R. W. SELLAR TELLS HOW CANADA DISTRIBUTES MONEY AND "TERMS"

Weekly Newspaper Publishers in Ottawa and St. Lawrence Valley Convene at Cornwallis Hotel, Cornwall—E. Roy Sayles, Renfrew, C. W. N. A., Secy. and Manager Gives Guidance

Saturday, May 20, saw a representative number of the 21 weekly newspapers published in the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Valley gather at a meeting held in the Cornwallis Hotel, Cornwall. The purpose of the meeting was to decide upon the advisability of having a local press association formed. Mr. Roy Sayles, Renfrew, Ont., who is Manager and Secretary of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers' Association, was present and gave much valuable information pertaining to the forming of the organization and benefits that would accrue.

Discussions were made pertaining to job printing price lists, advertising, news and editorial matters.

The officers elected were: President, A. L. Sellar, Huntingdon; Sec.-Treas., C. J. McTavish, Cornwall; Executive: Col. A. G. F. Macdonald, Alexandria, A. Boyer, Vankleek Hill, and J. H. Ross, Winchester.

At one o'clock a complimentary luncheon was given by Messrs. C. J. McTavish of the Cornwall Freeholder and Mr. Gibbens, Editor and owner of the Cornwall Standard.

The speakers after the luncheon included Deputy Reeve René Danis of Cornwall, Mr. E. Roy Sales, Renfrew and Mr. R. Watson Sellar, Assistant Deputy Minister of Finance, Ottawa.

Mr. Danis not only welcomed the newspaper publishers to Cornwall but availed himself of the opportunity of telling of the continued growth of Cornwall in recent years. Cornwall proper now has a population of 11,000 and its suburbs another 6000 to 7000 people.

Mr. Sayles spoke briefly and at the same time wished everyone success and that the printers would work harmoniously together which would be for the welfare of one and all.

Mr. Watson Sellar gave the main address and as it is in two parts both of which will be of interest tc our readers we will here reproduce it in full. The first portion deals with the making and handling of money at Ottawa, and the latter deals with the financial terms that are used when making the budget speech.

The address reads:

It is said that we spend our lives chasing the elusive dollar, but I venture to surmise that few present can write down a description of what a dollar bill looks like. That is really the Dominion's safeguard against counterfeiting—the notes are so uniform in workmanship and quality that you accept a good one without question, and a sixth sense prompts you to refuse anything that doesn't look "just right." Let us, therefore, visit the "job-end" where the notes are made.

graph of the Prince of Wales an olive green pantograph extending across the bottom. Into that tint are carefully engraved the words "two dollars" eighty-six times and the figure "2" an equal number of times. Naturally, there are many other checks.

GIRLS WIN AT BASKETBALL

Defeated Lachute High by 9-7 Score in Game Played There on Saturday

On Saturday afternoon, the Academy Girls' Basketball team journeyed to Lachute to participate in an enjoyable game with the Lachute High School girls.

At the end of the first period, the score was 4-1 for the Huntingdon girls; at the end of the second 5-5. In the third period both teams worked their hardest to win. The teams were about evenly matched which made the game doubly interesting. The score ended 9 to 7 in favour of the Huntingdon team.

Messrs. Stanton Smaill and Sam local coach, Miss Snaden and Miss Herdman acted as chauffeurs and the Ashton, accompanied the girls.

The Huntingdon line-up was as follows: Guards, Muriel Mack and Eleanor Miller; Forwards, Mary Tate and Carol Ross; centres, Grace Ryan and Ruby Tate, Grace Ryan and Elisabeth Bruce.

Tenders Being Called For Post Office Building.—

An advertisement in the Gleaner today that will give encouragement, and a great deal of satisfaction to a great many people is to be found on page 8. The little advertisement we refer to is one calling for tenders for the building of the much needed public building in Huntingdon to house our post office.

Judgment Given in Favour of Mrs. A. McMillan.—

A case has just been heard before Magistrate Marin whereby Mrs. A. McMillan instituted a case against Mrs. Eva Roy and George Kelly, and judgment rendered was in favour of the plaintiff. The judgment was to the effect that a lease is a lease, and the clauses specified in same must be adhered to by the signer of the lease. In this case Magistrate Marin found Mrs. Eva Roy had not lived up to the agreements outlined in the lease. The lease was declared cancelled and judgment rendered in favour of Mrs. McMillan. It appears that the case was brought about through Mrs. Roy having Mr. Kelly, his wife and family of three children, as wel las their household effects remain in the rented house owned by Mrs. McMillan until their tenament was ready for occupancy. The lease did not permit the lessee taking people into the house in this manner without the permission of the lessor.

There will be no government exams in Grades I to VIII (inclusive) this June. Promotions are to be made and prizes awarded on year's work. The Department of Education has approved of the plan. There are, however, to be the usual government entrance examinations.

Mr. Buchanan Rollitt, B.A., son of Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Rollitt of Westmount, and formerly of Huntingdon won the Montreal Manufacturers' graduate fellowship in economics and political science. Mr. Rollitt will study for his M.A. degree at McGill next year. During this year Mr. Rollitt won the gold medal of the French International and Overseas Exposition.

Mr. Oscar Thecret of St. Timothée and Mr. Pat O'Connor of Huntingdon, have been appointed justices of the peace, for administering the oath only, for the district of Beauharnois.

Among the graduates in McGill this year were Francis L. McNaughton, B.A., who receives his M.D., C.M. degree with second place aggregate honor in final year medicine and the Lieutenant Governor's medal for highest standing in general medicine in the final year. John G. McNaughton receives the degree of B.A. Both are sons of Dr. Francis McNaughton, of Westmount, and nephews of Malcolm M. McNaughton of Hinchinbrooke.

Dr. Donald G. Henderson of Montreal spent the week end at his home here.

Mr. Franklyn Alexander, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Alexander was successful in all examinations in his year's work in Medicine at McGill University.

Miss Helen E. Elder of Glenelm and Miss Claire McIntosh of Ormstown have been successful in obtaining their "Register Nurse" degrees.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rousselle, Romeo and Juliette Rousselle of Utica, and Mr. Durnin of Kerkimer, N.Y., were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Z. Rousselle on Monday.

Miss Laurette Tougas of Montreal is a guest at the home of her cousin, Mr. and Mrs. Rolland Jeanneau.

Mr. O. E. Fournier, C.E., and Mrs. Fournier of Montreal were guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Fournier last week.

Mrs. Braithwaite of Chicopee Falls, Mass., is visiting at the home of her son, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Braithwaite. Mr. and Mrs. Collard of Chicopee Falls, are also guests in the Braithwaite home.

Miss Laura Walker of Montreal spent the week end visiting with Miss Elsie M. Sellar.

Dr. G. F. McCrimmon of Montreal spent the week end at his home here.

Mrs. T. Watson and Mrs. H. H. Craig of Outremont visited over the week end with their sister, Mrs. J. J. Alexander.

J. M. Langlais in Charge of Montreal Immigration Office

Mr. J. M. Langlais, who had been Immigration Officer in charge of the port here, and who has been relieving the head officer in Montreal, has received word of his permanent appointment to Dominion Immigration Agent in charge of the Montreal office.

During the few years that Mr. Langlais and his family have resided in Huntingdon they have made a large number of friends who will regret their departure from here, yet will hasten to congratulate him on his promotion.

NOTED PRELATE DIED IN QUEBEC EARLY SUNDAY

Cardinal Rouleau Was Bishop of Valleyfield From 1923 to 1926

Founded Dominican Convent

His Eminence Succumbed to Heart Attack—Unwell Since Car Accident

The third cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church in Canada, His Eminence Raymond Marie Rouleau, Archbishop of Quebec, died at the episcopal palace Sunday morning following a heart attack. He was 65 years of age and had been in ill-health since suffering serious injuries in an automobile accident near Quebec last summer. Although at times since his accident, Cardinal Rouleau had seemed to have completely recovered, he had frequent relapses. A few days ago he again felt ill and remained in his rooms. Saturday night his attack took a more serious form and his physician was hastily summoned.

Auxiliary Bishop Rev. J. Omer Plante, was absent in St. Pacome on a pastoral visit. Extreme Unction was administered by Canon Gagne, and in spite of all medical efforts the stricken prelate died soon after ten o'clock Sunday morning.

All the ecclesiastical dignitaries of the diocese had gathered at the palace when it was known that the cardinal was in a critical state and were with him in his last hour of life.

Appointed a cardinal when he was called to the Sacred College in Rome in November, 1927, His Eminence had already been Archbishop of Quebec a year. He was the third cardinal in Canada, his predecessors being Cardinal Begin and Cardinal Taschereau, both Archbishops of Quebec.

Born the son of a farming family at Ile Verte, Que., the young man who was to become a prince of the church showed early aptitude for religious study. His education was placed in the hands of an uncle when he was 16. He joined the Dominican Order and was ordained a priest in Corsica at the age of 26. Returning to Quebec in 1894 he served in various parts of Canada as a priest, missionary and organizer. Speaking fluent French and English, he was at home in any congregation and his name became well-known throughout Catholic Canada.

In 1923 he was appointed Bishop of Valleyfield and three years later he was made Archbishop of Quebec. A year later came the call from His Holiness the Pope and the robes of a cardinal. A noteworthy reception awaited the new Cardinal on his return to Quebec and he was presented with a purse of gold amounting to a small fortune. This was at once turned over by the prelate to Quebec charities.

Last summer, while motoring near Quebec in a car belonging to one of his parishioners, an accident occurred that resulted in serious injuries to the Cardinal. His health had not been of the best and the shock nearly proved fatal. For months he was in a serious condition, but health gradually returned to a degree that permitted partial resumption of his duties at times.

He spent a part of his convalescent period in Fall River, Mass., whence he returned much improved in health. The cardinal was to have conducted Holy Week ceremonies this year, but was forced to cancel his plans and enter hospital for treatment. Since that time His Eminence had periodically entered hospital for rest and treatment.

His Eminence was the founder of the Dominican convent at Valleyfield, during his episcopate there.

Cardinal Rouleau made his last visit to Rome during June, 1930.

ACADEMY WINS BASEBALL GAME

Defeated Ormstown High School by 33-6 Score on Saturday Afternoon

On Saturday afternoon the Huntingdon Academy Boys' Baseball team played against Ormstown High School on the recreation grounds there. The Huntingdon team easily proved their superiority by winning the game with a score of 33 to 6. Nine innings were played. One home run was made during the game, that by "Jackie" Kirby of Huntingdon.

At the end of the fourth inning Huntingdon was leading 7-3. In the fifth inning the local Academy made 8 runs; in the 6th inning 8 runs; in the 7th, 8th, and 9th innings respectively 2, 5, and 3 runs, making a total of 33 runs. Ormstown added three runs to the three which they already had, in the 7th and 9th innings.

Huntingdon Bowling Club Opening on Friday Night

The Huntingdon Bowling Club have arranged to hold the official opening of the green for the season on Friday evening of this week. Every bowler, and all others who would like to take up with the sport are invited to be present. A bowling jitney will be arranged, so come as early as you can. Come prepared to play, wearing a pair of rubber soled shoes. This invitation is extended to men and women, old and young alike.

Men who would like to play horse shoes, are also invited to be present. It is expected that a number of men from Rockburn and Athelstan will be present to take part in this favoured pastime.

The new Club House has been erected and is indeed a valuable asset to the green.

Two rinks of bowlers are going to Valleyfield on Thursday evening to play for the O'Connor Challenge trophy.

Lachute Fair From June 17 to June 20

Lachute Fair will be held one week following Ormstown Exhibition to allow a number of the exhibitors to attend this remarkable spring show. The dates of Lachute Fair are June 17 to 20. Lachute is recognized as an outstanding livestock show.

Midway, fireworks, grandstand attractions and fast harness racing are some of the features which draw a large number of pleasure seekers There is also a large exhibit of manufactured goods to interest the industrial man.

From this district Lachute is only a short distance, and a nice drive through one of the prettiest spots in Quebec. A large number of Lachute people attend the Ormstown Show, and it is only right that we should reciprocate their goodwill, while at the same time passing a very enjoyable day there.

One Injured When Car Was Crowded Off Highway

One person was hurt and two others narrowly escaped injury when their car was crowded off the road between Cazaville and Sylvestre's Point early Friday morning.

Henry Disotelle, of Whippleville, N. Y., received an injury to his ribs on the right side and was unconscious for a short time after the accident. He was taken to the Alice Hyde Hospital, where Dr. J. W. Kissane attended him.

The mishap occurred as Carl Marlow and Henry Disotelle, of Whippleville, and Howard McCabe, of Malone, were returning to Malone. They said a big car crowded their machine, a Chevrolet coach owned and driven by Mr. Marlow, off the highway and although it didn't overturn it was said to be badly damaged.

W. A. Baker, K. C., is Chief of Tutelle Office

W. A. Baker, K. C., has been appointed chief of the Tutelle Office in the old Court House, Montreal, replacing Jules Lareau, who a short time ago was appointed collector of provincial revenue for the district of Montreal.

Mr. Baker is a lawyer with 30 years of practice behind him and is well known for his contributions to periodicals. Born at Beauharnois in 1870, Mr. Baker was educated at St. Mary's College in Montreal, and took his legal course at Laval University. For 15 years he was an associate of the late Hon. F. D. Monk and since the death of his associate has practised alone. Many of his articles have appeared in the Revue Legale.

Mistress—"Now, Mathilda, I want you to show us what you can do tonight. We have a few very special friends coming for a musical evening.

Maid—"Well, ma'am, I ain't done no singing for years to speak of, but if you-all insists upon it you may put me down for "The Holy City."—Pathfinder.

680 HEAD OF CATTLE WILL BE SHOWN AT ORMSTOWN EXHIBIT. NEXT WEEK

30 HORSES FROM RICHELIEU PARK FOR RACES

Tremendous Classes Being Shown in Dairy Cattle Breeds—Swine and Sheep Exhibits Go Over the Top—Big Bid Made to Public to Attend Eastern Canada's Greatest Show

The Ormstown Livestock Exhibition opens its doors to the public on Tuesday evening, June 9. The show is open for four days, June 9-10-11-12, livestock judging going on in the morning and afternoon of each day, and in the evening driving horse classes are judged in the big arena.

During the afternoon of each day driving classes will be judged before the grand stand at the race track. According to reports from the secretary's office the 1931 exhibition of cattle and horses will surpass previous shows. No less than 680 head of cattle are being exhibited. These cattle will figure in the grand cattle parades that are to be held on Wednesday and Thursday evenings at 8 o'clock. The Friday evening programme will be opened with a big horse parade. In this parade the big Percherons, Clydesdales, Hackneys and Shetlands will all have a place. 50 more horses are entered for this show this year than there were a year ago. It is hard for a horse parade to equal that of the cattle, but it is safe to say the horsemen will do their utmost to make it just as impressive.

The cattle showing is going to be outstanding for no less than 21 entries have been made in one class and dozens of classes number the entries in the teens. It is truthfully said "that animals winning at Ormstown are enhanced in value."

The Ormstown Exhibition has always been noted for its great showing of Ayrshire and Holstein cattle but this year the Jersey breeders are making a great forward stride, as it is, they have 117 head entered.

Besides the great cattle show that is to be made the horse men are not to be found lacking and in their entrants many new names are to be found.

The horse exhibitors are:

Heavy Horses—W. C. Pitfield, Cartierville, Que.; R. R. Ness & Sons, Howick, Que.; A. Roy, St. Stanislas de Kostka; Taylor Bros., Ormstown; D. A. McCormick, Brysonville; R. T. Gareau, Lancaster, Ont.

Jerseys will number 117 head, the largest showing that has ever been at Ormstown, the exhibitors being J. T. Drope, Hastings, Ont.; Garnet Kerr, Campbellford, Ont.; R. C. Carson, Danville; W. H. Miner, Granby; A. E. Hubble, Havelock Ont.; A. C. Hardy, Brockville, Ont.; J. W. Innes, Woodstock, Ont., all new exhibitors; also W. F. Martin, Westmount; Wm. McEwen, Ormstown and Lorne Elliot, Ormstown; C. W. Cresswell, Martintown, Ont.

The Beef cattle exhibit will be the largest on record. In Polled Angus there will be Bertwin Blackburn, Uxbridge, Ont., with 17 head, Edwards Bros., Watford, Ont., with 18 head and R. C. Johnson, Danville, Que. with 6 head, 41 head in all, where last year there were none. Shorthorns will be double that of last year. The famous herd of Amos & Black, Moffat, Ont., will be here for the first time, as will also C. A. Beach of Cornwall, Ont. Former exhibitors in this breed will be Greville Hampson, Ste. Therese de Blainville, Que.; and R. C. Johnson, Danville, Que., 56 head in all. Herefords will be represented by the herd of W. S. Brock, Danville, Que. Canadian Cattle will be shown by H. Charpentier, Clairvaux Bagot; R. Charpentier, St. Simon; E. Sylvestre, St. Simon; A. Sylvestre, St. Hyacinthe with over 70 head.

The swine show is to be a record one. Entries of swine for the first time have been received from Ontario. The Government special will be a great class to see judged for in it have been received 12 entries which means 60 pigs.

Whilst the whole of the stock exhibit at Ormstown is to show outstanding increases the poultry building will also hold up its end in this respect. Many new exhibitors are to figure in the 1931 exhibition and they include: D. A. McPhee, Vankleek Hill, Ont.; George Labonte, Point aux Trembles; J. A. Pellerim, Yamaska, Que., and Oxford Poultry Yards, Mt. Elgin, Ont.

