A good idea to scramble through Centennial definitives

The year 1967 saw Canada celebrate its 100th birthday, and what a birthday it was. Montreal's mayor Jean Drapeau brought the world fair Expo 67 to that city and it was held in the middle of the St. Lawrence River. It was also the year that Canada received its new flag. People came from all over the world to help us celebrate our birthday and found out at the same time what a friendly nation Canada is. All in all, it was quite a year.

It was also the year Canada Post issued a series of stamps known as the Centennial Definitives. The issue was to be the longest running series since the Admirals and, was to provide philatelists with one of the greatest studies ever to be done on Canadian stamps.

The most drastic change for a definitive series, was in the design. Previous definitives all the way back to Queen Victoria depicted a picture of the Monarch on a rather plain background, framed either by an oval, arch or rectangle. The Centennials changed all that by incorporating a distinct part of Canada as a background to the portrait of the Queen.

SCRAMBLE

This is not an attempt to give you an indepth study of the issue but merely to whet your appetite for more. It is meant to induce you to scrambling through your duplicates to see what you can come up with.

The Centennial Definitives first appeared on February 2, 1967. The low values, of which we are most concerned about at this point, came in denominations from one cent through to five cents. The printer was the Canadian Bank Note Company (CBNC) and the format was rather straight forward. The perforation was 12x12, on plain paper, untag and tagged Winnipeg two bar. The first five denominations also appeared pre-cancelled.

Stamp corner

By Peter McCarthy

The one exception was the four cent denomination which was tagged with a side bar only.

Each stamp was designed to represent a distinct Canadian Region. The one cent brown depicts a sled and dog team with the Northern lights in the background which signifies the Yukon and North West Territories of the North. The two cent green shows a totem pole such as those sculptured by the west coast Indians of British Columbia. The three cent purple depicting an oil well and the harvesting of grain, represents the three prairie provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The four cent red shows a ship going through the St. Lawrence Seaway locks at some point in the system. This is to represent Ontario and Quebec through which the seaway system extends. Finally, the five cent blue depicts an east coast scene showing a lighthouse and fishing equipment, representing the Maritime provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland.

FUN BEGAN

As of October 31, 1968, the fun really began with this issue. As of that date there was a first class rate change from five cents to six cents. The British American Bank Note Company (BABNC) was awarded the contract of printing the first class rate denomination.

BABNC introduced the six cent orange transportation stamp depicting an airplane, a cargo vessel, a tractor trailer and the now departed Turbo-Train. BABNC also introduced the comb perforation of 10x10 which was later changed to 12x12. Various forms of booklet panes were also produced by BABNC. The Canadian Bank Note Company continues to print the non-first class denominations and the coil stamps.

During the course of the following three years, several printings on a variety of papers were to take place. These ranged from plain paper up to a Hi-Brite fluorescent paper.

In the beginning of the series, a smooth dextrine based gum was used. CBNC is also known to have used a dextrine gum that was somewhat streaky.

From 1971 onwards, a polyvinyl alcohol (PVA) type gum came into use on most denominations. The use of these gums is very important to those who collect stamps in mint condition.

CHANGE COLOR

For some reason, the post office decided to change the colour of the six cent orange to black on January 7, 1970. This brought about two dies. One being darker than the other. The design however, is the same as the orange.

On June 30, 1971 a further change in the first class rate from six cents to seven cents was brought into effect. Again there was no change in design. This meant that the six cent black was then produced by CBNC, and the stamp reverted to a 12x12 perforation. CBNC did not produce any of the six cent orange. The seven cent green had a very short life span for, on December 30, 1971, there was another change in the first class rate to eight cents. It made the seven cent the least complicated of all the denominations, being produced untagged on plain paper and also tagged Winnipeg two bar.

With the eight cent slate came a change in design. Instead of transportation being depicted, the National Library Buildings in Ottawa appear as a background in this denomination.

After the initial printing of this series, a variety of tags were applied. By variety I mean that the Winnipeg Tags were applied in two different ways, two bars and center bars. The four cent Winnipeg side bar has already been mentioned. The different grades of fluorescent and the different gums used add to the varieties of the Centennials.

TAGGING

Adding to the issue was the introduction of Ottawa General tagging. These are fluorescent bars that appear yellow-green under the Ultra-violet light. CBNC used the OP-2 type general tagging only, it being non migratory. BABNC used the OP-4 type until it realized that it was migratory and then switched to the OP-2 type. In fact, the OP-4 type general tagging will only be found on one plate of the eight cent slate. Tags were discussed in detail in previous article.

Not all the denominations had the general tagging applied. The five cent blue, six cent orange, six cent black die I and the seven cent green were the denominations not to have the general tagging applied.

That is a general outline of the low values of this most interesting issue. In the next article we'll look at the medium and high values, coils, booklet panes and some of the very interesting varieties that the centennials have produced.

Your comments are always appreciated and may be sent to P.O. Box 688, Richmond, Quebec. J0B 2H0, Canada.

English publishers are back at Salon du Livre

MONTREAL (CP) — After boycotting last year's event, Canada's English-language book publishers are once again taking part in Montreal's annual book fair, which opened Thursday.

Many English-language publishers skipped the 1987 Salon du Livre, feeling they'd received a raw deal over the years in terms of promotion and booth placement.

"The Salon was perceived as a francophone fair, and English (readers) weren't turning out," said Gordon Platt, national director of the Canadian Book Information Centre in Toronto.

"For English publishers, there was also a problem of getting good placement in the fair. They'd be scattered all over Timbuktu."

But Platt said that after several meetings with Thomas Deri, director general of the fair, this year's Salon is going to have more English-Canadian writers participating than ever before.

"We think this will be a seminal year in making the Salon viable for English-language writers and publishers," Platt said.

The Book Information Centre, a non-profit trade association representing 140 publishing companies, has rented six adjoining booths for its return to the Salon, guaranteeing an English focus at the fair.

About two dozen English-Canadian authors, including Margaret Atwood, will visit the booths this weekend to meet the public and sign their works. Atwood is scheduled to appear on Sunday afternoon.

"A year away gave us time to develop a strategy to bring out English Montrealers," Platt says.

"The way it was in the past, an author would just show up and be sitting at a little table with a sign. We know now that we have to promote more, give people a reason to participate."

A statue for the guy who first thought of espionage

OVERHEARD IN THE
LENNOXVILLE LAUN-
DROMAT:

"Like, it's my first time, you know?"

"I mean, it's the first time in my whole entire life and that's supposed to be some kind of a big deal, or something, you know?"

"Like, I'm not even sure how to do it even and I don't even know which guy I'm going to pick."

"I mean there's this one guy, Wood, and he looks like my high school algebra teacher — same icky little mustache and everything — and I think he wears a toupee!"

"And he peers over the top of these real weird glasses, you know, like Mulroney's, only his are tied round his neck on a string. Grosses me out! I mean I'm supposed to vote my very first time for a guy who's afraid he'll lose his glasses?"

"Then there's this guy Charest and he's like, thirty or something, and he has this real nice curly hair, you know? I mean, if he'd just let it grow real long and give it some body or something, he could look like a rock star!"

"And I don't even know who the NDP guy is but there's this one guy was a wrestler or something, and he's got this big bald head and, like, this funny little beard hanging off the edge of his chin. I mean, give me a break! The first time in my whole entire life and one guy's bald, one wears a wig, and the other, like, never even heard of conditioner even."

"You wanna loan me a stick of gum?"

"My father called about me going home for Christmas and we had, like, this real humungus fight on the telephone, you know?"

"He goes, 'I hope you're working hard and doing your homework!'"

"And I go, 'Why don't you get off my case?'"

"And he goes, 'Because I'm your father!'"

"And I go, 'Big deal!' and then he starts asking me about my boy-friends and stuff and telling these real dumb jokes, you know?"

"He goes, 'I've heard of carriage trade and street trade and even rough trade but where's the profit in free trade?"

