Says no progress in teachers' talks

QUEBEC (CP) — Joseph Leblanc, chief negotiator for an estimated 70,000 Quebec elementary and secondary school teachers, said Tuesday "there was no progress at all" in talks on a new contract.

Mr. Leblanc said he expected a decision today on whether to apply for conciliation in the dispute between the teachers and the provincial government and school boards.

He said evidence of an impasse Tuesday could lead to an immediate application for conciliation. This would leave the teachers free to strike within 60 days or by mid-October.

The talks are the first province-wide negotiations and involve an estimated 1,200 school boards as well as the 70,000 members of the Quebec Teachers' Corporation, the Provincial Association of Catholic Teachers and the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers.

The negotiators are trying to work the clauses of more than 800 contracts into a single collective agreement and the effort has led to a major battle over acquired rights of some of the unions.

Tuesday's brief negotiations did not deal with monetary clauses. Claims of the teachers to greater consultation and participation in decisions on such matters as textbooks were the main subject.

Mr. Leblanc said the employers are willing to grant the teachers the right to be consulted on matters such as textbooks but would not permit participation in decision-making.

If the employers would not make concessions on participation, "one can ask seriously whether they will budge on the question of working conditions on which the division between us is extreme."

The talks resumed Tuesday after being suspended to allow negotiators for Roman Catholic and Protestant public school teachers

New move over Galt monument

Wants to know gov't stand

A disturbed president of the Eastern Townships Historical Society said yesterday he will contact city hall to determine the context of a federal government letter warning Sherbrooke could lose funds previously set aside for the Alexander T. Galt monument.

The lid of a potential Pandora's box creaked slightly open at Monday's council meeting when it was disclosed a letter from the National and Historic Parks Branch of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development contained a velled threat to scrap the proposed monument.

The letter stated funds set aside for a monument of the will be used elsewhere if the city's Father of Confederation city doesn't soon decide where and when to erect it.

ET Historical Society President Leonidas Bachand said he would immediately contact City Clerk Henri Paul Emond to find out the details of the letter.

The president gave a strong indication the Society will send a letter to the federal department requiring a clearer stand as to the future of the proposed monument.

Mr. Bachand said the Society has had no correspondence from the federal department and added the last official contact was made last winter.

Vice-President Desmond McKeon also said he "was not aware of any correspondence from the department." The two men said they were still under the impression the monument would be constructed in the city's Mitchell Park.

Council decided Monday to study the situation. Mayor Armand Nadeau was unavailable for comment yesterday and Sherbrooke MP Paul Gervais is out of town until the end of the week.

The hassle over a monument dates back to last October when the Society in a letter to city hall labeled a federal government suggestion of a modern sculpture as being "a monument of fantasy smothering reality."

Mr. McKeon, who was one of the first to see a sketch of the modern work bluntly rejected it with the words, "It looks like a bunch of bananas."

City council has given form backing to the Society's stand that the monument be either a bronze or stone bust of Galt. Some sources believe that there would be a likeness of Galt in the base of the federal government-proposed sculpture.

The two Society officials yesterday remained adamant in their decision for a bust to be located in Mitchell Park.

The National and Historic Parks letter indicated that the question of erecting the monument in Mitchell Park has been suspended.

Mr. McKeon said "it is the responsibility of the department" to erect the monument and added that Sherbrooke has "lost something of historical value."

The vice-president was referring to the crumbling of the old Galt Home two years ago when attempts were made to have it moved.

The government apologized and said it was willing to cooperate with Sherbrooke in other ways to revere Galt's memory.

Despite the unyielding stand taken by the Society, a number of informed people have shown interest in the proposal for a modern sculpture designed by Montreal sculpturess Suzanne Guite.

Among the possible early backers of the modern sculpture is A. T. Galt Durnford, Galt's grandson and an architectural consultant to Bolton, Ellwood and Aimais of Montreal.

Nigeria launches big push

LAGOS (AP) — Two columns of Nigerian commandos were reported pushing north today toward the Biafran stronghold of Aba in what could be the start of an all-out offensive to crush the 13-month-old secession of eastern Nigeria's Ibo tribesmen.

Informed sources said at least two brigades of Nigeria's 3rd Marine Commando Division were advancing from the Port Harcourt sector toward Aba, the largest of the three towns still under secessionist control.

The military high command in Lagos refused to divulge details of the offensive, but a high-ranking officer said troops commanded by Col. Benjamin Adekunle were reported trying to cross the Imo River, 15 miles south of Aba. Another column was believed pushing across the river at the Imo railway station, about 22 miles from Aba.

Aba, which had a pre-war population of 131,000, has been command headquarters for the Biafran regime of Lt.-Col. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu since federal forces captured the secessionist capital, Enugu, last Oct. 5.

Radio Biafra reported that Umu Abayi, on the southern bank of the Imo River, has been under heavy mortar attack for the last three days. The broadcast said 35,000 civilians were fleeing and Biafran authorities were undertaking a massive civilian evacuation from the area

Fighting also was reported around Ikot Ekpene, a refugee centre 28 miles northeast of Aba.

Commanders of the three Nigerian divisions surrounding the core of Biafran-held territory met in Lagos today, presumably to plan a final offensive.

"We will be clearing our minds this morning," said one participant.

The new fighting was reported as peace talks resumed today in the Ethiopian capital Addis Ababa. Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie is presiding over the secret negotiations. Informants said the delegates would discuss the opening of a relief corridor to ship food and medicine to starving civilian war victims in blockaded Biafra.

The Nigerians' chief negotiator, Anthony Enahoro, returned from the Ethiopian capital Tuesday, saying the Biafrans' position "did not justify optimism."

Enahoro said the Biafrans had been offered openings to give up secession gracefully and to discuss amnesty for anyone, including the rebel leader Lt - Col. C. Odumegwu Ojukwu.

But he added: "I am afraid if the rebels do not utilize the openings we have created, even the emperor's efforts may be to no avail."

News in brief

Turns critics

STRATFORD, Ont. — (CP) — William Hutt's "happening" turned an audience and critics alike at Tuesday night's Stratford Festival premier of Samuel Beckett's Waiting for Godot.

Director Hutt had described his interpretation of the theatre of the absurd classic as "a happening" in which "the actors have to approach each moment as an entity to itself."

On the way

MONTREAL — (CP) — Postal service in Montreal was on its way to full recovery early today as regular drivers of the city's mail - transport trucks returned to their jobs.

About 40 drivers for Rod Service Ltd., which holds the federal contract for trucking mail in Montreal, voted unanimously Tuesday night for a settlement of their five-day strike.

The drivers had been demanding full payment for the 23-day period of Canada's nation-wide postal strike but settled Tuesday night for one week's pay for the period of the postal strike and a full week's pay for this week, when they were off the job Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Greater effort

OTTAWA — (CP) — Greater collaboration was pledged by hotel, resort, transportaiton and convention service companies Tuesday night in an effort to bring more international convention business to Canada.

Federal and provincial travel and publicity bureaus said they too will work more closely with municipal governments and the private companies in building up business for the tourist industry during its off-season.

Award damages

MONTREAL — (CP) — Damages of more than $50,000 were awarded Tuesday to the widow and son of a traffic accident victim who died when his car collided with a horse on a highway near here in May 1963.

Mr. Justice Francois Auclair of Quebec Superior Court awarded the damages against Theodore J. Backer of the Montreal suburb of Pointe Claire, owner of the horse, and George Jesty of Como, Que., on whose farm the animal was stabled.

Anglican bishops unbutton their formality

LONDON (CP) — Canadian and other visiting Anglican bishops at the 10th Lambeth conference find English bishops have unbuttoned their formality along with their gaiters.

"I've noticed a new openness about the English bishops at this conference," says Rt. Rev. George Luxton, Bishop of Huron. "We are so much more at ease with them. It's really warmed up international relations."

Bishop Luxton thinks dropping the formal dress of frock coat, knee-breeches and gaiters may have something to do with it.

"Getting rid of gaiters at once brings you down to the level of ordinary humanity," he says. "You don't profess to be a race apart."

No special directive on gaiters went out from Most Rev. Michael Ramsey, the Archbishop of Canterbury, host to the 460 bishops attending the month-long Lambeth conference. But Dr. Ramsey himself favors the purple cassock for dressy occasions.

While the conference, in private session again, debates the setting up of an Anglican consultative council that would include laity and lesser clergy as well as bishops, many bishops are divided about the value of the high-level Lambeth gathering, which is held every 10 years.

Rt. Rev. Edmund Sherrill, Bishop of Central Brazil, feels the conference cannot get the Anglican Church's message over to young people because no young people are represented.

Rt. Rev. Ernest S. Reed, Bishop of Ottawa, on the other hand believes "something quite worthwhile is happening this year," with bishops from all parts of the world taking an active part in the conference workings.

Bishop Reed, attending his second Lambeth gathering, said in an interview: "There have been times when we wondered if anything would come out of it, but there is a far greater awareness of the needs of the world than in 1958."

There are some youthful bishops at the Lambeth conference, but seen from the worm's eye view of the press gallery at Westminster's church house, the assembled leaders of Anglican Christendom present an array of predominantly white, grey and bald heads.

Some bishops appear to be nodding in their seats as a speaker unwinds a long argument. Speeches have been limited to seven minutes each and a bell rings sharply when time is up.

Bishops taking part in discussions are vastly outnumbered by consultants and observers from other churches, and Rt. Rev. Ralph S. Dean, Bishop of Cariboo who is the conference secretary, says he wishes the bishops would say more. Only a handful among the 37 Canadians have spoken from the floor to open sessions.

Britons tighten up

LONDON (CP) — Renewed emphasis on the "hard slog" has appeared here after a chilly wind that gusted through the seemingly resurgent British economy Tuesday.

The wind was generated by a government announcement that the country's chronic deficit on international trade rose to $208,000,000 for July compared with $130,000,000 for June.

Accounts of the figures broadcast in Britain emphasized record exports for the month.

But critics of Prime Minister Wilson's Labor government pointed at the even bigger jump in imports, which also achieved an all-time high.

Imports in July totalled $1,723,800,000—up $143,000,000. Exports and re-exports rose to $1,375,400,000, up $52,000,000.

MIRACLE PREDICTED

The prime minister, somewhat luckless with any optimistic forecasts he has made, had quoted a "view objectively expressed" as predicting an "economic miracle" for Britain.

The weeks before July's trade figures were announced had rung with more optimism about national economic prospects than any period since devaluation of the pound last November.

This euphoria now has given way to the kind of "hard slog" talk common in November.

The government was reported strengthened in its resolve to persist with its policy of limiting incomes, despite trade-union discontent, and with other forms of tight economic controls.

Optimism about car exports is tinged with apprehension over reported plans by North American car makers for countering the sales boom enjoyed on that continent by British and other foreign motor companies.

Detroit auto-makers are reported planning small-car production to compete with the imports.

There is also discontent over the way British trade officials are handling their help for firms trying to sell overseas.

A House of Commons committee said Tuesday it is "skeptical" about the value of British Weeks, such as the one held last year in Toronto.

The government says the upward thrust in imports resulted from, among other factors, postponement of shipments so that they would follow the July 1 lowering of British tariffs under the Kennedy Round agreements.

Young Sherbrooke motorcyclist is killed in triple collision

A young Sherbrooke motorcyclist was killed last night and two other persons were seriously injured in an accident which involved a motorcycle and two cars on Route 1, just a mile out of Weedon.

Killed was Rejean Jacques, 20, of 867 Larocque Street in Sherbrooke.

Injured in the triple collision were Rejean's passenger, Serge Du Tremble, of 101 Gagnon Street in Sherbrooke and Rejean Champoux, 24, of Stratford, driver of one of the cars.

The driver of the third car, Ronald Randall, 45, of New Jersey, was uninjured.

According to the accident report compiled by the QPP of Weedon, the collision occurred when the car driven by Rejean Champoux attempted to pass Mr. Randall's vehicle. In doing so, he struck the motorcycle ridden by Rejean Jacques which was headed in the opposite direction.

The impact hurled the motorcycle about 60 feet into a nearby ditch while the car was forced into a nearby field, about 250 feet away from the scene of the original impact.

The motorcyclist, who died in the ambulance which was taking him to Sherbrooke, lost an arm and a leg at the moment of the accident. His companion Serge Du Tremble underwent an amputation of the left leg late last night at the Hotel Dieu Hospital in Sherbrooke.

Mr. Champoux was hospitalized and treated for injuries to his eyes as a result of the shattering glass.

Tories say they aren't getting promised help

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative Opposition ended a two-day planning caucus here Tuesday with a charge that the government has delayed in providing it with promised staff and organization help.

"It seems very clear to our caucus that the government is dragging its feet in this regard," Opposition Leader Stanfield told a news conference after conclusion of the sessions.

The charge was immediately rejected by Donald S. Macdonald, new Privy Council president who is to initiate talks with the opposition on expanded staff and organization.

He said John B. Stewart, government adviser on reform of parliamentary procedures, has met Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin to get his views on the Opposition's requirements.

Mr. Macdonald said he himself has talked to David Lewis, the NDP House leader, on the same question and that either he or Dr. Stewart plans to get in touch with Creditiste Leader Caouette.

PARTISAN APPROACH

"I'm disappointed that he—Mr. Stanfield—seems to be taking a partisan approach to what I had hoped would be a non-partisan question," Mr. Macdonald said.

