest difficulties encountered in constructing the bridge were met with coffer dams in which the piers were built. All these obstacles, however, have been happily surmounted, and the bridge now stands e ot the greatest specimen of that kind of engineering and mechanical skill which the world can boast of.

ANOTHER ROYAL RECEPTION.—While Her Majesty's son and heir is, we trust, enjoying the loyal ovations of her British-American subjects, his august mother has, we learn, been receiving those of her loyal people of Scotland, in Edinburgh. The Scotsman of that city, received by the "North-American," devotes eight columns to descriptions of the great demonstration made in "Auld Reekie," on the 6th instant, and of the great review by Her Majesty of Scotland's Volunteers, which followed. The pre-occupation of our space, by the "Prince's Progress," leaves us no room to afford our readers more than a faint outline of the grand display on the occasion. The "Scotsman" says:—

> Edinburgh, which usually sleeps tranquilly through the summer, every second house in the new town with its eyes closed for months, had such an awakening from the successive bands of Volunteers that poured into it on Monday and yesterday, as might have prompted a question like that of the Poet Laureate"—
> "Who is this that cometh, like an honored guest,
> With banners and with music, breaking on my rest?"
>
> Yesterday morning our streets were alive at a very unwonted hour. Their traversers were not a few sleepy-eyed mechanics and laborers, but throngs of blythe holiday makers, unable to find poppies in their pillows on the morning of such a day of patriotic pomp and pleasure. Cold blooded as Scotsmen are said to be, when they do get excited, the latent perfervidum ingenium gives their excitement an intensity almost ludicrous in the eyes of more easily excitable nations, who, being in the habit of getting enthusiastic, draw their enthusiasm, comparatively speaking, mild. A large number of the early risers wended their way to Holyrood, to witness her Majesty's arrival. The few loiterers who waited for the boom of the royal salute before they hastened towards the Palace square, found its approaches densely packed, and had to crane over many heads for a sight of the royal carriages. Just as the Queen drove up, a few drops of rain diverted many anxious glances to the sky. It was clad, most appropriately, the gazers thought, in rifle grey. The Scotttish Lion on Arthur's Seat drooped despondingly, as though he did not relish the national mist whibh swathed the grand slope of Salisbury Crags in a vague solemn gloom; but fortunately these meteorological bad omens were of brief duration. Just as the throng left Holyrood, a crammed monster train thundered over the railway arch, and was greeted by the pedestsians with loud cheers which it as heartily returned.
>
> THE STREETS.
>
> Waterloo Place and Princes street were bright with flags and black with heads, through which cabs and carriages threaded their course and dashing mounted officers galloped recklessly, eliciting cries of "hech, Wullie yon's a braw coat," from ragged gamins and muttered curses from their mothers. Cheapside at noon is a solitude in which one might dream "visions of trees," compared with what North Bridge was at ten minutes to nine yesterday morning; and looking over the battlements, you could discern black emmet-swarms ascending from the Waverly stations, still more to congest the traffic. Princes street and its precincts were most gaily decorated. To wear ordinary civilian attire was almost to be in the minority in Princes street yesterday morning. Uniforms everywhere met the eye. Here, with a band at their head came a regiment of riflemen trooping to rendezvous. There, combining ease with economy, a dozen artillerymen rattled along in one cab, which seemed to a fanciful view an overcrowded nest of paroquets, so lively were the uniforms and so loquacious their wearers, Here, arm in arm with male unmilitary friends who chaffed their accoutrements but evidently haddled them with envious awe, or mothers, sisters, wives and sweethearts, who looked up to them as as Garibaldis, individual Votunteers paced the pavé, bestowing, sooth to say, when their own uniforms were sombre, somewhat uncharitable criticisms on the attire of their more swellish fellows. The artilleryman in a cap ridiculed the artilleryman in a bushy as a wearer of his wife's muff and red stocking, and his own shaving brush. The squat foot rifleman in sooty green sneered at the gigantic, glaring mounted riflemen of Fife as crosses between the Fireman and the Cochin-China cock, and certainly that gallant corps, when dismounted, gives no promise of its splendid appearance in the saddle. The knickerbockers of the London Scottish, however, obtained the severest criticism—at all events, from Highland riflemen. They appeared to consider them a cowardly compromise to Cockney prejudices in reference to the kilt. Gay and grotesque, ugly, neat, elegant, and useful uniforms gave the tone to Prince's Street passengership.—Every second Volunteer had a sprig of heather in his shako or his bonnet. Civilians followed suit, and stuck it in their hatbands—the youngsters making perfect bowers of their heads. "Progamme of the Review—only a penny," was bawled along the kennel.—Chargers, with black sheep-skinned saddles, champed their bits, and pawed the paving stones in impatient waiting for their masters. Mars Domesticus was the presiding deity.—

Our contemporary, in a brief reference to the Review says:—

> What took place in Edinburgh yesterday stands as little in need of being "moralized" as an event, as it admits of being described as a spectacle. No such thing has happened in our time—for the Edinburgh Volunteers, Review has outnumbered and outshone even the wonderful display made by London a few weeks ago. More than 20,000 men—the best men of every class and every district of Scotland—yesterday presented themselves before their Queen, a self-formed and self-armed army. The amount of sacrifice, in time, money, and labor, thus cheerfully rendered, can scarcely be conceived, even when it is remarked that the great majority of the 20,000 travelled scores of miles, and many of them hundreds of miles, solely that they might take part in that brief but great display of the might that slumbers in old Scotland's arm. Physically, a finer army never bore sword or gun—morally, no army of modern times, conscripted, or hired, could be one tithe so strong. One proud reflection could not be excluded even from the briefest allusion to such an event—we have here evidence not only of our freedom as a nation, but of our right to possess, as well as our ability to guard our freedom. In no country where the accord between governors and governed did not amount to practical identity could such a thing be. The Government could not permit the people to arm—if our people did arm, it would be to resist, not uphold the Government. The British State has no enemy within—if it has an enemy without, he will not fail to understand the lesson of which yesterday was so brilliant a chapter.

THIEVES AND THE POLICE.—The City Council very thoughtfully and properly took the precaution of bringing in several detectives from New York and Boston to look after the thieves, who were certain to congregate, during the festivities, in this city. Unfortunately, however, this precaution has, to a very considerable extent, been frustrated in its effects by the untimely scruples of one of the city officers. Mr. Hayes, it appears, has so much respect for the liberty even of these temporary and disreputable subjects of her Majesty, that he declines to make any arrests, notwithstanding the information of the American officers. Now, we think the scruples of the Chief of Police very ill-timed, at a moment when we know that every train brings shoals of scoundrels bent upon general plunder. Mr. Hayes might at least take the responsibility of introducing these worthies to the notice of the Police Magistrate. They are all well known to the American officers, who will at once indicate even the particular line of business that each scoundrel follows. One is a dab at iron safes, such as are used in jewellers stores; others are first rate at doors and windows of stores or private houses; and a host of them are expert picket-pockets—a truth which may be judged of by the fact that one succeeded, at Quebec, in robbing a priest from below his soutane. They have also a certain kind of alliance among themselves, which greatly facilitates their perations upon the public, and there is reason believe that last night was intended to be the occasion for a general foray, in which all kinds of forces were to take part. It is to be hoped that Mr. Hayes will think better of this. He will, doubtless, be sustained by the Council and the public, even if a little extra zeal should be employed, and he may yet have time to render a number of very dangerous characters safe, before the general bustle and uncertainty consequent thereon, this evening, shall make the contents of our houses and stores a too easy prey for the spoiler. At any rate, it behoves all persons who do not wish to be robbed to make every precaution in their residences and houses, and to carry nothing valuable on their persons, in the way of watch or coin, beyond the few quarter dollars absolutely required for cab fare. We add one piece of advice—if any gentleman catch a fellow feeling about his fob or trousers pocket, let him have the nerve to lay hold of the rascal and hold him till he can be committed to safe custody.

U. S. Consulate General,
BRITISH N. A. PROVINCES.
MONTREAL, August 23, 1860.

CITIZENS of the UNITED STATES, now temporarily in Montreal, intending to attend the Festivities in honor of His Royal Highness THE PRINCE OF WALES, and wishing for presentation to him, are notified that the following order has been issued by His Excellency the Governor General:

4. All persons, not British subjects, or not habitually resident in Canada, must cause their name and address to be transmitted as aforesaid to the Consul or Vice Consul of their nation, if there be one at the place, and will be considered as presented to His Highness by such Consul or Vice Consul.