"Like, I'm supposed to think that's funny, or something?"

"I think I'm getting a zit."

"I just can't wait for March break."

"I mean, I've got this new string bikini to wear in Florida and I can't wait to catch me some rays."

"Sunbathing is something I'm really really really good at, you know? Like, it's the one thing I do best in the whole entire world! Sunbathing is my life!"

"You wanna loan me some change for the dryer?"

Freedom of the press requires defending constantly — even in comfy old Canada.

Britain's Institute of Journalists has demanded an explanation from Canada for treatment accorded one of its members. Gordon Thomas, a reporter with the London Express, landed at Mirabel to begin a cross-country promotional tour for his book on CIA brainwashing experiments, Journey Into Madness. He was met by RCMP officers and interrogated for 90 minutes about his sources for stories he wrote last June when 17 Soviets were booted out of the country for espionage. He was then released but forbidden to stay in Canada longer than two weeks.

Journalists who began nosing into CSIS at the time of the Toronto Economic Summit in June have come under increasing pressure. In August, the offices of Radio-Canada in Ottawa and La Presse Canadienne in Montreal were invaded by RCMP officers waving search warrants. In September, Charlie Greenwell reported he had been asked by CSIS agents to spy on fellow journalists Pierre Beauregard and Normand Lester.

The CIA is also understandably sensitive about Journey Into Madness. After eight years of legal wrangling, it has just paid $750,000 to nine surviving victims of Dr. Ewen Cameron's experiments at McGill's Allan Memorial Institute — although it admitted no culpability. This was not the first time the CIA has compensated innocent victims of its brainwashing research and it may not be the last.

Back in 1976, the widow of Dr. Frank Olson was awarded $750,000 and an apology from President Ford. Olson had been given LSD as part of a CIA experiment at Fort Detrick, Maryland, in 1953 and subsequently threw himself through the glass of a tenth floor window in Manhattan's Statler Hotel.

Between 1949 and 1973, the CIA spent $25 million or more on mind-control experiments at universities, hospitals and prisons. At least 39 of those involved human subjects and many were unaware they were being used as guinea pigs. Dr. Cameron received $60,000 from the CIA to give LSD to some of his psychiatric patients between 1957 and 1960. Prisoners in state hospitals in Michigan and Kentucky and in federal prisons in Atlanta, Georgia, and Bordentown, New Jersey, were given LSD in CIA-funded experiments between 1952 and 1963.

The genius who invented state secrets — thus founding the enormously successful espionage and counter-espionage industries — should have statues to his memory in every nation's capital, but he did his work so well that he remains unknown.

One of his ablest pupils, however, was Feliks Dzerzhinsky and there is a statue of him in front of KGB headquarters in Moscow. Dzerzhinsky, in 1917, created the All-Russian Extraordinary Commission for Combating Counterrevolution and Sabotage, usually known as CHEKA. Mastering the art of disguise, CHEKA became GPU in 1922, then OGPU, NKVD, MVD, MGB and KGB, growing into the greatest espionage and counter-espionage industry the world has ever known. Its current annual budget is a state secret, of course, but estimated at well over $2 billion.

Its stupendous success spawned imitators in other totalitarian regimes and envious glances from unruly democracies. Trouble was, countries which invested all power in the public had no real excuse for keeping state secrets.

A solution was found in World War II when state secrets became as much a part of the war effort as bombs and tanks. "Loose Lips Sink Ships", the public was told and then taught a bit of doggerel about a wise old owl upon an oak, the more he heard the less he spoke.

When peace was declared things looked bleak for the espionage business until some masterful genius invented the 'cold war'. That was based upon a principal easily understood by anyone who read comic books or Fu Manchu novels — there was an evil communist conspiracy to enslave the whole world.

That allowed for the creation of the CIA — Company of Incompetent Assassins — in 1947 and there was no looking back. Secrets spawned still more secrets and therefore spies and spy-catchers both. There was Klaus Fuchs and Alger Hiss and Julius and Ethel Rosenberg. There was Senator Joe McCarthy and Richard Nixon and Ronald Reagan who revealed that every third American was a communist sympathizer.

Pretty soon, the CIA was a law unto itself — no longer gathering and analyzing information but assassinating its enemies, overthrowing foreign governments, even spying on its own people. It had its own secret funds and its own secret business, secret airlines and even secret armies so that it could wage wars without troubling Congress. Under the U.S. Constitution, only Congress can declare war and it hasn't done that since December, 1941.

Having let the genie out of the bottle, Congress tried valiantly to cork it up again by censuring Joe McCarthy, exposing Watergate and Irancon, but it didn't work. Americans kept electing — and re-electing — comic book presidents who swallowed the evil-empire-enslaving-the-world theory — Nixon, Reagan and now George Whatsisname. When George was director of the CIA he falsified reports to mislead Congress.

Canada was very late getting in on the fun and left state secrets pretty much to the protection of the RCMP until 1984. Then, when some of its agents were caught stealing dynamite, burning barns and tapping Warren Allmand's telephone, CSIS was born — the Canadian Silly Idiot Society.

We can confidently look forward to our own scandals. We might even conduct our own mind-control experiments some day — providing we can silence all those nosey journalists.

"Ah, les Cantons de l'Est! C'est tellement cute"

Remember The Anglo Guide to Survival in Quebec? A couple of years ago it was the province's anglophone population's bible. Well, the people who brought us the guide are back with another guide for those of us who are still here. It's called Anglo 2, the Sequel. Record editor Charles Bury, who also wrote in the original guide, is back with more insight on changes to la belle province.

By Charles Bury

Like small-town folks everywhere, George and Ida wake up in Knowlton every morning trying to answer such earth-shattering questions as "how much is firewood going to cost this year?", "Did the Expos win last night?" and "Who do you think got Ernie's daughter pregnant this time?"

Firewood was going up, the Expos lost again, and the field of candidates was wide open on who knocked up Ernie's daughter. In the absence of better answers, life went on a usual — almost.

George and Ida got out of bed; Ida put on the coffee while George went out back to feed the hens. The kids went off to school. Ida went to her job at the factory. Then, as he often did, George snuck back to bed "just for a few minutes." The Knowlton Legion doesn't open 'til 11.

But before George could fall back asleep, there was a heavy knock on the door. "George, it's Bill. You gotta wake up. We gotta work today."

"Work? Sheeit."

"Yeah. Old man Crummins wants us to paint his house again."

"Paint his house again? It's only March. And we just did it last summer."

"Yeah. But he says he's got somebody wants to buy the place and he wants 'er lookin' good."

"Can't you get Tommy to help instead of me?"

"Nah. He's workin' for old lady McSween this week."

"What's he doin' for her?"

"Fixin' the roof."

"Fixin' the roof in March?"

"Yeah. Weird eh? I bin tellin' her for years she better gettin' fixed, you know? And she always comes back 'no, no, it can wait,' eh? But now I guess she's in heck of a hurry."

"Christ, eh? How come?"

"Tommy says she's got a buyer too, I guess."

"How come all of a sudden somebody wants to buy all them old places?"

"Tommy said Mrs. McSween said it was because Knowlton looks like New England."

"New England? You mean like over to Newport?"

"Yeah, I guess. Some a them Montreal folks have got the idea they can make this place like New England and make a lot of money out of her."

Five years ago Knowlton was just another sleepy village in Quebec's Eastern Townships. A couple of hundred houses, two general stores, three gas stations, a Royal Canadian Legion, Mason's Lodge and Odd Fellows Hall. There were English and French elementary schools, the Knowlton Pub, town hall, fire station, county museum, and a quiet liquor store. Not much else. Then came them Montreal folks.

"Jeesum. I mean, what of they got over to Newport that we ain't got right here eh? I mean, they don't even have a decent hotel, eh? They all come over here to party. They don't even let the bars stay open past midnight, eh? Why would anybody wanna make Knowlton into something like that?"

