CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY.

CATARRH

cannot be cured by snuffs, washes or local applications. It is a weakness of the constitution, developing itself in the nasal organs first, afterwards extending to the throat and lungs, ending generally in Consumption, if not checked by proper remedies. Pains in the head, back, loins and weakness of kidneys are its attendant diseases. More people have Catarrh than any other disease. It is easily cured. Thousands of cases, some of power years' standing, have been entirely cured in New Hampshire and the Dominion the past three years, by the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy. Certificates to back the above, and a treatise on Catarrh sent free on application to E. J. R. Harding, Druggist, &c., Brockville, Ont. Send name on postcard, and it will only cost a cent. Price, $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. Sent to any address on receipt of money. For sale by all druggists. 114z

TAILORING.

BUY BROWN'S Everlasting TWEED PANTS. Price $2.00. No. 9 Chaboillez Square. 166z

CIRCULAR for AUTUMN 1876.

In returning my sincere thanks to my numerous customers for their liberal patronage, I beg to inform them and the public in general that owing to the present hard times I have been revising and reducing my entire stock of READY-MADE CLOTHING and DRY-GOODS at a great sacrifice I am also receiving daily new goods suitable for the present season, which are marked off at a small advance, these being no times to aim at making money, I am satisfied with a profit to cover expenses. Buyers from the country and city are requested to inspect my stock before purchasing elsewhere.

All goods marked in plain figures, and no second price made. Departments being too numerous to mention, I will only call special attention to my stock of CHILDREN'S, LADIES' and GENTS' UNDERCLOTHING, HOSIERY and GLOVES, amongst which there are some desperate bargains; a great portion being MR. GEO. RINGLAND'S

BANKRUPT STOCK.

The TAILORING DEPARTMENT will receive special attention, and is superintended by a first-class Cutter, and the best proof of the satisfaction we are giving to customers is that the business is continually increasing in it. Our MILLINERY DEPARTMENT is kept with all the latest novelties in American, French and English Goods.

For several urgent reasons I have adopted the strict cash system. I regret it, for some good customers, but in order to offend nobody credit will be given to no one, and this rule will prove more advantageous to all, except to those that never pay, as can be seen by the following items:—

Cost of a credit business, bad debts at least 5 per cent.

Interest lost by outstanding accounts, 5 per cent.

Book-keeping, collecting, &c., cost at least, 5 per cent.

So I can sell for cash 15 per cent cheaper, and do a more satisfactory business. The above is well worth the consideration of the cash customers.

Please call and judge for yourself.

PROPERTY FOR SALE.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY

Is the object which chiefly occupies our attention, yet few seem to observe the many ways by which they could save sufficient to make themselves rich,—such, for instance, as live in rented houses, pay large sums annually in shape of rent, for which they have nothing left at the end of the year, and is, therefore, a total loss to them. To utilise this great outlay, and with it provide homes for the people, with land sufficient to make them self-sustaining, has ever been the aim and object of the proprietor of Mount Royal Vale, and for this purpose he has set apart one thousand Villa Lots on the best part of his great property, each lot being forty feet front by a depth of one hundred and twenty, which he is selling for four hundred and eighty dollars per lot, payable in instalments equal to one dollar per week, without interest.

The lots north of Central Avenue will still be sold for three hundred dollars in payments equal to 50 cents per week. When one thousand lots are sold he will commence to erect buildings, to be paid for on equally liberal terms, from two dollars per week upwards, according to the cost of the building, which will be nearly one-half less than the city price, as he possesses an unlimited supply of brick, sand and stone with a never-failing supply of the purest water on every part of the property. Purchasers can have as many lots as they require, and build their own houses or hold their land vacant. Many are now arranging to lay out their grounds and plant shade and fruit trees. The soil being of the richest quality, when so planted and properly cultivated, will yield sufficient to sustain a family in comfort and respectability. The money now wasted as rent will pay their instalments, and in a few years they will find themselves the proud possessors of a magnificent homestead. Lots that are now sold for a few cents per foot will then be worth ten times that amount. This is no vain exaggeration; it is as plain and as true as that two and two make four. Neglect to purchase those lots will evince a lamentable want of intelligence, a positive dislike to make and save money, where there is not the shadow of a chance to lose.

Young men should bear particularly in mind that an effort to become proprietors is the first great step towards establishing a name and credit, showing that they intend to sow other seeds than wild oats.

The place is fast becoming a very important suburb; omnibuses run to and from the city post office at hours to suit the people by way of Dorchester street to Sherbrooke street toll-gate, thence by Cote St. Antoine and Cote St. Luke Roads, entering the Vale nearly opposite Monklands or Villa Maria. After the first of May next passes will be issued for fifty cents per week for one round trip daily.

The lots are free from all encumbrance. The title deeds and registry searches will be submitted to purchaser's attorney, and other information from Mr. T. F. O'Brien, at 532 St. Mary street, every morning at 9 o'clock, and at Mount Royal Vale at 2 o'clock p.m. 210

Vol. VIII.....No. 211.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1876.

ANOTHER brute has been before the Police Magistrate for indecent behavior and making villainous propositions to some unprotected little girls. The sentence inflicted was only one of six months' imprisonment with hard labor, and we must say that we strongly protest against the inadequacy of the punishment. The offence of the latest beast sent down to swell the jail calender was one deserving of the "cat," and until it is used to some purpose we shall continue to hear of the outrages which are disgracing our city. Let the Police Magistrate brace up and apply the law in all its vigor. He will have the moral support of every respectable citizen in rigorously punishing every convicted offender against the honor of women and girls.