The sheep exhibit will also be a record one, says Secretary W. G. McGerrigle, as all the old exhibitors will be back again this year, with the addition of D. M. Stewart & Son, Osgoode Station, Ont.; and Anson C. Balson, Hampton, Ont.

In the Government special 7 entries have been made.

Just what the race track will bring forth can never be vouched for so far ahead of the date but this much is known, 30 horses are coming from the Richelieu Park stables, as well as a number of horses within a 25 mile radius. The race course committee feel quite confident that Ormstown will have a good turnout of horses for the various races and that good keen racing will be the result. The track is in excellent condition.

Research Laboratory

The amazing degree to which wheat has become an international factor affecting the economic stability of half the world has caused thinking men and women everywhere to look at it from a new angle and with a broader understanding. Hitherto, it has been regarded merely as the basis of flour which in turn is made into bread for food. Today it is something far more important than the source of bread. It is the thing which has become a great determining factor in world economics, world finance, world trade.

It is not surprising, therefore to find the suggestion that a research laboratory for wheat should be established endorsed far and wide. The fundamental idea is to endeavour to find new uses to which wheat may be put, and thus guard against any such situation as that created during the last eighteen months by over-production and the upsetting of the world's markets. That idea is not a fantastic one. It is, on the other hand, severely practical. All basic industries have been developed through research which has revealed new uses to which they can be put, new methods of production, new and unsuspected extensions and variations and elaborations by means of which they have been more and more firmly established.

If aniline dyes can be secured from coal tar, rayon silk from wood fibres, and cloth from waste, why should not some new and useful product be developed out of wheat or out of a combination of wheat with something else? It is a fascinating thought to develop, and it will be found to hold astounding possibilities. A series of research laboratories in those countries which grow wheat extensively, all co-operating and pooling the results of their labours, might quite conceivably change the aspect of the world's business as to constitute the most revolutionary event since the discovery of steam power. It is certainly an idea worthy of examination by those who would be most vitally concerned.

The Worth of Cornwall Board of Trade.

On Saturday last the writer had the pleasure of being in Cornwall and meeting with a number of businesmen. The two newspapers in that industrious young city were both in keen demand on that date. The great topic of the day was a movement promoted by the Board of Trade of Cornwall and also of Massena. At Massena a few days ago 600 Board of Trade men and women gathered at a big dinner. It was the largest dinner ever held by a Board of Trade in northern New York. The big topic at this meeting was that of planking the N.Y.C. railway bridge connecting Cornwall with Nyando. The subject was brought to a head through the Cornwall Board of Trade and City Council.

New York Central officials and engineers were present and they favoured the bridge planking. In place of the planking of this bridge being a thing to be done in future years it is felt that it will be an accomplishment in 1931 or early 1932.

Can any one imagine how the N.Y.C. Vice President and other officials felt when they faced 600 people from Cornwall and Massena at the banquet? With such an attendance before them, it is safe to say, they realized how interested the people were in the welfare of their respective communities, and that would undoubtedly have an effect upon their decision as to whether the planking of the bridge would be a sound financial investement. Had the Boards of Trade been supported by a handful of people would the bridge project have seen so favourably looked upon by the N.Y.C.? It is safe to say it would not have been the case, then how can we in Huntingdon look for much when our townsmen do not support the Board of Trade either by membership or by attendance. In Massena the annual membership for companies is $25., for private individuals, $5., and for any officer of the Board, $10. Massena has a membership of 400 men, so no wonder Massena is booming ahead, along with Cornwall, which has a membership of nigh 200 at $5. each. Huntingdon Board of Trade membership is only $2., so why delay sending in your membership fee to the secretary. With a united, and strong Board of Trade in Huntingdon something worth while might be accomplished, otherwise little can be expected or looked for.

A few weeks ago four industrial representatives visited Huntingdon. We hope they will return and give Huntingdon the benefit of their locating within our midst; but since then they have been visiting other towns or cities daily. They were in Cornwall on Saturday, and the energetic Mayor Horovitz and the Board of Trade were doing their utmost to sell Cornwall to the visitors as their best place for locating. If they come back to Huntingdon, we will have to work hard to get them here; but how can we hope to impress them favourably without the united support extended through the Board of Trade. It is up to every man in Huntingdon to say whether he wants Huntingdon to advance with the times; and the way to register his expression is by voluntarily going to the secretary and paying the annual membership fee of $2.

Ormstown Exhibition Opens on Tuesday

If 1931 is a record year for hard times for the dairy farmer, it is not to be so indicated at Ormstown Exhibition next week. The greatest live-stock exhibition of eastern Canada is to open its gates on Tuesday evening. Without the slightest doubt the Ormstown Exhibition Company will pay out more prize money this year than ever before, in its 21 years of existence. Can you imagine seeing 21 Ayrshire heifer calves lined up in one class? That is a sight that will be worth the while for any cattleman to travel a distance to view. Whilst this is perhaps the largest class at the exhibition, there will be dozens of classes numbering in the teens, and every animal a prize winner at many of our great stock shows in Canada. The cattle classes will be amazing—in not only our favorite Holstein and Ayrshire classes, but also in Jerseys—which number 100 strong, and the beef classes. The showing of Polled Angus will be the largest in the history of the show.

Now, what applies to cattle in regards to the greatness of the entry is equally true of the showing of swine and sheep. Many new exhibitors are coming to Ormstown this year, all of which tends to make our show bigger and better.

As a horse show Ormstown has never failed us, nor will it in 1931. In the Government special for get of sire, 30 horses will be in the ring; a show in itself. The horse exhibitors are so numerous and as we believe many of our readers will want to know who are showing we are listing them in another column.

Ormstown Exhibition does not lend all its time and thought to the farmer and his livestock. The Exhibition is to do good to the District so it lends assistance and receives assistance from the people of this community. The children are educated in their teen to take an interest in this great exhibition, and on Tuesday night they stage their show. Through the co-operation of the various schools, teachers and pupils they will present a programme that will have a lasting and telling effect upon the minds of the people who attend the exhibition on Tuesday evening when the official opening of the 1931 show is made? The float which will head the parade of children will be a pleasing feature, and as Mr. D. A. McCormick has stated, "The children's show on Tuesday night will be the best ever presented in Ormstown arena." For the gratification of the Scot, the bagpipes will be in vogue on Tuesday night, along with the music supplied by Ernie Bruce and his band. The other free attractions presented by Worth and Hamid will also be presented.

With such a wonderful programme of educational entertainment Ormstown Exhibition should certainly be largely attended at every performance.

Brighter Prospects For Montreal Milk Sales

Favourable progress continues in regards to the establishing of the co-operative creamery in Huntingdon. Huntingdon is sure to reap a benefit through the unforunate milk situation which we have suffered since January. Montreal firms are now realizing that Huntingdon is a big milk center and one that can supply the very best of milk in whatever quantity they want up to 2000 cans a day. On Friday last representatives of a milk firm on Montreal Island were in Huntingdon. These representatives met with the executive members of the Co-operative Company and sought the making of an agreement with them for the supply of 65 to 75 cans of milk daily commencing in July. This Dairy Company feels that within another two or three months they would want to double the order, and that in three years have it up to 300 cans per day. If this firm can make a deal with the Co-operative, it is highly probable they will buy their entire supply from Huntingdon. The contract will call for the milk being shipped by truck.

If Montreal Island milk firms are now directing their attention to Huntingdon for their milk supply, before the Co-operative creamery is built, it augurs well for its future. Not only did the representatives who were here on Friday ask for milk, but they also stated they would want a quantity of A.1 butter, specially packed, and fresh eggs weighing over 24 ounces to the dozen.

If the Co-operative creamery is to deliver milk by truck to Montreal they will no doubt have the trucks double up on the empty cans and have a quantity of feeds hauled back for the benefit of the patrons. 112 farmers have already signed up with the Co-operative and more signatures are yet expected.

The Rabbit Is A Pest

Every boy, girl, man and woman likes to see a rabbit hop about. The rabbit is a pet animal to many a child. Unfortunately this cunning little four-footed animal is also a pest, and sometimes a very destructive one at that. We all know they eat up, and spoil many a good garden, but they are now raising havoc with the apple trees. Rabbits multiply in numbers almost over night, as it would seem, therefore it means prompt action must be taken if we are to rid our orchards of them, else we might be like the Pied Piper of Hamlin with his rats. In Franklin Township where the apple orchard means so much to the farmer the trees have suffered severely. In speaking to Agronomist Pelletier he advises farmers to have a fine wire netting placed about the tree trunks to keep the rabbits away. The damage is done to the trees in the winter and the tramping of snow about a tree will do some good but the wire netting is the sure cure. Mr. Pelletier recommends that the farmers lose no time in killing the rabbits either by gun or poison. Poison is dangerous and if used should be done with care.

The young trees that were eaten last winter by rabbits may die this summer. It is now late in the season to do bridge grafting, but another year if trees are again molested by rabbits the farmers are advised to do the grafting previous to May 1st.

King Buys 5 Autos

King George has given Queen Mary and himself a right royal present. It is only five automobiles! Five of the latest models of a well-known British firm will be delivered to the King at Windsor Castle soon. Each car is fitted with an automatic gear-changing device. Four will be painted in the royal colors of maroon and red, and the fifth, which is designed for the Queen's personal use, will be dark green. Two of them are twelve-cylinder 40-50-horse power cars, one is a 30-40 horse power brougham for the King, and there is one of each model for the Queen. All the most modern devices have been incorporated in the cars. One device consists of a foot switch which turns off the headlights and switches on a spotlight. The bodies have much the same appearance as the cars in use at present. The two limousines now used by the King and Queen will, it is understood, be sent out to India for use by Lord Willingdon, the new viceroy.

Preacher Wants Sinners

"I guard my purse here just the same as I would anywhere else in the Border Cities," Rev. A. E. Runnels has told his congregation in Central United Church at Windsor, Ont. The statement came in his reply to a letter he had received from one worshipper who had lost a purse and then a prized hymnal, and who said that if the influence of the church was not strong enough to secure the return of purses and similar property then its usefulness was at an end. Rev. Mr. Runnels declared that "if Central United Church had no sinners I would resign at once. To have a church entirely made up of saints would require a most insipid sort of ministry. I want none of it."

Selling Gold at Half Price

It has been found difficult to sell five dollar gold pieces in Toronto at half price. A man stood on a downtown street and spieled something like this: "Ladies and gentlemen. Step right up and get a five dollar gold piece for two dollars and a half. The line forms on the right. All you have to do is to give me two dollars and a half, and I hand you this bright and shiny five dollar gold piece." Thousands stopped to listen, then moved on. After more than an hour's harangue the spieler succeeded in disposing of five of the coins—all he had—at the cut rate price. He probably was advertising something. They were really five dollar gold pieces.

Watch Returned After 13 Years

J. W. B. Bausman, a local banker, of Lancaster, Pa., again has possession of a watch he lost in front of his home in 1917. The watch was returned recently by an unidentified man who said that he wanted to start the New Year right by giving back property he knew was not his. The man, who had the watch for thirteen years, asked W. J. Neuhauser, of the Farmers' Trust Company as to the possible identity of the owner of the time piece. The initials on the case correspond to Brausman's and Neuhauser arranged the return on the basis of "no quetions asked."

Cupid Cuts Red Tape

Cupid won a lively skirmish in the Owensboro, Ky., courtroom when Mrs. Anna Belle Kirk, 34, and John Speed, 55, applied for a marriage license. Mrs. Kirk had been granted a divorce the same day, but the decree had not yet been entered upon the court minute books. The license clerk could not issue the license. County Judge James Wilson, moved by the couple's predicament, asked Circuit Judge George Wilson to have the decree entered immediately. This was done and the marriage went on.

239-Pound Sturgeon

Ulric Suzer, a fisherman, came home at Pike Creek, Ont., with a whopper of a fish story, and just to back it up, he brought the fish along. Ulric found a 239-pound sturgeon, believed to be the largest ever caught in Lake St. Clair, in one of his nets off Pike Creek. He towed his prize catch to the dock and moored it. A lot of people came down to see it. Ulric was so proud of his catch that—with sturgeon selling at 20 cents a pound—he offered it to the Detroit aquarium, at Belle Isle.

Negro Active at 113

Neighbors of "Uncle Bill" Smith, who will be 113 years old in a few days, were preparing a birthday cake for him at his home in Thompson's Corners, near Rome, N.Y. "Uncle Bill," a negro, lives alone in a little house in a sparsely-settled region. His income consists of what he receives as a civil war veteran and the small earnings from the garden he tends daily. Twice a week he walks two miles to a country store to get provisions. He was born in Annsville, N.Y., and served with a Rhode Island artillery unit during the war of the rebellion. His eyesight is failing, he says, but he has no real infirmity.

Dobbin's Reign Not Ended

In spite of the great increase in the use of motor vehicles and all that has been said about the disappearance of Dobbin, figures handed out by J. C. Morel, general secretary of the Association of Blacksmiths of Quebec show that between the years 1923 and 1929 the number of horses in the Province of Quebec increased by nearly 30,000. In 1923 there were 341,641 horses throughout the province, according to Mr. Morel, as compared with 369,060 in 1929. The statistics show that in Montreal alone there were 699 more horses last year than in 1929.

Discover 'Waste' Worth Million

Turkey is dickering with a waste-paper company in Bulgaria to buy back 200 bales of old papers which turned out to be $1,000,000 worth of documents constituting Turkey's ancient history. The stuff was sent to Bulgaria on a ship which carried as a passenger a member of the Turkish Historical Commission. Accidentally he discovered in a bale that had burst documents dealing with the Ottoman conquest of central Europe. The other bales contained similar papers sold in mistake by the Federal treasury.

Rubber Traffic Posts

When a car collides with a new kind of traffic post, recently installed in Munich, Germany, neither car nor post is damaged—for the post is made of solid rubber. Frequent grazing of markers by careless drivers prompted the novel experiment. Tests show that the posts bounce back into place as if nothing had happened, ready for another erring motorist. Too low to be of danger to a swerving motor car, a heavy base keeps the rubber pedestal from being knocked over or carried from its position by a motor-car.

Woman Mayor at 72

At the age of 72, Mrs. Clara E. Grauert, of Weehawken, N.J., has abandoned the apron for the gavel for the good of the Republican party. A housewife all of her life, she has been elected mayor to succeed her husband, who at his death had been mayor for 21 years. She was persuaded to accept the office when informed that she was necessary to save the party locally from factional strife.

Iron Maiden a Fake

The famous mediaeval "Iron Maiden," which was built secretly in 1867 and ever since has been shown as an example of the barbarity of the Middle Ages to thousands of Americans and other tourists visiting Nurnberg's "historic" castle, may be removed before the summer by order of the authorities, it is learned. The interior of the "Iron Maiden" is lined with long spikes, and according to the guide story unfortunate prisoners placed inside suffered a horrible death when the two halves closed together. Experts have known for twenty years that the "Iron Maiden" was a tin fake, but she continued to make a small fortune yearly for her owner. The fee for viewing this marvel is thirteen cents. At the height of the tourist season as many as 2,000 daily are admitted to see it.

Harbin's Many Holidays

Harbin has more holidays than any other city in the world. It has added two more, both Soviet. Lenin Day, on January 21, was celebrated with much ritual. The anniversary of the death of the first Red Russians in Petrograd on January 9, 1917, was observed similarly. Every foreign shop in the city remained closed on both days, as the fear of a boycott was too great to ignore. Harbin celebrates all Chinese holidays, Japanese holidays and other foreign holidays. Even the fourth of July is celebrated while the King of England's birthday is observed.

Birthday Coincidence

A Lisbon newspaper gives an account of an accident to a girl who was knocked down by a tramcar. Then the reporter goes into raptures to the following effect: "When a policeman came up to make the usual notes, it was found that it was the girl's birthday, likewise the policeman's birthday. The driver and conductor of the tramcar then produced their identity cards, showing it was also their birthday, and finally it was also the birthday of the newspaper man responsible for the report of the occurrence." What happened to the poor girl while the persons concerned were wishing each other "many happy returns?"

Officer Thwarts Robbery

Patrolman William O'Brien's daily walk with his wife and two babies when off duty was interrupted. He suddenly passed the children to his wife, ran across Fourth Avenue, New York, to a drug store, and critically shot one robber and arrested two others. Another officer took charge of the prisoners. O'Brien walked his family home and returned to the precinct station to make a report of the shooting. O'Brien's assignment has been to guard Chile Mapocha Acuna, vice inquiry witness, whose testimony caused the reorganization of the police vice squad.

Airman Killed by Eagle

Two British airmen were killed at Risalpur, India, when an eagle collided with their machine. One man was seen to jump out of the rear cockpit of the falling plane, but the parachute became entangled in the fuselage, and he crashed to death. At a subsequent inquiry it was revealed that the eagle had a wing span of eight feet and that it belonged to a type fairly common in Risalpur district.

French Would Rename Pig

The president of the Federation of Pig Merchants has requested the French Academy to designate the pig by another name than "cochon." He claims that as the word "cochon" is now commonly used in France as a safety valve for angry men's injured feelings, the French pig deserves sympathy and protection. He suggests "nozzled lamb."

Savings in Slot Machines

Thrifty Berliners soon will be able to drop their savings in slot machines. Believing that loss of time involved by standing in line at banks prevents many from saving their money, Berlin banks will place slot machines in restaurants and public places. Receipts will be automatically issued for the amount dropped in. These later can be presented at the bank for credit in the bank book.