Dr. Stewart, political scientist and MP for Antigonish-Guysborough before his defeat in the June election, was recently hired by the government to help in a campaign to make Parliament more effective.

There will be a total of 188 presentations by 22 countries, including seven by Canada. J. A. McCordick, Canadian ambassador to Austria, heads the Canadian delegates.

Prime Minister Trudeau announced plans to get in touch with the opposition on its needs in a July 5 statement, when he announced his cabinet lineup.

Mr. Stanfield said the opposition just have better day-to-day research help if it is to stay on "something like an equal footing" with cabinet ministers, who had the full resources of the government to help them, along with personal staff.

The Opposition leader said he has 15 members on his own staff, including stenographic help, and had been turned down by the previous government in a bid for modest expansion.

But assistance was also needed for the party caucus as a whole and for committees of caucus.

Mr. Stanfield, who one day earlier had said that the government was running the country by press conference, added Tuesday that it seems to have become "secretive."

And he said there has been no reaction to his demand for Parliament to be called into session as early as possible to deal with pressing problems.

Twenty-five years ago Allied war leaders met at Quebec's Citadel to plan victory

QUEBEC (CP) — As the band struck up the Star-Spangled Banner, the prime ministers of Britain and Canada were caught getting out of their limousines. They froze awkwardly to attention.

FDR, who was handicapped by poliomyelitis and remained seated, put his panama hat to his chest. His dog Falla sat up respectfully.

Then the car of the United States president rolled forward to the Citadel residence entrance, followed by Churchill, striding purposefully, and Mackenzie King, self-consciously swinging an umbrella.

They disappeared into the building, and from that moment on Aug. 17, 1943—25 years ago—the Canadian public was shut almost completely out of a momentous and fascinating week of decisions that set the final strategy for defeat of Germany and Japan.

Quadrant, code name for the sixth wartime conference of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt, had found an ideal site in Quebec City.

SHIELDED BY FIGHTERS

The two leaders loved the isolated quiet of the Citadel. Their military chiefs and advisers, more than 500 of them, converted the nearby Chateau Frontenac into a military headquarters for detailed talks, forcing out all but a dozen invalid guests.

All was arranged and secure, even to a cover of fighter planes that droned constantly over the city.

On the basis of scanty information provided in daily press briefings reporters speculated —accurately, as it turned out —about the topics of debate:

The Allied invasion of France, new blows to the Japanese, new commanders for various operations, the Italian campaign, relations with Russia, the Canadian role, the new committee of Free French forces.

The public would have to wait on post-war diaries, memoirs and papers, but there was no doubt of the importance of this meeting between the two leaders and their chiefs of staff. One official said it was "one of the greatest gatherings of military experts ever held."

OPPORTUNE MOMENT

The time was ripe. Russia had seized the initiative on the German front in July. The Americans were on the offensive in the Pacific. The tide had turned against the German U-boats and word of the capture of Sicily—in a devastating 38-day campaign under command of Gen. Alexander (who later became Canada's Governor-General)— arrived during the conference.

Mackenzie King had been delighted when Roosevelt suggested in July that the meeting be held in Quebec.

"It will serve to link the whole past and present of Canada into the world history of today," he confided to his diary.

Mackenzie King worried about the appearance of being a host only, without status in the discussions. He took up separate residence from Churchill and Roosevelt in the commandant's quarters of the Citadel, but remained on the fringe of the conference.

Churchill and Roosevelt were nevertheless polite toward their host and the British leader wired his war cabinet after the conference that Mackenzie King and his government were "delighted and feel themselves thoroughly 'on the map.' "

TRIBUTE TO HOST

Mackenzie King's diary tells of a dinner with his guests, whose compliments left him "with a feeling of something very sacred and beautiful."

The British leader "went so far as to say that my service was one which would be recognized as a service to civilization itself," wrote King. He was disappointed there had been no one to record "the exact phrases used by Churchill and the president."

Lord Moran, Churchill's personal physician, said Mackenzie King was rather like a man who had lent his house for a party.

"The guests take hardly any notice of him, but just before leaving they remember he is their host and say pleasant things."

The Canadian prime minister may have taken a more objective view in later years. In a letter to Lord Moran he wrote that his task at Quebec "was similar to that of the general manager of the Chateau Frontenac."

J. W. Pickersgill, later a cabinet minister under Louis St. Laurent and Lester Pearson, was a speech-writer and adviser to Mackenzie King at the time of the conference.

COMMANDEERED TROUT

Mr. Pickersgill tells a story about the Citadel's commandant, a connoisseur who daily during the conference offered to cook Mackenzie King a meal of trout freshly caught from nearby lakes.

The prime minister regularly refused until one day when there was no trout on hand, and he asked to have some for breakfast. The commandant drove in desperation to the Chateau Frontenac, marched into the kitchen, and demanded trout.

The only trout on hand was being cooked for an American general. The commandant swept up the frying pan and vanished out the door with the prime minister's breakfast.

If Mackenzie King could be host only, he intended to do that well. Churchill thanked him for "princely hospitalities." Field Marshal Viscount Alanbrooke, chief of the Imperial General Staff and chairman of the joint chiefs' meetings, complained that lunches, dinners and cocktail parties were a "serious interruption of our work."

Churchill was, in fact, away from Britain more than a month and spent most of that time in Canada. He passed through Halifax Aug. 9, spent three preliminary days at the Citadel, joined Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N.Y., for another three days and returned to the Citadel two days before Roosevelt's arrival Aug. 17.

STALIN SENDS MESSAGE

They spent a week in conference and Churchill did not leave Canada until Aug. 31.

Churchill's war memoirs describe the meetings as "a series of technical staff conferences, the results of which were surveyed in two meetings between the president and myself and our service chiefs."

The official public statement after the conference emphasized military discussions of the war against Japan—an emphasis that helped explain the absence of Stalin, whose country was not at war with the Japanese.

The communique spoke of a possible meeting of British, American and Soviet foreign ministers. This was based on a message from Stalin received during the conference and greeted enthusiastically, according to one later report, as the beginning of the long-desired collaboration of the Big Three.

The chiefs of staff haggled exhaustively over the main problem of the conference—the projected Normandy invasion and its bearing on the campaigns in Italy and the Pacific.

INVASION DATE SET

For a day and a half the two sides fought over the problems of landing craft and divisional strength for Operation Overlord, the invasion of northern Europe.

Overlord's date was confirmed as May 1, 1944, or earlier, a target missed by a little more than a month. The two leaders settled on Eisenhower as commander, a switch from Lord Alanbrooke, but it was not clear whether Churchill or Roosevelt suggested the change.

The conference set up a Southeast Asia command under Lord Louis Mountbatten and agreed Japan's unconditional surrender should be won within 12 months of the defeat of Germany.

It drafted a four-power declaration on a post-war international organization—the other two powers to be Russia and China—and agreed to disagree on recognition of the French Committee of Liberation. Britain wanted recognition, the Americans some smaller gesture because of their distrust of Gen. de Gaulle.

TIME OUT TO FISH

Lord Alanbrooke wrote he was flat and depressed after battling "against difficulties, differences of opinion, stubbornness, stupidity, pettiness and pig-headedness." The strategy that emerged was not really best, he said. But with allies, compromises with all their evils became inevitable.

The Quebec conference had its diversions for everyone. More than 300 American, British and Canadian officers took an overnight boat ride down the St. Lawrence, up the Saguenay and back.

Churchill had his hat squashed in a triumphal ride through Quebec streets with Mackenzie King. Military and civilian advisers joined Churchill for several days of successful fishing at Lac des Neiges north of Quebec City after the conference.

This student had problems

Frank Jenne, recipient of a Rotary International Technical Training Award which will enable him to take one year of study in printing technology and teacher training at the Watford College of Technology in England, addressed members of the Sherbrooke Rotary Club at their weekly dinner meeting yesterday.

Mr. Jenne, who is an employee of the Sherbrooke Daily Record, told Rotarians of some of the problems he had come up against while making preparations for his year of study. Mr. Jenne will leave for England at the end of this month.

Accompanying Mr. Jenne to England will be his wife Lina and their three children. As the fellowship only provides for one, Mr. Jenne will be personally footing all the expenses, including rental rates and food.

Introduced as "good-will ambassador to England", Mr. Jenne plans to teach graphic art at the new regional school in Lennoxville as soon as he gets back next year.

Mr. Jenne then described the lengthy process of making arrangements for the year's study. Late last year, he wrote Watford College, asking for details of an appropriate course he could take and an application form.

The answer which came back was not too promising. The college, said the reply, offered no good one-year course and Mr. Jenne was prompted to try another nearby college.

When Mr. Jenne wrote back, stating that he was not working for a degree or diploma and that he would not be working while at study, Watford decided to accept him.

Then arose the problem of finding a place to live. Ken Marsden, president of the Watford Rotary Club, contacted the Sherbrooke club and insisted that it was very difficult to find good housing and that the endeavor would prove "very expensive".

Wrote back Mr. Jenne "I'll live in a tent or part of a castle, as long as I'm warm and have a roof over my head."

Finally, he received notice in early July of this year that a two - year - old, three - bedroom house had been found for him. Everything was now set.

Doug Stevenson, former Rotary president, before presenting Mr. Jenne and his wife with two gifts, urged him to "try and convey some better knowledge of how we live in this country" and, when he returns next year, to "tell us about the way they live".

He termed it a good step toward "international fellowship".

Orford features Swiss pianist

MOUNT ORFORD — The Swiss pianist Karl Engel is piano professor at the Orford JMC Centre for a nine-week period. A winner of the 1952 Queen Elizabeth of Belgium Competition, Mr Engel has since gained a world-wide reputation as a concert pianist, and also as a professor and chamber musician. He made several recordings with the singers Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau and Hermann Prey. He is actually teaching at the Hanover Conservatory in Switzerland.

His program this Saturday will consist of Six Sonatas by Scarlatti; the Sonata in B minor by Haydn; the Sonata in A major, opus 101 by Beethoven; and Kreisleriana, opus 16 by Schumann.

Pierre Mollet is head of the singing class at the Orford JMC Centre during the third period of courses beginning this week. During the year, he teaches at the Music Conservatory in Hanover, Switzerland.

At the World Festival of Expo 67, he performed in Le roi David, an oratorio by Honegger, and presented a solo recital. For his recital on Sunday at the Orford JMC Centre, Pierre Mollet will be accompanied by Swiss pianist Karl Engel, in a program of works by Bach (Sacred Songs and an Aria from the Cantata no. 110); Schubert (Lieder: Chant du cygne); Charbrier (Melodies); Faure (L'Horizon chimerique); Debussy (Promenoir des deux amants); Vellones (Cinq Epitaphes).

Rose Bampton and Wilfrid Pelletier will be guest lecturers next Tuesday and Thursday, in the series of public master classes presented in the Orford Concert Hall.

The American soprano Rose Bampton was soloist at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York from 1932 to 1950. She performed in several European countries, in North America, in South Africa where she toured in 1939. In 1937, she married the Canadian conductor and pianist Wilfrid Pelletier.

After studying in Europe, Montreal-born Pelletier settled in New York where he started as pianist and coach at the Metropolitan Opera House, later becoming one of the members of the permanent staff of conductors; he conducted nearly all the French productions at that institution.

He was also active in the foundation of the Montreal and Quebec Symphony orchestras and in 1942, was named director of the Music Conservatory of the Province of Quebec. He has also occupied the post of Music Director of the Department of Cultural Affairs of Quebec for several years.

The young Montreal cellist Helene Gagne will present a recital in the JMC Concert Hall next Wednesday, at 8:30 p.m. Miss Gagne has been studying with French cellist Guy Fallot at the Lausanne Conservatory in Switzerland for the past two years and was a student at the Orford JMC Centre this summer.

She will be accompanied by Swiss pianist Francoise Berkovitz. Her program will consist of Passacaille" by Lulli; the Sonata in C major, opus 102, number 1 by Beethoven; The third Suite in C major for unaccompanied cello by Bach; Fantasiestucke opus 73 by Schumann and the Sonata for cello and piano by Debussy.

LAKE STUKELY (Staff) — The Budget Committee of the Sherbrooke Regional Welfare Council met here August 6 to elect new officers and welcome new members.

The meeting was held at Camp Michel, an establishment run for young underprivileged girls from Sherbrooke families.

Raymond Martin CA, administrator of Martin Motor Sales, was re-elected committee president for a second term.

Mr. Martin's re-election was seconded by Claude Metras, committee vice-president; Miss Jeannette Hugo, secretary for lawyers Gervais, Langlais and Monty, and by Roland Moisan, president of the Sherbrooke work Confederation.

New members named at the meetings are: Nil Allaire, CA, of Belanger, Saint-Jacques, Sirois, Comtois and Cie; Raymond Drouin, a Sherbrooke lawyer; Gilles Girard, an engineer at Combustion Engineering Superheater Ltd; Romuland Voyer, T.S.P., director of the medical-psychological clinic, and Miss Henriette Poulin, CNTU secretary.

Mr. Martin praised the devoted work of the following members whose terms of office have finished: Mrs. Laval Thibodeau, Real Bernier, Jean-Marie Beaudoin, Gilles Blais and Gerald Gosselin.

A work committee was also formed at the meeting. The chief job of the members elected for a three year term will be to determine the allocation of different jobs to tie in with the charity campaign.

Finances will only be allocated to some 15 different projects after a thorough examination of the balance sheet coupled with recommendations of the budget committee to the administrative council of the Sherbrooke Regional Welfare Council.

