"It Will Work Wonders With this Generation of Men."

A Startling Advance in Medical Science is fully explained in a little book called Complete Manhood, and How to Attain It."

An earnest man who had suffered, hesitated, then put it to the test, writes thus:

"Well, I tell you that first day is one I'll never forget. I just bubbled with joy. I wanted to hug everybody and tell them that my old self had died yesterday and my new self was born to-day. Why didn't you tell me when I first wrote that I would find it this way?"

The man was not "made whole" as magic in a day—no man is—but in a moment he saw—KNEW—how he would be in a little while; he "saw the light" before he had finished the first chapter.

Every man who would know the grand truth, the plain facts, the new discoveries of medical science who would atone for past follies and avoid future pitfalls, should secure this book.

To simple "curiosity seekers," to those whose physical condition is perfect—to those who need no aid—to boys—we say emphatically this book is useless and uninteresting. It is purely medical and scientific, published to make known a system of treatment of incalculable value to men who need it.

If you are looking for something sentimental, frivolous improper, don't waste your time and ours by writing. This is not for you.

If you want advice, wisdom, warning, help, noble manhood—if you want to escape snares, traps, quackery—get this book now.

Write to the Erie Medical Co., 64 Niagara st., Buffalo, N. Y., and ask for copy "Complete Manhood." They will send it sealed in plain envelope, entirely free, for a short time. 75s

PLEADING FOR VALENTINE SHORTIS.

MR. GREENSHIELDS PRESENTS HIS SIDE OF THE CASE.

An Able Effort by the Counsel For the Defence who Reviewed the Case and Dwelt on Prisoner's Insanity.

(Special to the Star.)

Beauharnois, Que., October 29.—It was almost three o'clock before the first address to the jury was begun yesterday afternoon.

Mr. J. N. Greenshields who spoke first on behalf of the defence, occupied exactly three hours in the deliverance of one of his most powerful efforts. He spoke as follows:

May it please the Court; gentlemen of the jury:

"Thou shalt not kill." This was one of the commandments given by the Almighty Father to his chosen people, and as a result of the issue of that commandment, murder soon came to be regarded as the first of human crimes. "Thou shalt not kill," has been embodied in the panel code of every nation from that day down to the present time.

It is because of an infringement of this Divine command that we have been obliged to go through this lengthy and protracted trial. You, gentlemen, who are sitting in that box, have taken an oath to do justice to your Queen, and to the prisoner at the bar. If because of any passion, or from any preconceived ideas you render an unjust verdict, or a verdict against the facts; should you contribute to bring about a wrongful act and so imperil the life of the prisoner at the bar, you will contribute to an infringement of that Divine command, "Thou shalt not kill," to the same extent as though you had directly and individually taken the life of another."

When on the morning of that fatal 2nd of March people read that John Loy and Maxime Leboeuf had been killed, they said at once that the perpetrator of this awful tragedy deserved no mercy and no consideration at the hands of his fellow-men. When I myself read of that awful tragedy I said: "That man is either insane, or else he is the greatest criminal that was ever brought before a court of justice. If his Maker sent this man into the world with all his faculties, no man could stand before you to-day and ask you to save him from the fate which he has so richly deserved. For Valentine Shortis as a murderer I have no mandate to come before you. If I did not believe that his faculties are undeveloped; if I did not believe him to be irresponsible for his acts, I could not appear here to-day to plead his cause. I have heard it said on the byways that no man should raise his voice on behalf of the prisoner. Gentlemen, I tell you that the counsel for the defence are as much the advocates of law and order as the counsel representing the Crown. You know how on the night following the killing the passions of those surrounding the prisoner became so much aroused that they almost lynched the accused. Their passions which might have carried them to undue lengths, were not allowed to take entire control of their actions, for, thank God, the strong arm of the law was stretched out to save the community and the country at large from the stain of such an act. While you may say that this man, the prisoner at the Bar, is guilty of homicide, we feel proud that in this Canada of ours we see nothing like what we see across the line, where, especially in the West, we hear of men being taken and executed without trial, and very often without a semblance of justice.

We feel that you will give this case the benefit of your conscientious attention, and if you find that your opinion is that on the night of that tragedy Valentine Shortis was insane, then we feel that you will give him justice, and that is all that we ask of you, and all that we want.

There is no position which a man can occupy which is so responsible as that which the law gives you when it clothes you with the power to send Valentine Shortis to the scaffold. It is a righteous law which invests you with this power; it is the law which has grown out of Magna Charta, that wise code which said that a man had the right to be tried by his peers. Therefore, it is for you and you alone to say whether on the night of the 1st of March last the prisoner was responsible for his acts, and whether he went to the office of the mill with the malicious intention to kill and to rob. I repeat, that you, and you alone, have to answer this question before your conscience and your God. It is a terrible responsibility, and I feel glad that I have not to share it with you. None of us on the defence have the power to say whether he was guilty or not. When in after years, when this, one of the greatest and most important trials that this community has ever known, is discussed, I trust that each and every one of you may be able to place his hand on his heart and say: "I did what was right in the case of the Queen against Valentine Shortis."

All that we ask of you is, that when, after listening to this trial which has been so long in unfolding, and to which you have given so much attention, you retire to your room to consider your verdict, you will give it the same attention to the very end. We do not deny the killing; we do not come to you and say that this man did not kill Maxime Leboeuf and John Loy, but we say that at the time he did this deed, the man in the box was insane, and did not know what he did. This is a defence which the law regards as being just as good as one which would claim that the man did not commit the deed. It is for you, with your responsibility as jurors, to say whether we have proven that claim. What we say is, that in a lapse of self-consciousness, while suffering from a disease of the mind, he did this thing, not being able at that time to appreciate the nature and quality of his acts.

If there is one man who deserves the commiseration of his fellow-men, it is the imbecile, coming into the world with his mind undeveloped. A century ago the insane man was treated more as a criminal than as the afflicted of God. The mad man of a hundred years ago was treated as one with a wrong moral nature, and as one whom the devil had visited, and not one whom God had afflicted. If you find that Valentine Shortis in insane, then you cannot say that he has committed a crime against God, because he was afflicted by a disease placed upon him by God; and if you cannot find him guilty of any crime committed against God, you certainly cannot say that he has committed any crime against the law. The sympathy of myself, the sympathy of every right thinking man in the community, and the sympathy of the prisoner goes out to the widow and the orphans of those who were killed, but we cannot lighten that burden any if we add to these fatalities the early death of the father and mother of the accused. I ask you as honest men to set aside all prejudice, and to decide as to the sanity or insanity of the prisoner at the bar, by the facts which have been submitted, and by them alone. If those facts show irresponsibility on the part of this young man, then I ask you for a favorable verdict.

There probably never was a case where ancestry, and the story of a life show so clearly as the present one, that the accused could not have been other than insane. Let us take the evidence from the time of his birth, and bring it down to the night of March 1st last. The boy started out in life with chances of insanity in his family. His grandfather, the father of his father, was a maniac, and his uncle on the same side was an epileptic maniac, who was confined in an asylum, and finally died in the Clonmel Asylum. On the other side—the maternal side—his grandmother had been confined in an asylum for the insane. Four of his father's side had died of consumption, which under such circumstances as these must be regarded as a disease closely allied to insanity. This boy, from the day he was born, and first breathed the free air of heaven, had a dark and fitsome cloud overhanging him, which might burst at any time, and make him himself a raving lunatic. It might disclose itself at the age of puberty; it might not show until later on in life. The doctors have told you that in from 75 to 90 cases out of 100 of lunatics confined in asylums, the cause of insanity can be traced back to hereditary, and if this is true, the prisoner started out in life with the chances from 75 to 90 in a hundred that he would one day become a raving maniac.

But the parents kept this knowledge from him, and it was not until after he had been in the Montreal gaol that his mother had told him that his uncle had died an inmate of an asylum. I ask you to consider these things before you send to the scaffold this man, who I believe would walk to that scaffold with the same unmoved expression with which he stands before you at the present moment, scarcely listening to a word that I am saying on his behalf. I repeat, we have got to consider his ancestry. You, gentlemen of the jury, are farmers; you know all about heredity in animals, and can understand this subject. Men of science have told you that this is what is the matter in this case, but if no doctor had ever entered that box, you, with your experience of life and the observations which you have made, would have known it. This disease is like a slumbering volcano which is likely to burst forth at any time by an overworking of the brain, for this terrible affliction of God, settles on this part of man, which distinguishes him from the animal.

The mother has told you the story of her child, her only son. It is the story of a life sacrificed to his education and to his godly training. When you saw that mother stand in the box, you as fathers, knew how she had given up her life for him. She told you with tears in her eyes that he was not an intelligent child, and you can picture to yourselves the scene as he knelt at her knees in the dusk of the evening, and she sought to teach him that commandment given by God to Moses on Mount Sinai: "Thou shalt not kill," and her state of mind as she realizes then that he did not understand its meaning any more than he does at the present time. She has told you, and you must believe her, that he was unable to speak until the age of four or five, so that even she herself—his mother—could understand him.

We start, therefore, with the taint as it showed itself in childhood. You have all of you, children of your own, very probably. I have not the privilege of knowing any of you personally, but if you are fathers you know how your own children prattled to you at the age of eighteen months or two years. The mother then tells us that he was a sickly child, and that up to the age of seven years she tried to teach him herself. Then he goes to school. He went first to a ladies school, but up to the age of from seven to ten, he could hardly speak so that anyone but his mother or his nurse could understand him.

He next goes to the school taught by Father Dunn, and here I ask you to pay particular attention to the evidence given by Father Dunn, for now we come to the age of adolescence, and the important time in the boy's life is reached. This Father Dunn, in response to a cablegram which I sent him, crossed the Atlantic and came three thousand miles from his home to give his evidence regarding the prisoner's boyhood. He taught him in daytime, and we find that a Mr. Cunningham was engaged to give him lessons at night. Father Dunn tells us how at times he had lapses of consciousness and how at times his mind would become like a sheet of blank paper. This child lacked no advantage; everything that money could do for his education was done. He received a religious education, and had every advantage in order that his moral and intellectual nature—if indeed he had any—might be developed.

I have heard it said that he was spoiled. On the contrary, we see how his mother did all in her power to restrict him to what was good for him, while at the same time giving him all that he needed to fit him for the battle of life. Under these circumstances, can we doubt that there was something wrong with him from the day of his birth until the present time? Father Dunn further tells you that what he learned to-day he forgot to-morrow, and that during the time he was at school he was subject to violent neuralgic headaches. These were due to improper circulation of the blood through the blood vessels of the brain, and the taint in his blood showed itself thus, even in his early days. We pass on to the time when he went to another school. Here, we are told by another witness, he took no part in the games, nor joined with the other boys in their amusements. This is the testimony of his school mate, John Ryan. It was only seven months before he was obliged to leave this school also on account of ill health. Now, before he went there for the last time, his father had taken him to one side, and had said to him—as he himself has told you—" Now, Val., my boy, before you come back home again, I want you to make up your mind what profession you want to follow." He comes back, and tells his father that he would like to learn his father's business, that of a cattle dealer. What success attended him do we find? He could not count twenty-five animals in a field.

From early childhood he developed this desire to shoot and to kill. There are two kinds of mania of this kind. There is the suicidal mania and the homicidal mania, but in the case of the man with suicidal mania, how different is the verdict which is rendered when he takes his own life to what is very often returned in the case of the homicidal maniac. In the former case twelve men meet and pass a verdict that the deed was committed while the perpetrator of it was suffering under severe mental aberration.

Now, we come to the evidence taken in Ireland. We have first the case of Dooty's child, whom the prisoner shot at when he was a boy of 10 or 12 years of age. Whether the weapon had shot or bullet in it is not of much importance to my mind, but at all events one fact which is potent is that he was so reckless, or rather so filled with homicidal mania, that at the age of 10 or 12 years, we find him shooting at a child. I ask you right here to consider that the men who have given evidence in Ireland, are the best and leading citizens of the city of Waterford—Mayor, aldermen, bankers, consuls,—they have all come forward and told you things which if, gentlemen of the jury, they had told you about your own children, you would be the first to say that they ought to be locked up in an asylum. They came before Judge Dugas, and placing their hands on the Bible, they have sworn to the truth of their statements. Have they sworn falsely and perjured themselves? The Crown has asked these witnesses if they kept company with an idiot, and they have answered "Yes." Is it possible that the Crown expects that the man who has been afflicted by God is to be shunned by his fellow-men? If so, we are going back to the dark ages when they burned witches. There is no reason that I know of why such a man should not receive the same amount of affection, nay more, than the person whose reason is perfect.

We find this boy at the age of 16, or thereabouts, so imbued with the spirit of cruelty that he orders one of his father's men to take a poor innocent little dog and tie it to a stake. Then he goes indoors, and presently he issues forth with a Napoleonic air, and with a sword at his side, and approaching that innocent creature, stabs at it with the weapon until it breaks, and then jabs at it with the broken end of the sword in a frenzy of rage. What would you say if your boy did this? What would I say if my boy were to do it?

The learned counsel for the Crown may perhaps tell you that lots of boys have killed dogs. That may be true, but I venture to say that few boys have killed dogs in such a manner as this. Fancy a boy walking along the street, and he sees a boat on the river in which there may be lots of passengers, and taking deliberate aim, he fires at the port hole. Again, from the quay he fires at the smoke-stack of a ship where men are working; and yet, again, when he sees some ladies and gentlemen walking towards him, he exclaims: "There's a good shot, and by ——, I'll have it." Those are his own words. Remember the incident at the bicycle races when he offered to stand guard at the track with a pistol in each hand and shoot the first person who attempted to pass. Allingham has told us how in the early hours of the morning he would see him riding recklessly down the street, firing revolvers and shouting at the top of his voice, doubtless fancying himself on the prairie, shooting at Indians. Imagine him riding his pony face backwards. The Crown has asked if there is anything very strange in this, but I think if you were to see a young man seated face backwards on a pony, riding at full speed down St. James street in Montreal, you would think him insane. What did they call him in Waterford? "Mad Shortis;" "Cracked Shortis;" "Shortis' fool." He was the boy who shot at the town clock, and prodded at dumb animals just out of the wilful cruelty of his nature. What did they call him in Valleyfield? "Shortis, le grand fou," "Shortis, the big fool." You are asked to believe that they called him this because he wore knee-pants, which although worn quite commonly in England, are not seen very often in Valleyfield. But this could not have been the reason, for they are no uncommon sight in Waterford, where they dubbed him with "Shortis' fool." You know very well that he never got that title, either in Ireland or in Canada, without cause. You remember the evidence given by the Heaneys, father and son. The boy had lumps on his neck, and the prisoner wanted to cut them out with a penknife, and offered the boy candies and monies if he would come with him and allow him to cut them out, and he might have done so but for the promptness of the father, who foresaw what might happen. This young man loved blood; if he had had the chance to cut those lumps he would have cut the boy's throat, and the act of homicide would have been committed in Ireland before ever he thought of coming to Canada. Was that proposal the act of a sane man?

It is not one fact alone, standing by itself, that we have to present, it is a series of madman's acts from early childhood until the day when he came to this country. The gateman at that railway crossing, where he rode down the track, says in his official report to his superior that he rode down the track "like a madman." It has been asked how it was that his father did not know of these things. You have to take into consideration that deeply seated abhorrence which the Irishman has for an "informer." They did not tell his father and mother of these things on this account, for they would not risk bearing that hated name. When his father went into the box, he told you he knew only of the shooting at Dooty's child and the riding down the track, and you will remember how he raised his eyes to Heaven and swore before his Maker that he had heard of nothing else. This man does not come before you with a lie on his lips to save his child; he has said that if his son had forty lives he would not perjure himself to save him. The old man thought that if he came to this western country he would steady himself, and believed that in this land of liberty and hope he would come in contact with nature, and that from relying too much on his father and mother his struggle for life would develop his self-reliance. When the old man sent him here he did not send him to murder and to kill the people of this country. It was like tearing the mother's heartstrings to let the boy come but she yielded obedience to her husband. When he came she soon followed, and stays almost three months watching over him day by day, and tries to obtain a proper and suitable position for him. When they sent him here, his parents were prepared to take care of him.

So much for the Irish evidence. I have not related all the facts proven in the depositions, but I think I have shown you how the taint in him showed itself in the Old Country. You know what God himself has said: "The sins of the father shall be visited on the children until the third and fourth generation," and although I cannot say whether any of his ancestors who became insane were visited because of some infraction of God's moral laws, yet we see the operation of the principle in the case of this unfortunate boy. When he came to this country, did he still care as much for revolvers? The evidence leaves no doubt on that subject.

Then we hear from Capt. Matthews, and from Mrs. Mulcahey how he went up and down the passages in his bare feet, put cartridges on the stove, and matches into envelopes. We follow him to the Cadillac Hotel, where we have the testimony of Mrs. Lewis as to his behavior, and then we come to his stay at the Queen's, when we see him, according to the evidence of the witnesses Malabar and Mackay, washing his feet in the wash room with his socks on, and flourishing a revolver on St. James street, in Montreal.

When he goes to Valleyfield, what do we find? The same doing of deeds against common sense, and unlike what any one else would do.

On March 1st we have this man, guilty of all these crazy acts which I have told you of; and above all these acts we have the delusions and hallucinations under which he labored. What were they? In Ireland we find that he told certain witnesses that he carried a revolver because his father went mad at certain seasons of the year. The doctors tell us that this is one of the commonest forms of delusion. He told others that he carried a revolver because of the cattlemen. Morrison, a witness produced here by the Crown, tells you that at a Christmas dinner Shortis told him that he carried a revolver in Ireland on account of the cattle buyers. So he had an idea that his father went mad, and that if he did not kill his father, his father would kill him. He has also the delusions concerning the cattle men. Now when he came here, did these delusions disappear? We find by the evidence of Miss Anderson and Jack Anderson that he has both oral and visual hallucinations. He thinks he hears voices and sounds on the verandah. We cannot attach too much importance to these delusions and hallucinations, for according to the doctors, these things are common to the most dangerous class of lunatics.

On the night of the first of March then, we have this boy, the story of whose life I have given you, and with a premonition of the delusions and hallucinations from which he suffered. Was it the act of a sane man, premeditated, or was it the act of an insane man, without premediation and without malice that he performed on that night. He goes to the mill, and he meets there those who were his friends, men whom he has known for a considerable time. The Crown will tell you that he went there with malice, to kill and to rob. Now what you have to consider is, that if he went there with a complete knowledge of the nature and quality of his acts, he was guilty, but if he went there without this knowledge, he must be considered insane.

Now, if this man was a robber and an intending murderer, then you must find that he acted in the same manner as any sane man would have acted under the circumstances. There were five men in the office at the time that the killing was done; Lowe, Wilson, Loy, Leboeuf and another. The prisoner had no accomplice; he never advised with anyone. He went to that mill for what? To rob it of $15,000 by killing four or five people—for it must be remembered that if he was sane he knew that these people were guarding the treasure. How was he equipped? He had a small toy pistol of 22 calibre; this was the only weapon he had, although they say he had also a chisel. Now with this weapon you have to say whether he went to that office to kill and to rob, and to combat four or five people. If you think him sane and in full possession of his faculties, can you say that this man, who had lots of other weapons at home, went up to the office unarmed, save with this twenty-two calibre revolver?

Now, if he had entered that office with the intention of committing murder, would he have sat there quietly cleaning the other revolver for an hour? There was no purpose served by him sitting there and cleaning it. Do you think this compatible with the hardened criminal, the intending robber and murderer? Would he sit there for an hour and chat and eat apples. You have heard how the boy was always fond of pistols; how he was always examining them and collecting catalogues of different kinds of firearms. He wants with his usual curiosity to see the model number of the office revolver, and he gets it back for that purpose. Why, if he had intended to use it, did he hand it back to Lowe when he could have kept it and gone to the drawer and got the cartridges for it? If he even intended to shoot the second time, why did he break it after he got it back again, as Lowe and Wilson have both told you he did? Yes, he broke it for the purpose of seeing the model number. He had oiled it, he had taken it to pieces, and he had even asked for a screw driver for it; consequently the weapon was easy to go off. He pointed it at Hughie Wilson, just as he was always pointing revolvers at other people, as he pointed them at Miss Anderson, as she has told you. What happened when that first shot of which he spoke to the doctors was fired? Every one in that office thought it was an accident. Loy says: "I will go to the telephone to send for the doctor;" Lowe goes to assist Wilson. If they had not considered that the first shot was an accident, would they have acted thus? Would they not rather have flung themselves on the young man and disarmed him? But I repeat that all those who were there that night thought that that first shot was an accident, without any purpose of either robbery or killing.

After that shot, comes in the diseased mind, then the lapse of consciousness, the tainted mind of his ancestors, and insanity takes possession of him. Now if the man had gone there with the intention to rob, and if he was in possession of his senses, when he found that Loy was dead and that Lowe and Leboeuf were in the safe, with the money out of reach, what would he have done? He would have said to himself: "By six or seven o'clock the men will come here, and I shall be found." Was there any object in his staying there? None; yet he remains like the madman that he was. He is like a man who walks in the darkness without a lantern, and in his homicidal nature he cries: "Maxime," "Maxime," and meets the watchman with a shot. Did he think he would induce Lowe and Leboeuf to come out of the vault? Why did he smash the receiver of the telephone, and why was Leboeuf's lamp all broken and the globe missing? Because he was in a madman's frenzy, and must break and smash everything he could find. And then he sits there waiting until the time comes for the man whom Destiny had told off to arrest him arrives, when he says: "I give myself up; I don't know why I killed those men." Then we have his letter to Millie Anderson: "Telephone anticere; tell Bob I will make it hot for him when this is over," and so forth. He is taken to his cell with the blood of his victims wet on his hands and on clothes, and forthwith he lies down and sleeps as soundly as an innocent child. I ask you again, is that the act of a sane man or not? If he knew as a same man would, that a scaffold awaited him, and that it was only a question of the law being put in operation, could he have done this? I think not, for as one of the poets has put it: "Macbeth hath murdered sleep."

You will be told by the Crown that he showed his sanity by saying to the two men: "Don't move or I'll shoot you," while he turned to shoot the third, but I claim that this was only a part of his lapse of consciousness, the precision of a man walking in his sleep, and that when he called to Lowe and Leboeuf to come out of the vault it was because that irresponsible as he was, his lust of blood controlled him. If he did not know at that time what he did, he was like the stone that rolls off the railway embankment at the side of the track, and wrecks the train, killing one, two or half a dozen persons. It is the deed of an inanimate object.

What did he want with the fifteen thousand dollars? The son of a wealthy father, the darling of a doting mother. It is against right and common sense; it is against all judgment. There is no motive for the commission of the crime. Could he have carried this money away; had he made any provision for doing so; was there a horse and rig outside to carry him across the border or elsewhere?