Rubbed Cat's Fur Wrong

Ralph Morse rubbed the cat's fur the wrong way. There was a flaming blast, a feline yowl, a human howl, and they summoned an ambulance for Ralph, who was burned about the face. Morse was putting the cat into the lethal gas chamber at the Humane Society barns, Spokane, Washington, at the time of the accident. Static electricity from the doomed animal ignited the gas. The cat escaped.

Actress Not a Lady.

An actress is not a lady, in the words of George Bernard Shaw. At least when she is, she is not an actress. He gives the definition in a preface of a book containing his correspondence with Ellen Terry (G. P. Putnam's Sons). A lady, he adds, is schooled to hide her true feelings; an actress is trained to show her emotions.

World's Largest Coin

The largest coin in the world is shortly to be offered for sale by auction in London. It is a Swedish four daler piece, weighing 6 and ½ pounds. It is ten inches square. The coin, with an original value of about $3, was struck in copper in 1731, when gold and silver were almost unobtainable.

Ex-Kaiser Donates Tin Soldiers

The former German Kaiser Wilhelm has presented a collection of tin soldiers to the Netherlands Army museum, it was announced in the museum's annual report. The figures represent Frederick the Great on horseback, and about 500 soldiers and color-bearers of infantry regiments in the Seven Years war.

How to Stop Crowing Roosters

Crowing roosters belonging to John Webster of Jersey City, N.J., disturbed the sleep and injured the health of George Becker, a neighbor. He applied and obtained an injunction. "Will the court inform me," Webster asked after the injunction had been signed, "how I am to keep my roosters from crowing?" "You will have to figure that out for yourself," the court answered.

Bootlegger Can't Spare Time

Convicted of liquor possession, Alfred Burgess, of San Francisco, was given his choice of paying a $500 fine or spending 200 days in jail. "I can't pay the fine," he told the police judge. "Then you'll have to go to jail." "I can't do that," Burgess objected, "it would ruin my business." "Just what is your business?" "Bootlegging." The judge gave him forty-eight hours to raise the fine money.

Purple and Green Chicks

Serum injected into eggs with a hypodermic needle on the nineteenth day of incubation changed the color of the chicks. A brood was hatched at Calgary, Alta. Some were all purple, others all green.

Mental Health

By D. M. LeBOURDAIS

Director, Division of Education, Canadian National Committe for Mental Hygiene

PHYSICAL AILMENTS

Even a slight knowledge of mental processes may help one through a difficult period. A woman writes that she is becoming quite deaf and finds it hard to adjust to new conditions. We have only to put ourselves in the place of a deaf person to realize how trying the situation must be.

Every person with an average bringing-up has a desire for personal independence. He does not like to be dependent upon any one else. Furthermore, most people are sensitive about afflictions such as deafness, stammering, or some gross physical deformity, and this makes their affliction all the more harder to bear. But in spite of this sensitiveness the deaf person must constantly draw attention to his deafness. He can only carry on a conversation with the co-operation of others. It may thus be seen that here are a set of circumstances which, for one of a sensitive nature, might very easily result in a serious situation.

Thoughtless people sometimes are not so careful as they might be about the feelings of deaf and other afflicted persons. These little slights, in most cases unintentional, leave a sting. The deaf person, already oversensitive, is inclined to magnify them out of all proportion to their importance. The result is that he withdraws into his shell, becomes more sensitive than before, and consequently more susceptible to offence. Now a vicious circle is set up, which, unless the victim receives some help, may result in a serious malady.

Considerate people are especially careful about the feelings of persons so afflicted, but there are many who are not considerate. Therefore much depends upon the deaf person himself. He must train himself to look at the whole situation clearly, not by any means an easy thing to do. He must convince himself that people have no intention of slighting him, and that when they appear to do so they are merely thoughtless.

Then there is another point. None of us likes to feel at a disadvantage in any situation. In this respect the deaf are seriously handicapped. It would therefore be well for every person so handicapped to excel in a certain direction; it might be in some sport where deafness would not matter, or in some avocation. Hobbies and interests are valuable for any one, but for the physically afflicted, they often mean the difference between a healthy mental life and one of great unhappiness.

(Information on any point not covered here will be given in later issues if you will address your questions to "Mental Health", 111 St. George St., Toronto, Ontario.)

Flapper: "Now, mother, do try to remember what I want you to do. If Harry comes, telephone Jack that I can't meet him because I've got to keep an appointment with George."

A bashful youth had been presented to a vivacious flapper, and for ten minutes he sat speechless, growing redder and redder and more embarrassed.

At length the girl said sweetly, "And now let's talk of something else."

Work Done Under Contract

The real work in printing the notes is done under contract. The present contractor is the Canadian Bank Note Company of Ottawa. Let us suppose the Government decides to make a new design. Once the form and style have been decided, a master engraver is given the photograph of the personage he is to reproduce. It will take the engraver from six to eight weeks to make the reproduction. At the same time, another skilled craftsmen is cutting the title, a third the figures, and two others certain other portions of the design. Therefore, five of the most skilled artisans share in the making of the plates. You may ask, 'why not have one man do the whole job?' The answer is a simple one. To safeguard the notes, it is not in the public interest that one man should become so skilled in all branches of the engraver's art that he could make a duplicate, or complete a counterfeit. Every craftsman's work has characteristics unique to itself, and by having five participate on the one design, quick detection would follow if a counterfeit got into circulation. Naturally, the possibility is remote, but in handling notes and securities, it is a strict rule that no man shall be trusted alone.

Paper 75% Linen

As every printer knows, the bane of a pressman's life is the variation to be found in the paper stocks he has to use. Sometimes it stretches, and sometimes it is not truly cut. So sympathize with the note pressman. He is handling steel plates, and printing from steel engravings is not like lithograph printing where many tints may be handled in one operation. In steel work, each colour must be done by a separate operation. The paper stock is approximately 75% new linen and 25% new cotton cuttings. The paper must meet the test of folding on the same crease without breaking from 5,000 to 6,000 times with the grain, and from 6,000 to 7,000 times across the grain. Until recently, all notes were printed on papers made outside of Canada, but a firm of Canadian paper makers, one of whose plants is not very far away from here, made a study of the requirements and now supplies an excellent quality of stock, and this is being used in the manufacture of Dominion Government notes.

Years ago, when learning the printing trade in our family plant in Huntingdon, a sprinkling can was part of the office equipment. Once a week it was used to wet the floor before the office got a sweeping, and twice a week it sprayed the newsprint, which was then covered with a blanket and weighted down, before the weekly run was started. The practice of wetting newsprint has, I imagine, gone out of fashion, but the paper used in printing notes is so tough that a special machine moistens the stock before it goes to the presses.

Paper Checked 35 Times

Between the first operation of wetting the paper for printing and the final examination, prior to delivery to the Department of Finance, the paper is checked 35 times, and goes through 25 different operations. The paper count is checked before and after every operation, and the work is not advanced from one operation to another without the count being verified by an independent audit. In other words, a hand count. So you see, printing of notes is a somewhat drawn-out affair, four or five weeks elapsing before the printing of a single note is completed.

May I ask you to follow a shipment into the Department of Finance. The little twenty-five cent "shin-plaster" is still popular, nearly five million of them being in the hands of the Canadian public. Canadians require about 19 million one-dollar notes, and about 7 million two-dollar bills for their day-to-day business. In the Montreal area you will find Dominion of Canada five-dollar notes, but comparatively few of that denomination circulate elsewhere. In all, there are about 200,000 fives in circulation. I imagine, if you have any complaint to make about the $1,000 notes, it is that you see them too rarely, although there are over 4,000 in circulation. The largest note the Government issues is the $50,000 denomination. It is used exclusively for interbanking transactions.

Life of Notes 10 Mos.

The life of the average one or two-dollar denomination is from nine to ten months. In a year the Department replaces about 24 million one-dollar bills and 8,500,000 of the two-dollar denomination. Strange as it may seem to you, the development of the popularity of motoring has shortened the life of our notes. The oil smudges on the gas-station man's thumb, as he makes change, rots the paper, so the life of notes may be shorter during the motoring season than during the cold weather, when a pump operator takes off his gloves before he makes change.

A dirty note is redeemed at its full value, but the redemption of a torn note is subject to certain regulations. If more than three-fifths of the note is presented, it will be redeemed at full value. If between two-fifths and three-fifths is presented, the Government will give one-half of the face value. If your note remnant is less than two-fifths, you are out of luck. Of course, the Dominion does not desire to profit out of the transaction, and if notes have been partially destroyed, the owner may get full value upon presentation of a proper statutory declaration, setting out the circumstances of the case and definitely establishing the fact that the remaining portions of the note, or notes, have been destroyed. Lest you think that printing notes forms an easy source of profit to the Government, may I remark that the cost of replacement amounts to well over half a million a year, of which the printing of the note—about $14. a thousand—forms only a small part, and, in addition, the Government has large non-interest bearing gold holdings as security for the note issues.

Times change. Officers handling mutilated notes tell me that rarely are notes now received with names written across them, but an old stand-by still with us is the superstitious gambler who continues to believe a two-dollar bill a hoodoo, which can only be shaken off by tearing off a corner of the bill.

Reproduce no Note

Before leaving the job-room, may I make one comment. It has been my experience, and probably you have had the same, that every once in a while some merchant wants to try a new sales stunt. It may be a dollar day sale, and he asks that you print the picture of a dollar bill across the head of a circular; or it may be that he wants some coupons which will look like money. If you are asked to do either, refuse. It is against the law to reproduce any Canadian note the note of a chartered bank, any note used by a foreign country, or anything that resembles a note.

Wandering into your front office let us take a look at the contents of the till. You have some one and two-dollar notes. You call them money, in reality, they are slips paper on which the Dominion has promised to pay on demand one or two dollars, as the case may be. In other words, in exchange for a one dollar bill, you would be entitled to receive a little over 23 grains of gold. Gold coins have, however, gone out of fashion, and the only demand the Department now has is when a presentation is to be made, or a god-parent starts a baby on the road to fiscal independence. I, of course, am ignoring international exchange transactions, which are based on gold.

88 Millions of Gold

However, to avoid inflation, and to maintain the fiscal credit of the nation, the law requires that the Dominion own certain quantities of gold before notes are issued, and at the present time there is in the custody of the Minister of Finance over 88 millions of gold to meet the demands of Canadian citizens should they desire a gold settlement. This gold we must keep up to the standard weight. For example, recently, the Department tested 100,000 sovereigns, which had been in our custody for over fifty years, by weighing them individually. They were "dirty" so it was decided to wash them, weighing them both before and after the bath. The second test proved the 100,000 had lost about two ounces in weight in the tub, in other words, about $40. in value. So if any one uses the expression "cheap as dirt," please advise him that such a statement does not ring true when applied to the minute particles sticking to gold pieces.

$27,000,000 in Silver

Looking now at the coins in the cash register. You keep enough to make change; the Department of Finance issues enough to provide ready change throughout Canada. It requires 225 million one-cent pieces. Of the big five-cent nickels there are about 30 million in circulation. It is not known how many little five-cent silver pieces now circulate, because, being small, they are easily lost, and when worn or badly bent, are frequently thrown away. There should be eleven for every man, woman and child in the country. Of ten-cent pieces, the issue numbers 75 million, while about 44 million twenty-five cent pieces are in circulation. The fifty-cent piece is not nearly as popular, and only 7 million have been issued. In value, the silver circulation is about $27 000,000.

Sometimes we are asked why the Dominion has both a large and small copper and a large and small five-cent piece. The growth in the use of penny-slot machines for weighing, purchasing of candies, gum, etc., made the demand for the small cent; and the telephone boxes, etc., caused the change to a large five-cent piece. The same thing happened in England when it became an offence to buy cigarettes after a certain hour in the evening. Tobacco stores put slot machines outside their doors, whereby for a shilling you could get a box of cigarettes. That greatly increased the demand for shillings, and more recently, the introduction of the totalizator on the British race tracks has caused a remarkable increase in the demand for florins, that being the minimum bet the machine will take. No large coppers or silver five-cent pieces are now being struck at the Mint.

Address on Editorials

Any man, who has sat in an editorial chair, has weekly faced two problems: (1) to think of some subject to write about; (2) what will his fellow-editors think about it? My brief experience in editorial writing is by, but the editorial columns of the weeklies remain a greater magnet than does the city leader, because a live weekly paper mirrors popular reactions more accurately than it is possible for a daily writer to accomplish. The daily's editorial brings out the new thought, but it is the country editor who ultimately sells the idea to the voting public.

May I, therefore, mildly take issue with some editorials concerning public finance. As I have written editorials along the line which I am about to criticise, there is nothing personal in my remarks. How often have we read, or penned, the phrase "the Minister of Finance announced a surplus, and in the next breath said the debt had been increased." Thereupon, we quote the old saw about statistics and liars. As it has become my daily work to follow through the maze of figures which chronicle the day-to-day financial operations of the Dominion, perhaps I can be of some assistance by explaining what some of the public accounts' terms mean, especially now when Canadians are talking about the Budget.

"The Estimates"

Parliament by the Magna Charta obtained control over all tax levies and expenditures. Therefore, at each session the Government submits a list of the expenditures it recommends should be made in the coming fiscal year. These are called the Estimates. The Dominion fiscal year commences on April 1st, and ends on the next 31st of March.

"Appropriations"

The Estimates are the recommendations of the Government, but the money cannot be spent until Parliament has approved of each of the items. Then a Bill is passed listing those which the House of Commons has accepted. It is these which are known as the appropriations for the year.

"Interim Supply"

At the end of each fiscal year all appropriations lapse and, as Parliament has rarely had time to deal with the Estimates before April 1st, it is impracticable for it to pass the Appropriation Bill. The business of the country must proceed, so a bill is passed granting a fraction of the total asked, generally a sixth. This is known as interim supply. The Dominion keeps a working capital of over ten million dollars in the banks. Cheques may be drawn on these bank accounts on March 31st, but the next day nothing can be paid unless Parliament has granted permission. That is why you sometimes read in April that civil servants are not sure whether they will get their pay cheques on April 15th. The 245 members you elect control the purse strings, and until they release the money, no payments may be made.

"Statutory Votes or Charges"

From time to time Parliament, by legislation, orders a certain thing to be done, and for that purpose directs that the costs be paid, as they accrue from the consolidated revenue fund. Therefore, such charges do not have to be annually voted, and are known as statutory charges. The most important items under this heading are the 124 millions for interest on the debt, and the 12 millions paid to the provinces as annual subsidies.

"Supplementary Estimates"

After the main estimates have been presented, it may be found that provision has not been made for some activities which it is desired should be proceeded with during the year. It is a constitutional practice that no expenditures can be recommended to Parliament without these first being officially approved by the King—in Canada, of course, it is the Governor-General—so these new proposals cannot be tacked on to the Estimates before the House. Therefore, the new list must be officially approved and then submitted. These are known as supplementaries. The chief value of this procedure is that it keeps the expenditure programme within the control of the Government of the day and prevents the "pork barrel" and "log-rolling" practices associated with the appropriating of public moneys in some countries when legislators want to get something for their districts.

"Consolidated Revenue Fund"

This is the pool into which all public moneys flow. The purpose is to place the Minister of Finance in control of all moneys paid to the Government. Otherwise, departments would have bank accounts here and there, and no one would know exactly how much money the Government had at its command from day to day. To guarantee that the funds are not "short-circuited," cheques are made payable to the Receiver General, which is really an office and not a person, although it forms part of the official title of the Minister of Finance.

"Ordinary Revenues"

These are the taxes and the moneys which are collected by the various branches of the public service in performing their ordinary duties.

"Special Receipts"

These revenues are something outside the usual run. The classification finds its origin in the desire that the divisions of the public accounts offer a fair comparison with each other from year to year; but, every once in a while, some special contribution is made to the public treasury and ing for a large amount, would put a comparison out of line, if included in the "casual revenue" division. So it is put into a separate section, known as "Special Receipts." For example, last year a worldwide loan flotation was made that a greater cash payment might be made on account of German reparations. Canada's share was over $2 000,000. That is a special receipt.

"Ordinary Expenditures"

Into this group falls practically every expenditure which is a charge on the Consolidated Revenue Fund, with the exception of those made on Capital Account.

"Capital Expenditures"

This is the division that puts many astray. When you, as a proprietor of a printing business, decide to spend some of your savings, or to borrow money for the purpose of putting up a new building, you do not consider yourself any the poorer when the job is done. You have less money, or you may be in debt, but against that you have a new building. The same rule applies to Government expenditures. The Parliament buildings, the new Welland canal and a host of other like expenditures are permanent and useful improvements to Canada. However, in the annual balance sheet the Dominion does not set out an inventory of its physical assets, it deals only with the cash resources and the cash liabilities. So, when a Minister of Finance borrows, let us say, ten million dollars to finance some permanent public work, he is not dragging a herring across thetrail when he claims a surplus, although the debt may be actually increased because of expenditures on capital account. Against that debt increase he has the new building or work. Let me add, that each of the long list of distinguished men who have been finance ministers of Canada has, if anything, erred on the side of caution in making up his list of capital expenditures; so be fair.

"Special Expenditures". These, like Special Receipts, are something out of the usual. The items thus defined are generally self-explanatory.