"Tommy said them Montreal folks don't even wanna live in them houses they're buyin'. He said they wanna make 'em into booteeks, eh?"

"Booteeks? Ya mean like fancy stores, only sell one kinda thing, and overpriced at that?"

"Yeah. Tommy said them Montreal folks will come out here in busloads if they can do a lotta shoppin', I guess."

"Christ eh? How does that work?"

I mean usually it's the other way around. Ida's always askin' me to take her shoppin' in Montreal."

A couple of dozen fancy booteeks sprang up in town. A rich developer from Montreal came along one day and decided Knowlton should join the yuppy condo revolution. People worried about having so many new newighbors. Especially them Montreal folks.

But the developer convinced town council to vote for his project. He said the people who bought his condos would spend lots of money in the booteeks. That would provide work for the local unemployed, he said. So would building and maintaining the condos.

"Jeezum, Bill. I don't think I like the way things are goin' around here. I mean, they said I gotta learn French if I wanna work in one a them booteeks. They said I gotta shave every day too, eh? And wear them fancy clothes they sell. What would the boys say down at the Legion?"

"It's okay, George. Tommy just got a contract over to the condos. They want us to keep the grass down this summer and open the roads next winter. The owner he said he'd spread the word that I've got the best firewood in town too, eh? Not bad. They'll be lots a work."

"Well, not too much now, eh? I mean, I gotta watch myself now. I'm 35. That's halfway done. I reckon I gotta go slow from here on in. Know what I mean? Don't wanna get wore out too soon."

The boutique owners and condo-keepers found they couldn't hire enough local staff. They brought in bilingual (meaning a bit of French), well-dressed workers from outside. These newcomers needed homes. (Houses had to be built in Knowlton, even an apartment block — "16 units, all conveniences".) That drove real estate evaluations up. The new homes had to have sewers and water — "goddam Quebec government anyway" — and that drove taxes up.

"Christ, eh Bill? You know what my new tax bill says? It says in here that goddam old place a mine is supposed to be worth $90,000. Who'd ever pay that, especially if they been inside? And where am I gonna get the money to pay the taxes onner? That's almost a thousand bucks a year. Jeesum boy."

"That house of yours is paid for, right?"

"Yeah, it's paid. So?"

"Well I mean, so owning that house means you're worth that $90,000 even if ya don't sell it. Not bad eh? How much ya pay old Thompson for it anyway?"

"Twelve thousand. But that was fifteen years ago. Besides, what's a buck worth today anyway?"

Along with increased population and values, of course, Knowlton got more traffic — meaning accidents.

"Goddamn, Bill. You know what Ida went and done? She wrecked the new Ford. Damn. And I told 'er to take the pickup truck."

"It wasn't her fault, George. I seen it. It was one a them big highway busses, ya know? The ones with the windows ya can't see into? Anyway Ida was driving down English Hill and there was this bus coming out offa Victoria. They musta been over to the new hotel for lunch eh? Anyways, she gave him lots a room, and he had the stop sign. But he swung right out onto her side and banged straight into 'er. He musta been stoned on pot or somethin'."

"Mayor said they might have to put in traffic lights over there."

And the new Knowlton had more visitors — meaning overcrowding. "Goddamn, Bill, that's all. We're pullin' stakes. We're gonna move down to Newport."

"Wait a minute George, you can't just go over the line like that any more. Nowadays ya gotta have a green card, eh?"

"Yeah. But I can get one. Ida was born down there. Anyways, we're leavin'."

"What happened now? Welfare getcha?"

"No. It's almost worse than that. I went over to the liquor store and there was a goddam lineup."

"There was this fancy lady. One a them Montreal folks. She kept tellin' the clerk some crazy French name. Even he couldn't understand. Chateau Dépanneur or something. I dunno."

"Anyway, the Mayor was standing right behind me eh? So I lit into him somethin' fierce."

"I told 'im good. 'Mister Man,' I said, 'them goddam Montreal folks come down here and they want everything like it is back home. Why don't they stay home in the first place? Why don't you and your goddam council do somethin' about it,' I told 'im. Stop 'em from messin' up Knowlton, eh?"

"Know what he told me Billy? I swear."

"He said 'what are we gonna do anyway? We can't put up a fence across the autoroute and keep them out'."

"So you're going to move to Newport?"

"Yeah, Billy. I've had it around here."

"George, you know they've already got a traffic light down there. And the hotels close at midnight."

"Yeah, I now. But I can come up here to party. And they never have a lineup at the Newport liquor store."

"And they already got a fence across the autoroute."

Hellebuyck wants to get those animals just right

From the Salvadorean dragonfly to local birds and squirrels, watercolor naturalist Victor Hellebuyck will not paint anything unless he really knows how it works. And if his paintings are any indication, he gets the detail down pat.

By Rossana Coriandoli

SHERBROOKE — Walking into Victor Hellebuyck's living room is like entering the forests of Central America. The tropical plants are there, the ambiance is there, only the bird sounds are missing.

These surroundings are nothing less than perfect for the Salvadorean artist whose paintings of tropical birds and plants prove he's right in describing himself as "a naturalist".

"I've had that interest since I was a little boy," he explained during an interview in the forest within his home. "I grew up on my father's farm with all kinds of animals. And my uncle had a pet shop that I loved to spend time in."

"And El Salvador is a tropical country, so I grew up with animals." So Hellebuyck grew up with the two interests that are such a big part of his life, animals and art.

"I started drawing as a child," he said, adding with a smile, "and I was pretty good. Of course I never took it as seriously as now."

"I grew up in my father's farm with all kinds of animals. And my uncle had a pet shop that I loved to spend time in."

To say his taking art seriously is definitely an understatement. Since he came to Canada, Hellebuyck, who left El Salvador after the outbreak of the war in 1980, has become one of the more successful artists in Sherbrooke. Right now his paintings are on exhibit at the Le Canard de Bois art gallery.

PHOTOGRAPHIC

The paintings on exhibit are all typical Hellebuyck style, naturalist, portraying in photographic detail, wild animals and birds in their environment.

"I make sketches out on the field," he explained. "It's just to learn how birds move, how and where they pause, or how leaves look from different angles." To this artist at least, "the field" is usually out near Orford, by the Magog river, or in Sutton, where his parents-in-law live.

Hellebuyck says he also uses stuffed animals, usually birds, sometimes squirrels or insects, making visits to the Museum of Natural Science at Bishop's University to help him get the detail and colors right.

"You have to really know nature, know the animals and know their habitat so you place them on the right tree, for example," he explained. "Accuracy is very important."

But as a former curator for two museums of natural history — one at Bishop's and another in El Salvador which he founded — and a former biology student, Hellebuyck is one artist who knows his animals and plants. He is so interested in them, in fact, that he keeps samples of branches, dead leaves and grass he picks up out on the field and stuffed birds he borrows from Bishop's, and often uses them as models for his watercolors. "They help to inspire me."

NO TRAINING

Hellebuyck says his success in the art world only began after he started to take fine art courses at Bishop's. "I never had any formal training," he said. "I really needed them, just to have the background."

But this is one artist who is also a scholar. Hellebuyck is now writing and illustrating a book on Salvadorean dragonflies for Natural History Museum in El Salvador which he is financing mostly from his own pocket and with the help of a small grant from the museum.

In 1984 the postal service of El Salvador issued a series of six stamps from Hellebuyck's paintings. One year later they issued another series of stamps on his dragonfly paintings.

But dragonflies are not the only insect Hellebuyck is an expert on. He also is an avid butterfly collector, exchanging some with friends who are also butterfly enthusiasts.

This year he also had a successful exhibition at the museum he founded, where he sold every piece on display.

"I keep going back about once or twice a year," he said. "When they know it's an artist from El Salvador, they all want to buy a painting."