When he is arrested, his parents are cabled by Mr. A. F. Gault. How did Mr. Gault word that message? He says: "Your son must be crazy, he has shot and injured three men, perhaps fatally." The first idea that strikes the President of the Cotton Company is that the man must be crazy. He does not say that he sent the message in this form out of consideration for the parents, although he says that this was his reason for the second part relating to the injury of the men. Well, Shortis is arrested, and after a short time, he is brought to the Montreal gaol, and after we have made many attempts, we finally succeed in getting permission for four doctors to examine him with regard to his mental condition. These men are at the very top of their profession in this country. Dr. Anglin, with his special studies in Verdun, his studies in Kingston, and his studies in Philadelphia; Dr. Daniel Clark; Dr. Clarke; and Doctor Bucke; all recognized authorities, the authors of books relating to the treatment of the insane, men representing an aggregate of about seventy years of experience. They are of all men who might have come here, the most competent, and they come with their reputations in their hands, and tell you after hearing all the evidence, and although they have to say it before the poor father and mother sitting here, they find not only that the prisoner is insane, but that he can never be cured.

There that boy has stood in the dock, as immutable as a rock. I have only seen him but four times in the Montreal gaol, and I have never once visited him or spoken a word with him since the present trial was commenced. I realized from the very first that it was of no use, it was impossible to obtain from him anything which would assist me with his defence. It has been constantly insinuated by the defence that this man is feigning insanity, at the instigation of some one or other. I repel the insinuation, with all the scorn of which my nature is capable. Do you think that that thing in the dock could have stood for four long weeks without giving some sign of life and feeling? Could the worst criminal in the land have stood and seen his mother with her heart wrung with sobs, and yet not move a muscle? You have seen the incident between his father and Smith. I myself was not watching him, but I am told that while his father was protesting against an insult to his mother, that child never so much as moved an eyelid. I say it is utterly impossible for any one, however well trained, to do these things.

These experts have told you that this man is insane, but if it is possible to get stronger evidence than that given by our experts, it is to be found in the fact that the Doctors for the Crown, who sat in this Court, took notes of the trial, and listened to every word of the evidence, would not then get into the box as medical men, and express their opinions as to whether this man was insane or not. But there is another phase of this trial which I must mention with regret, and I am sorry to have to say so. The Crown tells you that this man is sane, that he is responsible for his acts; they have missed no opportunity, and have ransacked the country from one end to the other in order to try and prove this. They have spared no efforts, but done everything. They have traced every act of this young man, and have even brought forward his barber, who could not even speak his language. They have done all this to show that he had reason, but when, in the early part of May last, we asked in Montreal for permission for doctors to examine this young man, the Crown had notice then, and on the 29th of June, when we sailed for Europe, to examine witnesses in Ireland as to this man's mental condition, yet when did they send a doctor to examine him? When was this farce, to ask for him to be examined on behalf of the Crown gone

Family Gathering.

During the month an important family gathering was held at Ste. Genevieve, Co. Jacques Cartier, on the occasion of the 85th anniversary of Mr. Venant Parizeau, at which all his grandchildren were present.

Two addresses were read, and his son, residing at San Francisco, sent a beautiful gold cane. His children gave him a life-size pastil portrait. The happy gathering broke up at a late hour, all departing with pleasant remembrances of the event.

TONKA is entirely different from any other cut smoking; it being a mixture of four high grade tobaccos.

PLEADING FOR SHORTIS.

through with? Just eight days before this trial began? And yet in their cross-examination of our experts, they tried to show that in order to determine the sanity or insanity of a man, it required months of study, and yet only eight days before this trial was commenced Dr. Villeneuve was sent down to examine this man. Did you ever know in the administration of serious criminal justice of a farce equal to it? What did he do? He went down there, and Vallee, the governor of the gaol, enters the box and tells you he spent five or ten minutes with him, and this poor silly fool says: "I have been instructed by my lawyers not to say anything." If there is anything that shows the insanity of the prisoner, it is this. If the lawyers had told him to say nothing, can you imagine the act of a madman more insane than for him to go and say to the governor of the gaol and to the representative of the Crown, holding the sign manual of the Crown Prosecutor, that his lawyers had told him to say nothing.

What does Dr. Villeneuve, this scientific man do? He does not dare to get into that box to tell you of that interview. The Crown did not dare to put him in the box to ask him, or to allow us to ask him in cross-examination, why he did not examine the prisoner at the bar. Why, that man stayed in this court house for four weeks, accompanied by three other doctors, and the last two days Dr. Girdwood came here, and you saw him sitting reading the evidence, and I say, with all the responsibility of my position before me, I say that the facts justify me in saying that the Crown only sent Dr. Villeneuve there, to try and get a refusal, or put up some reason to that they could come before you, and pretend that we had put up some sort of a job that this man should not be examined. Do you believe as sensible men that if they had any intention of examining this man; if they had desired to know what his mental condition was, they would have waited until within eight days of this trial before they sent a man there to see what it was, and when that poor fool said: "I don't want to be examined,"—this physician of the Crown walks off and folds his arms, and does not trouble any more about it. If he had come to any of the counsel for the defence and expressed a desire to examine the prisoner, the mode was easy. He need only to have said a word to any of us—to Mr. St. Pierre, to myself or to Mr. Foster. When we asked here for our doctors to examine the prisoner the Crown asked that their expert should accompany ours. They went and took that evidence. Then why did they not put their man in the box? Why was not Dr. Villeneuve examined? Why were not the four doctors we put in the box contradicted by Dr. Villeneuve? There is only one conclusion to come to. If these men could have gone into that box after having heard all the evidence here, and sworn that that man in the dock was sane, do you think that the Crown would not have put them in? We dared the Crown to put them in. We dared them, because had Dr. Villeneuve entered that box as an honest man, as I believe and know him to be, he would have been obliged to swear from the hearing of the evidence, that from his experience and knowledge, that the man was insane, and that he was not responsible for the acts with which he is charged on the fatal night of the 1st of March last.

Now, as to the evidence in rebuttal. Simpson gets into the box and says that the prisoner was intelligent, says that he knew his business, says that he did it well, and yet, gentlemen of the jury, in cross-examination he had to say that he did not know whether the work had been well done or not. The quotation book which we went through showed a good many mistakes, although it also showed that all the boy had to do was to copy into these books, and do what a schoolboy ten years of age could have done. In spite of this, he has not been able to copy a page in which there are not mistakes, and that has not been wrongly done. But Mr. Simpson says more; he says, "This man is a mechanical genius; we wanted to get a machine for singeing cotton, and one day when I was talking about it he says, 'I know of a better way than that,' and he sends off to Chicago for the plans. Mark you, this machine was for singeing cotton. These plans came, and Mr. Simpson sends them by the prisoner to Mr. Sparrow, and states that he told Shortis to ask Sparrow how these plans would do for a machine for singeing cotton. The boy goes to Sparrow, and Sparrow tells us that the only question they talked about and what he bought plans for, was a machine, not to singe cotton, but to create power and to create fuel, and that he wanted to discuss these plans with him with the idea of creating power, and not for the purpose of singeing cotton. Now I believe that the whole story of those plans was made out of the whole cloth, or if not, then the prisoner had not sufficient intelligence and knowledge and concentration of mind to go from Simpson's office with these plans under instructions to put them before Sparrow, and see whether they would do for singeing cotton, but when he got there, he laid them before Sparrow, with an entirely different purpose and object. Now surely if that boy had intelligence, if he knew what the plans were for, surely if he obtained them for the purpose of singeing cotton, that at least being sent as Simpson pretends, he would have known enough to carry them to Sparrow's office and say: "Simpson sent these here, and I want you to look at them for the purpose of seeing whether they can be utilized for singeing cotton."

The Crown will tell you that the prisoner showed genius, intelligence, knowledge, that he had method, that he has a brain, and can conceive and design. And because he can do all these things he must be sane. Why, gentlemen of the jury, the worst maniacs in the lunatic asylums are those who sometimes design the most intricate things in machinery. Now they put in another machine—a bell. Young says: "Oh, this is a great stroke of genius; this shows his natural ability and his mechanical cleverness." What does Sparrow say? He does not pay any attention to this, and Young himself throws this scheme for the bell into his drawer, and never considers it any good. The thing lies there in the drawer, and is not unearthed until this trial is about to take place, and they want to show by these small things that the man has genius and brain, and that he has ability. The letter to A. F. Gault has been put in as showing that this man has a connected mind, but a close examination of this letter will show that it contains fifteen or twenty grammatical errors and misspelled words. Many lunatics and insane people can write more intelligent letters than that. We have also lunatics who can write verses and make literature. They are in asylums, and yet they show evidences of genius, and the verse I will now read to you was written by an insane man:

"Shut up in dreary gloom, like convicts are,
In company of murderers! Oh, wretched fate!
If pity e'er extended through the frame,
Or sympathy's sweet cordial touched the heart,
Pity the wretched maniac who knows no blame,
Absorbed in sorrow, where darkness, poverty and every curse impart."

This not only shows intelligence, but it shows that God-given quality, genius. Yet those verses are the sad effusion of Thomas Lloyd, a man-slaying maniac in Bedlam. Take those lines and put them alongside the letter that the prisoner sent to Mr. Gault, and say whether you see more intelligence in the lines written by this man, a maniac in Bedlam, or the letter written to Mr. A. F. Gault by the prisoner at the bar.

Now I have reviewed at perhaps greater length than I had expected to, the evidence given before you. The case has been a long one, and a large number of witnesses have been examined. This young man's father and mother have been before you in the Court. That father and mother who have doted on their child, and were ready at all times to give him anything and everything that he might want or require. Do you think that for the sake of a few dollars, as the Crown will try to show you that he owed—$59 for board; some $10 or $12 that he got from the post office by a clerk's mistake; $10 that he borrowed from the Mayor to pay his fine—that because of these little things forsooth, he was a great criminal, and that this is evidence of his intention to steal a sum of 15,000. Why, if he had wanted $50 or $80, yea, $500 or $ 00, by writing to that loving mother of his think you not that it would have been forthcoming from his father and mother, rich and wealthy as they were, and who would have given their life's blood for their son to save him from ruin or even humiliation. That father and mother crossed to this country when this case commenced, and from day to day they have appeared before the jurymen, because gentlemen, they know you are human; because they say you are prompted by all the actions that govern good and honest men; because they know you believe in the principle, the doctrine of Christ when He said, "Do ye unto others as ye would that they should do unto you."

And now I ask you as men, if there is any doubt in your minds that the man is sane, give the benefit of that doubt, not to the prisoner at the bar, because to him it makes but little difference whether he is locked up in an asylum for the rest of his life, or whether you take him to-morrow and execute him on a scaffold, which you may erect behind this Court house—he is indifferent to it all, but I ask you, if you have any doubt, to give the benefit of that doubt to this aged father and that mother, who is lying on a bed of sickness in the hospital of the nuns, troubled with a heart disease, which ere morning, may carry her off. Oh, God! if you have any doubt, send these people back across the Atlantic. Let them think we are good people here; let them think we have hearts and do not forbid that the same sod which covers their graves may one day cover his. I have but one more request to make. The last words that I can say for that father and mother will soon have been said. There is no position in which a man can stand as responsible to my mind as that of the lawyer who stands before the jury and pleads for the life of a fellow being, and what I ask you to do is what your conscience and heart tell you are right, and if you do that, I ask you, should you decide that the prisoner is sane, to come with me on the morning of his execution, when the dread sentence which you shall have pronounced against him shall be accomplished, and, standing around that grave in the Potter's Field, say with your hands on your hearts: "This is my work, it is well done, it is well done."

Let your verdict be such that in after years your children after you shall feel that that verdict was a just and righteous verdict, and one that they may be proud of in those days which are yet to come, and, feeling as I do, that this verdict will be one of: "Guilty, but insane," which places him in a lunatic asylum, subject to the will of the Lieut.-Governor, where, according to the evidence of the medical experts, he will remain for the balance of his life, I leave the case in your hands.

Mr. St. Pierre's Address.

[Special to the Star.]

Beauharnois, Que., October 29.—Mr. H. C. St. Pierre, Q. C., addressed the Shortis jury in French to-day on behalf of the defence, taken up that portion of the case untouched by his confrere, Mr. J. N. Greenshields, yesterday afternoon.

Mr. St. Pierre's address was a powerful one, and seemed to carry weight and effect.

After a brief summing up of the career of Valentine Shortis, anterior to the tragedy, the learned consul dealt at length with the evidence of the Irish Commission, reading at the same time extracts from the testimony of the most important of the witnesses examined at Waterford, and bearing on the early life of the prisoner.

Mr. St. Pierre strove to impress on the jury the evidence given by the medical gentlemen in Ireland, regarding the ancestors of Shortis, who died in insane asylums. The speaker then went on to point out that the actions of the accused, even in his early youth, were not those of a sane person, but of a fool.

Going back to the tragedy, Mr. St. Pierre went over it very minutely.

He then asked of the jury, if it was possible for a boy of twenty years to commit such a horrible crime and be in possession of his full faculties?

"When I saw the accused on the day of the funeral of his victims," Mr. St. Pierre went on, "he was quite indifferent, when all Valleyfield was in mourning and the flags at half-mast. There was only one person in the whole town quite calm—and person was Shortis! No sane man could act that way. When the preliminary enquete was held and threats of lynching made, the prisoner showed no fear."

The only ground of the defence was insanity. This plea had been fully borne out, said Mr. St. Pierre, by the medical testimony of the experts given in Court. Everywhere the prisoner had been considered and looked upon as a fool. In Ireland and in America he was known as "Val. Shortis, the fool" and "Cracked Shortis." Other people had said that he was not a fool, and that with the aid of clever lawyers a verdict of not guilty would be obtained.

"If a person strikes and kills without having the intent to do so," Mr. St. Pierre continued, "this person is not guilty of a crime; it is the act of a fool."

"People were liable," he said, "to think that because the prisoner's parents are wealthy that the citizens in Waterford who testified before the Irish Commission were bought. This the defence emphatically denied."

"The gentlemen who gave evidence," he said, "are all highly respected, and have the confidence of the community at large in Waterford.

"I pray you not to pass judgment on the parents at once, but wait until you have carefully weighed all the evidence that has been adduced during the trial, not forgetting the insane acts of the prisoner, not only during his early life, and after the tragedy, but since his incarceration in gaol; also the utter indifference exhibited in Court during the present trial."

At luncheon time Mr. St. Pierre was still with the Irish Commission. Adjournment was taken at 1.15.

IN THE FAR EAST.

How the Port Arthur Story was Spread About.

London, October 29.—In acknowledging the incorrectness of its despatch, about a Russo-Chinese treaty, the Times says in effect that the information was given its Tien Tsin correspondent by the Governor of Siberia. The Foreign Office states the despatch in no respect sets forth the actual facts, and further says it is absolutely without foundation.

Speaking at a public banquet at Vladivostok on September 27, which was given in his honor, on the occasion of his departure for Europe, Gen. Doukhofskoy, Governor-General of Eastern Siberia, referred to the new Manchuria concession, and strongly urged that the community be not alarmed by it, for Vladivostok must remain the headquarters, though a portion of the fleet would be at Port Arthur. The Governor and Port Admiral of Vladivostok spoke in the same sense. Three Russian missions, with an escort of 100 Cossacks each, started respectively from Nertchinsk, Blagevestchinsk and Nicol, to explore and survey certain portions of the interior of Manchuria.

A Shanghai telegram states that five Russian warships are inside and nine are outside of the harbor of Port Arthur.

An Odessa despatch to the Times says that another cruiser of the Russian volunteer fleet has started with a contingent of sailors, ammunition and war material to join the Russian fleet cruising near Japan.

The Standard, Conservative, says in an editorial this morning: "Russia has got her answer and her intended treaty with China is torn up before it came into existence."

A despatch to the Globe from Hong Kong, under to-day's date, says that Wong Chi Chuan was appointed last autumn by an Imperial edict to go on a special mission to Russia, ostensibly to congratulate the new Czar, Nicholas II, upon his succession to the throne, but really to convey to St. Petersburg a secret treaty, conceding the right to Russia to carry the Siberian railway through Manchuria to Vladivostok, and to construct a branch railway from Tsitiskar and Moukden to Vladivostok. The despatch in other respects confirms the Times' Hong Kong despatch of October 25, asserting the existence of a treaty between Russia and China, giving especial military and commercial advantages to the former, adding that a Russian fleet of fourteen vessels arrived at Port Arthur yesterday.

COMMERCIAL.

MONTREAL WHOLESALE MARKETS.

Star Office, October 29, 1895.

Grain.—Oats scored another advance and at the moment the tendency is still upward in the local market. Peas are firmer. Other grains are quiet and unchanged. We quote: No. 1 hard Manitoba wheat, nominal; rye, nominal; peas, per 60 lbs., in store, 60 to 61c; oats, No. 2 white, per 34 lbs., in store, 30 3-4 to 31c; buckwheat, 41 to 41 1-2c; barley feed, per bush., 40 to 41c; barley malting, 51 to 51 1-2c.

Flour.—A good business is being done in both Manitoba and Ontario flour, but millers are offering strong bakers' best brand to some of their larger customers at $3.90, a course rendered advisable, they say, by the appearance of so much new flour on the market. One car of winter patents, choice, sold to-day at $4.15 and 1 car of straight roller, bags, at $1.75. We quote: Straight roller, $3.50 to $3.60; patent spring, $4 to $4.15; patents, winter, $3.80 to $4.15; strong bakers', $3.75 to $4.

Feed.—Manitoba bran in bags is quoted at $15, but this figure could not be obtained for large lots. Ontario bran in bulk is offered at $14.50 in wholesale quantities. Shorts are worth $16 to $17.

Meal.—Rolled is offering at $3 to $3.25 in jobbing lots.

Provisions.—Market is quiet and steady. Canadian short cut heavy mess pork, $15.50 to $16.50; hams, city cured, per lb., 10 to 11c; lard, compound, per lb., 6 3-8 to 6 3-4c; lard, pure, per lb., in pails, 9c to 9 1-2c; bacon, boneless, per lb., 11c; bacon, spice rolled, per lb., 8 to 9c; bacon, long clear, in dry salt, 7 1-2 to 8c.

Cheese.—The public cable advanced this morning to 44s 6d for late made cheese, but this failed to impart any stimulus to the demand here, which was generally described as slow. For finest western colored 9 1-2c was about the top of the market and operators willing to pay more than 9 1-8c for finest western were rare.

Butter.—There is a good deal of excitement and so varied are the reports furnished by the trade this morning that it is difficult to give a correct idea of the market. There seems to be no doubt that for shipping lots of late made creamery exporters are bidding 23 1-2c and perhaps even 23 3-4c, but stories of 24c paid at the factories, which are being industriously circulated, are not generally credited. Townships dairy is quoted as high as 20c in lots. The jobbers complain that with them the demand to-day is quiet. Grocers, it is said, have been rendered a little shy of creamery because of the prices asked, and are turning their attention to rolls, which are selling at 16 1-2c to 18c in small quantities.

Eggs.—There is an active demand and prices are strong. For wholesale lots of stock gathered within a week or two jobbers are willing to pay 16c, as they find it quite practicable to retail the same to the grocers at 18c. Ordinary fresh in quantities are worth about 15c. Cold storage eggs are not saleable at more than 14 1-2c.

Dressed poultry.—Receipts are already increasing somewhat, and this fact, coupled with anticipations of decided and considerable additions to stock now that colder weather seems probable, is having a weakening effect upon sellers' ideas of value to-day. Fine turkeys may be had for 8 1-2c per lb., ducks are quoted at 8 to 8 1-2c, geese at 5 1-2c to 6c and chickens at 6c to 7c.

Beans.—There is no change in the character of the request. In car lots $1.12 1-2 to $1.15 is the range, but really choice hand-picked will sometimes bring an advance over the outside figure.

Potatoes. — Under a moderate demand prices keep about steady at 35c to 40c per bag in car lots on track.

Hops.—Trade is as dull as heretofore reported, and at the moment there seems to be no reasonable ground for expecting an improvement in either the local demand or values. For new hops the nominal range is 5 1-2c to 8c.

Ashes.—Pots first are quoted at $3.90 to $4, and seconds at $3.75 to $3.80. Pearls are worth $4.60 to $4.70. The demand for all descriptions is very slow and the tone consequently barely steady.

Baled Hay.—There is a good deal being done at country points, but very little on spot. No. 1 Timothy in small lots is quoted here at $12 and No. 2 shipping $10 to $11.

Apples.—Autumn apples are moving fairly well at $1.75 to $2, and winter varieties at $2 to $2.50. In London, G. B., yesterday, a lot of 5083 barrels, a portion of the Majestic's cargo, was sold. Baldwins brought from 14s 6d to 16s 6d; Greenings, 11s 6d to 12s 6d; Ben Davis, 13s to 14s 6d; Northern spies, 14s 3d, and Newton pippins, 16s. One hundred and sixty-four cases of California pears were sold at 13s 9d to 14s 3d. Four hundred barrels of apples per steamer St. Louis sold at 10s to 20s a barrel, according to variety and quality.

Toronto Produce Market.

Toronto, Ont., October 29.—The market is quiet.

Wheat—Canadian wheat firm, for red 67c was bid west and for white 68c, sales reported as high as 70c. Deliveries very light and millers bidding the market up. No. 1 Manitoba hard held on track Midland at 66 1-2c and 70c 1-2c high freights west, and rather less on a low freight for Midland.

Flour—Quiet, straight roller is suffering from competition with Manitoba grades. It is quoted Toronto freights at $3.

Mill feed—Unchanged, demand fair and offerings light.

Peas—Firmer, car lots sold north and west freights at 51 1-2c and middle freights west at 52c.

Oats—Steady, car lots G. T. R. west quoted at 22 1-2c for mixed and 23c for white. Car lots on Midland quoted from at 24c to 24 1-2c.

Barley—Feed offerd outside at 31c and 30s is bid. No. 2 quoted at 35c and No. 1 at 42 to 43c.

Rye — Car lots sold east at 45c and 46c would be paid west.

Buckwheat—Quiet, car lots outside quoted at 35c.

Wheat in Sight.

Special Notices.

Next Friday being a holiday our stores will be closed, but our Cheap Sale will take place on Thursday, instead of Friday. Time will not permit us to give a detailed list of our bargains, but every article in our establishment will be reduced for Thursday's Cheap Sale at the Au Bon Marche, Alphonse Valiquette, 1883 & 1885 Notre Dame street, opposite Balmoral Block. 255 2

B.B.B.
CURES
DYSPEPSIA
BAD BLOOD

Thrown Away —half the labor of washing and cleaning, when it is done without Pearline. The old-fashioned scouring and scrubbing wastes your strength and wears out the clothes. Pearline takes the dirt away thoroughly and easily. It harms nothing; it cleans everything. Wash with Pearline, and save your strength for something better; nothing saves it better than to use Pearline. 293
Beware of imitations. JAMES PYLE, N. Y

NO WONDER

That we are selling more Overcoats and Ulsters than any Clothing store in Montreal—it's simply because we are selling better Clothing than has ever been sold before and for less money. We're not making large profits, but have the satisfaction of gaining customers daily. What we offer is exceptionally stylish and well finished.

