PROBLEM OF PROPERTY VALUATION DISCUSSED Legislature Will Not Grant Many Montreal Demands

LEADER OF OPPOSITION URGES THAT MONTREAL BE GIVEN A PART OF THE AUTOMOBILE REVENUES; MONTREAL IN DEBT TO PROVINCE, SAYS PREMIER

Much Time in the Legislature Taken Up by the Montreal Bill—More Powers Wanted by Mayor, But Will Not Be Given—Reorganization of Provincial Police Is to Take Place.

(Associated Press Despatch.)
QUEBEC, March 1.—Pleas were made in the Legislative Assembly yesterday afternoon by J. O. Roy, leader of the Opposition, and by Arthur Sauve, leader of the Government, on the subject of the revenue from the taxes levied by the municipalities on automobiles and other taxation. Mr. Sauve said that if the municipalities were treated with greater justice they would not have an aggregate debt of two hundred million dollars.

Premier Taschereau said that Montreal was on the same footing as other municipalities. It was not Montreal that was complaining, he said, it was the leader of the Opposition. He said that the legend had existed too long that the province could not live without Montreal. He affirmed that Montreal received more from the province than the province got from Montreal. He said that in a few days he would place before the House figures which would show exactly how the city of Montreal stood with regard to the province.

THE MONTREAL BILL

There is no intention on the part of the legislature to commence now to tear up the legislation of last session in regard to Montreal, and which was so emphatically approved of by the people in the referendum. This was the message which Premier Taschereau especially and the members of the private bills committee of the assembly, gave the representatives of Montreal today when the Montreal bill was being debated.

There was no question raised as to the mayor's powers. That will come tomorrow and the answer of the legislature will be the same, to leave matters as decided on by the people. The mayor will get no new powers. The clauses passed by the committee are those which are necessary to the carrying out of municipal administration in the situation in which the city finds itself. The clause permitting the city to draw up a supplementary budget in September, and provide the money by means of a special realty tax of 15 cents per hundred dollars, was passed, with an amendment which provides that the city may do this each year. There was another amendment to provide that the old territory of Maisonneuve should not be affected since it now pays a tax rate of $2, which goes on for a period of fifteen years counting from the time of its annexation. In permitting the special tax of 15 cents, the committee merely allows the city council to go back on its decision of last December, when it rejected the report of the executive committee to raise the tax rate from $1.85 to $1.50.

The Aldermen cannot go back on their decision without this amendment to the charter, and without the amendment there would have to be a deficit at the end of the year. Therefore, the majority of the city council is given an opportunity to think the matter over again, and in the event of shortage of funds to complete the year, to impose the extra 15 cents and thereby bring the tax rate to $1.50 which is the present tax rate maximum provided for in the charter at the time the administrative commission took power in Montreal.

RE-ORGANIZATION OF PROVINCIAL POLICE

Hon. Mr. Taschereau's bill providing for the re-organization of the provincial police was laid before the Legislature yesterday and awaits second reading. There is to be a chief and sub-chief of detectives with residences at Quebec, and a chief and sub-chief of detectives with residences at Montreal. The total force of detectives, sergeants and constables is not to exceed one hundred. The number is not changed. Headquarters are at both Montreal and Quebec, instead of only at Quebec as at present. The chiefs and sub-chiefs, cannot be dismissed except by order-in-council.

The force is to be divided into two classes. The first class will comprise the sergeants and constables charged with all the services pertaining to the provincial police. The second class will guard government buildings and property, but may also be ordered by the attorney general to do regular police duties. Men may be moved from class to class. The chief at Montreal will command the men stationed there, and the chief at Quebec the men stationed in Quebec, and each is to have the same powers as possessed by the present chief of police, the superintendent of provincial police and the chief of provincial detectives. The men specially designated as detectives are not, without special instructions, to have any relation of authority with sergeants and constables. Detectives are specially to prevent crime, but if need be, may be used for the same duties as other police officers.

REPARATIONS CONTINUES TO CONCERN ALLIES

Matter Likely to Go Back to the Reparations Commission.

(Associated Press Despatch.)
PARIS, March 1.—The Allied Powers are expected to refer the whole question of German reparations back to the Reparations Commission for decision after a meeting of the finance ministers of their governments here on March 9.

In the month that has passed since the Reparations Commission referred the last German memorandum to the Allies, it has been conducting an intensive investigation of Germany's finances and ability to pay, so that when the question is again put up to it, the Commission will be in a position to reach a decision quickly. The negotiations between Belgium and the Little Entente, on one side, and Germany on the other, for agreements similar to that reached by Germany and France at Wiesbaden, are independent of the Reparations Commission. Officials made this explanation upon receipt of reports from Berlin that a concord had been signed extending the Wiesbaden agreement to these countries.

The Reparations officials said the negotiations had not reached a definite point and that any agreement would be subject to the approval of the Commission and the Allied Powers.

An Associated Press despatch from Berlin yesterday stated that a provisional agreement had been reached between the Reparations Commission and the German Government providing for the annual payment by Germany of 720,000,000 gold marks in cash and payments in kind to the value of 1,450,000,000 gold marks.

THREE YEARS IN PENITENTIARY FOR BLACKMAIL

Unusual Case Before the Court at Quebec.

(Associated Press Despatch.)
QUEBEC, March 1.—Adelard Denis, aged 30 years, was sentenced to a term of three years in penitentiary by Magistrate Choquette in the Court of Sessions yesterday after he had been found guilty of blackmailing Dr. L. Bernard.

Denis, it was proved, had collected the sum of $300 from the doctor. He had come to the doctor and had represented himself to be the husband of a woman whom the doctor had treated. He said that due to neglect on the part of the doctor he had been obliged to call in other physicians and as a result of the neglect his wife was likely to die. On that occasion the doctor had given him a cheque for nine dollars. Later Denis came and threatened the doctor with arrest and exposure unless he paid him one hundred dollars. The doctor paid the amount but later on making an investigation, he found out that Denis was not married and the woman he had referred to was his sister-in-law. He duly lodged a complaint against Denis which resulted in his arrest and conviction.

It was found that Denis had already served a term of four months on a similar charge and a term of two years in penitentiary for criminal immorality.

GRIFFITH IN CLASH WITH DE VALERA

Will Not Tolerate Methods of Treaty Opponents.

(Associated Press Despatch.)

DUBLIN, March 1.—When the Dail assembled this forenoon for the second day's session, Ministers were called upon to answer more than thirty questions, the majority of which Arthur Griffith, president of the Dail, declared were propounded for the purpose of propaganda against the treaty. "Shame," interjected Eamonn De Valera.

"For the opponents of the Treaty to use the Dail as a means of harassing us will not be tolerated," Griffith retorted. "The members of the Government were chosen to see that the treaty was carried out," Griffith declared, "and although they were under obligation to keep the Dail in existence until the election, the Provisional Government officials would not answer to the Dail for the details of their administration."

No official had been dismissed on account of his policies, Mr. Griffith added, but no paid official was entitled to use his position against the Government.

Regarding the Belfast boycott, he said the Dail Cabinet had imposed it and the Cabinet had revoked it.

PROTECTION OF IRISH INTERESTS

Arrangements for the protection of Irish interests made between the Provisional Government and the Irish Republican Army were announced by Richard Mulcahy, Minister of Defence at this forenoon's meeting of the Dail Eireann, the minister's statement supplying the principal feature of the session. He stated the Republican Army would occupy and safeguard the military posts evacuated by the British, the troops having agreed not to interfere with the coming election, with the Anglo-Irish treaty as the issue, and to abide by its results.

The greater part of the session was occupied with the answering of questions which the Cabinet ministers asserted were propounded for the purpose of heckling and harassing the leaders of the treaty party.

REVIEWS THE CONDITIONS IN SOVIET RUSSIA

Says Lenin Is Not the Bloodthirsty Character Portrayed by the Press.

(Associated Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, March 1.—Lieut. Colonel H. J. Mackie, who spent the winter of 1914-15 at Petrograd, attached to the Central Artillery Russian Headquarters, and who made a survey last winter of trade conditions in Russia at the request of former Premier Arthur Meighen, addressed the Canadian Club here yesterday on economic conditions in Russia.

He said that Great Britain, Canada and the United States should thank God that communism had not been tried out first in any of these countries, but in Russia. The atrocities in Russia, however, were the work of the "Extraordinary Commission," he said, and the Soviet Government has not control of this commission. It had recently been demobilized, he said, and the atrocities were probably at an end. Lenin, instead of being the bloodthirsty character portrayed by the press, Mr. Mackie said, was a calm, quiet, long-thinking man—at least this was how he impressed Mr. Mackie.

As to the famine in Russia, Mr. Mackie said there were ten million people whom nothing could save. There were thirty-three million people in the famine area, one thousand miles by three hundred miles.

ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY PROJECT UP

Subject of Debate by Shipping Men in Washington.

(Associated Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, March 1.—A debate on the St. Lawrence Greater Waterway project and a number of addresses by prominent shipping men formed the programme for the opening sessions today of the 17th convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress.

In the debate, regarded as one of the chief features of the convention, Governor Miller, of New York, was scheduled to speak against the St. Lawrence project, while Governor Allen, of Kansas, and H. H. Merriek, of Chicago, were listed as the affirmative speakers.

In addition to the rivers and harbors convention, which will close tomorrow night with a banquet, four other waterways organizations will be represented at meetings here this week to consider policies affecting new marine legislation. These are the Mississippi Valley Association; Middle West Merchant Marine Committee; South Atlantic State Association, and the National Merchant Marine Association.

Finance Minister W. S. Fielding In Washington To Revive Reciprocity Pact Is Report That Comes From Ottawa

Old Agreement of 1911, Which Was Condemned by Canadian Electors, May Be Brought Forth—Free Entry of Canadian Farm Produce, It Is Argued, Would Greatly Aid Country at Present Time.

(Associated Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, March 1.—William S. Fielding, Canadian Minister of Finance, who is understood to have come to Washington to confer with United States Government officials as to the possibilities of a trade reciprocity agreement between the United States and Canada, had an engagement today to see President Harding.

White House officials said they had no information as to the nature of the conference between the President and Minister Fielding, the engagement having been arranged by the British Embassy.

The Canadian minister continued today to decline to discuss his mission in Washington.

DOES FIELDING SEEK RECIPROcity PACT?

(Associated Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, March 1.—A news despatch to the Toronto Globe from Ottawa today says:

"The visit of Hon. W. S. Fielding to Washington has aroused more interest in Ottawa than any other item of news in months. Men of all parties realize that if the Minister of Finance can bring about any trade arrangement with the United States by which Canadian farm products can enter that country unpenalized by a heavy duty, he will effect a real political coup. Such an accomplishment, it is recognized here, would stimulate business as nothing else could do at the present time. Looked at solely as politics, the chances are that it would create a bond between the Liberal party and a sufficient number of Progressives to put the Government on a sure footing for its full term of office."

"Even after discussion today there are grave doubts as to the reciprocity pact of 1911 is still on the statute books of the United States. A ruling from Washington will have to be obtained on this subject, and possibly Mr. Fielding, who will return on Thursday, has this ruling in his pocket."

"Last April Mr. Fielding stated unequivocally in the Commons that that pact was still in force in Washington and only awaited the consent of Canada. It is not known here whether subsequent tariff legislation in Washington made the pact null and void."

SLEIGH FELL ON TWO YOUNG LADS KILLING ONE

Sad Accident Occurred at Derby Centre—Four-Year-Old Child Killed Instantly.