Debt Terms. May I preface my remarks by quoting the phrase: "The king is dead, long live the king." The King's business must go on and, while complete records are always available, the public accounts are a record of the year's operations. The Treasury does not try to strike a balance sheet estimating the present value of buildings, canals, stores and supplies which it owns. It does not seek to estimate arrears or to value expectations; it does ot charge up contractual obligations for services which may have been earned before the year ends, but which have not been settled, nor for other open accounts which may be outstanding. Of course, departments seek to settle all known accounts before the books are closed. The balance sheet the Minister of Finance presents to Parliament is the actual cash and credit position of the Dominion at the end of the tweve months he is reviewing.

"Active Assets"

This is the cash, the specie and other quick assets; the loans the Dominion has made to other public bodies, foreign governments and individuals which are interest-bearing, and the interest is being paid, and the Government has every reason to believe will be repaid on the due dates. Active assets are set-offs against gross liabilities.

"Non-Active Assets"

These are advances which should be repaid at some indeterminate date in the future, but no interest is being paid at the moment. For example the Dominion has over $600,000,000 invested in the Canadian National. Some day it may be paid back, or become interest-producing. At the moment it does not pay anything. So items of this character, while carefully tabulated in the departmental records, are not taken into consideration when the net debt figure is being calculated.

"Funded Debt"

This term comes from antiquity. It was first used in 1688, when Parliament secured control over the loans and taxes. Prior to that, physical persuasion was frequently required to get a settlement. The word "funds" was used to define the taxes earmarked to pay the interest and the principal; thus the loans so secured became known as the funded debt. Nowadays the term is used to define the interest-bearing bond issues and other loans which, on some future date, will come due for settlement. The funded debt does not, for example, include Dominion notes in circulation.

"Funded debt in the hands of the Public"

This is simply a refinement of the preceding term. It is the amount left, after subtracting the securities which the Dominion has repurchased for sinking funds, etc.

"The Gross Debt"

This is the total of all financial liabilities of the Government, before any deduction is made for active assets. It includes the funded debt, the note circulation, the trust accounts and all the other liabilities of the Dominion, but, as pointed out before, it does not concern the day-to-day accounts payable incurred in connection with the ordinary administration of departments.

"The Net Debt"

Is the term used to summarize the balance left after deducting from the gross debt liabilities the active assets.

These are the terms most frequently met in respect to the Dominion's financial operations. Naturally, the same definitions may not be applicable to other public bodies, for accounting systems vary. The Dominion system governs the Treasury's administration of the daily revenues, which average over a million a day, and also the expenditures which total about the same. In the Treasury vaults are over 4.000 million dollars worth of securities, and a much more interesting story might be told about other activities of the Department, but you are here on busines, so I have sought to stick to business.

Rouleau House and Barns Burnt.—

The house and outbuildings on the old Bruce homestead at Aubrey, were totally destroyed by fire on Wednesday. About 10.45 a.m. smoke was seen issuing from the barn, by some of the neighbours, who immediately gave the alarm and hastened to the scene. A crowd soon gathered, but it was found there was no chance of saving the barn. Attention was then turned to the house, and had fire reels and hose been available it might have been saved, but quite a strong wind was blowing the flames in the direction of the house, and it, too, was soon a mass of flames. This farm is now owned and occupied by Mr. Tennise Rouleau and family. Mr. Rouleau was away from home when the fire occurred. The origin of the fire is unknown. Everything was destroyed about the barns, the contents of the house alone being saved. A small insurance was carried.

A $100. Estate

When a man's will is probated and it is revealed how much of an estate he left, it is considered news. People like to read about it, and they are also keen to find out who is going to benefit. In larger centres there are a good many such stories appearing in the papers each day.

We don't know what the mental reaction is to reading such information. Probably it may be remarked a good many times that So and So had been very successful indeed; he must have been shrewd with his investments, and so on.

Tucked away at the bottom of a column in an exchange, we came across an item from Honolulu, which stated that Brother Joseph Dutton, who had spent 44 years caring for unfortunate lepers on the Island of Molakai, had left property or personal possessions worth $300. and that after certain obligations were paid there would be but $100 left.

If we applied the usual foot-rule to computing the measure of success which had attended the efforts of Brother Joseph during the 44 years spent with the lepers, then we'd have to conclude that he hadn't got along so very well. Possibly it would have to be admitted that as a business man he had been somewhat of a failure.

And yet we wouldn't be surprised if a good many men who had been very successful at amassing money would be quite willing, during the closing chapter of their existence, to reach over and be able to claim the $100 of Brother Joseph if they could take all else that went with it.

One hundred dollars in cash does not represent the total estate of Brother Joseph—not at all. On the credit side of his ledger there would be days and weeks that spun themselves on into years of kindly effort; there would be sacrifices of which the world had never heard; there would be at all times obliteration of self and the desire to help others. Not in terms of dollars can we express these, but they would be there just the same. And perhaps Brother Joseph was very wise, for in the 44 years of his work on a leper island we imagine he created an estate which he has been able to take along with him. He could well afford to leave the $100 behind.—(Glengarry News).

There Should Be No Ugly Women!

There are 2 classes of women.

(1) The beautiful, healthy and attractive creatures.

(2) Those pitiful ones who don't know how to make themselves beautiful—rather those who don't know the vital importance of Kruschen Salts to physical perfection and attraction!

Kruschen Salts are a perfect blend of the six vital minerals which Nature ordained, glands, blood, nerves and body organs should daily receive from food if they're to function correctly—and which are impossible to obtain in this age of modern cooking.

Get a bottle of Kruschen—and before the bottle is half empty your complexion should be gloriously smooth and clear. Kruschen clears blood of harmful acids and poisonous waste matter which cause blemishes, blackheads and pimples. Your wonderful new energy will surprise you—mind feels so keen and alert—no more washed-out feeling getting up in the mornings.

Franklin Centre

The annual W.C.T.U. supper was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Johnston on Tuesday evening, May 26th. It being an ideal evening for such an occasion the house was well filled. After partaking of an appetizing supper a short but pleasing programme was rendered. The opening chorus was "Loyalty to Christ," accompanied by Mrs. Murray Blair, followed by an address by Dr. E. N. Moore, on Social Hygiene, strongly emphasizing the importance of this branch of work in our Union, a solo by Mrs. N. M. Brooks, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Gertrude as pianist. Mrs. James Winter of Ormstown gave an address on the Life of Mary Hunt and the importance of teaching our children scientific temperance work. Another chorus was sung entitled "Some Glad Day." A recitation by Mrs. Williard Blair was much enjoyed. Rev. T. F. Duncan moved a vote of thanks to all who had helped in any way with the programme and supper.

Under the auspices of the United Church Ladies' Aid, a three-act drama, "Deacon Dubbs" was presented by Brooklet Y in the Town Hall on Friday evening, May 29th. The Hall was well filled and the play was enjoyed by all. No special mention could be made of any one player as all took their parts in a very creditable manner.

There will be no service at the United Church next Sunday morning as Rev. T. F. Duncan is attending Conference in Sherbrooke. Mrs. Duncan accompanied him, intending visiting friends.

Week end guests with Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Blair were Mr. and Mrs. Peter Stewart, daughter Ethel, son Clarence, and Mr. Huston, all of Montreal.

Mr. Armand Robert is spending a week in Montreal the guest of her father, Mr. Durivage.

Week end guests of Mrs. Joe Beaudin were her sister, Mrs. Margaret Brais of Montreal and her cousin, Mrs. Alphonse Costello of Champlain, N.Y.

Mrs. R. C. Manning is attending the World's W.C.T.U. Convention in Toronto this week and is also visiting with her brother-in-law, Mr. Fred Manning and family.

Miss Elsie Johnston is home from Lake Megantic to spend the summer with her parents.

Dr. John Abbott and Mr. Brown of Pulaski, N.Y. were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Abbott the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McClenaghan from Riverfield were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Barr.

Mr. and Mrs. Miles Towns spent last Friday with her mother, Mrs. James Mannagh in Havelock.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Cassidy and family from Montreal spent the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Cassidy.

Mr. and Mrs. Emile Beaudin of Russeltown Flats. Mr. Gagne of Montreal were guests of Mrs. Joe Beaudin on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Sproule and son Edmund were Sunday guests of her mother, Mrs. M. Head and also Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finn of Ormstown.

Mr. and Mrs. Osborn Mannagh and son, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Stevenson, and daughter Doris from Havelock were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Towns.

Wool

Woollen materials are excellent for outside garments but are not popular today as undergarments because wool irritates the skin and is too warm for our well heated houses. Woollen undergarments do not launder well, but shrink and mat and harden, and wool holds bacteria and shows the soil readily.

For dresses and coats and other outer garments, wool is the thing. Wool has a very curly fibre with a scaley structure. These scales stand up when moist and warm and lie flat when cold and dry. This peculiar habit is what makes it mat and also makes it easy for the manufacturer to adulterate the goods.

Wool material is usually adulterated with cotton fibres. Such goods wear well, better than all wool, but it is not as warm nor soft and will not keep its shape as well, and will show the soil more.

There is not enough wool in the world to supply the demand and it is much adulterated, and is used over and over again. The best wool rags are picked to pieces and re-spun, usually mixed with new wool or cotton. Such material does not wear as well as new wool goods.

Some goods is made by the use of "shoddy," short fibre clippings from the mills, which are worked into the surface of felted cloth. After a time these short fibres work out and are found on the inside of coat linings and leave the surface threadbare.

Wool goods should be sponged and pressed before bring made up. This keeps it from spotting and shrinking unevenly. In doing this pressing keep the iron moving or it will leave its mark. Do not press hard or the cloth will stretch.

Robson

Mrs. Jas. Hamilton of Mooer's and Miss Vincent of Plattsburg, called on Mrs. W. C. Barr, Mrs. W. H. Kearns and Mrs. R. H. Clark on Saturday.

Miss Lily Clark is spending this week in Montreal.

Miss Ella Barr of Montreal, spent the week-end at her home here.

Mr. Geo. Simpson was home for the week-end.

Mrs. Harold McNaughton and son Ross of Hemmingford, are spending an indefinite time at her parent's home here.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Barr and Miss Ella motored to Lacolle on Sunday, and visited Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Robinson.

We are very pleased to hear that Mr. Julius Grey is slowly recovering and is now able to sit up a while each day. We hope he may steadily improve.

Mr. F. A. Sweet is busy taking the census these days.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bradley and son Donald, Miss Nellie Kearns, Miss Reid and Miss Lahokey of Montreal, motored out and spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Whiteside Kearns.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Guy, Miss Lillian Guy, Mrs. Hall and Miss Hall of Verdun, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Beattie.

Mr. Hector Comber and daughter Bernice, also Miss F. Brittain were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Barr.

Little Willie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fernie Beattie fell on a bottle Monday evening. The bottle broke and he cut his face quite badly. He was taken at once to the hospital and is remaining for a day or so. We sincerely hope he may soon be well again.

Rev. Mr. Maitland and son Alvin dined with Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Horne Thursday evening.

Rockburn

The first baseball game of the season on the local diamond was played on Saturday last between Hinchinbrook and Beavers, the latter winning by a 7-15 score. Hinchinbrook played rather a loose game at times and showed lack of practice, while the Beavers played their usual steady game. The game was umpired by John Oliver and Chester Hay.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Bailey, Springfield, Mass. were callers Saturday at the home of Mrs. A. Pollock.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Ferns of Hamilton, Ont., and Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Lindsay of Fergus, Ont. were visitors over the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Waller.

Mr. and Mrs. Galen Craik and children of Regina, Sask., are visiting this week at the home of Mrs. Henry Rennie.

SUNSHINE FEED
POULTRY NEED

In a pamphlet just issued by the Experimental Farms Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture a special study of the value of cod liver oil for poultry is presented. This is a valuable pamphlet for any poultry-keeper to have and is available without charge from the Publications Branch of the Department at Ottawa.

The value of cod liver oil in a poultry ration arises through the supply of Vitamine D content which it ensures. Some of the reasons why it should be fed are summarized in the pamphlet as follows:—

The use of cod liver oil is shown to have increased egg production by approximately four eggs per bird per month.

The addition of cod liver oil to the ration has no influence on the average weight of eggs produced.

The hatchability of eggs was increased by fifteen per cent by the use of cod liver oil.

The death rate of the chicks hatched was reduced by ten per cent by feeding cod liver oil to the breeding stock.

Cod liver oil may be fed daily in the moist mash or it may be mixed in the dry mash that is kept before the birds continuously.

Mixing cod liver oil with a flaky meal like bran and then mixing the oil-laden bran with the remainder of the meals will ensure an even distribution of oil.

Cod liver oil tends to become rancid and unpalatable if left exposed to sunshine or heat. Large quantities of a mixture of meal and oil should not be kept on hand during the warm weather.

Caveat Actor

It is regrettable there were not more cars accompanying the Academy girl's basketball team to Lachute on Saturday. Rather unfortunate that one of the young ladies had two fingers injured. Had a Scout been present he would have been able to render first aid.

On every street corner, or wherever two or three were congregated over the week-end, one would hear: "Well, they won't all get home safely. There'll be a lot of accidents at Walker's corner, and up the river road this Saturday and Sunday." Sorry we have to disappoint these pessimists.

Quite some excitement was aroused the other day by the report that the body of a man, apparently murdered, had been found at Ormstown. However, in an endeavour to have the story verified, we were informed that the real fact was that a skeleton was unearthed where a new wall was being constructed. Many years previous to the erection of buildings thereupon, the lot had been used as a cemetery.

And that reminds us of the unrecorded story of how two prominent townsmen were informed of the discovery of the skeleton of a human being in a nearby bush. Boyish pranks and a slight knowledge of anatomy had led to the laying out of animal bones to resemble, in a very slight degree, a man's skeleton.

It is a very dangerous practice to go looking in other people's windows at night. It so happened in town just recently. I was surprised to hear of such a thing because I didn't think we had such nosey people here. But, after the person had been "looking in" for a few minutes, to his imminent satisfaction, he turned to go. From an upper window one of the residents called "Good-Night." That must be one of the times when we're supposed to "be nonchalant, light a Murad."

One of the Boy Scouts recently handed me his diary to read. The little book was very interesting, replete with reports of scout, school and home activities. I quite frequently came across the letters VI. Upon looking up this rule 6 found it had no connection with the notation. Apparently "Vi" is an important personage in a certain young man's life.

And this being the month of June—and June brides, I would advise them to look before they leap. Anyhow, those who leap get further than those who only stand and look.

Found it Impossible to Locate Man-eating Tree

There are undoubtedly plants which entrap and devour insects, and one from India which lures mice by an odor and traps and consumes the rodent, but no one has been able to prove the existence of the "man-eating tree of Madagascar." This story was started about half a century ago by a traveler who wrote a letter to a friend in Europe of having witnessed a sacrificial ceremony where a woman das made a martyr, forced to meet death in the embrace of one of these trees. The story traveled around the world and persisted to such an extent that many travelers and scientists who have visited the country since have made efforts to verify the story. Dr. Ralph Linton of the Field anthropological expedition spent two years in Madagascar and tried to locate a man-eating tree. He encountered several persons who believed that such a thing existed, but the tree was always in some other part of the country, and he arrived at the conclusion that the story was a myth.

OBITUARY

The late George Rennie

Through the death of Mr. George Rennie which occurred at his home at Rockburn on Wednesday of last week, we have to record the loss of another esteemed citizen, a good neighbour and kind friend. Born in Hinchinbrooke nearly 69 years ago Mr. Rennie spent his whole life in this neighborhood and was successfully engaged in farming until 13 years ago when he retired and moved to this village where he resided until the time of his death. For some years he was associated with the late Wm. Anderson in buying and shipping live stock and had a wide acquaintance in this county. He treated diseases in animals with marked success, his services in this respect being sought from far and near. He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Emma J. Fountain, one brother Edgar of this place, and one sister, Mrs. George Platt of Hartford, Conn. The funeral was held on Friday last from the Rockburn Church, being largely attended and was conducted by the Rev. W. Ross. Those from out of town included Mrs. F. Fountain, Mr Neil Fountain, Mr. and Mrs. Currie Mrs. Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge, Mr. and Mrs. Goldie Arnold, all of Ellenburg, N.Y., and Mr. and Mrs. T. Atkinson, Miss Gladys Atkinson and Mr. Clifford Atkinson of Malone.

PAPER MULCH

In recent years a new aid has been made available to gardeners. Following very successful use among pine apples in Hawaii, paper mulch is now being introduced into this country. This is simply coarse, tough, black paper, which is laid on the soil between rows of vegetables. It will stand considerable traffic, particularly if rubber footwear is used, and will last a whole season. It keeps down weeds, conserves moisture and hastens grown because it catches the sun's rays and adds warmth to the soil. Any one who has placed his hand on a tar paper roof during the middle of the day when the sun was shining will understand the latter point. "For the home garden the use of mulch paper has a very definite place in that the vegetable crop may be planted and allowed to take care of itself with the exception of pulling a few odd weeds that grow in the rows between the plants, or when thinning the plants is necessary, or spraying has to be done to control insects and diseases," writes T. F. Ritchie of the Dominion Experimental Farms. In his garden last summer the writer found that wire staples made out of the ordinary cheap, black wire were a very good method of holding the paper down to the soil, although stones and soil heaped along the edge will also do, though they are not so satisfactory. Sow seed along the edge of the paper before putting down the next sheet, or if plants are being set out make a small hole in the paper and insert.