Who is car owner?

DEAUVILLE— (Staff) —The car had apparently been deserted in the unused gravel pit and was burning up in the sunrise of a Tuesday morning. Deauville police were scratching their heads in bewilderment.

Such was the scene yesterday morning in Deauville. Police chief Fernand Cote, who was called to the scene a little after 8 p.m. still doesn't know who the car belongs to or the circumstances involved.

One more helpful little fact was dug up, however, as the flames sudsided. The car had the word 'police' painted over the door so indications are that it was once a Sherbrooke police car which had been repainted and sold.

Police are still looking for the owner.

City Chamber asks union, management to end Domtar strike

The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce has appealed to both the union and the management of the Domtar Pulp and Paper Ltd. to make "special efforts for early settlement of the strike in the best interests of all concerned".

In two telegrams sent on August 12 to Raymond Pinard and F. C. MacKenzie, managers of the Windsor and East Angus plants respectively, and to Florent Boisvert, president of the Central Council of the Confederation of National Trade Union the local C of C emphasized its deep concern about the economic impact of the present strike on the area.

The strike, which began July 18 when 1,000 mill workers from the Windsor and East Angus plants walked off their jobs, seems destined to last for an indefinite period of time unless representatvies from both union and management can reach some agreement.

Late last week, after two days of lengthy mediation talks in Quebec City, both sides had reached a stalemate.

Last Friday, the union had still not firmly decided even on what basis it would "be-willing to sit down and discuss" mutual matters.

The two sides have been tossing the ball back and forth about who should make the next move.

The Domtar company's latest, and apparently final, offer is an 18-cent-an-hour increase spread over two years while union representatives insist that a 45-cent per hour hike is as low as they would be ready to go.

Program needed on pollution consequences

Discussions held last week at Stanstead regarding the problem of water pollution, and particularly that of Lake Memphremagog show that what has up until now been a generally apathetic public in Quebec is beginning to show signs of arousing.

And this, in the long run, is the only way to stir governments to action. Actually, a concerted attack on water pollution in this area is long overdue. There has been considerable space given to the problems of Lake Memphremagog in the last few weeks, but in fact, there are many lakes in the Eastern Townships which are far worse off.

Little Lake Magog is the example nearest Sherbrooke that comes to mind. For all practical purposes, it has been hopelessly polluted for years.

The St. Francis and Magog Rivers are other examples, although far older ones.

It is longer that most people in Sherbrooke can remember since either waterway was not polluted. Yet, even though the pollution of the Magog River was common knowledge for years, Sherbrooke continued to draw its drinking water from this source long after the river had been condemned for this purpose.

This was no fault of the Sherbrooke council, which attempted on a number of occasions to have referendums passed to raise money to develop alternate supply sources. It was only a few years ago, after an extensive education campaign that council was able to pursuade citizens to vote in favor of the expenditure, and pass a loan bylaw to build a pipeline to Lake Memphremagog.

Perhaps there is a clue in this particular project which may indicate the best way of going about attacking the whole problem. Too many people in this province, as elsewhere, simply are not aware of the long-term costs and consequences of polluted waterways.

It is not enough to tell people that Lake Memphremagog, for example, is in danger of total pollution. What they should also be confronted with are the facts about what will happen if the pollution is not controlled and eventually eliminated.

What would be the consequences in Sherbrooke, for example, and in other communities that depend on Lake Memphremagog for water supplies? What would be the toll in depreciated property values, lose of tourism and other revenue factors in the area? What about disease possibilities?

This is the kind of education program, coupled with meaningful legislation properly enforced, that government agencies should be formulating.

Private associations and individuals in the ET area are beginning to make the kind of clamor for action that should result in the right kind of government programs. Those who are in the forefront of the present campaign are to be congratulated. But they need and deserve the active support of everyone concerned with the future of this area and this province.

An open mouth can be the hallmark of a closed mind.

Spreading a gay spirit

Maybe there should be a motto — "A Boy Scout Troop that travels together stays together," or something like it.

Because there is nothing quite like a group of boys travelling a distance together for cementing friendships and building an enduring group spirit.

The boys of the 7th Sherbrooke Scout Troop found that out early this month as they embarked on a two-week tour of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island in their own specially-marked bus.

From all indications, it was a most successful trip, not only as a "fun" outing but as a promoter of understanding among young people of different parts of our country.

It seems to us that more and more young people, like the 7th Sherbrooke Scouts, are getting out and moving around the country these days.

This is all to the good. The sonorous phrase, "national unity" is, after all, really nothing more than a spirit. And has more spirit than our young people? As they travel around Canada in increasing numbers each year, extending and finding common bonds that unite all young people the world over, they are helping to build us and themselves a more enduring country.

TODAY in history

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Aug. 14, 1968 . . .

The largest cash robbery on record in the United States took place 10 years ago today — in 1958 — when five or six men and a woman held up a mail truck near Plymouth, Mass., escaping with more than $1,500,000.

1947—India and Pakistan were established as British dominions.

1959 — A typhoon struck central Japan, killing 137.

First World War

Fifty years ago today—in 1918 — French troops captured Ribecourt on the Oise River, menacing the German communication centre at Noyon; German forces abandoned Beaumont, Hamel, Serre, Puisieux and Bucgivy on the Ancre front as British troops moved forward along the Lys River.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1943—British forces captured the junctions of Piedimont and Fiumefreddo in Sicily, blocking the German retreat; RAF planes assaulted industrial Milan; Rome radio announced Rome was declared an open city because of the American air raid

Spectators hang on to contenders' every word

Hubert Humphrey's remark that the Paris talks are generating peace in Vietnam—a statement quickly contradicted by Hanoi—is an example of the confusion likely to be multiplied by American utterances as the United States election campaign reaches the boiling point.

In fact, so vital is the outcome of the American campaign, not only to Europe but to much of the world, that international spectators tend to hang on every word spoken, every gesture made by the main presidential contenders.

In much of Europe, the United States campaign has become the biggest political issue of the moment, deeply overshadowing regional and national political events. Many Britons and Frenchmen may not be too sure what Prime Minister Wilson and President de Gaulle are planning at this time but they are amply aware, through every means of communication of what the main American contenders are saying and doing.

OFFER NO SOLUTIONS

This involvement by outsiders is the natural outcome of preoccupation with a global political event accompanied by personal concern. Though much of Western Europe has criticized American policy in Vietnam, the critics have been unable to provide a satisfactory substitute for American leadership.

De Gaulle's idea of a third force built out of Parisian political and military power appears to have been diminished, if not entirely shattered, by France's own recent riots and her internal economic troubles. De Gaulle staged a war against the American dollar but gained only a Pyrrhic victory.

Background to the news

Nevertheless American policy in Vietnam has been deeply suspect and has raised many questions in Europe over the quality of American strategy. Treatment of the Vietnam issue in the election campaign is likely to arouse more foreign interest than any other subject.

UNPLEASANT TOPIC

Vice-President Humphrey, as President Johnson's sidekick and favorite for the Democratic party's presidential nomination, undoubtedly would like to see the Vietnam issue eliminated from the campaign entirely. It has split the U.S. at home as well as the allies abroad. It is an explosive issue.

Continuance of the long-playing Paris talks are therefore helpful to the U.S. administration. U.S. spokesmen can argue, as Humphrey does, that "loose talk" could endanger the outcome. But the men from Hanoi are probably just as shrewd in their political strategy as the Americans.

The Paris talks are likely to become as deeply involved in the American campaign as the price of cheese in Wisconsin and the price of beef in Texas. It may even become the crucial issue on which the outcome of the election will be decided.

"Doesn't Look Like a Dove"

White sealers the cause

Eskimo hunter's life is threatened

CAPE COLBORNE, N.W.T. (CP) — Events thousands of miles away in Europe are robbing Kirnik of his livelihood in this Canadian Arctic region near Cambridge Bay, N.W.T.

Kirnik, 25, is an Eskimo seal hunter, one of an estimated 1,500 in Canada's North, but he soon may have to give up his traditional ways and go on welfare.

Adverse publicity on the commercial kill in the Gulf of St. Lawrence by white hunters has brought about a boycott, particularly in Europe, against sealskin goods.

Not long ago Kirnik received up to $28 for each seal hide. Today he gets about $2 a hide, scarcely enough to make it worth preparing the skin for trading.

Generally, Kirnik now uses his kills for food for his family and his dogs and for skin clothing for his wife and two children. Long hours of preparation and work go into the killing and processing of the seals.

Kirnik is one of a few remaining Eskimos who still use single-tipped harpoons to take seals through the Arctic sea ice.

USES SNOW BENCH

With the aid of the keen noses of his sled dogs, he locates a fresh seal breathing hole. Anticipating a wait of perhaps several hours, he builds himself a windbreak and bench of snow blocks, then places a thick caribou hide beneath his feet, walking over it to eliminate the sound of creaking snow.

Kirnik sits facing the sun so that his shadow falls away from the hole behind him, giving no indication to the seal that it is in danger.

Inserted in the thin layer of snow that covers the breathing hole is a bone indicator.

When the seal enters the hole, it creates a change in the water pressure, causing a tiny black button on the top of the indicator to rotate.

When the seal reaches the top of the hole, the entire indicator moves up and down. Kirnik then comes to his feet and makes his kill with a swift vertical thrust of his caribou-bone harpoon.

After the dead seal has been taken back to the Eskimo community, Kirnik's wife Arnaluak spends about eight hours skinning it, removing its blubber and scraping the tough black epidermis from the hide. Then the skin is stretched and hung in the sun to dry for two or three days.

PLACATE VICTIM

Ritual is an element in the seal hunt, as when a man makes his first kill.

Immediately after the kill, the hunter lies prone on the ice while his companions draw the dead seal over the length of his body. This is to ensure hunting prowess.

Then, wrestling with one of his companions, the hunter is thrown on top of the seal. This is to placate the seal for its own defeat by demonstrating to it that the hunter can be defeated also.

Approaching the Eskimo settlement on the way home from the kill, the hunter's companions run a zig-zag pattern in front of the dogsled to announce the success.

Mothers carry their small sons to the sled and the children kick the seal carcass for good luck.

The hunter's mother may then take the carcass and pour water down its throat, again to placate it, since seals are supposed to like a drink of fresh water.

The ritual is completed with the declaration of the hunter's "exchange partners"—those in the community who will receive a designated portion of the seal and of any seal killed by the hunter in future.

Today it is clear that the hunting and the ritual may soon disappear. They are threatened by winds of economic change blowing from Europe and the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Ottawa high school students experiment with 'free school'

By SUSAN BECKER

OTTAWA (CP) — "Kinds of love—brotherly, motherly, ego, sex, religious."

A clean-cut young man in casual clothes and sandals is writing those words on a blackboard in a well-appointed seminar room at Carleton University as evening shadows creep over trees and grass along the nearby Rideau River.

About a dozen neatly dressed teen-agers are seated in a circle trying to answer the young man's question about what kinds of love there are.

"I'm dominating this discussion, by the way, I hope you all realize," warns the young man, George Anderson, a 21-year-old political science and sociology student at Carleton.

A blonde girl at the end of the room agrees.

He continues, acting like a teacher but throwing in a little of the risque just to emphasize, perhaps, that the traditional high school atmosphere has no place here.

The discussion among the young people grows livelier as it moves into the effect of racial difference on love. From the back of the room, the blonde tells George bluntly that he is dominating the discussion again.

"I sort of get sucked into being involved," he replies sheepishly, moving to the back of the room opposite the blonde who gives him a big grin.

The talk goes back and forth with some laughter but mostly with the terrible seriousness of young people caught up in their "thing." They listen to one another politely, but are quick to pitch in with their own ideas.

The discussion extends to families, old people and emotions generally.

The arguments have their highs and lows but seem generally rather basic. Some of the students, however, are obviously excited at being able to thresh out their own ideas unhindered.

After 1½ hours, during which time a few more students have walked in, the group breaks up.

This discussion class on "human behavior" is one of five held weekday evenings for seven weeks for a total of about 100 students who want a taste of learning what they want, how they want.

The "free school" experiment was tried last summer. This year it received $1,200 from the university students' council to develop its seminars on politics and current events, human behavior, literature, education and creative arts.

Students must be more than 15 years of age, but most are teen-agers going into Grades 11 and 12.

The turnout for this year's free school is a little better than expected, says George, the school's director. But the dropout rate in a free school, he adds, is large.

The idea of the whole thing, he explains, is to let the student "create his own environment."

"You come here and you absorb. All you have at the end of August is a broader outlook."

Although there are university "resource people" who contribute to the topics the students have decided to study, the class is supposed to revolve around the students themselves. And they revel in the freedom from raising hands, assigned homework, writing exams and being told what to wear.

Isolated in Nfld.

Boats and planes the only transport

BURIN, Nfld. (CP) — For thousands of Newfoundland's coastal residents the only exit to the world beyond their isolated settlements is still by boat and aircraft.

Since Confederation with Canada in 1949 the provincial government annually has spent millions of dollars to build roads and improve communications. But despite this, some 300 islands, coves and villages have been vacated by residents seeking a modern way of life in Newfoundland mainland centres.

Isolation is felt particularly along the southwest coast of the island, not only in the small, out-of-the-way hamlets but also in industrialized areas.

