Zany Whiskey Jack makes it on straight-laced show

Country music

By DAVE MULHOLLAND

Tommy Hunter's CBC television show is now into its 18th season and again this year the ol' back porch is occupied by Whiskey Jack, a four-man pseudo-bluegrass band that landed a regular spot on the program a year ago.

It's the kind of break many performers can only dream about; playing to more than 2.5-million viewers each week.

"We auditioned for the Hunter show and got it by entertaining the producer," says John Hoffman, Whiskey Jack's mandolin and fiddle player. "Other bands played it straight, but the producer said we were the most entertaining."

The strait-laced Hunter show is somewhat contradictory to the group's zany, scattered image, but as banjo player Duncan Fremlin points out: "You don't turn down that kind of exposure, and the show has given us instant credibility."

Whiskey Jack has also received extensive radio play from two albums, Uptown, and more recently, One More Time. The title song, written by guitarist Bob McNiven, was released as a single.

Although billed as a bluegrass band and using traditional bluegrass instruments, the group's harmonies are mainline country. With Chip Street's acoustic bass laying down the beat, Hoffman, Fremlin and McNiven offer gorgeous, wrap-around harmonies, especially on the classic, Tennessee Waltz.

"In a sense, we're trying to be all things to all people, but essentially we're just trying to be good."

Rather in Cronkite's shadow: 'A travesty of reality'

The CBS Evening News with Dan Rather is still America's leading TV news program and a strong favorite among Canadians. But it no longer dominates the network news scene the way it had under Walter Cronkite.

Without the majestic father-like figure of Cronkite, and in the face of stiff competition from ABC's flashy fast-paced Nightly News and NBC's formidable Roger Mudd-Tom Brakow combination, the CBS news department has had to fight every inch of the way for a precarious first-place position.

The millions who had faithfully followed Cronkite's nightly news casts didn't adapt readily to Rather. The high priest of TV news, it seemed was being replaced by a slightly angry choir boy.

Even at the CBS news center on 57th Street in Manhattan many doubted Rather's ability to don the Cronkite mantle. As the Nielsen indicators jumped erratically some believed the affable Charles Kuralt would have been a better choice. Others felt Roger Mudd should have been chosen for the job. To his critics, Rather appeared too intense, too brusque, too angry for an anchorman. His rough collegiate sweater didn't improve his new image either, noted one CBS news staffer.

But the new president of CBS News, Van Goren Sauter, who had salvaged many a news program from oblivion, thought otherwise.

Sauter felt that "Rather was quickly learning the skills of the anchorman and growing comfortable in that role."

He expressed confidence in Rather, ensured that Bill Moyers stayed on as commentator — a fact that had softened the blunt edge of the Rather image — and opted for a quicker pace, new graphics and teasers, aimed primarily at the competition.

Sauter also moved quickly, after his appointment last winter, to relocate disgruntled staffers to the farther reaches of the CBS news empire.

More significantly, he began along with Rather, to reexamine TV news.

Under Cronkite, TV news — at CBS anyway — was whatever Cronkite said it was. He was the gospel. But after his "death-of-God" departure there was no such consensus. There was no one who had the confidence to conclude a 22-minute broadcast with "That's the way it is."

Questions that were rarely raised in the Cronkite years were now up in the air. What is a TV news item? What should it tell viewers? What should a TV news cast lead with? In the post — Cronkite era new answers had to be found.

This uncertainty was often reflected in the Evening News. One evening CBS news opened with the birth of a baby boy to Lady Di and Prince Charles — a doubtful decision in view of the savage war in Lebanon, fighting in the Falklands and a raging debate on nuclear war in Washington.

Gradually, however, Rather and Sauter were beginning to discover a new formula. They began, more and more, to look for pieces — or "moments" as they called them — that could strongly convey to viewers the emotional quality of an event. These minutes, they were convinced, would give the viewers a feeling for what it is to be in a particular situation, rather than in description of the situation.

A moment, said Rather, is "when somebody watches something and feels it, smells it and knows it." It is the young girl searching desperately for shelter and finding none during a bombardment, it's a woman sobbing in the rubble of her home, rather than the facts of these events.

emotional moments would be counterproductive. The optimism that characterized the Cronkite broadcasts, had to be retained. So the raw emotional moments were quickly sugarcoated with the Cronkite philosophy: the indomitable human spirit prevailing in the face of despair, disaster and suffering.

And so it is that each momentous story in the CBS Evening News seems to end on an upbeat note, and that every broadcast closes with a strained yet courageous smile from Rather.

So far, this mix of emotion and optimism with Dan Rather at the helm has worked well for CBS news but it remains to be seen whether North American audiences will remain satisfied with what one critic called "a syrupy travesty of perceived reality."

One writer described it as a "visual reflection of a feeling". Rather and Sauter worked to ensure that their newscasts contained such moments because of the emotional response they evoked in the viewers. Townships artisans gear up for Knowlton show

KNOWLTON — The Christmas season is just around the corner and with it comes the 9th annual Kinton Christmas Craft Show at the Brome Lake Country Inn in Knowlton. The show, Saturday and Sunday, November 6 and 7 has become a tradition.

If you know exactly what you are looking for and can't find it, the artisans will make it to your specifications.

Doors open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. with no admission charge. Because you are buying directly from the craftsmen, prices are low.

The children will delight in the Christmas fare ranging from delicate hand-painted eggs to hang on the tree, to brightly-colored candles of all shapes and sizes, to personalized hand-knit Christmas stockings. Eyes will widen at the sight of larger than life size rag dolls, old fashioned wooden toys and hobby horses, and an endless variety of teddy bears, stuffed animals and puppets.

Some 50 artisans offer quilts, ponchos, afghans and rugs that adorn the walls, along with paintings and photographs done by local artists. The silver, gold, turquoise, ivory and feather jewelry is all hand-crafted and original. On display you will find pine furniture, soapstone carvings, batiks on silk, pottery, and leather handbags, hats and belts.

The inn also features the Maple Bucket Bar where you can enjoy cocktails in the quiet country atmosphere of barnwood and antiques. The large candle-lit dining room is open all day and offers its famous Danish Smorgasbord in the evening.

The show is easy to find. Take the Eastern Townships Autoroute to Exit 90 for Knowlton and follow the show's signs for three miles to the inn. For further information please call Crystal King at (514) 243-0112 or (514) 243-0451.

Burns-O'Donnell History of Quebec aims to 'elevate'

By Timothy Belford

One of the many changes made recently in the world of Quebec education has been the introduction of compulsory history courses. The two proposed fields of study are World History, to be taught in grade 8, and the History of Quebec and Canada which will be part of the grade 10 course of study.

In order to insure a certain uniformity of facts, figures and dates, the government has also produced a lengthy syllabus to guide teachers in the preparation of their courses. Furthermore, to back up the syllabus, the department of education has provided funds for the production of what will hopefully become a standard text for use in all of Quebec's schools.

The task of producing the official English-language version of our history has fallen to local historian and professor Robin Burns who, with partner Brendan O'Donnell formerly of Concordia University, submitted the most acceptable proposal to the department of education.

Burns, a lifelong Quebecer, is presently a professor of history at Bishop's University. His interests, although wide-ranging, deal primarily with Canada and Quebec's Irish population. A biography of D'Arcy McGee was followed by piece on the last Irish mayor of Montreal and presently Burns is working on a biography of William Williams a 19th century Anglican Bishop of Quebec.

Burns' and O'Donnell's original submission to the ministry of education was designed to cover only the first portion of the province's history — from its origins to confederation. The ministry however, was sufficiently impressed that they requested a submission for the entire job. The situation at present finds Burns and O'Donnell with a signed contract for the first half of the history text and a submission covering the remainder presently in Quebec City which, according to Burns, will take another 150 pages and increase the cost of the proposal by approximately 50 per cent.