DERBY CENTRE, March 1.—Frederick Carter, the four year old son of Dr. Carter was killed instantly when the body of a sleigh which was setting up on edge against the side of a barn, owned by Mr. Leslie Gage, fell upon him. The unfortunate lad was struck across the chest by one of the cross pieces and also suffered a fractured skull.

Frederick Taylor, five years old, a playmate, was also seriously hurt but latest reports state that he is well on the way to recovery. The two lads were evidently playing around the sleigh and it is presumed they attempted to climb up it with result that the sleigh, which was merely setting on edge against the wall, slipped on top of them.

NEW SCHEMES FOR PROPERTY VALUATION IN SHERBROOKE DISCUSSED AT MEETING

Ald. Newton and Mr. A. G. Campbell Have Schemes—What Should Be Main Consideration in Property Valuation, Revenue or Construction Cost?—Mysterious Disappearance of Clause from City's Quebec Application.

The executive of the Citizens' Association met last evening at the City Hall to hear Alderman Newton explain his plan for an improved system of arriving at the valuation of property for taxable purposes. Mr. A. G. Campbell, who had also worked out a scheme explained it and the two proposals were discussed.

A MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE

It developed in the discussion that one of the proposed amendments to the City Charter had mysteriously disappeared between Sherbrooke and Quebec. This was a clause to provide power to levy a higher tax on land than on improvements. This was passed by the City Council. It was included in the notice as published in the newspapers. It was never withdrawn by the City Council. But, when the printed bill came up at Quebec, this clause was not included. What became of it? What individual took upon himself the responsibility of eliminating this clause? In some respects the paragraph was the most important of the whole application. If approved at Quebec it was hoped through it to bring about a reform in civic valuation and taxation which would prove beneficial to the City, lessening somewhat the burdens which rest upon improvements in the city.

It was stated last night, that an enquiry addressed to City Aldermen, who had charge of the bill, brought no information.

MR. CAMPBELL'S SCHEME.

Mr. A. G. Campbell submitted a plan which he had drafted. Under it, land would be valued separately from improvements. Land would be placed at its full value. Improvements would be classified as business blocks, tenements and residences. The valuation placed upon them would be fixed on a definite scale based upon the value from revenue purposes. This would call for an estimate of the rental value of all residences. Mr. Campbell thought this would work out more satisfactory than the present plan and ornamentation in buildings would be relieved to some extent from taxation.

ALD. NEWTON'S PLAN.

Ald. Newton's plan calls for a careful classification of all properties, with the land and improvements valued separately. The value of the buildings would be based on replacement value less depreciation.

Secondary consideration, only would be given to revenue of properties. Many questions were asked by citizens present and a general informal discussion took place.

It is probable that the Citizens' Association will call a general meeting shortly to discuss the matter further.

A small committee of the Citizens' Association will meet with the committee of the City Council on Thursday evening on invitation of that committee.

ODD EXPERIENCE OF CANADIANS IN WEST INDIES

Delegation of Manufacturers Drifted About in Motor Boat Nearly All Night Near Nassau.

(Associated Press Despatch.)

NASSAU, B. W. I., Feb. 22, via Halifax—March 1. (By mail to Canadian Press)—The delegation of Canadian Manufacturers visiting the British West Indies seemed threatened to have their tour terminated at their first port of call, Nassau. After drifting about for nearly half the night in a disabled motor boat which was carrying the passengers back to their steamer, the Canadian Fishers, the members, worn out and exhausted, eventually drifted on shore at two a.m., and were billeted on the town wherever beds could be obtained.

It was distressing termination to a most interesting day. On arrival here R. H. Curry, Canadian Commercial Agent and Mr. Gamblin, manager of the local Royal Bank, conducted a motor tour of the island for the manufacturers' party. Later Governor Cordeaux and Lady Cordeaux entertained at a garden party and this was followed by dinner at the Colonial Hotel, and amateur theatricals, at which residents largely attended.

At eleven a.m. the Canadian party, amid cheers, set off for the Canadian Fisher. Twenty minutes later the engine went "dead" and until two a.m. despite calls for assistance, flashlight signals and siren whistles, the party drifted.

Eventually Douglas Much, of Toronto, a practical engineer, got the engine running enough for the boat to crawl back to shore. Nassau is absolutely filled and only by big effort were the hotels able to accommodate the ladies of the party while the men were billeted in private houses.

At one time during the "drift" one of the party offered to swim ashore but was persuaded that the attempt would be fatal owing to sharks.

The delegation was organized formally. Colonel R. W. Leonard is chairman and C. H. Payne, secretary. The delegation met the members of the Chamber of Commerce today and sailed at noon for Jamaica.

Strength

Strength of muscle does not indicate strength of nerves. On this account many people who look healthy enough suffer from nervous troubles and cannot understand what is ailing them. Sleeplessness and irritability are among the early symptoms. Indigestion and tired feelings soon follow.

Read this letter from an Ontario man:

Mr. W. L. Gregory, Charles St. E., Ingersoll, Ont., writes:

"I had been troubled for quite a while with indigestion. At times there would be a twitching of the nerves of my stomach; and I also found it difficult to get a good night's sleep. I am a muscular man and my system became run-down. I took a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found great benefit from this medicine. They did me a great deal of good. I have not been bothered at all with indigestion since, and can sleep much better. I have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many of my friends, as I think it splendid for anyone run-down and needing a tonic."

JACKDAW SHOWS SENSE OF HUMOR AND AFFECTION

Young Bird, Tamed by Kindness, Develops Taste for School and Loves Children.

(Associated Press Despatch.)

DENHAM, England, March 1.—A jackdaw with remarkable powers of intelligence and a love for children, so devoted that it follows them to school and even visits them in sickness, is the property of George Wilson, an ex-navy man, who reared the bird tenderly when it had not a feather on it, and to whose kindness it probably owes its life.

Wilson brought the bird home from work one day and just let it run about his house free and unfettered.

"It follows the children to school every day," said Mr. Wilson. "It enters by the door, perches itself solemnly on the schoolmaster's desk, and plays and comes home with the children. It knows all the children, and has a particular friend in a boy named Evans. One day it missed Evans from school, and it flew to the boy's home over a mile away and began talking to him through the bedroom window."

"Jack's" vocabulary includes "Come," "Go away," "Fred," "Shant" and "Good night." The bird's great delight is to attend local football matches. He hops and flies up and down the line, and when his side scores a goal his jubilation takes the form of little aerial circles round the opposing goal, accompanied by enthusiastic cries of "Oi, Oi." Sometimes he makes a dash for the ball, but instead of kicking it, hops or flies over it.

"Jack" is said to behave very well in school hours, but sometimes tries to drink the school ink.

"His intelligence is almost human," said Mr. Wilson. "Sometimes he perches on my son's desk with a pen in his beak just as if he were giving him a hint to work faster."

The wonderful bird has some of the mischievous traits of his species. He has hidden Mr. Wilson's tobacco box, opened Mrs. Wilson's purse and hidden pennies under the mat, and has taken a shilling from the schoolmaster, flown away with it, and returned it ten minutes before closing time. He flies considerable distances round about the district, accompanies friends on errands and journeys, and occasionally swoops down over the heads of passers-by, chuckling "Oi, Oi."

NO USE TO RAIL, SONNY. "It is hard to sever old ties," sighed the youngster, whose father had ordered him to split a lot of wood gathered from an abandoned railroad track.

LENNOXVILLE

MEN MEMBERS OF ST. ANTHONY'S CHURCH CATER FOR OYSTER SUPPER.
It is usual to be for granted that only the feminine part of the household or institution can properly prepare and serve a meal, and that the part assigned by nature to the masculine portion of humanity is to sit down and enjoy, without undue questioning as to how or whence came the viands he eats. That such, however, is not always the case, is proven by the unique function which took place in St. Anthony's Church Hall on Tuesday evening, when the men of the church served a delectable feast of good things in a manner worthy even of "mine host" of Delmonico's himself. The long tables were arranged with the skill and taste known only to the initiated, and the various courses of the menu, were both in quality and quantity, quite enough to satisfy either epicure or gourmand. Oyster soup, the always popular winter dish, was the main attraction and both as a test of cul-

Mrs. Cotton and Mr. M. J. Wilson. Throughout the evening many musical selections were rendered for the entertainment of the guests and these were much appreciated by everyone.

LIFE MEMBERSHIP IN WOMEN'S AUXILIARY PRESENTED TO MRS. BIGG.

The regular meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Peter's Church was held yesterday afternoon in the Church Hall. There was an exceptionally large attendance at the meeting over which Mrs. Jas. MacKinnon, the president, presided. After prayers had been said in the Church by the Rector, the ordinary routine business was proceeded with. The treasurer's report was read, and, also, a report of the monthly diocesan meeting at Quebec. A very pleasant feature of the meeting was the presentation to Mrs. Bigg, the Honorary President, with a Diocesan Life Membership. The pin presented to Mrs. Bigg was that which had been worn by Miss Postwick, who for many years had been Honorary President of the Women's Auxiliary.

ST. ANDREW'S WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY HOLD REGULAR MEETING.

The Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Church held their regular meeting yesterday afternoon. There was the usual good attendance, and after the customary devotional exercises, the business in hand was taken up. The secretary was authorized to send a letter of thanks to the Women's Auxiliary for the efficient way in which they served tea to the Presbyterial. The secretary was also instructed to send a letter of sympathy to Mr. J. H. Bryce and his family. A delegate was appointed to attend the Provincial Presbyterial to be held in Montreal in the latter part of March. Mrs. Price read a very interesting and instructive paper on India, which was much appreciated by all those present. It was announced that there will be a women's meeting for prayer for missions in St. Andrew's Church Hall on Friday afternoon at 2.30. The hope was expressed that all women of the Church would attend this meeting. At the close of the session the meeting was closed with benediction.

A PREPLEXING PROBLEM.
Divers are the questions asked of newspaper people, who, though just plain, ordinary human beings, are expected to be able to unravel many a perplexing problem. It is a widely known fact that a newspaper office staff are ready and "while the world waits," until they willing to study over problems are unraveled, and to furnish the answers to the most profound questions.

The latest question to arrive at the Record office is that of a "Puzzled Boy," from—After much due thought it has been decided that the address will be reserved, at least until after a vote of thanks has been tendered for the favor.

He asks: "If at a dance an extra dance is given and named 'Ladies Choice,' should a gentleman be expected to refuse a lady who asks him, and keep the dance for the lady whom he escorted to the dance, or is it quite correct for him to accept the lady who first asked him?"
After a long and thoughtful conference on those best informed on the matter in hand, it has been deemed safe to let the following edict go forth: "If said lady escorted by said gentleman is not quick enough to ask her swain before her rival reaches his side, then said gentleman, in order to uphold the traditional elements of a gentleman should accept the first invitation to allow the 'escorted damsel' to ask some one else, which might start a feeling of doubt in another manly breast, but would without doubt 'keep the ball rolling.'"

It is hoped that the puzzled boy will not find the above answer puzzling, and that the decision will be upheld by all fair-minded people, newspaper or otherwise.

MELBOURNE

Mrs. J. V. D'Artois is recovering from an attack of gripe.
What might have been a serious fire occurred here on Saturday night. Just before retiring Mr. J. V. D'Artois could detect smoke in his home. After searching for the cause of it for some time and failing in his efforts, he decided to call for assistance. Arousing some of his neighbors, a search was made and the fire was located under the fireplace, which has been recently built. On tearing up the bricks it was discovered that the beams on which the bricks were laid were smouldering and in a very short time would have been ablaze. Happily, with the help at hand, the fire was soon under control, and we congratulate Mr. and Mrs. D'Artois in their fortunate escape.