THE LESSON OF FIRE.—After the conflagrations of St. Johns, Quebec, and St. Hyacinthe, underwriters may well look at their books in dismay, and question the advisability of farther doing business in a community that is so exposed to the ravages of fire, and so ill-provided with means of staying its progress. They have been going on for years taking risks in towns whose complete fire system consisted of one or two hand-pumps in charge of an amateur fire brigade, whose organization never excelled that of a company of boy soldiers marching grandly with wooden guns. They have ever placed infinite reliance upon the cistern, half-filled with mud and stones, and generally inaccessible, and if they have, until the present year, escaped serious losses, the fact is due more to the act of Providence to than their prudence or business sagacity.

However, the mischief has been done. What we pointed out after the St. Johns fire as likely to be the consequence of the general disregard in the country of the cautionary measures against fire that prudence suggests in all well organized communities, has been realized in St. Hyacinthe and at Seaforth. We said then, that there was not one effective fire service between Montreal and Levis, and there was every probability of the St. Johns conflagration being followed by others if the people did not arm themselves against disaster. People read articles of this kind, admit their truth and aptness upon general principles, but seldom realize what their importance is until the fire is around their own rooftrees, and help far away or actually unattainable. When life and property are sacrificed to procrastination or the miserable spirit of niggardliness which measures every public benefit by the extent of its prospective inroad upon the individual purse; when widespread disaster follows because of neglect, public and private, there are weepings and wailings for help, which would have never been necessitated had communities properly accepted their responsibilities, prepared for eventualities which are certain in the course of time to befall them, and had their houses in order, so to speak, to meet any threatened calamity. But no. St. Johns was found without engine or water; St. Hyacinthe also without engines or water, without police protection, without effective official organization, without any arrangement for the protection of life and property; pillage raging as the fire advanced, confusion and wild dismay increasing as the flames seized home after home and street after street, disorganization and imbecility everywhere rampant—such are the features recorded of both these fires, and there is no reason in the world why two thriving towns should present such a discreditable picture to the world. Though it may seem cruel at this time to arraign the St. Hyacinthians, we say plainly that it was little less than criminal on the part of the community to have remained at the mercy of fire, possessed of only such antediluvian apparatus as the useless hand engines they brought out to trickle on the flames; to have been content with choked-up water pipes and general disorganization. The example of St. Johns should have stimulated them to action, if not from ambition to be as well provided for as other municipalities, at least from the stronger feeling of self-interest. The experience of others has had no lesson for them. Look at the result. A town in ashes. Hundreds of families destitute. Thousands with no other roof than the sky, and a Canadian winter approaching. Thousands depending upon the warm-hearted charity of their fellow-countrymen at a distance for their daily bread. Millions of wealth dissipated in smoke, and commercial interests widely threatened. The community itself thrown back ten years in its material progress. And all because of the want of a steam fire-engine, an adequate supply of hose and effective water service, and a small skilled body of men to defend the town from the ravages of flame.

St. Hyacinthe has suffered bitterly, but she has not been alone in the sin against ordinary forethought and prudence. With the exception of Sherbrooke, which is partially protected, there is not a town or village on the south shore of the St. Lawrence, from St. Lamberts to Levis, and from Levis to the Gulf, that can boast anything like adequate provision against fire. Most municipalities are, to all intents and purposes, perfectly destitute of any modern appliances, and the inhabitants are at the mercy of an element that knows no mercy. Warnings fall unheeded upon people who never see in the calamities of their neighbors foreshadowings of disasters which may any moment befall themselves, and who are content, so long as they can obtain insurance anyhow and anywhere, to live in timber boxes, surrounded by like tinder boxes, and entirely unprotected. This state of things cannot last for ever, and a change must be effected by a strong hand. Montreal has a right to protest, for she is being year after year called upon to pay for losses incurred through stupidity, narrowminded niggardliness, ignorance and official imbecility. She is bled first to pay up insurance losses, and secondly, to help people who should never have needed help. She is a loser financially and commercially in every conflagration; in short, she is made the milch cow in every case of disaster. She has to protest, in the name of humanity, against the virtual slaughter which these conflagrations always entail, and she may demand with the best possible show of right that the Legislature shall interfere to bring about a new and better order of things.

The time has plainly come for the institution of an effective system of Provincial Fire Inspection, coupled with the provision that every community governed under the provisions of the Municipal code, shall provide itself with, and keep in efficient working order, one or more engines, adequate to the requirements of the locality, and maintain regularly-paid firemen in sufficient numbers to man these engines. Inspectors appointed by the Government, should not be mere ornamental possessors of sinecures, like too many of the individuals drawing Provincial and Federal salaries, but active, working officers, moving constantly through their districts, and reporting to the head of the Provincial Police Department. It would be well, indeed, to extend the operations of the Police Act of 1869, so as to cover the whole Province. There are reasons sufficient for making the acceptance of its provisions compulsory instead of optional. The robberies and general pillage attending the fires in St. Johns and St. Hyacinthe, and outside of them an unhappy increase of crimes of violence throughout the country, point to the necessity of the establishment of a body which, like the Irish constabulary, shall act under one organized head, and be under Governmental instead of Municipal control. Fire inspection, however, is the subject which first demands attention, and we commend it to the earnest attention of the Government. There is ample time before the meeting of the Legislature to prepare a measure looking to the more effectual protection of life and property in the country parts. That such a measure is required, the events of the year eloquently demonstrate, and we trust that Mr. DeBoucherville's Cabinet will make a point of taking it up at once.

CITY NEWS.

— His Worship the Mayor and Aldermen Nelson and David, are at present on a visit to the Centennial at Philadelphia.

— Mr. William Scullion, Secretary of the "Celtic" Lacrosse Club, writes that he would like to know how the "White Stars" claim the junior championship, as they were, no later than Saturday last, whipped in three straights by the "Celtic" club.