Seed

At the risk of repetition the writer would again like to emphasize the necessity of good seed, which is even more important in the garden than it is with field crops, as most vegetables and flowers we grow have decidedly more breeding behind them and are grown in a much more intensive way, scores of different kinds being grown in a few square rods of soil. Not only is it important to get the very best quality of flower and vegetable seed to insure the right colors in flowers, and earliness and tenderness in vegetables, but it is also necessary to buy seed specially suited to Canadian conditions.

CLIMBERS OF ALL SORTS

Nothing adds quite so much to the attractiveness of any verandah or wall as a climbing plant. This acts not only as a screen giving privacy but also provides the desired shade and a permanent appearance to the residence by breaking harsh lines and taking away bareness from featureless walls. In this country more attention might well be paid to climbers. Moreover, if we are only renting our home we should not run away with the idea that climbers are not for us because there is a very generous list of annual climbing plants, as well as those of a permanent nature. Of course, where one is the owner a screen that will last indefinitely is advised. In this connection the Dutchman's Pipe, a very broadleaved plant, is recommended, or we may use the Virginia Creeper, rapid growing and now secured in a variety which is self-clinging on rough surfaces. In the warmer sections of the Dominion, Boston Ivy and even English Ivy will grow. In this connection, also, roses of the Rambler type are very satisfactory providing screens from May until October and a profusion of flowers during the early part of the season, as well. The semi-climbing Paul's Scarlet Rose is a beautiful type with large flowers on long stems. Trellis work is usually used to support all climbers and particularly the roses, although many of the annuals, as well as Virginia Creeper and Dutchman's Pipe, may be trained on wires or strings. Ivy does best on the wall. Of annual climbers, we have the rapid growing Hops, Scarlet Runner and Hyacinth Bean, Morning Glories, and Wild Cucumber. The latter is a very rank growing plant and is inclined to spread indiscriminately.

Screening Material

All of the above mentioned climbers can also be used for screens to hide objectionable fences, views and garages, if provided with support in the way of trellis or a wall. In addition to these, we can also use upright material. Evergreens will give us a permanent screen regardless of the season, or we can plant any of the well known shrubs which come all the way from a foot high to twice the height of a man. These, of course, are deciduous, although even in the winter their berries and branches will afford both variety and a fair screen. Shrubbery and evergreens also possess the very important advantage of providing a safe sanctuary for our beautiful and useful song birds. Of annual material we have an extensive list at our disposal. In addition to the annual climbers mentioned in the preceding paragraph, we have bushy, upright plants such as the Cosmos, a tall, late bloomer, bright and decorative, ornamental Sunflowers from four to eight feet high, Hollyhocks, Four O'Clock, Dahlias, African Marigolds and Nicotine. The latter while tall is not particularly branching, but on account of its evening fragrance is recommended for planting amongst other tall, annual screens.

First Sowings

If the ground is ready now, one may get in the first vegetables and flowers, but it is important to make sure that soil conditions are right first. If the earth compacts when taken up and squeezed in the hand, keep away, or if one's boots become really muddy after tramping over the garden the time is not yet arrived for working up the soil. However, if it crumbles, rather than packs, one can go ahead. In the vegetable line, sow those things of which the leaves are eaten first. These include lettuce, cress, spinach, radish and mustard. There is little danger from planting them too soon as all will stand some frost. The first of the peas should also go in as early sown peas often yield twice as much as those sown late. Next in line will be those bulbous or root vegetables such as beets, onions, carrots, early turnips and parsnips. At this time too the first of the potatoes are planted and although not as hardy as the others mentioned they are not susceptible to frost until the plants come through the ground which will be in from a week to a fortnight after planting depending upon weather conditions. Repeat plantings of practically all of the early vegetables every ten days until about the middle of June so that the harvest season for these will be extended. In the third planting group will come the really tender things, such as tomato plants, melons, cucumbers, egg plants and peppers which are best kept indoors or unsown until all danger of frost is over. Among the hardiest, annual flowers are the calendula, candytuft, alyssum, California poppy, cosmos, caliopsis, larkspur, poppy, linaria, Virginia stock and sweet peas. The latter must be sown as early as possible. After danger from frost has practically disappeared zinnia, nasturtium, aster, stocks, balsam, snapdragon, marigold and gladiolus may be planted. Dahlias and cannas are a little more tender and should not go in until all danger of frost is past.

Chateauguay Basin

The Heights Ladies' Bowling Club held their annual meeting at the home of the past president, Mrs. D. Dunbar, on May 28th. The following officers were elected for 1931: Pres., Mrs. Hadrell; Vice-Pres., Mrs. Brazier; Treas., Mrs. Cobb; Secy., Miss Maxwell; Green's Keeper, Mrs. Dunbar; Match Convener, Mrs. Gilmour; Bridge Convener, Mrs. Harold Smith; Social Convener, Mrs. Maxwell. They anticipate holding a weekly bridge and bowling two evenings a week.

Dr. Edwards of Boston, was a week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. Maxwell.

We are glad to hear that Mrs. Atkinson has recovered from her recent illness.

Book Reviews

By Howard S. Ross

"The Ukrainian Canadians"—A Study in Assimilation by Charles H. Young, M.A., edited by Helen R. Y. Reid, B.A., LL.D. Publishers Thomas Nelson & Sons, Toronto. Price $2.50.

The Volume is dedicated "To My Mother and Father" and I review it with added interest because of the fact that although I never had the pleasure of meeting the author I knew well his parents and grandparents at North Sydney, Nova Scotia, where I spent many happy days as a boy and youth.

Dr. Helen Reid, Chairman, Division on Immigration, The Canadian National Committee for Mental Hygiene in her sympathetic Foreword wrote:—"Finally, the committee believes that a positive change of mind and attitude on the part of "old" Canadians towards the new Canadians is both due and necessary, not only for the unity of the country and for the development of a healthy Canadian spirit, but also for the promotion of international friendships and world peace. Racial studies such as that which we now offer should provide for the development of a better understanding of the values, cultural and economic, contributed by each race to our Canadian civilization, and should therefore, make for the establishment of better relations between the old and new peoples of Canada."

The author thanks Dr. Helen Reid for her wise counsel and added: "Nothing but a sentiment so binding as filial affection has withheld the dedication to her of this product of our united efforts. Great as is the benefit we have derived from the months of travel and stimulating contacts, we prize more, the two years of association with a great Canadian woman."

He thanks J. S. Woodworth, M.P., (who was chairman of the Bureau) for his most generous courtesy in placing at our disposal the unpublished survey of Ukrainian Rural Communities in 1917, being a Report of Investigation by the Bureau of Social Research, Governments of Manitabo, Saskatchewan and Alberta."

Increase of French-Canadians

It is pointed out that French Canadians starting with a population of only seventy thousand a little over one hundred and seventy years ago "persist to-day as a great body of over three million people, representing nearly one-third of the total population of the Dominion, and, with their culture intact, exercising all-pervading influence on every aspect of our national life." He adds: "What will be the effects of the Ukrainian-Canadians on all aspects of our national life three or four generations hence? Especially when they start with a population four or five times that of the original colony of French-Canadians, and live for the most part in rural colonies where physical isolation re-inforced by the cultural homogeneity of the people guarantees the persistence of many aspects of their culture for many decades to come?"

The Historical Sketch

In an introductory historical sketch, chiefly limited to secondary sources, emphasis is placed on changes or movements in the old world which relate to the subsequent development of the Ukrainian immigrant in Canada. This is followed by the story of their immigration and settlement together with an analysis of the factors likely to effect their success or failure as settlers. After two more chapters on their colonies, rural and urban, including a detailed discussion of their agricultural and industrial development, there follows the picture of Ukrainian-Canadian society as a more or less self contained unit or collection of units in which these people live—as a nation within a nation—with churches, societies, press and schools of their own. Consideration is then given to forces extraneous to their society, those of education, health and government which are in their very nature aggressively assimilative and to that extent aggravate the social disorganization among the immigrants whose hold on the old means of control gradually goes, often without early or adequate replacement of these controls by the institutions and social organization of Canadian society. Its concluding chapter deals with the Ukrainians as prospective citizens of the country in the light of all the data presented in the study.

This is not an arm-chair or parlor-car observation study. It is the result of intimate first-hand study and contacts with these people and others greatly interested in them over a period of eighteen months. Eight hundred interviews were held from fifteen minutes to several hours and covering practically all aspects of the life of Ukrainians in the old world and Canada.

Intensive Studies Made

Intensive studies were first made of the urban colonies in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg over a period of about six weeks in each of the first two and of about three months in the last named City. The investigation of the urban colonies included stop-overs in centres like Oshawa, Hamilton, Port Arthur, and Fort William, Sudbury, Timmins, etc.

During the summer of 1929 from May to September the author and a Ukrainian medical student, John Korchik and a 1922 Ford Sedan travelled over six thousand miles visiting every Ukrainian colony of importance in the West and making over one hundred and ten house-to-house canvasses among the open country Ukrainian farmers in eight settlements in the three provinces. Regular visits, included in the total given above, were also paid to doctors, lawyers, policemen, other officials and leading Ukrainians in the different settlements. He estimates their number at two hundred thousand at least.

In passing a tribute is paid to the Scandinavians and Germans who he stated "are admitted by all to be among our best settlers."

The author's opinion as the result of his intensive study and the verdict of others in a position to form an opinion is that Ukrainians are most desirable immigrants. They are anxious to come to Canada. While emigration from the Ukrainian Soviet Republic is restricted, conditions elsewhere and particularly those in Eastern Galicia are more favourable than before the war. The overlordship of Poland and the state of frustrated nationalism in which the Ukrainians in Eastern Galicia live, together with the problems deriving from this situation, act as a stimulus to emigration. There is an attraction in the large number of relatives and friends already here, and in the outstanding success of some and the general prosperity of numbers of others.

They are well suited as agricultural settlers. They have been keener than others to work the land. They have a profound love for the land to which they refer as "Mother earth", "drink-giver" and "food-giver." They and their children usually stay on the land The second generation may go to the cities, it is more often the case that the father and his sons remain on the farm and buy the property of the Anglo-Saxons about them. The unassisted Ukrainians do not get to the farm by way of the homestead in the same proportions as do the assisted British, but they make good the depopulation of the rural areas by taking over the deserted farms left by the British. The Ukrainian generally makes a good pioneer and gets along with less assistance and also makes more headway in the early years of settlement. The superiority of the Ukrainian lies in the fact that in season and out of season he has consistently obtained money by means of construction work and other kinds of seasonal labor."

In 1929 this reviewer lectured on a Chautauqua circuit covering seventy-two towns in Alberta and Saskatchewan and heard on all sides praise of the Ukrainian Canadians. He has also had an opportunity of becoming acquainted with a considerable number of Montreal Ukrainians and also a number of their Western leaders and is glad to have the good impression made upon him confirmed by the result of such a thorough study as Mr. Young and his associates made and the result of which investigation has been given to us in such a concise and attractive form.

He closes with this deserved tribute:

"Immigration groups must, to a very great extent, work out their own salvation. And this, we may rest assured the Ukrainian will do. No one can have intercourse with these more recent pioneers of our country, still more—know by personal experience their heroic efforts to meet the exacting tests of homesteading in the bush country in the Northwest, without acquiring a feeling of confidence in their ability to measure up ultimately to the finest ideals of Canadian citizenship."

Appendix A makes a strong plea for more complete and more accurate population statistics and no doubt there will be a satisfactory response 1931 census soon to be taken.

Appendix B gives a valuable selected bibliography including: Old World History; Magazines; New World History; Canadian Policy; Immigration and Colonization.

"The King's Fool," by Louis Arthur Cunningham. Graphic Publishers Ottawa. Price $2.00.

This charming and fascinating novel of love, adventure and intrigue in the time of Louis XV is a story of the aristrocracy of Old Quebec.

An Irish Peer deprived of his estate is forced to leave his homeland and in France falls in love with a ward of the King. The King objects and Sir Michael is imprisoned and sent to Quebec to be hung. Shipwreck causes him to assume the identity of the King's Fool.

In Quebec he learns Diane is betrothed to a no good nobleman. On her arrival at Quebec he makes himself known to her.

Barney O'Pray, Sir Michaels' hench man has his adventures.

Intrigue continues. The wrong man sung but one deserving of his fate. Then there is the uniting of Sir Michael and Diane.

Irish wit and French gallantry predominating over the efforts of rascality is the theme and plot of this story.

Prevaricating Parents Have Liars For Children

In a recent article in this column I stated that parents, wittingly or unwittingly, are responsible for many of the later mental troubles of their children. Some parents are unwilling to believe this; they feel quite competent to bring up children in the way they should go. If a child later finds himself in jail, in a mental hospital, or any other of the institutions which society maintains to take care of those who fall by the wayside, parents usually find a way to shift the blame to other shoulders.

Here is a typical case quoted in Dr. Blatz's and Mrs. Bott's new book, "The Management of Young Children."

"A little girl of three and a half was exceedingly fond of sugar. At breakfast one morning her mother had just filled the sugar bowl when she was called to the telephone. When she came back the bowl was half empty. She said:

"Marjorie, did you touch the brown sugar?"

"No, mother."

"Are you sure you did not touch the sugar?"

"No, I didn't, mother."

"No, Marjorie, you told your mother you did not touch the sugar when you did. Mother knows you did, because God told her you did. When you say you have not done a thing that you really did do, that is what we call a lie. A lie is very naughty, and mother will spank you for telling a lie."

The child was then spanked."

This may seem to be an extreme case, but it really is not. If the average mother (this applies also to fathers) will carefully think over her attitude in similar circumstances she will find that she is often quite as inconsistent.

Of course there are circumstances when the truth is perhaps not advisable, but they are probably rare. And certainly the best way that a respect for truth can be developed in a child is for parents themselves to show a healthy respect for it, especially in their own lives from day to day.

The same principle holds good in all other phases of life. Children are highly imitative; they not only imitate the things in which we should like them to follow us, but often to our dismay they imitate us in the things of which we are not so proud and which we had fondly hoped were hidden from sight.

(Information on any point not covered here will be given in later issues if you will address your questions to "Mental Health, 111 St. George St., Toronto, Ontario.)

Ormstown Village

A musical was given in MacDougall Hall on Saturday night by the C.G.I.T. girls assisted by friends. The program consisted of piano solos, pantomines, vocal solos, duets and a missionary play. An interesting feature of the program was a sing song conducted by Mr. Percy Osmond. During intermission the girls treated their audience to homemade candy. The programme was brought to a close by a campfire scene which gave those present an idea of camp life. Proceeds amounted to $29. It was the girls' ambition to obtain money to send girls to camp at Magog, Que Much credit is due the leaders, Miss B. Moore and Miss A. Struthers, also Miss M. Bazin who very ably acted as chairman.

OBITUARY

Mrs. John G. Rutherford

Henrietta Black, youngest daughter of Alexander Black and Margaret Shanks, born April 18th, 1861, at the third concession of St. Louis de Gonzague, later moving to Bainsville Ont., was united in marriage to John G. Rutherford March 9th, 1881, making their home at Allans Corners, Que., until they moved to Ormstown where she passed away quietly at her late residence after two years of more or less suffering.

Mrs. Rutherford's greatest interest after her home was her church. She was a former Methodist and member of St. Paul's United Church.

She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, and two daughters, Mrs. J. A. McNeil, Ormstown, Mrs. H. Perry, Toronto and one son, George Rutherford of Allans Corners, also three grandchildren, Miss Helen McNeil of Montreal, Gordon and Vera Rutherford, and one sister, Mrs. J. G. Helps of Toronto, Ont.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society (Presbyterian) was held on Thursday at the home of Mrs. Walter Arthur. There was the usual good attendance of members and Home Helpers. Mrs. Elder reported having made arrangements with Mrs. A. W. Pae of Montreal to be present on June 6th to give an illustrated lecture. The slides shown will include pictures of the mission work in Manchuria.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shearer and family who have been recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Shearer are leaving on Tuesday for a motor trip to Salt Lake City, Utah, where they will visit Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Shearer. Miss Hattie Shearer is also one of the party.

The Misses Maud and Louise Sampson who have been guests at the manse for several months have left to spend the summer at Quebec.

Mr. and Mrs. Muir and Miss Eleanor Muir of Montreal are now occupying their summer home at Welleslea Farm.

Miss Annie McDonald who has recently visited friends here left on Friday for Manitoba, where she expects to spend the summer the guest of her brother, Mr. John L. McDonald at Sanford, Man.

Mr. and Mrs. John Arthur of Rockburn visited on Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Arthur.

TIPS

Turpentine added to starch helps the iron to run smoothly, and also gives a high gloss to clothes. A few drops only should be used at a time.

Silver washed in hot soapy water and then well polished with a leather will be bright and free from scratches

A few drops of paraffin sprinkled on all dusters not only removes dust but helps to keep away flies.

If you have an old pair of brown shoes that have got discoloured, paint them overnight with tincture of iodine. Clean in the usual way in the morning and they will look like new.

A never-failing remedy for burns and scalds is glycerine and borax mixed with linseed oil.

Pastry that is to be served cold should be mixed with milk, which will keep it short and crisp.

Moisten tea and coffee stains with milk, cover them with borax, and soak in hot water.

If a cloth is placed over newly-made starch, a skin does not form on the top.

To remove the shine from new silk stockings, add a little ammonia to the water when they are washed.

If your tea towels leave fluff on your china, pass them through a solution of weak starch water.

When cooking cauliflower, two lumps of sugar in the water will keep it white.

To prevent greens from being tough, add a small piece of dripping when cooking them.