While helping to tear up the bricks in the fire-place, Mrs. D'Artois' mother, Mrs. Dufort, had the misfortune to get her thumb badly hurt which is causing her considerable pain.

inary art, and in its service, left nothing to be desired. The tables, with their decorations of fruit, were presided over by the men as waiters, who attended to all the wants of their guests. The secret of the success of the gathering is found in its close organization, nothing pertaining to its success was left to chance. A men's committee included the following: Hon. President, Rev. Father Parent, President, Mr. George Arguin, Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. J. O. Dubuc, Table committee, Messrs. Proulx, Marcoux, Lacoste and Sevigny. This committee took full charge, and were to be congratulated upon the success of the evening.

During the evening a musical programme was given, Mr. Edwards acting as chairman, his witty remarks adding to the evening's enjoyment. The Lennoxville Band was in attendance, putting on several well-received selections, under the leadership of Mr. Epps, who himself contributed an enjoyable solo. Mr. H. J. McFadden also sang, and in response to repeated encores, again appeared and sang. The financial returns for the evening were quite satisfactory.

Miss George has returned from Montreal with a fine supply of up-to-date millinery, and will be pleased to exhibit same to the public in her show-room in the Taylor block.

Rev. T. Knowles, of Ulveton, was a guest over the week-end of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Seale.

Rev. J. B. Hicks, a former pastor of Lennoxville Methodist Church, was in town the last few days, calling on friends.

Mr. G. S. McFadden, of Montreal, was a recent guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McFadden.

The Town Library has recently extended its limits, the partition between the library and the former reading-room having been removed, and the two rooms thrown into one. This makes a much larger space for books, and is very much of an improvement in every way. The library is fairly well patronized by the book-loving public, which realizes that it is more of a necessity than a luxury in modern life.

March made its advent with a fairly lion-like aspect, which augers well for its close. "In like a lion and out like a lamb," is the time-honored prophecy with regard to this, the first of the spring months. At the most, its cold spells can only be "dips," for the sun is gaining in power, and will shortly displace the lady of the Frost King.

"PAPER ROSES"

(BY RUBY M. AYRES)

CHAPTER XX.

"At least, nothing much. It's an odd thing, Briton, but you know she thought she recognized your voice outside. She was quite excited when I went in and demanded to know who was with me."

"Who? Oh, you mean the little girl?"

"Yes, I don't know who she thought you were. I told her your name, and she seemed quite overcome with disappointment."

"How strange!"

It was Rorie now who was only half listening. He was thinking of a letter he had received the previous day from Lilian Fane, and remembering guiltily that he had not answered it. It was the sort of letter to which he would have once answered whole volumes, but now it was as if some unseen obstacle dammed the flow of his eloquence.

Lilian had written in the old strain; apparently she had found no difficulty at all in taking up the thread of their attachment, where she herself had broken it off. Rorie wondered miserably why he could not respond, and what it was that had changed him so much in so short a time.

He would have given a great deal to have been able to answer her letter in his old, impetuous, ardent style; it would have made things so much more easy and pleasant. But as it was—well, the letter still lay unanswered in his pocket.

The rain had begun to fall softly again now; a grey mist hung over hedges and fields; the steps of the two men sounded hollowly through the silence.

"Beastly night!" said Rorie; and he thought gratefully of the comfort to which he was returning.

"Yes—almost wish I'd brought the brougham after all. Hullo! What was that?" Myers swung sharply round on his heel.

Rorie stopped, surprised.

"What?" he asked.

"I thought I saw something move in the hedge; dare say it was only imagination, though. A horse in the field, perhaps."

They walked on more quickly.

"It's an odd thing, you know," said Myers, suddenly, "how a man's wild oats crop up again in his life—eh?"

Rorie laughed rather mirthlessly.

"I suppose so. I haven't had much experience yet."

"Things almost forgotten—things that happened years ago, I mean," the doctor went on, ruminatingly. "They say that the evil a man does lives after him; it's very true."

Rorie did not like to ask the obvious question; he turned up the collar of his greatcoat, shivering a little.

Myers relapsed into silence; he was thinking of the gray-eyed ghost of his youth that had haunted him so persistently during the last few weeks; he knew now what had summoned her spirit out of the almost forgotten past.

Rorie broke the silence irrelevantly.

"Do you care for rabbit shooting? We've had some fine sport lately; come and join us some day."

"I should like to, but my time's not my own, unfortunately. I'm very busy now, too. You see—Good heavens!" He broke off with a shout, as a sudden flash of light shattered the darkness, followed by a pistol shot, and something that whizzed past, just grazing Rorie's cheek.

For a moment the two men were too amazed to move, then Dr. Myers made a dash toward the dark hedge, as something brushed by close to them, and started running down the road.

A man, or a woman—which? His straining eyes could not see, but Rorie knew. He knew, before he caught Myers' arm, to prevent him following and giving chase, that the doubled form racing away into the darkness was Bunch, the hunchback.

"Let him go; you can't catch him. Don't be a fool; I tell you I won't let you follow him."

Rorie's voice was angrily agitated; he gripped the doctor's arm with fingers of steel. "Let him go; he won't interfere with us again."

Myers struggled furiously for a moment; he was amazed and indignant.

"Good heavens! The man shot at us! Let me go. Are you out of your mind, Briton?"

But Rorie held on grimly; held on till those flying steps had died away into silence—till pursuit would have been out of the question—then he relaxed his hold and stood back.

Myers was thunderstruck and furious. He tried to see Rorie's face through the darkness; he asked a string of stammering questions.

"What the devil are you thinking about? The brute shot at us! Do you know who he is? The police must be told. I'm going back to the village at once."

"No, you're not," Rorie's voice was calm and determined, but he was as white as death, and the sweat stood on his forehead.

He had remembered Sherny's words—that Bunch was to be more dreaded than he himself; that but for Sherny's interference he would have taken Rorie's life the night Rosalie died; and, in spite of himself, he felt the touch of something approaching fear.

He knew how amazing his action must seem to Myers; he tried to explain.

"I know who the fellow was; he imagines he's got a grudge against me. Let him go; he's a bit soft—he won't attempt it again."

"Apparently he is not the only one who is a bit soft," said Myers, with some show of temper. He really thought Roderick was out of his mind. "The man tried to murder one of us; you say it was you! Well, that may be, but I shall take steps for my own protection, at least. He didn't hit you, did he?"

"Grazed my face that's all. It's nothing, and you will be doing me a tremendous favor if you don't report it, doctor. I know my own business best."

Myers grunted. He felt keenly suspicious, though he would have found it difficult to say why. He resisted stoutly when Rorie tried to draw him on.

"We should be a pair of lunatics to let the fellow go. Who is he, anyway? What's his grudge against you? D—n it all, man; can't you see that the danger's real?"

"I know, but—"

"Well, I'm going to report it to the police. It's not a bit of good you arguing with me. I suppose we're nearer home now than we are to Bedford, so we may as well go on. If you like being shot at I'm d—d if I do." He strode on angrily, a few paces ahead of Rorie.

Rorie was in an agony of indecision. He knew that he had walked into a trap by coming back to Four Winds, and now he could no longer even rely on old Ferguson for advice. If he told all he knew about Bunch the whole wretched story must inevitably come out, and then—He shrank from the scandal of exposure.

"Look here, doctor," he said, suddenly, "be a pal; you were saying just now that a man's wild oats have a nasty habit of cropping up when they are least expected. Well, I've sown a few myself let it rest at that, there's a god chap."

Myers laughed in spite of his chagrin.

"You, with wild oats! A boy like you? Well, well, I suppose none of us are too young, after all, or too old, eh? But it's a fool's game, you know; and don't say I didn't warn you if one night that devil shoots straight."

Your cup of Tea means much to you. It is more than an item in the daily fare. It is the one thing that "rounds off"—or spoils—an enjoyable repast. Tea is fortunately so cheap in this country that there are few who cannot afford Choice Tea. The cost per pound is only slightly higher than ordinary Tea, while the increased pleasure you get from every cup you make is worth many times the difference. It is true also, that a FLAVOR-FULL Tea like KING COLE Orange Pekoe will actually spend further—that is, make more cups to the pound. KING COLE Orange Pekoe is prepared particularly for lovers of Choice Tea.

MARRIAGES

WOODWARD—GIROUX.

A quiet, but pretty, wedding took place in the city on Monday, February 6th, at the parsonage of St. Patrick's Church, Gordon street, when Myrtle, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Giroux, was married to Mr. Margin Woodward, of Bloomfield, Vt.

Following the ceremony, dinner was served at the bride's home, after which the bridal couple left for Bloomfield amid showers of rice, confetti and good wishes. The bride wore a dress of brown satin and broadcloth, beaded, with hat to match. She was the recipient of numerous gifts from relatives and friends.

HUNT—RUNDLE.

FRELIGHTSBURG, March 1.—A very quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Page on Wednesday at 5 p.m., when Miss Gladys Rundle was united in marriage to Mr. L. Orville Hunt, both parties being from Sweetburg.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. C. Winch. The bride was attired in brown messaline and was attended by her half-sister, Mrs. John Page, who was dressed in navy blue. Mr. Page attended the groom. A small reception was held in the evening, to which were invited about twenty close friends. The bride received numerous useful presents.

JOHNSON—LOWELL.

On St. Valentine's Day a quiet wedding was solemnized at Melbourn, when Miss Verlie Louise Lowell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Lowell, of North Hatley, became the bride of Mr. Oscar Elvin Johnson, also of North Hatley, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Johnson, of Waterville. Rev. G. H. Craik performed the ceremony.

The bridal couple, accompanied by Mr. W. A. Lowell, Jr., and Mrs. Gladys Anderson, left for Melbourn on the 7.38 train from Waterville, and returned on the noon train and were met at the station by the groom's brother, Mr. Alex Johnson. An informal dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents, where a pleasant afternoon and evening were spent, after which the young couple went to the groom's home, where they will reside.

INTEREST IN EVANGELISTIC SERVICES AT BAPTIST CHURCH DEEPENING.

The second day of the Evangelistic Campaign in the Baptist Church clearly showed that the interest in these services was deepening and widening. The congregation practically filled the church. During the song service the male quartette gave a selection.

Mr. Linton read Paul's sermon on Mal. 1, 17, and took for his text verses thirty to thirty-three. He dwelt on the necessity of repentance. Men must be prepared to forsake all sinful ways and thoughts. The only thing that prevented gracious revival in Sherbrooke was secret unconfessed sin on the part of professing Christians. He then dwelt at length on the certainty of a great Judgment Day, which God Himself had appointed. Before that impartial tribunal, we must appear without disguise.

In closing he referred to the different ways men received St. Paul's sermon. Some scoffed at the idea of resurrection of dead men and of the Judgment Day; others procrastinated; some believed Paul's message and consorted with him.

This clear, forceful, searching Biblical discourse was followed by an appeal for men to forsake a. and follow Christ. Tomorrow evening at eight o'clock Mr. Linton will answer the question: "Is there a Hell?" What does the Bible say? A table has been placed at the back of the church where a number of Mr. Linton's sermons can be secured.

THE CIVIC BUDGET.

The city budget for 1922 has been adopted and a tax rate of 13 mills levied as compared with 16 1/4 mills
last year. In view of the increased valuations the revenue, it is estimated, will be about the same.

The reduction in rate is not quite what had been intimated but it is very substantial nevertheless so far as the rate is concerned.

It may be remarked, however, that the reduction in tax rate does not in any degree justify the valuation
methods which have been followed by the civic authorities.

The reduction in tax rate is about twenty-one per cent. so that the real estate proprietor whose property
has been increased by the valuations
twenty-one per cent., under the reduced rate, will come out about the same.