Seventy-five miles east of Port aux Basques the sister towns of Ramea and Burgeo form the largest populated area in the province with no direct contact by road or railway with the rest of the province. They represent one of Newfoundland's most prosperous areas with two modern fish processing plants employing almost 600 men.

Another 75 miles to the east is Harbour Breton, a community of almost 2,000, whose only road ends just beyond the town limits.

Like Ramea and Burgeo, Harbour Breton has an industry and residents are restless for roads.

Knowlton calls for donors

By STEPHEN MORSON
(Record Correspondent)

KNOWLTON — (Special) — Everyone has a favorite season, some like the heat of summer, some like the winter time, others prefer the in-between times. But theret is no favorite or seasonal time of the year for demands on blood donors.

The Canadian Red Cross sees to it that there is a constant flow of life-giving blood to those who are in need. Regular donations is what keep the blood life line ready to use. But the line sometimes sags because of the seasonal decline in blood donors.

Statistics show that blood collections during the summer months have been low compared to other months of the year. One approach to a more balanced blood collection might be for donors in Knowlton and district to plan at least one donation during the fall or early winter.

For all those who have never donated blood, the Red Cross has a standing invitation to join the growing ranks of those who do. Your chance to donate blood and save a life will be yours on Thurs., August 15, at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall in Knowlton, between the hours of 3 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Women too have a role to play. Unlike her usual role as the 'doer' and dynamo in the family, the average woman is almost 8 to 1 behind the male in responding to appeals for blood for the ill and injured, the Red Cross reports.

It's hard to believe that these unequal statistics are caused by fear in a woman who is not afraid of child birth and who traditionally would fight lions to protect her family. It is equally unlikely that women are unaware of the need for blood, and its tremendous importance in surgery and in treating certain illnesses. Perhaps the busy schedule of the modern housewife has something to do with her infrequent trips to blood donor clinics.

Whatever the causes, physicians have stated repeatedly that there is no physiological reason why the average healthy woman cannot give blood several times a year.

When you donate a pint of blood you make a very personal contribution, says Dr. Raymond Guevin, medical director of the Quebec Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service. "You are in a sense giving a part of yourself, if this element of personal giving is lost, not only will medical care suffer, but something of value will disappear from our Canadian way of life," he says

West Shefford gal has 101st birthday

By L. A. KEARNS
(Record Correspondent)

WEST SHEFFORD (Special) — West Shefford's oldest inhabitant celebrated her 101st birthday, August 8, this year. Still active and enjoying good health, Mrs. Toussaint Thibodeau is up and around every day and helps with the housework in the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Hormidas Thibodeau, West Shefford.

Last year, she received a plaque from the Centennial Commission recognizing the fact that she was the oldest citizen in Shefford County. Born in 1867, when Shefford County had a population between 17,000 and 18,000. Mrs. Thibodeau is said to be the only person born in Shefford County in that year, who is still living.

When she was born in Granby, that city had a population of between 700 and 800, and was a little village of not more than 125 dwellings. Born Emma Dextradeur, Mrs. Thibodeau was the daughter of Honore Dextradeur and Denise Bedard, early settlers in Granby, and she still has three sisters and a brother living, all of them in their late 80's or early 90's.

She went to school for a short time and her teacher was one of her aunts. She worked for a period in the United States and was married to Toussaint Thibodeau in Claremont, New Hampshire, on January 19, 1893. Mr. Thibodeau, who farmed with his wife near Fulford, died some years ago. Of her nine children, five are still living: Mrs. Amedee Lafontaine (Donalda), of Waterloo; Aldege, Philidor and Mrs. Origene Desroches (Alma), of Granby; and Hormidas of West Shefford, with whom Mrs. Thibodeau lives. In addition to her five children, Mrs. Thibodeau has 25 grandchildren and over 70 great-grand children

Talking with Mrs. Thibodeau is like looking through a window of the past. She recalls the self-sufficiency of the farmers of those early days.

She worked with her husband in the fields until she was 70; she spun and wove cotton and wool for sheets and blankets and clothing; she used wood ashes to whiten her floors, and she would go to the fields with other women to gather straw. in the winter time they would make hats from the straw, and sell them in the stores. It was a very intricate process, and she describes it with the details still fresh in her memory. She also describes the entertainments and merry-making of those early days, and attributes her long and healthy life to a good appetite — she has never yet had to go on a diet — hard work, and taking life as it came without undue worrying.

Mrs. Thibodeau received many birthday greetings, a family gathering, and visits from Bromont's Mayor Germain Desourdy, and the member for Shefford County, in the House of Commons at Ottawa, Mr. Gilbert Rondeau. Still preserving her cheerful and happy spirit, Mrs. Thibodeau is stepping into her second century.

Waterloo playgrounds end season with a bang

WATERLOO — (Special) — The Waterloo playgrounds will close off this summer's activities next week with a series of planned events. This year's theme, Mexico, will be highlighted.

For five weeks the children have been working on handicraft projects and folk dances relating to Mexican culture. Their efforts will be demonstrated during this final week.

A track and field meet will be held on Monday, and in the evening a movie will be shown entitled: The Revenge of Pablito.

Tuesday will feature the election of Miss and Mr. Mexico, followed in the evening by a gala at Sacre Coeur School. The events at the school include songs, dances, and an acrobatic show in the gymnasium with special Mexican representatives.

On Thursday the children will participate in a track and field meet at Farnham. Friday features a tombola during the day and a campfire in the evening.

Frid's Fans Dig His Fangs

By JOAN CROSBY
NEA Entertainment Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—It's a building set apart from its neighbors in a seedy section of New York's West Side only because it looks a bit newer than the others, because its graffiti is extraordinarily single-minded and because it contains, at certain hours of certain days, Jonathan Frid.

Jonathan Frid has a lot of fans and they write a lot of letters and some of them get terribly poetic and rapturous as they describe him.

"One look at your noble countenance and we feel lifted into an ecstasy of admiration. Our thoughts as we view your profile: 'Truly heaven has made such a man,'" one wrote.

"You are the greatest TV actor in the U. S. A." . . . "You are the most devastating thing in that wild vampire role I've ever seen" . . .

"Truly the most magnificent actor of this century" . . . "You're the best-looking, the finest actor in the whole wide world. Such class. Such elegance," others have written.

Now it is entirely possible to be an intelligent, aware television fan and still not know who this paragon of the manly and acting virtues is. Jonathan Frid, for the uninitiated, plays Barnabas Collins, a vampire victim of circumstances and the fury of a witch, on ABC-TV's afternoon thriller, Dark Shadows.

It's a ripe, ripe series, filled with plots and counterplots, all of which always seem to have a deadline—the cast is constantly looking at clocks. People have dreams constantly, thunder and lightning are as important to the show as the actors, and cobwebs make it look as if cleaning women are very hard to find in Collinsport, where the victim lives.

Frid also gets to speak a lot of "if" dialogue, as fraught as it is fruity.

"If we fail, this may be the last dawn I ever see."

"If you tell her now, there may not be a tonight."

"If we don't finish by daybreak, there won't be any hope at all for me."

Occasionally his dialogue doesn't start with "if." Then it goes like this: "Some day we will talk again and I'll tell you things you've never known before. You'll know that loving me would be the greatest mistake you could ever have made in your life."

Newly Formed Unit to Study Why Britons Mistreat Kids

By TOM A. CULLEN
European Staff Correspondent

LONDON—(NEA)—"When the baby cried all the time, it meant that he didn't love me, so I hit him."

This is one mother's explanation why her 3-week-old baby had to be admitted to a hospital with severe bruises. For every battered baby taken into hospital—and there is at least one such case every day in England and Wales—there are probably 100 more treated by unsuspecting doctors.

Parents who attack their children either deny knowledge of how the child came to be injured, or else they invent such implausible stories as, "He caught his fingers in the folding crib."

But now, thanks to encouragement from the United States, relief is in sight for the hundreds of children under 3 (most battered children fall into this age group) who are the victims of parental rage.

A "Battered Children's Unit" is being set up by the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children under the direction of Miss Joan Court, 48, a psychiatric social worker who has received much of her training in the United States.

Miss Court has worked as a midwife in Clay County, Kentucky, in the eastern Appalachian Mountains, making her rounds on horseback. She has also studied as a Fullbright Scholar at Smith College, where she took her master's degree. And she is full of admiration for the work that has been done in the United States in getting at the root causes of the "Battered Baby Syndrome," as it is known in medical circles.

"The unit I am heading here is based very closely on the American model," Miss Court, an attractive brunette, explains. "It will not be a treatment center, but we will be doing casework in depth with battered children's families.

"Also, we will be on duty 24 hours a day, because small children are often attacked in the middle of the night when they are crying."

Miss Court has just returned to London from a seven-week trip to America, where she visited the Children's Bureau in Washington, D.C., and the clinic set up by Dr. Brandt F. Steele, professor of psychiatry at the University of Colorado.

Dr. Steele and his colleagues have made an intensive study of 60 families where small children have been assaulted, and his findings will serve as guidance for the work being done in this field here in Britain.

Who are the baby bashers? Child abuse occurs not only among the poor, but among all classes of society, including university graduates, according to Dr. Steele.

Usually the parents are newly married and aged between 20 and 30. They are not necessarily aggressive people; in fact, often they take good care of their children as far as material wants, such as food and clothing, are concerned.

But they are usually lonely, frightened people and socially isolated people. "They are the kind who keep the blinds drawn in broad daylight and who have unlisted telephone numbers," Miss Court explains.

"They are completely lacking in maternal feeling, usually as a result of their own childhood, when they were deprived of love. Being emotionally deprived, they expect their baby to make them happy and, when the baby fails to do so, they hit it."

Usually it is the mother who attacks the baby, though the father is often present as a passive spectator.

In the past, such cases of child abuse were treated as accidents, the parents glibly explaining that baby had had a fall. Radiologists became suspicious when, in many cases, X rays showed that baby had multiple injuries that could not have resulted from any fall.

Thanks to the widespread public interest in this finding, doctors in most American states are now required by law to report suspected cases of child neglect and abuse to police or to the appropriate children's agency.

Such a law has not yet been enacted in Britain, which means that Miss Court will depend largely upon co-operation from hospitals in uncovering battered children cases.

A witch saved her life

TORONTO (CP) — Once upon a time a witch saved Eileen Sonin's life.

She lived happily ever after as a lady of ghostly persuasion.

Once upon a time, when she was an actress in London, a group of ghostly children played knick-knack in her flat. She recalls that they were a pretty happy group, although they locked her out occasionally, and liked to chase the cat.

She is still surrounded by cats in the Rosedale-area home she shares with her husband, Ray. There are cats in the flesh, cats in the paintings and cats in the ceramics.

Mrs. Sonin, who emigrated to Canada with her husband 11 years ago and has had an active career in radio and television, regards herself as a natural medium.

When she claimed to be able to perceive spirits and see into the future, an acquaintance suggested that she attend a school for mediums.

But, she says, "I didn't want to go to a medium school." Instead, she went to a professional medium in London who showed her how to repel the spirits.

Now she writes articles and holds herself available for interviews during which she elaborates on the "atmosphere full of sorrow and disturbances" that prevails at St. Peter's Basilica in Rome, or tells of the lady ghost in black she saw in a house in Malta.

But she retains a special attachment to the witch who saved her life.

It was as a child of 10, vacationing in Dorset, that she saved a cat belonging to an old woman.

"She lived with this black cat and grew herbs and everyone believed she was a witch. After I saved her cat from a group of boys who were tormenting it a friend and I decided to explore the abandoned stone quarries."

She said they became lost and quarrelled about the way out. Her friend went one way and she another.

"It was then I saw the witch, and she was holding a lantern. She beckoned and I followed her out."

A search party found the other little girl dead at the bottom of a shaft.

The old woman? She had been found dead in her armchair three days earlier, Mrs. Sonin claims.

Students to face school reforms

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec's educational reforms will be confronted by many students returning to classes in September.

A major feature in revamping the old system is the gradual elimination of classical colleges, which date back 300 years, in favor of post-secondary general and professional schools.

The new colleges, which will permit a great many more young Quebecers to further their education, spring from a regroupment and combining of technical schools, normal schools and the private classical colleges.

Last year's 12 pioneer post-secondary colleges have been increased to 22 and the government has plans for a total of 30 by 1973.

About 35,000 students are expected to enroll this fall.

Those planning a university education will spend two years at the colleges, while those aiming for careers that do not require a university education will put in up to three years.

The post-secondary colleges take a large slice of the education budget total of $800,000,000 —$100,000,000 more than last year allotted in 1968-69.

Another major change just beginning to be felt, although it was legislated in May, 1965, is a new system of classification and promotion in elementary and secondary schools.

Known as Rule Number One, the system provides for children to be grouped according to their age and then divided into working groups according to ability, psychological development and social adaptation.

The elementary course followed by the students spans six years and promotion to the secondary level is obligatory after seven years.

The system is meant to give each child the chance to progress according to individual ability.

In 1967, 27 elementary schools received government sanction to implement Rule Number One. In 1968, about 125 more are expected to undergo the elementary reform.

Rule Number One has also brought marked change in secondary schools where, under the new system, children are generally promoted at the age of 12 years.

In the new secondary school system, pupils are not divided into distinct classes or sections, but take all the classes necessary for them to attain the grade 11 graduation diploma.

Thi new system varies from the old in that it permits a child to orient himself towards either the labor market or university. It has a graded system of options, and provides for promotion by subject.