MELANCHOLY

Although Hellebuyck seems to have adapted well to his new home in Sherbrooke with his Quebec-born wife Nicole and two children, he still gets melancholy when talking about his homeland

RECORD/GRANT SIMEON

Artist and nature enthusiast Victor Hellebuyck isn't stagnating. Aside from his latest exhibition at the Canard de Bois he is working on a book about dragonflies which he is not only writing but also illustrating.

"It was very hard leaving, for me especially, but it was getting too dangerous. But it was hard because I knew I was leaving everything behind, my work, the forest, the sunshine."

"It was hard to leave the museum too because it was my home," he added. "I had started it from the beginning, its construction, training people to work there."

"When I go back I always go to the mountains, and I sleep there, or I go to the forest and sleep there on a hammock," he said. "It's not dangerous, nothing ever happens, although a couple of times when I was there I heard a couple of bombings."

SOMETHING NEW

Hellebuyck, not a man to stagnate, said he is looking to try something new. "I want to try painting with a new medium, acrylics," he said. "And I want to paint the animals in movement. The paintings in this exhibit (at the Canard de Bois) are all still, in repose. I want to paint them in movement, in flight, hunting, eating."

"It's hard."

But not hard enough that he won't go ahead and try it. After the long way this artist has come, he's not about to stop now.

Tibetan monks? Stranger things have happened

By Rossana Coriandoli

SHERBROOKE — Tibetan monks at Centennial? Stranger things have happened, but this entertainment event probably rates right up there among the most unusual.

Eight monks from the Tibetan monastery of Drepung Loseling in South India will enact some of their traditional and sacred chants and dances Wednesday. Bishop's University's Centennial Theatre is just one of the stops in a tour of North America that includes Los Angeles, Vancouver, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal.

The performance takes place in two 45-minute sessions. The monks, who have been living in India since the Chinese occupation of Tibet, perform monastic chants accompanied by traditional instruments such as bells, drums, cymbals, long and short horns.

The first session features the monks' vocals; both the deep tonal chanting, in which the master of ceremonies simultaneously intones the three notes of a complete chord, and the high tonal chanting which is characteristic of the Drepung style used at the Great Prayer Festival.

The second part presents two traditional monastic dances, "The Dance of Longevity", which demonstrates slow, meditative style of movements, and "The Dance of the Cemetery Lords", a more rapid, mystical style.

The show at Centennial Theatre of Bishop's University is on Wednesday Nov. 23 at 8:30. For tickets call the theatre's box office at 563-4966.

7th Moon, poetry in North Hatley

By Rossana Coriandoli

NORTH HATLEY — This year's 7th Moon poetry was marred by a last minute cancellation.

Nationalist poet and PQ MNA Gerald Godin, who had promised to read some of his works to local poetry enthusiasts, pulled out three days before the event.

"Maybe it's a putdown of the anglophones here," event organizer Avrum Malus said. "It sounds paranoid, but when it's this close to the date of the reading — maybe he really had a previous engagement."

But despite the disappointment, organizers didn't let the bad news get in the way of a successful evening. "It's happened on a few occasions before," Malus said. "Sometimes when plans change it turns out better than you expected."

It would seem that was the case Friday night at the Hovey Manor's Tap Room, where Ontario poet David Donnell and last minute replacement Denise Boucher, a native of Victoriaville, kept their audience enthralled with readings from their latest works.

A STIR

Boucher is well known for her play Les Fées ont Soif, which created quite a stir when it was brought to the stage in 1968, as well as for her songs, made famous by Quebec singers Louise Forestier, Pauline Julien and Gerry Boulet.

She was recently also invited to a poetry reading tour of Mexico with 50 other poets from latin countries.

"One Mexican poet told me my poetry reminded him of Leonard Cohen," she said. "But he thought Cohen was from New York."

Boucher read from her latest book of poetry, Peine de Corps.

Donnell, from St. Mary's, Ont. but living mostly in Toronto, read from his book of poetry The Blue Sky, Dangerous Crossing.

This year's 7th Moon master of ceremonies, Bernard Chaput introduced Donnell as "sensual, mellowing; a farouche poet."

Donnell, who received the Governor General's Award for poetry in 1983, is now lecturing at McGill University. He told the crowd he writes two kinds of poems, "fastballs and slow curves". On Friday, he chose to read only his fastballs, including his poem on how to market the rutabaga.

Between the poets' works, the audience got a taste of live music. Violinist Philippe Dunnigan accompanied by pianist Lucille Ouelette performed pieces by Schuman, Debussy and Sibelius.

No brilliant social satire in Lurie's latest novel

The Truth About Lorin Jones by Alison Lurie (LITTLE, BROWN): $24.95, 328 pp.

Although heralded by several U.S. newsmagazines as a rare piece of social satire, The Truth About Lorin Jones by Alison Lurie might only be accorded such praise by readers who have been surfeited with an overdose of Susan Howarth, Danielle Steele and Barbara Cartland. Lurie's book is a contemporary novel about the craft of biology, man-hating lesbians and marriage-on-the-rocks, that may have a few clearly delineated characters to its credit, but John Updike and Peter De Vries need have no fear of Lurie usurping their secure positions as America's most read satirists.

The Lorin Jones referred to in Lurie's title, happens to be a mostly neglected American painter, who biographer Polly Alter feels was allowed to die in ignominious penury because of her treatment at the hands of men. Polly, whose marriage broke up when her husband Jim was offered a job in Denver, is a strident feminist whose uncompromising principles have led to her becoming a single mother. Valuing her own career more than the harmony of her marriage, Polly refused to accompany her husband to Denver, with the result being that her son Stevie is relegated to shuttling back and forth between Denver and his mother's apartment in New York City.

In Polly's apartment when Stevie returns for his time with his mother, he must share the place with two other lesbians who are bunked in with Polly and by direction and suggestions controlling her life. This is one plot-line in Lorin Jones, but the other follows Polly's task in having to piece together the sordid details of Ms. Jones's life. Details which include a marriage to an elderly rake and art critic which goes awry, and an affair with a hunk from Florida who is supposed to have abandoned her when she was in failing health and needed him most. Much of Lurie's narrative involves the bird-dogging that Polly has to engage in as she pursues the hidden truth about Lorin Jones.

Kaleidoscope

By RICHARD LONEY

Driven by her lesbian friends and her own rather prejudicial attitude about the male species, Polly sees Jones as a victim of every pressure that can possibly be brought upon her by the despicable patriarchal society that she rails against. As she peels away layer after layer of contradictory evidence she collects about the painter, Polly begins to realize that not all of the hearsay evidence she has heard about her subject can possibly be true.

On a fluke trip to Key West to search out Hugh Cameron, the bouncer who was reputed to have used Lorin Jones and then abandoned her, Polly ironically falls under the charm of the same man, now twelve years older. Faced with the dilemma of accepting new contradictory information about the kind of person Lorin Jones really was, Polly learns what all biographers come to acknowledge: that their subject is as many-faceted as one of Picasso's multiple perspective drawings, and that each side has its own legitimacy and motivations.

Finding out the truth about Lorin Jones forces Polly to assess her own life, her position with her son Stevie and the aggressive behavior of her cohabitant lesbian playmates, and her newfound amour with Hugh Cameron — who, strangely enough, turns out to be not such an ogre after all. Crisp characterizations, a predictable and hardly engrossing plot, and some insider sociology on the single-parent scene (New York style) are what Alison Lurie offers in The Truth About Lorin Jones — brilliant social satire it is not.

RECORD REVIEWS

The Traveling Wilburys' Volume One (WILBURY — WEA)

By now everyone has heard about the spontaneous lark that has led to several rock superstars congregating to produce a record album that sacrificed individual egos to the collective group concept, called The Traveling Wilburys. The recent recording ventures of Tom Petty and Bob Dylan obviously brought these two performers together, as did Jeff Lynne's production of George Harrison's Cloud Nine success — but how did Roy Orbison get into this quintet? Perhaps the Big O's amazing HBO Special with a host of other players inspired the other four to seek him out. Whatever the motivation for this home-sounding, very collaborative affair they call the Wilburys, the music that results reaches back as far as Orbison's early Sun Records days, and as forward as the reggae-inspired ditty they call "Margarita".

In between, the Wilburys — who have adopted the pseudonyms of Otis, Nelson, Charlie T. Junior, Lefty, and Lucky — wrap themselves around individual songs that are clearly in the style of the singer. Harrison's singing of "Handle With Care", the first single, or "Heading For The Light", fits in perfectly with the musical ambience created by him and Jeff Lynne for his last album; "Congratulations" and "Tweeter and the Monkey Man" are pure Dylan, the latter one of his rambling story-songs about drug-busts and undercover cops; on tunes like "End Of The Line" all of the Wilburys take a hand on a verse or a chorus, with Tom and Roy having featured vocals; and Orbison shows his late-Fifties flare for soaring vocals on the best pure song on this set, called "Not Alone Anymore".

If you don't wish to believe the spoof presented by the liner-notes about the derivation of Wilburys — sleeve note by Hugh Jampton, E.F. Norti-Bitz Rader in Applied Jacket, Faculty of Sleeve Notes, University of Krakatoa (east of Java) — then the closest hint to the origin of the name "Wilbury" seems to be one found in the recording industry. When unexpected glitches turn up on a tape—recording of a session, certain old Nashville hands in the control room have been heard to drawl, "we got one of them there Wilburys on there boys". The name notwithstanding, the Wilbury Brothers have to be one of the most novel, star-studded groups in the history of rock. Bring on Volume Two!

Bruce Springsteen Chimes of Freedom (COLUMBIA).

The Amnesty tour may have been Bruce Springsteen's way of exorcising the marriage-devil that he has apparently shucked off with the announcement of his relationship with the E-Street Band's Patty Scialfa. The gossip fanzines get a blockbuster of a story, but all we get is a four-cut 12-inch extended play album featuring Bruce and his band. Live tracks include and ultra-ironic (in hindsight) version of "Tougher Than The Rest", taken from the album that foreshadowed all that came to pass for Bruce and his bride for those who cared to read the lyrics (Tunnel Of Love). Two other tracks are live studies of "Be True" and the title track, plus an inspired rendition of "Born To Run" done as an acoustic number, taking Bruce's fans back to the earliest halcyon days of September, 1975. The latter anthemic number inspires the concert crowd to warble out the woh-woh's in reply to Bruce, and his Dylanish harp playing at the end of the tune is a reminder that fifteen years ago Springsteen was touted by Time and Newsweek as the next big thing following Elvis and the Beatles. Close but no cigar; although fans will probably elevate Da Bruce right up there to a position nose to nose with Prince, Madonna and U2.

VIDEO SCREENINGS

Shakedown (MCA HOME VIDEO)

IF this movie didn't stretch all the boundaries of believability it might have become more than the expected rip-off of the Miami Vice style of television trip into corrupt Drugland, U.S.A. There was a germ of a good plot here, and even a fair premise, if overworked, in having Peter Weller play a crusading legal-aid lawyer bucking the system, and Sam Elliott as an undercover honest cop. Weller takes on a case of black drug-dealer who is gunned down by a crooked cop and uncovers a trail of corruption that leads to the top of this big-city mess of cops on the take and drug-lords who are untouchable. Elliott has been taking on the same gang at the street level with depressing results. But he is a crazed, renegade kind of straight-shooting law enforcer who is the perfect antidote to the lawlessness and unprincipled cheating going on in this city. Although we've seen this all before, there are enough scenes of unexpected violence and fantastic stunts to make us believe that the director, James Glickenhaus, must have cut his teeth on television, so bizarre and unbelievable are some of the action scenes here. So Weller takes on the bad guys in court, while fighting out an old romantic battle with the lady who happens to be the prosecuting attorney against him.

Elliott hammers away at the drug runners on the streets, dropping into the criminal underworld of pimps, perverts and shooters, but the only real message from this limp film is revealed in the final scenes. If the drug dealers can only be defeated by the kind of belief-stretching derring-do of Elliott's Rambo-like assault on their private plane, then it's no wonder that Mrs. Reagan's "just say no" campaign is such a failure-riven joke. As light entertainment in the television mode, Shakedown works just fine; the sad part is that Elliott and Weller were capable of turning their twin crusades against drugs from two different angles into something with a lot more meat in it. (VIDEO AVAILABLE AT LE CLUB VIDEO, QUEEN STREET, LENNOXVILLE; AND AT TREIZIEME AVENUE, SHERBROOKE.)

Movies

This week at the Carrefour de l'Estrie you can see the same movie as last week, Child's Play. This latest in the horror genre is about a possessed doll who wreaks terror on a boy, his mom and a cop.

Showtimes are 7:30 and 9:30 throughout the week with Saturday and Sunday matinées at 1:30, 3:30 and 5:30.

At the Cinema Princess in Cowansville there's one oldie and a recent release. The show at 7:15 is Crocodile Dundee II starring Paul Hogan. I've often spoken against sequels, and seeing as this is one of those, I would normally say don't bother to go see it. But the fact is that this one almost as good as the original, and this time around Dundee faces tougher 'bad guys' than last time.

Also at the Princess is The Accused starring Kelly McGillis and Jodie Foster. The movie is about a young woman (Foster) who is the victim of a gang-rape in a bar while everyone else in the bar stands around watching. It's been said that Foster's performance is Oscar material. Showtime is 9:05.

Across the border at Merrill's Showplace in Newport you can see the latest Tom Hanks film which also stars the flying nun herself, Sally Fields. Punchline is about a housewife (Fields) who decides she wants to try her hand at stand-up comedy and Hanks plays the comic who shows her the ropes. This is really a mix of comedy and drama, and as usual Hanks puts in one of his great performances.

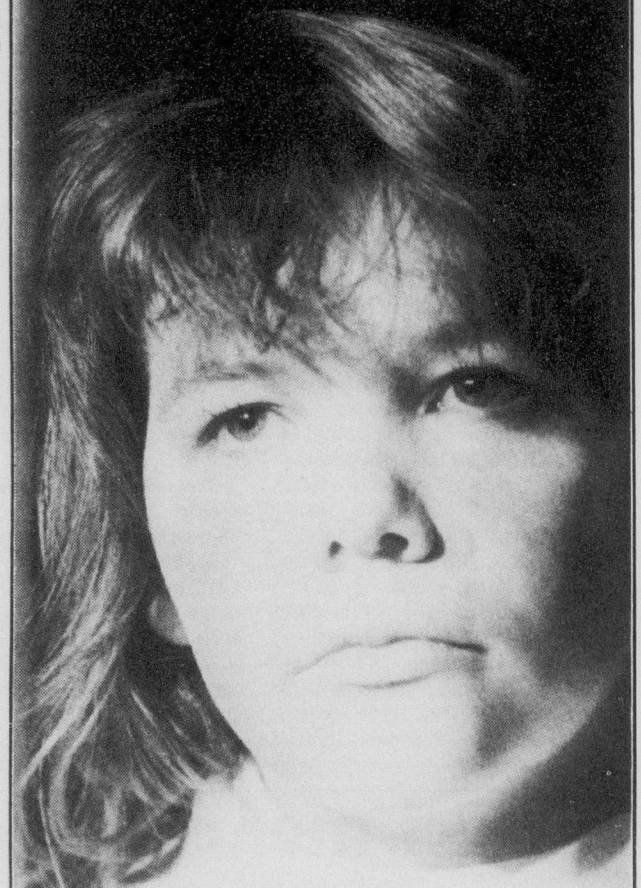

Showtimes are 7 and 9:15 from Friday to Sunday, matinées on Saturday and Sunday at 1:55. From Monday to Thursday at 7:20.