The proprietor whose residence or business block was unchanged, however, will experience a saving in his taxes, while the man whose valuations were advanced thirty or forty per cent. will pay more.

Thus the errors and injustices of the valuation roll are not ameliorat-ed under the new assessment rate.

Committees of the Council, it is understood, are studying various plans for improving the valuation system as a result of the dissatisfaction manifested by the public with regard to methods that have prevailed.

Fairness is all that ratepayers
seek. They have never received justice and never will under the system that now prevails.

THE COST OF LIVING.

Dealing with solid facts rather than with statistics published by responsible departments, Sir Sidney Low, discussing the issues relative to the high cost of living, asks why
the public is not allowed to enjoy the benefit of the great drop in wholesale costs.

During the course of his remarks
he observes:

"Officially the cost of living is coming down; practically—that is to say, from the point of view of the consumer—it stays rigidly up.

"The Board of Trade publishes quite cheerful statistics. It works out the 'index figures' of most of the commodities in general use—
beef, mutton, flour, wool, cotton,
leather, tea, sugar and other things.

"It issues us they are cheaper.
Then it puts them together, takes an average, and declares that prices have fallen again, that they are somewhere about one hundred per cent. lower than they were three years ago, and, in fact, rapidly approaching the pre-war level. And it implies that our living expenses are proportionately reduced.

"This last suggestion would be very comforting if it were true. But the normal experience of all of us
does not confirm the optimistic conclusion. Goods, raw materials, food products may be cheaper—for some persons. They are not much cheaper for us; meaning by 'us' the mass of the ordinary citizens who buy what they want retail at the shops and stores.

"I don't say the official figures are 'faked' or inaccurate. Very likely they are in the main correct.
But, unfortunately, they are drawn from the wholesale lists, not the actual prices charged to the individual buyer over the counter, which is what concerns 'us.'

"The Board of Trade compiler, I presume, goes to the fountain-head.
He finds out the quotations for cottons on the Manchester Exchange,
the rate at which parcels of India
and Ceylon teas are on offer at Mincing Lane, the course of the market in merino and cross-cut wool at Bradford; and no doubt makes his conscientious report in accordance with the facts so ascertained.

"Now these facts may be extremely instructive, but they do not help us. The wholesale price of raw hides to the Northampton boot factory, of cotton yarn to the Lancashire mill owner, are useless to me when I want a new pair of boots or a new shirt.

"The only point that touches me is what will be charged for them at the bootmaker's or the hosier's. The lowered cost at which the vendor
gets them from the manufacturer—
if he does get them lower—brings me no advantage unless he passes
on the reduction to his customer,
which, as a rule, he doesn't.

"Some few things are down a little
even for the ordinary householder,
especially those articles of absolute necessity for which there is an enormous demand by all classes, including more particularly the wage-earing classes.

"Bread is rather cheaper, so is meat of some kinds; but a good deal
of it is bad bread and inferior meat.
For the 'prime cuts' and a good,
well made wheaten loaf we are still paying more than the price of corn and carcasses seems to warrant.

"There are shops where you can buy ready-made clothes and boots almost at pre-war prices. But they are not of pre-war quality by any means. If you require a properly tailored suit of clothes, constructed of real wool, not cotton or shoddy,
you will find no great abatement
from the exaggerated prices charged in the latter part of the war.

"It is the same with boots and underwear and ladies' frocks and other garments. There are, of course, bargains to be had at the 'sales,'
and I see boots marked up in certain shop windows at a guinea. But if you order a pair from a high-class bootmaker he will probably ask you more than double as much as you were charged eight years ago. The Board of Trade schedule is evidently fallacious in this case.

"Leather may have fallen; but you
and I have 'no use' for leather.
What we want are boots, and if the boots are too dear it does not matter to us what the man at the ports or the tannery is paying for his hides.
The same thing applies with other articles.

"What one would like to ascertain is who does derive most benefit from the existing conditions. What class of persons are mainly responsible for the painful discrepancy between the Board of Trade figures and the figures of the retail market? Who is it that prevents the consumer, the actual purchaser, of clothing, provisions, furniture, books, stationery,
household requisites, coals, crockery
and many other wares and commodities from obtaining the full advantage of the fall in prices?

"It may be the importer, the manufacturer, the merchant or the shopkeeper. Some persons are evidently intercepting public profits which ought to go to the public in the form of lessened charges. Many people would be inclined to throw the blame
on the retail tradesman.

"In the war, of course, he did uncommonly well. The Government was pouring out money at the rate of ten or twelve millions a week, and a very large proportion of those millions went straight into the shopkeepers' tills.

"Everybody had money to burn;
and most of it was burnt on the altar of retail trade. One has heard how the owners of cheap jewellery shops made fortunes, how butchers and grocers in back streets set up motor cars and clothed their wives in fur.

"These tradesmen have been caught, like other folks, in the ebb of the receding wave. They are not quite so prosperous as they were;
but are not many of them still rather more prosperous, at the expense of the general public, than they ought to be?

"They will assure you, if you ask them, that they can barely make a living owing to the crushing burden
of taxes, rates and rents.
"Similarly the manufacturers will maintain that they are working on the lowest margin of profit, and in many cases that it would pay them better to scrap their plant and close their factories.

"Then is it the middlemen of the more ambitious kind who are responsible, the wholesale dealers,
shippers, importers, brokers and distributors? Are we in the hands of rings and trusts and agencies, which intervene between the producer and the consumer, to the loss and injury of both?

"I cannot answer these questions;
but it is essential that they should be answered. We are told that trade will remain stagnant and unemployment continue until we can produce more cheaply, which again depends upon lowering the cost of living. The cost of living, as one must insist, is the actual price we are paying at the shops.

"Unless that price comes down substantially we are only mocked
and deluded by the official averages and percentages. These only show that there is great profiteering somewhere, at the expense of the consumer, who ought to be protected against such unjustifiable extortion.
It is time action were taken."

TODAY'S A HOLIDAY.

March 1, 1922.

Burial of The Sardine

Welshmen wear the leek today,
not because it is Ash Wednesday,
but because by a coincidence it also
is St. David's day. David is the patron saint of Wales, and the leek, a species of onion, is the national emblem.

It is around the beginning of Lent,
however, that most celebrations gather. In this country it is very generally observed as a fast
day, a time for renewing New Year resolutions. But in Spain it is not a time for guinness. Today's a holiday in Madrid especially. There the annual burial of the sardine takes place.

Thousands throng the banks of the Manzanares river in the Spanish
capital, to witness one of the strangest sights the year will offer them.
For with great pomp and ceremony

a funeral procession, headed by a band and with the horses and equip-ages decked out, not in black, but in gay colors, is making its way to the chosen spot.

Encased in a paper casket a sar-dine lies in state. It has no other sardines crowding it, there is no mustard or oil dressing. The humble little delicatessen tidbit is today playing the leading role. Tenderly, affectionately, it is lowered into the ground.
Its burial symbolizes to Madrilians
that the carnival is over, meat must be foregone, and the forty days' fast
of Lent has started.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE FLANDERS LEAGUE.

Editor of Daily Record:

Sir—It is said that a member of the Jack London Club is under but one obligation as such. This obligation is that if an animal is brought unto the stage to perform in a theatre where a member of this club happens to be he is to get up and walk out, in silent protest against the cruelty which the training for such a performance entails.

It seems to me that the time has come for another club of similar simplicity; but to aid a very different cause.

The thought I have in mind is to correct the scandalous attitude that is taken by many when our National Anthem is being played or sung. Instead of standing at attention, with respect and reverence, many take advantage of the occasion to greet
friends, put on their wraps, etc., etc., as if the whole matter were only a gesture or less.

That something may be done to correct this unfortunate condition
I should like to suggest that right here in these great Eastern Townships we bring into being a simple society whose obligation may be stated as follows: I give my word of honor that I will stand at attention

(hands down at the sides, heels together, with body erect,) at such times as worthy usage has fixed (as at the close of public meetings)
while the National Anthem of my own country, or that of any friendly
country, is being played or sung.
I would further suggest that the society be called the Flanders League. I suggest this name because of its hallowed associations. More might be said in its favor, but what I have said is enough.

If this suggestion kindles the imagination it will live, if not, it will go the way of many things sincerely conceived and hopefully suggested. If it appeals to you, sir, or madam, communicate with me and I will record your name, and when summer comes with the autoing season, it might be possible to arrange for a gathering at some suitable place, where an organization could be formed to give the custom the impetus it deserves, and thereby begin the elimination of a serious mark of thoughtlessness and bad breeding.

Yours sincerely,

THE ROOT OF HIGH-COST LIVING.

BOOSTING THE COST OF COAL.

(Wilkes-Barre (Pa.) Record.)
It was to be expected that the prospect of a heavy increase in the cost of anthracite coal by acceding to the demands of the miners for higher wages would arouse consumers in many parts of the country.

The operators' statement that if they were forced into granting the demands there would have to be an increase of considerably over a dollar a ton gives the consumers an idea as to what may be anticipated.
With anthracite coal at fifteen dollars a ton and over within two hundred miles from the mines, and higher in proportion to the distance carried, the problem of cost has got to be a very serious concern in the living of a host of families, particularly at a time when incomes are being cut down by wage decreases

and by periods of unemployment.

SUIT FOR THE COLUMBIA GRAPHOPHONE RECEIVER THROWN OUT BY COURT

Action Peremptorily Dismissed—
Powerful Banking Committee

NEW YORK, March 1.—Receivership proceedings against the Columbia Graphophone Manufacturing Co.
ended abruptly when the United States District Court at Wilmington, Delaware, enter an order denying the application made by certain stockholders for the appointment of a receiver.

In thus peremptorily dismissing
this action, which was at the instance of only three stockholders—not of creditors—the Court order clears away the only opposition which has developed to the extensive plans recently made to readjust the Company's finances on a sound and favorable basis.

"The order of the Court in Wilmington," said Mr. A. E. Landon,
Canadian Manager of the Columbia
Graphophone Co., who has been in New York for a few days, "should give a complete and final answer to the misleading reports which have been spread about in recent weeks by certain interests hostile to the Columbia Company. The Canadian Company is naturally gratified over the success of the general plan. Certain reports that the Canadian factory is not operating are entirely false. Not only is this factory in operation, but in such successful operation that it is not improbable that we will be shipping gramophones to the United States market itself. The Canadian plant, which is the largest of its kind in the British Empire, is carrying forward without delay its plans for production of gramophones
and records on the largest scale."

no doubt the public would readily concur. But is all the unreasonableness on the side of the telephone?
The caller who knocks at the door will inquire first whether Mr. X is at liberty, and if Mr. X is conversing with another, or enjoying his dinner
or his siesta, the caller will decide with perfect composure to wait or call again. Why should this same mild, considerate caller, just because he is at the telephone, demand Mr.
X's instantaneous attention regardless of Mr. X's appointments? Why should he overlook all the operator's difficulties with a mob of similarly clamorous callers? After all, what is the telephone but a number of wires with a rampaging caller at the end of each? Surely there need be no fundamental hostility between machinery and sweet reasonableness!

The Woman Who Sees

The Retort Courteous.

The Mid-Victorian Lady sat out on a quest for photograph "records of a gay and jolly variety. The day was sad and dreary, wet under foot, foggy and generally miserable. The shop she entered was manned by a completely discouraged and disheartened group of sales persons. The girl at the photograph shop was plainly given over to the most gloomy forebodings. Abandoned to depression, her frown sagged, her hair was listless and drooping. Into this brooding melancholy the Mid-Victorian Lady ruthlessly broke, and, intruding upon the secret sorrow of the Gloomy One, briskly demanded, "Have you 'Smiles'?" The saleslady surveyed space and in a colorless monotone droned, "All out," as though she secretly rejoiced in the fact. You look like a fellow who would be a purchaser, at which smiles appeared on the faces of all beholders, whether the shop could dispense them or not.