Fine Double Breasted Overcoats in Meltons, Beavers and Pilot Cloths sell at $10.00, beautiful, warm, long Ulsters in all shades of Friezes, at $7.50 to $12.00 —Good Cape Coats for little fellows at $3.00, fine dark brown Boys' Frieze Ulsters, at $4.00; splendid Pea Jackets for Children at $2.50, and all other kinds of desirable clothing at figures, that no one can assert, we are not low in our prices, for the proof can readily be ascertained by a personal examination of our stock.

M. A. A. A. ALLEYS OPENED.

DUNRAVEN TO BE PRESENTED WITH A SILVER MODEL.

The Wanderers' Bicycle Club Dinner—The Morris Park Case in the New York Courts—Sporting Gossip.

The new M. A. A. A. alleys were officially opened last evening by Major Freeman, President of the M. A. A. A., assisted by Ed. Sheppard and Bob Starke. The first strike was made by Louis Hager. Much disappointment was evinced at the non-appearance of the world-famed Duffers and Duffers, who were to struggle for bowling honors.

BILLIARDS.

The Death of An Expert Billiardist.

New York, October 29. — J. Randolph Heiser, the billiardist, died on Saturday morning at Blackwell's Island. He became insane a few weeks ago. He was born at Kokomo, Ind., about forty-one years ago. Although not a success as a match player, he was at one time one of the most skilful billiard experts in the country. He became prominent in billiards in the west in 1875, came east three years later, and settled in Boston. In 1880 he came to this city, and during the last five years was a teacher of billiards. Many prominent men and a number of society women were among his pupils. A benefit has been arranged for his family by Maurice Daly and Frank Ives. It will take place at Daly's academy to-night. Maurice Daly, Frank Ives, "Tom." Gallagher, Dudley Kavanagh and William Sexton will play a series of games. Slosson declined to play, saying that he would rather contribute to the fund.

THE WHEEL.

The Wanderer's Dinner.

The dinner which the Wanderers' Bicycle Club tendered to their racing men last evening was most successful. Over fifty guests sat down in Welsh & Rough's dining room and did justice to an excellent menu.

The toasts were as follows: "The Queen" was responded to by Mr. S. C. Stevenson, honorary president of the Club; "Our Racing Men," by H. A. Coussirat; "Our Guests," by Geo. D. Pelletier; "Our Officers," by H. Hibbard Ayer, the president, and "The Press," by R. McLaughlin.

After the tables had been cleared the musical part of the programme was proceeded with. Messrs. H. P. MacDougall and E. W. Bush furnished several musical selections. Recitations from Mr. R. McLaughlin and W. Gentleman were well received. Mr. A. Brown rendered a piano solo in first class style. Mr. McDuff sang a song with a rollicking chorus and G. D. Pelletier followed with a recitation. The party broke up at an early hour this morning, and all expressed themselves as being thoroughly pleased.

SWIMMING.

High School Aquatic Sports.

A writhing, living mass of limbs and bodies, twisted in human knots, out of which peered bright eyes, and from which came yells that would have put the combined forces of Princeton, Yale and McGill to shame, was seen on Saturday morning at the Laurentian Baths. It was High School day, and, besides those who took part in the aquatic contests, about 150 boys took advantage of the opportunity to have a good swim. They were not only having a bath, or rather a swim, but were stretching their muscles on swinging rings, trapezes and gymnastic appliances.

Did the boys enjoy themselves? Brighter eyes were never seen than they showed. The sight of nearly 200 boys in the great swim at one time was both a novel and enjoyable one, splashing, sputtering and choking.

They had a fine time. The water was beautiful, clear and sparkling, and heated to the proper temperature, as it always is.

Guards were stationed about the swim, who kept a careful watch upon the swimmers; but it was useless; all the boys could swim, and they gambolled through the water without danger.

At the conclusion of the contests the boys were addressed by the Rev. E. I. Rexford, rector of the High School, who announced that the prizes would be presented in the Assembly Hall of the school on Monday, and also called upon the boys to give three cheers for the management of the baths, which were given lustily.

The following is a result of the competitions:

25 yard swimming race, boys under 11, 5 entries—Winners, Stuart, D., 1st; Radford, E., 2nd.

50 yard swimming race, boys under 14, 11 entries—Winners, Radford, 1st; McEntyre, 2nd.

75 yard race, boys under 16 years, 18 entries—Winners, C. Tough, 1st; Copeland, 2nd.

75 yard race, open to school, 8 entries—Winners, Ross, 1st; Cleghorn, 2nd; time, 1.10 1-5.

Tug-of-war, in water; three teams entered—Winning team, Brewster, Ross, Lockerby, Gillen and Tough.

Diving competition, 19 entries; maximum points, 30—Winners, 1st, Ronald, 28 points; 2nd, Ross, 26 1-2 points.

At the completion of the programme the boys gave three rousing cheers and a tiger for the rector, and dispersed.

The following gentlemen acted as judges: Rev. E. I. Rexford, Messrs. J. Gammill, J. Walker, A. W. Strong, C. W. Porter, W. Mitchell, Major Freeman and James Paton.

Major A. B. Macaulay had charge of all the arrangements, and carried them out with the same energy and ability for which he is so well known in sporting circles. Mr. George T. Hart, secretary of the H.S.A.A., also rendered valuable assistance.

FOOTBALL.

What the "Owl" Has to Say.

Ottawa, Ont., October 29.—In reference to the withdrawal of the Ottawa College team from the Quebec Rugby Union the College Owl, just out, says: "Not in defeat or dishonor do we furl our flag, not before any human foe do we lower our colors. The garnet and gray banner, which floated long and triumphantly, has come down to half mast, and what opponent on the field never could accomplish has been done by the awful menace of an almost fatal accident. Football is finished with the champions of Canada for this year, and struggles and strivings of the present are over, and naught remains but the glory of the past and the hopes of the future. Yet never amid our most brilliant victories did the fame of the garnet and gray shine with a purer lustre. At the bedside of a noble, suffering comrade, spontaneously, without a word directly or indirectly from those in authority, the football committee came to the decision to abandon the game for the present, and at once declared all our matches defaulted. It was a generous resolution, a touching tribute of sympathy and affection towards a fellow student and a brother whom we had all learned to esteem and love. Yet anything less would have been cruelty. Any attempt to fulfil our engagements in the championship series while our injured classmate was hovering between life and death would have put a blot on our banner, that no victory would have been able to efface. Let us hope that the consoling reward for our act of self denial may be the rapid and complete recovery of Tobias Morin and his early return to our midst."

Pleasant Treatment of Osgoode Hall in Kingston.

A despatch from Kingston says: After the match Osgoode was greeted as they left the field with hoots, jeers and blasphemy of the Kingston patrons of the game. Referee Gordon Watson, Jack McMurrich and George Clayes found their way to a cab, but were soon surrounded by a hooting mob. Stones began to fly through the air, and one, evidently meant for Referee Watson, struck Jack McMurrich behind the ear, cutting him. The driver lashed his horses and the referee escaped. Then the crowd turned to the Osgoode team, who were emerging from the gate. It had been arranged that Jimmy Smellie was to be struck as he came out of the gate, and the arrangement was carried out. A man walked up to Smellie and without preface struck him full in the face. Peterson, of Osgoode Hall, was beside him, and a melee was soon in progress. Peterson was hit in the mouth, but was game to fight the whole of Kingston. The Osgoode supporters, however, surrounded him, and Smellie, and finally got them to the van. A few gentlemen in the crowd succeeded in persuading their fellow-townsmen to refrain from mobbing the van, and presently the team got away without further injury. Many of the crowd, however followed them to the hotel. Never was a beaten team treated as the Osgoode team in Kingston.

Harvard Not in Championship Form.

Cambridge, October 29.— Although Harvard meets Princeton next Saturday, she is far from being in championship form. The chief general fault is the old one of lifeless playing. The team has improved somewhat in this respect, the second half of the practice games being fast enough to suit the most fastidious coacher; but the first half is listlessness itself. This week for the first time Lorin F. Deland, inventor of the famous plays which bear his name, appeared on the field as a coacher. He had his little book of tricks, and a few of his new ones were tried, but it is probable that Harvard will keep to "straight playing" this season, and there will not, as has been usual, be any secret practice. Another new face was that of Bob Emmons, the captain of last year's eleven. From this time on Emmons will have full charge of the coaching, and it is likely that he will have as many assistants as did Dr. Brooks last year.

Hamilton Men Withdraw Their Protest.

Toronto, October 29.— At last night's meeting of the executive of the Rugby Union, a protest in connection with Saturday's game between Hamilton and 'Varsity was filed. It was alleged Referee Bayley had taken time off on every occasion the ball went to touch. The Hamilton men, however, withdrew their protest.

The various dates were then arranged as follows:

Queen's vs. 'Varsity, at Toronto, Saturday, November 2.

Queen's vs. 'Varsity, at Kingston, Saturday, November 9.

Lornes vs. Osgoode II, at Toronto, Saturday, November 2, for intermediate.

Hamilton vs. Kingston Granites, at Hamilton, Saturday, Nov. 2, for junior championship.

Point St. Charles Are Champions.

Sporting Editor Star.

In your issue of yesterday in re the standing of the junior teams of the Canadian Football Association, you state that the Pt. St. Charles club lost four games. This is not correct, as they only played four games in the series, which they won, and then joined the E. C. F. A. to play intermediate, and have not been defeated in a single match, which makes them champions of their league. We will be very pleased to arrange a match with the Mets for the championship at a time and place to be mutually agreed upon.

J. C. MARSHALL,
Sec. Pt. St. Chas.

A Victory for McGill II.

The game on Saturday between the Hawthornes and McGill II was one of much interest. Good work was done on both sides. Some of the McGill men did not appear. The team was thus at a disadvantage; nevertheless, the score was 1 to 0 for McGill. The winning team was as follows: Backs, Callaghan, Ferguson; halves, Shore, Woodley, Myers; right wing, Robertson, Beckett; left wing, Young, Brace; centre, Johnston, capt.

Kicks.

A special general meeting of the Primrose F. C. will be held at 112 Wellington street this evening at 8 o'clock sharp. Every member is requested to be present.

"Steve" Crosby, one of the Harvard's most prominent coachers, says that the University of Pennsylvania Football team is to-day the best in the country.

The Primrose and 2nd Mohawks were to have played their last match this season in the E. C. F. A. intermediate series on the Mohawks' grounds on Saturday, but the Mohawks failed to turn up, so the Primroses claimed the match. They then played a picked team of 18 2nd Mohawks, and were defeated by 4 goals to 0.

McLea, of the McGill Football team, who was injured on Saturday, was seen safely aboard yesterday afternoon's C. P. R. train for Montreal. Having suffered much by his ride in the ambulance to the hospital, the Electric Railway Company, when approached, kindly supplied a car to transfer the sufferer to the train.

LACROSSE.

Montreal Junior vs. Almonte.

The Montreal Junior Lacrosse Club, champions of the Eastern Intermediate N.A.L.A. League, are scheduled to play Almonte in Ottawa on Saturday, the 2nd November for the intermediate championship of Canada. The boys are organizing an excursion by C. P. R., and expect a good number of their friends to accompany them and cheer on to victory. The boys anticipate a hard match, and in order to be equal to the emergency are doing some hard work in the "gym," and a full attendance of players is requested to-night at the Crystal Rink at 8 o'clock sharp.

THE TURF.

The Cases Against Morris Park.

New York, October 29.—Magistrates Crane and Kudlich, in the Essex Market Court, yesterday, began an examination in the case of the Morris Park race track arrests made last Thursday for alleged violations of the anti-racing laws of the state. The cases against Judges Robert M. Simmons and Clarence McDowell were dismissed on motion of Lawyer Steinhardt for the prosecution.

C. J. Fitzpatrick, the clerk of the scales was discharged from custody as there could be no case made out against him. Delancy Nickoll moved in behalf of the book-makers that they be discharged, but his motion was denied. Later, however, it was decided to make a test case against one of the book-makers and with that end in view Orlando Jones and his clerk, were by common consent made the defendants in the test case. The cases against the other book-makers were dismissed.

In the matter of the three charges against President Lawrence of conducting a lottery in violation of section 323 of the penal code, registering a bet with the regard to the Withers stakes in violation of section 351, and conducting unlawful races in the city, further examination was waived and Magistrate Crane then held Mr. Lawrence on those three counts to await the action of the Grand Jury, continuing his parole however.

The examination of Jones was proceeded with, and after several witnesses had been examined it was announced that there was no case against him. The case against Sturgis, his assistant, was then called, and Jones was summoned to the stand to testify. The book that Sturgis had when arrested was produced. Jones took it and described the figures therein as wagers, and related the different amounts and the different persons with whom the wagers were made.

A consultation between counsel followed, and it was decided that the fourth charge against President Lawrence, practically the same as that against Sturgis, should be dismissed.

Magistrate Crane then paroled Sturgis in the custody of his counsel to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Croker Buys Rey El Santa Anita.

St. Louis, October 29.— It is announced that Rey El Santa Anita, owned by "Lucky" Baldwin, has been sold to Richard Croker, of New York, for $25,000.

This statement is made by W. B. Sink, jr., Baldwin's trainer, who has a string of horses at the fair ground track.

AQUATICS.

The Challenge Officially Withdrawn.

Ryde, October 29.—A meeting of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's Committee was held yesterday, at which a letter confirming the cablegram to the New York Yacht Club withdrawing the challenge for the America's Cup issued by Charles D. Rose, through the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, was prepared and mailed to New York in the name of the president of the club. The text of the letter is withheld.

To Present Dunraven with a Model.

London, October 29.—The Times says: "The committee on the Dunraven testimonial fund met at Cardiff last evening and decided to present a silver model of Valkyrie III, twenty-two inches high, to her owner.

Gossip.

At the Manhattan Chess Club yesterday, Lipschulz won the third game of chess matches from Showalter with a Ruy Lopez after 50 moves. The present score is: Lipschulz, 2; Showalter, 1.

The closing dance of the West End Tennis Club will be held in Fraternity Hall Friday evening next. Every endeavor is being made to make this a fitting close to a successful season, and judging from the support accorded it so far a very pleasant evening is anticipated.

Another slice was cut from the Erie-Buffalo century record yesterday, A. B. McDonnell, of Rochester, being the successful performer. McDonnell's time for the distance—100 miles—was 4.40.09. The best previous time, made by Bill Steimal, was 4.45.10. McDonnell rode unpaced.

At Catford yesterday, Chinn, the bicyclist, rode a half mile, standing, in 57 2-5 seconds, beating the record for the distance.

CHOLERA IN HAWAII.

Mr. Dickson Anderson, Hawaiian consul, has been informed officially that Asiatic cholera first appeared in the suburbs of Honolulu on August 18, and that up to September 18 there were 85 cases. There have been no new cases since September 23. In all there were 62 deaths.

The nationalities of those affected with cholera were: 76 Hawaiians, 4 part Hawaiians, 3 Americans, 2 Portguese, 1 Chinese and 1 Japanese.

Efficient measures were promptly enforced and the progress of the disease arrested. The disease is believed to have been brought from Japan by passengers on the steamship Belgic, which arrived there August 9th.

A MOTORMAN'S FUNERAL.

Two hundred motormen and conductors followed the remains of Treffle Rivard, a motorman, to the Dalhousie Square last evening on their way to Quebec. They were all in uniform. Mr. McDonald, the superintendant, was in the ranks. This was the first funeral of an employe of the Street Railway Company at which all the available employes attended.

FOR BUSINESS MEN.

Yesterday, in connection with the Evangelistic services the first meeting for business men was held in Mr. Birks' old store on St. James street. There was a fairly large attendance and the Rev. W. Hay Aitkin delivered an eloquent address on "One thing is needful."

The old story of Prometheus is a parable, an allegory. Prometheus was on terms of intimacy with the gods. From them he stole fire, and gave it to men. For this sin he was bound to the rocks of Mount Caucasus, and vultures were set upon him. They only ate his liver. This grew again as fast as it was pecked away. Are his sufferings to be imagined? Yes, and realized.

Take a modern interpretation of the parable. There is no cooking without fire. In cooking and eating the mischief lies. The stomach is overtasked, the bowels become clogged, they cannot dispose of the food that is given them. The impurities back up on the liver. Then come the vultures. The sufferings from an outside, visible hurt, are a mere pin-scratch to the torments of a diseased liver.

But, moderns are ahead of the ancients. There is a sequel to the old story. Dr. Pierce is the author. His "Golden Medical Discovery" is more than equal to the vultures of dyspepsia and its kindred diseases. Every atom of the "Discovery" is an active agent against disease. It flies like a ferret, wherever it is sent. It is as sure as the needle of the compass. There is no more need of suffering from dyspepsia than there is of hanging one's self.

Mr. W. Rogers, of 507 Grayson St., Louisville, Ky. has this to say for himself and the "Golden Medical Discovery": "I was a dyspeptic. I had not had a comfortable night in six years. I have taken three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I am now fifty years old. I feel thirty years younger." Yours truly,

Willie Rogers

A Sufferer Cured

"Every season, from the time I was two years old, I suffered dreadfully from erysipelas, which kept growing worse until my hands were almost useless. The bones softened so that they would bend, and several of my fingers are now crooked from this cause. On my hand I carry large scars, which, but for

The first bottle seemed to reach the spot and a persistent use of it has perfected the cure."—O. C. Davis, Wautoma, Wis.

Montreal "Star"

SYSTEM OF

Life Insurance

Five hundred dollars will be paid by the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation, Limited, 40, 42 and 44 Moorgate street, London, England, to the person whom the Editor of the Montreal Daily Star decides to be the nearest relative of any one who is killed in a railway accident in the Dominion of Canada or the United States, whilst being a passenger, provided a copy of the Montreal Daily Star (as indicated hereafter) is found upon the deceased at the time of the catastrophe, or if it is proved that he or she is a subscriber, through a news agent or through the publishers. This sum will not be paid in the event of an accident to railway train men while on duty, nor of a suicide. In cases where the accident seems to the Editor to be due to carelessness on the part of the insured no payment will be made. No claim will be paid in the case of the death of a child under ten years of age. The Editor reserves to himself the right to pay the money in accordance with the provisions of any will left by the deceased.

In regard to residents of Montreal, claims may be established by their having a Star of the day of issue, or the day previous, or by proof of their being regular subscribers, direct or through news agents. Persons living outside of Montreal will have claims established if possessed of a paper of date within three days previous to date of accident, or by proof of their being regular subscribers in the same way.

It must be distinctly understood by all subscribers to the Star that the decision as to the payment of the insurance money is left to the opinion of the Editor; and his decision is final. All copies of the Star are purchased subject to this condition.

The Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation referred to above is represented in Canada by Roland, Lyman & Burnett, general managers, Temple Building, Montreal. Address all correspondence to the "Star," Montreal.

PROTESTANT MINISTERS.

The regular meeting of the Protestant Ministerial Association was held at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday, the Rev. Mr. Dewey presiding. There were present: Revs. Patterson, E. M. Hill, Dr. Rose, Dr. Benson, Dr. Scrimger, Nichols, Fleck, Everett, Warden, Bland, Mowatt, Dr. Evans, Therrien, McMannus, Warriner, Principal MacVicar, McGillivery, F. C. Reynolds, Phillips, Bennett, Pike, Warnicker, Grant, Dr. Smyth, President and Assistant Secretary.

The communication from the Royal Templars of Temperance in regard to special sermons and a public meeting in the interests of social purity was referred to a committee consisting of Rev. Dr. Rose, Fleck and Kelly. Communication was received from Rev. A. H. Scott in reference to a convention of the International Christian Workers' Association for the United States and Canada, and the president was instructed to reply.

Rev. Dr. Evans was introduced and heartily received as a member of the Association. Rev. J. Nichols read a letter "On the pastoral office as set forth in Paul's Epistles."

The subject of the pastoral office was discussed by Rev. Messrs. Therrien, Grant, Bennett, Pike, Dr. MacVicar, Dr. Evans, E. M. Hill, Patterson.

JOURNALISTIC CHANGES.

Mr. P. M. Sauvalle, chief editor of La Patrie has resigned his position and will be replaced by Mr. G. E. Langlois, editor of L'Echo des Deux Montagnes and lately of Le Monde. La Patrie in making the announcement states the new editor made his debut on that paper and that he now edits with great talent and independence La Liberte "which does no fear to follow in the footsteps of L'Avenir and Le Pays and which gives the true note of the Liberal party of former days. There is no need of adding that that is the only policy which La Patrie intends following." La Minerve in commenting on this statement adds that the programme of the Pays and Avenir "was anti-social, anti-national and anti-religious."

Mr. P. M. Sauvalle has joined the staff of "Le Monde," and Mr. De Laduranțaye, formerly of La Patrie, has also joined the same paper.

A FALSE ALARMIST.

The false alarm fiend has been annoying Chief Hebert, of Ste. Cunegonde, considerably of late, and on Friday he commenced a vigorous search for the miscreant, with the result that his efforts were successful at two o'clock on Sunday morning, when one of his men, Constable Binette, and Watchman Lafrance caught a man named Albert Martel in the act of sending in a false alarm from a box on Notre Dame street. The prisoner was arraigned before Recorder Dupuis, yesterday, and let off with a fine of ten dollars through the intercession of his wife and friends on his behalf. The Chief has a man watching every box in his precinct, and promises to make it interesting for the next offender.

FIGHTERS FINED.

At two o'clock on Sunday morning an impromptu prize fight, on Richelieu street, Ste. Cunegonde, was interrupted by Constable Vermette, of the police of that town, and the participants in the battle lodged in the cells. Their names were Napoleon Sablebiere, Alfred Archambault, Ferdinand Shank and Joseph Groulx. They all pleaded guilty when brought before Recorder Dupuis, yesterday, and were condemned to a fine of twenty dollars or three months.

BONNETS FOR THE SCOTS.

The Kilted Regiment of Montreal will Have Them for Parade of Next Year.

The 5th Royal Scots of Canada will appear in parade next year in their complete uniform, the feather bonnets included. At the conclusion of the brigade church parade on Sunday, Lieut.-Col. Strathy, before dismissing the men of the regiment, announced the result of the recent visit of the deputation from the several city corps of the Dominion to the Department of Militia at Ottawa with reference to the annual drill pay. "Owing chiefly," said the commanding officer of the Scots, "to the hearty co-operation and practical sympathy of the Minister of Militia, Mr. Dickey, than whom the militia of this country had no truer friend, the Government had consented to concede the usual twelve days' pay to the city regiments throughout the Dominion. This decision, he was bound to say, meant a great deal to the Royal Scots. It would enable them to meet their obligations to maintain unimpaired the efficiency of the corps, and," he added with a smile, "to procure the feather bonnets."

The citizens of Montreal had given liberally to this latter object, but the time had now come, in his opinion, when something should be done by the regiment itself.

His proposition, therefore, was to the effect that if each company—in view of the fact that the twelve days' pay had now been guaranteed by the Government would consent to advance $100 out of its drill allowance for this year and a similar amount for 1896, he would undertake the responsibility of cabling the order for the bonnets at once to Scotland. He would leave the matter entirely in the hands of the men. They contributed the money, and if they had other objects in view to which they must devote their pay, it was open for them to dissent from the plan he had devised.

At the conclusion of Colonel Strathy's remarks a vote was taken, when the regiment was found to be unanimous in adopting the suggestion of the commanding officer.

Colonel Strathy then announced that he would cable the order for their manufacture at once, and that the bonnets would be ready for the first parade of 1896, if not sooner. Provision has been made for the storing of the bonnets in that portion of the drill hall formerly occupied by the engineers.

THE CHATEAUGUAY UNVEILING

A correspondent who witnessed the unveiling of the Chateauguay monument, sends the following:

The Garrison Artillery were a fine sight as they marched along the pathway to string music; but when they hurried out to their lunch, while the crowd waited in the cold, one stalwart young farmer remarked: "They seem to know how to beat a retreat to the southward as well as some of the soldiers of 1812."

"It is 87 years since the battle," said one middle-aged lady to another, adding, "You'll likely remember it." "Me!" replied the other. "Why, I wasn't in this world for many a year after it. The idea! Me remember it." "O, I beg your pardon," said the neighbor; "it was your mother I was meaning." "Our folk were not in this country when it happened," the indignant lady answered coldly.

The day was chilly and some children started a small fire of leaves and sticks, and finding it a comfort, some of the ladies cast longing eyes at an old rail lying in the grass. A pleasant-looking farmer was appealed to—would he bring it to the fire? "I daur na fetch it, madam," he said; "it's risky; there's too many millctary aboot."

One of the soldiers drew near the fire and called to a small boy behind him: "Spread out your coat tails, sonny, to keep the east wind off me," and seeing the size of the boy a general roar followed.

HOMELESS CHILDREN.

The four Leblanc children who were found starving last week in a house on Manufacturers street by Mrs. Greenwood, a neighbor, are still dependent on the generosity of that lady and benevolent minded officials around the Police Court for food. The mother is at present seriously ill at the Hotel Dieu and the father is serving a term in gaol.

When asked why no steps had been taken to provide for them, Judge Desnoyers said it was the first he had heard of the affair. He could only recommend the case to the Mayor, as he would be unable to do anything himself owing to the fact there is no institution to which he could commit them.

Mrs. Greenwood paid a visit to the Deputy Recorder this morning and he promised to do something for the children to-morrow. He will make enquiries to-day to ascertain the facts of the case and if found to be as stated, will commit the three eldest to the Industrial School and endeavor to have the baby adopted.

Judge Archibald Sentences Those Found Guilty

[Special to the Star.]

Sherbrooke, Que., October 29.—The following were the sentences imposed by Hon. Justice Archibald yesterday upon the prisoners tried before him during the criminal assizes, concluded here last Friday: Hugh Clarke, falsely pretending to have enclosed $500 in a postal letter, three months in the common gaol of the district. This light sentence is chiefly the result of a petition, largely signed by Clarke's neighbors.

T. G. Smedley, obtaining money under false pretences, four months in the common gaol of the district; Ernest Allen, horse stealing, three years' penitentiary; J. B. Brouillard, aggravated assault, seven days in the common gaol; F. H. Goodsell, horse stealing, two years in the penitentiary; P. and N. Giroux, theft, two years in the penitentiary for each; O. McDuff, alias Jones, theft of a bicycle, two years in the penitentiary; C. Bishop, horse stealing, two years in the penitentiary; C. Roy, alias King, burglary, three months in the common gaol; A. Valliere, horse stealing, six months' common gaol with hard labor; W. Martin and W. Christie, setting fire to a load of oats, W. Martin, two years' penitentiary; W. Christie, one year in the common gaol with hard labor.

LAKE SUPERIOR'S PASSENGERS.

Marley, Mrs. Hutchins, Miss Lydia J. Kay, Miss Moss, Mr. A. O. Wheeler, Master Wheeler, Mrs. Moss, Miss Moss, Miss Moss, Mr. H. Kelley, Mr. Hepburn, Mrs. Hepburn, Mr. A. Atkins, and 31 intermediate and 20 steerage passengers.

THE BAR EXAMINATIONS.

[Special to the Star.]

Sherbrooke, October 29.—At a meeting of the St. Francis Bar yesterday, a resolution was passed, partially endorsing the majority report of the special committee to enquire into law examinations, a large majority being of the opinion that the presentation of the degree of B. C. L. by the students aspiring to practice was sufficient to admit them without further examination by the Bar examiners, except upon procedure only.

LILIUOKALANI'S RETREAT.

London, October 29.—A despatch to the Standard from Vienna says that ex-Queen Liliuokalani, of Hawaii, has purchased a sit between Torbole and Malcest and Gardia, in Italy, for the purpose of erecting a villa for a winter residence, and has also purchased the Castel di Pianelli, in the Italian Province of Udine, for a summer residence.

A DISASTROUS FIRE.

London, October 29.—A despatch from Perth, West Australia, says that an extensive fire took place there on Sunday morning, when several railway sheds and warehouses for the storage of freight, were burned. The prisoners in the gaol near by assisted the fire brigade in putting the fire out. The loss was £50,000.

COUNTERFEITERS' COINS.

Paine's Celery Compound a Perfect Cure for Rheumatism.

Are you numbered in the vast army of rheumatics? If you are, be warned in time. This is the season most fatal to all who suffer from rheumatism. Already, alarm and consternation is spreading in the ranks of the suffering and disabled. To-day, sunshine cheers you; to-morrow and succeeding days, cold, damp, chilling and piercing winds may bring you to the verge of despair, from agonies and excruciating pains.

Can you afford to go on bearing agonies that may prove fatal at any moment? Can you afford to experiment with useless medicines when you know of Paine's Celery Compound, and the wonders it has done for others? If you value life, make trial to-day of the only medicine under heaven that can banish your terrible affliction. Each bottle of Paine's Celery Compound is full of life-giving virtue and power. It cannot fail in your case; a cure is guaranteed; what stronger promise can you desire? Your friends and neighbors have been cured by Paine's Celery Compound. Many of them lingered in pain for years, and failed with scores of medicines; but victory was theirs after using Paine's Celery Compound. Health, strength, perfect vigor and complete victory will also be yours if you take hold of the same great curing agent.

ADRIFT AT SEA.

Experience of The Crew of The British Ship Aberfoyle.

San Francisco, October 29.—The British ship Aberfoyle has arrived from Newcastle, N. S. W., with a cargo of coal. Early this year the Aberfoyle sailed from Frederickstadt for Newcastle in charge of Captain George M. Robertson. The captain got on a spree and the first officer was washed over board. She was, therefore, without a pilot. The man at the wheel knew enough to keep the vessel's head to the sea. But more than once the crew despaired of their lives, as wave after wave broke over the bow and side. The captain still kept up his spree, and finally became so violent that the crew placed him under restraint. He was made a prisoner in the cabin, where he swallowed the contents of a bottle of carbolic acid and in a few minutes fell dead and was consigned to the sea. For weeks the ship drifted about aimlessly in ocean, the men being without the slightest knowledge of their whereabouts. The steamer Tagliaferro was finally sighted and signals of distress were raised. The captain of the steamer lowered a boat and sent the second mate to the Aberfoyle. On learning the cause of the vessel's distress the master placed the second mate in charge of her and she was sailed to Melbourne.

AFTER CIVIC REFORM.

The spontaneous popular discussion of civic reform proposals that has been going on for some time in Toronto, has at last led to the reorganization of the Citizens' Committee. The sudden breakdown of their waterworks system last September has given the Torontonians a lively interest in the subject of civic misgovernment. Every time the water cart went by to the melancholy music of the fog horn, the householder received a reminder that municipal politics was a thing that interested somebody else beside the aldermen and the public contractors. As a consequence popular interest in the subject has grown daily; and now the Citizens' Committee has been revived. Mr. Goldwin Smith has been made chairman and three Secretaries have been set at work. Citizens are invited to make suggestions in writing and a committee has been appointed to read these suggestions and transmit the essence to the central Committee. Plainly they mean to see up in Toronto whether it be possible to get the city governed in the interests of the citizens.

Mr. Goldwin Smith in taking the chair, said:

> City government has been said to be the great problem upon this continent. Its importance is enhanced by the growth of cities, which is a striking feature of the age. It is pressing everywhere. It is particularly pressing here at this time. Our city is bearing a burden of debt and taxation, including the taxation for local improvements, which, unless its increase can be arrested, threatens to transfer the property from the householder to the taxpayer.
> When our burden of debt and taxation reaches confiscation point residents will leave us and manufacturers will shun us. The number of vacant houses is already great, rents have sunk very low, the assessed value of our property has fallen six millions and a half.

There is a boom awaiting the city on this continent which first becomes conspicuously well-governed. A good Council, with an alert citizenship behind it, would be a civic asset of high cash value —more than that, it would be an individual cash asset for every merchant, manufacturer, business man, and householder within the limits. It would mean low taxation, good police and fire protection, and effective city services of all kinds. Is it or is it not reasonable to believe that such a state of affairs would draw population?

And such a state of affairs can be reached by the citizens of any city who will simply take a business interest in municipal politics. Such occurrences as the collapse of the Toronto water works and the shower of new taxes threatening Montreal are very apt to produce this interest. Men who cannot be argued into a belief that they are concerned in civic misrule, can be troubled or taxed into it.

It excites the envy of Canadian cities, burdened with debt and taxation, and driven to their wit's ends to find a cure for the prevailing municipal malady, to read of the condition of the great city of Glasgow which owns real estate bringing it in an annual revenue of $175,090, and which receives a profit of $370,000 from its markets, and water and gas services. The history of its control of the gas works reads like a fable. Says a sketch of Glasgow, appearing in the Winnipeg Tribune, on this point:

> When the gas company was bought out the price was $1.10 per one thousand feet. In 1893-4 it was about sixty cents, and has since been reduced. The Corporation paid a little over $2,500,000 for the company's property, and has since spent about $3,000,000 in extending works and improving the supply. It has also taken into its own hands the supply of electric light with complete success.
> They have public baths and wash-houses; music in the parks and concerts in public halls during the winter; and are now building a People's Palace at a cost of $100,000. In 1870 a sinking fund was established, through which about three millions seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars have already been paid off. This sinking fund will pay off the whole remaining debt by 1941, when the present works will become the unencumbered property of the Corporation.

Good municipal government pays.

THE DEFEAT OF THE FRENCH MINISTRY.

The defeat of the French Ministry because of alleged slackness in prosecuting the culprits in some extensive railway frauds is a note of wholesome tone. The overthrow of a Ministry in France is not at all similar in its effects to the defeat of the Government under the British system. A Cabinet is often put out in the Chamber of Deputies just to get rid of a single Minister or group of Ministers. A new Government is almost certain to contain a fair proportion of the late Ministry. Such a reorganization of the Government as has taken place at Ottawa several times since the death of Sir John Macdonald, would be, in some senses, equivalent to a change of Ministry in France. The division of the Chamber into "groups" is, however, a feature of the situation that we cannot reproduce on our stage. The Chamber of Deputies will do much for the nation if it makes it plain that no Ministry can live which does not punish boodling and insist upon honest administration. Stability of government is a great need, particularly in the midst of the war camp of Europe; but purity of government—a patriotism that punishes all those who betray the nation for private gain—is also a high necessity.

LATE SIR CHARLES HALLE

Learned His Piano Notes When Three Years of Age.

The late Sir Charles Halle, the celebrated pianist, director of the Musical Institution at Manchester, who died in that city recently, was born in Germany in 1819. He received the honor of Knighthood in 1888. At the age of three he knew his notes. When only four, on returning from a visit to a relative he remarked, "Uncle's piano is a quarter of a tone sharper than ours"— which proved to be the fact. At this early age he appeared at a concert in his native town of Hagen, Westphalia. At the age of seven Spohr arranged for his appearance at a concert under his direction. For the next ten years young Halle gave no more exhibitions, but studied music incessantly. He went to Paris where he acquired a great reputation for his style of interpreting classic compositions. When the revolution of 1848 broke out he repaired to England, and thenceforward made that country his home. He became director of the Musical Institution at Manchester, and was recognized as the chief of classical pianists in England. He published a few compositions of a very high order, edited the best classical composers and acquired celebrity as a conductor. Sir Charles married seven years ago Mme. Norman Neruda, the celebrated violinist. His son, Mr. C. E. Halle, is a well known painter, and Miss Halle is a rising sculptor.

A LOAN EXHIBITION

To Be Opened in The Art Gallery Next Month.

The Art Association of Montreal intend having a Loan Exhibition at the Art Gallery about the fifteenth of November. It is two years since a similar exhibition was held here and no doubt the art-loving public will be glad of an opportunity to see the gems from the private galleries of the connoisseurs of Montreal. Among those contributing are Mr. R. B. Angus, Mr. E. B. Greenshields, Sir Donald Smith, Dr. F. J. Shepherd, Dr. A. A. Browne, Dr. W. Gardner, Mr. C. G. Hope, W. J. W. Learmont, Mr. E. Holton, Mr. James Ross, Hon. W. G. A. Drummond, Mr. David Morrice and the Art Association. The following masters will be represented: Reynolds, Gainsborough, Romney, Crome, Constable, Linnell, Franz Hals, Peter de Hooche, Velasquez, Corot, Decamps, Daubigny, Rousseau, Monticelli, Baron Leys, Alma Tadema, Ribot, Damnier, Roybet, Maris, Bosboom, Thoten and many others.

THE BRIGADE CHURCH PARADE.

The following was communicated in brigade orders by Major Roy, B.M., last night:

Brigade Office, 5th Military District,
Montreal, October 28th, 1895.

The following has been received this day from Major-General Gascoigne, commanding the militia of the Dominion of Canada, and is promulgated for the information of all concerned.

By order,
A. ROY, Major,
Brigade Major.

To the Deputy Adjutant-General, Military District No. 5:

Please convey to all ranks of the Montreal Garrison, my extreme satisfaction at the turn out at yesterday's divine service parade.

I know well the difficulties which have to be contended with at this period of the year, but these were successfully overcome, with the result that I was able to witness a most satisfactory parade of the Montreal Garrison.

The men turned out clean and smart; were steady and punctual on parade, and the performance was most creditable to all concerned.

V. J. GASCOIGNE,
Major-General,
Commanding Canadian Militia.

BRITISH CONSUL.

A. W. S., Longueuil.—I want to know if there is a British Consul in Kansas City. Could you obtain the information for me and publish it in your answer to correspondents column?

Ans.—Yes, there is. His name is P. E. Borrough, according to information furnished by the U. S. Consul for the Star Almanac, 1896, now in press.

"IS LIFE WORTH LIVING?"

Life is worth living, if we live aright,
Eyes to the front, the final end in view,—
The end when all aims trivial or untrue
Must burst like airy bubbles on our sight.

Life is worth living, if we do our best;
Our best is often greater than we dream.
Immortal souls with mighty forces teem—
They are revealed by him who makes the quest.

Life is worth living when our secret thought
Hides no least wish or impulse, hope or aim,
That can bring disappointment, sorrow, shame,
Or hurt to any fellow being's lot.

Life is worth living when we strive to be
Of greater use to-morrow than to-day,
Moulding ourselves from rough unsightly clay
To something lovely for the world to see.

NO SALARIES FOR CITY ALDERMEN.

THE CITY COUNCIL RESCINDS ITS VOTE OF A YEAR AGO.

Aldermen Consider It Would Look Absurd to Vote Salaries to Themselves While Seeking Authority to Impose New Taxes.

The City Council met yesterday to discuss the proposed amendments to the city charter, the principal business done during a three hours' session being the rescinding of the resolution passed last year in favor of the allowance of salaries to aldermen. His Worship, Mayor Villeneuve presided, and all of the members but Ald. Hurteau and Ald. Prefontaine were present.

The Mayor announced that he had that morning received from the Rev. Father Hebert, of the Sulpicians, a request that the city allow the Hospice St. Charles permission to occupy for this winter the old building on Jacques Cartier square, south of Le Royer street, formerly occupied by the Recorder's Court, and acquired by the city with the Chateau de Ramezay property. The Mayor favored the granting of the request. The old property occupied by the Hospice on Dalhousie Square had been expropriated, and the institution was without a home. The desire was to use the old building as a sheltering home, where the poor might find shelter without applying to the police stations. The building was at present vacant, and it would cost the city $10,000 to put it into a state of repair.

Ald. Beausoleil wanted the application referred to the Finance Committee.

Ald. Renault and Ald. Grothe appealed to the Council in the name of charity to grant the request.

Ald. Stevenson thought that now that the property had come into the possession of the city, it might with advantage be used for the Recorder's Court again. It would be a good thing to get that institution out of the City Hall.

Ald. Lyall said that there was no such glaring destitution as to warrnat the Council taking any step likely to give the impression to the outside world that a municipal refuge was a necessity in Montreal.

The matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

The Council took just three quarters of an hour disposing of the first clause of the proposed amendments of the city charter. It was the first clause passed by the Council and adopted by the Legislative Assembly last year and providing that aldermen receive an annual salary of $500, each alderman to be fined five dollars for every time he absents himself from a meeting of Council or of a committee to which he may belong.

It was moved by Ald. Leclerc, seconded by Ald. Beausoleil that this clause be struck out. Ald. Leclerc in making his motion, said that while the Council was appealing to the public for an increased revenue and was discussing the imposition of new burdens upon the ratepayers, it appeared to be very absurd to appropriate salaries for themselves.

Ald. Wilson-Smith considered the laborer worthy of his hire and the aldermen found it very hard work satisfying an exacting public, he added facetiously. The elections were coming on and he for one would not like to assume the responsibility of facing his electors after voting for the addition of the salary clause to the city charter. He could, he jokingly added, sympathize with the aldermen who thought that they deserved a salary for spending four or five millions of dollars of the City's money.

Ald. Stevenson was opposed to salaries for aldermen last year, yesterday he favored the suggestion. He explained that the position had changed. Asking for salaries last year it looked as though they were actuated by selfish motives. Now a general election was at hand, and none of them knew whether they would be members of the Council by the time the law came into force, or not. He thought that a salary would induce a better class of men to enter the Council. Men of high standing in the community accepted salaries for serving on the boards of banks and other business corporations. Members of Parliament and the Local Legislature received salaries of one thousand dollars and eight hundred dollars, and they had not nearly so much of their time taken up by their public duties as the city aldermen.

Ald. Penny found a great diversity of opinion among his constituents on this question. He agreed with Ald. Leclerc that while the city treasury was depleted the Council should be the first to set the example of economy. The aldermen could save themselves much trouble by curtailing the number of meetings of Council and committees.

Ald. Lyall said that if he thought five hundred dollar salaries would bring better men into the Council he would vote for it. As he did not, he would vote against it.

Ald. Connaughton suggested that the question be left in abeyance until the general elections in order that the electors might pronounce upon it.

The Mayor favored the proposition.

Now as amusing a bit of erratic voting as has ever taken place in the City Hall occurred.

Ald. Leclerc's amendment to strike the salary sentences of the first clause out was defeated on the following division:

Ayes—Ald. Lyall, Leclerc, Renault, Smith, Farrell, Hurtubise, Rainville, Beausoleil, Penny and Nolan—10.

Nayes—Ald. Connaughton, Lefebvre, Turner, Jacques, Grothe, Savignac, Dupre, Prenoveau, Marsolais, Costigan and Stevenson—11.

Ald. Stevenson moved that the clause as it stood be adopted, this motion being lost on the following division:

Ayes—Ald. Lefebvre, Jacques, Grothe, Savignac, Dupre, Prenoveau, Marsolais, Costigan, Stevenson—9.

Nayes—Ald. Connaughton, Turner, Lyall, Leclerc, Reneault, Smith, Farrell, Hurtubise, Rainville, Beausoleil, Penny and Nolan—12.

Reconsideration of the last vote was then moved and lost on the same division, so that the whole clause will either have to be struck out or the subject debated again.

Several of the clauses of last year's charter amendment bill were passed before adjournment.

On motion of Ald. Smith it was decided

On the motion of Ald. Smith it was decided to insert a clause that the city shall not be obliged to carry out any improvements, the cost of which, either in whole or in part, will exceed the borrowing powers.

Ald. Costigan gave notice of motion that article 24 of the charter be amended by adding in the second paragraph, after the wodd "corporation," "or acts as legal counsel, or is a member of a firm which acts for any person, firm or company having a claim or action against the city."

The Council meets again this afternoon.

"THE GASCOIGNE GRAND MARCH."

This spirited Marche Militaire, dedicated by permission to General Gascoigne, which was played at the unveiling of the Chateauguay monument on Saturday, and at the Church Parade, is the latest composition of Miss Beatrice Glen Moore, daughter of the late Colonel Moore, Commissary-General of Imperial Ordinance. It appeared in the last issue of "Montreal Saturday Night," of which the composer is editor; and the gallant General has sent copies to his old regiment, the Imperial Scots Guards. Miss Moore is the favorite pupil of Rubini (late vocal instructor to the Royal Family, and director of Italian Grand Opera, Paris), no small distinction when one recalls the famous names of many of his former pupils.

C. M. B. A.

An Address of Congratulation Presented to Judge Curran.

Branch 26 of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Ass'n. gave a literary and musical entertainment at the Glenora Hall, last night. Mr. Justice Curran was among those present, and Mr. A. D. McGillis, president of the Branch, read him the following address:

To the Hon. J. J. Curran, L.L. D., on the occasion of his elevation to the Bench of the Superior Court of the Province of Quebec.

Hon. Judge and Brother,—The officers and members of Branch 26, C.M.B.A. desire to express their pleasure and satisfaction on learning that in your person a distinguished member of the Association has been honored in being raised to the important position of Judge of the Superior Court.

Almost since the inception of this branch you have been actively associated with us, and each one feels that he participates in the honor which the Federal Government has seen fit to confer upon you.

As a slight token of the esteem and the respect in which you have ever been held by the officers and members of Branch 26, C.M.B.A., we beg on this occasion that you accept the portrait of yourself which we now present, and which we trust will long hang upon the walls of your happy home as a reminder of the brotherly spirit in which it has been offered to you.

We also trust and pray that in years to come Divine Providence may grant you health and strength to perform the duties of the exalted office to which you have been raised, and that to you may apply the words of Ireland's poet:

"When you have knelt in the temple of duty,
Worshipping honor and valor and beauty,
When like a brave man in fearless resistance,
You'll have fought the good fight on the field of existence.
When a home you'll have won in the conflict of labor,
With truth for your armor and thought for your sabre;
Be that home a calm home where your old age may rally,
And where peace shall attend as you walk down life's valley."

In closing we beg to express the hope that in the future, as in the past, the officers and members of Branch 26, C. M. B. A., may enjoy the benefits of your advice and the pleasure of your presence and the aid of your active co-operation."

Subscribed to on behalf of the branch by the president, Mr. A. D. McGillis, J. J. Costigan, the secretary, and other officers of the Society.

The portrait referred to in the above address was a fine likeness of the judge painted in oil by Mr. Lloyd, and handsomely framed.

Mr. Justice Curran replied in fitting terms. He said that now he almost regretted his retirement from public life, and would always look back to his career in politics not without a certain amount of pleasure. He would enter within a few days upon the duties of his judicial position, which duties he would endeavor to discharge conscientiously. He would always take an interest in the Association, to which he himself belonged, as he considered it one of the noblest organizations in the country.

After a few pleasant remarks from His Lordship Mgr. Emard, Bishop of Valleyfield, Father Martin Callaghan, chaplain of the Association, delivered the following oration:

"Your Lordship, Your Honor, Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: "I am delighted to see the Catholic Church of Canada represented in this hall by the distinguished Bishop Emard, of Valleyfield. I am pleased to be the chaplain of the 26th Branch of the C. M. B. A. Though I confess I should not pose as a model, I am in full sympathy with the purpose of this entertainment. The branch which I have just mentioned could not undertake anything which reflects greater credit upon itself than to come to the fore and publicly show its appreciation of a member who has been happily selected from the ranks of the C. M. B. A. organization and officially appointed to sit on the bench as a judge of the Superior Court. His appointment may indeed be viewed in the light of a signal honor to which this gentleman lays claim, but it should not be deemed the strict equivalent of his merit. It is welcomed as an auspicious augury by his legion of well-wishers. It points to a still greater distinction. Mr. will pave the way to a brighter career. There are no two opinions concerning his loyalty to the Government that is ruling our destinies. It was unwavering and uncompromising. He wore like steel, but never rusted in the service, of all classes, and of all races, nationalities and creeds. He did not betray any confidence that was reposed in him, and testily did he advocate in all the parts of our flourishing Dominion the principles of the party to which he was pledged. He figured among the stanchest supporters of Sir John Macdonald. He was the bosom friend of Sir John Thompson, whose memory is embalmed and enshrined in the affections of all true patriots, Christians and Catholics, and whose death in Windsor Castle was the providential crowning of a life unsurpassed in the annals of politics for the dazzling splendor and marvellous efficiency of its achievements. He tenderly cherished the land of his ancestors. He was identified with dear old Innisfail in the heroism of its strugglings for the rights from which it has been debarred and for the independence which must be registered as an accomplished fact in the history of the near future. Never was he ashamed of the Shamrock, with its myriad of associations, and proudly did he wear it on all the occasions which presented themselves. He was not indifferent to the orphan or the poor. He warmly espoused the cause of religion, charity, temperance, industry, youth, literature and education.

"When any worthy interest was in contemplation he hastened to usher it into the light of day; when it was on foot or in danger he vigorously pushed it ahead or bravely leaped into the breach. It may be that his sweet, clear and ringing voice will not, as in the past, be heard in many a hall; that his genial and familiar face will not be seen on many a platform, or that his actual presence will be felt in many a gathering. Rest assured that his heart will undergo no change; it will always vibrate in unison with whatever object commends itself to your applause and co-operation. I congratulate you, Mr. Curran, and I congratulate the Society that has written your name in letters of gold on the roll of its membership. I tender on your account my sincerest congratulations to your devoted lady and your talented family. We may nurse a two-fold hope. We hope you will be blessed by God in exercising the dignity which you hold. We hope that the gap which you have caused will be filled by one who will possess your sterling qualities and your uncommon abilities, by one who will prize the brilliant example you have left, and, by copying it, transmit it as a legacy which should always be treasured."

Loud cheers followed Father Callaghan's speech, and then Father O'Meara, Father Marre and Mr. Finn, chancellor, spoke briefly.

Among those who assisted at the entertainment were: Bro. J. X. Payette, Bro. Wm. Palmer, Profs. Lachance and friends, Mr. Lahie, Mr. John S. McCaffrey, M. J. J. Rowan, Bro. W. P. Doyle, Bro. J. G. Shea, Master Shea and Master Palmer.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE.

The choir of the church, under the direction of Mr. W. J. Birks, the organist, is to sing Farmers Mass in B flat at St. James Methodist Church on Thanksgiving Day, with full orchestral and organ accompaniment. Mr. Goulet will lead the orchestra, and the soloists will be Miss Louise Daly, soprano; Mrs. Kelford, contralto; Mr. Capon, tenor, and Mr. J. Marshall Williams, bass.

BRIEF NOTES OF THE NEWS.

The funeral of the late Mr. F. Madill, M.P., took place at Beaverton, Ont., on Monday, and was largely attended.

Christian Science treatment is believed to be responsible for the death of Robert Bick, of Toronto. An inquest will be held.

The sale of the electric franchise between Aylmer and Hull, Que., is being negotiated with Americans as prospective purchasers.

Mr. Hall Caine is a guest of the Public Library Board at Hamilton, Ont., where he is being entertained in an hospitable manner.

Robert A. Cheesebrough, of Brooklyn, N. Y., manufacturer of fine vaseline, is in Ottawa to suggest a change in the Canadian tariff on his product.

It is understood that the Dominion Government has appointed A.W. Wright, of Toronto, to investigate the sweating system as carried on in Canada.

Mr. Ovide Dube aged sixty-eight years of Three Rivers, Que., fell dead in the bath-room on Saturday morning. Heart failure was the cause of the death.

Major Sam Hughes, M.P., is in Winnipeg, and has expressed the opinion that there is no need for remedial legislation affecting the Manitoba school law.

Mr. Cornelius Judge, a past president of St. George's Society in Quebec, is dead, aged 61. Deceased was well and favorably known in the Ancient Capital.

Capt. Cave and all those men who remained with him at the scene of the wrecked SS. Mariposa, are on the SS. Tritonia, which reached Quebec to-day.

A Protestant school-house near the vinegar factory, and a house occupied by Mr. Bigaouette, were destroyed by fire in St. Sauveur Ward, Quebec, on Monday.

Mr. P. C. Allen, of Toronto, has been arrested at Hamilton charged with perjury in the case of A. J. Ralston, whom Allen charged with forging his (Allen's) name.

The Maritime list in engaging the attention of the Supreme Court at Ottawa. Ship H. L. Phillips vs. the Queen, Clarke vs. Phinney were before the court on Monday.

Dr. J. B. Carpenter, a brother-in-law of ex-Governor Flower, of New York, and a well known citizen and physician of Gouverneur, N.Y., shot himself on Monday while insane, through poor health.

William McDonald, of Alexandria, Ont., was accidentally killed on Monday in the Central Lumber Co.'s camps, 20 miles north of Dean Lake. While working at log piling one fell on him with fatal results.

D. O'Grady, postmaster at Fallowfield, Ont., was robbed of a bag containing $600 on Saturday night. He put the money in his buggy to take it home from the office, and during his temporary absence some one stole the outfit.

The Dominion Bridge Company has just completed a cantilever for the Great Northern Railway over the St. Maurice River at Grand Mere about twenty-five miles above Three Rivers. It is seven hundred feet long and eighty feet above the water.

The Durant case will go to the jury next Thursday or Friday. Attorney Dickinson will conclude on Tuesday morning, to which day the case has been continued, and Attorney Duprey, also for the defence, will probably finish for Durant on Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Ladouceur, of St. Andrews, Que., who arrived at Ottawa after his wife on Monday afternoon, managed, after some difficulty, to get her to consent to return to St. Andrews. Dr. Simpson pursued his way to Missouri, where he was going, and his brother, Dr. Simpson, returned home.

Robert Fee, the defaulting bookkeeper for Sadler, Dundas & Flavelle, of Lindsay, Ont., was up before Judge Dean for sentence. A petition largely signed by citizens, praying for leniency on account of previous good conduct, was presented, and he was allowed his liberty on suspended sentence.

IRISH ITEMS.

(Special correspondence of the Star.)

Dublin, October 16.—Canadian stamps appear to fetch good prices. At a recent sale in London, Messrs. Puttick and Simpson sold a New Brunswick 1s. mauve, unused, for £26; a Nova Scotia 1s. violet, for £19.10s., and a Canada 6d. purple, for £13. Canadians would do well to look up their old letters, and try if they have not some odd £20 stamps lying about amongst the rubbish.

We are to have Patti and Sims Reeves (not together) in Dublin soon. It will be interesting to note if the former has retained her glorious voice. She is now over 50 years of age. Poor old Sims is well over 70, and his voice is gone years ago. How many final tours and last performances has he already had?

The celebrated "Book of Kells," which, besides being the most valuable of Irish literary curiosities, is said to be the most beautifully written and illuminated book in the world, has recently been re-bound in antique morocco by Messrs. Galwey & Co., of this city. The book would no. be allowed out of Trinity College, so the work was done in the library of that institution.

Two Irishmen, holding the post of Commander of the Forces in Ireland in immediate succession, as in the case of Lord Roberts succeeding Lord Wolseley, is not without precedent. About a century ago, Gen. Robert Cunninghame, an Irish soldier, with large estates in Monaghan, was appointed Commander of the Forces, and he was succeeded in 1796 by another Irishman, Henry Luttrell, Earl of Carhampton.

Our great Irish soldiers appear to be in close touch with the Church, and old St. Patrick's especially claims connection with some of them. A Dean of St. Patrick's, the Very Rev. Henry Packenham, was brother-in-law of the great Duke of Wellington; a Canon, the Ven. Cadwallader Wolseley, was a first cousin of Lord Wolseley's, and a minor Canon, the Rev. John Roberts, was Lord Roberts' grandfather.

"Trilby" was produced for the first time in Dublin on Monday last, at the Gaiety, by the Beerbohm Tree Company, and was well received by a crowded house. Dublin has had "delirium Trilby" for the last week or so, and everybody is now reading the book which made such a sensation on the other side of the Atlantic, long ago.

A Tipperary farmer writes urging his brother-agriculturists to start co-operative bacon-curing establishments, such as they have in Denmark. It is a plain, simple fact that Irish bacon producers have not been paid for their trouble nor feed for a long time past, and the only hope is to get rid of the middleman, and bring producer and consumer into closer touch. Denmark's wonderful success in the bacon-curing industry is altogether due to co-operation, and it is time for the farmers of Ireland to protect themselves and make a stand against the rings that have been their enemies for the past twenty years.

The Fermoy (Co. Cork) Board of Guardians are the first to commence the attack on foreign grain. At a meeting held last Saturday it was unanimously resolved to institute an association in the south of Ireland to encourage home manufacture in all its branches and the improvement of our native crops. Special attention will be directed towards preventing brewers and distillers using foreign barley instead of native grown, as it is considered very unfair to the farmers of Ireland that these men should be allowed to import inferior barley, manufacture it and sell its produce as the outcome of Irish growth. An office will be opened in Cork for the purpose of keeping a record of all foreign barley imported to that port, and any other goods not approved of by the Association.

Our late Lord Lieutenant is doing great execution with his rifle in Scotland. Last week, while stalking on the Forest of Kinlochawe in Ross-shire, Lord Crewe made wonderful shooting, bringing down six stags in six consecutive shots, a feat seldom if ever achieved before. And yet when we had Lord Houghton (as he was then known) in Ireland, we never looked upon him as being a good shot.

Lord Roberts has taken a nice place near Clondalkin, County Dublin, and intends hunting regularly with the Meaths and Kildares during the season. He has a good stud of hunters and has already done a lot of "schooling" with his horses so that both he and they are fit and well.

The Parnell demonstration drew large crowds into Dublin from all parts of the country, and the crop of ivy leaves sported by the Parnellites was something phenomenal.

Alfred Austin Designated for The Laurel Wreath.

London, October 29.—The November number of the Bookman states that it learns on reliable authority that Alfred Austin has been appointed the poet laureate of Great Britain.

Mr. Austin is a poet, critic and journalist, and was born near Leeds, May 30, 1835. He took his degree at the University of London in 1853 and in 1857 he was called to the bar of the Inner Temple. At the age of eighteen he had published a poem anonymously called "Randolph," and Mr. Austin is himself authority for the statement that he was early imbued with the determination to devote his life to literature. His first acknowledged volume of verse, "The Season, a Satire," appeared in 1861. Since then he has published a large number of poetical productions. He has also published three novels. He has written much for the Standard and for the Quarterly Review. During the sitting of the Ecumenical Council of the Vatican he represented the Standard at Rome, and he was the special correspondent of that journal at the headquarters of the King of Prussia in the Franco-German war. He has written a number of political and controversial works, and in 1883, in conjunction with W. J. Courthorpe, he founded the National Review. The work that last brought him into prominence was a prose work entitled "The Garden that I Love."

EUROPE'S NEWS AND POLITICS.

STEAMSHIP ST. LOUIS BROKEN DOWN AGAIN.

Latest Movements Regarding Voluntary Schools—President Faure and His Distinguished Visitors—Gossip of the Old Land.

London, October 29.—There will be the usual numerous changes in men's fashions the coming winter, but, as a matter of fact, the best dressed men in London make very little change from one year to another. The exaggerated long frock, spike-tailed cutaway coats and other extravagances are never adopted by them. As an example, the smartest hatter in London has a little shop in St. James' street, which is little known to strangers visiting the city. He never advertises, but in his shop one may see the hat boxes of half the royalties and members of the peerage in England. He never sells a ready-made hat, but insists upon making one for each customer, taking generally a week to do the work. The shape of his hats is always the same, unless by special order, the size of the brim only varying according to the figure of his customer. The same is true in regard to boot makers. For their English customers the best boot makers here make none of the extremely pointed shoes which are now worn in America. The most fashionable young men are wearing almost square-toed shoes.

The question of "boots" (shoes) is a very serious one to an Englishman, and the prices charged are big. Two or three recognized artists in this line are far ahead of American prices. One fashionable firm which supplies a lot of the crowned heads of Europe, and makes a specialty of boots for officers in the Life Guards, Horse Guards and other Household troops, charges the "modest" price of $20 for the regulation uniform boot. These boots reach almost to the thigh, it is true, and are most elaborately made, and one pair generally lasts a lifetime.

Clement Scott, the well-known dramatic critic and author, evidently does not enjoy the hostile reception which the pitites and gallery have been according him upon his visits to the theatres. Heretofore Mr. Scott has always made an imposing entrance into the theatre upon the occasion of premiere and has invariably occupied the most imposing box in the theatre unless royalty happened to be present. But, at a production a few nights ago, Mr. Scott was seen ensconced in the last row of the dress circle.

The population of Japan, according to an estimate received here, is 45,000,000, allowing 3,000,000 for the newly-acquired territory of Formosa. Japan has records of her population going back to the year 610, when the number was 4,988,842. This report also calls attention to the fact that in point of area Japan since the Formosa acquisition takes rank next below Spain and stands about even with Sweden.

The American naval officers in future will not be able to enjoy the privileges afforded by a course of study at Greenwich Naval college. An order is about to be issued by the admiralty forbidding the entry of any foreign officer into the naval college or on board British warships. This order is not specially aimed at any power but America and Japan will be the chief sufferers, as for a long time past they have been sending young officers to Greenwich for a two-year course. At present the only foreigners at the naval college are two graduates of Annapolis and one Japanese officer. The order, however, does not apply to those who are now there, but it will keep out future applicants.

The sudden death of the Marquis of Waterford recalls the fact that he was the hero of one of the most dangerous escapades of the century, when he eloped with Mrs. Vivian, daughter-in-law of Lord Vivian. The marquis married her when young Vivian obtained a divorce and she died in the following year. He then married Blanche, daughter of the Duke of Beaufort, and she is reported to be dying of cancer.

Henry Cabot Lodge, the American jingo, interviewed in London, said:

"I have only just returned from Spain and derive my information in regard to Venezuela from what I have seen in the English newspapers since I reached Paris. From their statements it appears that England has sent an ultimatum to Venezuela, threatening the use of military and naval force if reparation is not made at once for alleged injuries to certain British subjects, and declining arbitration as to a large portion of the territory in dispute between the two nations. Reparation for injuries to the English police is, of course, a mere excuse. Nations do not seek redress for such injuries by at once threatening military reprisals. They begin by diplomatic representations. The Belgians some time ago hanged a British subject with scarcely the formality of a drum-head court-martial, but England has not yet threatened Belgium with armed invasion.

"The real point in Venezuela is the disputed territory. There is not a foot of land west of the Essequibo River to which England has an undisputed title in law and by historical evidence; yet she has gradually pushed forward her boundary beyond that river until she has seized from Venezuela territory as large as the State of New York. If ever there was a proper case for arbitration it is this. But England thus far has declined arbitration, and has kept steadily on seizing land in Venezuela. The possession of all this land, if reports are correct, she now proposes to confirm by military invasion and the use of force.

"Such action involving forcible acquisition of new territory is a gross violation of the Monroe doctrine, and a direct and wanton attack on the United States. The English say that they cannot recognize the Monroe doctrine; that it is not international law. That is true enough. The Monroe doctrine involves the position, influence and supremacy of the United States in the Americas. Those are facts which must be recognized. If England can disregard them, other nations will do the same, and in a short time we shall be surrounded by European dependencies. If we allow England to land troops and invade Venezuela and hold new territory, we abandon our rights and our duties and our well-established position in the Western hemisphere, and sink in the scale of nations.

"The appearance of British fleets and armies for the conquest of American territory anywhere will bring on war with the United States. It is said that President Cleveland has already sent a vigorous despatch to England in regard to Venezuela. If he has done so he will have the cordial support of Americans of all political parties. The President and Congress, Republicans and Democrats, will be united in resisting at any cost any seizure or armed invasion of any American territory, such as is now apparently proposed by England with reference to Venezuela."

The London County Council proved itself unable to dispose of the Music Hall license question without making itself more ridiculous than ever. It granted unrestricted licenses to the Empire and all other halls except the Palace, which is admittedly the most superior place of variety entertainment in London. The only reason suggested by anybody for refusing to one hall the privileges given to all the others was that the audiences at the Palace are so select and the entertainment of such a high class that it would be a pity to run any risk of the deterioration of either. The majority in favor of removing the restrictions on the Empire was seventeen, while the vote on the Palace was a tie, and the Chairman voted with the opponents of free licenses. The real reason for this absurd discrimination is said to be the personal unpopularity of Sir Augustus Harris, owner of the Palace, among certain members of the Council.

A well-informed correspondent writes from Rome that Signor Crispi, with the approval of King Humbert, and apparently with the knowledge of His Majesty's allies, is determined to take a prominent part in Eastern affairs in the event of their developing into activity. The bulk of the Italian fleet is kept constantly within hail of Spezzia, and a special squadron, under the command of a Rear Admiral, is now being formed of five of the most powerful vessels, ready according to the programme, to go anywhere or do anything. People who are supposed to be in Signor Crispi's confidence, declare that in the event of a Russian invasion of Armenia, which is still on the cards, the British and Italian Governments have arranged for a counter demonstration in their interest, in an equitable division of the spoil, the plan including the despatch of British warships to Constantinople and an Italian squadron to Tripoli. There is a good deal of conjecture about all this, but it is not idle gossip by amateur diplomats, but the serious talk of thoughtful Italians, who are in a position to know something of what is going on behind the scenes.

Determined efforts to produce a bicycling dress which shall be comfortable and convenient without detracting from the graceful bearing of its female wearer, are still being made in London, and last week a Bond street firm was so confident that it had solved the difficulty that it invited all the world to visit its shop and inspect the wonderful garments. It turned out that the new dress was a mere modification of the divided skirt arrangement, admittedly becoming to slight, girlish figures, but awfully unbecoming to all others. As slight, girlish figures are in the minority here, the show was voted a failure, so that the field in which fame and fortune await the successful competitor is still open to the world's genius.

The curious fact is reported from the French forces in Madagascar that the column which made the forced march that captured the capital was composed entirely of fair men who came from colder climates. The dark men melted away in the ambulances. The French Government proposes to send a scientific expedition to Madagascar. It will contain sixteen members, two geologists, two doctors, two mining engineers, botanists, surveyors, ethnographists and so on. The fauna and flora, tribes, climate and dialects of the land will come within the scope of the mission.

A record price for a postage stamp was obtained at a stamp auction in London yesterday. A Mauritius postpaid twopenny blue, unused, sold for $700.

Deadly soda-water syphons seem to be the latest public danger. Two have exploded within a month in Paris, and in each case the person who had pressed the lever was killed. The pressure to which these glass bottles are charged in Paris is said to be higher than in the average steamship boiler.

It is now said among the golf clubs that Robert Cox, of Edinburgh, is the Scotchman who has given to the United States Golf Association the $1000 championship cup to be played for by women next spring. Mr. Cox is an old member of St. Andrews in Scotland, and is much interested in the progress of golf in America. He has given the cup with the idea of developing more competition among the women of the different golf clubs here.

President Faure, of France, being, in spite of his "spats" and single eyeglass, essentially a man of the people—one, indeed, who has worked as an ordinary tanner's apprentice—his countrymen cannot but feel gratified at the perfect breeding and distinction which he manifest in receiving the royal visitors who are flocking to Paris in increasing numbers, there being two arrivals for every one departure. Although the monarchists on the one hand and the ultra-radical on the other are on the lookout for anything that could possibly be construed into a breach of "savoir-faire" and etiquette, while the Parisians, with their fondness for making fun of everything, are on the watch for whatever might be converted into ridicule, yet not a single hitch has there been. By none are his excellent breeding and perfect manners more admired that the royal visitors at Paris, who, with memories of the "Pere Grevy's" disconcerting mistakes, cannot find words to express their appreciation of the singularly good taste displayed by M. Faure in his intercourse with them. His characteristically French courtesy is mingled with a geniality as well as with a dignity of bearing worthy of the high office that he holds.

British politics remain stagnant. The speeches of minor men like Mr. Trevelyan and Mr. Curzon do not make a ripple on the surface. The Chronicle has a professed outline of the Government policy respecting voluntary schools, but it is doubtful if any decision has been reached. The plan described would increase the grant to board and voluntary schools five shillings for each scholar, but the conditions under which the money will be given are not defined, and these cover the controversial ground. It is not unlikely that an education bill will form part of next year's legislative work, and it will probably be a financial measure for altering the limits of the money grants to schools without raising the vexed question of religious teaching. The Ministry will hardly undertake to recast Mr. Forster's act and expose itself to feuds in the Government ranks and hostile criticism from many quarters.

Ellison's annual review of the cotton trade of the world shows that the margin of profit to English spinners is small, and that much machinery is now idle. The opinion of this expert is that English spinners made a serious mistake in not buying cotton heavily when it was low, and that their American and German rivals got ahead of them by laying in huge stocks of raw material when it was cheapest; in other words, they were imposed upon by bearish reports from the New Orleans agents of Liverpool importers last year and are now paying the penalty for not having bought raw cotton largely in advance of their requirements. Mr. Ellison considers a greatly diminished supply this year certain, and consequently forecasts a higher range of prices. His statistics prove that it is from the Continent, especially Germany, that Lancashire is exposed to competition and not from India. The number of spindles in Great Britain is stationary, but it is rapidly increasing on the Continent and the United States.