Also at Merrill's it's Gorillas in the Mist, the movie about Dianne Fossey, the woman who understood gorillas better than anyone else before her. Sigourney Weaver stars as Fossey, and puts in one of her usually excellent performances.

Showtimes are 6:45 and 9:10 from Friday to Sunday, matinées on Saturday and Sunday at 1:45. Monday to Thursday at 7:15.

Finally at Merrill's is They Live. This horror flic is about upwardly mobile aliens who take on human form to plunder the earth of its resources. Showtimes are 7:15 and 9:20 from Friday to Sunday with Saturday and Sunday matinées at 2:05, from Monday to Thursday at 7:30.

The exhibition Dairying in the Eastern Townships and the Caron collection of cheese dishes continues at the Uplands Museum in Lennoxville.

At the Sherbrooke art gallery Horace you can see the works of Olaf Hanel as well as those of Isabelle Lelarge. Both exhibits continue until Nov. 27.

In the performance arts, you can see the play Kraken by playwright Patrick Quintal of the theatre group Théâtre Double Signe at the Petite Salle of the University of Sherbrooke. The play from continues until Sunday.

The Sherbrooke dance troupe Sursaut is presenting their latest creation Les États d'Anne at the Petite Salle of the University of Sherbrooke. The show is presented from Thursday to Saturday beginning next weekend, at 8:30. The piece was created by Francine Châteauvert, also the troupe's artistic director, and Michel Côté wrote and will perform the music. For more information call 569-9790 or 822-8912.

After a two year break, the BCS Players' Club is back. On Tuesday the group will open Brian Clark's drama, Whose Life is it, Anyway. The play is a tour de force for cast and crew. Its story centres around a sculptor who has broken her neck in a car accident and is struggling to take charge of what is left of her life. Tickets are $5 and can be reserved by calling Jim Stickland at 566-0227, ext. 240.

Mary S. Martin is having an exhibition of her works at the art gallery The Blue Armoire. For more information read the Events section.

St. Moritz keeps attracting the big spenders

By Tom Weissmann

ST. MORITZ—Aristotle Onassis and Maria Callas once frequented this Swiss resort, and so did the Shah of Iran, Greta Garbo and Elizabeth Taylor.

Ever since English aristocrats discovered St. Moritz a century ago, the town has unashamedly catered to the rich. At Christmas and New Year's, a squadron of executive jets heads into nearby Samedan airport, bearing Greek shipping magnates and heavy-duty West German industrialists.

The beautiful people, some of whom will pay up to $1,000 Cdn per night for a suite at the landmark in luxury, Badrutts Palace Hotel, and $15 for a drink in the hotel's bars, come to ski, to take the waters, shop at the exclusive boutiques, or just to be seen in the fine restaurants and glittery discos.

The downhill skiing isn't for beginners — the runs are generally too demanding. But there are 120 kilometres of cross-country trails and top-notch alpine runs in both the intermediate and expert categories, not surprising since St. Moritz has hosted two Winter Olympics — in 1928 and 1948.

The town of 6,000 tucked into Switzerland's southeast corner may now have a few modern-looking apartment buildings, but it's still a once-in-a-lifetime destination for skiers who place a high premium on their after-ski activities.

NOT A BARGAIN

But glamor comes at a price, and St. Moritz is no bargain destination, especially at the current exchange rate (1 Swiss franc 77 cents Cdn.)

You don't, however, need the assets of a magnate to schuss the slopes or browse the antique shops.

A six-day lift ticket costs $147 Cdn, which you can pay at some premium North American ski resorts.

And there is a good price range among the 50-odd hotels and vacation condos.

A couple can stay at the charming centre-town, three-star Wal-dhaus Am See, for example, for prices ranging from $123 to $146 (without a private washroom) and from $162 to $215 (with private bathroom). That price also includes half-pension — breakfast and lunch or dinner.

Half-pension for two at the modest but comfortable two-star National Hotel costs $77 to $100 ($100 to $131 with private washroom). Guest homes (serving breakfast only) range from $69 to $108.

EVEN LOWER

The people-watching action is at its best over the Christmas period — when reservations are an absolute necessity. But prices are even lower, often up to one-third, in the off-peak periods — including the period before Christmas, the week after New Year's up to to early February, and most of March and April.

Some experts claim that the spring is the best time to ski the Alps; conditions almost always hold up at high altitude well into April. And because St. Moritz has two glacier ski areas, the skiing is dependable late into the season.

In keeping with its love all things upper-crust, every January St. Moritz has a special week of polo and horse-racing — on the snow on the Lake St. Moritz. Animal rights activists may not be crazy about the idea, but watching horses charge across the frozen lake is certainly a memorable spectator sport. (The dates in 1989 are Jan. 22-29.)

An essential for any visitor is a ride on the cogwheel mountain railroad to nearby Corviglia for a fine view over the valley and the numerous lakes. The terrace and restaurant are favorite spots for people-watching.

St. Moritz is also ideally situated for expeditions into the surrounding region. Two tours are particularly worth the effort.

The first is the Bernina Express, the mountaintop railway that links St. Moritz with Tirano, an unspoiled mountain village in Italy. Along the way, the stop at Alp Grum affords one of the best panoramas anywhere.

The second excursion is the 272-kilometre-long Glacier Express from St. Moritz to Zermatt, the village at the base of the Matterhorn.

The train, billed as the "slowest express in the world," leaves St. Moritz in the morning, and crosses over 290 bridges and through 91 tunnels, before arriving in Zermatt about 5 p.m.

It makes for a long day, but the views are spectacular.

To see the region at its best, the Swiss trains are a good bet — they're exceptionally clean and reliable, and you can enjoy the scenery without manoeuvring a car around hairpin turns in mountain roads.

It takes about two hours by train from Zurich airport to Chur, a main rail point, and from there another 90 minutes over the Albula Pass to St. Moritz.

Skoki means hard work but offers splendid isolation

By Kelly Watt

LAKE LOUISE, Alta. — Sitting off in its own splendid isolation deep inside Banff National Park, Skoki Lodge is one of those old rustic lodges you've read about but never expect to find in your lifetime.

It's a charming old log building, the sort of place where guests, tired from their day in the outdoors, sit with steaming mugs of coffee in front of the woodstove, where their leggings and stockings have been hung out to dry.

But there's a catch to visiting Skoki: you have to ski there, almost 13 kilometres, part of it up a steep pass. And you'll quite possibly run into a blizzard — blizzards can come and go as quickly as you can snap your fingers, any month of the year, even August. There are times when even a helicopter can't make it in.

The trip to Skoki starts at Temple Lodge on Mount Whitehorn, near the Lake Louise downhill ski area. From Temple, the cross-country ski trail meanders for six kilometres of switchbacks and evergreens to Boulder Pass and the higher open country of Ptarmigan Lake.

At the half-way point is Ptarmigan Hut, a little wooden shack that has sheltered skiers since early this century. Skoki employees once stayed here overnight on their daily runs for potatoes and other supplies.

A SHOVEL?

A fellow skier, a young man, turned up, carrying a shovel. "Why the shovel?" we asked. "Avalanches," was his curt reply.

Annoyed at our inexperience, he followed with a stream of advice on what to do, just in case. (Undo your bindings, make swimming motions with your arms, and keep your mouth closed.) Thereafter, with each step we took, we were certain we heard tremors.

On the trail again, a wind blasted around the corner of Boulder Pass, forcing us to skate blindly forward in a whiteout on Ptarmigan Lake.

Eventually, we stumbled upon the enormous white face of the last big hurdle of the trip — the aptly named Deception Pass. It's a climb of perhaps 150 metres and it's straight up, or so it seemed.

One step forward meant two steps back. Another group zipped by us: they climbed the pass with the ease of flies climbing a wall. They, however, had wisely attached seal skins to the tips of their skis — an old Inuit trick. The skins' unbending coarse hair helps prevent the skis from sliding.