After taking a cake from the oven, run a knife round the edge in the usual way, and place the tin on a folded cloth that has been soaked in cold water. The cake will then leave the tin without sticking.

To remove stains from an aluminum saucepan, boil some slices of lemon in the pan for about half an hour. Then rub well with dry block salt.

Cracks or scratches on furniture should be filled with softened beeswax. Then rub over the surface with a cloth dipped in equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine.

Hot vinegar will remove paint stains from windows.

BOY DROWNED IN CANAL AT VALLEYFIELD

Official Representative of Lord's Day Alliance Delivered Eloquent Address in United Church

A sad drowning fatality occurred on Saturday last when René Filiatreault, aged 7, lost his life in the canal on Victoria St. The boy, along with his brother were endeavouring to loosen a fishing line caught in the rocks. At that point the bank is steep and the rocks slippery. The little fellow overbalanced with tragic results. The body was not found until several hours later. In the absence of Coroner Besner, Dr. Ostiguy was called to the scene and pronounced life extinct. Much sympathy is felt for the bereaved parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Filiatreault. The funeral took place Monday at the Catholic Church.

Lord's Day Alliance Representative Speaks.—

The official representative of the Lord's Day Alliance visited Valleyfield on Sunday last and delivered an eloquent address on the scope and work of that organization. Dr. F. A. Lawson, of Toronto, is touring the province of Quebec making a special appeal on behalf of Sabbath observance. Speaking in the United Church on this subject, Dr. Lawson presented his case from every point of view. That Sunday should be preserved as a day of rest and kept free for people to workship who so desire, was the basis of the address. He condemned commercialization of pleasure. He dwelt at length on the ruinous effect of enforced Sunday labour. The Lord's Day Act which is Dominion wide and covers every province was expounded by Dr. Lawson, and valuable advice in respect to this law was given. The appeal was timely, particularly for Valleyfield, and by church-going people regarded as a bit of practical Christianity. Dr. Lawson was assisted by Rev. J. G Greig, pastor.

PASTURE FOR PIGS

Supplying good succulent pasture for growing pigs is a practical way in which to effect economy in feed costs, states animal husbandry experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

As a result of a series of tests made at Brandon, Manitoba, the use of pasture over a period of years made an average saving of slightly over one hundred pounds of meal with each hundred pounds of grain. Every farmer will recognize that this is an important saving, particularly if he has to buy his grain feed.

A number of pasture feeds were tried out and rape was found not only to have the greatest carrying capacity but it also proved satisfactory from other standpoints. The rape should not be more than six or eight inches high when the pigs are turned out on it.

In turning pigs out on pasture the farmer should keep in mind that protection from burning sun or rain is necessary, and for this purpose cabins should be provided.

For the treatment of skin eruptions on pigs that have become sunburned the application of three parts used crank case oil and one part of coal oil will correct the condition. Rubbing posts wrapped with old sacking and soaked with the oil mixture will also go a long ways in both preventing and correcting sunburn and in destroying lice.

Company Had to Pay For Trader Rat's Trick

Stories of the mischievous antics of the trader rat are received with more or less discredit by people of the East or West, but along the line of the Rocky mountains, which is the habitat of the trader rat, there is to be found ample evidence of the rat's presence and operations. His pranks are sometimes serious, and at other times they are ludicrous. The rat will carry away anything which catches its fancy, but it always leaves something in its place. The story of one man's experience appears on the records of a well-known insurance company. The victim was a movie director engaged in making a picture in the mountains, and rolling himself up in a blanket prepared to spend the night in the open. He laid his watch on a convenient stone so that he might consult it readily, but in the morning the watch had disappeared, and in its stead was a little pyramid of acorns, nails and obsidian. He reported the circumstances and the insurance people were at first inclined to regard the incident as a joke, but the claimant persisted, and finally the amount was paid, but not without a protest on the part of the representative of the company.

There is no difference in food value between eggs with light or dark yolks or brown or white shells. The color of the egg shell is determined by the breed of the chicken, while that of the yolk depends upon the diet of the hen and, in fresh eggs, reflects a possible difference only in vitamin A. content which is likely to be higher in rich yellow yolks.

The color of the yolk depends on the feed which the hens have had. Highly colored foods such as green lettuce, cabbage, grass, and yellow corn, produce rich yellow yolks which contain a great deal of yellow pigment. Pale yolks are produced by rations of white corn, wheat, oats, barley, etc., and milk, all of which contain little or no pigment. One is just as nutritious as the other, except that the light-colored yolk usually contains less vitamin A.

Egg yolks grow darker with age, so that color alone is not an index to the content of Vitamin A. Eggs can be tested for freshness by candling and measuring the air cell which is small at first and grows larger with age.

What Wealth Can Bring You

Charlie Chaplin is quite a philosopher.

It is said that comedians have a natural desire to be tragedians. We always like to demonstrate our ability to do something different from our regular calling.

But there is one statement made by Chaplin that ought to be broadcast everywhere. He says: "I got most of the things I wanted after wealth came, but I found out after I got them that I should never have wanted them."

We often yearn for that which is not desirable or valuabe as far as our individual needs are concerned.

We all have a desire for a certain amount of fame. The publicity and renown that it brings are considered valuable.

But it is empty and useless unless it can be capitalized in some way to add to your material gain. If it is helpful in adding to your income, actually needed to add to your comforts of life, then fame is valuable.

Chaplin, for example, does not care for alcoholic liquors. He does not smoke. He is not a gambler. And he makes but few friends. He is apparently a lonesome sort of fellow. Fame to a certain extent, in his case, has set him apart from his fellowmen.

It is a good idea to keep in mind at all times the emptiness of wealth itself. Most of the friends it brings you are pretenders; they are simply looking for the good things that come from association with you. When your money disappears they quickly vanish.

Friendship of that kind has no value whatsoever. It is all hypocritical pretense.

Your best friend, after all, is interesting work—activities in which you can throw yourself with enthusiasm. The satisfaction that comes with accomplishment, with work well done, is beyond estimation.

And wealth has no special value under such circumstances. You cannot eat more than you can digest, no matter how wealthy you may be. Such mistakes will always be penalized. You cannot sleep in but one bed at a time; and more than one suit of clothes would be a source of discomfort.

The advantages of wealth are greatly overrated. It can assist you in accomplishing certain results that may be a part of your ambitions, but other than this it is of little value.

WONDERS OF STONEHENGE

Ancient and mysterious Stonehenge is located some nine miles from Salisbury and near the little town of Amesbury, in Wiltshire, England. This circular formtion is commonly called the Altar Stone. What its origin or purpose is time or research has not revealed, but it is obviously connected with some form of observation of the sun, possibly sun worship.

It is generally believed to have been erected some 4,000 years ago, possibly by the tribe from the Continent which brought the idea of cultivation of land to England in the Bronze Age.

To the east of the Stone Circle is the Hele Stone or Friar's Heel over which at dawn on the 21st of June—namely, at the Summer Solstice—the sun rises when viewed from the Altar Stone other pointed stones mark the rise of the sun at the Winter Solstice and sunset at Midsummer. At few places in England can the thoughts run riot to such an extent as in this circle of immense stones standing in solitude overlooking Salisbury Plain. Pictures of human sacrifice and heathen rites spring readily to the imagination.

A Wise Merchant Takes Out Advertising Policy For Protection

The premium you paid yesterday or the day before, was for life insurance, to protect your dependents or business associates against death on your part.

Just as long as you pay that premium, the policy is in force, and protection is maintained.

Did you, at the same time, Mr. Storekeeper, Merchant, Manufacturer, or Wholesaler, consider how very necessary it was to take out an advertising policy for the life of your business, for after all it is from this medium that you obtain the necessities of life? More than that, it allows you to pay those premiums on your life insurance so very necessary these days.

Wide awake business men, with worthwhile merchandise to sell, provide sufficient money to protect the life and growth of their various business enterprises, by introducing an advertising policy.

There must be no question of lapse when an advertising policy is introduced. It protects your business just as long as the premium is paid, exactly the same as in life insurance.

When your life insurance policy lapses, protection is ended, and when advertising of your products cease, so public interest lapses.

The amount the business man puts into advertising is returned with profits, through increased sales turnover.

Taking out an advertising policy today, and allowing it to lapse next month, is very similar to taking out a life insurance policy and then allowing it to lapse.

Premiums paid consistently on both offers the only sure protection.

It is the usual procedure for a man, as promotion and increased pay comes along, to increase the amount of his life insurance. It is just as necessary with increased sales and profits, to put more into the advertising policy protection.

Business men know they should carry an advertising policy as a safeguard for their business, but from some unexplainable reason, sometimes put it off until a sick cash till forces them to it.

Every business, large or small, should take out an advertising policy.

Collectively, these policies will add stimulation to business and produce unlimited profit participation for the policy holders.

Circulation is the keynote of a successful advertising policy; more so if the quality of circulation is outstanding.

Invisible

It was not often that a conjurer visited the village, and when an expert began his performance by "materializing" coins, the audience stared in astonishment.

One of his tricks was to make a dove come through the ceiling, and for this purpose an assistant was posted on the roof, ready to release the bird at a given signal.

"Ladies and gentlemen, I shall now ask a dove to descend from the roof of this hall," said the conjurer, as he proceeded to show there was no deception in anything he did.

At the critical moment a cat, tied to a piece of almost invisible string, was lowered slowly over the conjurer's head.

"Where's the dove?" demanded the man of tricks.

"Through the opening in the roof a voice replied: "It's inside the cat."

"The Secret of Margaret Yorke"

By Kathleen Norris

Copyrighted 1931

CHAPTER XXIV

Margaret and Stan decided, at breakfast, that their last day together should begin with a walk. Then Jim should be bathed and dressed, before lunch, and Margaret finish some small ends of packing and immediately after lunch they would all drive into the city, Stanley leaving them at the Fairmont Hotel. And after that they would not see each other again.

Margaret decided upon this course of action resolutely; she seemed cheerful and strong this morning.

But her mood sobered as time went on. There was a strange and exquisite beauty about these last hours, spent alone together, and in the place they both loved so dearly.

Stanley remembered that he did not know when her birthday was; Margaret knew his, of course. She had picked him out the fitted suitcase, in his aunt's day, and managed more than one elaborate birthday party on the last day of January. He seemed oddly fascinated with the thought of her own, and repeated the date in a dreamy tone a dozen times.

"My mother's birthday was in April," he told her.

"And what was her name, Stan? I don't think I ever knew."

"Mary, Mary Burgess Crittenden," Stan said.

"I'm Mary, too," Margaret said, pleased. "Margaret Mary. And my mother was Mary Rose. But she used only the Rose," she added. "Her stage name was Rose Irwin."

"Then you were Margaret Irwin?"

"Oh, no, Margaret Yorke. Dad's name was Yorke. I wanted nothing from my husband, not even his name," Margaret said, coloring. "You know, years ago, when mother used to talk to me about the future, she said, 'she used to give me advice. She used to beg me to be careful about marriage. "It's so easy to make a wreck of everything when you're young," she used to say. "And it's so bitterly hard to get out of the wreck." All youngsters hear those things, Stan," Margaret added, thoughtfully, "but why is it—why is it—they can't seem to understand? I used to listen to my mother and nod my head and say, 'Yes, mother,' and all the time in my heart there was a sort of comfortable conviction that things could not go wrong with me, that I knew all my mother knew, and more besides, and that, no matter how silly I was, I could always get out."

"I remember Aunt Hat talking to me, two or three nights after I got engaged to Shirley," Stanley mused. "Everything she said was true. She told me—or rather she asked me, sort of timidly, if I didn't think Shirley was a little wordly and not apt to settle down? All it did was make me furious. Every word she said seemed to hit me on the raw. I wanted to be rude to her and tell her that she was an old fusser—as a matter of fact I never for one instant let myself think that it might be true! I just listened, civilly, and said, 'I understand, Aunt Hat, but you don't get Shirley right, she's never at her best when you're around,' and that was all there was to it. I listened just as I'd have listened to any other tiresome sort of stuff, staying to myself, "It's only Aunt Hat—let her rave on!'"

"Then the point is," summarized Margaret, "that there simply isn't any way that older people can reach younger ones. The words just don't register!"

"If Nature has gotten in her deadly work," Stanley agreed. "She softens them with some sort of mental poison, maybe, just as they say a snake does the bones on the victim before he swallows it!"

"One moves in a sort of dream," said the woman; "other people talk, go about, other things happen. But the one thing in sight is that ruinous, imbecile, reckless wedding, and until that happens, they can't talk of their air!"

After breakfast she and Jim and Stan went for a long walk, beginning with the familiar barnyards and stables, and wandering on up into the woods.

After an hour of it, during which Jim had been triumphantly riding upon Stan's shoulder for at least fifty minutes, they sat down upon a dry log, in an open sunny space, to rest and get their breath.

The sun was hot, here, and the whole world was bathed in radiance and sweetness. There was a good smell of oaks, and rotting wood, and damp earth. There was not a cloud in the pale blue sky, the great grey-green mountain ranges fell away below them like the opened fingers of an enormous hand. Far down, in the valleys, a lonely farm, here and there, sent up a plume of pale-grey smoke into the sparkling morning air; nearer, the steam was rising from the sloping tangle of roof that was "Uplands," and Jim could identify the new windmill and the empty pool, and even the small forms of Tony and Battersby, walking past the barn.

The cattle were toys now, of red and white, and Hang, coming out to get a pumpkin, only another toy. Jim revelled in a sense of largeness, of superiority; his elders studied the stretching magnificence and beauty of the panorama with eyes as full of pain as pleasure.

"Margaret, if I must marry Shirley, I'll sell all this!" Stan said, with sudden bitterness.

"Oh, don't ever sell it!" she protested.

"Where will you be?" he asked, after a pause.

"I thought of Carmel, Stan. That's warm and quiet and near the sea, wonderful for the small boy. Or Inverness. I don't know anyone, either place," Margaret added, her voice shaking a little, against her will.

"I can run over to Carmel from Del Monte in ten minutes," Stan said.

"Then it won't be Carmel," she decided, with a rueful little smile. "It simply musn't be that we are constantly meeting. If you dropped dead today I should somehow get over it, and that's exactly the way I must get over it—all alone. If you marry, I'll know it, never fear, and if you do not and I am ever free—"

"If it isn't Shirley—and it won't be Shirley! it will be nobody, of course!" Stanley reminded her moodily. "If it isn't Shirley, it simply means waiting. There'll never be anyone else, I know that. It isn't any one thing I love you for, Margaret, any one thing that some other woman might have", he said. "It isn't being in love! It's everything, your wrists and your eyes and your voice, and the things you talk about, and your point of view and the expressions you use, and the clothes you wear! I'd rather feel", Stanley added, presently, as she did not speak, "the way I feel today for years than go back to where I was before you came along and changed me! You make life wonderful to me—I just simply want to be where you are, and do everything I do with you, and meet you in turn and help you into my car, and discuss lunch with you, and tell you about the office, and dig in the garden with you".

The words burst from him in a tone almost of despair; his voice shook. Immediately he sprang up, stretched a hand to the child, and started down the homeward trail.

Margaret followed him. The sun was veiled now, and the air was mysteriously cool and uneasy; the foliage of the live oaks rustled and a chill wind went over the world. The dogs whined, and when Stanley paused in a hicket to guide Margaret across a particularly tangled bit of wood they saw deer—two does and a mottled fawn—leaping lightly and noiselessly away into the deeper forest.

Buck and Lily and Lady went after the deer with mad barking and uproar, but they returned presently, crestfallen, and contented themselves with earthing a red fox and covering their magnificent coats with a whirl of fine black fying dirt.

Back at the farm again Jim was in splendid spirits, talking fast through Nora's hand and the wash rag that were making his small face presentable for lunch. But Stan and Margaret's mood oddly matched and subdued, sad change that had come over the bright day. The girl felt her muscles sore, her head ached a little, she felt cold. It was 1 o'clock already At 4 it would be all over.

At 5 o'clock she was lying on a couch in the big hotel room, staring dully at the flowered wall, and the decorous mahogany furniture, and the big, freshly-curtained windows that looked down upon the gray, dismal wooden houses of San Francisco, and the beauty of the crowded piers and the exquisite sweep of the bay, and the islands and the hills.

Nora and Jim had gone out; the rooms were still. Margaret and Stan had parted, here in this room, only half an hour ago. They had parted without words, with just one quick and quiet kiss.

Life Turns Empty

The girl's heart seemed to have been torn alive from her body; life was dark, empty, hopeless; she was dead. Stan's voice still echoed in her ears; the touch of his hand was upon her own; the memory of his big figure in the tweeds, his burned, lean face and twisted grin, was shutting everything else in the world from her senses.

He was gone. Margaret could not cry. But the immense desolation of heart and soul and mind almost frightneded her. It seemed physically impossible to get up, presently to brush her hair, to order Jim's dinner and take even a faint interest in her own. She must, just once more, see him, speak to him, be near him.

She looked at the telephone. She could telephone him—

Even while she looked at it, the bell rang. The blood rushed to Margaret's face, her hands were cold, and she felt a sudden weakening and collapse. Nobody else knew that she was there.

Her hand was shaking as she took the receiver, even while she told herself that it was just the office, asking if she wished a dinner card—

"Stan!" she stammered, as the delicious, familiar voice fell upon her starving ears.

"Margaret," he said quickly, "I've got to see you!"

She did not speak. She could not speak.