"The agreement calls for certain stages to be reached by certain deadlines," points out Burns, adding that the first hurdle comes December 31 when they must submit a table of contents as well as all photographs and illustrations.

After that the deadlines, until December of 1983, deal merely with the completion of the seven chapters. The manuscript will then be submitted to a selection of history teachers throughout the province to be checked as to "readability and suitability". If all goes well at this stage it will be off to the publishers for Burns and O'Donnell.

"The only restriction here is that it must be a Quebec publisher," says Burns. "We don't anticipate any trouble even though there are only three English-language publishers in the province. You are looking at an almost guaranteed market of 8,000 books a year."

After a publisher is located and an agreement is reached, the authors must again return to the government where a committee from the MEQ will examine the book and give its seal of approval. After this, it is up to individual teachers to either accept or reject the text for their classes.

Although the book will be competing with texts from Toronto and elsewhere, Burns feels that he and his partner will have the inside track. "Since it will be the approved version, it should prove to be the most helpful in covering the syllabus," he says.

Production of the volume is not without its problems nor its humorous aspect. For example Jacques Cartier and the other intrepid explorers must now travel their various historical routes in kilometres not miles. References to the 'fairer' sex must be 'de-sexified' and Quebec's native people will be referred to as Amerindians.

As a matter of fact, two sections of the seven-chapter book will deal directly with the original inhabitants of the province and nation. The first will deal with Indian life before the arrival of European settlers while the second will deal with the consequences of colonization — many of which are at the source of much of the present conflict between government and native people.

Burns does not see a major problem arising, although the French-language version of the text will be prepared by different historians. "Past experience with translations," he explains, "have been found to be less than acceptable. Since we will all be working with the same syllabus as a guide there is likely to be reasonable unanimity."

Burns will draw much of his material from research that he has carried on over 16 years as a teacher of introductory Canadian history and, although he is not thinking in terms of an overall theme, he does have several points he wishes to emphasize.

"This is an aid for teachers so they can accomplish the goals they have in mind. After all they are more in touch with 15 and 16-year-olds than I am. I want to emphasize readability but not at the expense of language. I say now that I won't bow to the lowest common denominator but..."

One disturbing aspect of the text, is that although the emphasis must be on the province of Quebec, and rightly so, events outside the province that have affected the growth and development of the nation will be included only in so far as they have directly affected Quebec. Thus, although Louis Riel and the Conscription crisis will be dealt with, presumably George Vancouver, Simon Fraser and the Winnipeg general strike will be lost in the shuffle.

Burns admits this is a problem but points out that for a province which required no history after public school, the courses and text will still be a "distinct improvement".

With any luck at all, the new Burns-O'Donnell History of Quebec and Canada will, as the authors hope, "elevate and educate".

Oy vey iz mir... history's largest Matzah ball

The Unorthodox Book of Jewish Records and Lists, by Allan Gould and Danny Siegel, Hurtig Publishers Ltd.

The modern world is record crazy. Ever since Guinness published its first book of world records, people everywhere have been stuffing phone booths, swallowing everything from goldfish to mounds of spaghetti and generally going where man has never gone before. All this in an attempt to set a world record.

The antics of various human beings have even given rise to a series of television programs designed to display man at his oddest. Each week That's Incredible, Real People and now Ripley's Believe It Or Not, trot out some of the strangest human beings imaginable and we are treated to a visual display of their own peculiarities which range from blowing themselves up to training pigs to swim.

Not to be outdone, two members of the Jewish community have produced probably the funniest book to come out of Canadian publishing in years. The Unorthodox Book of Jewish Records and Lists is a rib tickling, belly buster that reads like an Alan King stand-up comedy routine and contains enough laughs to satisfy even the most self-contained goyim.

Here you will find such startling facts as the original, Jewish names of the seven dwarfs, the most dangerous Jewish occupations in history — which includes food taster for the Czar — and a list of the many derivatives of the Jewish skull cap or yarmulka — Scots tam, Basque beret, ten gallon hat, etc.

Obviously the more that you know of the Jewish religion, the better the book since much of the humor is based upon word plays and inside jokes. Nevertheless when authors Gould and Siegel list the greatest one-liner guilt trips ever laid upon a Jewish child by a Jewish mother an encyclopedia isn't necessary.

For those among you who aren't familiar with terms such as oy vey, bubbe, mensch or abi gezunt, there is even a glossary of terms at the back of the book.

No matter how you look at it The Unorthodox Book of Jewish Records and Lists is a winner. So, pay the price already!

French author blasts Dallas as top U.S. 'junk tragedy'

PARIS (CP) — When J. R. Ewing — the internationally despised villain of TV's Dallas — was shot a month ago on French television, 10-to 15-million people were watching with delight.

In the country of Moliere and Victor Hugo, the top U.S. "junk tragedy," — as described by author Jean-Edern Hallier — has record ratings.

The Dallas craze reached peak fever this summer when the "Who shot J. R." (pronounced Gee Air in French) anguish was on everyone's minds. Only Monaco's Royal Family challenged the series' stars for the covers of popular magazines.

Like in the U.S. and Canada in 1980, the shooting episode was aired in the spring in France. However, the French network bowed to public demand and reran the segment in September for those who had missed the crucial scene the first time around.

J. R. performs his dirty tricks around the globe each week. The show has 350 million viewers, including those from almost every country in Western Europe.

But if the Texan series unites TV watchers of the world, it paradoxically divides them between those who know and those who don't.

The series was bought by each of the countries at different times. A European globe-trotter could well see the fourth episode of the first year of Dallas in Spain, the next week watch the 13th episode of the second year in Finland and so on.

In a campground on the Riviera this summer, a Swedish family was heard arguing with their Greek neighbors. The Greeks were appalled to learn about the death of father Jock Ewing, an event not yet unveiled in their country.

Wine bits

BY TIMOTHY BELFORD

Nothing comes close to a German white

For those among us who have a particular affection for German wines, the news for the last few years has been decidedly bad. Not that the quantity or quality has given rise for concern, but rather the spiralling cost of a decent bottle of Rhine or Moselle has meant that our indulgences have become few and far between.

Unlike the drier whites and reds of the best of Europe, which can for the most part be duplicated, Germany's whites with their delicate balance between acidity and sweetness have really no rival. Admittedly, there are some Eastern-European wines, from Hungary and Yugoslavia among others, that come close, but they are not German.

What about Austria and Switzerland you say? Well, of the two, the Austrians come closest but they also come the closest in price as well, so we are back to square one. No, for a true lover of tafelwein, qualitätswein and qualitätswein mit pradikat, there is no substitute.

The high prices haven't stopped Canadians from drinking German wine however, as a recent press release from the German Wine Information Service points out. Canada's consumption of wine from the land of Goethe hit 6,685,700 litres for the first six months of 1982 which represents an increase of 12.3 per cent over the same period last year.

Canadians outstripped the rest of the world in this area since growth in consumption for German wines everywhere else was a mere 6.4 per cent. This means that Canada now consumes about seven per cent of the overall production of German wines.

Representatives of the German Wine Institute in Mainz expressed surprise at the figures. Given the world-wide recession and the short supply of German wine available for export, they had expected little or no growth. Even more surprising, given the prices, is the fact that German qualitätswein accounts for 76 per cent of all wine exported.

A little good news could be in the offing however, given Mother Nature's kind indulgence. First indications from Germany are that the 1982 harvest will produce a record 13 hundred million litres of wine. I can hardly wait. Cheers!

Although the name might suggest otherwise, the San Francisco Mime Troupe is a very vocal theatre troupe which has acquired an international reputation for its unconventional blend of professional theatre skills and biting commentary on contemporary issues.