REACHED TOP

After two hours of snowy humiliation, and breaks to cling wearily to snowdrifts, we reached the top of Deception Pass. (The five staff members who stay for the season at Skoki can ski the entire route in two to three hours.)

Later, Skoki's cook, Jan Burks, explained that if guests don't show up after a reasonable period, a snowmobile, which can make the trip in 45 minutes, is sent from Lake Louise.

From the top of Deception Pass, Skoki is a delightful downhill run through feathery powder.

When you finally stumble through the door, you're greeted by the delicious aroma of hot coffee and clam chowder. It was worth the journey just to taste the Cougar's Milk — a Skoki tradition, milk laced with rum and nutmeg.

Other guests mill about, some lounging on couches in front of the big stone fireplace in the living room. (Huge windows open up on a panoramic view.)

The lodge and three surrounding cabins have primitive (no indoor washrooms) but cosy accommodation for 22 guests. Rates are $75 per night, including meals and a packed lunch filled with wonderful homemade goodies for the return trip. (There are special rates for longer stays and children.)

Most guests stay only a night or two, but others come for longer periods to ski or go mountaineering.

The cross-country ski trail is open from Christmas until April. In spring and summer, hikers and horseback riders come to the lodge.

John Shea, assistant area manager of Skiing Louise, the company that owns and operates Skoki Lodge, once skied the trail with a couple in their 80s. "It's not for novices, but it's not difficult," Shea says of the trip to Skoki.

For more information, contact Skiing Louise Ltd., Box 5, Lake Louise, Alta. T0L 1E0; (403) 522-3555.

For the eighth year in a row, the Oriental Hotel in Bangkok has been voted the best hotel in the world by business travellers responding to Institutional Investor magazine's annual survey of hotels.

As in past years, Asian hotels dominated the list, chiefly because they have a higher ratio of staff to guests than deluxe hotels elsewhere.

The Regent Hong Kong came second and the Mandarin Oriental, also in Hong Kong, came fourth. (I once had a drink in the Mandarin's bar and every time I reached for a cigarette, a staff member would materialize at my elbow with a light.)

The No. 3 position went to the Vier Jahreszeiten of Hamburg while the Connaught in London was fifth.

East-West Airlines, the third largest Australian domestic carrier, has announced a range of air passes exclusively for overseas visitors.

There are several types of passes, but as an example, you could visit five major cities for $699 Australian, which is about the same in Canadian dollars.

The passes must be purchased before departure from Canada and are valid for 60 days. They're worth looking into if you're heading Down Under since domestic air fares there tend to be high.

If you're thinking of visiting Quebec City this winter, the region's tourist board is preparing a promotional campaign offering discounts of up to 50 per cent on hotels, restaurants, ski centres, sightseeing tours and so on.

Called The Super White Sale, the promotion runs from Nov. 24 to early February.

For further information, phone toll-free 1-800-361-5405 (Quebec and Ontario), 1-800-361-6490 (Maritimes) or 1-800-443-7000 (United States). The Quebec City number is (418) 692-2471; in Montreal, it's (514) 873-2015.

For film and culture buffs:

The $25-million Museum of the Moving Image has just opened in London. It claims to be the largest museum in the world devoted entirely to cinema and TV.

There are sections on early film pioneers, TV technology and development, as well as the birth of Hollywood, animation, science fiction and newsreels.

Irvin's Now Back to You Dick a snack, not a meal

By Terry Scott
The Canadian Press

When he was 12 years old, Dick Irvin watched a National Hockey League game seated on the Montreal Canadiens players bench beside the legendary Maurice (Rocket) Richard.

Such a privileged vantage point would be against the rules in this day and age. But that was back in the mid-1940s, and the man who made such first-class seating possible was Irvin's father, Dick Sr.

The elder Irvin had the power to make such decisions. After all, he was the coach of the Canadiens, a team that he steered to 431 victories.

No wonder Dick Irvin Jr. developed a passion for hockey. Now 56, he no longer watches from ice level. But he remains close to the action as a Hockey Night in Canada commentator and radio voice of the Canadiens, broadcasting jobs that have spanned 22 and 20 years respectively.

With his latest endeavor, Now Back to You Dick, Irvin is making his debut as an author.

TRIBUTE TO DAD

As suggested by the subtitle, Two Lifetimes in Hockey, this book is a blending of Irvin's admiration —at times awe—for his father and his association with some of the game's familiar athletes and broadcasters.

Through the years, Irvin kept a scrapbook of his father's career, and some of the salient snippets are included in the book. Among them are Irvin Sr.'s dealings with Conn Smythe of the Toronto Maple Leafs and his tutelage of some of the game's brightest stars. These will be fond reminiscences for older hockey fans, but probably less so for the younger set.

In the broadcast booth, Irvin's style is both articulate and anecdotal, and the bulk of the book has a similar format. But as you breeze through the pages you might hope for some controversial observations or opinions—not in a bombastic emulation of Howard Cosell, but at least the odd juicy tidbit.

In an interview, Irvin acknowledged: "I'm not what is known in my business as a knocker. I prefer leaving the washing of dirty linen to those who feel more comfortable in that role."

PLAYER HYPER

Two of the more entertaining chapters are Jocks in the Booth and On the Air, both of which briefly take the reader behind the scenes. We learn with some amusement that John Ferguson, the former Montreal hardrock, was "so hyper" after a game-winning overtime goal "that he had trouble getting his breath" for an interview.

"I tried talking with him before we went on the air, but all I got in return was a lot of deep breathing and stares from a wild-looking pair of eyes."

A fascinating anecdote involves Howie Meeker, one of Irvin's broadcasting colleagues, and his slip in using the word "we" when speaking of the Toronto Maple Leafs during a game against the Canadiens. Management of the Montreal team was so incensed at Meeker's bias that it complained to Hockey Night in Canada, and thereafter Meeker became a rare visitor to the Forum.

Through Hockey Night in Canada and its sizable ratings, broadcasters such as Irvin, Don Cherry, Harry Neale and a handful of others have become celebrities in their own right. You'd like to learn more about the personalities behind the faces, the machinations of the show, but the book provides only a superficial view.

MOSTLY BLAND

Irvin also skates over his recollections of covering the Canadiens, hockey's most successful team, for two decades. Too many of the anecdotes are bland and don't really offer a warts-and-all glimpse of the men who played so proficiently in that era.

In his defence, Irvin intended the book to be a tribute to his father and his sport, which later became the son's livelihood. Evaluated in that context, Irvin has made an enjoyable contribution.

At one point, Irvin recalls a young member of the Canadiens who remarks to a veteran, "I didn't know Dick Irvin was a coach before he became a broadcaster."

Not wanting to embarrass the player in print, Irvin does not reveal his identity. Some readers may have wanted to know, but again they are left with a snack instead of a hearty meal.

Bethune gets drunk, Sutherland in hospital

MONTREAL (CP)—Actor Donald Sutherland, who was rushed to hospital Saturday after he fell from a fire escape during the filming of Bethune: The Making of a Hero, is in good shape and back at work, a publicist for Filmline International Inc. said Monday.

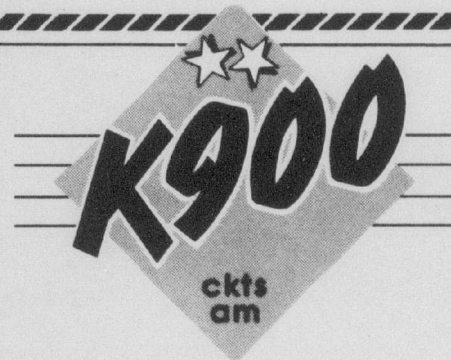

The accident occurred as Sutherland was playing a scene where a drunken Bethune leaves a bar by the fire escape. The actor slipped part way down the ladder, then fell about a metre to the ground.

Lorraine Jamieson, the publicist for Filmline, which is producing the $18-million movie and TV mini-series, said Sutherland was rushed to the emergency ward of the Royal Victoria Hospital and X-rayed.