A Mistake.

Mary appeared at the door, disappointed written large upon her countenance. "And would you step down to the kitchen and see ma'am, the potatoes that Dago sent you? The nerve of him and the prices he charges!" Investigation proved that her plaint was not without cause. The "potatoes" were a spinning lot, small and knobby and utterly unlike the ones usually sent. An early trip to the village brought the Busy Housekeeper to the vegetable store, her wrath undiminished. Tony's pleasant Italian face clouded with regret. "And did that boy bring those potatoes to you?" he apologized. "That was one big mistake! Those potatoes were meant for a customer who doesn't pay her bills."

A Modern Miles Standish.

The Woman was spending a week and in the suburbs and Dorothy, the six-year-old daughter of her hostess proved a never ending source of delight. She was seated on the porch with another small playmate, gravely discussing the boy named Jimmy, who lived next door. "Do you like him better than the new boy down the street?" queried the playmate. Just at that moment Jimmy came within hearing distance. "Specially Dorothy asked: 'Did he tell you to ask me?' There was an emphatic nod 'Yes' from the little friend. With a toss of her head, Dorothy replied: 'Oh, I like him better than Jimmy, but there's a boy in New Hampshire I like better than both of them.'"

Unsuspected Knowledge.

The Woman has a young college graduate friend who is just entering the business field. Louise has poise and educational background which she displays beautifully by means of a pair of big blue eyes, homemade pink cheeks and a mop of bobbed brown curls. She does not know whether to call her latest experience a compliment or the reverse.

Yesterday Miss Isabel, the chief stenographer, dashed into Louise's office, notebook in hand, and made for the big dictionary, gasping in her fright: "What on earth does m-o-d-u-s-o-p-e-r-a-n-d mean?"

"Method of procedure," said Louise neatly from her desk.

Miss Isabel said faintly and dived into Webster. In a moment she was out again and looking dazed.

It does mean method of procedure," said she. "How on earth did you know that?"

Pin Money.

Have discovered a new source of revenue," said the Young Business Girl to the Woman. "It gives me enough money for an extra dress each week. And it is . . . renting my clothes! You know I live at the Girls Club. There are oodles of us, girls of every type and style, with clothes and without clothes. Well, the other week a girl about my size whom I know slightly rushed in my room and asked to rent a dress. Said she couldn't afford to buy a new one then, and if I'd rent the one she wanted she would be eternally grateful. I've never been keen on lending or borrowing clothes, but I was rather hard up, so I agreed, and for $2 my dress went to the Pennsylvania Grill for dinner and dance. Then in a

Household Notes That Increase Efficiency

When a nail becomes loose and plastering begins to break it can be made solid and firm by the following process: Saturate a little wadding with thick kerosene or glue, wrap as much of it around the nail as possible and reinsert nail in hole pressing it home as strongly as possible. Remove excess of glue or kerosene, wiping it off cleanly with a clean wet rag. Then let dry. The nail now will be firmly fastened in place. If the loose plastering be touched with the glue and replaced it will also remain firm and solid.

To remove white spots from table, &c., mix alcohol, olive oil and pure cedar vinegar in equal parts; shake well before using. Rub well with a wooden cloth and polish with another soft woolen cloth.

Stained floors need scarcely ever be touched with a wet cloth if they are rubbed over every day with a brush over which a paraffin rag has been tied.

Dry celery leaves, crush to powder, add salt and you have an excellent celery salt.

Potatoes should be washed in quantities to save time daily in the preparation of meals. Besides potatoes cleaned and thoroughly dried requires less time and gas to bake.

I've started a pretty good business, but I don't know what I'll do when they all wear out."

Car Needed It Most.

The little librarian sat at her desk surveying the row of solemn eyed Italians before her. Tony had brought all his little brothers and sisters to see the "teacher." "My goodness," she said, "how many of you are there altogether?" "Eleven," said Tony, and the entire row grinned broadly, exhibiting beautiful pearly teeth. "What beautiful teeth! I suppose you all brush them well every night?" A nervous shuffling, Tony cleared his throat. "Well," he said earnestly, "we did have a tooth brush once, but father needed it to clean something in the car, and after that it wasn't much good."

Clever Closets Compromise With Space

A FOUR room cottage or apartment may really be large enough—yet there are some twenty room houses that do not really give the occupants thereof enough room.

What are the tests of sufficient room in a house?

Perhaps the most important—are there enough places to keep things? Sometimes this problem can be solved by having fewer things—the important thing is to have a special place for everything. So you see, the tiny house with a good supply of cupboards and closets is much better than the big house with a poor supply of cupboards and closets.

Now it is very possible to rearrange a house at comparatively small cost so that it will have place enough for everything.

To begin with, you can have a cold closet partitioned off in your cellar at small cost—just rough boards, a rough board door with the simplest sort of hinges and latch. You can add a couple of coats of paint if you wish to and a padlock. This closet should be fitted with shelves and plenty of floor space for barrels and boxes. In the summer, when it is not used for storing barrels of potatoes and apples you can put the boxes and moth-proof bags containing winter clothes and bedding—provided, of course, that it is dry and clean.

Proper Food Values in Child's Lunch

WHERE the child is compelled to carry lunch along to school, such a lunch should be appetizing, filling of the lunch box should be as carefully planned as the meal at home. Cakes and sandwiches should be carefully wrapped in paraffin paper for proper protection. Glass tumblers with well fitting covers may be used to carry such foods as baked apple, stewed prunes, custards, puddings, &c. A thermos bottle will permit the carrying of soup, cocoa, milk, or other liquid food.

To provide the necessary "proteins" sandwiches may be filled with such wholesome foods as hardboiled eggs, cheese, peanut butter, bacon, &c. Or canned meats and fish may be used and a small can of garden, deviled tongue, roast beef, or boned chicken placed right into the lunch box along with a can opener where necessary.

From Cow-Girl to Opera Singer!

PIONEERING in the great stretches of the American Desert and ranchlands has developed all sorts of new professions for women. In Arizona, Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and other Western States women prospectors, women cattle raisers, women wheat growers and women miners are common enough.

But Mary McCormick is the only product of the American prairie who, in addition to her ability to wield a six-shooter with deadly effect and "bulldog" cattle (leap from her flying pony to the horns of a racing steer, throw him to the ground and subdue him by twisting his neck—a feat of all wild West stunts, undertaken only by the most daring men riders), has made a tremendous hit in grand opera. She possesses a beautiful lyric soprano voice.

Miss McCormick made her debut with the Chicago Opera Company early this fall as Micaela in "Carmen," with Mary Garden, Muratore and Baklanoff in the cast. Miss McCormick is a contradiction to the general belief that pull is necessary for entry into grand.

"A voice, some gray matter and very steady nerves," is Miss McCormick's answer to the question as to what were the qualifications most essential for success in grand opera. And she added with conviction, "A whole lot of nerve!"