5. At the levee every person will bring two cards distinctly written, containing his name and office or Military or Militia rank, (if any.) One of such cards will be delivered at the entrance, in order that it may be compared with the list of names previously submitted, and the other will be read by the A. D. C. or Equerry in waiting at the time of presentation.

6. After the announcement of his name, each gentleman will pay his respects to His Royal Higness by bowing, and will pass on.

For the purpose of promoting the wishes and convenience of Citizens in this respect, the Office of the undersigned will be open from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M., during this and the next week, at No. 23 St. François Xavier Street.

WYMAN B. S. MOOR,

[illegible]CATED LANTERNS
FOR Effective Illumination.

THE Fluid used for these LANTERNS is COAL OIL, requiring no Glass Chimneys, and the Burner a new invention, ensures complele Combustion, and is free from smoke or smell.

In point of economy, these LANTERNS defy competition. Parties wishing to leave their houses during the Illumination, can hang them outside of the windows, where they will burn uutil the Oil is all consumed. They require no attention after being lit up, and are well adapted for hanging on trees in front of houses, and for Lighting up Avenues as they are not affected by rain or wind.

Also, LAMPS for inside of Windows, instead of Candles—a great improvement, as the guttering and falling of grease on the Carpets is avoided, the risk from Fire is diminished, no snuffing is required, and the Lamps are at all times useful.

CANADIAN OILS!
J. M. Williams & Co.,

ARE now prepared to furnish ILLUMINATING and MACHINERY OILS of qualities equal, if not superior, to any in the market, at prices much below all other Coal Oils.

Those who have any knowledge of the Coal Oil business are well aware that not a barrel of any of these Oils has ever been manufactured, either in Canada or the United States, without great difficulties having been experienced, and large amounts having been expended in order to overcome the offensive odour common to all Coal Oils. This odour has prejudiced many against them, and has hitherto prevented us from bringing our Oil before the public. But recent experiments have been attended with great success, and has resulted in our obtaining a process, by means of which we can now entirely remove this disagreeable odour. We offer our Oils at the following

WHOLESALE PRICES:
Illuminating Oil, 70 cents per Gallon.
Machinery Oil, 60 cents per Gallon.
TERMS STRICTLY CASH.

LAMPS! LAMPS!

We have a large variety of Lamps of the most improved styles, which we will furnish to our Customers at the lowest prices. As we purchase these Lamps in large quantities, and only for the accommodation of Oil dealers, the public may be assured we will not be undersold.

CRUDE OIL.

We offer Crude Oil, delivered on the line of the G. W. Railway, at the following rates:—

In quantities of from 1,000 to 4,000 gallons, 25 cents per gallon; from 4,000 to 100,000 gallons, 16 cents per gallon.

The New American Watch.

IN ORDER TO MEET THE REQUIREMENTS OF GENTLEMEN who prefer a thinner watch than those usually made by us, we have lately issued a new style of watch on the three-quarter plate model, especially designed for this purpose.

In establishing this new series, it has also been our design to produce a watch in every-way superior to the best and highest priced products of the most reputable of English and Swiss watch menufacturers; and no labor or expense has been spared to this end.

In all respects of fine and durable material, of external and internal finish, accurate compensation and adjustment, of mathematically just proportions, and of practical results our new three-quarter plate watch challenges competition with any in the world.

On the one end was a splendid picture of the royal arms, and on the other [illegible] one of the City Arms. [illegible] transparencies [illegible] on as this.

PLACE D'ARMES.

The Cosmopolitan Hotel was beautifully illuminated. A large transparency represented the Royal Arms. Variegated lamps were also hung in profusion.

Mr. C. Hill displayed a fine transparency of the Royal Arms; also a Prince of Wales feather' and Prince of Wales' Coat of Arms, with mottoes, flags, &c.

Jones Lyman & Co, exhibited a Drummond Lamp, with the Crown of England and colored lamps, &c. Flags were suspended from the upper windows, with appropriate devices.

The Plantagenet Water Depot on the North East corner of the Place d'Armes was lighted up, and displayed the word, Welcome.

The Pilot office—At this office the display consisted of a crown; before it the word word Victoria; a little lower a plume, below that again the Prince in Highland costume with the letters P. and W. left and right; drapery depending on festoons from the top.

The other private buildings in the square were all lit up with more or less taste and profusion of decoration, and there was especially a great display of bunting appropriate transparencies etc., from the office of the British American Express Company.

NOTRE DAME STREET.

The following is a full account of the transparencies in this street, where transparencies or devices in gas were exhibited. The Herald Office was brilliantly illuminated with gas. In the centre of the second story of the building was a large transparency, 20 feet wide and 30 feet long, representing the Inauguration of the Victoria Bridge. In the third story were two large letters, M and H in gas, with a crown in the centre, also illuminated with gas.

Messrs. John Aitken & Son made a beautiful display. In the first window of the lower story was a large transparency 12 feet square of the Prince of Wales' Plume. with the motto, "Welcome to our Royal Prince." The second window contained a transparency exhibiting the Rose, Thistle and Shamrock. A Beaver was underneath and a maple leaf, with the motto "We are one to protect you." In the first door was a transparency of the Canadian Arms. In the centre door the Royal Arms, and in the third the Prussian Arms. The upper part of the building was profusely decorated with flags. There was a 21 foot Ensign, a 12 foot Union Jack and other British flags. Also a very large Royal Standard. The flag-staff was covered at the top with variegated glass lanterns.

Mr. C. Healy.— Illuminated arches and coloured lamps formed into Prince of Wales' Feather, with the motto, "P.W."

Mrs. Footner displayed a beautiful Hanoverian Star, with the motto "God bless our most noble Prince." There was a fine transparency of Britannia with a Lion; also the Sword of Justice, with the motto, "The Guardians of our liberties." Another transparency showed the Prince of Wales' Plume, with the letters, A P W, and motto, "accept our welcome." There was another transparency showing the Beaver with the maple leaf entwined with the Shamrock, Rose and Thistle at the four corners. The motto was, "hail to our future King," under a rising sun. There were also the mottoes, "God Save Queen Victoria," "God Save Prince Albert Edward." The front of the building was also decorated with very handsome revolving Chinese lanterns.

Adams & Co, carpenters and gilders, exhibited a fine transparency of a Rampart Lion. On the second story was a crown, with strings of variegated lamps.

Mr. Charles Alexander displayed a transparency of the Prince of Wales' feather, with the mottoes "Come gie's your han." "A Scotch Welcome" with a pretty device showing two hands clasped, Variegated lamps were also hung round the building, with flags, &c.

Mr. A. Douglas exhibited a transparency of the Prince of Wales' Feather. Mr. Denis Kelly had a similar transparency.

Charles Atkinson & Co., displayed a large transparency with the motto, "Welcome to Canada, son of our noble Queen," in appropriate scrolls with two beavers in a tree. On the top about the centre was a Prince of Wales' feather over a Coronet. On the right hand side was an English Lion; underneath was a representation of the Victoria Bridge. At the bottom in the centre, was the Montreal Coat of Arms, and in the left a fine transparency of the Great Eastern.'

Mr. William Wilson made a beautiful display. In the front window was a fine transparency of the Royal Arms, supported by a harp and thistle, with a beaver holding a maple leaf in his mouth at the base. On each side were the red and white rose. The Irish motto "Erin go Bragh" was placed over the harp; the appropriate motto, "nemo me impune lacessit" over the thistle, and cead mille failthe over the centre. The harp was also elegantly circled with a wreath of Shamrock. richly patterned carpets, and stuffs of many dyes and so forth. The floors were richly carpeted throughout. In fine relief to this back ground stood two statutes on draped pedestals,

Davidson & Clarken displayed a large transparency in their lower window, with a Prince of Wales' Feather beneath, and the Royal Arms, with the motto "Prince of Wales—Welcome to Canada."

James Morrison & Co., had a large transparency of the Prince of Wales' Plume, brilliantly lit up with gas. But the finest part of the display at this establishment was made by the interior of the shop itself, where the finest wares sold by this well known firm had been arranged with a degree of taste and skill, which rendered the effect as charming as it was unique. Silk ribbons of a variety of colours were suspended from the roof throughout the shop, hanging down some three or four feet. all in ranks and rows. The windows were filled with similar goods, rich and varied silks, crapes, and other gay merchandize, while the counters were spread with Cashmere shawls. One of these represented the Queen at full length; the other was a bust of Prince Albert. They were placed in the two door-ways. The back upper windows were similarly decked, and the whole blazed with light. There was no more attractive show throughout the whole city.

Stirling and Williamson displayed a handsome transparency of the Royal Arms, with St George's Flag suspended from the front window of the building.