— The funeral of the late Dr. Taylor will take place to-morrow afternoon, at 2.30, at Erskine Church. All the city clergy will attend, and the Dean of Montreal will assist at the service. The funeral cermon will be preached on Sunday evening by the Rev. Mr. Black, in Erskine Church.

MINK SHOT.—Yesterday a mink was shot in the Central Fire Station by one of the firemen. The little animal, it seems was on a foraging expedition and had succeeded in seizing a chicken by the neck.

ACCIDENT.—Louis Diziere dit Larose, 70 years of age, fell from his cart yesterday while engaged in removing wood on the wharf; one of his legs was broken below the knee by the wheels passing over it. He was taken to his residence in Lusigan street by one of the water police.

BRIEFLETS.—The broken-down shanty on Dorchester street, opposite St. Phillip street, should be removed before it comes down of its own weight....There is a dangerous hole in Dorchester street, opposite No. 368....The photograph of the Glasgow Lacrosse Team may be seen in Dawson's window....The Fifth Fusileers marched to the Champ de Mars last night, where they were exercised in trooping the colors.

FIRST FOX HUNT OF THE SEASON.—Quite an exciting fox hunt took place yesterday in a lumber yard, corner of Wanguinet and Dorchester streets. A passer-by saw a fine red fox standing in an open space between two piles of lumber, and while he was revolving in his mind how to circumvent the animal, a volley of stones was fired at Reynard by several huntsmen, who suddenly came out of their hiding-place. The run that followed between five men and a fox, and the blow struck vainly in the air, were very ludicrous. Reynard is still at large.

THE GERMAN ENTERTAINMENT.—To the Editor of the STAR: DEAR SIR,—Permit me to correct an error frequently repeated in your paper, as it places the German Society of this city in a false light in the eyes of the community. In your edition of yesterday your reporter stated that "a dramatic entertainment was given in Nordheimer's Hall under the auspices of the German Society," whilst the German Society is known as a national society with much higher and graver aims than that of a dramatic club. The dramatic club who gave the entertainment spoken of is composed of a number of young Germans and is called "Eintracht," and has been established about a year.—A MEMBER OF THE GERMAN SOCIETY.

THE ST. HYACINTHE FIRE.

It is now alleged that the fire was set by a man named Blanchette, who insured his premises on Friday for $2,000. On Saturday he told some one that he feared his premises would be burned. He left the town, but turned up during the fire. One Letcuf is also said to know something of the matter. Blanchette is in custody. The total loss to insurance companies is given at $270,000.

It is now said to be certain that there is no loss of life. The only man injured, Gladu, is doing well.

The Gazette says:—A number of persons were insured in the various companies, whose policies had expired a few days before. One of these—that of Mr. Duaine, formerly of Montreal—was in the Stadacona for $1,000, and was not expunged from the books of the Company's agent at the time of the fire. It had run out two days previously.

CATHOLIC YOUNG MEN'S SOCIETY.

Last evening a most successful entertainment was held in the rooms of the Catholic Young Men's Society, St. Joseph street, on the occasion of presenting the prizes to the successful competitors at the recent sports and regatta. There was a large and most respectable gathering including the Secretary of the Montreal Branch of the Home Rule League, Mr. McNamara, Messrs. Wilson, Stroud, Murphy and Jarvis, and many others. Quite a number of ladies were present. The room was tastefully decorated for the occasion, and presented an unusually attractive appearance. A well selected programme was rendered in a most creditable manner, as indeed, it is certain to be when such artistes as Mrs. Farmer and Mrs. O'Shea are present. The evening's entertainment was brought to a close by the orchestra rendering "God Save the Queen."

MR. DISRAELI'S LAST NIGHT IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

A correspondent says:

Whatever of dramatic effect there may from time to time have been in Mr. Disraeli's career in the House of Commons, his leave-taking was of the quietest. None in the House off the Treasury bench, and not all who sat there, had any idea that when, after the Appropriation Bill had been read a third time, close upon the midnight of Friday, the 11th August, Mr. Disraeli took up his hat, and, with his usual shrug of the shoulders, as if steadying himself for the exercise, walked out of the House, he would never return. The secret of his elevation to the peerage had been kept with remarkable success. The Marquis of Hartington went away without the slightest suspicion that he had for the last time seen Mr. Disraeli seated opposite to him. Even the whips on the Conservative side knew nothing of it; and when about midnight the rumor ran through the House, they discredited it. That was no difficult thing, for no one was inclined to believe it. I understand that the right hon. gentleman's scruples on the matter were overcome by the repeated solicitations, which in this case were commands, of the highest lady in the land.

RE-OPENING OF CHESTER CATHEDRAL.

After having, through a course of neglect, extending over two centuries, been allowed to fall into a state of almost absolute ruin, and after having been partially closed (for restoration) for over eight years, the old Cathedral of Saints Werburg and Oswald, at Chester, was on Tuesday reopened for Divine service, amid the rejoicings of the citizens of Chester and the inhabitants of the diocese generally. The works have cost over £30,000. The bulk of this has been provided by public subscription, and, in addition, there have been many private gifts. The Duke of Westminster has presented an organ-screen composed of pillars of Corinthian marble; the Freemasons of Cheshire, a carved oak pulpit; the Freemasons of Lancashire, a sedilla for the choir; and all the stalls have been provided by the liberality of private persons or parishes. The architect gave a brass corona or candelabrum, containing 365 lights, and weighing two tons and a half. The old church of St. Oswald has been thrown into the Cathedral, increasing its internal accommodation, which was previously very inadequate.

NEWSPAPERS AT THE CENTENNIAL.