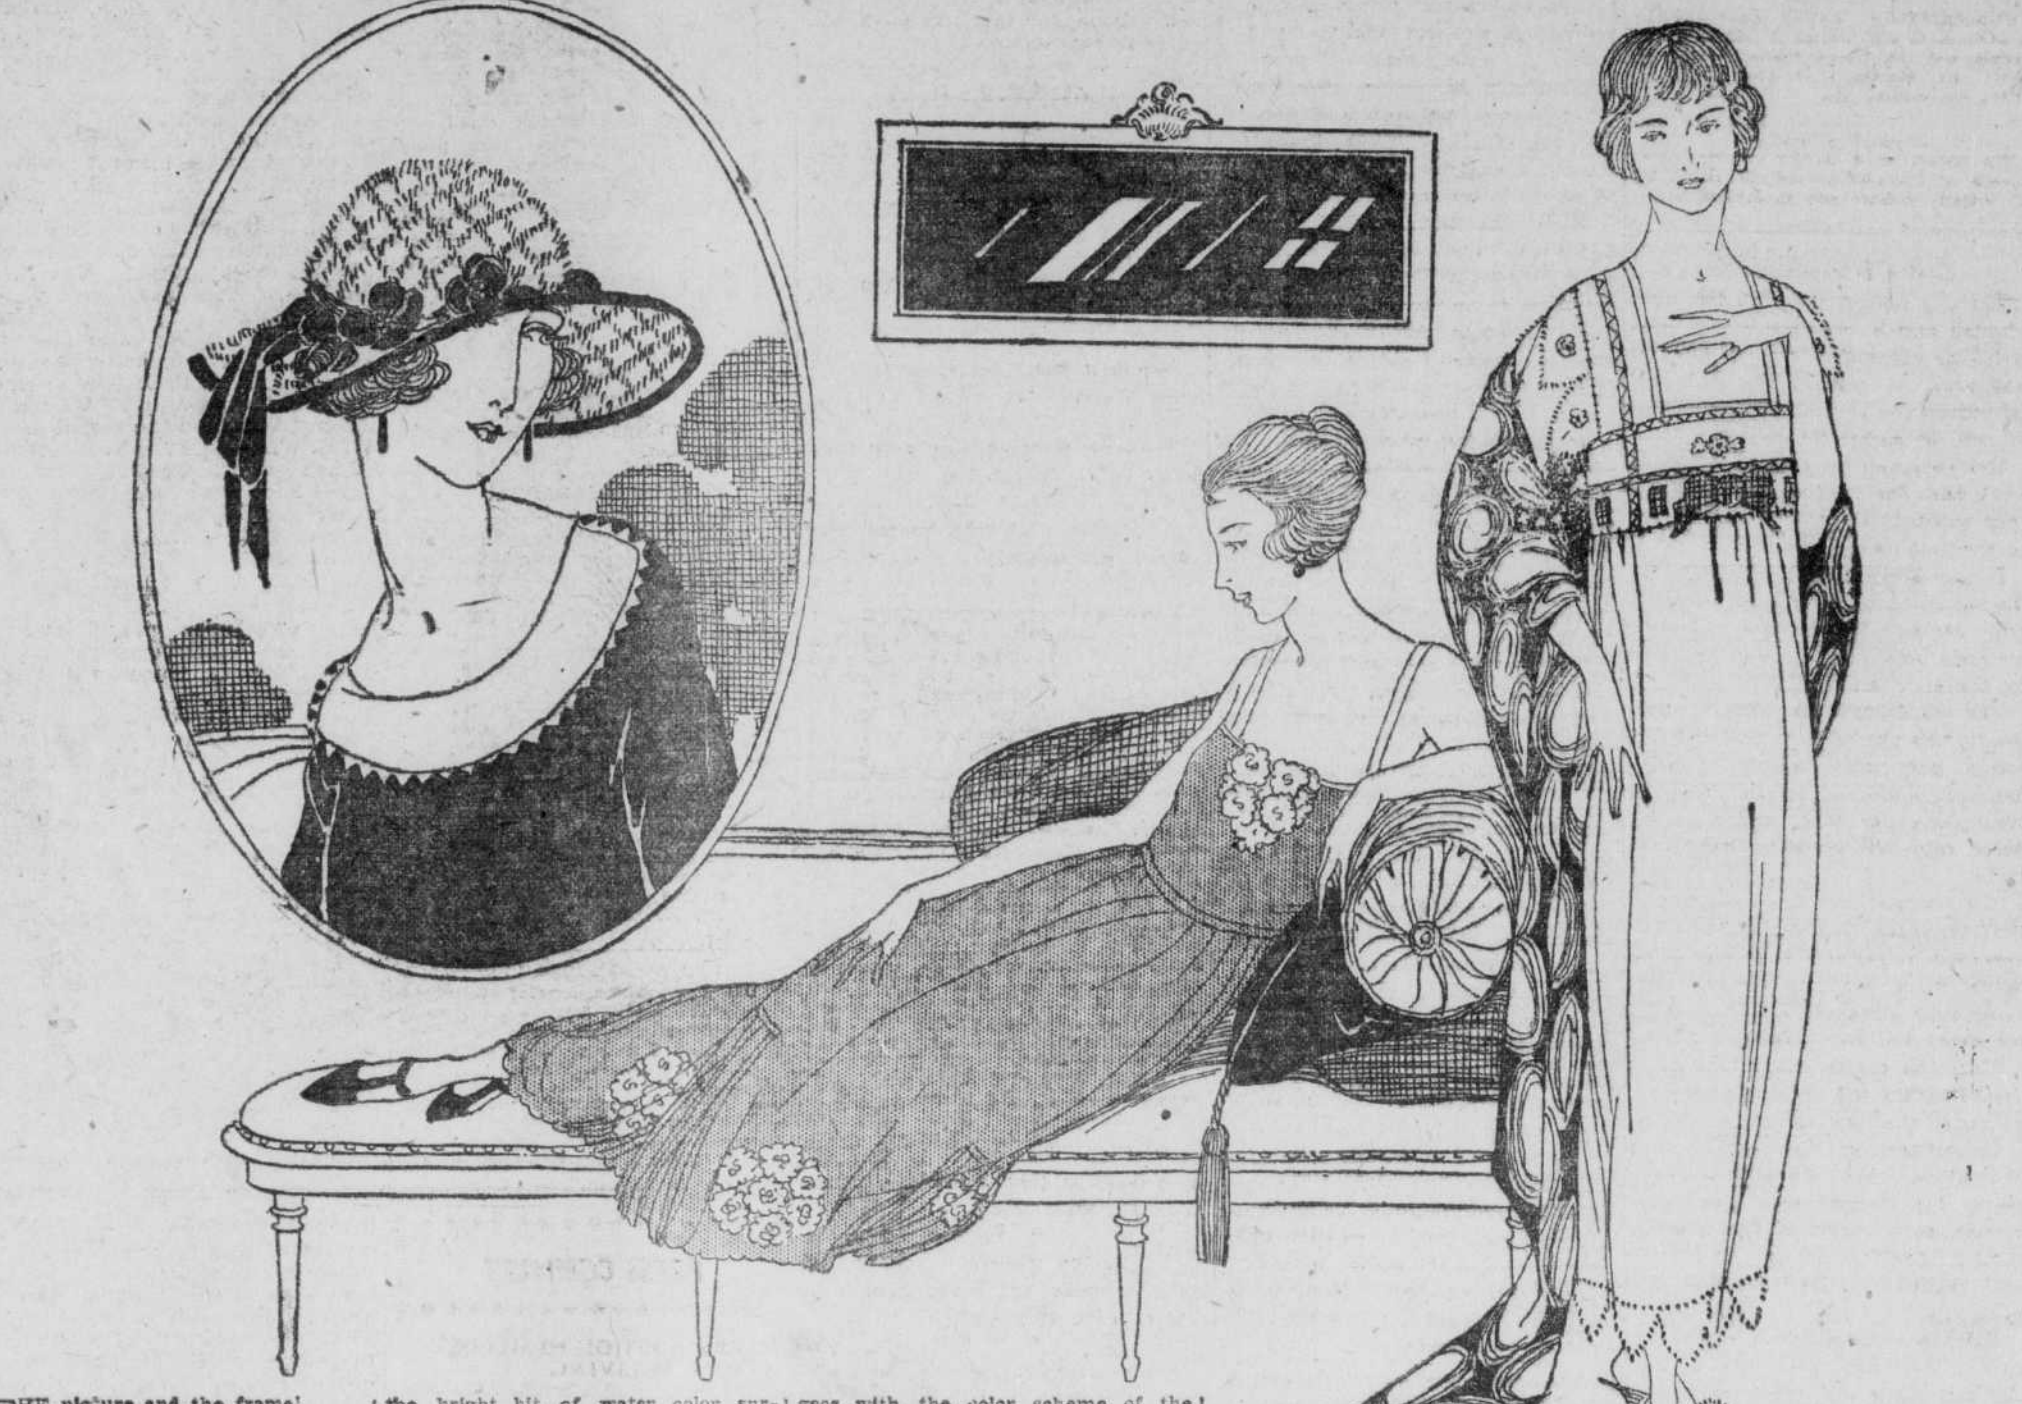

Seen in her dressing room at the Opera House in New York between acts of "Carmen," the first impression of Miss McCormick in her quaint peasant costume as the meek Micaela, with her large, dark Botticelli eyes, was that the cowgirl was utterly eclipsed by the prima donna and artist. But when the little singer grasped the

In Days of Old, When Knights Were Bold, and Now, When Ladies Are Brave, Dainty Accessories to the Wardrobe Have Ever Been Dear to Feminine Hearts

THE picture and the frame! What interdependency is here! Impossible for the effect to be altogether lovely if one is not worthy of the other.

The most exquisite of paintings is before us, and yet it may be that we stand no longer in contemplation than we must, and for that little while we figuratively of course, grit our teeth.

And why? Because the hand that enclosed the artistic gem in its gilded case was inspired by neither sympathy nor understanding nor a sense of the general fitness of things.

Remember the etching in the black walnut frame that hung on the sitting room wall?

Can't you see and shudder still at the bright bit of water color surrounded by a white wood moulding? Or the "family oil" made all the heavier and depressing by a massive frame of garish gilt?

If the effect is to be harmoniously lovely the picture and the frame must be equally attractive, and, above all, suited for such close companionship.

And, by the same token, the costume and its setting should bear a definite relationship the one to the other.

And they do. To-day millinery's boudoir is decoratively appropriate to her own self. Not only is it a reflective background for her personality, but it is expressive of her individuality as well.

And, vice versa, it is quite to be expected that madame chooses her negligees with the color scheme of the room they are to grace in mind.

The picture and the frame—artistically, they are in perfect accord.

The spring negligee is characterized by uneven hemline, bare neck and lengthened waist. The foundation is slim and straight.

The waistline is defined in the majority of models, and usually in low blousing form, with a tucked effect over the hips.

Sleeves, like other details, follow the lead of dresses and scarfs. They are important, and appear in chiffon and lace, narrow or wide.

The duffy, frilly bit of lingerie is a spring favorite. This does not mean that less attention is given to tailored types but that frills and fluffs, neglected for a season or two, are again coming into their own.

The heavier silks are reserved for the tailored models, which show some interesting new ideas. One of these is Bulgarian embroidery done in characteristic yellow, blue, green and red colorings, directly on crepe de chine.

Slashed gown and vest fronts and side slashes on step-in drawers show this off to good advantage, as the accompanying sketches show.

Net is proving a successful trimming, used as an edging and also as an insert in geometrically arranged motifs, and as background for appliques of silk. Both these and the more tailored models follow approximately the same lines as those that have been popular during the past season, the sleeveless gown and two piece step-in set.

More severely tailored are models hemstitched or finished with narrow pinstripes, one of these made of crepe arline the horizontal way of the cloth.

What Is Egotism and What Self-Knowledge? Is Question Raised by Margot Asquith's Visit

By ESTHER NORTON.

IN a fashionable drawing room the other day, the following conversation took place:

Mrs. A. de V.: "I see by the papers Mrs. Asquith has arrived."

Mrs. Van B.: "Yes! And in a world of eight million mutes I say Thank Heaven for Margot! Here's a woman who has the courage to say, 'I'm like this.' I believe this and so."

Miss Debutante: "But fancy considering one's self of sufficient importance to write about one's self!"

Mrs. Van B.: "Some of us are important, you know. The strong personality knows his own importance. When he admits it the pignic cry 'Egotism!'"

All of which led to the speculation, "Is Margot a valid egotist or a real personality?"

When Mrs. Asquith received a group of reporters (masculine and feminine) in her apartment at the Hotel Ambassador the other evening she talked little of herself. Certainly she did not seek publicity, some said.

To most of the questions put to her she answered "I wonder" and even a Britisher unfamiliar with our yellow journalism must be aware that such a reply was quick to ask questions, eager to learn new facts.

When Mrs. Asquith gave me a private interview in her apartment I found her curled up at the end of her couch, a slim, lithe figure in silver gray silk. At sight of me she exclaimed, "Oh, I'm completely exhausted! I've seen you before the other night. I won't say another word. No, really!" and she waved her slender arms in a gesture of despair.

"But, Mrs. Asquith, I've just finished your book and I want to know so much. Did you ever regret writing it?"

"No, I don't think so," she answered. "The praise and blame was about fifty-fifty. Some said I should have left out all the part about the living, some said I should have mentioned the dead. Others said I should have left out the love, so if I had listened to my critics I would have been nothing left but the punctuation. In writing about yourself and other living people you must take your courage in both hands. I thought of putting as a preface to my book: 'As will be handed for a sheep as a lamb.' As my dear friend Jowett once wrote me, 'The truth is very often troublesome, but neither the world nor the individual can get on without it.'"

"And you wrote about the personal side of things because that interests you most?"

"Surely the personal side has a tremendous influence on the impersonal," said Mrs. Asquith. "Take the Soula, for instance. . . . An I point out in my book, they had a direct influence on politics. . . . Not a man in the group who didn't get in the Cabinet. . . . Was that a society . . . or a club?"

"Oh, no, mere a club than you and I sitting here. Just friends, that's all. . . . In politics it's the men that count, not the measures. Personality makes the world go round."

"Well, who do you consider the great personalities in England to-day?"

"England? Oh! I'm thankful you didn't ask me about America. You know I'm not going to tell you what I think of America when I've only been [pronounced been] here two days. . . . That's where your American reporters are so stupid. . . ."

"Yes, but I was asking you about England, Mrs. Asquith."

"I should think the personalities were quite well known. Lord Buckmaster, Viscount Grey, the Duke of Devonshire. . . . She did not mention Lloyd George."

"As a rule the British are very reserved. Have you surprised them by talking so much of your self?"

"But Mrs. Asquith wouldn't go on: 'Now really, I'm completely exhausted. I've seen hundreds of reporters—I can't see any more of you.'"

"Well, won't you autograph your book for me?"

"Oh, yes [very sweetly]. I really must do that."

Is Margot a valid egotist or a real personality? I wanted to find out more. Let us examine her book. Naturally, any writer or artist is more or less of an egotist. I was merely interested in the degree.

After a careful reading of Margot's diary, I believe her critics are unfair. She is self-conscious, self-esteeming and self-searching, but hardly an egotist. For instance, she quotes herself as saying: "If you want to discuss me, I am always willing to listen; there is nothing I enjoy so much as talking about myself." The true egotist is unaware that he is talking about himself.

Again, she relates that she spoke "with a patronizing smile." The supreme egotist does not realize how he is smiling or whether its effect is patronizing or not.

Though Margot quotes many letters praising herself, she includes many which are certainly not flattering, such as the letter which accuses her of allowing "too much love" and another letter from the "unemployed" who, on hearing of her engagement to Asquith, wrote that, knowing Asquith had no sympathy for the unemployed, he hoped Mrs. Asquith would be one of the "worst tartars possible." Most damaging of all, Margot relates how a lady rebuked her for unconventional unchaperoned visits to the bedside of a sick man, and finally declared that she (Margot) had no sense of right and wrong.