Murphy Bros, made a novel display by exhibiting the Motto, "Welcome to our Prince," composed of eighteen illuminated globes, each globe bearing a letter.

Mr. C. W. Sharpley exhibited a transparency with the Irish motto "Cead mille failthe," with variegated lamps, &c.

Ringland & Ewart had a fine transparency, at the upper window, of a Beaver, with the Prince of Wales' feather in the centre, and flags, all centred into the Crown of England. The Prince of Wales' feather was surrounded by the Shamrock and Thistle.

Mr. William Middleton showed a transparency of the Prince of Wales' feather.

Mrs. Robinson had a fine transparency, with the words, "Welcome, Prince, to Canada," "Long live our noble Queen." A figure in the centre window was also dressed up to represent Her Majesty.

Mr. John Martin exhibited a transparency with a Crown and appropriate motto.

There was a handsome display at the premises occupied by Starke & Co. A transparency of the Royal Arms was placed in the central window, with the mottoes, "God Save the Queen," "Welcome to the Prince of Wales," &c. Flags were also suspended across the street, with festoons of variegated lamps, &c.

H. Bessunger displayed a handsome transparency with a portrait of the Prince of Wales, and the German Motto, "Es lebe die Koniginn," signifying "Long live the Queen;" and also, "Hoch lebe der Prinz." There was also a transparency of a Crown.

D. M. McPherson exhibited a transparency of the Royal Arms.

McDonough, Muir & Co. displayed a transparency with the word "Welcome." Also, the Prince of Wales' Plumes and Shield, with the Royal standard and Union Jack. There was an evergreen crown at the top with the letters V. & A. placed on either side, with the letters P. W. below.

Levin & Davis exhibited a Prince of Wales' Plume, with another transparency of the Royal arms, as well as a crown in gas.

THE CRYSTAL BLOCK.

There was a magnificent display at this block, occupied by H. Benjamin, J. Henderson & Co., and R. Sharpley. In the first place, there were seven arches on a line with the curb-stone, beautifully decorated with evergreens, and brilliantly lit up with gas and variegated lamps. The centre arch is 35 feet high, on the top of which was a coronation crown lit up with gas. Also a transparency representing a portrait of Prince Albert and Victoria. On the side arches was a Prince of Wales' plume in gas, with the following appropriate mottoes:—"To the memory of the departed Stephenson," [in mourning]; and also "Canada welcomes England's Future King." The whole extent of these arches occupies a space of over 100 feet.

In the centre window of Messrs. Savage and Lyman's premises was exhibited a beautiful transparency of the Prince of Wales. On the right was the Prince of Wales' coat of arms, and on the left the City arms. Flags were gaily waving above. and the letters A. E. were formed with variegated lamps.

Mr. Thomas Mussen's premises were adorned by fine transparencies of her Majesty the Queen, Prince Albert and the Prince of Wales. Flags, &c., were waving in profusion.

Mr. G. Levey displayed two transparencies, the one representing the Wales feathers, with the motto "Ich Dien," and the other the Royal Arms with the motto "Welcome to our future King." Over the door was a transparency of of the Royal Arms, and there was also in front a large Brunswick star brilliantly illuminated with gas. Flags in profusion were also fluttering in the breeze.

Mr. H. Prince displayed a fine transparency of the Prince of Wales plume, and another of the Royal Arms, with flags, banners, &c.

Mr. Hugh O'Neil displayed a large transparency, with the words "Long live our future King." There was also the appropriate Scotch motto,

"Better loe'd ye canna' be,
Will ye no' come back again."

Mr J. Palmer exhibited a transparency with the initials V and R over the door.

Mr. Alen Levey had a large transparency of the Prince of Wales plume, and the initials A and E, and also V and R, with variegated lamps, &c.

Mr. T. W. Boyd exhibited one transparency with the motto "Our Queen and the land we live in." There was another of the Prince of Wales' plume, and the words "Victoria" and "Albert." A third transparency exhibited "Thrice welcome to England's future King."

Mr. A. Brahadi's premises were embellished by three transparencies—one of the Royal Arms, another representing a view of the Victoria Bridge, and the third the Prince of Wales' plume; also the mottoes, "Long live our noble Queen," and "Welcome to our future King."

THE COURT HOUSE.—The decorations of this fine edifice were very well executed. The front was illuminated in a manner similar to the Montreal Bank, except that the pillars were not entwined. All along the cornices, the pediment and the frieze were illuminated with coloured gas-lights. The windows were all filled with transparencies, the centre block containing the Governor General and the Commander of the Forces. In the centre was the Prince of Wales' crest. The centre pediment was surrounded by a crown and a Royal Standard. The lower belt was all illuminated with coloured lights; over the centre portico was a figure of Justice at one end, one of Mercy at the other, and a figure of the Queen in the centre, supported on either side by the Royal Arms and the City Arms. On the frieze at each end was the motto, "God save the Queen." On the centre frieze "H. R. H. the Prince Consort," "Albert Prince of Wales," "and all the Royal Family," the latter portion of the sentence being between the other two lower down. On the centre pediment was a star and garter in gas, the garter bearing the inscription "Canada, the brightest jewel in the British crown.

Mr. Edward Bowie exhibited a transparency of a crown with the initials V and R. Another was the Royal Arms; also the motto, "God save the Queen," and a Prince of Wales' plume, with the word "Welcome."

The Upper Commissariat Office was beautifully decorated. Large transparencies draped with the Royal Arms decorated each window. A crown appeared over the door, and the front of the building was tastefully decorated with green boughs. Over the front gallery was the motto "Ich Dien" in variegated colors. In the upper windows were two Prince of Wales' plumes with a crown in the centre.—Chinese lanterns, lamps, flags, banners, &c., added to effect of the whole.

Mr. P. B. Badeaux made a display of various transparencies, &c.

The Institut Canadien requires a more detailed description. In a line along the rooms were seven transparencies. The first and last represented the initial letters P and W. The second represented Her Majesty the Queen, surmounted by a crown. The third exhibited a beaver with a maple leaf. The fouth showed the Arms of the Canadien Institut with the mottoes, "Altius Tendimus," "Travail and Concorde." The fifth was a Prince of Wales' plume, and the sixth represented the initials H. R. H. The windows above were also beautifully decorated with transparencies and appropriate mottoes.

Mr. Brossard exhibited a transparency with Victoria and Albert, crowned with a wreath, and another of Napoleon and Eugenie.

Mr. J. Boulanget displayed transparencies of the Royal Arms and Prince of Wales' Plume, with flags, banner, &c.

Mr. J. Phelan exhibited similar transparencies, with the Motto of the Prince of Wales and other decorations.

Mr. J. Hutchison's premises were also decorated with transparencies of the Royal Arms and Prince of Wales' Plume, with variegated lamps, &c.

Mr. R. Morris made a fine display. There were two large transparencies in the shop windows with a Union Jack between. In the centre window of the first story, was a transparency with the very loyal motto, "The Bridge of Fealty that connects us is for all time." Below was a view of the bridge and city. On one window were the names "Stephenson," "Ross" and "Keefer." On the other window was the continuation of the sentence "And the able hands that built the Bridge. In the upper story was the Prince of Wales' Plume, with the Motto 'Welcome "our" Royal Prince." In front, below, was a bust of the Prince of Wales and vases of beautiful flowers on either side. The whole was surmounted by a gilt crown.

Hon. S. De Beaujeu's residence was brilliantly illuminated with various devices in gas.

A. Wilson, Confectioner, decorations in gas, flags, &c.

J. Lovis, 25 Craig Street West, illuminated and decorated.

Mr. William H. Rice displayed transparencies with the Prince of Wales' plume and the Royal arms.

THE BALL—EXTERIOR OF THE BUILDING.

Though a little in advance of the Ball, we, for the sake of completing our description of the festivities so far as that is possible,—place here an account of the building erected by the committee, which we quote from a preceding number of the Montreal Herald.

Under the directions of the Executive Committee, and with the active support of the Hon. John Young, its President, Mr. Taft, the designer of the building, and Mr. Maxwell, the chief of the mechanical department, associated with Mr. Taft in the superintendence, have shown that the speed of Aladdin's palace building need hardly continue to rank as fabulous. The work done for the honor of the Princess Bluruddin could hardly have had a more magnificent appearance than that which our loyal respect is preparing for our Prince. The Ballroom which has sprung up in a few weeks, is a circular building of about 275 feet in diameter, having on one part of its periphery a handsome entrance flanked with battlemented towers. This projection for the entrance is to be thrice repeated at other parts of the circumference, and there will be four smaller ones, all of them furnished with towers at the angles. The whole will be surmounted by a pavillion-shaped roof, with a cupola rising aloft over an open lantern. All the vertical points of the building will be decorated with pennons; and over all will float the standard of the sovereign, from a flag staff about forty five feet high. The general appearance, by daylight, is that of a pavillion—or pleasure palace. Its features, as according to the cannons of art they ought to do, will indicate unmistakeably its character. The walls outside will be chiefly of a light pink, and the roof a dark brown or black, but a highly agreeable effect will be produced by the broken outline of the turrets and the variety and constant changes of colours as the flags wave in the wind and blend or contrast with one another, and with the colours of the building behind them A happy inequality on the North side of the large area on which the Pavillion stands, has lent itself to the formation of a pretty little lake, and the rest of the ground will be converted into an extemporized forest by the plantation of a host of large ever-greens whose foliage will be maintained inperfection during the time required, by liberal applications from the neighbouring Aqueduct. An elegant bridge over a narrow part of the Lake, will conduct the Prince from Sherbrooke street, near which he will reside during his stay, to the entrance appropriated for his use. The beauties of landscape are not to be confined to the artificial decorations within the limits of the Pavillion grounds. From one of their boundaries rises the Royal Mountain clothed with waving green to the summit, and with its sides adorned by glistening villas. This will form a beautiful frame to the whole picture on the North, while on all the other sides will stretch out the glittering metal spires and roofs of the city, and far away beyond the great Victoria bridge, the long blue line of the St. Lawrence, and the mountains which close in the landscape on the South, as Mount Royal does at shorter distance on the North.

So far we have described the exterior of the Pavillion and its surroundings by day. But its chief purpose is for an evening entertainment, and much of what we have pictured above can be seen by daylight only, though we shall probably have moonlight to display the scenery with better effect than daylight could do. The characteristics peculiar and appropriate to its destination, therefore, have not been lost sight of. After dark the forest will shine with a myriad of lamps; the Lake will be covered with water lilies, every one of which will have its broad petals illuminated; the bridge will be likewise lighted up; and from every part of the building a blaze of light will be transmitted through windows richly stained after antique devices, and will throw its colored rays in long pencils over the turf and surrounding objects. The æthetic pleasures of landscape and colour have been judiciously combined with another not less important one. The Committee have wisely remembered that dancing is warm work—that an opportunity for cool air is therefore a desirable addition to a ball room; and finally that, though there will be only one Prince, doubtless the synosure of all eyes, there will be a host of Princesses, each of whose eyes will be a synocure for at least another pair. They have also reflected that after these eyes shall have looked upon one another for some time in the light of the ball room, the tongues and ears attached to them may have their part to play in the amusements, which will be most conveniently done at a distance from the throng. Outside of the ball room, therefore, there is a large open gallery, capable of holding four thousand persons, communicating with an interior gallery, which will serve for what, without indiscretion, we may speak of as a little quiet flirtation; as well as for promenaders induced by the mere desire for fresh air, by astronomical, or other outdoor pursuits.—The floor of this gallery is the roof of the outer rooms and other adjuncts of the main apartment, which will be ranged round the outer circle of the building as will be presently described.

The Donegana Hotel deserves special notice. Over the portico were placed two brilliantly illuminated statues of her Majesty and Prince Albert, and a bust of the Prince of Wales. Above these were placed the Prince of Wales' plume; over the front gate was a large vase of flowers, and on either side an abundance of flags, variegated lamps, &c. The shrubbery was also beautifully decorated with variegated lamps, &c.

Passing the Donegana Hotel we came to numerous private houses, all brilliantly illuminated with variegated lamps, Chinese lanterns, designs in gas, wreaths of flowers, transparencies and other decorations.

At the Old Water Works special preparation was made for this occasion. There was a fine Prince of Wales' plume in gas, and over the centre of the gate, where, about 20 years ago, was placed the first fountain ever erected in Montreal, a large Union Jack was suspended, supported on each side by evergreens. At the side was a Prince of Wales' plume in gas, and also the letters P. W. in gas. In the front of the building is erected a large platform.

The old Government House was brilliantly illuminated, and tastefully decorated with festoons of evergreens. On the opposite side of the street a platform was erected in the Government Garden for the accommodation of spectators by Mr. Shepherd.

Mr. J. Rattray displayed transparencies of various descriptions, and Mr. G. Mochrie similar ones.

Mr. Alexander McGibbon made a beautiful display. One transparency of an enormous Scotch Thistle, five feet by three and a half, with the motto, "Nemo me impune lacessit," was specially worthy of notice. The next transparency was one with the Prince of Wales' Plume, 5 feet square, with the motto, "Long live the Prince." The third was a Crown of the same size, withthe motto, "God Save the Queen." Outside were the two large letters in gas V and R, and over the entrance door was a transparency of the Royal arms, with a profusion of flags, evergreens, wreaths, &c.

Mr. Edward Thompson exhibited various transparencies, representing the Prince of Wales' Feathers, the City Arms, the Rose and the Harp with a wreath of Shamrock. There were also wreaths formed of variegated lamps, &c. Mrs. Wilkes' premises were decorated with transparencies of a similar description.

Mr. A. P. Savage displayed a brilliant Brunswick Gas Star, with variegated lamps, festoons and wreaths of flowers, &c. Mr. Edward Himes exhibited some fine transparencies and other decorations.

Mr. James Parkin had over his door a large portrait of the Queen. On one side a portrait of Prince Albert and on the other the Prince of Wales. There was also a transparency of the Royal arms, and the mottoes, "Long live the Prince; "God bless the Queen and the Royal Family;" with flags, banners, &c.

The display made by Mr. A. Hoffnung, jeweller, was magnificent. The centre of the building immediately over the door was occupied with a very beautiful Prince of Wales' plume in crystal particles, cut diamond fashion. About 70 or 80 gas jets behind this produced a most beautiful effect, the constant motion of the light producing a corresponding motion of the prisms through the glass, giving it a glittering and gorgeous effect. The three upper windows were filled with beautiful transparencies, in brilliant colors, with the Royal Standard and motto, "God Save the Queen," and the Prince of Wales' plumes and motto, "Ich Dien." on each side of the Crystal Feathers were first a magnificent transparency with a Crown, Cushion and motto, and another bearing the Canadian Arms and Standards, with the following apropopriate motto: "Canada, the brightest laurel in England's diadem of Colonies. The whole produced a magnificent effect aod attracted a large share of attention.

Mr. J. Beaudry exhibited a large gas star, two feet in diameter, with balls of fire, flags, banners, &c.

H. & H. Merrill displayed a transparency of the Prince of Wales' plume, with the word "Welcome;" also, flags and other decorations.

Wm. Benjamin & Co. had a crystal star, illuminated with gas, with drapery, &c. Also, five transparencies, the first of which has the Royal Arms, with the motto "Welcome to our Future King." There were besides two Prince of Wales' plumes, and the words "Commerce" and "Agriculture," Two full-sized figures of the Queen and Prince Albert, with festoons of evergreens and variegated lamps, completed the decorations.

Trigg & Nichols' exhibited various neat transparencies. The first being the Royal Shield and City Arms and the words "Welcome" and the Crown and Prince's plume, as well as the Lion and the Beaver, made up the second and third.

Dr. Thayer displayed a handsome transparency of a crown, and another of a Prince of Wales' plume, with the salutation "Salve Reginae nostrae fili!" Also the motto "We are glad to welcome H.R H. the Prince of Wales," with appropriate figures of the Eye and the Ear. Lastly, a crown and the letters V. R. in coloured glass.

Mr. C. Dion displayed a transparency of the Prince of Wales.

Dr. Picault made a fine display with a transparency 56 feet long, being the whole length of the house, with a Prince of Wales' plume in the centre. Each window was also brilliantly illuminated with globe lamps, &c.

The Commercial Advertiser had a large crown lit with gas, with flags, &c.

ST. PAUL STREET

The City Hall.---The dome of this building was lighted inside with three curcles of Gas lamps reflected from tin plates placed behind each jet the jets being arranged round the pillars in the centre of the dome. The windows in the dome will be filled with lanterns of various colours and patterns, above all two immense railroad lamps will throw large pencils of light over city and river. A large size Union Jack will float from the flag staff; and every third window below will be filled with transparencies appropriate to the occasion. The interior of the Concert Hall will be brilliantly illuminated and every window not filled with pictures will stream with the ordinary gas light.

Messrs. Gillespie Moffatt &Co.---This firm have obtained several very beautiful illumminations from Mr. Ramsay painted by the artists, whom we have mentioned as the painters of the designs for the several squares. These illuminations are as follows, viz; The Royal Arms with motto proper, the City Arms twice; and the Plumes of the Prince of Wales twice. The whole had a very pleasing effect.

Messrs. Frothingham Workman & Co. ---Have erected an evergreen arch across the small street leading from St Paul Street to their warehouse. The keystone of this arch is carried up several feet, and upon it is placed a plume of the Prince of Wales in diamonds. On each side of this there are three gothic windows stained and having on them appropriate designs, emblematic of the various countries forming the British Empire in the northern Hemisphere. These were lighted up last night and had a very pretty appearance.

Desmarteau & Plamondon.---A great display of candles.

Mr. Geo. Hagar.---A transparency representing the Royal Arms, crown, &c.

Mr. L. Marchand made a great display of flags and variegated lamps.

St. Paul Street was well decorated with bunting; but for the most part, the wholesale Merchants did not make much show during the illumination, probably having a wholesome fear of the danger to be expected from lights without attendants.

ST. FRANCOIS XAVIER STREET.

At Mr. Hornes store there were very beautiful transparencies from the atelier of Mr. Ramsay. They consisted of a representation of the Royal Arms in the centre window. On the left were the words—"Welcome to Canada" asd on the right, the words "Long Live Victoria." At the bottom were the Beaver and the Maple Leaf and the mottow "Cead Mille Failthe."

Corrigans---Was decorated with transparencies of the city arms; Royal arms; a Plume; and a great many flags.

Benning and Barsalou's Auction Rooms. ---Were adorned with a rich display of evergreens, vases, lights &c.

The Union Buildings were decorated by general subscription of the various tennants with festoons of coloured lamps elegantly arranged. There was also a kind of canopy of flags stretched betweeu it and the American Consulate opposite.

Mr. Dorwin's---The American Vice Consulate---had a very elegant appearance, draped with variously coloured bunting from the flag staff to the basement. In the middle of the design was a picture of Washington in his well known suit of sables. The shield over his head bore the American emblems and the motto E. Pluribus Unum.

MCGILL STREET.

This street was well decorated with flags, and a number of the inhabitants illuminated with variegated lamps, but there were not many large designs exhibited. We noticed variegated lamps in festoons at Mr. Kings, Mr. Carlisles, Mr. Brown's Messrs. Kelly and Rogers, who had hoistsd a large green Irish flag.

Messrs. Morgan showed festoons of variegated lamps.

Mr. McKay had transparencies in each window, one presenting emblems of Agriculture, with the motto--"Prosperity to Agriculture." Another containing the arms of England, with the motto---"God save the Queen." Another with a Plume and "God Bless the Prince;" another with a crown and God Bless the Queen; and one more with ships, and the words "ships Colonies and Commerce."

Messrs. Muir & Co. and Mr. N. S. Whitney, had several elegant lamps.

COMMISSIONER STREET.

Messrs. Clark Winks & Co.---Had a beautiful show of gas illuminations. On the top of their large warehouse towards the River front there was a Plume in the centre with a P. and W. on each side of it each twelve feet high; and on the St. Paul Street side there was a star in the centre and the letters A. and E. on each side of it. The banister all round the top of the building was lit up with gas in crystals.

The office of the Canadian R. S. M. S. line was brilliantly illuminated was a star of diamonds and rubies throwing a glorious effulgence over the harbour.

THE BON FIRE.

While in this quarter of the town, it may be well to describe the grand Bonfire on St. Helen's Island, which lit up the sky for a considerable time. Sixteen barrels of pitch, tar and rosin, together with heaps of dry wood, were the constituents of the pile. The illumination was also assisted by the discharge of great quantities of signal-rockets.

SHERBROOKE STREET.

Dr. Guilbault—Prince of Wales' Plumes and Crown.

Mr. H. Lyman—Star, Plume, Royal Arms, &c.

Mr. B. Holmes—Royal Arms and Plumes. The adjacent houses were also beautifully illuminated.

Mr. Hope—Beautiful display of Chinese lanterns, colored lamps, &c.

Mr. Dinning—A. E. and colored lights, &c.

SCATTERED.

W. S. Walker, St. Lawrence Main Street.—A star.

H. Smith, St. Lawrence Main Street.—A Prince of Wales' Plume. G. Griffin, do. J. Cameron, do. Daniel Harmer, Royal Arms.

Wm. Dalton, Prince of Wales' Plume.

Mr. C. E. Delisle, Craig Street.—Prince of Wales' Plume, Royal Arms, trees in front, decorated with colored lamps, &c.

E. Pickup, St. François Xavier Street.—Tranparencies of Royal Arms, lighted up with gas, Mottoes "God Save the Queen," &c.

Messrs. Lyman, Cote House.—Wreaths of evergreen surrounding crown, letters V R in colored illumination, surmounted by Royal Arms and flags with the Prince of Wales' feather in evergreen.

Mr. W. A. Townsend, Beaver Hall Terrace.—This residence was tastefully decorated flowers, evergreens and flags, surmounted with the British ensign and pendant. A transparency of the British crown surrounded by the flags of all nations. Beaver and maple of Canada, variegated coloured lamps with a brilliant red light from a powerful reflector suspended from the flag staff.

Mr. J. P. Ashton, 95 Mountain Street.—Transparency of plumes in each window, the word welcome and flags.

Mr. J. Nelson, (Lawford & Nelson,) Dorchester and Hubert Streets.—The eave of the house on the two Streets, and that of the gallery and bay window festooned with evergreens, with Chinese lanterns suspended between each festoon, large ensign on flag pole over centre of house, and six small flags at different parts on the gables, &c. Monogram of Prince's initials in colored lamps, and P. of W. feather illuminated.

C. A. Low, Esq., and F. Lawford, Esq , Sherbrooke Street.—A triple arch in evergreens over the fountain, centre arch surmounted with the Prince's feather, and motto round the arch "Welcome to our Prince," the two smaller arches, one surmounted with two leaves, having "Ottawa" under one and under the other with a bunch of maple leaves with "Canada" the letters all worked in green moss on a pink ground.

The double gallery of the houses in rear were filled with lamps and small paper lanterns of various colors and shapes, and two large flags are hoisted over the entrance doors. The fountain will played with a strong gas light on it and the arches; the latter ornamented with lamps distributed among the foliage.

Messrs. Thompson and McNiven's buildings, Cathcart Place.—Block of eight houses was decorated with a large illuminated letter in each window, forming the mottoes of "God bless the Queen," and "Welcome to our Prince," in Cathcart Street, and "England for ever," on University Street, and from one end to the other, a continuous line of 300 coloured lamps, forming a beautiful contrast to the large letters. Along the whole line of the roof, there was one of the best shows of flags that we noticed in any part of the city. This block is occupied by Messrs Vass, Buntin, Johnson Thompson, Claudel, James Thompson, H. McCulloch, Mrs. Hamilton and Mr. McIver.

Mr. T. Bouthillier, Beaver Hall.—A crown of gas and Prince of Wales' feathers, letters V R and P W in copper tubing for gas.

The Theatre Royal was lighted up with transparencies of the Royal Arms, the portico and front of the building being entwined and studded with variagated colored lights.

The residence of the Belgian Consul was brilliantly illuminated with transparencies and colored lights, thickly dispersed in the trees facing the terrace, giving a very brilliant effect, with transparencies of Belgian and and Royal Arms.

R. H. Thomas—Good illumination, arranged in circles over the doors and windows, with a large number of other gaslights, presenting a very beautiful effect.

THE ILLUMINATION OF THE R. C. ECCLESIASTICAL BUILDINGS.—Most of the Roman Catholic Buildings were brilliantly illuminated on Saturday night. The Palace of Monseigneur was brilliantly lighted up; so was the Grey Nunnery, the Seminary, the College Ste. Marie, and the others with more or less considerable display.

St. Mary Street, as far as Molson's College and Church, was excellently illuminated, the Royal Arms and Prince of Wales' Feathers appearing in many windows in good style. The College and Church were brilliant with gas, but there were no transparencies.

St. Denis Street was also conspicuous for its happy display of loyal feeling. The street, throughout, was well lighted, the residence of A. M. Dorion, Esq, M. P. P., being in more than ordinary style. In the distance, the Catholic institution, so well known as the House of Providence. was illuminated with much taste. We regret, however, to have noticed the absence of all sign of regard for the occasion on the part of the Hon. J. P. O. Chauveau, Superintendent of Education, whose residence is in this street, and looked as gloomy as a prison house.

WINDSOR TERRACE.

The residences of Mr. A. Ferguson, Mr. J Torrance, and Mrs. Miller, were ornamented with colored lamps.

Mr. Thomas fine residence on the Mountain had three railway lamps on the roof, making a magnificent show over that part of the city.

Bonaventure Hall.—Many of the windows in this large building were filled with transparencies, and the whole was finely lit up with gas.

Mr. Ramsay.—St. Antoine Street.—In the windows of Mr. Ramsays residence were two portraits painted by Mr. Raphael as transparencies, one representing the Queen and the other the Prince of Wales. They were gems of art, and attracted a great deal of attention and yet not a bit more than they deserved.

Mr. E. Maitland, Dorchester Street W.—Mr. Maitlands residence, was beautifully illuminated by a vast number of lamps placed round the cupola and having a very fine effect.

Hon. L. Renaud, Dorchester Street W.—Oil lamps prettily arranged on the gates.

W. C. Phillips, house was decorated in a similar manner.

Bellevue Terrace, Dorchester Street West.—The residences of Mr. S. Bethune, Mr. Bailey of the Grand Trunk and several other gentlemen were illuminated by festoons of lamps.

Dorchester Street.—The princely mansion of Harrison Stevens was the chief attraction in this street. The surrounding grounds wore an enchanting air from the numerous Chinese lights, and the building was throughout illuminated. Rockets were thrown up by Mr Stevens during the evening with fine effect.

The High School, and Normal school were also conspicuous in this street for being handsomly illuminated, the pillars in front of the latter building were wreathed with evergreens, from which were suspended numerous chinese lamps.

Drummond street was distinguished by the recherche style in which the residence of the U.S. Vice Consul, Canfield Dorwin Esq, was decorated. Immediately on the principal door was an illuminated Prince's feather, with the usual happy word "welcome" underneath. Surmounting the feather was the flag of the Union; while the Union Jack and Stars and stipes were gracefully draped from the balcony. The house was illuminated throughout, and from several trees in the elegant enclosure hung Chinesee lamps with beautiful effect.

Anglican Bishop, Bishop's residence in Beaver Hall was briliantly illuminated with devices in gas, representing the Prince of Wales' feather, &c.

Mountain Street—Mr. Thomas McCready.—A Flag Staff with British Ensign and Union Jack, across the streett with Cead Millt Failta, and opposite his house a large bonfire composed of Tar Barrels &c , &c.

Mrs. Lavoie's, Craig Street, was decorated with flags, the Prince of Wales' Feathers and the Royal Arms; and the following motto over the entrance door, "Bienvenu."

ST. ANTOINE HALL.

At the residence of John Torrance Esq., St. Antoine Street, was a brilliant design in gas, consisting of [over the centre gate] a crown & a Prince of Wales feather.

Branches of gas extended from the feather to each pillar of the centre gate and above to the right and left of the feather, were two brilliantly lighted stars.

Side Gates.—Over each was a P. W. with a brilliant star above a little to the outside.

Flags.—Two pennants, one over each side gate. One large flag over the centre of the House—and one over each wing, and one at the corner of the brick wall at the intersection of Mountain and St. Antoine Street. The design was erected by C. Garth Engineer.

On St. Antoine Street a little beyond Mr. Torrance's residence is an elegant arch reaching across from Portland Place to St. Antoine Place.

On one side is the inscription, "Welcome Lord of the Isles," on the other side;—"Long live our future King."

Mrs. Clarke's private boarding house, Craig Street, was very prettily illuminated with three transparencies. The portrait of the Prince of Wales, the Crown, with the motto "V.R," and the Royal Arms, with the Rose, Thistle and Shamrock entwined, with the following motto, "Ich Dien."

Mr. Harris and Mr. O'Heir.---each a star in gas.

Messrs. McMillan and Carson.---Row of lamps; a globe, with a crown in the centre.

Mr. J. S. Evans.---There was a large flag on a line stretched across the street from Mr. Evans to Mr. Seaths, and several smaller flags exhibited in the same way, and Mr. Evans showed a number of variegated lamps, as did also, Mr. Patton, and Messrs. Robertson and Hutchins.

Mr. Walsh made a great display of drapery arranged on festoons from the attic to basement.

Pape & Co.---St. Lawrence House Prince of Wales feather, Royal Arms; in gas transparency with flags and evergreens intermixed with much taste.

GOVERNMENT ARCH IN WELLINGTON STREET.

This arch is erected in the castellated style with two octagonal towers. The height to the top of the towers is 34 feet. There is a central arch over which runs the motto, "Welcome to Canada," with a Prince of Wales' Plume. All along the top of the arch and towers are placed lamps of stained glass, illuminated with gas. On either side are the city arms and those of the Harbor Commissioners with various other devices. The arch alone without the towers, is 22 feet high, and the width inside between the two turrets is 17 feet. The thickness is about 6 feet. Festoons of evergreens decorate the interior and the whole is brilliantly illuminated with gas.

ILLUMINATION ON SATURDAY NIGHT,

We publish this morning as full an account as we have been able to collect up to the time of going to press; but it must be evident that it is impossible, on such an occasion, to have all the details with perfect correctness. Many illuminations, especially in the remoter streets, have, doubtless, been omitted, and many more imperfectly described. We have done our best with a very difficult business. We propose, however, to publish a second edition, and, if any corrections are forwarded to us, we shall gladly make the alteration for that edition. As to private residences, we could only do justice to them all by publishing the Montreal Directory entire, for there was scarcely a house where some sign of rejoicing was not apparent. The great centres of attraction, however, were the Montreal and City Banks, Notre Dame Street and the wharves, especially the former. At that corner there was one blaze of fire lighting up the colours of the flags in a very picturesque manner. The wharf, too, besides the fireworks, was rendered attractive by the illumination of the lighthouse tower, two ocean steamers and the three men of war. The Prince came down to town early in the evening, in plain clothes, and a quiet looking carriage, accompanied by the Duke of Newcastle and one or two other gentlemen, intending to get out and walk through the leading streets. But he was recognized near the St. Lawrence Hall, and, but for whipping up quickly and passing on, the people would have had out the horses and have drawn the carriage. We understand that he declared himself greatly delighted; and that many of the gentlemen who have accompanied him say that they have never before seen anything, in the way of illumination, which came up to the ensemble of Great St. James Street and the Place d'Armes.

Amongst the arrivals by the North American, we notice the name of Herbert Ingram, Esq, M.P., for Boston, England, and the proprietor of the well known newspaper,—The Illustrated London News, the pictures of which are so highly esteemed, both for artistical and mechanical talent. We draw attention to the great attractions put forth in our advertising columns.

Montreal, December, 1859.
We take pleasure in bearing testimony to the complete working of the machines manufactured by Mr. E. J. Nagle, having had three in use for the last three months. They are of Singer's pattern, and equal to any of our acquaintance of the kind.
BROWN & CHILDS.
Montreal, December, 1859.
We have used nine of E. J. Nagle's Sewing Machines in our Factory for the past six months, and have no hesitation in saying that they are in every respect equal to the most improved American Machines of which we have several in use.
CHILDS, SCOLES & AMES.
Toronto, April 21st, 1860.
E. J. NAGLE, Esq.—Dear Sir: The three Machines you sent us some short time ago we have in full operation, and must say that they far exceed our expectations; in fact, we like them better than any of I. M. Singer & Co.'s that we have used. Our Mr. Robinson will be in Montreal on Thursday next, and we would be much obliged if you would have three of your No. 2 Machines ready for shipment on that day, as we shall require them immediately.
Yours respectfully,
GILLGATE, ROBINSON & HALL.

THE MONTREAL HERALD

MONDAY MORNING, AUGUST 27, 1860.

The Ball in honor of the Prince comes off to-night, and H.R.H. is expected to make his entry at 10 o'clock. We would recommend our readers to be there, as this will probably be the only opportunity they may have of meeting H.R.H. on such an interesting occasion. The splendor of the building alone should be a sufficient attraction.

The Prince will attend the Indian games to-day.

The Clergy.—Members of the Diocesan Synod intending to be present at the presentation of the address to H.R.H., are informed that the clergy and lay delegates meet in the Judge's Chambers, in the Court House, at 12 to-day.

We are requested to state that the Montreal Temperance Society, Rechabites, Sons of Temperance, and Bands of Hope will meet on the Champ-de-Mars this [Monday] morning, at Eight o'clock, and depart therefrom at half-past eight, to line the streets from H. R. H's. residence to the Montreal Cricket Club Ground, where the Indian and other games are to take place.

Temperance friends are cordially invited to take part in the procession.

Lady Franklin.—One of the greatest attractions at the Inauguration of the Victoria Bridge on Saturday, was Lady Franklin. She was observed by all with great interest On Friday night she was serenaded at Mr. H. Stephens', where she is stopping, by the Germania Band, and, coming out on the balcony, made a little speech, expressive of her thanks for the compliment.

Yesterday morning the Prince attended Divine Service at the new English Cathedral, St. Catherine Street. The building was well filled with the regular congregation, and as many strangers as were able to obtain admission. There was little confusion or parade. His Lordship the Bishop preached, taking as his text—

1st. Cor. 9th Ch. 25th V.

"And every man that Striveth for the Mastery is temperate in all things—Now they do it to obtain a corruptible Crown, but we are incorruptible."

We find various expressions and illustration used in the Scripture to explain to us the nature of the Gospel, and the condition of the Christian. These every where meet us, both in the parables of the Lord, and in the Epistles of the Apostle. In the former, (the parables of Christ) we find, perhaps, more frequent allusions to the state of the Gospel Kingdom, as a whole: in the Epistles we are for ever reminded of our relation to that Kingdom as individuals, and of our place and duty as membes of it. To describe the unity of such members one with another, and their connection with, and dependance upon Christ,—St. Paul speaks of Christians being living stones, built up into the Spiritual Temple of God, forming together one great and complete edifice, dedicated to God, and in which he dwells, as He of old vouchsafed His visible presence in the glorious Temple of Solomon at Jerusalem; and all built upon Christ, as the foundation and chief corner stone, which gives strength and security to the whole. On other occasions the Apostle speaks of beleivers, under the figure of many members united in one body, and having different duties and offices, the head of which is Christ,—the life, the intelligence, the wisdom, and the Glory of all. So also, to describe the difficulties we have to encounter, belikens a christian to a soldier carrying on a continuous warfare in an enemy's country,—and in his Epistle to the Ephesians, he enumerates the various portions of that Spiritual Armour by which he is to be secured from danger,—the breastplate of righteousness, the shield of faith, the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Sprit. The captain would he follow is the Lord Jesus Christ, and the ensign around which he rallies, is the banner of the Cross. In the chapter from which I have selected a verse for my text on this occasion, St. Paul in these latter verses, compares the Christian to those persons, who used to enter the lists as competitors for the prizes in the public games, which were constantly being celebrated in different parts of Greece - and with great propriety, and that skilful adaptation of his mode of argument, which is so remarkable in this Apostle, does he allude to the subject of these games, when writing to the Corinthians, since the place where some of these were held, was in the neighborhood of their own city of Corinth—so that they all must immediately have understood the meaning, and and must have felt the full force of his argument; and very probably by themselves in their own persons, or in the persons of their intimate friends had striven for mastery in them. St. Paul reminds them, how that when intending to enter the lists as a competitor for the prize in the race, or any of those energetic exertions that require a great display of bodily activity and endurance, they were used to train and discipline themselves with unwearied care, submitting to denials of many usual bodily gratifications, without hesitation, and moreover rising early, feeding themselves with moderation, and exercising themselves by rule, that their wind be good and lasting, their muscle strong and full, and no unhealthy action excited in their system, such as might injure their strength and lessen their speed and thus destroy all chance of success. Such watchful care over themselves, such self-discipline absolutely necessary if they hoped to win the prizes. No man was ever foolish enough to expose himself to certain defeat and well-merited ridicule, without them. "Every man" (says the Apostle) ye know it so to be "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things." And yet in these games, after all his care and pains, he may not succeed, for again he writes, "know ye not that they which run in a race, run all, but one only, the best among them receiveth the prize." In this respect comparison with the Christian no longer hold good, except by way of contrast. We, as Christians, have our race to run, we must, like the Corinthian competitors, keep our bodies under, and bring them into subjuction, we must not give a loose rein to self-indulgence, to sloth or licentious living, and this, not that like them they may be able to perform great feats of bodily strength, but that by mortifying the deeds of the body, we may give place and preeminence to our spiritual nature; not allowing the corruptable body to press down the soul, nor the earthly tabernacle to weigh down the mind; which soul and mind, in the christian, have been renewed again after the image of their maker; and are capable of high and holy communion with him,