In "Last Tango in Huahuatenango" (written, composed, directed, costumed, produced and performed by the troupe), a dozen actors play over 40 roles in a complex, fast-moving tragedy-comedy about oppression, corruption and peasant rebellion in the barely imaginary Central American country of San Martin.

Council policies may turn E.T. into wasteland

By Timothy Belford

SHERBROOKE — The Eastern Townships Regional Cultural Council met last weekend at a summit to which all representatives of cultural organizations were invited. Along with representatives from individual theatres, dance groups, etc., members of the cultural committees from Township's municipalities attended the meeting which was designed to establish cultural priorities for the region.

On one hand, the meeting was a perfect example of democracy in action as all members, regardless of size or professional status were given one vote. The result was that a large variety of recommendations dealing with regional cultural priorities were passed by the meeting.

Unfortunately, the meeting was, at the same time, a most incredible display of the narrow minded, parochialism that has already caused so much trouble in the cultural life of the Eastern Townships.

Delegates, led by the Summit Committee and an elaborately-prepared document containing 29 recommendations, passed, for the most part unanimously, a series of suggestions that if adhered to will deal another blow to the professional artistic life of the region. The emphasis throughout the meeting and the document was one of regionalism that in many ways is in direct contradiction to the larger artistic vision that is necessary to a dynamic cultural life.

Not all the motions put forward were bad however, and several dealing with the creation of a regional professional dance company, a comprehensive system of regional libraries and the establishment of a regional office of the already existing Culture and Communications Industry Development Society were long overdue.

The trouble came when the committee continued its efforts at focusing the expenditure of government grants upon regional development at the expense of already proven arts organizations. Several of the recommendations put forward and accepted were done so with little thought to the consequences.

A call for the Canada Council to abandon its present policy and allocate more of its resources to regional development can only mean that institutions such as the Theatre d'Atelier, Festival Lennoxville, Centennial Theatre, Theatre Marjolaine, The Piggery Theatre and the Centre Culturel will find it increasingly difficult to obtain an equitable share of available funds.

Another suggestion by the council, to insure more emphasis on the use of Townships literature in the school curriculum, was neither debated nor supported sufficiently with the result that the question of suitability and quality was overlooked.

The extent to which the committee has the establishment of a larger bureaucracy when quality professional arts groups are dying from lack of money is ludicrous in the extreme.

David Weiner, the director of the popular and successful program of the Centennial Theatre, who was absent from the meeting, summed up the feeling of many of the larger and established cultural centres in a letter to the summit. Weiner, who believes that proven organizations should not be 'starved' to support new growth in an unstable cultural environment pointed out to the committee that a "careful equilibrium between our 'cultural' mission and our potential 'market' must be maintained." Furthermore, Weiner added that in times of financial retrenchment "proven financial viability" must be taken into account.

As witness to Weiner's statements, the Theatre d'Atelier, one of the region's most successful and popular, playhouses, has just come off a difficult season, and the Piggery financially successful as it is, was denied financial aid because of its status as a summer theatre.

The ultimate danger in the council's thrust towards more regionalism is that funding has become increasingly under the control of a variety of amateur and semi-professional groups whose appeal to the public at large is at best minimal and whose artistic efforts are often dubious.

Unless the Ministry of Cultural Affairs and the Canada Council resist the petty regionalism being flouted by the present council in the name of democratic participation, the Eastern Townships is in danger of becoming a cultural wasteland populated by individuals and groups whose prime concern is not the presentation of quality entertainment but rather the development of their personal artistic interests at the expense of the paying public.

DeBurgh goes Al-Stewart rocky, but he's out of tune

Chris DeBurgh THE GETAWAY (A&M)

Chris DeBurgh, one of Canada's favorite balladeers abandons the tried and tested avenues of folk music to bolster his story-songs with rock licks on THE GETAWAY. There are songs in the same mode as DeBurgh's "The Traveller", or "Spanish Train" here, such as "Don't Pay The Ferryman", or even "Borderline", but the overall sound is closer to that of someone like Al Stewart, due to the more effective use of back vocals and Rupert Hine's synthesizers.

It is unfortunate that the textures of DeBurgh's faint, weak voice are given such emphasis on this album, when the vocal performance is so distractingly off-key—particularly on an otherwise pretty song written for a sleeping daughter, called "I'm Counting On You." The falsetto slides, and the melody line are worrisome to the listener as DeBurgh's voice just fails to stay in tune. On half-spoken, ballad-narratives, a voice such as DeBurgh's is scarcely noticeable, but on the latest album, when it is given prominence on the ballads it is a disappointment.

The title track, plus the first song on side two, "Ship To Shore", are big production numbers with dense instrumentation and rich vocal overdubs. The synthesized brass arrangement on "Ship To Shore" represents an innovation for DeBurgh, as well as an interesting effect. In fact, those who purchase THE GETAWAY looking for the simple uncluttered ballads will be surprised at the range of rock styles included. A Chris DeBurgh album release usually marks a concert tour upcoming and the Ireland-based writer-composer will have a special place in the hearts of Canadian concert-goers, when his world tour began in England in mid-October.

Cliff Richard NOW YOU SEE ME—NOW YOU DON'T (EMI-AMERICA)

As the title track of this album proclaims, Cliff Richard is one of those elusive performers that keeps an audience wondering just which way to have him. A few years back he did a moving disco treatment of "Devil Woman" which opened up a whole new market for the British rocker. Instead of following up on the rock that made I'm NEARLY FAMOUS a fine album, subsequent albums saw Cliff Richard assuming a male Olivia Newton-John role. With this current album, the rock and MOR sounds have been replaced by a collection of songs that must be standard fare on Cliff's support tours for the Billy Graham set.

There are a few tracks that first appear to be conventional love songs, but a closer examination of the lyrics leads to the revelation that many of the tracks are written in praise of the "Son of Thunder", or the "Thief In The Night". "Be In My Heart" is a "born-again" ballad which might just lead to some Liberate-type embarrassment if the lines such as "His love in the very heart of me, casts out all doubt and fear", warbled by a male voice, are not clearly identified as coming from one of rock's most profile born-again Christians! Unfortunately for Cliff's rock career, these tracks are better theology than they are rock and roll.

Sheena Easton MADNESS, MONEY & MUSIC (EMI-AMERICA)

After such extraordinary, early success resulting in raves for her North American singles, Scottish songstress Sheena Easton might be expected to be a typical rock fatality. Burn out quickly, one-shot wonder, and other such assessments of Easton's fortunes will be laid to rest with the solid performance on the highly listenable MADNESS, MONEY & MUSIC. Songs on the record are balanced between scorching ballads such as "I Wouldn't Beg For Water", and the Blondie type of rock piece, "Machinery".

Sheena Easton's voice has a ringing purity about it that makes anything she sings palatable, from the beaty, rollicking Graham Lyle/Billy Livsey song, "Are You Man Enough", to the Janis Ian tear-jerker "In The Winter". The latter is a moody portrait of Ian's 17-year-old hesitant debutante some 10 years down the line, feeling nonetheless insecure about her social or romantic tenuous grip on life. When Sheena sings it the emotions are chillingly captured by the intensity of feeling in the singing voice that is a welcome addition to the ranks of new female pop vocalists.

Nazareth 2XS (A&M)

These Scottish heavy metal merchants have taken just a bit off their blistering, paint-removing rock sound to go the route of Led Zep and other outfits who mellowed after their initial blasting debuts. Nazareth can still rock and bust leashes, but the influx of a few ballads that seem to fit perfectly on 2XS, might have been anathema on earlier, louder Nazareth albums. Vocalist Dan McCafferty still sounds as if he gave raspy lessons to Bog Seger, and Manny Charlton's lead guitar trades with Billy Rankin keep the arrangements supercharged with guitar interplay. "Gatecrash" begins with an acoustic guitar vamp that recalls rockabilly and a vocal that conjures up memories of Eddie Cochran, besides being one of the few tracks where keyboardist John Locke really gets a workout. Social commentary in "Back To The Trenches", a memorable hook in "Lonely In The Night", and a driving, gutbusting approach to the heavier rock numbers will give Nazareth fans lots to think about as they listen to 2XS.