The accident to the boasted American liner St. Louis, involving her displacement by the Berlin for Saturday's sailing, has caused great inconvenience to outgoing passengers. The London agent has been overrun with anxious enquirers for two days, and has been at his wits' end to know how to dispose of the large number booked for the St. Louis' return voyage. The Berlin will go over with every berth taken, but accommodation was lacking for all. Many have delayed their passage for a week, but others have had their money refunded and have taken a Liverpool ship. The St. Louis will be laid up for several weeks. Her rudder frame was broken high up by a tremendous sea, and the vessel was disabled, but the voyage was continued by alternation of screws.

That scheme for a broad new street between Holborn and the Strand, London, which after a generation of delay seemed really on the point of adoption a fortnight ago, has been again laid by, but another even more important project has at last taken a definite shape. A company is now formed, capital has been raised, and work will be immediately begun on the deep underground railway from Liverpool street, under Central London to Shepherd's Bush, a distance of nearly seven miles. There will be fourteen intermediate stations, all about seventy feet down, and connecting with the surface by huge lifts and motive power, as in the South London Tunnel. There will be electric trains run every two and a half minutes at the rate of fourteen miles an hour. Engineer Greathead says the work will cost under $18,000,000, and will be finished within four years.

The King of Portugal, whose dilemma between the Vatican and the Quirinal was anticipated in these despatches, is suspected of having taken French, as well as Portuguese, advice in deciding to quarrel with the Italian King rather than with the Pope. It is this suspicion which has stirred up such a sharp wrath in Rome and led Crispi to say such extremely disagreeable things to the Portuguese Minister.

The correspondent of the London Standard in Vienna says that it was due chiefly to the influence of Prince Lobanoff that a European war was averted in 1887. He writes that in 1886, "when Bulgarian affairs were most critical, a new rifle was introduced in Austria, the transformation taking about five years to effect. The Russian generals, especially Gen. Dragomiroff, urged that Russia ought to take advantage of that period of transition. But the Czar, not being sure of an ally, resisted, and, instead of waging war, it was decided to mass as many infantry and cavalry regiments as possible in Poland, close to the Austrian and German frontiers, to draft divisions from the Caucasus to Europe, and to reorganize the frontier guards—in other words, to take defensive instead of offensive action. The peace of Europe was thus saved, as it were, by only a hair's breadth. The defensive plan was, by Gen. Dragomiroff's advice, published in the Russian Invalide, as a warning to Austria; but when the dislocations really commenced, and the Russian frontier near Austria bristled with troops, alarm was taken in Vienna, and it is no secret that at Christmas, 1887, war was 'as near as skin to the body.' The imminent danger was averted by the exertions of Prince Lobanoff, then Ambassador in Vienna, who acted as a sort of Colonel Stoffel, with the difference that his report was not regarded, but was read and acted upon by the Czar. The Ambassador pointed out distinctly that 'Austria was peacefully inclined, provided she were not further provoked, and that she was far stronger than was imagined in Russia; that especially the new Mannlicher rifle was excellent; that the plan of mobilization, thanks to the territorial system, was as complete as in Germany; and that with the inferior Russian weapon and other disadvantages, the massing of troops at Poland would be of little avail.'"

Cardinal Richard, the Archbishop of Paris, in his recent letter to President Faure, protesting against the enforcement of the new tax on the religious orders, describes it as a serious blow dealt at Catholic consciences at the very moment when a pacification was being effected on the basis of the existing political institutions. "Who," he asks, "are the true friends of France, those who, loyally accepting the republican form of government, wish not for privileges, but for liberty and equality before the law, or those who pretend to defend the republic by imposing the yoke of their doctrines on the country?" He insists that the suffrages of the nation have not approved the exceptional measures of recent years against religious communities; that parents, by subscribing to Catholic schools, show their dislike of Godless schools reesulting in juvenile criminality; that hospital patients clamor for sisters of mercy, and that the latter are still employed in war ambulances. The communities cannot, he says, be expected spontaneously to pay this arbitrary and ruinous tax out of money received from the liberality of the faithful, and it would be painful to see the communities treated with rigor. The Cardinal protests against the attempt to dechristianize a France which is covered with the charitable institutions of the church, especially at a time when subversive passions are fermenting among the masses. As a bishop and a Frenchman he feels bound, he declares, to warn the country of the dangers of legal atheism, and of the removal of every moral barrier to disorder.

ST. PAUL'S FAST TRIP.

New Engines Prevented It Being a Record-Breaker.

New York, October 29.—The new steamship St. Paul, of the American Line, arrived at the Sandy Hook lightship at 2.27 a. m. on Saturday, after a voyage from Southampton of 6 days, 17 hours and 51 minutes. It was her first trip from Southampton, and but for the fact that her engines were slowed down several times and the port engine was stopped altogether for twenty-one hours, she would probably have broken the record from that port, which is now held by the New York at 10 hours and 37 minutes less. The rate of speed for the whole voyage was 18.84 miles an hour. On one of the days when the engines were working all right the average speed of 21 1-2 miles was maintained for twenty-four hours. The days' runs were as follows: 452, 491, 499, 447, 374, 490, and 294. The delays were caused by the newness of the machinery.

Mr. D. J. Beaton, of Winnipeg, has been committed to stand his trial for defamatory libel of R. L. Richardson, the editor of the Tribune.

Under the... Shadow Of Crime

Or the Mystery of Clement Dunraven.

BY

JEAN MIDDLEMAS,

Author of "A Girl in a Thousand," "Sealed by a Kiss," "By Fair Means," etc.

COPYRIGHTED, 1893, BY TILLOTSON & SON.

CHAPTER XVI.—(CONTINUED.)

Storms were not wont to upset Clement Dunraven, and Lady Gertrude scarcely believed him.

She raised his head from her shoulder and looked fixedly into his eyes.

"Is there any woman between you and me, Clem.? for mercy's sake answer the question honestly, or the fear of it will make me mad.

His handsome bronzed face, tanned by the summer sun grew crimson, but he managed to contain the mastery over himself.

"What woman could there be between you and me, Gerty; are you not my wife —my own?"

All that had been done, had been done for her sweet sake. He must go on lying to keep her from guessing, to keep all suspicion, if possible, from her guileless mind.

This was his penalty, and would it not, in time, become even a heavier one? Would she not do more than suspect, would she not learn to know him as he really was?

This sentence did not, however, wholly satisfy her.

"I am your wife, yes, I know that, but it does not always happen in this fashionable world of ours, that husbands are true to their wives or wives to their husbands, does it, Clem?"

"My darling, who has been poisoning your mind, who has been initiating you in the dark ways of fashionable life. Heed it not, my pet. Here in our country home what have we to do with the flirting and philandering that goes on in London?"

"And you will swear you are true to me, Clem?"

"Sweet love, could I be otherwise? I swear to you that since the day I married you," he could not help wincing at the word, "I have been yours, yours utterly and wholly, of what happened before that time I tell you now as I told you then, ask no questions. No man's bachelor's life will brook much enquiry. Are you satisfied?"

"Quite satisfied if you really love me, Clem;" and then she put her soft arms about his neck and drawing close to hers, his face, furrowed as it already was by care, she kissed him fondly.

She could not help seeing the lines that had come during the few months they had been married, and that there was now many a silver thread amongst the erst-time brown locks, but, wise little woman, she said no more on the matter.

Since he loved her, ought she not to be content. Still she was very sure that he had some private worry. Oh, if she could only solace and comfort him—ah, well perhaps, some day he would have enough confidence in her to tell her all the truth.

So thinking she walked away to the window and looked out across the terraces.

The storm had passed and the sun was setting in calm and stately splendour, it seemed to be lingering in farewell beauty over the lake as though to illuminate the whole scene, before it was hidden by the flocculent masses of vapour which rising on all sides heralded the imperceptible approach of night.

"Oh, Clem, how lovely," and Lady Gertrude started with admiration in spite of her forebodings. "Do come and look at the sun. How beautiful it must be by that chill cold lake. I should like to go and look at it only I am afraid it would have set by the time I got there."

He rose and stood behind her.

Was his torture never to cease. If she had looked up at his face now she would have read there an agony far surpassing anything of which she had ever dreamt.

It was he thought quite impossible for him to stay at Aboyne Court. He would have to invent some excuse to get away from the Court. He should go mad if he were called upon to look day by day at that water shimmering through the trees, and which in winter was so very plainly visible. Yes, he must go, that is if he remained free to come and go on the earth as he listed; but at any moment the dread hand of the law might touch him on the shoulder and he would become a felon and an outcast.

But for the moment to flee was impossible; he must await the issue of the next few weeks; besides was there not Lisbeth living at his very gates. He could not reconcile himself to the thought of going far away and thus denying himself the opportunity of clasping her sometimes in his arms. Ah, Lisbeth, whatever the pages of the future revealed, she would never desert him, of that he felt absolutely certain.

Hurriedly chasing each other with feverish impetuosity, these thoughts crowded through his brain.

"You do not go into ecstacies, Clem; how dull you are. I do not believe that the beauties of nature have the slightest attraction for you."

"Yes, dear, they have; the sun is beautiful to-night, but rather stormy. If there should come another drencher like the one this afternoon, I pity the poor wretches who are out in it."

"How prosaic! Ah, the sun is nearly gone, now it looks drear and chill. I will go and dress for dinner."

At this moment the butler entered.

"There is a man at the back door, Sir Clement, who insists on seeing you. He will not take no for an answer."

"Who is he?" Sir Clement looked white and shaken as he asked the question.

"I do not know, sir, but he says his business is important, and that he is not a beggar. The coachman thinks he is one of the Glendinnings. The one who is just out of gaol."

"I will come and speak to him."

One longing look at Lady Gertrude, whom in his excitement he feared he should never see again, and he went slowly to the other end of the house, where he fully expected to meet his doom. So does conscience make cowards of us all.

CHAPTER XVII.—A MARE'S NEST.

When Jim Glendinning reached Lisbeth's cottage it was, of course, to find —as Pierce Vaughan had found before him—that she was absent, and that gentleman, on making his exit, had left the kitchen window wide open.

Jim had not the slightest scruple about entering by this means; having done so, he dropped into the first chair he saw, and, laying his head upon the table, went to sleep.

He had not yet shaken off the effects of alcohol, and moreover the day was exceedingly hot and sultry.

For quite half an hour he slept thus, and then woke, with a stretch and yawn, to swear at Lisbeth for her absence as his predecessor had done.

The place was wretched without her, no fire in the kitchen and consequently no food, and Jim Glendinning, to use his own coarse expression, "liked his victuals," a weakness which his long term of penal servitude had rather increased than diminished.

He went into the little scullery where he knew he should find a pump, and having sluiced his head well with cold water felt considerably refreshed and equal to any emergency.

He took stock of the premises, found some uncooked meat in the larder, and decided that if Lisbeth did not soon return he would light a fire and prepare a supper for himself.

He was too dainty to like the look of her leavings of the previous evening, so he set to work to remove them into the scullery out of his sight.

"Hullo, here's a letter! Let's see what that's about, it may throw some light on her absence."

It seemed as if Pierce Vaughan could not quit the world without leaving behind him a heritage of mischief.

Why had he not followed his first impulse and put that letter into his pocket?

Jim Glendinning read it and took it in with as much gusto as if it had been a most succulent repast.

"A kid, by jingo, a bloomin' kid. Then it was Lisbeth as was at her Aunt's, and I wouldn't believe it 'cos of that there kid they spoke of. Mrs. Ellis, a niece of Ellis and a kid—that was Lisbeth. That fellow, Vaughan, was right —he didn't know about this 'ere kid, though. Well, if ever I expected to disentangle a story like this 'ere, and about that bumptious, bloomin' gal o' mine too! She's a chip o' the old block, that's what she is. I never could walk straight, neither can she. I ain't sorry though, it's capital for me, specially if I puts on an aggrieved face and plays the indignant father. Repentant, that's what I am; and virtuous very, don't like them kind o' backslidings."

Having delivered himself of these grandiloquent remarks he slapped his sides and laughed a loud guffaw that made the walls of the cottage ring again.

Meantime, of course, he had pocketed the letter. He was not going to allow a document so telling against Lisbeth to escape him. So delighted was he with the discovery that he was no longer hungry. Such a trouvaille as this letter was meat and drink to him, and the only annoyance was that Lisbeth was not there for him to tell her what he thought about the matter.

"If she's gone to Hampstead to see about that bloomin' infant she won't be back yet awhile, so I shall just make myself comfortable here until she do return; meanwhile I'll see if I can't father that kid and get some coin. Who shall it be? Baronets, by jingo, I'll begin with the baronets. Don't much care about going to Sir Miles, they Berkeleys have known us Glendinnings for so long, he'll preach and he won't pay up. Suppose I try Sir Clement Dunraven. I'll just take him the letter, and ask him, as a gentleman and a magistrate, what he would advise an unhappy father to do. That's it. I shall soon see how the land lies. I must pull a long face and look as miserable as I can."

So he turned up his collar, brushed his hair, which was rather long, very straight and, by lengthening all the lines about his person, produced, what he considered, a miserable aspect.

And in this condition he arrived at the back door at Aboyne Court.

When he got there he was somewhat surprised at his own impudence, and scarcely expected to see Sir Clement. He was still more surprised when, having persuaded the butler to take his message, he was at once shown in a lower room where all business in connection with the estate was transacted, and told that Sir Clement would come to him in a few minutes.

He had scarcely time to reconsider the situation and wonder whether he had done right in coming there at all before the baronet entered.

It was some years since Jim Glendinning had seen the joyous youth who, as Master Clement, was so frequently at Aboyne Court with Sir Louis.

He was so aghast when he beheld the staid, haggard-looking man who stood before him—ay, Clement Dunraven had grown haggard during the last few hours —that for some seconds he could not find words to tell why he had come. It was not until he was accosted with—"Well, my man, what do you want with me," that he managed to pull himself together, and then he only said:

"You bain't Sir Clement, surely?"

"I am Sir Clement, and you, I think, are Jim Glendinning. I remember you when I was a boy."

"That's it, sir. We was pals once, weren't we?" and the man's face brightened; "but times is changed since then, you and me are both changed. Lord, Sir Clement, how you be a 'tremblin'."

"I have been out in the wet and have got a chill I am afraid."

"And blessed wet it has been, too. I was comin' along by that there lake when it began. Dismal haunt that there of a wet day, I was glad when I got a bit of shelter in my gal's cottage. You don't mind my makin' so bold as to take a short cut across by the lake, do you, Sir Clement? You see, I was walkin' from Linktree. I didn't want to come from Coleshill, they Coleshill folks is such gossips.

"My men have orders not to allow any loiterers about. So you might get into some trouble with them. I don't see how I can make an exception in your favor. My advice to you, my man, is to keep away from these parts as much as possible."

Sir Clement "screwed his courage to the sticking point," and spoke out bravely. By contradicting that lawless Jim Glendinning a little he expected he would find out more quickly how much he knew and to discover the worst was better than the dire suspense under which he was laboring.

"Old pals ain't old pals now-a-days," murmured Glendinning insolently. "Should have thought now as you would have welcomed me different like, knowing my girl, too, as well as you do, and me in trouble about her as I am."

"How in trouble about her?"

"Well, Sir Clement, she ain't at the cottage, she's skedaddled."

What nonsense, Glendinning, she was there yesterday, for Lady Gertrude saw her."

Sir Clement was growing quite bold now he found his visitor bent on quite a counter subject to that which he had expected.

"Well, if she was there yesterday, Sir Clement, she ain't there to-day, the place is empty, and all locked up except the kitchen window, which was wide open, and there's a letter for an unhappy father to read,' and he managed to force up a thorough good sob as if his grief was really genuine.

He handed the letter from Hampstead to Sir Clement, who read it through carefully; he could not look more ashen pale than he did before.

This man then did know something, if not of the last terrible business, at all events the former one, which was nearly as bad.

He must, however, make another vigorous effort to save himself. Would he have strength for many more such?

"Why have you brought this letter to me?" he asked, in a dead level tone.

"Well, you see, Sir Clement, I must go to someone to know what I had best do. You or Sir Miles, I did not know which—only you was nearer and you're a magistrate, too, so I thought I'd make so bold as to trouble you with a few enquiries as to what a wretched parent has to do under such circumstances. You always was a good sort when you was a boy, not so preaching and prim as Sir Miles, though I haven't nothing to say agen him, neither, only I have come to you, and I know you'll help me."

This harangue, which Clement Dunraven did not attempt to shorten, gave him time to think, and with consideration he saw a way out of the present difficulty. Either Glendinning knew nothing at all, or he was a consummate actor, time would prove the truth; at all events, he would accept the belief that he knew nothing and act upon it.

THE QUICK CURE

is Electricity. Of course you have heard of it, and have been told how good it is for Lame Back, Lumbago, Sciatica and all sorts of rheumatic pains, but have you ever tried it for yourself? If not, why not?

There's nothing to risk. It can't possibly hurt you, and if it is a hundredth part as good as the doctors and the thousands who have tried it say it is, it ought to do you much good. It isn't like medicine, which if it doesn't cure you often hurts you.

It doesn't cost much—any man can easily afford one of Dr. Sanden's Electric Belts. It does not need a doctor's help to use it, and it won't interfere with your comfort or whatever work you may be able to do.

Why suffer when you can be positively cured? The method is so simple and the good results are so sure that we cannot understand why men and women endure excruciating pain, which prevents them from working or sleeping, when they have only to reach out their hand and be cured.

DR. SANDEN'S ELECTRIC BELTS

cure at once Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Kidney Complaints, Lame Back, &c., &c. Electric Suspensory for men free with all belts.

None can possibly form an idea of the wonderful currents produced by these body batteries without examining; therefore, if you can, call at our office and see and test one.

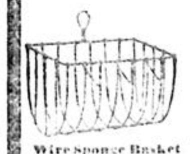
Monthly Clearing Sale. = = = Three Days of Bargains.

WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, FRIDAY.

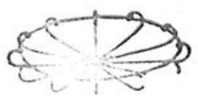
Our Monthly Clearing Sale, which we instituted at the end of August, with the intention of continuing if appreciated by the public, has so far proved a great success. It is a boon to seller and buyer alike. It is a boon to the seller, because it enables us at the end of each month to put the various departments into ship-shape order by clearing out the unavoidable accumulations of a large establishment, namely, ends of lines, remnants and surplus stock. It is a boon to the buyer, because it offers monthly a rare opportunity of securing real, genuine, unmistakable, rock-bottom bargains.

Owing to the pressure of the Fall season's trade this list which should have appeared yesterday was delayed. To keep faith with the public in regard to time, this month's Clearing sale will therefore extend to Friday 6 p.m.

THE BARGAINS SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES! HERE ARE A FEW EXAMPLES:



Wire Sponge Basket large [illegible] worth 15c. For this sale 7c.



Wire Teapot Stands extra strong, worth 10c. At this sale 5c.

Kensington Millinery,

And Max O'Rell.

In the North American Review Max O'Rell pays a deserved tribute to the domestic virtues of the French woman. He says:

"Her constant aim is to be interesting to her husband. She multiplies herself. In turn she is his friend, his confidante, his partner in business, and his chum. She is for ever changing her appearance. For instance, you will seldom see a French married woman wear her hair in the same style longer than three or four weeks. She knows that love feeds on trifles, on illusion, on suggestion. She knows that when a man loves his wife, a rose in her hair, a new frock, a bonnet differently trimmed will revive in him the very emotion that he felt when he held her in his arms for the first time. She understands to a supreme degree the poetry of matrimony."

Hence it is that dress plays so important a part in the domestic drama, and Millinery most of all may become an important factor towards domestic happiness.

Tasteful and becoming millinery is the special aim of this establishment, and our reputation is well known for the pains we take to adapt our productions to the form and features of the wearer.

THE LATE MR. MERCIER.

The Requiem Service At the Church of the Gesu This Morning.

To-morrow is the first anniversary of the death of the Hon. Honore Mercier, and in remembrance of the event and for the benefit of his soul, a solemn requiem service was chanted this morning at the Gesu. The services there were most impressive. The main altar had been decorated in purple, black and yellow, and the catafalque had been raised near the altar railings and was brilliantly illuminated. The Rev. Father Desjardins, S. J., officiated, assisted by the Rev. Fathers Cadot, S. J., and Roy, S.J. The Rev. Father Desjardins also chanted the libera. Immediately in rear of the catafalque sat Madame Mercier, Miss Eva Mercier, and Messrs. Honore and Paul Mercier, the two sons and the three brothers of the ex-Premier, as well as other relatives. In the church were a large number of personal friends of the Mercier family. Over the catafalque hung immense black draperies on which were golden letters "R."

Among others in the church were Judge Bourgeois, a former law partner; Hon. James McShane, Dr. Guerin, M. L. A., Chevalier Drolet, J. I. Tarte, M. P., Alexander Clement, the former private secretary; Rouer Roy, Q. C., Lomer Gouin, son-in-law; Rudolphe Lemieux, late law partner; Raoul Dandurand, Dr. E. P. Lachapelle, Dr. Rottot and others. The choir of the Gesu, with members of other choirs, chanted Perrault's very beautiful harmonized mass, under the baton of Prof. Alex. Clerk, with Mr. Saucier at the organ. At the offertory, Mr. Joseph Saucier chanted Beethoven's "Pie Jesu" with much effect. Rev. Fathers Harmon and de Veune occupied seats in the sanctuary.

On Friday afternoon, at two o'clock, a number of the friends of the deceased with delegations of several Liberal clubs and other organizations will leave the Monument National and march to the cemetery, where they will deposit floral offerings on the coffin of the late ex-Premier. The vault containing the remains will be opened for the occasion.

Women with pale, colorless faces, who feel weak and discouraged, will receive both mental and bodily vigor by using Carter's Little Liver Pills.

Special Notices.

Next Friday being a holiday our stores will be closed, but our Cheap Sale will take place on Thursday, instead of Friday. Time will not permit us to give a detailed list of our bargains, but every article in our establishment will be reduced for Thursday's Cheap Sale at the Au Bon Marche. ALLEGED ABDUCTION CASE.

A Charge of Conspiracy Now Laid in the Police Court.

Mr. L. J. Martin, husband of Evangeline Lefebvre, the girl who it was alleged was abducted, accompanied by Detective Cinq Mars, called on Judge Desnoyers early this morning and swore out a warrant against Edward Mondehard, Heloise Mondehard, Madame Emile Mondehard and Victor Talioreti, charging them with conspiring together to abduct Miss Lefebvre, secrete her and force her to marry Victor Talioreti against her wishes. This is another charge brought by the Lefebvre family arising out of the alleged abduction case which is still before the Court. When brought before Judge Desmoyers the accused all pleaded not guilty, and selected Monday next as the date for the preliminary trial. On that date Mrs. Martin, nee Evangeline Lefebvre, will be able to be present in Court, and tell her side of the story, which will be awaited with interest.

