Christine Sixteen to rock KISS fans at Myrtle Beach

By Vanessa Lee

RECORD CORRESPONDENT

They weren't KISS fans a year ago... nor did they even know any of their songs.

Now, six Coaticook teenagers who formed Christine Sixteen have KISS fans around the world raving about their album...and they have been invited to perform at the grand opening of the world's first KISS Coffeehouse in Myrtle Beach, on June 27.

Legendary KISS band members Paul Stanley and Gene Simmons will be on hand to cut the ribbon at "the most outrageous coffee and dessert shop ever constructed."

"I'm really excited," laughed 17-year-old singer Jessika Groleau. "It's a dream... it cannot be true."

Patrice Beaudette is the driving force behind Christine Sixteen. He started collecting all of the KISS tributes he could find two years ago, and that gave him the idea to produce one himself.

"Obviously, I'm a longtime KISS fan. I now have 75 to 80 KISS tribute CDs," said Beaudette, who is the librarian at Coaticook's École Secondaire La Frontalière.

"The main goal of this project was to have fun, but also for the students to find out what it would be like to go to a real recording studio, to be interviewed by the media, the PR, the whole package. The real thing bands go through."

The audition process took place at the school.

Beaudette kept six of the most outstanding singers ranging in age from 13-17 years old: Dominic St-Laurent, Cassandra Goudreau, Groleau, Jessica Scalabrini, Josianne Veilleux, and Nicolas Maurais. They are joined by bassist David Bérubé, guitarist Pascal Madore and Francis Riendeau on drums.

"It was easier for us girls to learn the songs because our voices are more in the register of the singers of KISS," said Groleau. "But it has all come together very well."

Coaticook's Christine Sixteen will be playing with another KISS tribute band, KISS Army, in front of an anticipated crowd of 12-15 thousand people at the opening of the world's first KISS Coffeehouse in Myrtle Beach.

"I didn't know anything about KISS before because they're not from my generation, but when I heard the songs I was really surprised at how great they sound," said Goudreau. "I'm now a KISS fan and I'm really proud to be a part of this group. It's been a great experience."

But don't mistake any of the female singers for the girls wearing heavy-make-up on the CD cover: they're models.

"I picked four students of different ages whose faces resembled the original KISS members. I hired a professional make-up artist (who happens to be a former student of the school) to 'KISS' the girls. The process took eight hours," said Beaudette.

Christine Sixteen launched its CD in April, and 500 copies were snatched up in less than a week around the world.

"People from 20 countries including Holland, Germany, Finland, and Australia bought the CD," said Beaudette. "We're not planning on selling more though because it's a long process with royalties involved and what not. Our goal was to have fun and for the kids to learn something."

Cook to impress with the perfect potato salad

This is a big week for me. Normally a home cook who loves to feed friends and throw casual dinners, I am now preparing to try my hand at some professional cooking. I am introducing a menu of fun and simple dishes to be served at my in-laws' inn, Hovey Manor (at the pub, not in the formal dining room).

PANTRY

Unfussy stuff, that you can eat sitting on the porch, while sipping a beer. And starting today, for a few days I'm going to be cooking it all myself! So I've been testing away, here in my home kitchen, so I get the recipes just right.

One of the dishes I've put on the menu is a lovely cold fillet of lamb, very delicate and tender, which will be paired with a salad of potatoes, mint and peas (a classic combination). Potato salad might sound like a foolproof thing to make, but it isn't. I've eaten some that were a big white mess of mayo and half-mashed potatoes, and others that were either cloyingly sweet or had a bitter aftertaste from too much onion. Yuck!

So here's my own version of the perfect summer potato salad. What makes it special is the careful choice of a good olive oil and a good salt, and also the nice contrast between the soft potatoes and the plump little peas that explode in the mouth. As for the shallot, that small and mild French onion, it can be quite tricky to find in supermarkets. A regular red onion will do, as long as it is very finely chopped. You can tone down its kick by letting it sit in the vinaigrette for ten minutes before adding the other stuff.

POTATO SALAD WITH MINT AND PEAS

Ingredients (for 8 as a side dish):

1.5 kg boiling potatoes
3 cups frozen peas, thawed
1 cup loosely packed mint leaves (plucked off the stems)
1/2 cup red wine vinegar
2/3 cup extra-virgin olive oil
1 tbsp. Sel de Guérande or other high-end salt freshly-ground black pepper

2 tbsp. finely chopped shallot

Directions: Peel the potatoes and dice them into inch-wide cubes. Place them in a large pot, cover with cold water, add salt and cook for 25 minutes on high heat.

In the meantime, peel a small French shallot and finely dice it. Place 2 tablespoons of it in a bowl, add the oil, vinegar, salt and pepper and whisk.

Wash the mint leaves, pat dry with a paper towel and chop coarsely.

ALEX FORBES

Peas, a carefully chosen olive oil and a good salt add a bit of sophistication to an otherwise common sidedish.

Remove potatoes from heat, drain and run some cold water on them to stop the cooking process. Once they are cool to the touch, toss them in a large bowl with the peas, the mint and the vinaigrette.

How to be a real pop star

Make your own popcorn - it's better for you (cheaper, too!)

By Eric Akis

My teenaged son turned to me the other night and said: "Dad, you're a popcorn fiend!"

He's right, if the game's on or if I'm tuning into a Law and Order rerun I need to have a bowl of the puffed corn to nervously nibble on while wondering if my team is going to win or if the detectives will solve the case.

My craving for popcorn, although predictable, is spontaneous. Meaning that, on a commercial break I'll say, "I feel like some popcorn," and quickly jump up and make some.