It also provides a uniform curriculum across the province instead of the 140 programs and the 640 subjects tallied in a survey of secondary schools across the province in pre-reform days.

Molson Breweries net income for the first quarter ended June 30 was $3,152,000 or 40 cents per Class A and B share compared with $3,250,000 or 41 cents a share a year earlier. Molson breweries yesterday said that more than 60 per cent of the total outstanding Anthes Imperial Ltd. class A and B shares have been deposited in acceptance of Molson's offer for all the shares. Molson also said that because of the interruption of normal mail service in Canada by the recent postal strike, it has extended the "initial period" of its offer to Sept. 6 from the original Aug. 15th expiry date. Molson's shares plus cash offer is conditional on its receiving 75 per cent of Anthes total outstanding A and B shares.

Royal Trust Co. plans to offer 790,000 additional shares through a rights offering on the basis of one new share for each four held at a price to be announced later. The rights will be mailed on or about Sept. 30 to shareholders of record mid-September. Further details will be released later, the company said.

Jacked up duties on French products are US trade weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government is rolling out an international trade weapon not used on such a large scale since it was directed at Nazi Germany. The target now is France.

The weapon is countervailing duties and it works like this: France provides its manufacturers with subsidies so they can sell their products at lower prices abroad. When the products get to the U.S. they're hit with the countervailing duty, jacking the prices back up again.

The French subsidy was imposed after workers won pay boosts of 10 to 15 per cent in May and June strikes.

The subsidy is intended to help groggy French industry back to its feet and ease the shock of suddenly higher prices. It was set last month at six per cent of labor costs. After October it is to drop to three per cent.

A U.S. treasury spokesman said Tuesday the countervailing duty will follow a similar timetable, starting off at 2.5 per cent and dropping to 1.25 per cent when the French subsidy is halved.

WOULD LIFT DUTY

The subsidy is scheduled to end Jan. 31. If it does the U.S. will lift the duty, the treasury said.

The duty is applicable to virtually the whole gamut of French consumer goods arriving on U.S. docks, including wines, perfumes and automobiles. Exceptions are few, but they include certain agricultural products, fuels and antiques, a treasury spokesman said.

Countervailing duties against isolated products are not unusual but application of this economic weapon against all but a few of a country's exports to the United States may never have occurred before, he said.

The closest parallel, he said, was in the era preceding the Second World War when the Nazi government decreed the exchange rate of marks to dollars would vary according to the type of German product being purchased.

"We looked it over and decided it was nothing but a direct subsidy for certain classes of products," the treasury source said.

TOURISM is down in France and recent strikes and uprisings are blamed. The well-known Place du Tertre, top, considered one of the gayest spots in Paris, normally would be bustling with tourists but shows a scarcity of strollers. Equally deserted are the beaches of the French Riviera, bottom, where resorts are reporting their worst season in years.

Allies find lots of guns

SAIGON (AP) — Southern allied forces have uncovered huge weapons caches along Viet Cong infiltration corridors leading here from the Cambodian and Laotian borders, military spokesmen reported today.

Little other activity was reported in the Vietnam war—the U.S. command said tropical storm Rose cut U.S. air missions over North Vietnam's southern panhandle Tuesday to 31, the lowest number in more than two years.

In the most significant find, Southern allied forces checking a group of villages reported to house as many as 25,000 Viet Cong sympathizers turned up more than 500 rounds of rockets and recoilless rifle ammunition Tuesday and 72,000 rounds for automatic weapons.

Ten Vietnamese trying to escape were killed and 17 prisoners were flushed from the tunnels in the action Tuesday.

Using "seal and search" tactics, units of the U.S. 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment put a cordon around the village of Cau Dat.

Cau Dat, less than 10 miles north of a big U.S. Army helicopter base, is headquarters of the South Vietnamese 5th Infantry Division.

It was the second productive "seal and search" operation in the cluster of villages north of Saigon in the last five days.

Four miles to the northeast of Cau Dat, Southern allied forces raided the village of Chanh Luu last Friday after sealing it off in a similar manner. That time the allies killed 18 Viet Cong and seized 114 prisoners and more than three tons of food.

QUEBEC SCENE:

Women back tax exemptions

QUEBEC (CP) — Several resolutions asking for income tax exemptions for housekeeping and day help were approved Tuesday at the biennial convention of the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

About 400 delegates and observers, representing 6,000 members in 152 branches, are attending the five-day convention.

The only discussion involved the changing of resolutions to be sure they covered women without husbands and those whose dependents are other than children, as well as covering married women with children.

A brief flurry was caused by another amendment that changed the word women in one such resolution to persons.

Irene Perrault of Quebec said:

"Why should we change the word women to persons? Our resolutions are to help the women, not the men. They already have enough privileges."

Maureen Crozier of Calgary apparently expressed the convention feeling when she said women should ask for equality, not special privileges, and the word persons was approved.

Fine captain

MONTREAL — (CP) — The captain of a Greek freighter was fined $500 in Sessions Court Tuesday for permitting oil to seep from his ship into the St. Lawrence River.

Captain I. Makogianni of the freighter Falcon pleaded guilty at his arraignment before Judge Marcel Gaboury, blaming the incident on a leaky valve.

New discoveries

ASBESTOS, Que. — (CP) — Karl V. Lindell, chairman of the board of Canadian Johns-Manville Co. Ltd., announced Tuesday a report has been received which indicates three discoveries of uranium radioactive areas near Ste. Anne du Lac, 120 miles north of Montreal.

Mr. Lindell said the company has staked over 1,100 claims in the area and that the economic importance of the deposits would be known after evaluation.

Asbestos is 80 miles southwest of Quebec City.

Denounces union

MONTREAL — (CP) — Real Caouette, leader of the Creditiste Party, Tuesday denounced union leaders for calling strikes and the federal government for its inactivity and failure to prevent them.

Speaking at a news conference during a visit to Man and His World, Mr. Caouette said strikers are being duped by their union leaders.

Silver Screen to Show Black Militant Movement

By DICK KLEINER
NEA Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD — (NEA) — "Up Tight!" is the first picture to tell the story of the black militant movement. As such, it is certain to be controversial, which is perfectly fine with Paramount—after all, controversy is commercial.

Jules Dassin is producing and directing "Up Tight!" and also is one of the writers of the screenplay. The other two writers are Ruby Dee and Julian Mayfield, who also have major roles in the film.

Dassin wrote the original screenplay, but he is a white man and this is a story of today's blacks.

"A white man can't put himself in black skin and write about Negroes," Dassin says. "I tried. I killed myself trying. But a white just can't do it. So I got Ruby and Julian to help me."

Ruby Dee had never written before—at least not professionally. Julian Mayfield is primarily a writer, with four novels published. But he is also an actor, or had been—the lead on Broadway in "Lost In the Stars" as a young man. Since then, though, he's been writing and teaching and working (for six years) in Ghana.

"I think," Mayfield says, "that this film will be the best so far at showing the black rights movement. Both blacks and whites will be surprised and perhaps shocked at meeting black militants—even the average black person rarely knows anyone like Huey Newton, Rap Brown, Stokely Carmichael or the characters in this movie.

"I think this film is liable to open the way for others. It is a trail blazer."

Raymond St. Jacques, who plays the black militant leader, is himself not a militant. But he thinks the picture is important. So important, in fact, that he worked in it in great pain for several weeks. He had hurt his neck and should have been hospitalized, but kept on working.

"This movie was too important to quit," he says. "It's the first film about the black revolution. I think it's accurate, and it's necessary to tell both blacks and whites that this is where it's at, baby.

"It will make a point, dramatically, that Negroes have been third-class citizens long enough, that we've paid our dues and now we want to collect."

All the actors are enthusiastic about Dassin. Their enthusiasm is understandable. It's the first Hollywood venture in 20 years for Dassin, a gray-haired man with sparkling blue eyes. He is a meticulous director and he knows and likes actors and they respond for him.

"The problem is," he says, "that it is hard to find a trained cast of Negro actors. They simply haven't had the experience. Eighty per cent of this cast has no film experience at all. But they are working hard, terribly hard."

St. Jacques and Ruby Dee and beautiful Janet MacLachlan have been in films before (Janet's work has been confined to television films) but Julian Mayfield and many others haven't.

Dassin fought hard to get Negro technicians, but here he was up against the rigid Hollywood craft unions.

"The stupid, idiotic, moronic rules," Dassin says. "It was impossible. I hired a black man in Cleveland (where they shot on location) and he was so good, I had to create a new title for him to bring him with me to Hollywood. By the end of this picture, he'll be a first-rate first assistant director—without a place to first assist in."

Janet MacLachlan expresses the viewpoint of the majority: "Jules Dassin is so great. I don't know if it's good or bad for an actress to be so spoiled in her first feature."

To break habit gamblers join AA type club

TORONTO (CP) — Between 15 and 25 Toronto men and their wives are betting on each other's help to curb their compulsive wagering.

Members of Gamblers Anonymous, the men and women treat their gambling urges as a sickness and have banded together in an attempt to steer each other clear of the temptation to wager.

Designed after Alcoholics Anonymous, Gamblers Anonymous treats its members by first getting them to admit that they are compulsive gamblers.

"A lot of our members break the habit for a while, then make a mistake and have to start all over again," said Ted G., chairman of a recent meeting. (As in AA, the members are known only by first names and initials.

"The hardest part of giving up compulsive gambling is turning down the first bet," he said. "The first small bet to a problem gambler is like the first small drink to an alcoholic. Sooner or later he falls back into the same destructive pattern."

Members of the Toronto chapter, one of two in Canada, have estimated there are more than 6,000,000 compulsive gamblers —men and women who are psychologically driven to wagering in all forms—in North America. About 2,000 belong to Gamblers Anonymous.

Toronto's 25 former bingo and racetrack addicts meet every Sunday night at St. Michael and All Angels Anglican Church, and talk about their former wagering escapades.

One member, a Toronto food wholesaler, estimated that before he joined the organization he had lost more than $100,000 in 12 years of addictive gambling.

Richmond

Friends will be sorry to hear that Mr. Jacques Beaubien is a surgical patient in the St. Vincent de Paul Hospital, in Sherbrooke.

Friends of Mrs. Doris Macdonald, head nurse at the Asbestos Clinic, will be sorry to hear that she is a patient in the Sherbrooke Hospital, after receiving severe injuries in a recent car accident.

Mr. Robin Fraser and daughter, Robbie, have returned to Port Hope, Ont., after visiting Mrs. Grant Campbell and Mr. Campbell at the Wales Home.

Social notes from Bury

Mr. Robert Dougherty, Macdonald College, is spending his holidays at his home here. Miss Linda Laffin is a guest at the same home.

Congratulations are being extended to Mr. James Whitehead on the observance of his 84th birthday, which occurred on July 31. Mr. Whitehead lives alone in his apartment over the I.G.A. store, but takes his meals with his sister-in-law, Mrs. Edith Whitehead, across the street. In fairly good health, he spends his time reading, with occasional trips to the city. His brisk walk belies his age. Many middle - aged men and women, both here and in far places, remember with affection the man who took a keen interest in their scholastic achievements, invariably rewarding them with a much appreciated treat, while he was keeping store beside the old Fairview School.

Mr. Arthur McDonald is a patient in the Sherbrooke Hospital, where he is under observation and treatment.

Burial services were held here on July 29, for the late Mrs. Abbie Prescott Coates, whose death occurred on July 25 in Florida. Brought by plane to Dorval, the remains were accompanied by her daughter Sabra, Mrs. Haseltine and granddaughter, Mrs. Ralph Kruse, the former Beryl Dawson. The body lay in repose in the Bury Funeral Home, where the impressive burial service of the Anglican Church was held in the Chapel, with Canon Church officiating. An augmented choir sang three favorite hymns, The Old Rugged Cross, Abide with Me and The Strife is o'er the battle won. The bearers, old friends of the family, were Maurice Goodwin, Lindsay Groom, Arthur Ward and Clifford Anderson. Interment was in the family lot in the Anglican cemetery. While here Mrs. Haseltine and daughter, Mrs. Kruse, were guests of Mrs. Winnifred Kirkpatrick and called on other relatives in the vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Atkins and two daughters, Deep River, Ont., were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Atkins.

Friends here of Mrs. Everett Wootten are sorry to hear she is a patient in the Sherbrooke Hospital, after suffering a heart attack. Mrs. Keith Smith is also a patient in hospital, under observation and treatment.

Mrs. Millie Goodwin has taken up residence in one of the apartments of Mr. John Parsons. Her friends regret to hear that her health is not improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Dougherty and their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Dougherty and children, Cowansville, spent July 28 at the Covered Bridge Campsite, Milby, where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smyth and family. Other guests on the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Everett Davis and family, Huntingville.

Pathogen-free pigs enjoy life

SUTHERLAND, Sask. (CP) — The place has pastel-colored walls, a stainless steel dining area, thermostat-controlled heat, air conditioning and shower facilities. And Frank Pfeiffer's pigs seem to love it.

Before a human visitor enters the establishment 10 miles east of Saskatoon, he must disrobe, shower and don clean overalls and rubber boots. For Mr. Pfeiffer's hogs are specific pathogen-free.

The SPF strain, developed about 15 years ago at the University of Manitoba, is free from atrophic rhinitis and certain respiratory diseases, provided it is guarded against outside infection.

Primary SPF piglets are born by Caesarean section and immediately removed to disease-free quarters without associating with the mother or other pigs.

Secondary SPF hogs, the product of a primary SPF dam, are born normally and raised in a disease-free environment.

Way's Mills

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Binney, Birchton, were recent guests of their daughter, Mrs. Descoteau and Mr. [illegible]eau.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Boivin, Boston, Mass., were called here by the death of Robert Standish. Mrs. Boivin spent a week with her mother, Mrs. Mabel Standish. Mr. Boivin returned the following week to drive Mrs. Boivin home. Mr. H. Boivin also visited his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Rolland Boivin.

Melbourne Ridge

Mr. Norman Fowler, Wardlow, Alta., is spending some time at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Fowler, and brother, Eddie, before leaving in October.

Mrs. George Stainthorpe, of Scarborough, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. Marshall, while visiting old neighbors and friends in the area.

Mrs. Dorothy Ellis, Toronto, has been spending some time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Beers and has also visited others in this area and in Sherbrooke.

Mr. David Booth and Miss Denise Dunford, Bramalea, Ont. spent two weeks holidays at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Booth. Miss Marion Booth, of N.D.G., Montreal, also spent a few days at the home of her parents. Mr. Peter Bruce, of Flodden, was also a caller and celebrated his 80th birthday.

Evening Guild gives reports, plans Aug. sale

FOSTER — The meeting of St. James Evening Guild was held in the Parish Hall on Aug. 8.

Mrs. Arthur Mann gave the treasurer's report in the absence of Mrs. Laurence Marsh, and reported that $206.27 had been cleared at the lawn social, and $60.90 at the July rummage sale. The president, Mrs. Miles Rhicard extended thanks to everyone who helped in any way with the lawn social.

It was decided to hire someone to clean the church, if possible.

Mrs. Rhicard was winner of the lucky package.

The next meeting will be held in the Parish Hall on Sept. 12.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. A. V. Beale and Mrs. Dawn Donkin.

Milan

Mr. Roderick McLeod, Asbestos, spent the weekend at his home here.

Robert McLeod, Drummondville, is spending a few weeks holiday with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan McLeod.

Mrs. Toivo Laurila and Norman Laurila, Nipigon, Ont., who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. David Nicholson for three weeks, have returned to their home. They were accompanied as far as Montreal by Mrs Nicholson, who spent a few days visiting relatives and friends and while in the city attended Man and His World.

Mrs. Christie MacArthur is a patient in the Sherbrooke Hospital.

Mr. Leslie and Miss Mary MacLeod were in Walpole, N.H., where they attended the funeral of their cousin, Mr. Sidney Wilson.

Laurison, Mrs. Howard Walker, Lennoxville, Mr. and Mrs. L. Cowper and family and Mr. and Mrs. Allen D. Morrison, Sherbrooke, Bill Campbell, Angus MacIver and Dannie Morrison, Scotstown.

Nuclear medicine in Alberta has two graduates

CALGARY (CP) — The first two technical graduates in Alberta in nuclear medicine—a space-age science—have successfully written their final examinations at Foothills Hospital.

Nuclear medicine involves radiation to find disease in the body and the technician's responsibility is to prepare radioactive materials for patient tests, operate equipment and process information for evaluation by doctors.

The graduates, Helen Baker and Margaret Vincent, had previous qualification and completed the two-year course in one year. Miss Baker trained as an x-ray technician in Vancouver and Miss Vincent completed a laboratory technician's course in Edmonton.

Edmonton's University Hospital has maintained a department of nuclear medicine for several years, but Foothills is the only institution in the province that trains technicians in the field.

The hospital now is training two more students and similar programs are being started elsewhere in the province.

Cars Built to Last In Eastern Europe

By BOB COCHNAR
NEA Automotive Editor

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia—(NEA)—To those of you who are thinking about a pleasant drive through the Bohemian forests of Czechoslovakia, warning:

Have no fear of the border guards (a Kennedy half-dollar works many wonders). Concern yourself not with an American-hating populace (practically everybody in this country has a relative in the States).

No, unfortunately, it is the mundane you must worry about. Like, where do you find gasoline of a sufficiently high octane to propel a Western-built auto without a constant, erratic shudder?

I had picked up a Mercedes 220 in Munich, about 200 miles from Prague, with the intention of spending a week or so prowling about Czechoslovakia. Just before the Czech-German border the tank was filled with a decent German product, (Mobil, I think it was), which kept the car moving for several days.

The time eventually came when more petrol was needed so naturally I pulled up to the nearest pump in Prague and topped off. Well, ever shut off the ignition and find that your car insists on running like a bronco? Even a sturdy Mercedes can't put up with too much bucking and wheezing.

In discussing my plight with an American newsman, I learned that Czech gasoline is about 78 octane—about 20 octane less that what a Western motor can tolerate. For a six-cylinder, highly tuned Mercedes, it is disastrous. He told me that I could buy 100 octane at one of a half-dozen pumps in all of Czechoslovakia.

With a crudely drawn map, I shuddered through the streets of Prague, spied the filling station, had the tank drained of more than 120 crowns' worth (about $8) and refilled. How Czech-built cars operate on such gunk is almost beyond imagining.

The cars of Eastern Europe are, in fact, worth knowing about for they are indeed unusual. The Skoda is the local version of the Volkswagen, a rear-engined, hard-driving little number which handles somewhat like a light tank. It's powered by a four-cylinder which produces about 30 h.p. They last for years and years. Skodas built in 1940 are not uncommon.

A step up is the Tatra, a four-door eight-cylinder sedan and graced with the strangest front and rear ends in Europe. The styling, such as it is, is about a decade old but it still looks as if it was copied from a Buck Rogers comic strip, circa 1946. This item handles like a heavy tank.

Wartburgs from East Germany are also common, as are Russian Moskvitches and Chaikas, the latter being reserved for VIPs. One gives a wide berth to anyone in a Chaika; the occupants could be a high-level commissar or a top minister. Oddly, it would not be Communist party chief Alexandre Dubcek, who pilots his own four-year-old Skoda.

Chaikas are also popular with visiting journalists, since lower-echelon officials might mistake them for influentials.

Czechoslovakia is an antique car buff's nirvana. The streets are filled with a great assortment of prewar cars, including 1929 Opels, 1935 Mercedes, 1930 Model A Fords, old Locomobiles, Dodges, Austins, Auto-Unions, Fiats, Renaults and original Volkswagens, presumably left over from the German occupation.

And the cars all run, too. Most Czechoslovak car owners double as extraordinarily good mechanics. Regular breakdowns are not uncommon and where does one find a part for a 1932 Fiat?

Czechoslovaks appear to be careful drivers although, with only about 300,000 automobiles in a country with 14 million people, the accident rate is high. Too, there are no superhighways and the new macadam roads are often cluttered with ox-carts, bicycles and pedestrians. One does not drive fast in the People's Republic.

Czechs do appreciate fine machinery. My Mercedes (a rare bird here) was closely inspected by most passers-by and several times I opened the engine compartment for interested observers.

Hertzky hasn't arrived in Czechoslovakia as yet (though it operates in Yugoslavia) so Tuzex and other local agencies put a visitor in the driver's seat.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

FAMILIAR SIGHTS on the streets of Prague are the little four-cylinder Skoda (top) and the unusually styled eight-cylinder Tatra. Both are rugged cars, but handle somewhat like tanks.

Czech Students Show Maturity

(EDITOR'S NOTE: NEA managing editor Robert Cochnar returned recently from a tour of Czechoslovakia.)

By BOB COCHNAR
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—The Marine guards at the U.S. Embassy in Prague were preparing for a siege. The great gates of the old stone palace near Hradcany Castle were closed and embassy personnel clustered in a room opposite the street side of the building.

And then the students came, waving Get Out of Vietnam placards, yelling anti-American slogans. It was all part of "Solidarity Day" demonstrations last spring in which young people marched on U.S. embassies throughout the world.

Somebody tossed a rock through a window and the several North Vietnamese students among the Czechoslovaks managed to pull down the American flag which hung above the entrance.

"But the Czech students didn't think this was right," an embassy attache told me. "It was one thing to demonstrate against the war, they felt, but quite another thing to deface the flag of another country."

So the next day, a small delegation of students called on the ambassador—and presented him with a new flag to replace the one destroyed by the North Vietnamese students. "It was," said the attache, "a very nice gesture."

To be one of the more than 100,000 young men and women studying at Czechoslovakia's 41 colleges and universities is to experience an onslaught of change.

And, unlike students in other nations who have demonstrated and rioted for a new society, Czechoslovaks have approached matters calmly and, in the words of a professor at Prague's Charles University, "with a great deal of political maturity".

"For example," he continued, "before the overthrow of the Novotny government, Prague University students held a torchlight parade in Wenceslaus Square. Their complaint was minimal. For three months a power failure had kept the dormitories without light and the students merely wanted to call attention to that fact.

"So the signs read, 'We Need Light to Study,' 'Give Us Light, Comrade Novotny.' Well, the government sent in troops to break up the demonstration . . . and break a few heads, too.

"What did the students do? Nothing. They waited and a month later Dubcek took power. And do you know the interior minister of the new government is still apologizing to the students?"

Now that Czechoslovakia's decision to seek "democratic socialism" has received the grudging approval of the Kremlin, students are bound to exercise their new freedom with even greater verve.

Several months ago young people began publishing a weekly paper called "Student," which is probably the most invigorating, free-swinging newspaper in Czechoslovakia. "I hear," a Student editor told me, "that Dubcek reads Student before anything else."

A recent issue included this comment by Prof. Ivan Svitak of Charles University:

"If we examine the results of the three-month-old rebirth objectively and critically, we have to conclude that, with the exception of the temporary lapse of censorship, no structural changes have taken place in the mechanism of the totalitarian dictatorship.

"In Czechoslovakia, one party still has a monopoly in political life and, at present, there exist no procedures, such as common in a democracy, to express the political will of the people."

Strong words, yes, but understandable. Says an American embassy official:

"I'm sure the new leadership doesn't expect less of the students. After all, they have not lived through the years of occupation, the years when their country was given to the Germans by the Allies, the years when Thomas Masaryk established the Czechoslovak democracy. Consequently, they aren't impressed when their elders say 'things are better now.'"

And now that students can freely read all western literature (including the international editions of Time and Newsweek), they know what's happening. "It's our country, too," a blue-jeaned, shaggy-haired humanities student said. "The old people have made a mess of things for too long. Now we are going to be heard."

Red Cross examiner gives tests to swimmers at Lake Salem meet

BOUNDARY — Clement Bergeron, Canadian Red Cross examiner, Montreal, came to the Frontier Swim Project at Lake Salem on Thusday, Aug. 8. The Canadian head instructor, Miss Charlotte Labrecque, had previously screened and prepared her classes for the tests.

Passing the juvenile tests were 28 youngsters; seven were successful in the Juniors; two in Intermediates and four in the Senior Water Safety Project.

The four seniors to pass were Judy LePitre, Bruce Muir, John Goyette and Charles Greer. In addition Bruce Muir and John Goyette passed the American Advanced swimmers test.

Peter Channell, American head instructor, had a pass of 64 in his classes out of 82 competing.

The project has had an exceptionally good year with some 300 students enrolled. Of these, some attended only a few times, while others attended on the days allotted to them. In addition to the tests given, some boys and girls take their tests at summer camps and the project does not have the credit. All students took American and Canadian lessons.

Assisting the head instructors this year have been Judy LePitre, Charles Greer, John and Lise Goyette, while volunteers have been Joanne Poulin, Geneve Gilbert, Debbie Hackett, Peter Greer and Mary Goyette. Others have also helped in various ways.

There has been excellent cooperation at the beach this year. Peter Boyd was beach supervisor for six weeks.

The final day for all who passed their tests was a fun day, held on Aug. 9. In the morning there were races and at noon a cook out with chief cooks being Peter Channell and Don Currier. The mounds of hot dog rolls and hot dogs, a huge pail of chips, popcorn and marshmallows disappeared as if by magic as the youngsters ate with healthy appetites. Ten gallons of punch, made and donated by Don Currier, and a large tray of home - made cookies sent down by Mrs. Ralph Smith, also disappeared quickly.

Later it was a free swim, and now holidays before day school starts in September.

LIFE SAVING

During the last week of the course, August 12 to 16, Mr. Channell will be teaching junior and senior life saving and Miss Labrecque will be giving instruction in survival swimming.

The project is held annually, it is financed through gifts of money from organizations, businesses and individuals who desire to see the youngsters receive instruction in water safety. This summer the costs have been high, approximately $310 a week.

Ralph Smith, who has been the bus driver, seems to have enjoyed the children as they have him, as he spends his day at the beach. The bus was rented in Irasburg.

It's been a good season and as soon as the pass cards arrive they will be distributed either through the mail or at a public gathering.

Not only do the youngsters learn water safety, they build strong healthy bodies in the sunshine and rain, develop muscles, are kept occupied, and mingle one with the other, in both languages, as the school is open to French, English and any others who wish to have water safety instruction.

Social notes from Sutton

Although in some towns there were bad fires and other spectacular events during the postal strike, there were no siren-calls for the Sutton Brigade, and the only affair of interest to citizens was the parade down Main Street, put on by the Recreation Club as a finish to its summer activities at the town's Children's Playgrounds. Publicized by loud speakers along all streets beforehand, the parade of young people, marching to band music, was a gala event. There was a fine show of bicycles, too, as a part of it.