"I'm coming up" he said. "I've had a wire from Shirley. She and Theobald were re-married again, this morning. She says he's much better and that she's the happiest girl in the world."

CHAPTER XXV

Stanley came into the big hotel room with a glorious rush of spirits. He kissed Margaret quite simply when he came in and they stood holding hands at arm's length and smiling at each other.

"My darling! Do you realize what this means?" he asked, exultantly. "I am free!"

"But I'm not!" she reminded him, ruefully smiling. Immediately, however, her April smile broke out, and she said: "Stan, I am glad! It does seem to bring everything nearer, and it makes one feel that almost any change might come! Show me the telegram!"

He took the crumpled yellow paper from his pocket and Margaret read:

"Cuyler much better. We were remarried this morning. Know you will forgive me. I am the happiest girl in the world. Much love."

It was signed "Shirley." Margaret and Stanley read it more than once, marveling at it, and trying to read between the lines.

"He is alive," she answered simply, "and that is the whole story."

"She got there Monday," Stan calculated. "She must have seen Theobald right away. She said that she knew she could do anything with him if she once saw him, but by George!" he added thoughtfully, "she didn't lose much time!"

They sat down on the big davenport where Margaret had been lying, and locked hands.

"And now I think you must really tell me, my darling, where your husband is, and what he is, and how we can tackle him.

"I have courage now," she said, "and I have hope! I can't tell you why I feel so, Stan, but I believe that by this time next year—I can't say that either," Margaret interrupted herself, flushing nervously, "but I do believe that you and I are going to be happy, one of these days!" she finished.

"Can you imagine the scene?" Stanley said, luxuriating in the details that had secured him his miraculous freedom. "Poor old Theobald harried to death with doctors and nurses. Shirley floats in, all tact and tenderness, knowing his tastes, knowing all about him, having taken him through one of these bouts before! I can see her putting the idea of remarriage into his head, and then being immensely surprised when he took hold of it—"

"I can't believe it yet!" And Margaret's face expressed utter disbelief.

"And, now, will this alter your plans dear?"

"I don't see why," she said, a little startled.

"But doesn't it mean that you and the kid can come back to the farm?"

"I wish it did," said Margaret very thoughtfully. "But—there's you," she reminded him wistfully. "It's going to be hard for us both, waiting.'

"Not if we're engaged!" Stanley suggested buoyantly.

"Yes, but we can't be engaged, Stan. Not openly, at least. And even if we were people would think it was extraordinary, my living under your roof. And more than that, it isn't right," Margaret said.

"Could we get somebody to stay there with you?"

"Well, we could. But that's a big establishment, Stan. Hang, Chung, Nora and Jim and me, and then a companion besides."

"My dear girl," said Stanley, "if you knew how rich I feel, how free I feel, tonight, you'd realize that money is a secondary consideration! You get some nice old Grundy—What is it?"—for she had suddenly straightened herself."

"Stan, how about those old cousins of yours, the Peterses, from The Dalles—don't you remember that they came to your aunt's funeral and said that they might sell their house up there and live in a warmer climate? How about that?"

"I'll write 'em tonight!" Stan said, fired. "I'll wire them!" he amended.

The door opened, and Nora and Jim came in. Jimmie, cold and rosy and hungry, threw himself into Stan's arms, and a confusion of changes and meal-ordering followed. Jim had another bath and ate his supper in his wrapper; Margaret went into the adjoining room and changed her gown. Stanley he had announced, was to take his girl to dinner at the Palace.

Mrs. Cuyler Theobald, radiant, surer of herself than ever, made a flying visit to California, in the spring. She left Mr. Theobald, she explained, comfortable and well cared for, in the New York hotel.

"Happiness has just done wonders for him," Shirley explained to anyone who was interested. "He will never be well, poor fellow, and the doctors tell me frankly that another stroke would mean—" and Shirley always sighed deeply, paused and shook her head over the words—"the end."

She had come out to see Cuyler's San Francisco agent, she said, for the bulk of the immense estates he had inherited were in California.

One glowing April afternoon she drove down to the farm. She had now and then caught glimpses of Stan, and she keenly enjoyed the dramatic possibilities of each meeting. Her upward glances were more eloquent than ever, and more than once she had hinted to him that she was anxious for a long talk.

"Because when you know exactly what happened, you're going to forgive me, Stan," she had told him at their first meeting, when he came, tall and lean and grinning good-naturedly, across the floor of the country club to greet her.

"My dear girl!" he said, deprecatingly.

"Not cross?" Shirley murmured, with a flash of penitent brown eyes.

"Not the least in the world!"

"Shall I come down to the ranch some day, and perhaps we can talk?"

"I'll telephone you—you're with Elise? I'll arrange it," he had said, pleasantly.

She had not wanted the move to be left to him, but there was no help for it, at the moment. Shirley had opened the subject again a few days later.

This time she had been having tea with some women at a hotel, and Margaret and Stanley had come in. Shirley's eyes had widened a little when she had seen his companion, and almost immediately she had gone smilingly over to join them.

"May I break in on this party just a little minute?"

"We haven't ordered," Margaret had said politely. Shirley had protested eagerly—no indeed, nothing for her, she was with the Ponds.

Reassured, Margaret had sat back somewhat silently and had left the conversation to the others, as Shirley had noted with a certain discomfort and resentment.

"I was wondering if I was ever going to see you, Stan," Shirley had said. "This is the sixteenth, you know, and I must be back about the first. I went down to the oil fields," Shirley, now occupying a chair, had told them amusedly. "It was great fun, and dear me, how they do coin the money, Stan! It almost scared me, little me, to be Mrs. Cuyler Theobald, and taken about from one head of a department to another and introduced, and having cars put at my disposal, and everyone kowtowing!"

Miscellaneous Shower.—

On Friday afternoon, May 29th, a miscellaneous shower was given at the home of Mrs. Albert Moore, by Mrs. Finley Wilson, Mrs. Earle Moore and Mrs. Albert Moore in honor of Miss Hazel Helm whose marriage takes place shortly. The decorations were effectively carried out in pink and white, the "bride to be" being the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts, conveyed in a gaily decorated wagon drawn by her little nephew, Ronald Ovans and cousin, Laird Lindsay. Miss Helm, though greatly surprised, expressed her thanks in a few well chosen words. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Wm. Baird, Mrs. A. Richards, and Miss Dorothy Scobell.

Congratulations to Graduates.—

Congratulations are in order to Mr. Archie Finlayson who has successfully completed his three year term for his B.S.A. at Macdonald College and has secured a position with the Live Stock Branch, Ottawa, with headquarters at Kingston, Ont., to Mr. Mr. Eric F. Hawley, who won his degree of electrical engineering, winning also the Undergraduate's Society's first prize for summer essay, and to Mr. Austin Oliver son of Dr. Wm. and Mrs. Oliver of Saskatoon and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Kee, who was awarded the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery, winning the Stevenson Gold Medal for the highest aggregate in the final year and the Lieut. Governor's Silver Medal for highest standing in practical work both during the year and at the final examinations.

Bowling Club Meeting.—

A meeting of the Ormstown Lawn Bowling Club was held in the Post Office Chambers on Friday the 29th of May, when the resignation of Mr. Paul Cartier was accepted and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: W. G. McGerrigle, President; S. J. Cottingham, Vice President; S. A. LeMesurier, Secretary-treasurer. The subscription for young men was fixed at $3. The schedule for the District of Beauharnois Lawn Bowling Association was approved. It was decided to continue as a member of the Province of Quebec Lawn Bowling Association.

W.M.S. Sectional Meeting Held.—

A Sectional meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Montreal Presbyterial met in the United Church on May 22nd, Mrs. J. Reid of Huntingdon, a Presbyterial Vice-Pres., presided. Mrs. H. B. Patton, another Vice Pres. had charge of the devotional period, taking as a basis for her talk, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver," showing that this includes service as well as money, touching on the Individual, the Home and the Auxiliary. Mrs. A. F. Pollock welcomed the officers and delegates, the latter representing the local and neighbouring auxiliaries. The Associate Helpers' Secretary, Mrs. R. C. Robertson of Montreal spoke on her Department. The Supply Secretary, Mrs. C. Rice, also of Montreal expressed their appreciation of the bales received from Ormstown Auxiliary and congratulated the committee for the way they packed the bales and listed the contents. Mrs. (Dr.) Wilson introduced Dr. Margaret McKellar, who has given 40 years of service in Central India as a missionary. She impressed upon her audience the value of this work which started in that locality in 1877, one of the first Canadians going there was Miss Rogers of Lachute, beginning a school with a few girls which has grown to 5 boarding schools with hundreds of girls. A High School with over 500 girls. There are Boys' Schools also and a College. The Evangelist has made great progress having 9 organized churches and 8 unorganized. In one district in a few months 70 converts were baptized. The Holy Spirit is abroad and soon there will be a great harvest of souls. Mrs. J. H. Millar, Huntingdon, moved a vote of thanks to Dr. McKellar. The benediction closed the meeting. Miss Beryl Moore and Mrs. Stewart Osmond sang a duet. Lunch was served in McDougall Hall.

Quoiting Started for the Season.—

The first quoiting of the season took place on May 25th when the local enthusiasts played a few interesting games, despite the inclement weather. The games were very close, especially that of D. F. McIntyre and Wm. Smith when the game was in doubt until the last quoit was thrown. The grounds are in good shape and are open to anyone who would care to try their hand at the game.

Covey Hill

Empire Day.—

We learn that in at least two of our Havelock Schools Empire Day was not observed as a holiday. It seems a mistake that a day of such significance to the British Empire should fall into neglect. We might learn a lesson from our French fellow-Canadians who have devoted this day to their hero, Dollard, calling it Dollard Day.

Mrs. Harriet Lowden's Birthday.—

A party in honour of her birthday was tendered to Mrs. H. Lowden on Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Lowden and was attended by about 30 relatives and friends. Amongst the floral decorations a magnificent bouquet of iris presented by Mrs. E. E. Perry attracted admiration. The supper table was graced by a three-story birthday cake, and many other good things. Mrs. Lowden was the recipient of numerous gifts from her friends here and in New York.

School Closing.—

Miss Theobald's school closed on Friday morning for the summer holidays. The pupils enjoyed a peanut hunt and a treat of candy and received their reports on promotion. Miss Theobald left for her home in Quebec on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Bradley called on relatives here last week.

On Wednesday afternoon the ladies of the Presbyterian congregation had a church cleaning bee.

Master A. Churchill has completed his term at the Feller Institute and is at home for the vacation.

Messrs. Allan M. Hooker and Walter Beattie of Ormstown were guests on Wednesday at Mr. W. R. Perry's.

Mrs. M. Churchill, Mrs. J. R. Beattie, and Mrs. W. M. Horne were amongst those who called on Mrs. Isabel Semple during the past week. The patient's condition continues about the same.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Lewthwaite and little son and Miss Margaret Lewthwaite of Montreal spent the week end at Mr. R. C. Whyte's.

Coun. Davidson gave notice that at the July meeting he would present a by-law levying a tax on peddlers from Chain Stores peddling in the municipality.

Found in Shakespeare

The line "caviare to the general" appears in Shakespeare's play, "Hamlet," Act II, Scene II where Prince Hamlet is speaking to the actors, saying: "I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted; or if it was, not above once; for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general." The word "general" here signifies "the general public." Caviare, the Russian condiment made from the roe of the sturgeon, was then considered a new and fashionable delicacy, but was not obtainable by nor relished by the common people. Consequently, anything which fails to achieve popularity because it is thought to be above the popular taste or comprehension may be considered as "caviare to the general."

Dundee Centre

Ladies' Aid Meeting.—

The Ladies' Aid met at the spacious home of Mrs. Hugh Cameron, Beaver. A large number were present. The business and devotional exercises were presided over by the president, Mrs. J. J. Fraser. After the business part of the meeting was over the ladies spent the work hour piecing quilt blocks. Four new members were added to the society. At the close of the afternoon the hostess served delicious refreshments to forty-five members and visitors. The next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Bella McBean.

As the result of a bill passed in the House of Commons, Armistice Day will hereafter be known as Remembrance Day and will be observed on November 11, separate from Thanksgiving Day. While many people will be reluctant to part with the name by which the memorable day has been known for the past thirteen years, no more appropriate and significant name could have been chosen to replace it. It should be a day of Remembrance and all will concur in its separation from Thanksgiving, a long-celebrated event that has no connection whatever with the Great War. The change was made at the request of the Canadian section of the British Empire Service League.

Every farmer should prepare to take one day off in the month of June, on the occasion of the census-taker's visit. He will ask only 254 questions. It will likely be an all-summer job, with the net result being the "discovery" that agriculture is not in a very prosperous condition.

"The Plumber" Well Staged by Sunshine Dramatic Society.—

A fairly large audience assembled in Zion Church basement on Tuesday evening 28th inst., to be entertained by the Sunshine Dramatic Society of Ormstown, who presented their play entitled "The Plumber,' 'a comedy in three acts. Despite the fact that the father had financial worries which are only too common in these times, the play proved to arouse much amusement and was quite thoroughly enjoyed. The adaptability of the players for their respective parts was especially good. Dundee will no doubt be very pleased to welcome them again when they may have another such entertainment to present.

Messrs. Albert Fraser, Cecil McNicol and Harry McNaughton furnished the music previous to play and between acts.

Portion of Road Completed.—

That portion of road opposite Mrs. John McPherson's farm, Lake Shore road, has been completed. Work on same was begun last Autumn and much labor and no doubt a considerable outlay of money has been necessary for the construction as it had to be built through a somewhat rough and timbered piece of land which was purchased from Mrs. McPherson.

Mr. D. A. Moody, superintended the work which has been well done, resulting in a fine piece of road.

BARLEY AS A POULTRY FEED

(Experimental Farms Note.)

The extremely low prices obtainable for Canadian grown grains has brought the question of their use in poultry rations to the fore. Under average conditions where low prices prevail for these grains they may be marketed to much greater advantage through the medium of poultry products.

Ordinarily wheat and oats and their by-products make up the greater percentage of puoltry rations. The remainder consists of animal and mineral feeds, vitamin feeds and corn and corn products. Obviously, then, the greatest saving may be attained by substitution of a Canadian grown grain for the corn and corn products. The present relatively high price of corn serves to accentuate the desirability of such substitution.

A study of the comparative analysis both total and digestible, of barley and corn shows the former to be the equal to if not slightly the superior of the latter in feeding value. In only one respect is barley markedly inferior to corn namely, in that it contains no vitamin. A white corn is a good source of this vitamin. In so far as poultry is concerned a severe lack of this vitamin has a tendency to slow up growth in the young and to cause a deficiency disease known as ophthalmia (an eye disease) not uncommon to poultry. Fortunately the deficiency of barley in this vitamin is easily overcome by the use of cod liver oil, which is an excellent source of the vitamin, and which is an ingredient of most poultry mashes at the present time. Additional vitamin A may be supplied by feeding fresh cut greenfeeds, particularly alfalfa and clover, good quality alfalfa hay or alfalfa meal (leaves and blossoms).

A purely physical characteristic of barley, namely, palatability, works against its value in so far as poultry are concerned. It is generally fed ground in the mash for this reason since it is then readily palatable. When used in grain mixtures, and particularly if hopper fed, the birds soon develop a taste for it, however. Contrary to general opinion barley is not particularly high in fibre, as are oats for instance.

The Biggest $1.50 Worth Your Money Buys - -

Thrift is a most commendable trait. The practice of knowing what one wants for one's money—and getting it.

Can you think of anything that gives you more value for your money than the service rendered in the course of a year by The Gleaner?

The news of all the happenings of Huntingdon and of the various communities within a twenty-five mile radius, delivered to you each week, while it is news.

The doings of the Town Council, Municipal developments, Board of Trade activities, Business Expansion, Fraternal Happenings, District and Police Court Happenings, Sporting News, Political Developments, Parliamentary and Legislative Happenings, School Examination Results, the more Important Phases of World and Dominion Happenings, Intimation that friends of yours, or friends of your friends are, visiting, have visitors; have been bereaved, have rebuilt or remodelled their home; bought a new home; are officers in a society; have been blessed with a new baby; that they have had an accident, or been married, in fact the intimate activities of the community family life are reflected in the pages of The Gleaner, 52 weeks in every year.

In addition to all this, the merchants of Chateauguay Valley, through the columns of The Gleaner, provide each reader with scores and scores of money-saving opportunities in their advertisements in our columns in the course of a year. In almost any issue, by reading the money-saving announcements of local merchants, a subscriber can save the entire cost of a year's subscription.

And the subscription price of The Gleaner is still the same as it was fifteen years ago. Despite the enormous increases in newsprint and wages and all other items entering into the cost of producing a newspaper in the past twelve years, the price remained the same, $1.50 a year.

Even with milk prices at their present level the subscription of $1.50 for The Gleaner is still the biggest value obtainable for this amount of money.

One word more. The small annual charge for the service outlined above leaves nothing for collection charges. Sending accounts costs money. Save us this additional expense by sending in your renewal subscription promptly. The label on your paper shows when your subscription expired.