The special correspondent of the London Times says it would be difficult to find an apter illustration of the big way in which the Americans do things than that furnished by the "Centennial Newspaper Building," in the Exhibition grounds. Here you may see any one, or, if you like, all of the 8,129 newspapers published regularly in the United States, and see them, one and all, for nothing! You are not only permitted as a favor to see them, but invited, nay, pressed, to confer the favor of entering the building and calling for what paper you like. It is about as cool and agreeable a place—quite apart from its literary attractions—as a visitor to the Exhibition could wish to be offered a chair in. He may, at first, wonder how, among 8,000 papers, among them such mighty sheets as the New York Herald, he is to get at the small, loved print of his home, thousands of miles away, it may be over the Rocky Mountains. But the management is so simple that, by consulting the catalogue, any one can at once find whatever paper he wants. They are pigeon-holed on shelves in the alphabetical order of their States or Territories and their towns, the names of which are clearly labelled on the shelves. The proprietors of the Centennial Newspaper Building are advertising agents, the largest in all America—Messrs. G. P. Rowell & Co., of New York. Their enterprise will cost about $20,000, or £4,000, including the building and the expenses of "running" it for six months. The 8,000 and odd American newspapers are declared by the same authority to exceed "the combined issues of all the other nations of the earth."

THE Stanstead Wesleyan College reopens to-day after the long vacation. This admirable educational institution is already well known all over the Dominion for the thorough solid and practical education it imparts to the students, as well as for its moderate rate of terms. The staff of teachers is large, while the entire expansion of the establishment is under the charge of the Rev. A. Lee Holmes, M.A., the Principal, which at once gives a sufficient guarantee of the thorough good management of the institution. The college is beautifully situated, and is in a most healthy position.

THE FUEL MARKET.

WEDNESDAY, September 6.

The price of coal has decreased somewhat during the week, and a comparatively active business was done. New York coal-dealers are taking steps to open up a trade in coal with South America and the West Indian Islands, where hard coal of all descriptions finds ready sale at comparatively speaking, very high prices. The breaking up of the combination in New York is not expected to make coal cheaper at all—that is, as soon as the stocks sold by auction are disposed of, because prices, as they now stand, are so low, that if coa be delivered at cheaper figures it will com off the wages of the men. A large quantity of hard coal has been shipped to Montreal during the week from the Lackawanna valley, and also from Kingston. Prices are: Stove, $6.50; egg, $6; chestnut, $6; grate, $5.50; steam, $4.50 to $5; Welsh, $6 to $6.50; (the demand for the last mentioned coal was not very brisk.) The wood market has improved during the week, and a good deal has been shipped here, mostly from Carillon and St. Andrews. The following are the quotations:—Maple, $6.50 to $7; birch, $6 to $6.50; beech, $5.50 to $6; tamarac, $5 to $6. Coke, for which an increasing demand was experienced during the week, is quoted at $4 a chaldron.

THE SMALL POX AT ST. JEAN BAPTISTE. —One of the sufferers of the small-pox referred to in the STAR of Wednesday last, a child, residing in St. Dominique street, St. Jean Baptiste Village, died on Monday last from the effects of this terrible disease. We have been informed no doctor has ever called in and that the matter was looked upon as a destine de Dieu. There are still three more cases in the same house receiving the same treatment. Would it not be well if the authorities were to take some steps in the matter?

"AN AMERICAN RESPONDING TO THE TOAST OF 'THE LADIES.'"

The following was delivered by Mr. Mark Turner at the Correspondents' Club Dinner, Washington:—Mr. President,—I love the sex, I love all women, sir, irrespective of age or color. (Laughter.) Mean intelligences cannot estimate what we owe to woman, sir. She sews on our buttons, mends our clothes, she ropes us in at the church fairs, she confides in us, she tells us whatever she can find out about the little private affairs of the neighbors. (Laughter.) She gives us advice, and plenty of it; she gives a piece of her mind sometimes, and sometimes all of it. (Laughter.) Wherever you place woman, sir, she is an ornament to that place which she occupies, and a treasure to the world. (Here the speaker paused, looking round upon his auditors inquiringly.) The applause ought to come in at this point. (Great laughter.) Look at Cleopatra, look at Desdemona, look at Florence Nightingale, look at Lucretia Borgia. (Voice, "No, no.") Well, suppose you let Lucretia slide. (Laughter.) Look at Mother Eve. (Cries of "Oh, oh," and laughter.) You need not look at her unless you want to; but Eve was an ornament, sir, particularly before the fashion changed. (Renewed laughter.) I repeat, sir, look at the illustrious Widow Machree, look at Lucy Stone, look at Elizabeth Stanton, look at George Francis Train—(great laughter)—and, sir, I say it with a bowed head and deep veneration, look at the mother of Washington, she "dragged up" a boy that could not lie. Could not lie! It might have been different had he been egged to a Newspaper Correspondents' (Groans, hisses, cries of "Put him out," and laughter.) I repeat, sir, that in whatever position you place a woman, she is an ornament to society, and a treasure to the world. As a sweetheart she has few equals, and no superiors. (Laughter.) As a cousin she is convenient; as a wealthy grandmother, with an incurable distemper, she is unspeakably precious. What would the people of the earth be without woman? They would be scarce, sir, perfectly scarce. (Renewed laughter.) Then let us cherish her, let us protect her, let us give her our support, our encouragement, our sympathy, ourselves, if we get a chance. (Laughter.) But jesting aside, Mr. President, woman is loveable, kind of heart, gracious, beautiful, worthy of all respect, of all deference. Not any here will refuse to drink her health right cordially in this goblet of wine, for each and every one of us has known, loved, and honored the best of them all—his mother. (Great applause.)