NEVER SO LOW.

Yesterday marked the lowest water ever known in the River St. Lawrence and the harbor of Montreal. At noon the gauge at the Harbor Office showed the water in the channel to be 24 feet 5 inches, which is exactly three feet one inch below the average low water mark. On Sunday last the gauge showed 24 feet 7 inches, which was up to yesterday the record mark. On Saturday last the water was 24 feet 9 inches and on Friday last the figure was the same. On October 28, 1894, a year ago yesterday, the channel contained 28 feet 3 inches of water, which was nearly as low as was recorded throughout the season. It is expected by those who have watched the matter closely that from now until "snow flies" the river will gradually recede, and that by the time navigation closes not more than 23 feet of water will be found in the 27 1-2 foot channel.

BRITISH COLUMBIA GOLD.

The Bank of Montreal received this morning from the gold mines in British Columbia a gold pyramid and brick, valued at $70,000. The gold is admitted to be perfectly pure, and the continual receipt of these samples goes to prove that the Cariboo district will yet realize the best wishes of the capitalists who have invested their money in the enterprise. Among the largest of the shareholders are Montrealers. The pyramid weighed 2455 ounces and the brick 1500.

PRINCESS MAUD BETROTHED.

She Will Wed Her Cousin, Prince Karl of Denmark.

London, October 29.—The Times says, expressing the national joy at the betrothal of Prince Karl of Denmark and

PRINCESS MAUD OF WALES.

Princess Maud of Wales: "The fact that it is a pure love match, free from all suspicion of State influence, will add immensely to its popularity with the English people." The announcement was officially made yesterday. Princess Maud is the youngest daughter of the Prince of Wales and Prince Karl, the second son of Prince Frederick, heir apparent to the throne of Denmark. Princess Maud was born November 26 1869, and Prince Karl was born August 3, 1872, he thus being about three years younger than his betrothed. The Princess of Wales with her daughters Princess Victoria and Maud arrived in London a few days ago from Copenhagen, where the party had made a long visit to King Christian and Queen Louise, the parents of the Princess of Wales.

A writer in the London Figaro speaking of the rumors then of a betrothal of one of the daughters of the Prince of Wales to a grandson of the King of Denmark says: "Princess Victoria, by disposition and inclination is far more suited to be the consort of a future ruler, but she has neither the beauty, verve nor charm of Princess Maud, who as 'Miss Mills' has, when paying private visits to intimate friends, broken the hearts of scores of susceptible youths. 'Harry,' as the Royal family call Princess Maud, is a most fascinating girl, gifted with many talents, a strong will and an affectionate disposition. She is her father's favorite daughter. She is very clever with her fingers—after a boyish fashion — and her favorite pastime is stuffing and mounting birds and small animals, wood carving and the working of iron and copper. She rides, drives and skates to perfection, but contrary to general belief, does not shoot."

Prince Karl is over six feet in height, 'a great rider and "every inch a prince." He is reported as being madly in love with his fair cousin, and the official announcement made has long been expected.

OPENING OF THE LEGISLATURE.

Liberals Will Ask for an Investigation of the License Law Workings.

[Special to the Star.]

Quebec, October 29.—The fifth session of the eighth Parliament will begin to-morrow, and the opening ceremonies will be attended with usual eclat by His Honor Lieut.-Governor Chapleau, who has recovered from his recent accident.

The Government supporters are inclined to believe that the session will be a short one, but on the other hand the Opposition are going in to fight, as they believe this will be the last session for this Parliament. They will, among other things, demand a thorough investigation of the working of the license laws in this province. There is also a rumor that the Government will bring down a measure to reduce the number of members of the Legislature to sixty-five, as it stood previous to the change made by the Mercier Government.

It has been found that the battleship Texas cannot be put in dry dock at New York until the high tides come about a week from now.

A Vain Queen.

The Queen of Madagascar, against whom the French are now preparing to act as they did in Siam, is only 36 years of age, while her husband is 65. She lives in a stone built house called the Palace of Mosoandro, and is always dressed in European fashion wearing a purple dress with a train on great occasions, and sometimes assuming a golden crown. She is very vain of her personal beauty, and has three times refused to accept coin struck to her order in Paris because she did not consider her likeness sufficiently handsome for circulation.

DIABETES IS CURABLE.

A Well-Known Man Writes a Grateful Letter.

Given up to Die He Uses Dodd's Kidney Pills and is Cured of Diabetes.

Kirkfield, Ont., Oct. 29. — About two years ago I left Kansas, returning to Canada, my native land. I am a miller and own a saw and grist-mill in this village. I knew before that I was not a well man, but one day in trying to lift a bag of grain, I discovered that my strength had failed. My wife induced me to take medical advice. Our local doctor, as clever as most of them, did all he could for me; diagnosed my case, as did a Toronto specialist, and both pronounced my disease to be Diabetes. Getting no benefit from the doctors, I was reading one of your advertisements of Dodd's Kidney Pills. At this time my skin was a yellow, sickly color. I had lost all ambition, and was so weak that I could only trail myself along, a mile's walk being too much for me.

Well, I commenced using the pills and got help inside of two weeks. This was the latter part of November last. I took eight boxes in eight weeks and am now completely cured—not a symptom left, general health good and all the color returned to my face. My weight had been during my illness as low as one hundred and twenty pounds; it is now one hundred and seventy pounds. I was bothered with my heart and liver, but these troubles have been cured along with my diabetes. My cure is perfect. I can now walk briskly for miles, and I am as well a man as ever I was although I am now past sixty-two years old. I am well known in all this country; have two sons in Toronto and am a brother of Wm. McKenzie, President of the Toronto Street Railway Co.

I will answer all questions of any one desiring to write me if the writer will enclose a stamp for reply.

Gratefully yours truly,
DUNCAN McKENZIE.

Dodd's Kidney Pills is the only medicine in the world ever known to cure Diabetes.

M. RIBOT DOWN AND OUT.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED BY THE FRENCH PRESIDENT.

His Government Defeated Over the Southern Railway Canal--The Latest French Ministry to Come to Grief.

Paris, October 29.—As predicted in these despatches the Ribot Ministry has fallen.

Since the Commune, September, 1870, no less than thirty-three Ministries have come and gone in France, and in a period of little over twenty-four years twenty statesmen have been called to the premiership, one of whom, De Freycinet, was at the head of affairs four times in different periods within eight years. The Ministry having the longest life was that of M. Ferry, formed February 22, 1883, and continuing in power until April 5, 1885, a space of 25 1-2 months; the shortest lived those of M. Rouchebout, formed November 20, 1877, and M. Fallieres, formed January 29, 1883, each lasting for the short space of 24 days. M. Ribot's first ministry was defeated after an existence of 36 days, from December 5, 1892, to January 10, 1893. He was able to form another cabinet, but with little better success, having been defeated on a question of taxation of liquors, being replaced Dupuy, who was succeeded by M. Casimir-Perier, the former President, upon whose resignation M. Dupuy again took office, which he held until replaced by M. Ribot in January last.

For a long time the Southern Railway scandal, socalled, has been brewing in France. In this connection M. Ribot's ministry was overthrown by an adverse vote of M. Rouanet's interpellation in the Chamber of Deputies, condemning the Government's course in regard to this scandal. President Faure has accepted the resignation.

In bringing the matter before the Chamber, M. Rouanet alleged that a number of senators, deputies and others had made large profits out of the company by fair or unfair means. He declared that the good repute of Parliament was involved, and asked for explanations as to the partiality which had been shown towards those involved in the scandals, claiming that the authorities had been afraid to prosecute them because the deputies and senators involved with the late Baron Reinach, of Panama Canal fame, had disposed of 8,850,000 francs in devious ways, and on behalf of the southern railways. He demanded that the Minister of Justice, M. Trarieux, publish the documents in the case which were in his possession, and which would throw light on the subject. M. Binder followed up the attack on the Minister of Justice, who ascended the tribune and made a brave defence of the Government. He scoffed at the suggestion that the Government was screening culprits, and declared that the late Baron de Reinach, who was badly mixed up in the Panama Canal scandal, was the only person who had benefited by the frauds. M. Trarieux gave the names of the members of the railway syndicate and the number of shares held by them. He concluded: "The Chamber now knows the truth, and if Parliament considers its dignity and honor compromised the Government will join the Chamber in voting for repressive measures and in the face of these explanations asks the Chamber for a vote of confidence."

EX-PREMIER RIBOT.

However, the order of the day was rejected by 406 to 105. A motion was submitted by Dr. Hebert, Republican, who then moved that the Chamber prohibit its members from participating in financial syndicates. M. Ribot accepted the motion, and it was unanimously adopted. Later M. Rouanet submitted a motion demanding that full light be thrown on the South of France Railway scandals, asking the Government to prosecute all who have been found to be implicated in them, and to submit to the Chamber the report of the expert who enquired into the finances of the Company. This was adopted by 310 to 211.

The ministers then retired and handed in their resignations. The excitement caused by the overthrow of the Government was all the more intense, as the defeat of the Cabinet was totally unexpected. The opinion expressed in the Gaulois, published in these columns yesterday, that it was possible that the ministry would be driven out of office on M. Rouanet's interpellation in no wise voiced the general view, and in political circles scarcely a doubt was entertained that the Government would be successful in securing from the Chamber a vote of confidence. The result of the vote came as a bolt from the blue sky, even to many of those whose vote was adverse to the cabinet.

The ministry which has just resigned was formed on January 26 by M. Ribot, after the fall of the Dupuy ministry. It was composed of the following members: M. Ribot, Prime Minister and Minister of Finance; M. Hanotaux, Minister Foreign Affairs; General Zurlinden, Minister of War; Admiral Besnard, Minister of Marine; M. Trarieux, Minister of Justice; M. Leygues, Minister of Interior; M. Poincare, Minister of Public Instruction and Worship; M. Dupuy, Minister of Public Works; M. Lebon, Minister of Commerce; M. Gadaud, Minister of Agriculture; M. Chautemps, Minister of Colonies.

The Chamber of Deputies has adjourned to November 4.

In explanation of the facts of the Ribot Ministry's downfall it may be explained that some time since a magisterial investigation was begun into the connection of certain French senators and Deputies with the South of France Railway syndicate, due to an accusation made in the Chamber by M. Rouanet. M. Rouanet declared that M. Magnier, a senator from Var, and at that time chief editor of the Evenement, had received 87,500 francs as part of the profits of the syndicate which had been organized by the late Baron de Reinach, of Panama canal notoriety. Later a report was made by M. Flory, the official accountant in the enquiry, which supplied overwhelming evidence against the members of the syndicate. The railway in question was a short one, built with a few branches in two or three departments of southeastern France. Corruption of officials and other illegal practices were resorted to to obtain the concession for the road and its branches, and a guarantee of interest on the capital, which was watered to an incredible extent. The budgets of the departments were crippled for years to come to build and support the railway, which passes through a region incapable of furnishing traffic of any consequence. The result of the enquiry was the arrest of a number of politicians and dishonest contractors. It appears from the charges made by M. Rouanet, in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, that there was a disposition on the part of the Government to shield those concerned in the scandal with the exception of Senator Magnier. However this may be, the fact remains that M. Magnier was indicted, but before he could be brought to trial he disappeared. Subsequently he returned to Paris and surrendered himself to the authorities. He was tried, convicted and sentenced to one year's imprisonment and to pay a fine of 100 francs. M. Gustave Armand Rouant, whose activity against those concerned in the railway scandal, has upset the Ministry, is a Socialistic Republican, and represents the Second Circonscription of the Eighteenth Arrondissement of the Seine. He is a journalist by profession, being connected with the Socialist paper, Cri du Peuple, and also with the Revue Socialiste.

DE NAYVE'S CRIME.

Alleged He Threw His Wife's Son Off a Cliff.

Bourges, France, October 29.—The trial of the Marquis De Nayve upon the charge of murdering the illegitimate son of his wife, began here in the Cher assizes yesterday.

The circumstances in connection with the trial of the Marquis de Nayve, who was given up to the police by his wife are as follows: At daybreak on Nov. 11, 1885, some fishermen of Vico Equenso in the Gulf of Naples, discovered the body of a youth about 15 years of age, on the Fusarella rocks, nearly 200 feet below the Sorrento-Castellamare road. There was nothing to identify the body, the only mark upon the clothing being the number 57 stamped on the blue worsted socks.

Two stage drivers at the inquest which was held said they saw the boy the previous evening in the company of a man about forty years of age. They again passed the man but this time he was alone. It was in vain that the police of Naples searched for relatives of the murdered one, although several people claimed kinship. All hope of throwing light upon the affair was given up, when, on June 24, 1894, nine years after the discovery of the body, the Procureur of the Republic at Saint Amand, in the Department of Cher, France, received a long letter from the Marquise de Nayve, dated from her chateau at Presle, apprising him that the Marquis de Nayve was a murderer. In this letter she stated the Marquis had in November, 1885, thrown her son off the cliffs, between Sorrento and Castellamare. She gave two reasons for the crime: First that the Marquis had resolved to possess himself of 60,000 francs which the boy's grandmother had left him, and, second, that weary of the boy's insistence to know his mother, the Marquis had determined to get rid of him.

HON. PETER MITCHELL.

Evidence As to His Mental and Physical Condition.

[Special to the Star.]

Newcastle, N. B., October 29.—Samuel Thompson, Q. C., the commissioner appointed by the Superior Court of Quebec at Montreal, to take evidence of certain witnesses in the suit of Hon. Peter Mitchell against the Montreal Street Railway Company for $15,000 damages, for injuries received caused by jumping from a runaway car on Windsor street, Montreal, held court here for three days last week.

The following witnesses were sworn: Mrs. Jas. Mitchell, James Mitchell, John McKane, Blair Robertson, agent of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Newcastle; James Brown, Geo. Brown, Wm. J. Miller, Jas. O. Fish, Dennis Doyle, George Staples, Chas. R. Mitchell, William Robertson, E. Lee Street, and Frank J. Desmond, M. D. Their evidence would tend to prove that Mr. Mitchell is weaker, both physically and mentally, ever since October 18, 1894, when the accident happened.

PREDICTS WAR.

Concord, N. H., October 29.—The Evening Monitor, Senator Chandler's paper, contains a leader from his pen in which war with England is predicted. It has for its caption, "Our Coming War with England—a Prediction," and is summarized thus:—"War between the United States and England is inevitable. It will arise on account of British disregard for our direct interests. It will also be forced by British encroachments upon other nations all over the world. It will be fought by us, having Russia as our European ally. As a war offensive on our part it may not happen within twenty years. As a defensive war it may come sooner and should be welcomed. One sure result will be the capture and permanent acquisition of Canada by the United States."

YOUNG CANADIAN OFFICERS.

[Special to the Star.]

Toronto, October 29.—Letters received here from India state that two Canadian graduates of Kingston Military College, Captain George Mowat Duff and Captain Herbert Nanton, who won great honors in the Chitral expedition, have been selected out of forty-five engineer officers who accompanied the expedition to take charge of the farthest fortified points on the English Chakdara and Malakand. Captain Herbert Nanton is the son of an old Torontonian, and is well known to many here. Captain Duff is a son of Lieut.-Col. Duff, of Kingston, and is a nephew of Sir Oliver Mowat.

EMPLOYED TO MAKE EVIDENCE.

San Francisco, Cal., October 29.—The Coroner has received a letter, signed George Reynolds, saying the writer's body would be found in the bay, and adding that he had been employed by the attorneys of Theodore Durant to manufacture testimony. The letter says that five other men were also employed by the defence to make false statements. The object was to convict the Rev. George Gibson, pastor of Emanuel Church, of the murder of Blanche Lamont and Minnie Williams. The police are investigating the matter.

MINISTERS ON THE MOVE.

[Special to the Star.]

Ottawa, October 29.—A Conservative demonstration is to take place at Owen Sound on Thursday next. Messrs. Foster, Haggart, Ouimet and Montague will be present.

Controller Wallace, who has just returned to the city, is reported to have been looking into the political situation in Cardwell when in the west.

FATAL TRAIN COLLISION.

Paris, October 29.—A passenger train from Paris for Toulouse, due at the latter place at eleven o'clock this forenoon, came into collision last evening between Lexos and LaGuepie, in the Department of Tarn et Garonne, with a train from Toulouse for the North. Both were killed and eight injured. M. Jaures, Socialist Deputy for Tarn, was badly cut about the head.

MR. WHITE'S MANIFESTO.

[Special to the Star.]

Toronto, October 29.—The World's Ottawa correspondent says he is authorized to say that R. S. White's decision to retire from the representation of Cardwell is irrevocable. His manifesto to the electors, he says, will be issued this week.

PRINCE BISMARCK.

Berlin, October 29.—Prince Bismarck's health is excellent. He walks and drives daily, and seems to have quite recovered from his recent illness. Dr. Schweninger, his physician, owing to ill-health, has been compelled to abandon most of his practice, and will remain at Friedrichsruh until the end of the year.

THEATRICAL ATTRACTIONS.

BANCROFT THE MAGICIAN AT THE QUEEN'S.

Salvini's Representation of "The Three Guardsmen" at the Academy of Music--Weber and Fields Specialty Company at the Royal.

To a person who has not hitherto witnessed the illusions and mysteries of the art of necromancy, the performance of Bancroft at the Queen's Theatre last evening was startling and mystifying in the extreme. To one who has become accustomed to the spells and conjurations of magicians, such as Hermann and Keller, the programme of him who held the boards at the Queen's last evening included many novel innovations. Indeed, with very few exceptions, the somewhat ancient tricks, which are usually repeated with very little change at the visit of almost every conjurori to this city, were dispensed with, and the audidience was permitted the opportunity of witnessing a great number of fresh riddles, which baffled its ingenuity to solve. Mr. Bancroft is certainly one of the best magicians who has visited Montreal. He executes the seeming impossible with an apparent ease which is astonishing. Last evening he held the audience spellbound with his magic and his many illusions were performed in such a manner as to arouse the hearty plaudits of the audience, when once they had recovered from the surprise attending his many divinations.

Mr. Bancroft was not alone in catering to the habitues of the Queen's last evening. He has merely concluded that an evening entirely devoted to magic would become tiresome alike to audience and performer, and therefore in addition to his own performance he has secured a number of clever specialty artistes whose work is in keeping with his scenery and costumes. In their several specialties, Mdlle. Gauthier and the Misses Catherine and Mercedes Gyles, acquitted themselves in the most creditable manner.

Special mention must be made of the wealth of magnificent scenery which Mr. Bancroft carries with him. It is seldom that such magnificent spectacular effects have been produced in this city as those of last evening. The Sultan's palace was a dream of beauty, the parlor in which Mr. Bancroft performed his tricks was elaborately and appropriately furnished with distinctive Eastern and Indian fittings, while the magnificent scenery afforded an enchanting background. Perhaps the scene of perfection was reached, however, when the curtain rose on the third scene, representative of the arctic regions. The picture was one of intrinsic beauty, and the effect was heightened by the wonderful slack wire performance of Mme. Onri, and her clever and dainty evolutions in the snow-ball dance. Taken altogether, Bancroft affords a most enjoyable entertainment, and one of the most varied and bewildering ever presented to a Montreal audience.

Academy of Music.

There is a play called the "Three Guardsmen," which was produced by Alexander Salvini, at the Academy, last night, and there is a book by that name. The one is a laughing, rollicking story of love and adventure of lunge and tierce, of kisses and play and wine, in which everything comes out right in the end, and virtue, be it only the easy virtue of the seventeenth century, conquers. The other is a more serious tale in which the evils of those days, the murderous hatred and terrible revenge which fortunately have been left out of the play, are portrayed with a master hand. It is a well-known tale. The heroes of it have gradually obtained in people's minds the distinction of historical characters; d'Artagnon has become a sort of patron saint to the young, venturesome and whole-souled youths who often have to seek their fortune with little more than he did, a father's advice, a mother's blessing, good courage and a healthy sense of honor. Perhaps the exigencies of the play have a little exaggerated d'Artagnon's doings, and at times made them a little improbable, but Salvini carries them off well, so well that one could have sat many more hours watching them, and regret it when the curtain finally falls.

D'Artagnon last night was a man of flesh and blood, and therefore he appealed to the men and women of the audience. His fencing was artistic, his love-making delicious, his self-reliance and conceit amusing, and his intoxication produced that sense of semi-pathetic ludicrousness which the sight of an honest man in his cups is apt to call forth in other men. The performance was good all through, and the play well mounted. The support was excellent. The three ladies, Adelaide Fitz Allen, as the Queen; Augusta de Forest, as the female bravo; Lady de Winter, and charming Lulu Klein, for whose sake it is pleasant to know that Madame Bonaucieux of the play and the story are not the same, took their parts as the great Dumas would have liked them to. Of the men, the three guardsmen, Messrs. J. M. Francoeur, Norman Conners and Augustus Balfour; Louis XIII, Walter Vincent; the cardinal, William Ranous, Buckingham, Albert Bruning and de Treville, Henry Law, deserve especial notice, but even the small parts were well taken.

Theatre Royal.

The fun caused by Weber and Field's Vaudeville troupe, playing at the Theatre Royal, is irresistible. The performance opened with Lavender and Tomson in characteristic sketches, followed by Drummondo Staley and Belle Borbeck, the original blacksmith who bring forth music from all sorts of instruments to the delight of the audience. Billy Emerson, of minstrel fame, came next, and he kept up the continual roar of laughter, and retired in favor of the two German senators, Weber and Field, who have departed somewhat from their old lines. They now use a shooting gallery instead of a billiard room. Lottie Gibson, the little magnet, and probably one of the most popular specialty actresses visiting the Royal, was next on the bill, and it was easily seen that she had lost none of her popularity. Mr. James F. Hoey was perhaps not quite up to the rest of the company, but still his act appeared to please the gallery if not the orchestra chairs. The Acme Four, well known in farce comedy, closed the humorous part of the programme with a laughable sketch. The evening's entertainment wound up with a most novel performance by a troupe of trained cockotoos, under Marietta and Billoni. The birds do everything in the acrobatic line without the slightest hesitation.

AFTERNOON LECTURES.

The Young Women's Christian Association is planning afternoon lectures, to be held at 10 Metcalfe street, every Wednesday at half past four o'clock. The course will comprise Bible study, medical lectures and talks to young mothers and housekeepers. The first lecture, entitled "A Neglected Education," will be given to-morrow (October 30) by Mrs. J. F. Stevenson. The lecture is free, and all ladies are cordially invited.

SUFFOCATED BY GAS.

A verdict of "accidental death" was returned by the jury at the inquest on the body of Bruno Boucher, who was found dead in bed, having been suffocated by gas Sunday morning at the residence of Mr. H. Boisseau, St. Louis square. Three years ago the father of the deceased, while visiting the same house, was almost suffocated by gas in a similar manner, but was discovered in time to save his life.

STORMY ON THE LAKES.