By the way, it may be due now. Please turn to Page 1 and if you are in arrears and if you appreciate the service you are getting for the small sum you pay, send along your renewal.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.—

The regular monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held on Thursday afternoon in the church with a very good attendance, fifteen members being present. The President, Mrs. Frank Martin presided. The devotional exercises were in charge of Mrs. Peter McArthur. Six comfort bags for the sailors were brought in and are to be filled and sent away in the near future, by Miss Irene Holiday. Delegates to the coming County Convention at Chateauguay Basin were appointed. Those chosen were Mrs. Sparrow, Mrs. Carr, Mrs. McLean and Mrs. Bruce, with alternates, Mrs. Colin McArthur and Miss Irene Holiday. It was decided to hold a food sale on the afternoon of June 6th at the church. Other sales may be held during the summer, if results are satisfactory. Those to be in charge of the sale are Mrs. Colin McArthur, Mrs. Caldwell, Miss Irene Holiday and Mrs. Carr. One new member was received, Mrs. James Donnelly. This makes a total membership of 23 active and 14 honorary members. As the date of the County Convention may conflict with the date of the next monthly meeting, it was decided to hold the next meeting in the second week of July and have only one meeting for the months of June and July.

When Inspector Gagnon visited the school here a few weeks ago, he gave the pupils a holiday. This holiday was taken on Friday of last week.

Mr. Angus McNaughton, Sr. spent Friday and Saturday in Montreal, visiting his daughter, Mrs. Kelly.

Visit to the "Gulf"—

On Wednesday last a number of people started out from Dewittville to visit what is known as "the gulf", on Covey Hill. All was well until they reached the end of the good road, where it was necessary to leave the automobile and proceed on foot. One by one stopped by the wayside, and only the young man of the party persevered to the end, and saw the gulf. A great deal is being done in these times in the way of bringing to the attention of the public all the natural beauty of our Canadian scenery. Why, when there is a spot so unique as this, has it not been made accessible, and placed on the map as one of the scenic attractions of our country? It is safe to say that a very small proportion of the people of Huntingdon County, know that such a place exists within its precincts. The gulf is a deep hole, right on the top of the hill, said to be caused by volcanic eruption. There is water in the bottom of the hole, and for many years it was supposed to be a bottomless pit, but in recent years two different people have sounded its depth and found it to be 93 feet. Also, on one side of the pit, there is a sheer wall of rock, which is 90 feet from the top of the surface of the water. On the opposite side there is a more gradual descent, by which one can reach the water's edge.

There will be no service in the church here on Sunday next, as Rev. J. B. Maclean, D.D., minister of the church, will be in Toronto attending a meeting of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

Miss Cassie Ouimet spent the week end in Montreal with her aunt, Miss Grace Rabidoux.

If Britain experiences many more dry spells, says an article in Answers, there may be an agitation for planting rain-trees. The leaves of these trees condense the moisture in the air and send it to earth, producing a daily "rainfall" of about nine gallons of water per tree. There are planations of them in Peru, where they help to supply water for irrigation purposes. The rain-tree's usefulness does not stop at supplying water, however. It also provides food for cattle, which eat its pods greedily, and there is at least one variety the pods of which can be eaten by human beings. But it is only in very abnormal years that there would be use for the rain-tree in the British Isles

The Julius Richardson Chapter of the I.O.D.E. offered two prizes to each of the grades in our public school for the best essay on "The Benefits our Community would derive from the proposed Caughnawaga-Lachine Bridge." There were a large number of entries and a close competition ensued. The following is the result:

Grade 8—Jos. Pavio, Reg. Holmes.
Grade 7—Isabel Chappel, Dorothy Barrow.
Grade 6—Lily Lane, Theresa Price.
Grade 5—Ethel Holmes, Lanio Pavio.
Grade 4—Fred Rowe, Amy Smith.

Mr. Peter Dance acted as chairman and the Regent, Mrs. W. S. Richardson, presented the prizes to the successful writers.

W. A. Luncheon.—

The ladies of the St. George's Church W. A. held a very successful luncheon on Tuesday. Mrs. Farthing of Montreal, was the guest of honor and Mrs. Geo. McMillan represented St. Andrew's Women' Missionary Society. Mrs. Arnold was the solo artist and was accompanied by Miss Patience Reid. The luncheon was enjoyed by all and the speeches were also very much appreciated. The table and Hall were tastily decorated with banks of beautiful lilacs.

Empire Sunday.

Sunday was observed as Empire Sunday at St. Andrew's Church and in the morning Miss Doxsey, Secretary of the Children's Division of the Religious Education Association of the Province of Quebec, took charge of the Sunday School and gave the children a very fine talk on patriotism, taking for her subject the bringing back of the Ark by David. Miss Doxsey also took the address during the church service and again stressed the need of patriotism being taught to the children. In the evening the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Prittie, spoke along the same lines. The music was very good and was chosen along lines of prayerful patriotism.

Two weeks from last Sunday St Andrew's will celebrate the ninety-eighth anniversary of the founding of their church. Rev. A. S. Ross, D.D of Montreal West, will be the speaker at these special services.

The big-game hunter was exhibiting his trophies.

"That' lion's head", he said, pointing to a mounted head on the wall "we brought from Africa."

The smallest visitor present spoke up.

"But how," he asked, "did you happen to let the rest of him get away?"

ACTION IS NEEDED

The last fifty years have seen a tremendous decrease in the occurence of certain diseases. This has not happened by chance. It is the direct result of the application of the knowledge which has come to us concerning the cause and manner of spread of these diseases.

There is a simple explanation as to why we have been able to combat certain diseases successfully and why we have been unable to withstand the attacks of others. By means of research and investigation we have learned enough about some diseases to enable us to deal with them. We remain in comparative ignorance, however, concerning certain others.

It is not to be supposed that knowledge in itself brings results—far from it. Results come only when the knowledge we have is applied. When an epidemic of typhoid fever occurs, it is not due to lack of knowledge as to how such an epidemic could have been prevented. The epidemic occurs because the knowledge regarding the safeguarding of water and milk supplies was not put into practice.

We are apt to sit back and think what a fine thing it is that we know how to prevent diphtheria. We say to ourselves what a relief it must be to parents to know that they no longer have to live in dread lest their child fall a victim to this disease.

To our surprise, some day, it is brought to our attention that many children still suffer and that not a few die from this disease—diphtheria—which we understood had become a thing of the past.

Why is this so? It is not because we were misinformed. It is quite true that diphtheria can be prevented. The explanation is that parents have not availed themselves of the means for prevention—they have not had their children protected; they have left them defenceless.

What we wish to say to parents is simply this. It has been shown that, by the injection of diphtheria toxoid, your child can be immunized or protected against diphtheria. Whether or not you take advantage of this knowledge and have your child protected rests with you. No one else is responsible; no one is going to have it done for you. Your child cannot go and have it done for himself.

It is a simple, safe and effective way of protecting your child from a disease which not only takes the lives of several hundreds each year, but which damages the bodies of those who recover from its attacks.

Action is needed. It is only by the action of parents that their children will be protected and diphtheria be made a rare disease.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Mr. Wm. Radley's Barns Destroyed.—

Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Wm. Radley in the loss of his barn and other buildings and also the greater part of his machinery, such as a hay loader, corn harvester, mowing machine, and several other pieces of machinery, which were destroyed by fire on Friday evening. The fire was first noticed by one of the neighbours who called Mr. Radley's residence by phone and on looking discovered the roof of the barn to be a mass of flames. Neighbours arrived at once to give what assistance they could but in spite of all they were unable to save but very little. The barn being close by other smaller buildings they were all destroyed. It is unknown what caused the fire, but it is thought perhaps a spark from the chimney might have blown unto the barn.

The deep blue color of the Mediterranean sea is due to the salt water constantly pouring into it from the Atlantic ocean, and to the fact that few large streams carrying sediment empty into it.

Huntingdon Town

Stolen Auto Recovered Here.—

A most unusual recovery of a stolen auto was made in Huntingdon last week. The car belonged to the United Church minister at Iroquois, Ont. The car was stolen on Tuesday night of last week. The thief rode a bicycle to the minister's garage, left the bike in the garage, and took the minister's auto. When the car was found abandoned in a ditch alongside a back road from Huntingdon, in it was found a lady's driving license stolen from another car in Iroquois and also the Church of England communion set. The car remained in the ditch throughout the day and at night Messrs. Lunan and Kyle hauled the car into their garage. In the pocket of a pair of overalls in the car the name of the United Church minister was found. He was communicated with and then came to Huntingdon and claimed the car which was little damaged and after a couple of hours' work he returned home delighted over having recovered his auto. It is quite apparent that Huntingdon also had a thief visit the car, for when the car was hauled into the garage the communion set was found missing, although it was in the car early in the day.

Pianoforte Recital Presented.—

Friday evening the piano recital given by the pupils of Miss Elsie M. Sellar was presented in the Lecture Room of the United Church. The stage was arranged with flowers and lights and made the setting very pleasing. Mrs. J. H. Miller presided over the recital. The pupils taking part in the recital were Elsie Munro Alberta Braithwaite, Janet Cooper Helen McGill, Doris Douglas, John Cunningham, Arline Goundrey, David McCoy, Betty Douglas, Myrna Wheeler, Arthur McFarlane, Hazel Vass, Dawn Douglas, Margaret Biggar, Isobel Shearer, and Jean Hunter. The programme was augmented by a violin solo by Eleanor Hunter who was accompanied at the piano by her sister Jean. Miss H. Gnaedinger of Montreal and Valleyfield also gave two violin numbers. The junior elocutionist of the evening was little Miss Joyce Summers of Montreal, who in her captivating manner brought forth repeated encores. Dr. Douglas also sang and again pleased the audience. The unlooked for treat was that of pianoforte numbers given by Miss Laura Walker, of Montreal. Miss Walker is Miss Sellar's teacher. The stage managers, dressed in their best bib and tucker, and who were so cute, were little Helen Cunningham and Marjorie Clouston. The class, in honor and esteem of their teacher made a presentation of flowers at the intermission period.

Club House Being Built at Bowling Green.—

The bowling green is in excellent condition and bowling is being enjoyed by all participating. At the present time a club house is being built and will be much in keeping with the general appearance of the green. Huntingdon will have the finest club house in the District of Beauharnois when completed. When the club house is completed, a formal opening for the season will be arranged. The bowling fee is now $5 for men, and it is hoped a greater number will take up with the sport. The ladies expect to increase their membership this year as well as the men. The fee charged the ladies is but $2.

St. John's Church Entertainment.—

The ladies of St. John's Church held a very successful supper and entertainment in the parish hall on Thursday evening. Proceeds realized amounted to about $40.

In making the report on the Dancing Recital given by the pupils of Mrs. S. W. Crawford, mention should have been made that little Marion Stark, Doris Douglas and Elizabeth Kelly participated in the programme. For the benefit of those who were not at the recital might we mention that it was June Charette of Malone who did the toe dancing and that Miss Lucille Carrier of Malone accompanied some of the dances and songs. Marion Stark, the youngest participant in the concert, did her part exceptionally well.

The Rev. J. H. Miller and Mrs. Miller spent Saturday in Cornwall visiting with friends.

Rev. Mr. Miller is presently attending the United Church Conference, consequently no church services will be held in the United Church on Sunday next.

Mrs. R. Watson Sellar of Ottawa recently visited with Mrs. Adam Sellar.

Mr. Elmer Sparrow of Winnipeg formerly of New Erin is now visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lyal Sparrow.

Mr. N. W. Sparrow, Manager of the Bank of Montreal received a sudden call from Detroit on Monday morning. Mr. Sparrow's mother who has lived in Pickering, Ont., left for Detroit a few days ago to make a visit. Monday morning she suddenly dropped dead. Mr. Sparrow visited his mother on Victoria Day in Pickering and she was then enjoying good health.

Mr. Harold Miller is spending the summer months at Pembroke, Ont., where he has secured a position.

Miss Dorothy McConville of Saranac Lake was a week end guest at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McConville.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy McDonald of Massena, N.Y., Miss Olive McDonald, Mr. Dean Watson and Mr. S. R. McDonald of Montreal spent the week end at the home of Mrs. L. C. McDonald.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Lefebvre visited with their sons at St. Laurent College, Montreal on Sunday.

Miss Estelle Lefebvre and Mr. Arnold Hill of Montreal were week end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Lefebvre.

Mesrs. André Lefebvre and Paul Lefebvre attended a banquet at Bourget College, Rigaud, on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Hunter have been guests for a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Allen in Westmount.

The Gore

On Saturday afternoon a game of baseball was played on the Gore diamond between the Ormstown Senior League team and the Gore team. The weather was suitable for such an occasion and quite a large crowd gathered. The Ormstown team had the upper hand from the first of the game and went home with the victory, the score being 30-12.

The line up was as follows:

Gore	Ormstown
	catcher
C. Montgomery	B. Boyle
	pitcher
L. Cameron	J. Murphy
	1st base
A. Henderson	Cartier
	2nd base

Typewriters to RENT

Occasionally people in this community are desirous of securing the use of a typewriter for a brief interval and calls have been made upon the Gleaner for the loan of same. We have always been pleased to accomodate our friends, but owing to the calls being so numerous we have deemed it advisable to rent such machines either by the day or by the week. In this way people will not feel they are obliged to hurry up with the use of the borrowed machine or be without one when most desired.

The rental rates are:

One day 50c
Each additional day 20c
One week $1.25
Each additional week ... 70c

People who desire a certain type of typewriter and know a few days in advance that they will want such, might advise us, so that we can secure one from Montreal in the event of our having no machines available.

Re-built typewriters for sale $45. to $60. and up.

We are told, and very true it is, that procrastination is the thief of time. It is not the only condition of the mind that goes around robbing us of time, but this state of procrastination does absorb hours and days and even years, trying to make up its mind just what to do, and then how to do it.

While that is happening, some other and wiser fellow comes along and does it. He hasn't any time to spend bothering about it.

This business of putting off and putting off is all wrong. If it were necessary, it could be understood; but when an individual won't, or can't, make up his mind, he is certainly something of a weakling. Granted it sometimes needs a little courage to make a decision. "Will it be the right one?" is the thought that worries us.

That is largely the make-up of the procrastinator's mind. He has lost the capacity to make a decision. We ought to arrest procrastination, and prevent it doing any more thieving from us.

Observer Saw Beauty in Locomotive's Steam

In a period that provides us with opportunities of learning how interesting and even beautiful a thing a railway can be, it is instructive to recall that an earnest observer of a century ago saw, in the Liverpool and Manchester line, a beauty, apparently, such as Keats discovered in the Greek vase on which he bestowed immortality. Alexander Somerville, in his "Autobiography of a Working Man," published originally in 1848, and referring to a period during the thirties of the last century, states:

"All sights which I had seen in London and elsewhere—the beautiful, the grand, the wonderful—shrank into comparative nothingness when, after reaching Liverpool I went into the country for a week, in the neighborhood of Prescott and saw (each day I sought to see it, each hour of the day I could have stood to see it again) the white steam shooting through the landscape of trees, meadows and villages; loaded with merchandise, men and women, and human enterprise, rolling along under the steam. I had seen no sight like that; I have seen nothing to excel it since. In beauty and grandeur the world has nothing beyond it." Manchester (England) Guardian.

Burnside Stock Notes

Our importation arrived home from quarantine on May 24th, after coming through the test without a reaction, these animals were all tested for abortion before leaving Scotland and are all negative to the blood test.

Ten of these animals are already sold, seven of them go to Ontario and the remainder stay in Quebec. Mrs. E. J. Davis, Toronto, purchased five head including Dunrod Honeysuckle, the cow that has twice been a first prize winner at the Highland show. This cow is due to freshen in August. The Cow Barr Jinty was also included in this lot, she is a daughter of Auchenbanzie Royal Review, there are now four daughters of that bull in the Credholme herd. The four year old Drumfork Jesamine was also included, and also the two year old heifer Dalzell Waistline. For a junior herd sire Mrs. Davis has purchased the junior yearling bull Hobsland Bannerman. This is a big quality bull of the best of breeding, his sire is a son of Howie's Grandee while his dam is a daughter of Hobsland Lucky Boy.

To Mr. W. H. Coverdale, Le Moines Point Farm, Portsmouth, Ont., goes two yearling heifers, the senior Hobsland Missie is sired by Netherhall Enterprise and is one of the heifers Mr. Barr had fitted for the shows this year, the junior yearling Ardgowan Dainty was bred by Sir Hugh Shaw Stewart and is sired by Dunrod Sir John.

To Russell Logan goes the junior heifer calf Grange Pansy 28th. She is sired by Grange Eclipse a grandson of Hobsland Duplicate.

Howie's Stamp that young son of the Royal Champion Syke Stamp and out of Howie's Sophia 4th, goes as junior herd sire to our Terrace Bank herd.

L'Assomption College, L'Assomption, Que., purchased the two year old heifer Nethercraig Lady Maud. This heifer is sired by Nethercraig Darling Boy while her dam is a daughter of Hobsland White Cockade who is also the sire of Syke Stamp.

The herds at Burnside, Burness and Woodside have again come through their yearly test without a reaction and the accredited herd certificates has been renewed, the Terrace Bank herd had a clean test during the winter.

The Ayrshire herd of Wallace Merson has passed its annual test for T. B. and had its certificate renewed for the seventh year, 50 head being tested.

A man who lisped bought some pigs, and asked a neighbour for the use of a pen for a few days.

"I have jutht purchatched twine—two towth and pigth. I want to put them in your pen till I can fixth a plaith for them."

"Two thousand pigs!!" exclaimed the astonished neighbour. "Why my pen will hardly hold a dozen."

"You don't understand me. I didn't say two thousandth pigth, but two towth and pigth!"

"I heard you the first time," snapped the neighbour," two thousand pigs! You must be crazy!" and the lisper gave it up.