FOUR O'CLOCK

PROTESTANT FEMALE PRISONERS.—The new female prison being ready for occupancy, the Roman Catholic women undergoing sentences in the common jail will be shortly removed there. Owing to the sectarian question which has been raised, and which for some time past has been warmly discussed, the female prisoners professing Protestantism will not be removed, as influential persons have objected strongly to their being put in charge of the nuns, fearing that the prison will be made a proselytising ground where the minds of the incarcerated women may be strongly worked upon. The Government have offered to appoint a Protestant official to look after them, and of course the services of a Protestant chaplain are guaranteed, while the ladies who have carried on religious work in the jail heretofore are perfectly willing to continue their ministrations. As the question at issue is still unsettled, it has been decided not to remove them until a definite understanding has been arrived. The consequence is that the Protestant women will remain in the jail, burdened with all the work that has fallen heretofore to the whole body of female prisoners, and exposed to all the degrading influences designed to be remedied by the establishment of the new prison. This is far from a pleasing prospect. The horrors of the system have endured long enough, and produced sufficient vice and crime to demonstrate plainly that any change cannot fail of being for the better. To exclude these women from the benefits of an institution designed to reform female prisoners by cutting them off from evil associations, and gradually bringing them to a perception of what is good and right, is a retrograde movement which we cannot too strongly condemn. While it is perfectly proper for the representatives of Protestant opinion to stand up sturdily for their rights, there is such a thing as sectarianism run mad, and we do not believe that in rejecting the advantages offered by the new prison, those who head the movement in any way echo general Protestant thought. Their action simply amounts to cutting off the nose to spite the face, and it shows very incongruously in an age of enlightenment and progress. The Government, we have been informed, are prepared to do all that lies in their power to meet the demands of those who have undertaken to speak for the Protestant female prisoners, and it appears to us to be the very reverse of sound policy to meet them with peevish objections. It must be remembered also, that the division which is threatened will be attended by a large increase of expenditure and vexatious complications. Besides this, it is probable that every vicious woman who prefers the laxity of the jail to the rigid but kindly treatment of the nuns, will represent herself as a "Protestant," and thus, instead of about fifteen prisoners as at present, a very large and undesirable increase may have to be encountered. If the parties whose opposition has necessitated the determination to keep female prisoners calling themselves "Protestants" in a jail where seperation of the sexes is impossible, and exposed to all its degrading and demoralizing influences, will reconsider the gravity of the position they have assumed, we think they will shudder for the consequences for which they have become responsible.

CITY NEWS.

The interesting ceremony took place in St. George's Church, the Rev. James Carmichael officiating. The bridesmaids were: Miss Lovell, sister of the bride, and Miss Mary Josephine Tiffin. The church was well filled with a fashionable assemblage, the fair sex being largely represented. The happy pair leave this afternoon for New York.

ARCHBISHOP BOURGET.

HIS GRACE AT WORK AGAIN.

We are gratified to be able to state that Archbishop Bourget has during the last week greatly recovered from his agonizing complaint. His Grace yesterday, and on Monday, has been sufficiently well as to be able to leave his room. Yesterday, the venerable prelate passed upwards of two hours in his study writing letters and attending to other matters. Notwithstanding that he is still weak after his severe attack, he evinces the greatest anxiety in the welfare of the unfortunate sufferers by the fire at St. Hyacinthe. He wrote to the Seminary of St. Hyacinthe yesterday, offering every available assistance it was possible for him to render. He is also able to partake daily of strengthening nourishment, and the Good Sisters are hopeful of his ultimate recovery.

APTOMMAS' HARP RECITAL.

In response to the general wish of the select few who had the privilege of hearing him at the private harp recital in Mr. Goulds' piano rooms, a short time ago, Aptommas gave a public entertainment in the Natural History Society's Hall last night before a distinguished auditory. The room was completely filled with people capable of appreciating and competent to judge of the performance of this great master of the harp. The programme was a very fairly selected one, but the preludes was, we fancy, rather impatiently listened to, the hope of the audience pointing to Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata," the second item, for a novelty was expected. To attack such a composition on the harp, with the intent of giving it all the effect accustomed to be drawn from the piano, was no light undertaking, and in the adagio, the inferiority of the former was made only too apparent in jarring notes. But with the allegretto, all differences vanished, and apprehension gave way to unmixed delight as the artist infused his soul into the quivering strings. The concluding movement was a grand effect and drew forth thunderous applause, even from those who felt a little disappointed in having been treated to something as different from Beethoven's enchanting composition as it is possible to imagine. Aptommas has caught the soul of poetry there is in the Lieder ohne Worte—those songs without words that Mendelssohn has left as a precious bequest to the world of music—and his interpretation of the Spring song was most sweet. With scarcely an intermission, as the applause ended, he plunged into the "Harmonious Blacksmith," that grand inspiration of Handel, and electrified his hearers. It was in purely harp music, however, that he shone. In the grand fantasia on airs from Montague and Capulet, he had full scope for producing all the effects designed in the arrangement of Parish Alvars. Here his playing was simply a revelation, brooking no criticism, and defying description. In his own arrangements of Irish and Welsh air, he displayed marvellous powers. "St. Patrick's Day" was performed in such style as to draw forth thundering applause, and a demand for repetition which could not be denied. With a selection of Welch airs the recital closed, but closed by bringing enthusiasm to a climax, for during the play of the "March of the Men of Harlech" it was plainly evident that very many with difficulty repressed the emotions created by the martial defiant strains plucked from the strings by flying fingers that felt all the impulses of the war chant. The abrupt change to the less familiar air of "Ap Shenkin," cooled the excitement, but for several moments it was visibly intense: Loud and hearty applause greeted Aptommas on the conclusion of the programme. We trust the great harpist will determine upon giving another public entertainment before leaving Montreal.

CHURCH VENTILATION.