Rollers RICOCHET (COLUMBIA)

The Bay City Rollers—the very name is redolent of bubble-gum and seventies froth in rock and roll. What a surprise to note that the change in name to the more sophisticated Rollers is accompanied by a distinct change in musical focus as well. RICOCHET is the release of an album that was known as the Brown Bag album, and it reveals that the five Rollers, now firmly into their twenties, have outgrown the easy licks that sustained the legions of bopper fans attracted to these highland laddies originally.

Gouzenko Transcripts: Back to a forgotten age

By Michael McDevitt

The Gouzenko Transcripts: Robert Bothwell and J.L. Granatstein (eds.) Deneau Publishers and Company, 1982.

In September of 1945, a very frightened young cipher clerk from the Soviet embassy in Ottawa walked into the offices of the Department of External Affairs with a satchel full of stolen documents. The story 26-year-old Igor Gouzenko had to tell, and the documents he had to support it, set off the worst spy scandal in Canadian history (apologies to the wonderful work of Gerda Munzinger), and set the stage for the paranoia of the Cold War that was to come.

In this cynical age of ours, it might be difficult for us to understand how the revelation of a Soviet spy ring in Canada, would surprise anyone. But in order to appreciate the shock waves that coursed through the western world at Gouzenko's revelations, we must remember the context in which the story unfolds. In September 1945, Canada, Great Britain and The United States, hand in hand with the Soviet Union, had only just finished fighting a long and tortuous world war against Nazi Germany and Imperial Japan.

Only a few short weeks before, the United States Air Force had rocked the world with the nuclear attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and had with two bombs had knocked Japan, whose armies still numbered millions of fanatical soldiers, out of the global great conflict. The world heaved a collective sigh of relief, and prepared to enjoy the long and fruitful peace which all believed must follow such a horrible war.

Suddenly, with the revelations of one man, the Soviet Union, whose heroic resistance to the Nazi war machine had enabled its allies to build up the vast supplies of men and machines needed to end the German occupation of Europe, had changed from a stalwart and noble friend to a treacherous and nefarious foe.

The impetus behind this, of course, was the atomic bomb. Developed by American, British, Canadian and German ex-patriot scientists, the bomb was the most closely guarded military secret in the world, and the Soviet Union had been left out.

Stalin, never the most trusting of souls, was aware that the deep ideological and strategic differences that separated his country from his allies, and realized that eventually conflict would develop between his country and the only other superpower that emerged from the second world war, the United States. He was also frighteningly aware of the disadvantageous position a Western monopoly on nuclear weaponry would place him in. He set out to do something about it.

Once the shock of the treachery of our supposed ally was absorbed, Canadian authorities had to deal with the disturbing knowledge of the depth to which Stalin's intelligence network had been able to penetrate. Gouzenko had implicated many high-level members of the Canadian scientific, military and political establishment, and had named a Montreal member of Parliament, Fred Rose, as one of the principals of the spy network.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King set up a Royal Commission of Inquiry, headed by two Supreme Court Justices, to investigate Gouzenko's charges, and The Gouzenko Transcripts is the carefully-edited testimony of the key witnesses before the Commission.

This book will be primarily of interest to historians, as a source book for material already well-known, but it manages still to convey the incredible naivete, as well as the admirable idealism, of many of the people implicated in the affair.

People who were neither fools nor traitors had knowingly revealed top secret information in the spirit of propaganda dished out during the recent war. Soviet Russia was an ally, and Communism an ideal dedicated to the promotion of peace and progress for all mankind. Few of the people involved were active in politics and the majority were not even convinced socialists. But they believed in the concepts of peace, and felt that the Soviets, as friends, deserved to share in the atomic secret, as they had shared in the suffering of the war.

It is this that makes the transcripts valuable to the average reader. The absolute sincerity of the people who gave away military secrets in the belief that what they were doing was right brings us back to an idealistic age which we have long forgotten.

The moral of the book, if there is one, is that the people who eagerly committed the heinous crime of treason, did so in the firm belief that it was for the benefit of mankind. For this ideal, they helped give Stalin the bomb.

Paintings turn into book for Georgeville artist-author

By Carla Straessle

GEORGEVILLE — With five books behind her, naturalist-artist-gardener-author Katherine MacKenzie recalls how she became an author-illustrator. "I drew enough for a book, then thought it would be nice to have a book, so I had it published."

It was undoubtedly not as simple as it seems in retrospect. In addition to the many intricate pen and ink drawings and water-color paintings, she also had to come up with a text to go along with them. So she wrote one.

The first of her series on wildflowers is entitled Wild flowers of Eastern Canada and was published in 1973 by Tundra Books. Her second, Wildflowers of the North Country, also published the same year, came about when there were leftover drawings intended for the first book. She combined these with new ones to create her second book.

Her next ones are about wildflowers of the South (76) and Mid-West (73) and her latest one about wildflowers of the Arctic is written and ready to be published in New York. This last one differs from the others including pictures of animals, photos, and descriptions of life on Devon Island where MacKenzie spent the summer of 1976 at the Arctic Institute camp.

Katherine MacKenzie... flowers grow in the garden and on paper.

MacKenzie grew up in Montreal and spent her summers at Murray Bay on the upper St. Lawrence River. She said her father was a great gardener and from him her interest in flowers grew. "It's a great place for wildflowers. Their colors are much more vivid, and the air is very clear. There's no comparison." She mentioned the climate there is very similar to that of Tibet and she has a friend who brings seeds back from there to cultivate in Murray Bay — successfully.

"At first I tried to press flowers, but I didn't like them. They were all dead and dried out. So I drew them," she explained. She remembers a wonderful art teacher she had as a student at The Studio in Montreal. "He really taught us to draw."

Katherine MacKenzie moved to Georgeville 11 years ago, having discovered it through a friend. She bought a small house on the Fitch-Bay road overlooking Lake Memphremagog. When she discovered it dates back to 1838, making it one of Georgeville's oldest, she became very interested in its history. She and her architect husband Philip, have restored it into what is now an interesting attractive house. Its large garden contains a wide assortment of vegetation. Katherine says a wind-wall they built this spring has completely changed the garden's climate. "We can grow things that aren't supposed to grow here, like wisteria."

Among the latest additions to the house is a glassed-in sun porch on the west side. It heats the house by drawing the heat of the sun that accumulates in the glass room through a pipe into the main house. It also keeps the wind out of the house, Katherine says. Their son, Philip junior, and friend have just completed a cathedral ceiling and window in the little bathroom upstairs.

Katherine founded the Georgeville Nature Society six years ago because, as she explained it, "I didn't have anybody to go on walks with. In this way I found out who was interested." Now over 100 families belong to the club. The Christmas bird count is the biggest thing they do, she said. Georgeville's claim to fame is that more people per capita take part in this Audubon Society-run annual bird count than anywhere else in North America.

The nature society provides local schools with various things such as cassette shows on different aspects of nature. "We even had a lab at one point. A biologist ran classes for children there." They also go on nature walks, and have a five-acre sanctuary behind the Inverurie Golf Course on Lloyd McTavish's land. She says this is ideal for birdwatching and many groups of school children come out to do just that. Bishop's University botany classes also visit.

Katherine said what she really does most when she's not drawing is weed the garden. She said she also does a lot of sewing and is making a baby's quilt at the moment which she described as "just so beautiful".

She has spent three winters in Majorca, Spain, where she did many drawings of its flowers and one winter studying botany at the Instituto Allende in San Miguel de Allende, Mexico. She said the course was excellent and they were taken all over Mexico on bus every week. "One of the guys who ran it has one of the best orchid collections in the world and a lot of them came from the Montreal Botanical gardens." She said she drew them all that winter and that they are among her favorite drawings. She was planning a book on Mexican flowers but was never able to go back to finish it.

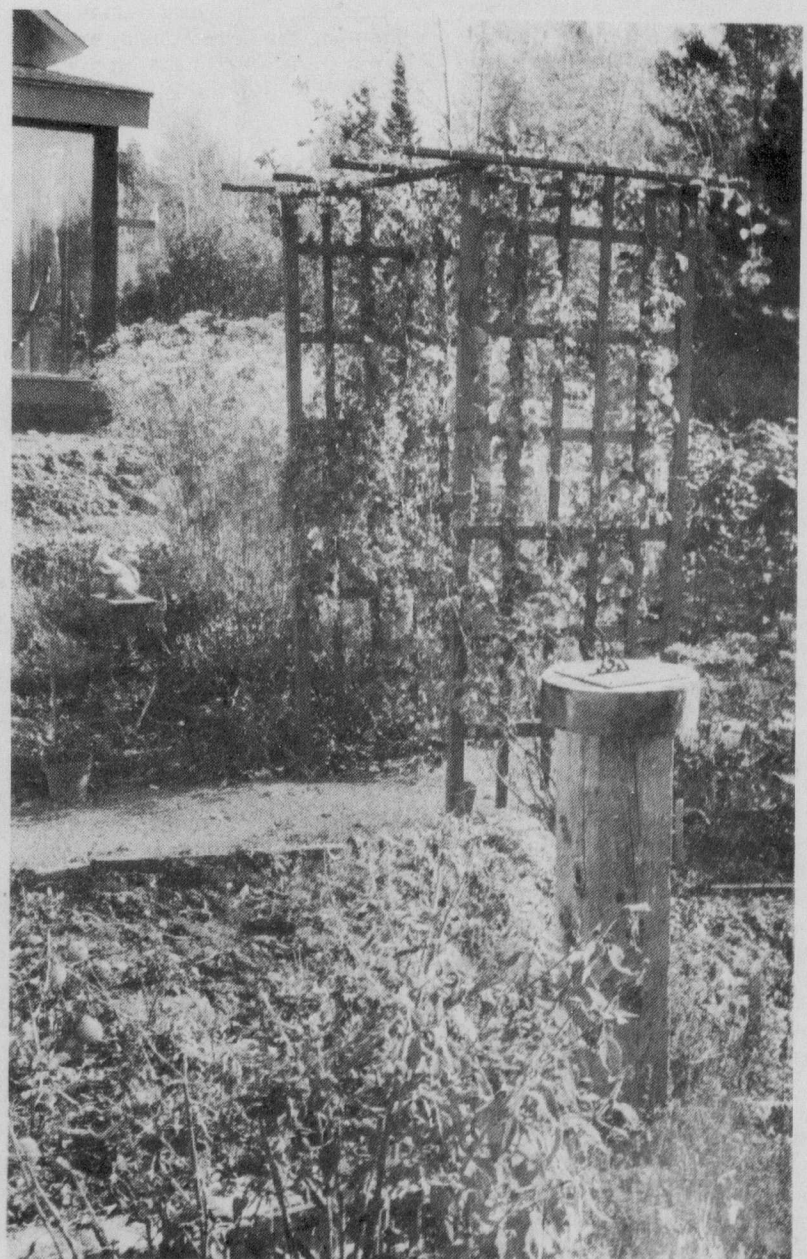

While there are many books on wildflowers in print, when Katherine's first ones came out, they were the only recent ones in pocket-book format. She said, "It could have been a coffee table book, but I thought it was nicer to be able to take it around with you."

Katherine sells her paintings from her home and at exhibits which she's had at such places as the Piggery Theatre and Emily LeBaron's Gallery in North Hatley.

Katherine has no other books planned at the moment, but admits she would like to do something on herbs eventually. This winter she will spend a few weeks on St. Barthelemy Island in the Caribbean, then visit a friend in the south of France around February, drawing pad never too far away.

MacKenzie's flower sketches have been reproduced in a series of paperbacks.

The artist's elaborate garden includes wood carvings done by her husband.

Music

Hallowe'en weekend, and there's a couple of parties going on. The first one is on Saturday night at the Manoir Waterville, and it will be featuring the music of STEEL MOUNTAIN. The admission is $2.50, and the proceeds go to the Waterville Men's Broomball team. If you don't know what they have to do with Hallowe'en, just take a look at some of those guys.

The other party this weekend with music is at l'Evidence and it features a group called KAMELEON. The band is made up of four musicians and a vocalist, and they apparently add a lot of theatre into their shows. They have a fairly extensive classical and background, but concentrate now on new wave and funk. The band is playing at l'Evidence until Sunday.

Next week, l'Evidence is presenting something a little different for this area, starting Wednesday night. Toru "Tiger" Okoshi and his group BAKU. Okoshi is a jazz trompeteer with a wide reputation, who has played on tour and on records with the likes of Gary Burton and Chick Corea.

His reputation is prodigious, and if he can live up to it, jazz fans are in for a good time. He'll be at the Hotel La Salle night club until Sunday, November 7.

On a slightly different note (absolutely no pun intended) famed operatic soprano Joan Patenaude-Yarnell will be performing at U de S's Salle Maurice O'Bready on Wednesday the 3rd. Patenaude-Yarnell has received rave reviews from such diverse places as New York and San Francisco, where she sang with both of those cities' opera companies, as well as Warsaw (Poland, not Ontario), where she became the first North American opera star ever to be invited back for a repeat performance. Presently on a tour of Eastern Canada, sponsored by the Canada Council, Patenaude-Yarnell provides a rare opportunity for Eastern Townshippers to view world-class operatic talent first-hand.

At the Cafe du Palais, the folk festival continues with IAN TAMBLYN, who will be performing Monday and Tuesday night. Tamblyn is from the purist school of folk music and his renditions will remind us of the glory days of folk and greats like Tom Paxton or Peter, Paul and Mary. Tickets are $1.50.

Finally, for something a little less formal, Jeff Coates will be doing his thing downstairs at the Golden Lion Pub on Monday evening. Coates has a clear and powerful voice that he controls masterfully. His repertoire includes folkish tunes and rock and roll, with just enough blues to fill in the gaps. The Lion features free live entertainment every Monday night and it's always worth checking it out if you feel like a quiet few drinks in the company of young English-speaking people. For the uninformed the Lion is situated at the lights in Lennoxville.

Exhibitions

This is the last weekend to get a glimpse of the exhibit by photographer GIL ROSS and painter DENIS PALMER at the Galerie Arts Lennoxville, at 192 Queen Street in Lennoxville.

BY
MCDEVITT

The photographs Ross displays are subtle yet full of color, depicting the intricate beauty that can be found in nature, and Palmer's paintings and sketches masterfully depict the haunting silence and loneliness of winter in Quebec forests. Certainly worth the trip, the show runs until Sunday, and the Galerie is open from noon until 5.

You have until Monday to check out the exhibition by KENT BENSON and MARIKA SZABO at the Bishop's-Champlain Art Gallery in the student union building on Bishop's Campus. Benson is a potter who is largely influenced by primitive African styles and techniques, but he is also part of the expressionist movement begun in the 60s, that has enabled pottery to greatly expand its horizons.

Szabo is an accomplished artist, who now concentrates on working with fine stained glass. Using lines as a structural tool, Szabo's work displays the remarkable subtlety of texture and color that can only be found in the finest antique glass.

Beginning on Thursday, November 4, the Bishop's-Champlain gallery is offering a display of Eskimo sculpture selected from the Theo Waddington Gallery in Montreal. The exhibit features 24 sculptures in soapstone, ivory and whalebone, and also has a few prints on hand.

The show is an illustrative example of some of the Eskimo myths and legends that have become part of the Arctic traditions. They portray the intimate relationship between the Eskimo people and the harsh rules of nature with which they have had to contend in order to survive. The vernissage is at 8 p.m. Thursday, and the exhibit is also open to the public from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Thursday, and from 6-10 p.m. Fridays. The show runs until November 15.

If you're in Montreal this week, you might wish to catch an exhibit at the McCord Museum at 690 Sherbrooke Street West which begins this Thursday. Entitled THE COVENANT CHAIN: INDIAN CEREMONIAL AND TRADE SILVER, it features over 300 pieces of aboriginal silver work. The exhibit displays pieces from over 23 different establishments all over North America and England and carries examples of the fine craftsmanship native Americans put into ornamental silver used for both ceremonial and trade purposes.

Being featured at the same time and in the same place, is another, related, exhibit called THE FOUR INDIAN KINGS. This features portraits of the Indian chiefs who visited the court of Queen Anne in 1710. They were commissioned by the Queen as a memorial of the visit, and they have not been displayed since 1977, when they went on exhibit at the Public Archives of Canada at the time of their acquisition by this country. This show will be running until January 2, and the museum is open Wednesdays through Sundays, from 11 a.m. until 5 in the evening.

The Sherbrooke Municipal Library is opening an exhibition of the works of painter SYLVIE COUTURE, beginning Tuesday November 2. The public is invited to the opening at 8 p.m. at the Salle Albert Gravel, 165 Banks.

Finally, at the CHUS medical centre the works of Magog painter SHARON CSERNAK will be on display starting tonight until November 10. Csernak is a remarkable landscape painter and her work displays a serenity and peace with nature that is vivid and refreshing. This exhibit will also appear at the Centre d'Exposition Point de Vue at the CEGEP de Sherbrooke from November 29 until December 10.

Theatre

This Tuesday night the Bishop's University-Champlain College Cultural Series presents THE SAN FRANCISCO MIME TROUPE in a whirlwind musical comedy entitled Last Tango in Huahuateno. No, my finger didn't get stuck in my typewriter, that's the title and from the sounds of it, it should be a pretty good time.

Written and composed by the Troupe's members, Last Tango... is a satirical attack on American foreign policy, and American politics in general. You see, the San Francisco Mime Troupe is a very political outfit, and is not shy about who knows it. Their politics are socialist, and they have chosen entertainment as a political medium.

Last Tango is the story of the mythical country of San Martin, somewhere in Latin America, and like its real-life counterparts it is in the midst of a deadly struggle between leftist popular guerrillas and a right-wing military junta, dedicating to keeping the wealth and power in the hands of the rich, and the peasants subjugated and properly cowed.

While one is never in doubt as to which side the cast is on, they present their firm convictions with humor and warmth. This is one show worth catching.

The show is presented at Centennial Theatre on Tuesday at 8:30. Tickets are a decidedly proletarian $8.

Sherbrooke's Theatre de la Pursuite replays the highly-successful fantasy musical-comedy LIT D'EAU at Vieux Clocher in Magog this Thursday through Saturday at 8:30.

Written by Sherbrooke's Patrick Quintal, Lit d'Eau follows a Monday in the life of a young couple who, rudely awakened by a radio alarm clock, decide they've had enough and stay in bed. From here on in dreams and reality mix. This play has had rave reviews from local critics, and might be worth seeing. It played to full houses in Magog during the summer. Tickets are $7.50.

On Sunday at the Salle Maurice O'Bready at the University of Sherbrooke Centre Culturel, THE GRAN FOLKLORICO DE MEXICO performs at 8:30 p.m. This troupe won first prize at the World Folklore Festival in Belgrade, and offers a glorious tribute to Mexican culture and tradition.

Movies

There's a war going on somewhere out there and I'm caught right in the middle of it. According to Professor Desmond McKeon, now retired and living in comfort at The Home, Steven Spielberg and Saad Gabr are in a life-and-death struggle to control the City of Sherbrooke. Gabr of course has all the money in the world except the forty cents I've got in my pocket, and Spielberg (with E.T.- THE EXTREMELY Tiny still playing the Capitol and POLTERGEIST taking over Cinema Carrefour) is trying to get it from him. It seems Gabr has all the earthly goods and Spielberg controls the unearthly ones. I think I'm losing my mind.

Opera star Joan Patenaude-Yarnell is at the Salle Maurice O'Bready Wednesday evening.

WHAT'S ON

Thoroughly in keeping with the Hallowe'en theme, The Bish-Champlain Film Society will be presenting FRIDAY THE 13TH on Sunday the 31st, at Centennial Theatre at 7 p.m.

This is one of those incredibly horrifying films that have been making a comeback in recent years and the action takes place at a summer camp. In this one, a bunch of fun-loving camp counsellors spend their time either engaging in teenage sex or getting brutally murdered. As far as horror films go, this one is highly successful in that it is likely to scare you senseless. If you like horror films, then go for it.

On Wednesday, same time same place, an Australian movie named MAD MAX is being shown. I know nothing about this movie at all other than it takes place in the aftermath of a nuclear war. It apparently is also the prelude to a movie called THE ROAD WARRIOR. If all this means anything to you, great. If not, sorry.

At the Cinema in Cowansville YOUNG DOCTORS IN LOVE is being shown next week. This is a wacky (take note—this may be the only time I ever use that word) comedy, that is really quite funny at times.

Radio

Tonight at 7:30 CBC Radio's Nightfall presents THE DENTIST, by Bill Gray. The new assistant at the dentist's office is friendly and helpful around the office, but things begin to turn sour when she begins to suspect that all is not as it seems. More horror follows.

At 9 tonight CBC Stereo's Arts National presents a program of classical music with a Hallowe'en theme performed by the Masterpiece Trio, which features such lovely titles as THE DEVIL'S TRILL SONATA, by Tartini, Schoenberg's TRANSFIGURED NIGHT, and THE GHOST (Piano Trio in D) by Beethoven. Classical spookiness—what will they think of next.

Tomorrow evening on Saturday Stereo Theatre, CBC Stereo presents BLOODFLOWERS by W.D. Valgardson. Leaving the city to teach on Black Island, a young British Columbian finds the residents of the place primitive and superstitious. He meets and falls in love with a young girl, but when he plans to return to the mainland to marry her, he discovers the people of Black Island have a less pleasant destiny planned for him. The program stars Guy Bannerman and Gillian Barber.

Rock and Roll Saturday Night features a special on BLONDIE, the first American new wave-punk band to gain respectability, at 12:08 on CBC Radio. Also featured is the second half of CLIFF RICHARD's concert.

On Sunday afternoon at 4:05 on CBC Radio, Sunday Matinee presents a double bill featuring comedies by Mavor Moore and Lorne Warr. In Moore's play, CATCH MY DEATH, an elderly Scot and an equally elderly Irishman make a bet on who has the most friends. Warr's piece, entitled THE PLOT centres around two gentlemen who meet at their wives' gravesite and get into an argument over which one of them purchased the plot between the two women.

Later, at 7:05 on CBC Stereo, Sunday Stereo Theatre, lawyer Edward L. Greenspan, examines one of his own criminal cases in a dramatization entitled ACCORDING TO HOYLE. A young man named Michael Hoyle shoots and kills a drug dealer in Toronto, and is charged with murder. Al Waxman and Alan Fawcett star.

On Monday evening at 8:05 on CBC Stereo, Ideas begins a series called MONEY, MARKETS AND HARD TIMES. This show will attempt to make us all feel better by telling us how bad things were in The Other Depression (the one from 1929-1939, not the one you had when the Expos blew it again). The first show will examine the economic causes, and effects of the Great Crash of 1929 that heralded the end of the roaring twenties and ushered in the dirty thirties. Later episodes will deal with the social and political aspects of those terrible years, a decade that makes this economic crisis look like a lot of people on vacation. Ideas will continue on the economic theme throughout November dealing with present day markets, inflation, etc. The show airs every week night at 8:05.

On Tuesday at 9 p.m. CBC Stereo will present a concert by the internationally-famed JULLIARD STRING QUARTET. The concert features selections by Schubert, Bocherini and Webern.

On Thursday night at 8:05 CBC Radio's Variety Tonight will begin a two-part profile of EARL 'FATHA' HINES, one of America's foremost jazz pianists. Hines has a unique, almost trumpet-like style that has endeared him to jazz audiences since the early '20s. He has played with such greats as Carol Dickenson and Louis Armstrong.

Television

If you're a Humphrey Bogart fan, PBS is offering the classic Bogie melodrama SIROCCO, tonight at 11:30. It isn't a great movie but you get to see Bogart romping around the deserts of Syria in the '20s.

Who says television is a childish medium? Tomorrow, beginning at 7:30 p.m., Channel 12 is presenting what has to be the cultural event of the decade: two, count 'em, two full-length feature movies in vivid 3-D. I don't know whose brilliant idea this is, but just thinking about it livens up a dull day at the office. All you have to do is run down to your local Provigo store and pick up some cheap 3-D viewers, and in the privacy of your own home you can relax and watch GORILLA AT LARGE, starring Cameron Mitchell and Anne Bancroft in a thriller about somebody framing a giant gorilla for murder. The ape gets angry and metes out his brand of justice, in three dimensions no less. Sound good? Well that ain't all. At 1:30, INFERNO starring Robert Ryan is being shown also in 3-D. Don't forget to have someone take pictures of everybody sitting around with those glasses on.

Also at 7:30, on PBS, the premier episode of A HITCH HIKER'S GUIDE TO THE GALAXY is being replayed. Not everyone likes this zaniness, but I do, so I'll take advantage of my position and recommend it.

Later, on PBS, the public network gets even with Ronald Reagan for cutting back on federal funding of public broadcasting by giving us a double-feature of his old movies. At 9, KNUTE ROCKNE-ALL AMERICAN is offered. This is the story of the legendary Notre Dame football coach, with Reagan playing the Gipper.

That's followed by HELLOCATS OF THE PACIFIC, a submarine warfare story set deep in Japanese waters in World War II. An added treat in this one is that it co-stars Nancy Davis, who later married Reagan. Good fun for masochists.

On Sunday at 2:30 in the afternoon, Channel 12 presents BATTLE OF THE PACIFIC, part of The War Years series. This show focuses on the dichotomy of Japanese society at the outbreak of the Pacific War; a medieval and traditional society with ancient and militant customs, armed to the teeth with modern and efficient weapons.

At 7:30, on CBC, SUPERSPECIAL features a concert by ABBA the unbelievably popular soft-rock band from Sweden. These guys sell more records world-wide than anybody else, to the extent that they are the largest corporation, profit-wise, in Sweden. Yup, they're bigger than Volvo.

At 8, on Channel 12, Robert Redford fans can catch him in BRUBAKER, about a reform-minded prison warden faced with the violence and hopelessness of the modern penal system.

And at 8:30 on Radio-Quebec, channel 24, a concert by GAROLOU, one of Quebec's most popular rock bands will be broadcast simultaneously with CIMO-FM. This band combines traditional Quebec sounds with a hard-driving rock beat and comes up with a wonderful melange.

On Monday at 9 p.m. THE MAGIC OF DANCE, hosted by Margot Fonteyn examines the whole new tradition in American ballet inspired by George Balanchine.

On Tuesday PBS's Mystery presents four dramatizations of G.K. Chesterton's famous FATHER BROWN mystery stories. In the first episode, Father Brown steps in to help a young girl accused of murdering her philanthropist father. The show airs at 9 p.m.

Following this is the first of a four-part musical celebration with tonight's episode paying tribute to singer-guitarist extraordinaire JOSE FELICIANO. What this fellow can't do on a guitar shouldn't be attempted.

At 9 on Wednesday evening, Jane Fonda hosts Stanley Kramer on FILM, a tribute to the great director of such films as High Noon, Guess Who's Coming to Dinner? and Inherit the Wind. It features interviews with Kramer and such stars as Mickey Rooney, Katherine Hepburn and Sidney Poitier.

Finally, on Thursday Patrick Watson's THE CHINESE looks at peasant life in China, and deals with a special social event in a rural family. Little Brother's Wedding shows a China full of rich color and character.

A march on City Hall shouldn't be the only time you get out for a walk.

The San Francisco Mime Troupe brings their political humor to the Centennial Theatre Tuesday.

NBA starts on ESPN; Sterling to Hawks

By Steve K. Walz

ESPN begins its National Basketball Association coverage this week on Sunday, Oct. 31. In the first game, the Detroit Pistons travel to the Market Square Arena in Indianapolis to take on the Indiana Pacers.

Later during the evening, the action will switch to the McNichols Arena in Denver where the Nuggets, led by Dan Issel will take on the Phoenix Suns and Alvan Adams.

LEARNING HOCKEY —

The USA Network's highly praised sports instructional series, "Scholastic Sports Academy," continues its helpful offerings this Saturday to youngsters who want to learn more about hockey.

Former Washington Caps coach Gary Green will have Buffalo Sabres goaltender Bob Sauve as his guest this week. He'll provide tips on how to thwart offensive rushes by using quick reflexes.

STERLING TO ATLANTA

— Veteran sportscaster John Sterling has jumped at Ted Turner's offer to become the TV-radio voice of the NBA Atlanta Hawks. Sterling, who is known for his excitable play-by-play style, has been the voice of the Washington Bullets and New Jersey Nets. He's also broadcast games for the NFL Baltimore Colts and the NHL New York Islanders.

SPORTING NOTES —

TBS will also air the Tulane vs. Mississippi college football contest on Saturday, Nov. 6 from Ole Miss. Former Los Angeles Rams punter Pat Studstill has moved into acting. He was most recently seen as a secondary character on a recent episode of CBS' "Magnum P.I."

SCOOPS — TV films about celebrities' lives always seem to draw huge ratings. So you can imagine the expectation at Warner Brothers-TV these days, now that they've purchased the rights to "Lana: The Lady, the Legend, the Truth," based on the story of controversial actress Lana Turner. Fans of the real Miss Turner, can, of course still catch her on "Falcon Crest."

MORE FLICKS — Former football great O.J. Simpson's TV career seems ready to hit paydirt. NBC is hopeful about the success of Simpson's "Cocaine and Blue Eyes" movie pilot, which will air shortly. O.J. stars as a San Francisco private eye who uncovers a major drug operation run by a prominent family.

Cindy Pickett co-stars as the mysterious "Golden Woman," while Candy Clark is cast as O.J.'s girlfriend... Suzanne Pleshette will headline as a madam who, after her third arrest, is sentenced to be rehabilitated at a convent in "Dixie," a CBS-TV movie that will shoot on location in New Orleans and Thibodaux, La.

TELENOTES — Knightline Productions, headed by Bill Froehlich and Mark Lisson are currently pitching several series ideas around Hollywood. CBS has asked them for a pilot episode of "Getting Dumped," a romantic comedy, and a show called "Our Girlfriend's Husbands." Other series in development include "Gateway General" and two dramatic series for Lorimar, "Times Like These" and "Partners"...

Cy Chermak is trying to get a series off the ground for NBC called "Delta County Patrol." The story, set near Sacramento, focuses on a detective who gets kicked downstairs, but who makes up for his demotion by whipping a patrol unit into shape... Andrew Stevens and Max Caulfield will be seen in a World War I drama called "Journey's End," which will be telecast on Showtime later this year. A young Lord Laurence Olivier starred in the original London production during the 1920s.

Recovering from strokes

How strokes occur, their damaging effects and how people can be helped to recover from them are examined in the first full-length documentary of "The Nature of Things" new season, Wednesday, Nov. 3 on CBC.

Actress Patricia Neal, who was incapacitated by a stroke several years ago and made a remarkable recovery, is the program's narrator.

The show focuses on six people ranging in age from 24 to 88 who have had different kinds of strokes and on the doctors, nurses and therapists who are treating them.

The stroke survivors are filmed at their homes and in treatment centers.

Talk, game shows deep in the heart of 'Texas'

By Connie Passalacqua

Daytime drama fans who are purists frequently forget that soap operas are not the only kind of programming offered up daily by the three TV networks. Both talk shows and game shows have their own legions of fans. This month, "Texas," the soap opera, has been attempting to incorporate elements of both other kinds of programs into its plotlines.

For the past few months, most of the action on Texas has begun to focus on the front and backstage doings at KVIK, a Houston TV station owned by Vicky Bellman (Elizabeth Allen). Hayseed ex-con Billy Joe Wright (John McCafferty) became an overnight star hosting his own talk show, "The Billy Joe Show."

Because he was such a hit, Vicky offered him a new show, "Texas Tall Tales," which would be a combination game and talk show. Billy Joe's nervous breakdown on screen was the perfect opportunity for KVIK's obnoxious and vicious gossip columnist Stella Stanton (played by real-life former talk show host Virginia Graham) to usurp his position soon afterward.

"Texas" taped nine segments of its "Texas Tall Tales" during one day in September into which are being spliced into its episodes during the entire month of October. Celebrity guests on the segments include Dick Cavett, Jayne Meadows, Kaye Ballard, Phyllis Diller, comedian Rip Taylor, former Herman's Hermit Peter Noone and Willard Scott, weatherman on NBC's "Today."

Elizabeth Allen

"Contestants," who were picked from the studio audience were, in reality, actors and their parts in the show were scripted by the show's writers. However, the segments featuring interviews with the celebrity guests were all improvised by them and Miss Graham. Miss Graham does admirable ad-libs with all the celebrities, but the highlight of the series is her interview with former talk-show host Dick Cavett.

After trading quips and insults for four minutes, Cavett asks Miss Graham "Where'd you get such a fast tongue?" Answers Miss Graham: "My mother nursed me until I was 12."

Teen heartthrob MICHAEL CORBETT (Warren Carter, SFT) is all smiles about SFT's new studio, and new dressing room facilities!

In the world of soaps life often imitates art or vice versa. Surely this is the case with Search For Tomorrow's Michael Corbett who plays Warren Carter on that serial. A glance at the storylines for SFT show Warren in deep trouble as a result of his mob connections and a plane crash. Unfortunately, Michael has had his share of problems in his off-screen life as well. It all started when Michael was returning home from a date and encountered two muggers. The thieves demanded his satchel but somehow Michael managed to fend them off. The rest of the evening Michael sat in a patrol car cruising the area for a glimpse of his assailants. The next morning Corbett's luck was no better as he had to spend the majority of the day at his bank, arguing about a $2,000 withdrawal from his account that he had not made. And, just to round out the week, he returned to his local precinct to file reports concerning his car which had been broken into. Hopefully, Michael has used up his share of bad luck for some time to come.

Part of the soap jinx seems to have rubbed off on Kathleen Cullen who plays Amanda on Guiding Light. Starting to skip down the studio stairs at the end of a taping session, she slipped down the last flight and bought herself a free ride to St. Vincent's emergency room, where, for five hours, doctors deliberated over the damage on her left ankle. Originally thought to be a fracture, Kathleen was relieved to learn she had only suffered a serious strain. By the way the happy ending to this story is that Kathleen was able to come to terms with the studio after her accident and has signed on for another year with the show.

Now a look at what's happening and what will happen on all afternoon dramas.

Erin's model role

By Peter Meade

When beginning a new movie, most cast members arrive just a few days before the filming starts. This was not the case for Erin Gray and "Born Beautiful," the NBC-TV movie airing Monday, Nov. 1. The film also stars Lori Singer ("Fame"), Ed Marinaro ("CHiPs") and Polly Bergen.

Miss Gray says she began preparation for her role as model Betsy Forrest more than two months before the filming began last year in New York City. Actually, Miss Gray had been preparing for the role since she was 14, when she won a modeling competition that started a successful 12-year modeling career.

"This was the first script I'd ever read that captured the feeling of the modeling world," she says. "The movie puts down the modeling world for the way it puts down women. At the same time it shows the good parts — what women can get out of modeling, such as making money and becoming independent. It's very much a women's movie."

The story, centering on the intertwined lives of two New York fashion models on opposite sides of success, was based on a book by Betsy Cameron, a former model and friend of Miss Gray.

Ask Kate

Goodbye, Gibb

By Kate Woods

Is there any chance that Andy Gibb will return as host of "Solid Gold"? Rex Smith is OK, but he can't replace Andy.

As far as you're concerned "Solid Gold" is going to be a bit tarnished for the rest of the season. There are no plans to bring Gibb back. He is now appearing in Philadelphia, in the Forrest Theater production of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," which opened recently.

LEADING QUESTION — Please tell me who the female lead was in the Gary Cooper version of "A Farewell to Arms." Also, where have I seen Eleanor Bron, who recently played Maggie Hartley on a "Rumpole" episode on PBS? Was she in "Two for the Road"?

Helen Hayes played the British nurse in the 1932 film adaptation of Hemingway's novel. As for British actress Eleanor Bron, she was indeed along for the ride with Audrey Hepburn and Albert Finney in "Two for the Road." You may also remember her in an early role opposite Leo McKern (Rumpole). Miss Bron was the femme fatale defector amid McKern's religious cult in the Beatles' second film, "Help!"

FUZZED UP — I have a bet on this one. Wasn't the movie "Fuzz" based on a TV series of about 20 years ago? I know there was a show with a detective married to a deaf-mute, such as the Burt Reynolds character in "Fuzz."

"Fuzz" was based on the characters created by writer Ed McBain in his series of police procedurals revolving around the 87th Precinct. The books were also the basis of a 1961-62 NBC series called "87th Precinct." Robert Lansing played Det. Steve Carella (played by Reynolds in the movie), while Gena Rowlands played his deaf wife, Teddy.

"Ask Kate" welcomes all questions pertaining to television and show business personalities, but because of the volume of mail involved, personal replies are not possible.

Dr. Donald Johanson, one of the world's foremost paleoanthropologists is the host of the PBS series, "Nature."

The series of 13 one-hour programs began Oct. 10, providing a pictorial and journalistic survey of the world's greatest ecological mysteries.

The programs explore both the contemporary and ancient worlds of Asia, Africa, North, South and Central America. Revealed are the simple beauty and the massive complexity of the natural world, and the fragile order and balance on which it is based.

Dr. Johanson is the author of the best-selling "Lucy: The Beginnings of Mankind," that chronicled his 1974 discovery of what was then believed to be man's oldest known ancestor.

"Historically, nature and wildlife films have been among the most popular and successful programs on public television," says George Page, executive producer of the series for WNET/thirteen. "Three years ago, we began exploring the possibility of producing our own nature series as a co-venture with the BBC Natural History Unit. 'Nature' is the culmination of that effort."

This week's program, "On the Edge of Paradise," is an exploration through a 300-mile-long archipelago of islands in the Caribbean, bounded by the Virgin Islands to the north and Trinidad to the south. This area is regarded as a vacation spot and its fragile natural beauty is currently being threatened by 20th-century industrialization.