To do that lickity split, I, like millions of others, make microwave popcorn. However, over the last while my taste for this snack has been spoiled because it seems that merchandisers are trying to attract my attention toward flavoured varieties of microwave popcorn. Plain, microwave popcorn, called "natural" by one company, can be a frustrating challenge to find in some stores.

Popcorn is a healthy snack and I don't want to mess that up by consuming a product that's been topped up with overly processed ingredients.

I became more convinced of that when opening up a package of butter-flavoured microwave popcorn, unpopped. The kernels were coated in a neon-yellow, shortening-like substance that didn't look like butter, unless, of course, the cow had been eating yellow food colouring before milking.

Curious, I slowly melted and drained away the substance coating the unpopped kernels (which did actually contain some butter, but it was the last ingredient listed after popping corn, hydrogenated soy bean oil, salt, flavour, artificial flavour and colour).

I wanted to see how many kernels were contained inside the 99 gram bag that cost $1.10 (when buying a three-bag box). There was a 1/3 cup and I ended up with about two tablespoons of melted fat/other ingredients. These findings in turn made me wonder what it would cost to not be so lazy and make my own popcorn.

A 907-gram bag of popcorn kernels cost me $2.99. That bag contained four cups; therefore a 1/3 cup cost 25 cents. The two tablespoons of vegetable oil I used to pop it and the salt I added for flavour cost about 10 cents. My saving was 75 cents, which could be lesser or greater depending on the cost of the popcorn kernels and microwave popcorn you're comparing it with.

Beyond the monetary gain, another bonus with making my own popcorn was that I was able to use vegetable oil that was very low in saturated fat and the dreaded trans fat found hydrogenated oils. It also only took a few minutes to make. This step-by-step method below will get you popping in no time.

HOMEMADE POPCORN

Set a wide, heavy-bottomed pot with a vented lid over medium heat. A vented lid will allow steam to escape and prevent that steam from getting trapped on the lid and falling back on to the popcorn, making it soggy. If you don't have a vented lid, set a regular lid very slightly off centre so the steam can escape, but not the popcorn. In either case, be mindful of the escaping steam, it can burn your skin.

Use a 3-part popcorn, 1-part oil ratio. For example, I heated 2 tablespoons of vegetable oil to pop a 1/3 cup (about 6 tablespoons) of kernels. When popping greater volumes, remember that the kernels should be in a single layer in the bottom of the pot or they won't pop properly. The oil should be hot, but not smoking hot or it will burn the popcorn. To test if the oil is hot enough, add a couple of corn kernels. When they pop the oil is ready and you can add the rest of the kernels and put on the lid.

Gently shake the pot until the popping begins to slow, and then remove from the heat and let the residual heat from the pot pop the last few kernels. Transfer the popcorn to a bowl and season with salt, if desired.

If you do like butter, drizzle a little warm, melted butter over top and serve.

First Nations Day celebration will highlight Abenaki culture

By Thomas Ledwell
SHERBROOKE

Ancient native traditions and music will come to life in Gould this weekend. The Oscar Dhu cultural centre, which opened its doors to the public last month, has a particular focus on the area's Scottish roots. This is the centre's first foray into other corners of the region's cultural history.

"I think it's important not only to celebrate the Scottish side, but the other sides," said Yves Migneron, spokesperson for the cultural centre, who himself has Scottish roots.

When the Scots arrived in the region, it was home to the Abenaki people. Two members of the native community - Yvon Mercier and Christian Nolet - will share their knowledge of traditional customs and music.

"A lot of Francophones have Abenaki blood. If you talk to Yvon Mercier and Christian Nolet, they have French Quebecois names but they're Abenaki."

Lingwick township has been a cultural intersection since Europeans arrived. Mercier, who will be offering a lecture and workshops about Abenaki culture, says there was a strong relationship between the cultures.

"I like to talk about the help that was given to the Scottish settlers in Gould and around the area. They were very helpful and welcoming. There was a brotherhood between the two nations. It was very beautiful," said Mercier, noting the Scots arrived with little more than the clothes on their back and may not have survived the harsh winters without the Abenaki.

Mercier embodies the contemporary relationship between different cultural groups.

"My French name is Yvon Mercier. It was given by a priest years and years ago. My real name is Manitouabeitch. It means guardian of the spirit or medicine man," he said.

Mercier is a modern day guardian of the Abenaki culture. This weekend, on First Nations Day, he will demonstrate how to build a wigwam, how to smoke fish and beaver, and will discuss native medicines. There will also be examples of native dancing and storytelling.

He will also be performing Abenaki music, which dates from the days well before Scottish and other settlers arrived in the region.

"My music is not with a guitar, it's with a drum with moose skin. I'm going to beat it like they used to do it twenty thousand years ago. I have old, old songs. People are very surprised, but I learned it from the elders. It's very interesting, and very traditional."

There are few native peoples in the region today, Mercier said, and there are not a lot of people who are keeping up the ancient traditions. He has taken on the task of teaching those traditions, in order to keep them alive.

"It's my duty to teach the tradition and the culture to people to make sure that it's not lost forever."

In spite of the challenge, Mercier said people in the region are interested in native culture and want to know more about the region's rich cultural background.

"It's a big challenge, but people are very open to that. They are seeking it now. They invite me everywhere to talk about it. People want to know."

At the Oscar Dhu cultural centre, Migneron is among those who want to explore the region's diverse cultural background. He thinks others in the

"I think it's important to get people in the area to get in touch with their own culture and the things that have been forgotten for a long time," said Migneron.

Local artist Julia Rohan adds ceramics to her repertoire

Busy local painter, writer, singer, guitarist and cellist Julia Rohan has recently added ceramics to her list of artistic endeavours.

This Tour des Arts artist, who is taking a break from the studio tour circuit this year, began taking courses in wheel-thrown pottery at the Visual Arts Centre in Montreal last fall under the tutelage of Quebec ceramist Renée Gagnon.

Previously best known for her acrylic paintings on wooden objects, Rohan has decided to shift her focus to paintings on canvas and functional pottery instead.

The new paintings to be exhibited during her Sutton show are almost uniquely land and 'skyscapes' inspired by the many different moods of the skies seen over the Knowlton-Sutton area. Works on sale will range from large canvases to small framed drawings.

Along with her new paintings, she will be offering several pieces of highly decorated wheel-thrown stoneware mugs, cups, and bowls, all of which reflect her love of colour and design.

The show will kick off with a vernissage on Canada Day, Saturday July 1, from 2 to 4 p.m. The artist will be on hand to answer questions and refreshments will be served.

Sherbrooke's popular Concerts de la Cité concert series returns this summer for its 19th edition (June 28-July 10). More than 75 free outdoor concerts will be held in three downtown sites — Place de la cité (behind the Sherbrooke courthouse), Esplanade Frontenac (corner of Wellington North and Frontenac) and Promenade du Lac-des-Nations (in Jacques Cartier Park, near the fountain). The series this year includes street theatre, art exhibits, and a variety of musical genres, including classical, jazz, choral and pop. The Sherbrooke Symphony Orchestra will close out the festival on Sept. 10 with a concert at Esplanade Frontenac. There will also be a variety of paid concerts at the Granada Theatre and the Café du Palais.

Art created by Sherbrooke painter David Martel made its way to Parliament in Ottawa this week. Following an invitation from the Cabinet of the Prime Minister of Canada, the artist, who specializes in ancestral rock art, presented one of his works to Prime Minister Stephen Harper. actually on the disc, featuring 16 tracks.

"It's not included on the album because the lyrics are too much on the sexual side," said Beaudette. "Essentially I needed a name for the project, and this one wasn't taken. I thought it represented school girls, despite the fact there are two guys in the band."

And now, the group will without a doubt have the experience of a lifetime in Myrtle Beach. Christine Sixteen will be playing with another KISS tribute band, KISS Army, in front of an anticipated crowd of 12,000 to 15,000 people.

"We have a fan in South Carolina whose name is Dan Sunblade. He's the one who called the manager of the KISS coffeehouse to get us invited there. I had nothing to do with it," said Beaudette.

"He's going to meet us at the airport. It's because of him we're going to be there. I never dreamed of calling to be invited."

And who knows what may follow? "It would be cool to have the kids singing back vocals on stage with the band, let's say," said Beaudette.

Groleau is ecstatic at the thought of meeting Gene Simmons or Paul Stanley.

"First, I will congratulate them because I think they're really big... and then I don't know what will come to my mouth. I think I would be silent and just watch him. I will be too excited and nervous and so happy," she said.

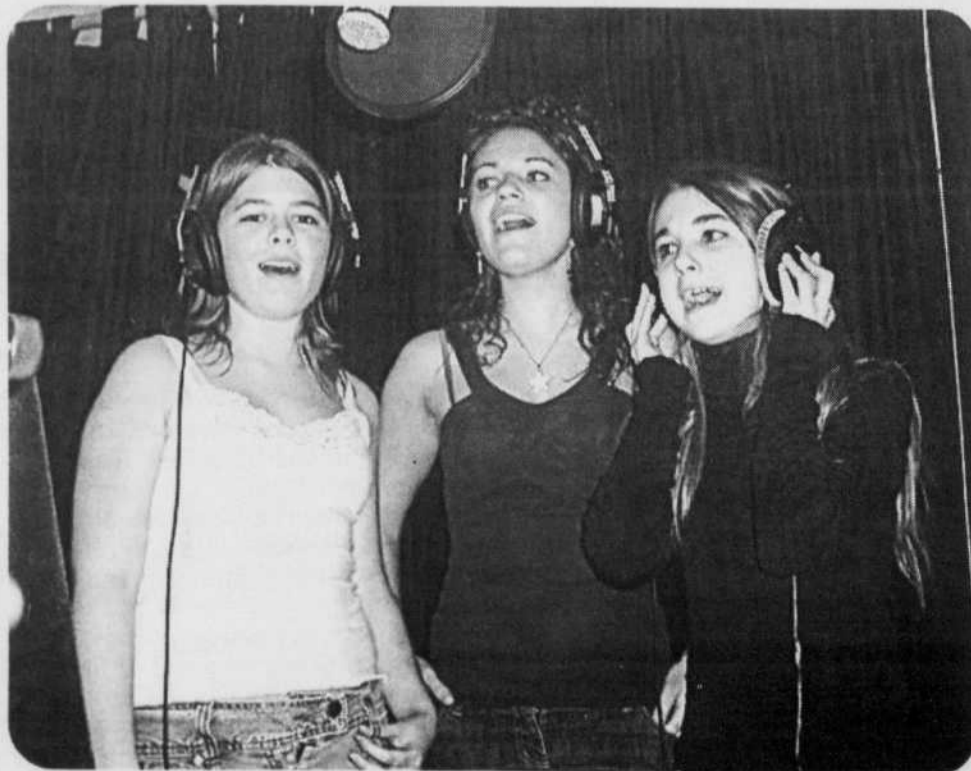

Goudreau added: "I can't wait to see what they're like, they're my new idols."

As for why Christine Sixteen is so popular.

"It's different... nobody has done this kind of thing before as students. We're so young," said Groleau. "And it helps that KISS has such a huge fan base."

And Beaudette is already looking ahead to future projects: "Next year will be a tribute to Metallica, and the year after that will be AC/DC," he says.

Johnny Reid returns to The Piggery

Music

By Nancy Nourse
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

It appears as if Johnny Reid has decided to make the Eastern Townships once of his annual stops during his Canadian tours. His fans and the management of The Piggery couldn't be happier with this decision. Johnny Reid will be gracing the stage in North Hatley on Thursday and Friday nights, June 15 and 16, bringing with him both old and new material.

Canadian audiences have greeted Reid with open arms as demonstrated by the standing ovations he received at numerous country festivals, on tour with Carolyn Dawn Johnson and, most recently, as opening act for Terri Clark and Brad Paisley. Reid is one performer that is never stricken with stage fright, and has been performing since the age of seven. When performing, he says he feels like just one of the gang.

Reid's music is not easy to pigeon-hole. His deep, raspy soulfulness, combined with an equally deep Scottish accent, provides a fitting background for the lyrics and melodies he composes from the heart.

He was nominated for 2005's CCMA Rising Star of the Year and received the 2005 CCMA Award for Independent Song of the Year (You Still Own Me), both of which affirm that he is definitely a young artist on the move, and a very talented songwriter as well. His latest single, "Time Flies," has soared its way to #5 on the CMT Chevy Top 20.

"I don't really view myself as a country singer. I'm a blue-eyed soul singer, and it just so happens that the lyrical content of my songs fit the country market. Lyrics are what made me fall in love with country in the first place," commented Reid, whose voice has been compared to that of Rod Stewart and John Mellencamp.

Reid was introduced to various genres of music at an early age. Growing up in a tough part of Glasgow, he was exposed to country music through his father, while his mother loved American soul. Reid began singing in local pubs at an early age and by the age of 14, he had begun to write his own songs.

Reid came to love the Eastern Townships when he was attending Bishop's University in Lennoxville. Not only did he love the area, but he also met the love of his life while at Bishop's. He began playing in local venues and soon had a large following. When Reid found out that he would be performing at The Piggery last year, the first thing he wanted to do was introduce the members of his band to some of the local sites and tastes, like poutine, a dish never heard of in Nashville.

The Friday evening performance will be dedicated to Jamie Coles, another Bishop's student and Lennoxville native, who lost her life in a tragic accident earlier this year. This sentimental gesture is typical of the Johnny Reid that the people of the Eastern Townships have come to know and love.

The Piggery performances begin at 8 p.m. For ticket reservations, please contact (819)842-2431.

Crime drama popularity keeps on soaring

By Stephen Hunt
BANFF, ALTA.

The question around the halls at Banff this week — where some of the top (television) criminal minds are talking shop — is not “Does crime pay?” but, “Will it still be paying by the time I get my crime show into production?”

At a seminar, crime-show writers such as Michael Kewley of Law and Order; Chris Haddock, the creator and executive producer of Da Vinci's Inquest; FOX senior vice-president Jeffrey Glaser, who oversaw development of Bones and 24; and Richard Lewis, a writer and director of CSI; don't really have to say anything. No one needs to hear bons mots from a guy who writes a hit crime show, because the proof lies in the numbers.

- 15 of the top 30 shows on U.S. television are crime dramas.
- Law and Order is returning for a 17th season. It is the longest-running drama on television.
- Law and Order dominates when it comes to exporting television shows around the world.
- Monk, Closer and The Shield are the top-rated shows on cable television.
- Da Vinci's Inquest has won the Genie for best Canadian drama four years in a row.
- In the May sweeps, FOX shot up to the No. 1 rated network, thanks in large part to airing new episodes of serial drama 24.
- Serialized crime dramas such as 24, Prison Break and The Sopranos are among the best-selling DVDs.
- The USA Network just ordered four original series. All of them are crime shows.

What's remarkable about the ongoing success of the crime show is that it comes in so many different flavours.

There's the narrative driven (Law and Order), the procedural, led by the CSI shows, the serials (24, Prison Break), which break down time, and follow their own strict narrative logic, and finally, the character-driven show, such as Monk or Da Vinci's Inquest, where it's all about the people involved, rather than the crime-fighting process.

The character-driven show is dead, you say? Consider that the next great character-driven crime drama may be The Black Donnellys, created by the Oscar-winning director of Crash, Paul Haggis.

Haggis is at Banff, telling the best Hollywood stories around. After a cigarette break, he responds to a question about whether TV lets you delve more deeply into your characters than film.

“Sure,” he says. “You get to mess with your characters, which I love to do. I love twisting and turning my characters, just like in Crash and EZ Streets. You certainly have more time to explore it (character), but at the same time, there are shows that don't do character at all, and they're incredibly successful and very good. Shows like Law and Order.”

Why doesn't Haggis write one of those?

“I don't know how to write that,” he says. “I like to watch it. I love them.”

The Black Donnellys, Haggis describes as being set in a “fictional West Side (of Manhattan) neighbourhood. It's a group of young Black Irish toughs É car thieves, a drug addict — those are my protagonists — and a murderer. And people seem to like it.”

The crime drama has found a way to expand its universe inside the prison walls, on Paul Scheuring's Prison Break. Scheuring has expanded the genre by humanizing his criminals, which is a big step up for criminals on television.

The result is to transform the black and white of the crime show into something a little more grey.

“I think the audience is becoming more savvy,” Scheuring said. “We're building up decades and decades and decades worth of television — people want more complexity in television shows.”

CSI's Lewis, from Toronto, started out as an aspiring pro tennis player on the European satellite circuit before breaking into TV working on CBC's North of 60. He reflects on what attracts viewers to crime shows, even ones such as CSI which rely more on solving a puzzle

“We (the viewer) like to fill in the gaps for the characters,” he says. “We are storytellers unto ourselves ... we need to tell stories, and we fill in the gap.”

“There are character aspects (on CSI). They're so quirky and interesting, and why? Because they're doing a quirky and interesting thing — but mostly, the shows are about the mystery. Solving mysteries.”

On the other hand, there is safety and comfort in watching attractive actors deal with the messy uncertainty of life.

“We want to see these things, but we don't want to deal with them personally,” Lewis says. “Death is a lot more palatable if it's sexy.”

Chris Haddock had huge success with Da Vinci's Inquest, a talky, character-driven crime drama that features characters brimming with personal quirks. Haddock, who looks like a Salt Spring Island pot dealer from 1969, still believes in the universal power of telling and listening to stories.

“Anecdotes make the best dramas,” he says. “People want their stories every day. TV has supplanted pub gossip. It's how we talk to each other now.”

Or, to put it plainly, as Michael Kewley of Law and Order says, “Crime dramas deal with basic human nature. The action-suspense-mystery narrative contain all the basic storytelling elements. And the motives deal with things like revenge and passion. Something everyone can relate to.”

Still, the question lingers. Why crime, almost all the time?

“Crime programming can scare you, and give you the comfort of resolution, all within a week,” Haddock adds. “Law and Order will talk about what's going on in society via a TV show. You sit home watching Law and Order, knowing 30 million others are, too.”

On Sunday, Father's Day, it's his turn to get his due. While buying a book for the guy that gave you life (or at least had a 50 per cent hand in it) may seem a tad uninspired, there are a few fun, informative and goofy books to tell him that he's No. 1 in your books.

Daddy Needs a Drink: An Irreverent Look at Parenting From a Dad Who Truly Loves His Kids — Even When They're Driving Him Nuts, by Robert Wilder, Delacorte Press, 2006, 273 pages, $30

Perfect for: A modern dad who doesn't take himself or his place in the family too seriously.

What's inside: This collection of short stories delves into the sometimes absurd world of raising children and parenting for the clueless. Sharply written, the author doesn't shy away from the embarrassing, often cringe-inducing tales that many parents are sure to relate to. Wilder's laugh-out-loud stories from the trenches are purely for comic relief and not to help readers become better parents, although a sense of humour does help.

How it works: Read the book. Laugh at the hijinx. Know you're not the only parent who wants to drive nails into your eyes on occasion.

What works: If you're a dad (or mom) in need of some serious laughs and a little escape from your own escapades in parenting, this book is your ticket to another world. The author possesses a colourful and witty turn of phrase, an interesting take on raising children and can find the absurdity of child-rearing in almost every situation.

What doesn't work: Who really has time to read a book about the nuttiness of parenting when you are smack dab in the middle of your own insanity? If you are a bit straighter than the average person, tales about overhearing the neighbours sexcapades on a baby monitor, playmates laying turds on a backyard slide, or transforming the family car into a chalkboard, it might not be your thing.

Be the Coolest Dad on the Block: All the Tricks, Games, Puzzles, and Jokes You Need to Impress Your Kids and Keep Them Entertained for Years to Come, by Simon Rose and Steve Caplin, Broadway Books, 2005, $15.95

Perfect for: An earnest dad who needs a little work on his material.

What's inside: If you've ever heard your kids say "I'm bored" or "How much farther?" this is the book for you. Filled with factoids, hand tricks and puzzles, this isn't serious reading yet there's plenty of weight to the information on offer. Inside you'll learn how to burp the alphabet, make a pigeon noise with your hands and act out the mime-on-an-escalator trick. You'll also be able to stun the height-challenged with your wisdom on the speed of light, astronomy, what causes rainbows, thunderstorms and lightning, among other not-easy-to-answer kiddie queries.

How it works: Pick one of 12 themed chapters and let the games begin. This book is a goof's guide to entertaining the kids with tricks, puzzles, world facts and answers to burning questions such as how much does the earth weigh and where do babies come from.

What works: This goofy guide goes beyond gross-out finger tricks with serious sections on world facts, science, identifying leaves and animals in nature, among other useful information to amaze the small fry. A section for entertaining the kindergarten and younger set is especially helpful. A handy index at the back helps clueless dads find a trick or puzzle in a hurry.

What doesn't work: This is not a book for the serious-minded, so if you're at all hung up on looking like a goofball in front of the wee ones, take a pass. That said, couldn't we all be a bit more silly now and again?

Overall rating: four out of five

Koontz delivers stunningly disturbing thriller

By Mike Gillespie

Most people live in denial of death's patient courtship until, usually late in life and deep in sickness, they become aware of him — sitting bedside.

The inevitability of death had never really struck Mitch Rafferty, the 27-year-old star of the California author's latest thriller until, suddenly, three weeks short of his 28th birthday, his cellphone rings.

It's Rafferty's young wife, Holly. She brings bad news to the landscape gardener as he sits in the flower beds of a stately southern California home.

In The Husband (Bantam; $36), as he connects with Holly, she screams, setting the stage for a hair-raising ride from master storyteller Koontz. It's a trip into the minds of an honour roll of sick characters involved both in the kidnapping and attempted rescue of Holly.

Koontz's success as a novelist (17 million copies of his books are sold worldwide each year) can be attributed to the "grotesque psychological world" he invites readers into, one New Orleans newspaper surmised last year, while Rolling Stone simply attributes it to the fact he's America's most popular suspense novelist. Suffice it to say, he knows where he's coming from when exploring cranial expanses to deliver stunningly disturbing novels.

Koontz sets up his story as if just another kidnapping case. There's the usual unattainable ransom ($2 million), the usual phone calls ("We have your wife"), the usual threats ("call police and we start cutting her into pieces"), and the usual deadlines (60 hours). But at this point the standards go awry.

Mitch is given examples of the kidnappers' resolve: a dog-walker across the street is delivered to the sidewalk with a shot to the head; his home is rigged to look as if he, in fact, killed his wife; his every move, no matter where he goes, is monitored.

It's only when Koontz begins dropping clues about Mitch Rafferty's past — the hideous upbringing he and his siblings endured at the hands of psychologically depraved parents — that a sense of where the author is taking you materializes. And it isn't a pretty place.

Don't for a second be taken in by his older brother Anson's "I love you, bro" assurances when Mitch goes to him for help. The two link up and call in a favour from a former FBI'er the older sibling knows. Only then does the backstory come out. The kidnapping is being directed against business entrepreneur Anson, not Mitch, but using Mitch's wife as bait.

THREE DAYS GRACE

One-X
Jive

One-X is the follow-up to Three Days Grace's 2003 self-titled debut, produced after a two-year hiatus during which the band has been touring. Featuring the radio hit 'Animal I Have Become,' One-X is bound to be a favourite with those who didn't think 'Just Like You' was grossly overplayed on rock stations country-wide. Raw, loud, and raucous, One-X is a solid album despite not really going anywhere different from the band's first.

Emma Cook
Manifesto

Emmazing Records

Manifesto is Torontonian Emma her own label, Emmazing Records. Her

Cook's debut album, and not only did she write all 14 tracks, but she also co-produced the album and released it under business savvy and talent combined (she received formal vocal training at a young age), makes it likely that Cook will become a prominent figure in the Canadian folk-rock scene. That being said, she still has a ways to go. One has the sense that Cook hasn't yet found an original voice, unique to her, and Manifesto is altogether too bland an offering.

BUSTA RHYMES

The Big Bang
Aftermath

A move from J Records to Dr. Dre's Aftermath imprint should have meant big things for rap veteran Busta Rhymes in 2006: a higher profile, more street cred, a better posse to run with. But after the cumbersome first effort in the deal, The Big Bang, it's clear even the good doctor makes mistakes on occasion. The Big Bang is expectation unfulfilled. Dr. Dre handles only four of the 15 tracks on the album. Dre did so at his own peril; by leaving the rest up to other producers many tracks fail to measure up, despite appearances from great rappers and singers such as Stevie Wonder, Q-Tip and Nas.

SONIC YOUTH

Rather Ripped
Geffen

It has been a while since Sonic Youth has created a masterpiece truly worth of such a title, but the New York band comes pretty close with Rather Ripped. Forget the eight-minute jams of recent Sonic Youth records, or the studio tinkering of unofficial fifth member Jim O'Rourke; Sonic Youth's first effort in six years without O'Rourke is quintessential guitar-rock from the band most often associated with the genre. For many fans, the highlight will be the re-emergence of bassist Kim Gordon, who hasn't sounded this tuneful — or interesting — in years. She steals hearts on five of the dozen tracks, giving Rather Ripped a charming alter ego to the atonal vocals of her husband, singer-guitarist Thurston Moore. Sonic Youth is less about vocals than guitars, mind you, and when Sonic Youth's newest drone-rock masterpiece cranks up the amplifiers, the result is a thing of raw, reverberating beauty.

MATTHEW SWEET

Girlfriend: Legacy Edition
Volcano/Legacy

Girlfriend doesn't sound any fresher in 2006 than it did in 1991, the year of its original release. That's not a bad thing. Matthew Sweet's star-making third album was always considered ahead of its time, and the rest of the music world is finally catching up to this power-pop gem. The revised Girlfriend does benefit from the Legacy label's treatment, which offers two full discs of material, including bonus tracks, home demos and rare live performances, tops among them a cover of Neil Young's 'Cortez Killer' that features Amy Ray of the Indigo Girls. 'Girlfriend' — with stellar work by guitarists Robert Quine (Richard Hell & the Voidoids) and Richard Lloyd (Television), who add just the right amount of taut aggression to Sweet's deceptively dark lyrics — is the true meat of the package, however. Listen to it again. This Girlfriend will haunt you — in a good way.

JIM BYRNES

House of Refuge
Black Hen Music

I thought it would be hard for Jim Byrnes to top his 2004 recording Fresh Horses, but you can never sell this guy short. The singer-songwriter populates his new disc, House of Refuge, with fellow Vancouver musicians, but has them play the music he grew up with in his Missouri youth — blues, gospel, and acoustic soul. Call it a successful border crossing. The opening track, the hand-clapping 'Didn't It Rain', has vocal trio The Sojourners (Ron Small, Marcus Mosely and Will Sanders) setting the tone with some sweet a cappella sounds before the band kicks in, Elliot Polsky's bass drum beating out the song's heartbeat. That gospel feel is recreated on a half-dozen tunes, one of the best being 'Today', a rootsy blues in the style of Keb 'Mo', where Steve Dawson, who produced the recording, lays out some great slide guitar.

VARIOUS ARTISTS

WWE: Wreckless Intent
Columbia

Wreckless Intent is the soundtrack to a wrestling match, Vince McMahon style. The album is packed with tracks that serve as preludes to a World Wrestling Entertainment ring match. The album brings together a variety of hard rock, heavy metal, and even has a few rap tracks thrown in. The WWE has long been reaching out of the ring and into the music industry with testosterone-pumped albums. It features bands including Saliva — whose 'I Walk Alone' is the anthem for Smackdown's Batista — and Motorhead — whose 'King of Kings' ushers Triple H into the stadium. The album is fast paced and energy charged, but the music isn't as entertaining.

DVD REVIEW

In Shopgirl, Ray Porter (Steve Martin) is a millionaire who knows exactly what he wants, and that includes Mirabelle Buttersfield (Claire Danes), a young woman working at the glove counter in Saks Fifth Avenue. Won over by what she considers romantic gestures, Mirabelle agrees to a relationship with the much older Ray, but one that is — unknown to her — based upon an unspoken mutual agreement.

Also featuring Jason Schwartzman as Jeremy, Mirabelle's much younger — and much more clueless — suitor, Shopgirl is adapted from Martin's novella of the same name. The film has been marketed as a romantic-comedy, but Shopgirl is simply more understated delicateness than cheap gags.

Nacho Libre gives Black's eyebrows some energetic calisthenics

By Jay Stone
MOVIE REVIEW

In an age of sequels and remakes, you have to give credit to the new Jack Black comedy Nacho Libre: it's the first movie this year about a friar who's a cook in a Mexican orphanage by day and a masked wrestler — a luchadore — by night.

He's also Jack Black pretty well full-time, with all that this entails, including goofy mugging, puckish expressions, and a pair of eyebrows that seems to have a life of their own and bracket almost everything he does with oversized quotation marks of irony.

Nacho Libre needs all the irony it can get. It's a surreal enterprise, a dislocated piece of slapstick that comes complete with fart jokes, a soundtrack that sounds as if it's being played by a Mexican klezmer band, and the otherworldly experience of hearing

Black do his entire role in a Spanish accent. In the production notes, Black says it's a tribute to Ricardo Montalban in The Wrath of Khan, but it reminds you more of Montalban in his car commercial days. You keep waiting for him to talk about upholstery of rich Corinthian leather.

That is to say, it's not very good, but at least it's original. It was directed by Jared Hess, whose Napoleon Dynamite had a similar, though far more accomplished, tone of being out of alignment with reality. Napoleon Dynamite created a nerd culture that had a familiar feel; Nacho Libre, on the other hand, appears to have been dropped from outer space.

Black plays Nacho, a half-Mexican, half-Scandinavian man who grows up in a Mexican monastery and cooks meals of something disgusting — refried beans, possibly — topped with nacho chips when he can get them. When Nacho sees a wealthy wrestler in town one day, he realizes that there's money to be made in so-called Lucha Libre fighting, and he could then buy better food for his orphans.

Nacho also hopes to impress Sister Encarnacion (Ana De La Reguera), the newly arrived nun, who looks like Penelope Cruz's younger, prettier sister and inspires Nacho to issue the following invitation: "I was wondering if you would like to visit me in my quarters this night for some toast." It's a line that captures the essential bizarreness of Nacho Libre, which creates a loony atmosphere and then finds its humour in making fun of that bizarreness, a closed loop that is more baffling than humorous but does inspire Black's eyebrows to some energetic calisthenics.

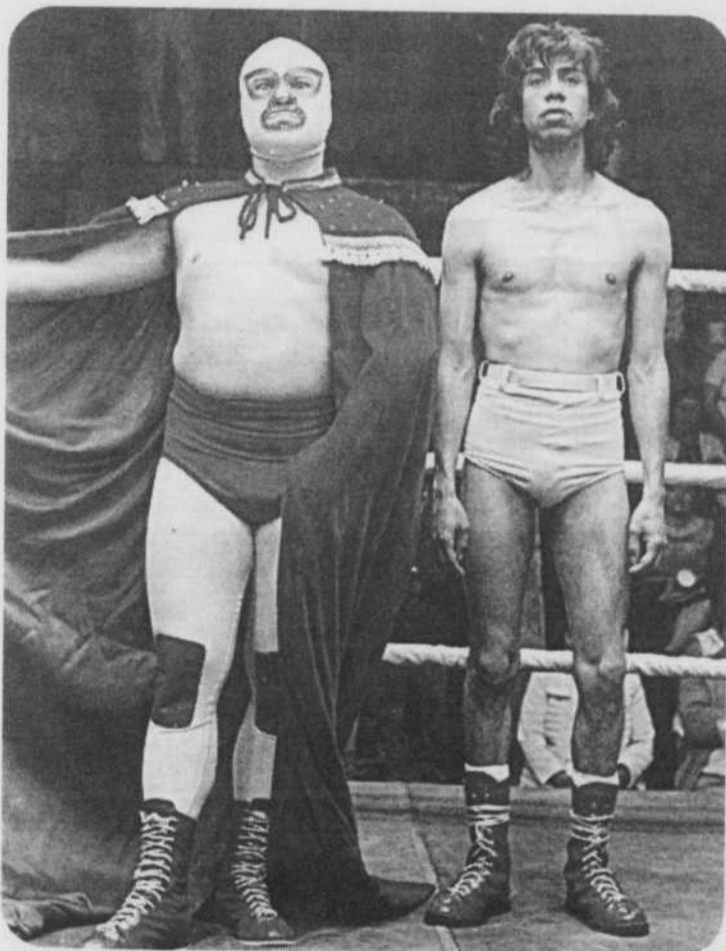

For his wrestling career, Nacho teams up with Esqueleto (Hector Jimenez), a street person who has the same open-mouthed goofiness as Napoleon Dynamite himself and makes you wonder if Hess was in fact making a sequel: Napoleon In Mexico, say. Together, they fight several matches, all of which feature Black in a mask — Mexican wrestlers keep their faces hidden, possibly so movies like this will look even odder than they do — and courageously baring a torso that is heroically flabby. This is also part of the joke, of course, and watching Nacho and Esqueleto being set upon by two wild midget wrestlers or seeing Nacho leap around the ring doing belly-shaking victory jetes, constitutes most of the fun of Nacho Libre.

It's an enthusiastic enterprise, and it comes with the esprit de corps of a bunch of kids putting on a play that they haven't quite written yet but figure will sort of write itself when the time comes. Many scenes — of Nacho climbing a cliff to get eagle eggs that will give him special powers, or disguising himself as a musician to crash a party, or getting beaten up in a street fight — have promising set-ups but no punch lines. It's as if the movie makers believe the very idea of Jack Black as a masked Mexican wrestler is so overwhelmingly amusing that you'll chuckle for an hour and a half at the poster.

Actually, the poster is pretty funny.

Dixie Chicks are back and better

Music

Three years after the controversy surrounding the Home tour, the Dixie Chicks are back with a new studio album titled, Taking the Long Way. This new collection is highly personal. The trio wrote or co-wrote all 14 cuts, enlisting the help of such writers as Sheryl Crow, Gary Louris, John Mayer, Mike Campbell, and Keb' Mo', laying out their lives and thoughts with deep honesty.

Their writing and songs reflect their justifiable anger at those who have rejected their completely non-political music due to a single comment by Natalie Maines. They also reflect a substantial songwriting ability we never knew they had.

The new album offers a countrified soft rock sound reminiscent of the 70's, but rest assured that the Dixie Chicks are still very recognizable with their unique energy as well as their unbeatable harmonies.

Now with the release of their fourth studio CD, Taking the Long Way, they are embarking on a new avenue of their careers. Their first three albums were musically driven by a lot of mandolins and fiddles while this one is much softer.

Actually, the Chicks have not totally abandoned their country roots, because it is part of who they are. Their country sound can still be heard throughout this entire collection, subtle but definitely present.

You can also hear some influences of the early music of The Eagles. There is a lot more acoustic guitar in this release than in their previous work. The Dixie Chicks' Natalie Maines, Martie Maguire, and Emily Robison deliver an incredible record destined to be a massive hit, one that will greatly please longtime fans and win over some new ones.

'The Long Way Around' kicks off the album with a beautiful melody and chorus, with some of their strongest vocal harmonies ever, set against a wonderful Tom Petty-like guitar sound. This opening strikes home and grabs your attention with the first track.

'Easy Silence' is a tender piano ballad with some beautiful violin and great vocal work by Natalie. 'Not Easy to Make Nice' delves into some tough lyrics — "they say time heals everything/but I'm still waiting" — but surrounds it in some unbelievably gentle strings and a great chorus.

It is very easy through their interpretation to feel the anger and the pain triggered by the event in London and experienced by these three awesome artists.

COUNTRY CONNECTION

'Everybody Knows' and 'Bitter End' are ballads with a feel of more traditional country, while 'Lullaby' is a six-minute track which offers a tribute to little ones. 'Lubbock or Leave It' is a banjo-driven track that will make you move on the dance floor, while the clever sarcastic lyrics make you listen closely. 'Silent House' and 'Favorite Year' are gentle ballads that would sound beautiful on the radio while driving cross-country. 'Voice Inside My Head' combines acoustic and a wonderful slide guitar with a endearing chorus ("everytime I'm feeling down, I wonder what would it be like with you around") creating a nice Sheryl Crow-type sound and one of the best songs on the album.

There's the up-tempo 'I Like It,' before it slows down again on the bluesy ballad 'Baby Hold On,' featuring John Mayer on the guitar. The album closes with the uplifting and soulful 'I Hope,' a number that marries gospel and R&B.

Passion and personal issues drive this record. For example, infertility and Alzheimer's are just some of the personal issues that the group musically grapples with. The trio, who all became mothers in the last years, love the comfort they find with their families, away from the spotlight. The songs 'Easy Silence,' 'Lullaby,' and 'Baby Hold On' are really personal numbers which reflect this.

Well-known producer Rick Rubin (Johnny Cash, Red Hot Chili Peppers), does a wonderful job on this album, highlighting the Dixie Chicks' musicianship and their ability to write a song.

It is focused and impressive as he manages to show us both the real women, shaken by the personal and public hardships of the past few years, but who are also strong and passionate girls who can assume who they are and what they did. Vocally the Dixie Chicks are as wonderful as always, but their musicianship is overwhelming.

For over an hour, the Dixie Chicks take you on an emotional journey worth sticking along for. With Taking the Long Way the Dixie Chicks deliver one of the best albums of the year and probably their finest to date. Love or hate their politics, these women are outstanding musicians.

STILL LIVES RESTORED BY CAROLINE GEORGE at North Hatley Library. Still lives restored is the title of the next art show, opening June 11 at the North Hatley Library. Caroline George says of her art: This series of paintings combines three of my favourite interests: Natural history, art restoration and painting. The subjects are shells, fossils and skeletons, collected over the years. They were accurately rendered with oils on a plastered and primed canvas. At that point they were obliterated by the application of more plaster. I then had an enormous amount of pleasure restoring, some-the horror and the action with Mitch, who recognizing that inevitability of death, goes on a tear to get his wife back. Trying to fathom who is betraying whom and why when dealing with such a mentally crippled family has its moments — lots of them. The only sanity seems to come from the determined detective investigating the shooting of the dog-walker at the beginning of the story.