A St. John, N.B., paper says:—St. John Churches are notoriously ill-ventilated. In most of them no trouble is taken to admit fresh air during the services, or to purify the atmosphere between one service and another. Dr. Hepworth looked around the Congregational Church last Sunday morning, and, seeing no opening anywhere, asked to have the doors opened. "You build your churches here in St. John," he said, "as we build boxes in Massachusetts—hermetically sealed. We have breathed this air over two or three times already, and now I want some of God's air. If these windows are not made to open you had better knock one of them out." We hope our clergy will take the hint, and make a point of looking to the ventilation of their churches. They will not have so many sleepy people in the pews if they do.

THE PROJECTED MERSEY TUNNEL.

The project of tunnelling the Mersey is now gaining considerable impetus, and an announcement has been issued applying for a sum of £20,000 for the heading fund. Some important facts are cited in support of the project, viz.: that about 30,000,000 passengers cross the river Mersey annually, and that the traffic in goods amounts to 3,000,000 of tons, the transit of which at the present costs from 1s. 6d. to 2s. per ton. Mr. Walter Wood, of London, has the project in hand, and from his successful connection with the Milford Docks (Milford Haven), and other harbor and engineering schemes, speedy and satisfactory results are, we understand, anticipated. Mr. Wood is part proprietor of a harbor on the South Coast of England, and has recently obtained parliamentary permission to expend £100,000 on that undertaking. This £20,000 capital which is to be subscribed for the heading of the Mersey Tunnel is to be placed in trust, and is to be laid out solely for this purpose.—English paper.

THE FATE of the FAIREST.

A Story of Life.

He lay almost flat upon his face on the rough tiles, his right hand grasping the carved edge of the angle of the roof; gradually he worked his hand upwards, and by a tremendous exertion of strength, he drew himself and his companion up a foot at each movement. It was terrible labor—a fearful struggle with death. It seemed to those who gazed upon him a mere impossibility that he could save himself and the girl whom he still clutched round the waist.

On he went slowly, the bright flames lighting him in his task, but reducing his strength by the intense heat they threw out. He succeeded in getting one leg across the angle of the roof, but in doing so he slipped back at least two feet.

A shriek of horror burst from the crowd, and rose up in the air like a death wail.

The youth did not yet despair, but with desperate exertion he arrested his descent with his knees.

He paused but a moment, and renewed his efforts to ascend, using his knees now to enable him to maintain his position on the roof, while he elevated his body so as to extend his reach until he obtained a hold higher than before, and thus ultimately gained a place of comparative safety.

It was Hal Vivian who was with Flora Wilton in this frightful situation. He had crawled in search of her into an adjoining apartment to that which he had entered from the street. She had hurried thither to save something to which she knew her father attached great importance, but, overpowered by the smoke, she had, after securing it, fallen senseless.

Hal fortunately found her as soon as he got into the room, and the reflection from the fire below enabled him just to see the window. He tore it open, and saw that the parapet adjoined the roof of the next house.

He was now at the back of the building, and commenced the perilous task of endeavoring to escape a horrible death, and of saving, with his own, a life he esteemed far more valuable.

The falling roof of the house he had just quitted, when it sank with its dreadful crash, was within an ace of taking him with it. It was a fearful moment, but he surmounted it, and attempted to proceed at the instant the crowd caught sight of him. He heard not their cry, saw nothing, thought not of aught but the endeavor to reach a place of safety. He strained every nerve and sinew to accomplish his object, but human endurance, though backed by the urgings and the influence of a strong will, has its limits.

He now reached that point when, with sickening dismay, he found his strength failing him, and although his firmness and determination were unshaken, his power to go on was leaving him. To slacken his tenacious hold was to be hurled into the yawning gulph of fire behind him. He knew this well; the knowledge had as yet sustained him, and he clung to the roof still with desperation, resolved, notwithstanding the quivering of his fingers, the agonizing aching of the arm which supported Flora, and the trembling of his knees, to continue to the last his exertions to save the maiden, or to pass out of life with her.

Slowly rising up, as before, he made a clutch at the top of the roof, and caught it, but he found that, beyond drawing himself and the form of the senseless girl a little higher, he could do no more. It required an effort of unusual strength to reach the summit, where he believed he could remain safe until rescued, and that effort exhausted nature was incapable of making. Nay, he felt that he could but a few minutes longer cling there, and if some Heaven-sent aid did not reach him, his almost superhuman exertions would have been made in vain.

He remained motionless, trying to recover his spent breath, and, while in this thronging in the streets reached his ears, and seemed to rouse him from his slowly approaching listless incation. He breathed a prayer; a thought what Flora might yet be to him, and what that great world, of which he had yet seen to little, might have in store for him, flashed through his brain. The effect upon him was like the sound of a trumpet to the soldier at the moment of some fearful charge, in which death is the alternative of glory.

He drew himself upwards, struggling with the obstacles which seemed to try and force him backwards, and, almost with a scream, he found himself oscillating upon the spot he had with such try. ing exertion sought to reach, exhausted, and unable to make another effort.

A shadow fell upon him; he turned his feeble eyes upon the occasion of it, and saw one of the fire brigade, who, having laid a short ladder against the side of the roof, had mounted it and reached him.

Behind this man rose up the helmet of a second fireman, closely following his comrade in his work of mercy.

Hal knew at a glance that Flora and himself were saved. He no longer strove to continue the battle with fate, and did not attempt to resist the embrace of insensibility as he felt the grip of the fireman upon his collar, and heard undistinguishable words fall from his lips greeting him.

CHAPTER VI.

THE NOBLE GUESTS.

Mr. Grahame, though greatly agitated at the sudden appearance and abrupt disappearance of Nathan Gomer, at a moment of such dread importnce, did not make any comment upon it to Mr. Chewkle. He felt unequal to such a task, and perhaps, too, he thought that it would be better not to suppose the strange little moneyed either observed or suspected any foul play in the act he must have seen in commission. So he folded his arms, and remained silent, assuming the aspect of profound meditation.