With an almost pathetic self-searching, Margot is anxious to note down everything bad about herself as well as good, and if she finds more good than bad, why not? Her swift, clever characterizations, her keen thoughts and talented sketches are something of which to be proud, and a woman does not make lifelong friendships with great personalities unless there be something great in her own mind and soul.

Yet Margot has the reputation of being the most self-satisfied, egotistical woman in the modern world. I have heard no end of remarks about her contemptuous manner, her sarcasm, her patronizing tone. . . . There is the unmistakable air of one who has bowed to royalty. Yet let her critics not be too harsh. Fine clothes, well trained servants, freedom from the pay anathema.

an unassailable social position. . . . How unconsciously these contribute to "La grande maniere." . . . The book can do no wrong. If Margot is scolded for unchaperoned visits to a man's sick-bed, the beau monde laughs and says, "How original!" Did not Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler himself introduce at the lecture hall, Independent Mary Jones is criticized for unladylike behavior would Dr. Butler introduce her? Here, indeed is a profound psychological problem. Perhaps some of our leading psychologists can predict what he would do.

Speaking of psychologists, doubtless Margot's book will be soon Freudianized. It is easy to pick out the passages the Freudian would seize upon. About fifteen pages are devoted to ecstatic praise of her father. . . . and the father's "transference" is described as "He was proud of his children. . . . our praises were stuffed down newcomers' throats till every one felt uncomfortable. He sometimes introduced me with emotional pride to the same man or woman two or three times in the evening. . . . How the Freudian will enjoy Margot's reference to her mother: "Bond as we were of each other and intimate over all my love affairs, my mother never really understood my vitality, independent happiness and physical energies filled her with fatigue." And further on: "Few women have speculative minds nor can the deliberate. . . . Mamma was in all her ways like the rest of her sex." There are many passages of great significance to the searcher for the father complex. When Margot was worried about a love affair, she admitted: "Worse than that. It brought me up against my father, who has often said to me: 'You will never marry that man.'"

Margot talks much of love but did she ever really love? Some friend wrote her: "You ought to put a stop to the temptation of making people love you, herself."

You need not be afraid of not loving Asquith intensely."

And further on there is the pathetic confession of a most neurotic temperament (p. 248): "I am fundamentally nervous, impatient, irritable and restless. These may sound light shortcomings, but they go to the foundation of my nature, crippling my activity, lessening my influence and preventing my achieving anything remarkable. . . ."

I am driven along by my temperament till I tire myself and every one else."

On next to the last page of her diary Margot writes: "But, after all, what can one say of one's inner self that corresponds with what one really is or what one's friends think one is?"

Verdict: Mrs. Herbert Asquith is not an egotist. She is seeking self-knowledge, self-justification. She ends her book with the hope that perhaps she will not die but live to be an improved self.

She wanted so much to analyze herself, she had to write a book to do it in. Everything in her life had to be described, puzzled over and dissected. She had to write about herself to find out what others thought. She wanted the truth, so she tried to be truthful. . . . The Diary is an evidence of a powerful, talented ego seeking creative expression, seeking individuality.

Anyway, as Walt Whitman says, "Whomself suffices all!"

Women of Note In Public Affairs

First woman in council in British Empire, Mrs. Ralph Smith, has resigned because she can no longer assume responsibility for Government acts. Mrs. Smith was a member without portfolio in the British Columbia Legislature, and the first woman member in the British Empire. Her position stopped her from criticising the Government. The strain was too great—she quit!

Lady Norah Bentwick.

Lady Norah Bentwick, wife of a kinsman of Count Gedard Bentwick, who gave hospitality to the former German Emperor at his estate, Amersongen, has written a book, "The Ex-Kaiser in Exile." Lady Norah's first chance for continued observation of the ex-Kaiser was at the wedding of the Countess Elisabeth Bentwick, daughter of his host, to Capt. von Ilkemann, adjutant to the ex-Kaiser. This was about a year ago. She did not find any indication of mental or physical wreck.

Princess Louise.

Princess Louise of Belgium in a unique autobiography, "My Own Affairs," gives an interesting picture of European figures of note. The book is clever and vivid with court gossip.

In Public Office.

Miss Annie Mathews, Registrar of New York county, is the highest paid woman in public office. She draws a salary of $12,000 per year. She was formerly a designer and in connection with her business has travelled throughout the United States and abroad.

Restorer of Cemeteries.

Mrs. Marlon Eaton of Old Sudbury, Mass., has succeeded in an unusual field for a college woman, that of restoring old graveyards. She is also a garden planner.

"To city people graveyards do not mean much," stated Miss Eaton, "but to the countryman—it holds his loved ones. It is where he goes for his Sunday afternoon stroll, or his after-church smoke, and it should be beautiful. That is what I mean to make it."

To Hold Bag Open.

Whoever has tried to hold a bag open with one hand while filling it with pudding batter, fruit juices, &c., knows how troublesome it is. Usually one has to have some one hold out the top of the bag or almost paralyze the thumb and fingers of the left hand in trying to fill the bag, getting as much pudding outside as inside of it.

One resourceful little woman in such a dilemma had an inspiration. She noticed two cup hooks on the wall, about eighteen inches above the cooking table. She took a piece of cord, pinned it to two sides of the top of the bag, hung it over these hooks, took hold of the bag over an embroidery hoop or a wire hoop made for the purpose, but this way answers all needs.

henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness." The crown, said Mr. Allen, is a sign of kingship, and is prepared for those who do the kindly deeds. Such

from a youth had the happy faculty of making friends, and was greatly beloved by all who knew him. Mr.

of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A.
Quackenbush, of Cowansville, where he was born forty-seven years ago. For

JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Sir:—In another paper published in Sherbrooke Mr. Cote, Manager of the Royal Canadian Hockey Club, takes exception to the fact that the Magog Beavers claim the Junior Championship of the Eastern Townships.

Now, sir, we do not claim to be champions and our article in the Record of last Tuesday was a challenge to the team which considers themselves champions.

The Lennoxville High School claims the championship and have accepted our challenge as such, and it is up to Mr. Cote to take the matter up with them if he considers his team champions.

CURLING

LADIES FINAL
The feature event at the curling rink yesterday was the play-off for the first half of the season's schedule when Mrs. Webster's rink won from the rink skipped by Mrs. Ross by a solitary point secured on the last end.

There was very little difference between the two rinks and the scores were kept very close all through the game. Miss Ingram played a splendid game for the winners and both skips turned in very creditable performances. Mrs. Ross repeatedly came to the rescue of her team mates and on one occasion when her opponents were lying three, she cleared the inner circle and counted one.

Ten ends were played and towards the finish the strain seemed to tell on some of the players. The rinks were as follows: Mrs. W. G. Cross, Mrs. H. A. Hyndman, Mrs. A. W. Reid, Mrs. A. C. Ross (Skip)—6. Mrs. A. E. Rowell, Mrs. H. N. Whitman, Miss F. Ingram, Mrs. R. Webster (Skip)—7.

OUR CLERICS CLEARED

Little by little the jokesmith's stock in trade is being depleted through scientific discovery. An English professor now declares that people get sleepy during the sermon because they hypnotize themselves gazing fixedly at the preacher. It is not because they are inattentive, but because they are too attentive. Therefore jokes on the subject are no knocks for the parson but boosts.

I WAS NEVER A DOWRY HUNTER, SAYS MR. OSER

No Definite Arrangements Made as Yet for Marriage of Max Oser to Mathilde McCormick.

(Associated Press Despatch.)
ZURICH, March 1.—No definite arrangements as to the time or place will be made for the marriage of Max Oser and Mathilde McCormick, daughter of Harold F. McCormick, according to a statement by Mr. Oser to the correspondent of the Associated Press yesterday.

He considers that the best plan would be to have two homes, one in America and one in Switzerland, thus both keep the home ties and old friends.

"I was never a dowry hunter," says the Swiss riding master. "Our romance began with mutual respect and friendship. When the question of eventual marriage arose, I gave Mathilde every liberty. I told her to go into the world and make new friends and see life, then, if she still wanted me, I was always here."

Mathilde returned last autumn and said she could do nothing with young men. She preferred older men and men of knowledge, with whom she could talk sense and discuss serious subjects and problems. Mathilde informed her father of this last year.

Taking Mathilde's latest photograph, Oser exclaimed: "Look, both physically and mentally Mathilde is more developed than her age. We have many tastes in common; both like sports, art, architecture, literature, language, and above all, home life. By the way, we speak the Swiss dialect—German between ourselves."

Mr. Oser took occasion to deny reports of John D. Rockefeller's consent, or the offer of a highly remunerative situation in America. He said he would like to become an American, but added:

"I cannot wait the number of years required by American law; that would be asking too much of mortal man."

"I think both of us prefer a modest wedding in Switzerland to an elaborate affair in America, but that can be arranged."

Oser is of athletic build, with strong face. He wears a closely-cropped moustache, has pleasant eyes and his hair is tinged with grey. He wears an engagement ring bearing his family crest—the gift of Mathilde. He had just returned to his Zurich home from a farm and ranch combined, which will be the couple's future Swiss home.

EQUIPMENTS, STEELS AND MOTORS SHOWED STRENGTH

(Associated Press Despatch.)
NEW YORK, March 1.—(Wall Street Noon.) Fears of an early money flurry, due to March first payments, were groundless, call loans opening at 4 1/2 per cent. Equipments, Independent Steels and Motors and their subsidiaries continued to move forward with Shippings. Gains of 1 to 3 points were made by Kelsey Wheel, Crucible, Republic Vanadium, New York Air Brake, Pierce Arrow preferred, Stewart Warner, Stromberg, United States Rubber and Kelly Springfield. Mexican and California Petroleum and Standard Oil of New Jersey featured the stronger oils. Except for Texas and Pacific and Canadian Pacific, at gains of 1 point and 1 1/2 points, rails were apathetic.

WHEAT MARKET SHOWED A VERY MATERIAL SETBACK

(Associated Press Despatch.)
CHICAGO, Mar. 1.—With snow on the ground over practically the entire domestic winter crop territory today and with lower quotations from Liverpool, the wheat market here showed a material setback in prices during the early trading. It was pointed out also that the United States visible supply of wheat was larger than a year ago and that there was more wheat on ocean passage as compared with this time last year.

An upturn in values at Buenos Aires however, tended to check declines here. The opening, which varied from 1/2 to 1 1/2 cents lower with May at $1.46 1/2 to $1.47 and July $1.22 1/2 to $1.23 1/2 was followed by slight further losses and then something of a rally.

Corn and oats were easier with wheat. After opening half to 3/4 cent lower, with May at 67 1/2 to 67 3/4 cents, the corn market weakened a trifle further.

Oats started unchanged to 1/4 to 1/2 cent down, with May at 42 1/2 to 42 3/4 cents and then held near to the initial range.

Provisions reflected downturns in the value of hogs.

MARY PICKFORD DIVIDES WITH HER MOTHER

Mrs. Pickford, who said that her daughter's business also was hers, testified that Mary had gone to work on the stage at five years of age for $8 a week and at fifteen had entered the movies at $25. Last week it was testified that Adolph Zukor, movie producer had raised Mary from $4,000 to $10,000 a week.

EXCHANGE RATE PRESENTS BIG DIFFICULTY

Committee of International Corporation for Reconstruction of Europe Draw up Plans.

(Associated Press Despatch.)
LONDON, March 1.—The organizing committee of the International Corporation for reconstruction of Europe appointed at the economic conference, announces that the exchange rate difficulties prevent the formation of a single consolidated corporation and necessitates the establishment of various national corporations. These will be affiliated under the Central $20,000,000 corporation to be formed in London, to which Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Belgium will be invited to subscribe twenty per cent respectively. The United States, Japan, Denmark, Holland, Czechoslovakia and Switzerland will be invited to participate, if they so desire.