The actor was diagnosed as having suffered "a slight concussion" and was released after an examination, Jamieson said. Sutherland was back on the film set Sunday.

The film is based on the life of Montreal doctor Norman Bethune, a hero in China where he died in 1939 while tending to the Communist troops of Mao Tse-Tung.

"Let's Talk"

Polly Vonetes

Q: Please give me some information on my favorite actress, Elizabeth Montgomery. When and where was she born? What was the movie where she played a "woods" married to a lawyer? Is she going to do another movie or series? —Cindy Brewer, Metropolis, Ill.

ELIZABETH MONTGOMERY

A: Green-eyed Elizabeth Montgomery is the gifted daughter of the late actor, Robert Montgomery. Born in Los Angeles, Calif., on April 15, 1933, she made her television debut in 1954 with her father, when he was hosting the anthology series Robert Montgomery Presents. She has received nine Emmy nominations: five for her work as Samantha in Bewitched and others for her performances in the films A Case of Rape, The Legend of Lizzie Borden, The Awakening Land and for a guest role in The Untouchables TV series. Thrice married and divorced, she has three children from her last marriage to William Asher. Currently, she has been romantically linked to Robert Foxworth for many years. They have no plans to wed. Elizabeth now selects her roles carefully and if the right script is presented to her you may see her on the screen again. I think the film you are referring to is the 1963 theatrical release co-starring Dean Martin, Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed?

Q: Forty years ago I took pictures back stage at the Follies Burlesque Show in L.A. of Joe Yule, Mickey Rooney's father. I have one great 8x10 of him with Joe Devlin, another vaudeville actor. I know Mickey Rooney would love to receive this unique picture of his father. Where can I send it to him? —Milton Sherwood, Sedona, Ariz.

A: I received your letter in July and I am sorry it took so long to answer. Contact Mickey Rooney through Ruth Webb Enterprises, 7500 Devista Dr., Los Angeles, Calif. 90046

Q: I'm so happy for Dorothy Hamill with the arrival of a daughter. I would like to send congratulations to the family. Could you help me with an address for her? —Mrs. Tom Skattum, Belmont, Wis.

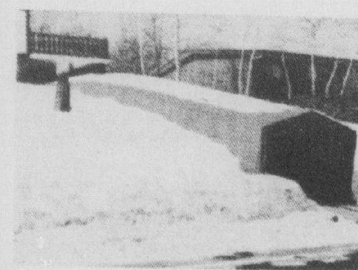

A: That's a very thoughtful gesture. Send your congratulations to: Dorothy Hamill, c/o Ice Capades, 6121 Santa Monica Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90038

Q: I'm writing to ask you how I can get in touch with Loretta Lynn. She is my favorite country music singer. OK? —Ruby Hale, Lebanon, Va.

A: Write to: Loretta Lynn, c/o United Talent Inc., P.O. Box 23470, Nashville, Tenn. 37202. OK?

Send your questions about the world of entertainment to: Polly Vonetes, Let's Talk, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, Texas 76102-0748.

November 20 through November 26

SAGITTARIUS

(November 22 - December 21)
 Finances overshadow participation in new activities. A give-and-take attitude aids in attaining goals. Dramatic events transpire.

CAPRICORN

(December 22 - January 19)
 A shaky friendship is further polarized. Shuffle priorities to deal with an increase in activity. Vicious rumors lead to hard feelings.

AQUARIUS

(January 20 - February 18)
 Reconciliation is pending. Fringe benefits could be falsely presented. A fickle disposition garners resentment. Neighbors cause problems.

PISCES

(February 19 - March 20)
 Carefully size up new acquaintances. Disillusions are probable. Serenity becomes your saving grace. Practiced methods become outmoded.

ARIES

(March 21 - April 19)
 Despite physical pain, try to project an image of strength; helplessness does little good. Deceitfulness of others is imagined.

TAURUS

(April 20 - May 20)
 A small setback in the grand plan seems overwhelming. Stand back and look at the situation logically. A creative flair surfaces.

GEMINI

(May 21 - June 20)
 Maintain ethics despite personal sacrifices. Pinpoint needs and develop a plan to meet them. Misinformation causes confusion.

CANCER

(June 21 - July 22)
 Circumstances at work put you in an ideal situation. Long-awaited events finally occur. Lay the groundwork for a domestic change.

LEO

(July 23 - August 22)
 Humane actions improve your impressions of others. Obvious solutions to problems come just in time. Cut through gibberish for the truth.

VIRGO

(August 23 - September 22)
 Delegate or postpone time-consuming chores to handle more important duties. A new skill takes precedence over established tasks.

LIBRA

(September 23 - October 22)
 Observe the importance family. Second chances are hard to come by; use careful thought in decision making. Hurt feelings heal with time.

SCORPIO

(October 23 - November 21)
 Exhaustion causes a slowdown in productivity. Place priority on rest and other health matters.

Sports fans can gobble up Thanksgiving football feast

By Jerry Jorgensen

Thanksgiving. A time for family. A time for food. A time for football.

The Dallas Cowboys and the Detroit Lions will play their traditional Thanksgiving Day football games this Thursday, Nov. 24. NBC and CBS will be on hand to cover the action, if you can call it that.

The Lions will host the Minnesota Vikings in the CBS game at 1 p.m. Eastern time. Expect Brent and the guys to play up the "big rivalry" angle, because there really is little else of interest here. This would be a good time to eat dinner (yawn).

The second game should be a little better, but probably not much. It features the Cowboys and the Houston Oilers which, if this was 1978, would definitely be a major happening. Too bad it's not. Game time is 4 p.m. Eastern on NBC.

It's times like these that make you appreciate the NBA on TBS. This week, the SuperStation will show not only its usual Tuesday and Friday games, but a Thanksgiving eve doubleheader as well.

The Tuesday game features the Los Angeles Lakers in New York to play the Knicks. Wednesday night's twin-feature has the Dallas Mavericks hosting the Denver Nuggets and the Chicago Bulls at Los Angeles' other team, the Clippers. The Mavericks encore on Friday when they host the Atlanta Hawks.

ESPN will also have some special Thanksgiving programming this week, including college basketball (The Best Semifinal of the Big Apple NIT), Thanksgiving football (teams to be announced) at 10 a.m. and a college football game at 8 p.m., all times Eastern.

Happy Thanksgiving!

Boxer joins cast of 'All My Children'

By Candace Havens

Eddie Earl Hatch portrays suave John Remington in ABC's All My Children. Remington is a well-tailored businessman with organized crime connections and a mysterious past.

"Remi is a fascinating role," Hatch observes. "He's cool. He's a charming guy. But he's also calculating and manipulative. He was a boxer at one time, and he appreciates wine, women and art."

Before joining the cast, Hatch played featured roles in such films as Street Smart, with Christopher Reeve, worked as a stuntman—doubling in several movies, including one starring Billy Dee Williams, and acted on stage off-Broadway as well as in television.

Ironically, the native Bostonian had no plans to be an actor when he started his career as a clothing salesman in an upscale store in his hometown. The store manager suggested that he do some modeling and the modeling agency suggested that he take acting classes. Soon he was busy with television commercials and acting roles. "Then one day," he recalled, "it dawned on me that I could actually make a living as an actor and I came to New York."

While working in films, Hatch fell in love with stunt work and became a member of the East Coast Stuntmen's Association. "That's definitely one of my favorite parts of the business. I enjoy the physicality of it," he said.

Before he became involved in acting, Hatch was an amateur boxer competing in AAU Golden Gloves matches in Boston. "But now I don't want to hit anything that hits back," he quipped.

I'm sad to report that ABC is taking Ryan's Hope off of the air Jan. 13, 1989. The reason given is audience erosion (not enough stations carry the show).

Ryan's Hope will be sadly missed, as it was one of the few soaps set in a real city and with characters with real problems. The acting has always been terrific and the story lines believable.