Mr. Chewkle, finding the coast clear of the small enemy, would have given free vent to the feelings which were turbulent and in turmoil within him, but Mr. Grahame repressed the very first outbreak.

"Pray be silent on the matter," he observed, hastily, as if aroused suddenly from a fit of abstraction, "our speculations upon the situation are worth nothing, and may lead us astray if suffered to have the rein. Keep what you know safely locked within your own breast, trusting the key in my keeping alone. Your reward shall not certainly be less than your expectations. Mr. Gomer doubtless saw me affixing a signature to a deed, and would presume it to be my own; he could not imagine the truth; and therefore, though startled at the moment, I do not, upon reflection, see any occasion for alarm. Let me see you again in a few days, my good friend, and in the meantime endeavor to suggest a mode of bringing that wretchedly obstinate old man, Wilton, to listen to reason."

Mr. Grahame rang a hand-bell sharply, and Whelks instantly was in the room. Mr. Chewkle "had a thing to say," which had a strong reference to an immediate pecuniary supply; but Mr. Graham did not afford him the opportunity, for he addressed Whelks as he entered, and bade him escort Mr. Chewkle to the door. He tendered a finger to the commission agent as a parting salute, honored him with a stiff bow, and retired promptly to the further end of the library.

"This way if you please!" exclaimed Whelks to Chewkle, as with head erect and shoulders back, he, with the stateliness of a Tartar soldier at Astley's, marched out of the room.

Mr. Chewkle glanced at Mr. Grahame and at Whelks; he had a pressing occasion for a few pounds; but though he had quite made up his mind to ask for and have it, and indeed in a private self-communion on his way thither that morning, he had composed the conversation which was to terminate in a princely act of munificence towards him on the part of the latter personage, he found himself sneaking out, treading tiptoe on the shadow of Whelks, without having uttered a word or having obtained a penny.

The princely act of munificence did not come off, but he promised himself that before long it should; and, ere he was out of the house, he had flung his friendship for Grahame to the winds, and had carved for himself an antagonistic attitude, in which he played the part of one who, having in his possession a dreadful secret, by which the safety of another is compromised, makes money by it frequently.

As the door closed upon him, Mr. Graham turned a fitful gaze in that direction, and quickly, but silently, turned the key in the lock.

Then he paced up and down the library, almost convulsed by a fiercer, mental struggle. He pressed his burning palm upon his aching forehead, and muttered rapidly and wildly—"It must be done now; there is no escape—no escape—none—retreat is utterly impossible, and the advance must be swift, or, in spite of crime, utter crashing ruin must be the result. No; there is no stopping now. That forgery is useless, worthless, while he lives to prove it what it is. But how dispose of him without having any apparent connection with his death! Let me see! I must have no accomplice. I already have one too many; he will be a thorn in my side, I can see that; but there is time enough to think of the plan to get rid of him; but this Wilton he must die, and that immediately. Yes, he must die! he must die! or I perish! but how to kill him—how? how?"

AFFAIRS IN BRITAIN.

(From our own Correspondent.)

LONDON, August 23.

DISRAELI TO HIS CONSTITUENTS.

Consequent upon the occasion of being elevated to the Upper House, Mr. Benjamin Disraeli has issued his farewell address to the electors of the County of Buckingham in the following terms:—

To the Electors of the County of Buckingham:

GENTLEMEN,—The Queen having been graciously pleased to summon me to the House of Peers, I return to you the trust which, for so many years, you have confided to me as your member in the House of Commons, an assembly in which I have passed the greater part of my life.

It has been a period of trying occasions and memorable events, and I have been permitted to take some part in their management and control, next to the favor of our Sovereign, I am indebted for that opportunity to the fidelity of your feelings.

Throughout my public life I have aimed at two chief results. Not insensible to the principle of progress I have endeavored to reconcile change with that respect for tradition which is one of the main elements of our social strength; and in external affairs I have endeavored to develop and strengthen our empire, believing that combination of achievement and responsibility elevates the character and condition of a people.

It is not without emotion that I terminate a connection endeared to me by many memories and many ties; but I have the consolation of recollecting that, though I cease to be your member, I shall still have the happiness of living among you, and that, though not directly your representative, I may yet, in another House of Parliament, have the privilege of guarding over your interests and your honor.—Your deeply obliged and ever faithful servant,

B. DISRAELI.

Although but one day had elapsed since the foregoing address was issued the Liberal candidate, for the seat thus rendered vacant, was already in the field in the person of Lord Carington. It is apparent, from a large Liberal demonstration held yesterday in Wycombe Abbey Park, the seat of Lord Carington, that the Liberals will leave no stone unturned to secure the return of their nominee, who, by the way, has strong local claims on the electors. The Conservative candidate, up to the hour of writing, has not yet been brought forward.

SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

This energetic railway institution, as evinced in its proposed extensions and successful enterprises, is indeed following out "ward." Extensive additions are about to be made to the Charing-cross Hotel, and for this purpose a large block of property to the east of the existing hotel buildings, and extending from Villiers street to Buckingham street, has been purchased at an outlay of £50,000. It is the intention of the Company to extend the Strand frontage of the hotel from Villiers street to Buckingham street, which will involve the purchase, among other premises facing the Strand, of those at the corners of the streets mentioned. The new line from Greenwich to Woolwich, after surmounting many difficulties, has at last been finished and is now ready for public traffic. This important link in the South-Eastern system will be on the main line for North Kent, and will save about two miles in distance, whilst also avoiding the Blackheath tunnel. The new connection excites lively interest in the locality, and there is no doubt but that it will increase the existing, as well as create a new traffic.

CURRENT AFFAIRS.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has consented to lay the foundation stone of the new Glasgow Post Office, in October next.

The elevation of Mr. Benjamin Disraeli to the Peerage has drawn warm marks of approval from newspapers of all political stripes; even the French press, in noticing the event, generally take advantage of the opportunity to express respect for the new Lord Beaconsfield, and to do homage to his talents.

Lord Malmesbury has retired from the Cabinet office of Lord Privy Seal in Mr. Disraeli's Government, and has resumed the character of a free country gentleman, after thirty years of political life. In Lord Derby's first two Governments he held the post of Foreign Secretary, and in Derby's third, and in Mr. Disraeli's two Administrations he filled the office of Lord Privy Seal. At present, the new Earl of Beaconsfield, in addition to his duties as First Lord of the Treasury, will attend to those also of the Lord Privy Seal.

The "Vanguard," now lying on the Kish bank, is to be sold on the conditions that the buyer is to pay two-tnirds of the purchase-money within sixteen days of the bargain, and the balance within six months. The Government agree to repurchase from the buyer all the guns, projectiles, anchors and chain cables, which may be brought uninjured from the "Vanguard" to any harbor in the kingdom.

Steel plating is now to be introduced into the construction of war ships, by which a great diminution of weight will be gained, and a consequent increase of speed. The contract for the first six vessels of the new build has been given to Elder & Co., of Glasgow. The new ships will be corvettes of 2,300 tons, carrying fourteen guns each, and are intended for service on foreign stations. The steel will be strengthened by two thicknesses of teak, and coppered externally; the machinery and boilers will be protected by a strong armored deck. The corvettes are expected to maintain the high speed of twenty knots an hour. The present order will, to a certain degree, re-animate the depressed shipbuilding industry of the Clyde; but the plates are to be rolled at Sheffield.

The old Church of All Hallows, Bread street, is to be pulled down, and re-built in some other part of the metropolis to be approved of by the Bishop of London. The remains of the dead who moulder in its churchyard, are to be removed to Ilford, where a suitable monument will be erected. This church was built by Sir Christepher Wren, in 1680, on the site of one destroyed in the great fire of 1666.

On Saturday afternoon, Mr. John Johnes, late County Court judge for the counties of Carmarthen, Cardigan and Pembroke, Chairman of the Carmarthenshire Quarter Sessions, and Recorder of the Borough of Carmarthen, was shot dead by his butler, Henry Tremble. The murderer then shot Mrs. Cookman, a daughter of his first victim. A policeman attempted to arrest him, but he presented two revolvers and walked away defiantly. He next shot two dogs, and then committed suicide.

A violent thunderstorm, attended with a heavy rainfall, raged on Saturday evening and during Sunday, in London, and throughout the Provinces, resulting in great damage to property, though, fortunately, without loss of life.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Connaught (Prince Arthur) and Prince Leopold on Friday visited Lord Elphinstone's coal mine, at Carberry Town, Musselburgh, Scotland. The pit, on the occasion, was brilliantly illuminated by several thousands of colored lamps and Bengal lights, the extreme recesses being lighted up by the magnesium wire.

The Lunacy Commissioners (Earl of Shaftesbury, chairman) have just issued their annual report, showing that the ratio of lunatics to population in England and Wales continues to increase. In 1859, only 18·67 per 10,000 of the population appeared as lunatics, and since that year the growth has been rapidly increasing. In 1875 it was 26·54, and now it is 26·78 per 10,000. Among the lunatics there is a preponderance of females, and "pauper lunacy" is particularly in the ascendant.

A YANKEE OPINION.

(Philadelphia Times.)

The Canadian Government must look the issue squarely in the face whether it will build the Canadian Pacific Railroad or lose British Columbia. On this side the line there would seem to be but one opinion possible. British Columbia is of no possible advantage to the Dominion. It has now a rapidly-growing debt, and the Intercolonial Railway, along the north shore from Riviere du Loup to Halifax, must be run at a loss for many years. Any attempt to build a Pacific railroad north of the Northern Pacific will increase taxation to an extent that cannot be foreseen, for no one can tell how much it will sink every year. The best way for the Dominion is to say; "Wayward sister, go in peace."

TORTURE OF A TURK.

Mr. Peko Pavlovich, who has been appointed generalissimo of the Herzegovinian banditti, is probably one of the most eminent vivisectors living, and has invariably hitherto chosen his "subjects" amongst those noblest of animals technically described as belonging to the genus homo. His specialities are noses and ears; but he does not disdain scientific investigation with respect to other highly sensitive parts of the human body. To his ingenuity is to be ascribed the thrilling experiment to which an elderly major of Bashi-Bazouks was subjected, in the neighborhood of Trebigne. This major, whose name was Abdi-Aga, was not only elderly, but, unfortunately for him, fat and short-winded. His infirmities in these respects were the proximate cause of his falling into the hands of Mr. Pavlovich's command. The insurgents having retired upon Pulzze, carrying with them a few Turkish prisoners as "subjects" for their anatomist chief, Abdi-Aga was brought before the latter, who at once caused the following elaborate operation to be performed upon his person: An incision was made in the Aga's body, extending from his throat to a little below his waist, and the skin itself stripped off to the right and left, so as to form a sort of natural loose, open jacket. Double incisions were then made in each shoulder, the skin being torn away, and left hanging in the manner of epaulettes. The Aga, whose groans and cries under this manipulation displeased the chief operator, was then gagged, tied tightly upon a donkey with his face to the animal's tail, and driven with many blows and curses towards the Turkish encampment, his patriot escort only quitting him when within range of the outposts' rifles. Abdi died next morning in great agony.