The object of the corporation is stated to be the examination of the opportunities for undertaking European reconstruction and assistance in financing such undertakings, the policy being to co-operate with other agencies and not to attempt to create a monopoly. It is announced that the delegates were of the unanimous opinion that the corporation should not negotiate with any country unless all its public debts and obligations are recognized, a legal system which sanctions and enforces trade and other contracts with impartiality is established, and security for trade is given.

MONTREAL AND SHERBROOKE MAY PLAY HERE

Football League Elected Officers Last Night—Hospital Charity Cup Series Netted $155.74.

The annual general meeting of the Eastern Townships Association Football League was held last evening in the local Y.M.C.A. with a very representative gathering. The President and Treasurer's reports and general discussion of plans for the coming season were the main items on the programme.

The meeting opened with a few remarks from the past President, Mr. T. C. Hurn, who referred in brief to the progress football had made in the last few years, and the additional interest aroused last season. He pointed out that last year, while laboring under bad conditions, lack of employment, etc., and that on the account some clubs did not meet with the financial success expected, but nevertheless a great deal of interest had been added to the game last season.

The Secretary Treasurer's report showed the league to be in a fair condition financially, having met all of its obligations and still possessing a balance to the credit of the account. The net proceeds of the Hospital Charity Cup series amounted to $155.74 which was ordered to be paid to the Hospital, this amount was contributed as follows:

Beebe-Circo $40.00
East Angus-Sherbrooke 35.00
Sherbrooke-East Angus 37.00
Garrison-Sherbrooke 28.39
Thesco-Beebe 36.50
Finals Sherb-Beebe 65.95

Making the total receipts for these games $242.84 the difference represented by the cost of medals, referee fees, etc.

In the L.O.D.E. series only one game of the schedule was played on account of the late start in the season, this account shows, however, a credit balance of $7.15 after paying for the trophy and other incidentals which is also very favorable. Immediately following the adoption of the Secretary-Treasurer's report, the election of officers was considered and the following is a list of the officers for the coming season, none of whom are actual playing members:

President, Mr. H. Brodie; Vice-President, Mr. G. Costley; Sec. Treas., Mr. I. M. Cathcart; Committee: Messrs. Harris, Shaw, Banks and McCoy.

The following special committee was appointed to draw up a set of by-laws to be ratified on completion by the league committee Messrs. A. W. Reid, T. C. Hurn and R. G. Costley.

This year the entire arrangements, financial and otherwise, regarding any trophies or cups which are able purposes of the league, will be dealt with by the League Committee.

A letter was read from the Secretary of the P. Q. F. A. who suggested a representative game between Montreal-Sherbrooke, this matter was received very favorably and the Secretary was requested to find out more particulars re expenses, etc., at the same time, the special committee on by laws were appointed, in the event of acceptance of this proposition, to arrange something in the way of entertainment for the visitors and endeavor if possible, to make such entertainment from a off set the expense of this visit.

It was also suggested by Mr. Reid that a special guarantee of $10.00 over and above entry fees, etc., be deposited with the Secretary of the league to ensure the fulfillment of the schedule or other matters pertaining to the league, this was unanimously adopted.

The Secretary advised the meeting of an interview he had with Mr. Watson, of the Canada Life Insurance Co., regarding a plan which his Company is prepared to offer for local competition, also that Mr. Watson had signified the intention that the proceeds derived from same be handed over to some charitable organization, this was received very favorably and the Secretary was authorized to accept the offer and thank Mr. Watson for same.

It is earnestly requested that all teams who wish to enter the League this coming season have their applications registered with the Secretary of the League prior to March 15th, as it is hoped to make an early start this year and get the schedule drawn up at the earliest possible moment.

Applications from Magog, Stanstead, Huntingville, Bishop's Crossing or any others who have been considering such a project this year, will be favorably received.

GOLD DISCOVERY NEAR MATHESON IN ONTARIO

Considerable Excitement Results from Reports.

MATHESON, Ont., March 1.—Considerable excitement has developed in connection with the reported discovery of placer gold in that area lying east of Matheson on the T. and O. Railway which was recently announced. Mining claims are being staked out for placer in the townships of Munro, Michaud, McCool and Gubord, and already between seventy-five and eighty have been recorded. These are distributed, with 442 in Munro, 22 in McCool and 12 in Michaud.

Unconfirmed reports tell about the discovery of sand in which fine nuggets of gold occur. Other reports are less optimistic, but the discovery has been sufficient to send that host of prospectors to the district, and interest is running high.

IMPROVEMENT IN PHONE SYSTEM IS REVIEWED

R. Neilson, of Bell Telephone Co., Explains Advantages of Repeater.

At last night's session of the Sherbrooke Rotary Club the members heard the pleasure of hearing an old friend in the person of Mr. Robert Neilson, formerly local manager of the Bell Telephone Company. Mr. Neilson is now district superintendent for the Province of Quebec, and he required little persuasion to come and meet his old friends.

In discussing the telephone business, Mr. Neilson briefly reviewed the tremendous improvements which had been accomplished during the course of the past few years. He explained that while the original principle, produced by Mr. Graham Bell, had practically the same outstanding inventions had allowed the telephone art to make wonderful progress. The more important of these inventions alluded to are the transmitter, hard drawn copper wire, cable, multiple switchboard and automatic switching.

Exceptional interest was centred around the "Audion valve," introduced by Mr. DeForest in 1907, by which repeating had been made possible. The use of these repeaters makes the distance over which communication is possible unlimited.

The use of the "Audion" in connection with other apparatus has made possible wireless telegraphy to a greater extent than ever before, and it has made possible the sending of several messages over one circuit at the same time. This system is called the multiplex system now in use between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh and between Calgary and Edmonton.

Radio work or wireless telegraphy has been made practicable and many engineers of prominence are busily engaged in working on this subject.

In this connection Mr. Neilson referred to the funeral service of the "unknown soldier" which was held in Arlington, U.S.A., when the use of repeaters enabled thirty thousand people to hear President Harding's address, while other large crowds in New York and in San Francisco not only heard every word of his speech, but also heard the bugle calls, the marching bands playing and the salve of the firing party.

President Geo. MacKinnon thanked the speaker for his interesting remarks and expressed the hope that in the near future further details of this splendid invention, which promised to revolutionize present systems, would be explained to the members.

Last night's meeting was taken up to a large extent by a general discussion of the prospects of the district convention to be held in Rochester on March 21st and April 1st next. Several members have signified their intention of being present, and it is hoped that a number of others will be able to decide definitely within the next week or so.

The annual convention, at which all the Rotary Clubs in the world are represented, will be held at Los Angeles in June next, and it is hoped that at least half a dozen of the Sherbrooke members will be able to make the trip.

Rotarian Jack McConnell made a report in connection with the campaign for the Shawbridge Farm and already over $500 has been secured. An effort is being made to secure the balance required during the course of the next ten days.

MRS. ASQUITH IS WELCOMED IN MONTREAL

Large Audience to Hear Her at His Majesty's Theatre.

(Associated Press Despatch.) MONTREAL, March 1.—Mrs. Henry Herbert Asquith, otherwise known as "Margot," attracted a large audience to His Majesty's Theatre yesterday to hear the wife of former Premier Asquith speak on "People, Politics and Events."

She added little to what has already been reported of this lecture. Gladstone and Earl Spencer appeared to be her heroes, whilst her opinion of Premier Lloyd George "remains my secret."

She told the audience that it had not been easy to leave England, as she was not much of a traveller. She had been told about "in abominable ships and on your abominable trains."

She had left England at a time of crisis, and claimed that the present Government of Great Britain were not responsible for the Irish Free State, which she declared had been led up to by Mr. Gladstone and "continued by my husband."

Her idea of the difference between Liberals and Conservatives was that "we believe in liberty and they believe in force."

It was announced that Mrs. Asquith would lecture again in this city on Saturday night.

CATTLE INSPECTION IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Mar. 1.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons suggesting that the government should reserve the right to inspect cattle from Southern Ireland, Winston Churchill said he saw no reason to assume that there would be any relaxation under the new regime of the previous efficiency in the inspection of cattle. The Board of Agriculture, he added, always had the right to place an embargo on importation from Ireland as from the other Dominions.

A program of recitations, vocal solos and duets given by various members of the Lodge including Mrs. Morgan Knowlton, Mrs. Leslie Armstrong, and Miss Kate Robb was much enjoyed. Refreshments were served, after which Mrs. E. W. Morgan, also one of the charter members and first officer, conveyed the good wishes of the Lodge and presented Miss Farmer with a slight token, expressing the esteem in which she is held and the appreciation of what she has done and was always willing to do.

CONFISCATING MINING CLAIMS IN ONTARIO

Action Being Taken by Ontario Minister of Mines.

(Associated Press Despatch.) ELK LAKE, Ont., March 1.—Hon. Harry Mills, Ontario Minister of Mines, has thrown another bomb among the mining men and prospectors of Northern Ontario. This time it occurs in the form of an order-in-council which has the result of confiscating hundreds of mining claims in the Temagami forest reserve for non-payment of rental.

No provision whatever is made for reinstatement, and presumably all claims re-staked will be irrevocably lost to the original holder, no matter how extensive the work done or the improvements.

SHOOTING AFFRAY IN ROCHESTER, N. Y.

(Associated Press Despatch.) ROCHESTER, N. Y., Mar. 1.—One man is dead and another is in a hospital seriously injured as the result of a shooting affray which occurred here early this morning. The dead man is Samuel Tubolino, thirty-seven years old, while Charles Velate, thirty-six, is in the hospital. Louis Dioguardia and a man known only as Fucia are being sought in connection with the killing.

The quarrel, according to Velate, occurred while the quartette were drinking wine in the cellar of Tubolino's home. Fucia is said to have demanded more wine from Tubolino, which was refused. It is said that Fucia then slapped Tubolino's face. Becoming angry at this, Tubolino leaped at Fucia and struck him. Velate said, Dioguardia shot Tubolino four times. Velate said he attempted to interfere and that after he had made a protest Dioguardia turned on him and shot at him three times.

Tubolino leaves a wife and five children.

HAD HER THERE

"But smoking is one of my great pleasures," he protested. "Well, you ought to give it up because I want you to. I would do as much for you." "Are you sure of that?" he asked eagerly. "Why, of course I am. Just tell me something I do that you want me to stop."

"Well, he said with firmness, "you might stop objecting to my smoking."

Sold by all Grocers.

At the regular meeting of the 2nd Sherbrooke Troop on February 24th, after two small boys, namely, Edward Jones and John Logie, were formally received into the great brotherhood of Boy Scouts, (having passed successfully the tenderfoot test) Mr. C. H. Bowen, secretary of the local association, presented his son, Mr. Lloyd Bowen, with his assistant scoutmaster's warrant, thus making him an official assistant scoutmaster. Three hearty cheers were given for the new A. S. M. after he had taken the scout officer's oath. This warrant was signed by Gen. Lord Byng of Vimy himself, as chief scout for Canada. The chief scout, who is well up in actual scout work, is known to every Britisher for his magnificent war record, starting chiefly when he had command of the Canadian Army Corps in 1917 at Vimy Ridge. Mr. C. H. Bowen spoke to the troop in the above strain, informing the boys what a splendid chief scout they possessed in the person of the present Governor-General.

Following this meeting a board of examiners was held, Mr. C. H. Bowen presiding, to pass boys in their proficiency badges. Of the large number that passed, eight were of the 4th Troop and six of the 2nd Troop. The following is a list of badges passed and those who passed them:
