SIGHTING THE FIRST SHIP.

Shipping intelligence possesses, as a rule, little interest for the general reader, yet, for all this, there is a world of attractiveness and an immensity of importance involved directly and indirectly to a community like Quebec, in the unsavory little item in our marine report this morning, which announces the sighting of the first inward-bound vessel of the season. It is quite natural, too, that this should be the case. The season of navigation is virtually our only source of business, and anything indicating its approach, after six long and weary months of forced idleness and arctic isolation, cannot be other than warmly and gratefully welcomed, especially on the present occasion. Next to actually dropping its anchor in the harbor, the noting of the appearance of this unknown pioneer of our spring fleet, distant though its situation yet may be, is therefore an event fraught with as much gratification and real importance to us generally, as a glimpse of the far off green oasis in the desert to the parched and weary traveller, panting for the shade of its leafy arbors and the relieving effects of its refreshing waters. For our unemployed and necessitous population, this event means the approach of the season of profitable employment and prudent economizing against another winter; and for trade generally in all its branches, the proximate revival of an animation, which, even if it does not come up to the degree of each one's expectations, will be at least a pleasing and healthful change from the indescribable commercial dullness that has so long depressed the hopes and enervated the energies of our business men, and, through them, those of our entire body social. From this point of view, therefore, we think we are justified in giving to the seemingly trivial circumstance of the appearance of this incoming vessel the prominence and importance we do, sincerely hoping that it may prove the auspicious forerunner of an early resumption of that brisk commercial activity, upon which the welfare of so many Quebec interests so intimately depends.

Meeting for Arthur O'Brien's Libration.

London, April 17.—There was a large demonstration in Hyde Park to-day in favor of the liberation of the Tichborne claimant. It is estimated that from 10,000 to 12,000 persons were present.

The Grain Trade.

The Mark Lane Express says the grain trade during the past week has undergone no marked alterations. Sales have been strictly of a conservative character, all qualities except wheat and barley, which are in less demand. The results of the stock taking at the beginning of the month show a very small diminution in London, showing about 554,000 quarters against 560,000 at the end of 1875. For the quarter of the year now commenced, large consumption of foreign wheat may be anticipated. The granary of London is well supplied, the present quantity being about 15,000 quarters, which shows how low prices have increased the demand.

How in Liverpool.

London, April 17.—A desperate fight took place in the streets of Liverpool to-day. Messrs. Butt and O'Sullivan, members of Parliament for the city, had announced their intention of erecting a statue to the memory of the late Sir John Lubbock, a prominent member of the O'Sullivan family. A procession, numbering some thousands, marched to the place. A body of Nationalists, armed with sticks, who had been taken possession of the monument, attacked the procession. The Nationalists were overpowered after a fight in which many persons were badly injured. The statue of Sir John Lubbock was damaged, and the monument was destroyed. The police were called out, and the rioters were dispersed.

Business Prospects.

Business matters in general for the coming season are not looked forward to with very much confidence, but there is little doubt that the year will be, at any rate, an improvement upon its predecessor. By our Commercial on Saturday's issue it will have been noticed that there has been an improved feeling in the lumber trade at home, and that sales have been made at fair prices; that a larger fleet than last year may be expected, and that freights are likely to be not less than 30s. for the Clyde, and other places in proportion. In this market, some 25s. are holding bright pine deals at $21; floated pine, they were sold last year at $21, have this year brought $22. 10s., and have been in greater quantity. Bright spruce have been sold at $20 to $21. In the importing lines matters do not look very bright. Payments have not been coming in, and country merchants are not in want of goods. There is a strong feeling among importers against the iniquitous system by which they have to renew their customers' notes over and over again, the debtor paying only a small fraction upon each as they fall due, and frequently paying nothing at all. Wholesale dealers would seem to have the remedy for this grievance in their own hands, if they would only act in concert, but there is such rivalry amongst them that they are willing to outdo each other in going to any length to push their sales, at a state of things which is anything but calculated to the part of retailers. In this respect our importers are like many of our timber merchants, who are so eager to do business in England, that they outdo each other in price, and thus spoil the market for all parties; whilst the extra quantity of timber sold through this excessive and suicidal eagerness, does not probably amount to over half-a-dozen cargoes in the season. A united effort should be made to do away with the long credit system which has now attained such alarming proportions. Importers also complain of Montreal traders, and travellers for Montreal houses, coming down here and underselling, and actually forcing goods on the customers of our Quebec merchants. The retailer is generally asked what he can do business with the Quebec merchant for, and he is immediately offered better terms, either as to price or extended credit. That this system of doing business does not pay in the long run, the bad state of affairs amongst the mercantile community of Montreal just now affords sufficient evidence. In dry goods imports will be below the average, and the same remark applies to groceries. Some dealers in both these lines look forward to doing a fair season's business, whilst others take a more gloomy view of the situation. There is no doubt that if the various harbor and other improvements, including the North Shore road were to be pushed forward, the effect on general business, locally speaking, would be considerable. All other lines are also so intimately connected with the lumber, that dulness in the latter more or less affects the rest. If the trade in small lumber with the States were to revive, it would have a good effect, but of this there is no present prospect, although there is an impression that the Centennial celebration will improve all branches of trade in that country, and a demand for Canadian lumber, to a certain extent, may arise in the fall. In the city we hear of several buildings which are about to be erected during the coming season, but operations in this respect are likely to be so limited as to cause little demand for lumber in the local market, which is at present exceedingly dull. We are this year without our ice-barrier opposite the city, and the various craft will thus be able to prepare to leave port early. The first steamer outwards, the Heaver, belonging to Messrs. A. Frazer & Co., leaves on the 24th for the lower ports.

The blue expanse of water before the city certainly looks better at this season than a mass of dirty, dangerous and cold-producing ice, the usual spectacle in years during which an ice-bridge has been allowed to form; and now that the new Ferry Company has been inaugurated, and has so suspiciously commenced operations by taking cargo and passengers at once at summer rates, we trust that next winter they will continue the enlightened policy they have so well begun, by making all their charges moderate and reasonable, and then, when the principal argument in favor of an ice-bridge has been thus disposed of, we hope that those who have so strenuously opposed the breaking of the bridge will be able to see the matter in other respects. In the meantime, the absence of a bridge will enable all port operations to be commenced earlier, and in a few days we shall be all alive again, and ready for the first arrival from sea.

EASTERN MONDAY AND THE BANKS.

In announcing that Eastern Monday was a legal holiday in this Province, we were undoubtedly correct, although it is difficult to see how it can be so, when the banks are open, and the public are coming under their control as usual. Whatever power, however, the Provincial authorities claim to possess in the matter as far as their own departments and public establishments are concerned, appears to be denied by the banks, which hold that, as all legislation respecting banks and banking is the property of the Dominion, the Province has no inherent right to interfere with the prosecution of their legitimate business upon days which are not legal holidays by authority of the Dominion. They accordingly kept open as usual yesterday. Their view certainly seems to be the correct one, and it would be well therefore, until the public should take note of their determination and guide themselves accordingly.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Line.

New York, April 17.—Judge Spear in the Superior Court to-day, on motion of the Counsel for Butts Hatch, granted an injunction against Sydney Dymond and Jay Gould to prevent them from dissolving the Pacific Mail Steamship Line. The defendants are alleged to have conspired to control the line, and to have obtained the control of the line by means of the Pacific Mail.