Now many young Canadians broaden their knowledge of geography by travel. One example is a Sutton High girl, attractive 16-year-old Trudy Jones. After having been to the United Nations in New York, and on visits to Toronto, some other large North American cities, and to Old Orchard, Beach, Me., where she recently accompanied Miss Holly Jones, a cousin from Toronto, to spend a week. Back home for a few hours, she accepted an invitation to go with friends to Cape Cod for a few days, after which she was off for a visit in Montreal. Other junior citizens from here have already visited points in Europe and the Caribbean.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Knights have returned from a visit with friends at Lake Megantic.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Beaudry and family motored to Baldwin's Mills and visited the fish hatchery near there. They report that more than 1000 visitors were there that day to view the trout in the ponds and the aquariums. Later the Beaudrys spent the remainder of the day at Mr. Gordon England's camp at Lake Lyster.

Mr. John Gilmartin, student pastor for the Sutton and Mansonville Baptist Churches this summer, visited his family at Rock Island.

Fifteen members of the Women's Union of First Baptist Church, St. Albans, Vt., motored here to hold their meeting at the home of Mrs. T. Surtees on Pleasant Street, where they were entertained by their hostess, a former resident of St. Albans, and a member of the organization. Since her return to Sutton after a stay of several years in Vermont, Mrs. Surtees has made the occasion an annual event.

Mrs. Lillian Miltimore is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Donald Dow and Mr. Dow in New Brunswick.

Mrs. Robert Miltimore has returned from a week's trip to Worcester, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Orton Baker recently spent a day in Montreal.

Sturdy Neptune sub-chaser ends service career

COMOX, B.C. (CP) — The sturdy, serviceable Neptune sub-chaser, for more than 10 years the backbone of Canada's air-borne anti-submarine forces, has entered the annals of air force history.

Known as P2s to the forces, the twin-engined Neptunes have been replaced by the much larger Argus, a flying platform for the most up-to-date submarine detection and attack equipment.

It's good news for the forces but bad news for airmen with weak stomachs.

The Neptune was comfortable in rough weather because of its flexible wings. The newer Argus has far greater size, range and capacity and—the experts say with a wink—rigid wings.

A four-engined military version of the Britannia airliner, the Argus can carry 8,000 pounds of arms, including rockets, torpedoes, depth charges and bombs, and can search an area of 50,000 square miles and still have fuel to spare. It can stay aloft for as long as 30 hours while the slower, smaller Neptune had a cruising time limit of only 13 hours.

With some 300,000 square miles of coastal territory to patrol, the Argus will carry a crew of 15—three pilots, three navigators, seven radio operators and two flight engineers.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

The last half of the match between the Orange Team and the California All-Stars was played before a Bridge-O-Rama audience which saw the second play of each hand and the results.

The Dallas audience was rooting for the Dallas team and was very unhappy when they saw that Don Krauss of California had played four spades doubled and made five. The bidding was that shown in the box.

Dr. John Fisher of Dallas, a member of the Jacoby team that won the 1965 Vanderbilt and second with James Jacoby in the World's Pair championship at Amsterdam in 1966, remarked while the players were getting ready to bid, "This hand shows why it is so much easier to watch than to play. These are all action players who operate on the theory that if you sit around doing nothing, you never fall down but you never get anywhere either. I predict the same bidding and same result on this replay."

John turned out to be a prophet. Billy Eisenberg opened three spades. He had a typical vulnerable pre-empt. Ron von der Porten doubled. No one was going to shut him out with 16 high card points and fine support for any suit that his partner might bid.

Mike Lawrence raised to four spades. He had the right hand with which to make the bid.

It was up to Lew Mathe to act. We aren't going to say that Lew is the greatest player in the world. All we will says is that no one is any better.

Lew started to think. Fisher said, "If he could see all the cards he would pass but all he sees are his own 13. Only a 'Milquetoast' would pass with his hand, and Lew is an active player."

Sure enough, Lew did double and Billy made the same overtrick that Don had.

Researchers plan to study seaweed

HALIFAX (CP) — The cultivation of seaweed is just one of many research projects under way at the Atlantic Regional Laboratory.

Dr. Arthur Neish, lab director, said many of the seaweed plants being used commercially are taken from wild fields.

The lab hopes to determine the plant's life cycles and where a cultivated station should be placed to be most economical.

He said the laboratory is also stuying moulds to see whether the toxic compounds they produce are responsible for poor growth of sheep whose pastures appear to be in good condition.

He said this is a common problem in New Zealand, which has a large lamb yield, and microbiologists are checking to see if a similar condition exists in Nova Scotia.

In still another field, scientists are studying chemical reactions at high temperatures, similar to those which occur in steel manufacture.

"A study of slags, which are composed to a large extent of silicates, has led to a considerable development in silicate chemistry which may help the glass industry," Dr. Neish said.

He added that the laboratory is looking into the chemical reaction of drugs on the nervous system. He said there is a need for better understanding of the relation between drugs and their effect on human behavior.

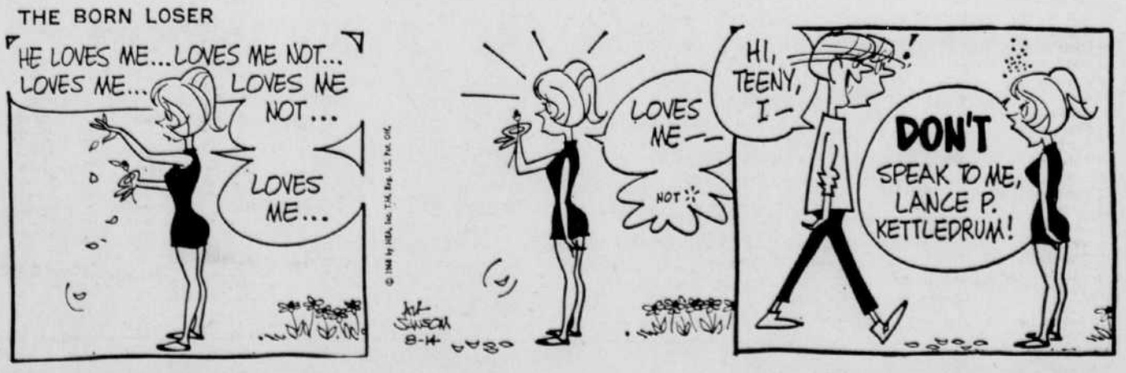
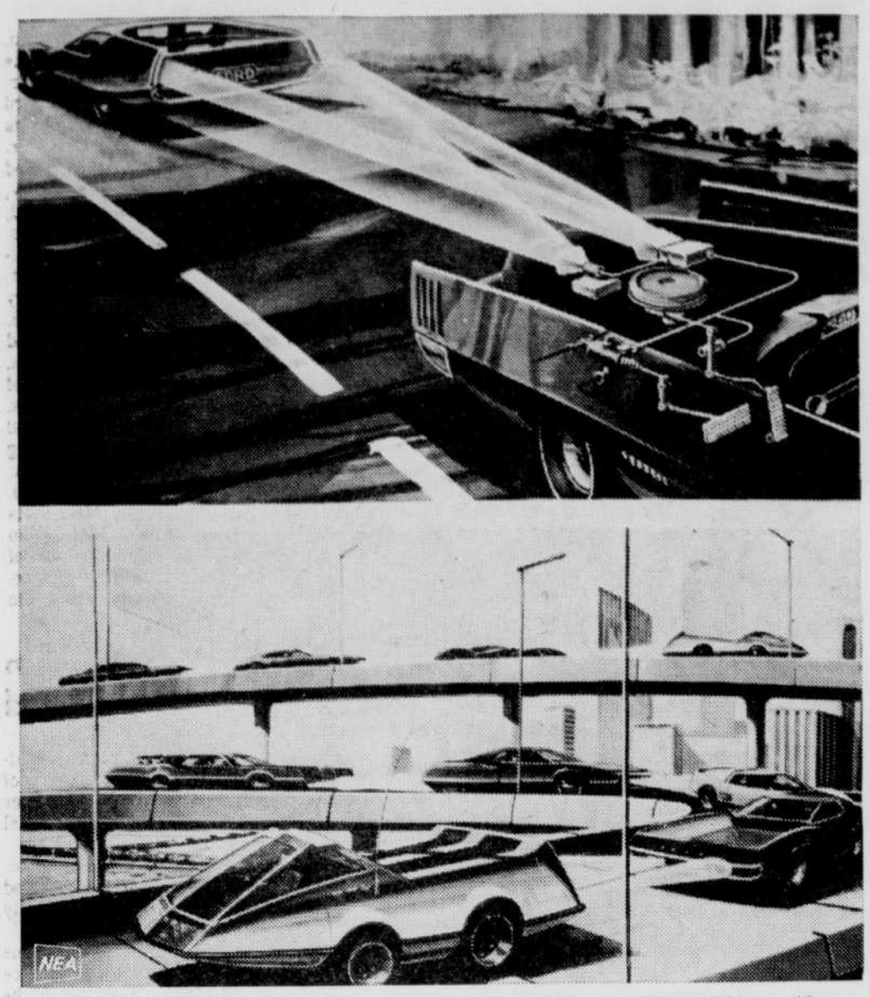
THE BORN LOSER





TWO NEW CONCEPTS in electronic control of automobiles are illustrated here. Above is Automatic Headway Control. The trailing car is equipped with a transmitter which projects an invisible beam at the auto ahead. Taillights of the front vehicle reflect the beam back to a receiver. A computer "reads" the signal and adjusts brakes and accelerator automatically so that a preset safe following distance will be maintained. Below is Minigap, in which cars are linked together by invisible electronic beams into highway caravans that follow specially built leader vehicles. Computers inside the autos would take over control from motorists, who would thus be freed from the driving task as long as they were "hooked up." Ford research engineers are planning to develop the concepts for further study.

Musical program is highlight of annual reception at Wales Home

RICHMOND — The annual reception at the Wales Homes held on August 7 was well attended by friends from the Richmond area, as well as from other points in the Eastern Townships. The spacious living-room, where residents and their friends gathered for the program, was decorated with summer flowers. Guests were greeted on arrival by G. Marveau Alexander, president, R. J. Butler, secretary, Mrs. M. Armstrong, matron, and other members of the corporation. Mrs. Enid Abercrombie was in charge of the guest book.

The program began with the singing of O Canada, after which Mr. Alexander welcomed the audience, stating that he was appreciative of the honor of being elected president, and was looking forward to his term of office with pleasure, which will be assured by the help of the capable staff of the Home. He recalled his association with the beginnings of the Wales Home, when he drove his father there to attend to the affairs of the late Mr. Wales.

An enjoyable musical program was presented by Mrs. C. N. Stevens and guest artists, Miss Lise Beaubien, Miss Heather Kerr and Mr. Donald McPherson. Four piano solos were given by Miss Beaubien. Miss Kerr's soprano solos were A Brown Bird Singing, and selections from the Sound of Music. Mrs. Stevens was also the accompanist.

The opening and closing numbers were songs by Mr. McPherson, who chose as his numbers, The King of the Storm, The Clank of the Foreman's Steel, with The Lord's Prayer as the finale.

Mrs. Stevens and the artists were thanked by Fred Sangster.

The guest speaker was Dr. J. D. Jefferis, who has just retired from his teaching duties at Bishop's University. Dr. Jefferis spoke with humor and understanding about the adolescents of today. He stated that they are quite different from the young people of a generation ago, and this change of attitude is shown to the public by the sit-down strikes, protest marches and even open rebellion that has occurred in our Canadian universities in the past year. In France it has even come to the point of a shooting war between the students and the State.

INSECURITY BASIC CAUSE

Psychologists tell us that probably the basic cause of this unrest in younger people is a feeling of insecurity, but we wonder why they should be so troubled by insecurity. The answer may be that so many of our young people are the children of very young parents, and htey have been brought up in small apartments and one-family homes, in an atmosphere of insecurity. In previous generations, there were more people living in the home, and there were almost always grandparents. There is nothing like grandparents living in the home to give children a sense of continuity and security.

The sense of insecurity shows shows itself in their behaviour, particularly in their attitude towards "falling in love" and in their manner of dress and general appearance.

Dr. Jefferis concluded by saying that "they are not to blame for feeling insecure, for they are living in a world in which insecurity seems to be regarded as a natural condition of mankind. There is legislation to provide many benefits. This is a good thing in one sense, but the law by which the government promises us security carries the implication that mankind has to be insecure. We older folks were brought up to rely on ourselves, not the government, and to provide our own security. It was something to achieve for ourselves, and it was a natural thing."

The speaker was introduced by Eric Morrison of Massawippi, and thanked for his interesting address by Norman Flood of Waterloo.

Following the program's closing by the singing of God Save the Queen, guests were invited to the residents' dining-room where refreshments were served at the attractively decorated small tables. They were welcomed at the door by Mrs. R. Andrews, vice-president of the auxiliary, in the absence of the president, Mrs. George Walker.

Serving of the tea was under the direction of Mrs. Stewart Henderson, who was assisted by Mrs. S. McGee ,Mrs. E. Borden, Mrs. E. Stimson, Mrs. R. Mason, Mrs. S. J. Henderson, Mrs. L. Oakley, Mrs. E. Taylor, Miss Helen Taylor, Mrs. A. Mallette, Miss Kathleen Mills, Mrs. W. Lancaster, Mrs. L. Taber, Mrs. M. Hughes, Mrs. Myrlin Griffith, Mrs. L. Stalker, Mrs. L. Perron, Mrs. T. Menard, Mrs. R. Larochelle, as well as members of the nursing and kitchen staff.