"Every man" (says the Apostle) "Every man that striveth for the Mastery, is temperate in all things" –this holds good in the christian as well as in the competition for victory in the Isthmian Games. Without exercising over ourselves something of the same watchful care and rule of life in our spiritual race, it is a contradiction in terms to say, that we are striving for the mastery at all in our spiritual race, that we have entered the lists at all as candidates for the heavenly race—"For they (says the Apostle to the Romans) that are after the flesh, do mind the things of the flesh, and if ye live after the flesh, ye shall 'die.'" But as I said before, here the comparison ends, the rest is by way of contrast. We run not our race against each other; if one gets a prize, it is not to the loss or hindrance of his fellows—but rather to their gain also. We have no need to guage and measure the successful progress of a brother, envying his swifter course, as if our chance of success was thereby endangered. For crowns there are awaiting every racer; in the christian race, be he first, or be he last, who having striven manfully, and gained a victory over himself, his fallen nature, his evil passions, and the temptations of the enemy, shall arrive in due time at the goal, pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. With this encouragement then, "so run," with such care and such preparation, "that ye may obtain." "One star may differ from another star in Glory." Yet are they all bright, brilliant and perfect—the handi-work of God; and have their appointed place in the firmament of Heaven. If we lose the prize, it cannot be because a brother's hand has snatched it from our grasp. Such is not the nature of our race; but rather every fresh successful combatant in the spiritual contest, is another witness added to the great cloud of Saints already gathered together in Jesus, who testify to us the excellence of His Grace, and have left the prints of their foot-marks along the narrow course of life, as tokens and way-marks, and warnings to us, lest we err from the appointed track, and lose ourselves in the wide wilderness beyond. No, if we fail, it is because we have never really striven for the mastery,—we have not been temperate in all things,—we have not kept our bodies under and brought them into subjection: but we have preferred present ease to future glory, and have bartered away our birthright of an eternal inheritance, for such pleasure, gratification, or self-willed indulgence, as we may chance to fall in with on this perishable earth. And this brings us to the particular consideration of those words which are contained in our text, and in which St. Paul reminds Christians of the greatness of the prize proposed for their reward, who are sucsuccessful in that geat spiritual race in which we are all called to engage. They—the competitors in the Grecian games,—strove earnestly for the mastery, were temperate in all things, and kept their bodies under, in order to win the prize proposed, which, after all, was but a corruptible crown, a perishable honor, in itself of most trifling value. We do it, or as Christians ought to do it, in order to obtain an incorruptible crown, a never fading glory, an enduring substance. And upon this I would remark that however excellent virtue may be, in itself, and however real the satisfaction arising from a consciousness of submission to the law and will of God, and however perfect and pure the requirement of such a state of grace as shall enable us to bring under dominion the lusts of the flesh, and place them in subjection, that we may walk in the liberty of the children of God. Yet that, as this is not now our natural state, not one that we are capable of appreciating, or understanding until we have been already under discipline, but one that, in order to its attainment and perfection, requires that moral training which the Apostle is here inforcing, and which, in its various forms, and according as it thwarts our own wills and inclinations, is so often grevious, troublesome, and distasteful to us; therefore in compassion to the weakness of our nature, God has been pleased, not merely to propose certain duties which we are required to perform, and for the performance of which He offers us sufficient help; but he is also for ever reminding us of the greatness of the rewards which (unworthy as we are of the least of all His mercies) He yet has ready for our acceptance, and which are in his divine economy, necessarily, as it were, connected with the performance of such duties. "The soul of man (observes one of our great divines) in all its choices is naturally apt to be determined by pleasure; and the sensual and inferior appetites (which would draw it off from duty) are continually plying it with such suitable and taking pleasures; and doubtless, there is no way for duty to prevail over them, but proposing greater inducements, offering the soul greater gratifications, bound up with an eternal reward. It is the declaration of St. Paul to the Corinthians, "that if in this life only we have hope, we were of all men most miserable." And let us suppose that, when God bids us fast and pray, mortify our fleshly appetites, abstain from the allurement of sensual pleasures and deny ourselves; being smote upon one cheek to turn the other, and, lastly, to choose death, rather than wilfully commit the least known sin; suppose, I say, that God should command us all these severe precepts, merely as excellent actions in themselves, high degrees of virtue, most pleasing to God, and upon that ground both commanded by Him, and to be performed by us; certainly, these considerations (notwithstanding all the reason and truth that is in them) would yet strike the will but very faintly; for men care not for suffering; while they think it is only for suffering's sake. But, let us take our rule from Christ. "Blessed (says He to His disciples) are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and speak all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake, rejoice and be exceeding glad." But why? Was it then such matter of joy either to be reviled or trampled on, to be calumniated, abused or crushed under the hard rule or power of men? No, certainly; but we have the reason given us for this in the next words—"For great (says Christ) is your reward in heaven." Again, we know how Jesus, reading the state of his heart and knowing the particular care needed by one who had set his heart too much upon things below,—we know how Christ answered the rich young heir who was enquiring of Him the way to heaven. "Go (says He) and sell all that thou hast and give to the poor." Now, certainly, had he stopped here, this would have been as severe a command as could have been passed upon any such enquirer. But, in fact, our Saviour did not require this young man here absolutely to quit his riches, but only to exchange them, and to part with a smaller estate in possession for a greater in reversion, with a small enjoyment now for an infinite hope hereafter. "Do this (says our Saviour) and thou shalt have treasure in heaven." And, further, when our Saviour preached to the world the great Evangelical duty of taking up the Cross, we do not find that He made the mere burden of bearing it, any argument for taking it up. And, therefore, He says "There is no man that hath left house, or brethern, or sister, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake and the Gospel's, but he shall receive an hundred fold, now in this time and in the world to come eternal life." So that we here see the duty and the reward walking hand in hand, the riches of the promises still surpassing the strictness of the precept, and, as it has been well observed, that it is the custom in the royal diadems of Christian Kings—the Cross and the Crown put together. If our God, who knows whereof we are made, and has compassion upon our weakness has thought it right, thus constantly to enforce our several duties by reminding us of the greatness of the rewards proposed for us upon our submission to his precepts, it is surely intended that we should weigh and consider the value of those future rewards, and keep them in remembrance, as a due balance and counterpoise to set against the immediate temptation of sight and sense. And this is most certain, that no man's practice can rise higher than his hopes. It is observed in aqueducts that no pipe or conduit, can force the current of the water higher than the level of the spring head, from whence the water first descends—and in like manner it is not possible for a man who proposes to himself only the rewards of this world, so to rule his life and conversation as to arrive at a better. And the reason is simply this, because, whoever makes these present enjoyments his whole object, must be reckoning them absolutely to be the best thing he can have, and accordingly he looks no further, he expects no better,—and so, it is not to be imagined that he should ever obtain, what he never once cast a thought after. For no man will ever arrive at heaven by chance. When therefore, we are called to take up a cross for Christ's sake to mortify the deeds of the body, to deny ourselves, to be merciful, meek, patient, humble, chaste and pure, let us not shrink from the call that is made upon us but remember the great recompence of the reward the incorruptible crown that awaits us, if found faithful and ready to endure hardships as good soldiers of Christ. It is these very duties that have reference to what St. Paul calls bringing the body under subjection, which are most opposed to the natural man and to the performance of which, perhaps, we require, if we may so say, the greatest encouragement s speaking the trust, in faithfulness not violating a truth, justice towards offenders, or rendering to every one his due, are virtues much more frequent in the world, than temperance, sobriety, and chastity, and such other virtues as have a tendency to limit the enjoyment of the animal man, and which come more properly under what the Apostle calls "the lusts of the flesh," which "war against the soul.' But they do war against the soul, and therefore, we must wage war against them. And it is that we may not only reach heaven, but when admitted there be capable of enjoying the purity and peace of Heaven, that we must be temperate in all things, and put ourselves under discipline and watchful rule. This is often no doubt, painful, irksome and contrary to the present ease and enjoyment But for any worldly object of sufficient importance, what will not man undertake, what self denial submit to, what patient endurance will he not practice, and they do it to obtain a corruptible crown. And shall not we, as Christians, equal in our zeal and steadfastness these children of this world; we, to whom is proposed an incorruptible crown? We have a sure promise of help in our task. And we shall find, too, that light will spring up around our onward faith and present satisfaction reward our ripening labours. But, when the task is over and the labour done,—what tongue can tell, what heart conceive, those good things which God has in store for those that love him. Enduring treasures as contrasted with the perishable, and uncertain treasures of this world. Enduring treasures there, which neither moth nor rust can corrupt nor theives break through and steal, where there is no canker worm of care to corrode the heart, nor disturbance of sin to mar their joy. Riches, honor, glory, peace, rest, knowledge, fellowship with the saints in Christ—Communion with God—whatever the imagination of man can shadow forth, as excellent or desirable. These are the images under which are destined to us, such descriptions of our heavenly inheritance as may excite our desires, and animate our hopes. Shall we forego the prize? We have been entered as candidates for heaven, as baptized christians, we have been put in trust with a great Mystery, shall we forfeit our adoption? Shall we not strive for the mastery, shall we not at the close of our earthly career wish to die the death of the righteous? then let us live the life of the righteous. "Be thou faithful unto death" (saith the Spirit) and I will give thee a Crown of life.

THE GRAND TRUNK COMPANY'S FIREWORKS.

The festivities of this day wound up by a grand display of fireworks, which, for the magnificence of the spectacle has rarely been surpassed, and for extent of ground embraced within the general design, has never been equalled by pyrotechnic exhibitions on this Continent. The field of the exhibition of that term may be used to describe a space so largely occupied by the St. Lawrence, was about two miles or two miles and a-half in extent, and the standing ground for the discharge of the gunpowder was obtained by moving barges at a distance of about one hunred yards below the bridge, and in a line parallel with that structure. The jetty below the bridge covers to the eye of the spectator when standing at a right angle with it,—about six of the piers. This jetty was itself occupied by frames, from which fireworks and especially the grand pieces were discharged; but the line of fire was continued across the river by means of the barges already mentioned, each of 1 0 tons burden. One of these vessels was stationed below each of the 7th, 9th, 11th, 15th, 17th, and 19th piers. Below the thirteenth pier three barges were moved in the direction of the stream, and this formed the centre of the whole line.

ILLUMINATION.—Continued.

Mr. Robertson at the head of Simpson Street showed three large railway lamps each throwing light in a large pencil and for an immense distance.

The inhabitants of Mr. Bulmers Block the McGill College Avenue had a very pretty joint illumination, consisting of a crown in the centre, the Prince of Wales Feather at each end; and a star on each house of the row, which was also decorated with flags.

William Paterson.---Transparency, gas light, Prince of Wales feather &c.

Flynn & Co. McGill Street.---Union Jack flying from roof; Prince of Wales feather and Royal Arms, gas.

John Allan, McGill Street.---Transparency of Prince of Wales feather 8 yards in length.

Mr. Major in Guy street had his house very handsomely decorated with flags and lamps.

Mr. Hagar of Drummond street exhibited a fine light from a large railway lamp placed on his cupola, and a variety of Chinese lamps on his gallery.

MILITIA FORCE ON SATURDAY.

In accordance with general orders, the Volunteer Force mustered punctually on Saturday morning at 8 A.M, on the Haymarket Square.

The Guard of Honour stationed at the reception arch on the long wharf, where His Royal Highness landed, was composed of Captain Dufresne, Lieutenant Rooney, and 100 rank and file of Volunteer Militia Rifles, under command of Col Wily.

Prince's Band wos also in attendance, and performed the national anthem when the Royal Salute was given.

The Field Battery, under command of Captain Stevenson, fired a Royal Salute of 21 guns.

The squadron of Montreal cavalry, and the Lachine troop formed the escort, under the command of Lieut. Col. David, who with Lieut. Col. Lovelace, Captains Ogilvie and Languedoc, Lieuts. Smith and Beaudry, flanked the Royal carriage. Immediately in rear rode Col. Dyde, Lt. Col. Ermatinger, Major Smith, Lt. Col. Thorndyke, Majors Lyman and Penn, and Capt. Fulford. There were guards of honor at the different arches. Opposite the Montreal Bank, the Boston fusiliers with their splendid band, presented arms and drooped their colors, when His Royal Highness passed.

At the Crystal Palace the Light Infantry formed a guard of honor to receive H R.H.

After a brief sojourn at his temporary residence, His Royal Highness proceeded to the Grand Trunk Depot, where a guard of honor of the Volunteer Rifles and No. 2 Lachine Cavalry awaited his arrival. After his return from the bridge, he was escorted by the Cavalry at a rapid pace to his residence.

The Prince personally thanked Lieut. Col. David for the efficient escort he had provided him on the occasion, and immediately afterwards Major General Bruce informed Lt. Col. David that he had received H. R. H.'s commands to convey to the officers and men of the Cavalry his thanks for the service they had performed.