Tea was poured by Mrs. C. Spence, Mrs. M. Fraser, Mrs. M. Morrill, Mrs. G. M. Alexander, Mrs. P. Perron and Miss E. Dunn.

Sandwiches were convened by Mrs. R. Andrews, and made with the assistance of Mrs. H. Frazer, Mrs. J. Barrington, Mrs. A. R. Turner, Mrs. A. Bricker, Mrs. I. Hazard, Miss F. Fletcher, Mrs. E. Newell, Mrs. I. Fallona, Mrs. Melvin Girffith, Mrs. G. Patrick, Miss Mabel Boast, Mrs. F. Converse, Mrs. H. Brown Mrs. G. M. Alexander, and members of the staff. Cakes were made by members of the local auxiliary and ladies' groups from the four local churches. Mrs. G. Patrick was responsible for the arrangement of the floral decorations.

The members of the auxiliary and staff were thanked by the president for the preparing of refreshments and all other assistance which contributed to the enjoyment and success of the afternoon.

Sher-Lenn Little League All-Stars shutout Windsor 1-0 in opening game

WINDSOR, Ont., — An error by Ed Kaput, Windsor's second baseman, in the top of the seventh inning, allowed a run to cross the plate and that was all Sher - Lenn Little League All-Stars needed to post a 1-0 win last evening in the first game of the Little League Dominion finals.

NORMAND HOULE

Coach Amedee Roy and his All - Stars will play their second game of the series Thursday evening at 6.30 p.m., against Glace Bay, N.S. This evening will be Calgary against Whalley, B.C. Gordon Breen, Sports Director of CKTS, will broadcast the game live from Windsor.

Normand Houle, an outstanding figure in Sher - Lenn team's success, came up with his fourth shutout in play-offs so far. In last night's game he chalked up 11 strikeout; his opponent in the game, Hadju struckout eight men.

Sher - Lenn threatened in the top half of the opening inning when Roger Roy and Normand Houle were issued bases on balls, but the threat ended when Yves Longpre went out pitcher to first and Bob Laforest struckout.

Houle retired Simpson, the first batter to face him, and got the next two men out on infield outs. Hadju struckout the side in the second inning. A hit by Chaborek, rightfielder for Windsor, and a walk to Russ was all for Windsor in the second. Houle, in the inning, came up with his second and third strikeouts.

In the top of the third Denis Rose came up with Sher-Lenn's first hit but two strikeouts ended any threat of scoring. Houle got two more strikeouts in the Windsor part of the third, Yves Longpre led off the top of the fourth with a double but that was as far as he got as Hadju had three easy infield outs.

It was nothing across for Windsor in the fourth, Houle again striking out two men. Denis Rose came up with his second hit of the game in the top of the fifth but again Hadju got the side out without any danger of scoring. In the fifth Houle was the master again retiring the three men to face him.

A single by Simpson was all for either team in the sixth to force extra innings. Top of the seventh along came the break that each team was looking for and it was in Sher - Lenn's favor. Four errors were chalked up against the Windsor squad.

Pierre Provencher, first man up, banged a single, they got Randy Warner at first but there was an error on the play and Provencher going to second was caught making it two away. Denis Choquette, next batter, got on with a single to centerfield. The centerfielder's throw to second was wild and Choquette went on to second, Denis Rose also got on with an error sending Choquette to third.

Rogher Roy next batter saw fourth error in a row by Windsor. This error sent Choquette home with what proved to be the winning run. Houle was the third out in the inning.

Last of the seventh was Houle's big one Chaborek first man up went out on a fly to third base. Kaboda pinch hitting for Belam connected for a single, Colton and Cabat the next two men went down swinging and gave the Sher-Lenn a close 1-0 win. A great game by both teams and witnessed by 7,000 spectators.

Miners dump Als, Cards can wrap up title race tonight

Granby Cardinals require only one more victory to ensure them of first place in the Provincial League and the loop championship. Last evening they lost a chance to finish in a tie for the crown when they dropped a close 7-5 decision to Plessisville Braves.

The Miners of Thetford chalked up a 10-4 win over the Sherbrooke Alouettes to move them within a half game of the fifth-place Lachine Mets. The Als are still in fourth spot a game and a half behind Quebec.

The Cards could settle the issue this evening when they move into Quebec while the Royals of Drummondville are at home to Plessisville. If the Royals lose and the Cards win the battle will end.

The Miners had little trouble in chalking up their seventh straight win last evening before some 1,277 odd fans. They have won nine of their last ten games and are at present one of the hottest teams in the Ellyson circuit.

The Als got off to a good start when they chalked up two runs in the opening frame but then the roof caved in as Billy Bates' crew blasted a total of 14 hits off the offerings of Pedro Sierra and Dick Williams.

Jose Herrera posted his third win against no losses since joining the Miners. He gave up ten hits, walked three and stopped six at the plate for his win. The Miners posted their first run in the second inning on a walk to Jim Beckman and singles by Ramon de la Cruz and Jose Herrera.

In the fourth inning they had their big frame when they pushed seven runs across the plate. They bunched five hits, three doubles, along with three walks to put the decision out of reach of the Als. A total of 12 men went to the plate in the assault.

In the fifth the Miners came up with two more runs before the Als staged a slight rally to chalk up a run in the sixth. Singles by Wiezezak, Felipe and Sabather did the slight damage. In the eighth they registered their final run when Jim Ridley, Gilles St. Onge and Sabather connected for bingles.

Sabather banged out three singles with a homer going to Wiezezak. Ridley had two singles while Andy Occhionero got a double with singles to St. Onge and Felipe. Billy Bouier was the best for the Miners with two doubles and a single.

Nick Testa, who was injured last week, started behind the plate for the Als but was obliged give up his place after four innings. de Leon finished the game for the Als.

Twenty-one magic number for Willie Mays, Marichal wins

Twenty-one is the magic number for Willie Mays and Juan Marichal. Mays needs them and Marichal has them.

Marichal won his 21st game of the season Tuesday night as San Francisco blanked Pittsburgh 3-0 on Mays' 579th career homer —leaving Willie just 21 short of the coveted 600 mark.

The homer was only the second in a month for Mays and his 15th this season. His last one was on Aug. 2, also against the Pirates.

Marichal pitched a two-hitter and now is 14-1 on the road and only 7-4 at home this season.

The shutout was the 37th of his career, placing him second on the all-time Giant list one ahead of Carl Hubbell. Christy Mathewson holds the club record with 83.

Elsewhere in the National League, Chicago's rampaging Cubs walloped St. Louis 10-3, New York used three pitchers to shut out Los Angeles 2-0, Cincinnati outslugged Atlanta 9-8 and Houston split a twi-night doubleheader with Philadelphia, winning 5-0 and losing 4-2.

LENGTHY DUEL

Marichal was locked in a scoreless duel with Pittsburgh's Bob Veale until the eighth. Then Hal Lanier walked and Ron Hunt was hit by a pitch, setting the stage for Mays.

The only Pirate hits against Marichal were a leadoff single by Maury Wills in the first and a one-out single by Donn Clendenon in the second. Two walks helped Pittsburgh load the bases with two out in the second, but Marichal struck out Veale to end the threat.

The Cubs, valiantly trying to create a pennant race in the NL, beat St. Louis for the seventh straight time with Ron Santo driving in four runs on a double and a homer.

The victory left the second place Cubs 12 games back of the Cardinals.

New York's Don Cardwell had the Dodgers shut out on three hits until the ninth, but when Len Gabrielson and Willie Davis opened with singles, Met manager Gil Hodges brought on southpaw Billy Short to face left-handed batter Tom Haller.

The strategy worked with Haller, attempting to bunt, forcing Gabrielson at third. Then Hodges brought Cal Koonce in to retire Ken Boyer and Bob Bailey and wrap it up.

CARDENAS TIES IT

Leo Cardenas' ninth-inning homer tied the game for Cincinnati and the Reds beat the Braves in the 10th on Mack Jones' double and a run-scoring single by Tony Perez.

The Reds tagged 19 hits—four of them by Pete Rose—and the Braves had 16 safeties. Fred Whitfield drove in three runs with a single and his first homer of the year for Cincinnati while Felix Millan and Bob Johnson had three hits each and Tito Francona three RBI for Atlanta.

Don Wilson pitched a four-hitter and Doug Rader tagged a two-run homer, helping Houston to its first-game victory over Philadelphia.

Rich Allen's two-run homer in the second inning of the nightcap halted a 30-inning Philadelphia scoring drought and the Phillies gained the split when Gary Sutherland's pinch single drove in the tie-breaking run in a two-run seventh inning rally.

SHAVING STROKES

by Frank Beard

30-Putting Psychology

Written for Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

I talked about the necessity of confidence in playing bunker shots. When it comes to the next, and perhaps most vital phase of golf, that confidence becomes the most important element.

No one can teach you how to putt. Successful putting is all in your head, with one physical proviso—you must be comfortable.

Styles vary. I grip the putter primarily in the fingers of the right hand, with the thumb on top of the shaft. My right hand does the major part of the stroking work, taking the club back and hitting it through the ball.

Like most of the pros, I use a reverse overlap, with the left forefinger over the fingers of the right hand, yet I never actually get the feeling that my left hand is doing anything.

My major adjustment in putting comes from the way I expect the putt to break after assessing the contours of the green and the grain of the grass. For a straight putt, I'll use a square stance, the line of my feet parallel to the flight of the ball. For a putt that breaks to the right, I'll open up my stance, and for one that breaks to the left, I'll close it—this footwork resembles the fading and hooking on normal shots, although not as exaggerated.

I'll add one word of caution. Keep your head still over the ball while in the act of putting. Moving it reflects your anxiety at seeing where the ball went, causing you to jerk your stroke. It also reflects a lack of confidence.

Twins' Carew banging away at merry clip, Tigers lose 1-0

Rod Carew is winning his match race with Elmer Flick . . . and Tony Oliva aims to make it a Twin Double.

Carew, the American League's leading hitter, cracked a double and two singles raising his average five points to .309 as Minnesota clubbed Washington 8-4 Tuesday night.

Oliva, the Twins' two-time batting champion, also drilled three hits to hold the No. 2 spot behind Carew and climb within two points of the elusive .300 mark.

Flick, an old-time Cleveland outfielder, won the 1905 batting title with a .306 mark . . . the lowest ever for a league leader. A month ago, it appeared the 1968 AL king would have the dubious distinction of lowering Flick's standard.

But Carew has launched a torried August spree and Oliva, back in the lineup after recovering from a leg injury, is starting to match his team-mate stride for stride.

In other American League games, Cleveland nipped first place Detroit 1-0 on Sonny Siebert's three-hitter; second place Baltimore snaded Oakland 6-5; Boston nudged Chicago 4-3 and New York trimmed California 3-2.

Oliva's three singles, good for three RBI, helped the Twins stake rookie Tom Hall to an 8-2 early lead and the 20-year-old left-hander posted his first major league victory with late relief help from Al Worthington.

Carew extended his hitting streak to 12 games with a pair of scratch singles and a two-run double. The Twins' second baseman has been swinging at a .442 clip, with 23-for-52, since taking off on July 31. The streak has boosted his average 26 points from .283.

Siebert struck out eight and stranded two Detroit runners on third in halting the Tigers' four-game winning streak. Larry Brown's bases-loaded single in the second inning delivered the only run of the game.

The Cleveland right-hander weathered a one-out triple by Mickey Stanley in the first inning, but did not allow another hit until Norm Cash singled in the seventh.

Don Buford, whose two-run single in the fourth broke a 3-3 tie, accounted for the Orioles' winning marker with a ninth-inning homer before relievers John Morris and Eddie Watt checked a last-ditch Oakland comeback at one run.

Baltimore's Dave McNally, bidding for his eighth straight victory, was knocked out in the fourth but Pete Richert hurled 3 1-3 innings of scoreless relief for his second victory in two nights.

Rico Petrocelli knocked in two early runs with a double and his 12th homer, then stroked a tie-breaking sacrifice fly after Ken Harrelson's eighth inning triple

B.C. house is made of cable

KELSEY BAY, B.C. (CP) — A house with a difference is going up near this community 130 miles north of Nanaimo on Vancouver Island—the entire structure is being made of cable.

The building is an extension of the Link and Pin Logging Museum built a few years ago on the site of a 50-year-old logging operation.

The cable-house adjoins the museum building and will serve as a coffee bar and handicrafts shop.

When the building is finished there will be about 20 tons or 9,000 feet of cable on it, owner Glen Duncan said.

Sculptured cut is hair style for Mr. Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — Maybe the reason editorial cartoonists frequently caricature the prime minister with a garland of laurel leaves around his head is that he has a sculptured haircut.

At least that's what his Ottawa barber, Robert Barton, calls it.

Mr. Trudeau, he says, patronizes his shop every three weeks for a wash, cut and sculpturing.

"He's losing his hair on top," Mr. Barton said, "so we try to fill in the spots."

Mr. Barton perfected the prime minister's hair style six months ago when the then justice minister first began to visit his shop. The hair on one side was swept towards the face, the other side following its natural line to the neck.

All Mr. Barton's "sculptured cuts" follow basically the same procedure, starting with shaping by an extremely fine electric razor and ending with combing and spraying.