Decks Washed by The Waves. Schooners Belated.

[Special to the Star.]

Toronto, October 29.—One of the most severe gales that has been felt on Lake Ontario for a number of years prevailed yesterday. Such local steamers as are still running were very late getting in, and had a rough trip, the waves sweeping the pilot house. The schooner Geo. W. Davis, is ashore above Port Maitland, Lake Erie. She will probably be got off to-day. Captain Sylvester, of Sylvester & Company, reports that two of his three masters are out in the storm, the J. G. Worts, on Lake Superior, and St. Louis, on Lake Erie, and he is a little anxious about them. A number of schooners for this port are down the lake, some of them eleven days out, owing to the steady westerly winds during the last two weeks.

THE STRANDED BRAZILIAN.

Her Bow All Broken Up. Unloading the Forehold.

[Special to the Star.]

Murray Bay, October 29.— The diver who examined the stranded steamer Brazilian, it is reported, says that for about ten feet the vessel's bow is all broken up. The men are now at work unloading the fore hold. The steamer Relief arrived from Quebec this morning with pumps and other necessary tackle to pull the Brazilian off. The tug Lord Stanley took a schooner loaded with freight and sheep to Quebec yesterday.

The Brazilian left Montreal for London on Saturday morning last with a full general cargo. She carries a crew of 34 men, and is in command of Captain Whyte. The Brazilian has a gross tonnage of 4100 and a net tonnage of 2085. She has triple expansion engines, and is the best Allan steamer in the London trade, though exclusively a freight ship. She is about six years old.

THE BIG FIGHT.

Arrangements Still Unsettled for Holding It.

Hot Springs, Ark., October 29.—Warrants are out for both Fitzsimmons and Julian, his manager, and Robert will be arrested as soon as he puts foot in the state. That, at any rate, is what Governor Clarke says. Nevertheless, some people say that the fight will come off on Friday, perhaps on Thursday, in private, for a $5000 or $10,000 bet. Fitzsimmons is expected here to-night or tomorrow from Corpus Christi, Texas. If arrested, he says he will give a bond. Julian claims that Corbett and Brady have purposely hindered the fight, as originally purposed, from coming off.

Corbett was re-arrested yesterday on a charge of conspiring to break the peace. The citizens' committee instigated this second arrest, which took place at Spring Lake.

DOUBLE ELECTROCUTION.

Charles N. Davis and George Smith Put to Death at Dannemora.

Dannemora, N. Y., October 29.—Geo. Smith and Charles N. Davis were electrocuted in Clinton prison here to-day, making twenty-nine who have been put to death by this method. George Smith was convicted of murdering a German named Phillip Richtmeyer. He confessed that he committed the crime out of revenge for supposed insults. Charles N. Davis barely escaped lynching in Cohoes for his crime, which was that of violating the person of a six-year-old girl, killing her and throwing the body into the canal. He had to be taken to the Albany gaol for safe keeping, so intense was the feeling against him. The electrocutions were successfully carried out.

THE DEMERS CASE.

Mr. Casgrain's Action Depends on Recommendations From Montreal.

[Special to the Star.]

Quebec, October 29.—As some papers have stated that the Crown was going to abandon the Demers murder case, a Star correspondent asked the Attorney-General about it to-day, and he replied that no such measures had been taken. The matter, he added, was in the hands of Crown prosecutors, Montreal, who would decide on this point.

AMERICAN SCHOONERS SEIZED.

[Special to the Star.]

Sydney, C. B., October 29. — United States fishing schooners David Sherman (Chutt, master), and Lewis H. Giles, (McKeen, master), were seized yesterday by Commodore Spain, of the Canadian Cruiser Acadia. It is reported that the former was purchasing supplies under license and selling them to the Lewis H. Giles, which had no license, thereby violating the fishery laws of Canada. The Giles was seized here two years ago for fishing within the three mile limit.

MORE SMUGGLERS ARRESTED.

St. John's, Nfld., October 29. — Nine smugglers have been arrested at Burin, St. Lawrence and Mortier Bay, and large stocks of rum and tobacco confiscated. The Police Inspector in charge of the operations, had to-day reports that he would seek further instructions. Two revenue cruisers are to be maintained in the future, one on the south and one on the east coast. The Government claim that by vigorous enforcement of the revenue laws it will be possible to collect $200,000 more duties yearly.

WILL IT PREVENT LYNCHING?

Atlanta, Ga., October 29.—Governor Atkinson, in his annual message to the Legislature, recommends that the General Assembly pass a law giving the family of a person taken from an officer and lynched the right to sue the county for the full value of his life. He also asks that the Governor be authorized to remove from office the man from whose custody he was taken.

THAT SHERBROOKE FIRE.

[Special to the Star.]

Sherbrooke, October 29.—The fire last night at the works of the Dominion Lime Company, Lime Ridge, Quebec, was not so disastrous as at first reported. The cooper-shop only and two or three sheds full of wood were consumed, and the loss is covered by insurance.

MURDER AT VANCOUVER.

Vancouver, B. C., October 29.—J. H. Freeman, wharfinger of the Union Steamship Company wharf, was murdered Sunday night, and the body was cast into the Inlet, where it was found yesterday. Robbery seems to have been the motive, as the murdered man's watch and chain are gone and his pockets rifled.

HAYTIEN REBELS KILLED.

Kingston, Jamaica, October 29. — Advices have been received of an uprising in San Domingo, on the frontier of Hayti. Troops were despatched to the scene, and the rebels were all killed. A feeling of discontent is general throughout the island.

THE QUADRA ALL RIGHT.

Victoria, B. C., October 29.—At noon yesterday the Dominion Government steamer Quadra was towed off Fulford reef, and two hours later she entered Victoria harbor, none the worse for her mishap.

LIBERAL LEADERS CONDEMN 'LA PATRIE'

THEY DO NOT APPROVE OF ITS ADVANCED ROUGE IDEAS.

Laurier and Marchand Deny "La Patrie's" Statements That the Liberal Party Shares the Ideas of the "Pays" and "Avenir."

French-Canadian political circles are talking to-day of the stand taken by Hon. Wilfrid Laurier yesterday afternoon when he condemned La Patrie and denied to it the right of speaking for the Liberal party. It is understood that the chieftain took this step after conferring with a number of political friends. Mr. Laurier sent Mr. Beaugrand the following letter:

"La Patrie on Saturday contained the following article: Mr. Marc Sauvalle, who for such a long time edited La Patrie, leaves the paper to-day to accept a new situation. We hope for our editor all the success which he deserves. He will be replaced by Mr. G. E. Langlois, who first commenced work in the offices of La Patrie, and who still edits with such talent and independence his journal, La Liberte, which is not afraid to follow in the footsteps of L'Avenir, and of Le Pays, and to sound the true Liberal note, which is the only true and sound one of the Liberal party of former days.

Is it necessary for us to again affirm that this note has always been and always will be the true opinion of the "Patrie"?

"I do not admit that La Patrie has the right of speaking in the name of the Liberal party, and the opinions which you express in the lines which are given above do not in any way reflect the sentiments which animate this party. Since I have taken the management of it I have always striven to keep it within the broad lines of the Liberal school of England, and it will never leave that path as long as I continue to occupy the post where I now am. I have the honor, etc.,

"(Signed) WILFRID LAURIER."

Mr. Marchand, following in the footsteps of Mr. Laurier has also written to Mr. Beaugrand taking pretty much the same stand in so far as provincial politics are concerned.

This is looked upon as a straight condemnation by Mr. Laurier and Mr. Marchand of the principles of the former rouge party, led in turn by Papineau, Laberge, J. B. Eric Dorion, Doutre and Laflamme.

Mr. Beaugrand in a lengthy article replies to the leaders of the Opposition by stating that La Patrie has never been the organ of either of them or that of the late Mr. Mercier and he goes on to cite the old Liberal programme of the days of L'Avenir and Le Pays and to state that he intends remaining true to it. He also states that he never endorsed the actions of the clique which surrounded Mr. Mercier and that he was no more the organ of the National party then than he pretends to be now.

A WAYWARD SON.

Stole Clothing and Jewellery from His Mother.

George Wilfrid Parent, a youth of very respectable parentage, who resides on Osborne street, was this morning sent to gaol for six months for stealing from his mother. He was arrested at the instance of his father, who yesterday unfolded to Detective Robinson a tale of sorrow seldom equalled. His son had been wayward for the last five years, during which he had stolen thousands of dollars worth of property from his mother, who was heartbroken. He would take her clothes and her jewellery. Some of these he would convert into money, but as a rule he presented the clothing to women of questionable character, one of whom was also arrested yesterday. The parents had tried everything to reform the young man. They had spent a large sum of money in giving him a good education, but all was of no avail, as he continued to pilfer.

When the thefts were first discovered the father forgave the son and talked quietly to him, and everything went all right for a few months, when a valuable clock disappeared. Seeing that moral suasion was of no use, he had the lad arrested and taken before Judge Desnoyers, who also lectured him severely and allowed him to go under a suspended sentence.

This morning the Judge refused to let Parent go again, despite entreaties, as he considered it of no use, and sent him to gaol.

Ethie Langtry, of St. Dominique st., one of the women arrested for accepting as a present a quantity of the goods stolen by Parent, was given three months in gaol.

INTERNATIONAL S.S. LESSONS.

Two of the Members Arrived Here this Morning.

The Rev. Dr. Warren Randolph, of Newport, R. I., and the Rev. Dr. Moses D. Hoge, of Richmond, Va., two members of the International Sunday School Committee which convenes here to-morrow morning, arrived in the city this morning, and are staying at the Windsor.

The committee will begin its semi-yearly session in one of the parlors of the Windsor hotel to-morrow morning. On Thursday evening a public meeting will be held in the American Presbyterian Church, to be addressed by the different members of the committee.

A PECULIAR DEATH.

Coroner McMahon opened an inquest last evening at the morgue on the remains of the young woman Zelia Dupuis, who died the day before yesterday at Notre Dame Hospital under circumstances which the medical men thought rendered a post mortem and investigation necessary. The hearing of evidence was proceeded with, with closed doors, and the inquest was further adjourned until two o'clock to-morrow afternoon. The deceased, who was thirty years of age, had been in Montreal some three years. About a week ago she was taken ill, and went to the hospital, where she told the medical men that a criminal operation had been lately performed on her. The authorities are looking after a man who is thought to be connected with the case.

TWO ASSIGNMENTS.

Joseph Bourdon, grain dealer, 139 Commissioners street, has assigned on demand of Pierre Letendre, St. Michel d'Yamaska. Liabilities about $2000. The principal creditor is Pierre Letendre, $500.

Albert Jette, furniture dealer, 1243 Ontario street, has assigned on demand of Mrs. Buck, Brantford, Ont. Liabilities, direct, $19,000; indirect, $14,000. Principal creditors, Paul Jette, $1181; L. M. Jette, $539; J. W. Kilgour & Bro., Beauharnois, $4494; G. H. Labbe & Co., $556; Rolland Bros., $461; Thibaudeau Bros. & Co., $85; W. Buck, $516; S. Greenshields, Sons & Co., $400; indirect, Jacques Cartier Bank, $2628; C. H. A. Guimond, $4361; J. W. Kilgour & Bro., $700.

A STOCK-BROKING CASE.

Michael Connolly, contractor, has entered an action for fifteen thousand dollars against the partners of the insolvent firm of Meredith and O'Brien, Alleging that on the 20th September, 1893, John B. Murphy, contractor, Kingston, acknowledged having received from the firm of Robert Moat and Co., Montreal, one thousand shares of Richelieu and Ontario stock, which were held by him in trust for Mr. Connolly. In October, 1894, Mr. Connolly instructed Mr. Murphy to have Messrs. Meredith and O'Brien sell the shares. Mr. Murphy gave the necessary instructions, and Messrs. Meredith and O'Brien, it is alleged, required Mr. Connolly, through Mr. Murphy, to place in their hands, fifteen thousand dollars, as security for certain borrowed shares. The present action is the recovery of their fifteen thousand dollars.

A QUESTION OF HORSE FEED.

It Costs $200 a Year to Feed Each Scavenging Department Horse and Only $120 for Each Fire Horse.

The annual report of the Board of Health, a synopsis of which was published in the Star at the time it was prepared some months ago, has at last been printed in book form, and Mayor Villeneuve took some interest this morning looking up the details of the cost of maintaining the horses in the scavenging department. It will be remembered that the Mayor in the Finance Committee early in the summer urged that the Board of Health was paying exhorbitant prices for feed for the horses of the department. At the time the charge was denied, and the Mayor was charged with throwing an unwarranted slur upon the integrity of the members of the Board of Health, one of the members of which body was said to be connected with the firm from which most of the feed was bought.

The Mayor finds by the report that it costs the city $15,241 for feed for the 76 horses of the scavenging department, or $200 a head, while the whole cost of maintaining the Fire Department horses—including medicine and veterinary expenses—is only $120 a head.

The Mayor remarked this morning that these figures bear out his contention that the city would save money by placing the purchase of feed for the scavenging department horses in the hands of the supply officer of the Fire Brigade, instead of leaving it in the hands of the Board of Health.

THE GAS QUESTION.

Some Aldermen Refuse to Accept the City Attorneys' Opinion as Final.

Several members of the City Council differ from the opinion of the City Attorneys, that the acceptance by the Gas Company of the Council's offer of a contract to supply gas to the city and citizens upon certain conditions, constitutes a contract, and the matter will doubtless be discussed again in the Council sooner or later, and the motion to adopt the contract still stands on the order paper.

The City Attorneys give as a precedent guiding them in their opinion, the judgment rendered by Chief Justice Sir F. G. Johnston on 1st February, 1884, in the case taken by Mr. G. W. Stephens against the Montreal Gas Company, when His Honor stated among other considerations that the agreement or contract had been assented to on both sides, and that the writing witnessing those terms was drawn up. All that remained was the matter of form of a signature. His Honor held that the contract of itself was entirely completed by the assent of the parties alone, without any writing to witness it and without the signature of either party.

THE CITY'S BILL.

Through the Delays of the Council the City May Be Mulcted for $500.

Last year the City Bill barely escaped being rejected at the very start, because it had not been presented in time. There is a rule of the Legislature that petitions for legislation must be fyled eight days before the opening of the Legislature, and the bills introduced before the eighth day of a session. For breach of this rule a fine of $500 is imposed. The Legislature opens to-morrow, and only a small proportion of the proposed amendments to the City Charter have been passed by the Council.

Mr. David, the City Clerk, remarked this morning that he did not see how it was possible to get the bill ready in time, as to have it in shape and printed for introduction in the House in time, it would require to be at Quebec by Saturday at the very latest.

His Worship the Mayor, who leaves for Quebec at the beginning of next week for his legislative duties, said that he did not think that the $500 fine would be imposed upon the city. "Although," he added, "Mr. Taillon does not regard Montreal with much special regard just now."

THE LATE MISS DUROCHER.

The funeral of the late Miss Amelie Durocher, sister of the proprietor of the Richelieu hotel, took place this morning to Notre Dame Church and was very largely attended. The chief mourners were the brothers of the deceased. The pall-bearers were Messrs. C. A. Geoffrion, Q. C., A. Hurteau, Charles Berger, J. M. Dufresne, Ald. Beausoleil, M. P., and Supt. Hughes. Rev. Abbe Mavre officiated at the services, assisted by Deacon and sub-deacon.

MR. LACOUTURE'S CHILD KILLED.

[Special to the Star.]

Sorel, Que., October 29.— The two-year-old child of Louis Lacouture, M. P. P., was killed in the Richelieu and Ontario sheds this morning by a pile of bags falling on it. The father left the child alone for a moment; it disappeared, and he thought it had gone home. Two hours after the dead body was found.

The cabman who was fined on Friday last for fighting was one Minogue, and not Wells, as stated.

HOLMES IN A NEW ROLE.

CONDUCTING HIS OWN CASE HE CROSS-EXAMINES.

Smith, Who Found Peitzel's Body the First Material Witness in the Case — Holmes Up All Night.

Philadelphia, October 29.—The second day of the Holmes trial did not attract nearly so great a crowd as the first, as the public had learned they would not be admitted to the court room.

The prosecution to-day was to begin its case by calling witnesses to prove the identity of Peitzel and the manner of his death.

Throughout all last night in the loneliness of his cell, in the county prison, Holmes worked steadily preparing his case. He filled sheet after sheet of foolscap, and the watchers outside his cell door wondered when he would seek some rest. It was only as the first rays of the sun began to find its way through the narrow slit that does duty as a window in the cell of the county prison, that Holmes threw himself on his cot.

He slept but an hour, and then was up again, and once more became busy writing until told it was time to start for court.

Promptly at ten o'clock the jury filed into their places. A moment afterwards Holmes entered. Despite his long and sleepless night he looked fresh and bright, and while waiting for the district attorney to come in he chatted with the Court officers.

In compliance with Holmes' request, the dock was much nearer the bar than yesterday. The change was made that Holmes might better hear the Court and be heard. A small deal table with foolscap and pens and ink were in front of him.

The usual preliminary of opening Court consumed some time. Holmes busied himself reading a morning paper that contained a report of yesterday's proceedings.

District Attorney Graham announced to the Court that Mrs. Howard, as Holmes' latest wife is known, had seen the prisoner this morning before he was brought into Court. What took place at this interview is known only to the prisoner and the woman he deceived into marrying him.

The jurors in the trial of Holmes were all selected yesterday before adjournment, and when the court re-assembled Mr. Graham, Attorney-General, outlined the case to the jury. Despite his thrusts Holmes was unmoved, and displayed wonderful nerve. Mr. Graham's recital of the case did not vary from what has already appeared in these despatches. Mr Graham directly charged that Holmes murdered Peitzel, and then proceeded to touch on the Toronto and Indianapolis murders of Peitzel's children.

When Mr. Graham had finished Holmes applied for writing material and a lighted cell, where he could prepare his case. Holmes was also granted permission by the court to write a letter to his wife (formerly Miss Zoke) which the district attorney should not see.

Holmes' examination of the talesmen yesterday displayed considerable ability. He questioned talesmen Turner, Slump and others as they came along. Holmes asked for, but was refused, the list of witnesses to be examined by the commonwealth. Last night Holmes sat in his cell preparing his case, which he hopes will save him from the hangman's noose.

Up to adjournment to-day Smith, who first found Peitzel's body, and "Dessie" Peitzel, daughter of the dead man, were the chief witnesses. Holmes subjected them both to cross-examination in a clever manner.

While Holmes was cross-examining Smith, District-Attorney Graham carelessly placed the large crayon of Peitzel upon the table directly before Holmes, and prisoner could not avoid seeing staring steadily at him the face of the man he is being tried for killing. The sight did not seem to have the effect which it would seem Mr. Graham placed it upon the table for, namely, of disconcerting the prisoner. Holmes took the house plan and spreading it out on the dock before the jury had Smith point out the position in which he saw the prisoner enter and go up stairs with Peitzel.

A NEW JUDGE.

Mr. Wm. White to Succeed Justice Brooks.

[Special to the Star.]

Sherbrooke, Que., October 29.—It is understood among the members of the bar that a commission appointing William White, Esq., Q. C., Judge of the Supreme Court for the District of St. Francis, will be received by him in a very few days. Judge Brooks wishes to retire on superannuation.

BRAND HAS CHALLENGED.

New York, October 29.—J. Arthur Brand, the English yachtsman, who attempted to capture the international small-boat trophy of the Seawanhaka Boat Club, with his half-rater, Spruce IV, stated last night that he had again challenged for the Seawanhaka Cup, and would make another attempt to obtain it if his challenge would be backed by the Minimay Yacht Club.

LATEST BY TELEGRAM.

At a meeting of Colonial Agents in the office of Sir Charles Tupper in London, to-day, it was decided to wait on Mr. Chamberlain soon in connection with the Pacific cable. Th escheme is to be pushed.

Francis J. Neal, was burned to death in his house, near Lucan, in Osborne town-cific cable. The scheme is to be pushed.

Thos. A. Power, Deputy Collector of Inland Revenue, at London, Ont., died at his residence this morning.

It is understood in Paris that M. Boisson (Radical), will probably be called upon to form a cabinet. All the papers recognize the crisis as a severe one.

Sir C. H. Tupper and Sir M. Bowell paid their respects at the White House at Washington to-day.

The Ontario local West Wellington election appeal was dismissed to-day. Judge Osler dissented.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

STOCKS STRONGER.

There was a slight improvement in values in stocks this morning on the stock exchange, though the volume of business continues to be small. The "Street" does not look for any great expansion in business for weeks to come, as there is nothing for the moment to induce any great interest in the market for the outside public. Montreal Street Railway advanced at the forenoon session from 204 3-4 to 205 1-2 x-d and Toronto Railway moved up from 76 to 77. It is said the Toronto end of the string caused the recent flop. Gas in sympathy with the rest of the market rose from 199 to 200 and there are rumors going round that next week there will be a strong effort made to send the stock up further. Cable Co. shares were firmer, with business at 162. Cottons continue dull, but firmer. Banks were not very active, and sellers are scarce. There were some small sales of Montreal at 223 1-2, and Commerce were placed at 140. Merchants changed hands at 170. The rest of the general list was neglected.

The London market was reported dull and lower for Americans. It is said that there is a very uneasy feeling in all the Continental markets over the political complications in Turkey and China, which has not been improved by the resignation of the French Cabinet. Wall street was reported as lifeless, the "bears" still controlling the position. A leading broker in giving his views on the situation, states that it can hardly be said that the inactivity is due to any unfavorable factors connected with intrinsic conditions. In fact, there are no such factors of any moment; and it is perhaps due to that fact that the "bears" are almost as languid as the "bulls." The dullness may perhaps be chiefly attributable to mere speculative tactics on the part of the larger operators. They have deemed it prudent to get out of large lines of stocks at the late largely advanced prices, and desire an opportunity to get them back at a lower range of values. There are indications in certain stocks of manipulations by parties associated with the management of the companies to neglect them and reduce their price from no reason connected with the real position of the properties, but rather contrariwise. Indeed, the market has been more or less subjected to this squeezing treatment for some weeks past, which has not only discouraged outside buying, but also produced already some considerable decline in prices.

Morning Sales.—2 Montreal at 223 1-2; 3 Merchants at 170; 50 Commerce at 140; 75 Cable at 162; 100 Toronto Ry. at 76, 25 at 76 1-2, 25 at 76 3-4, 300 at 77, 25 at 77 1-8, 50 at 77; 2 Gas at 199, 500 at 199 1-2, 9 at 200; 100 Street Ry., x-d, at 204 3-4, 100 at 205, 100 at 205 1-2.

Afternoon Sales.—50 Toronto Ry. at 76 3-4, 25 at 77 1-4; 130 Gas at 199 1-4, 4 at 200, 25 at 199 1-2, 50 at 199 3-4; 15 Commerce at 140; 55 Telegraph at 165, 27 at 166; 50 Street Ry. at 205 1-2.

Ivory.

Several grades of it, and only one grade is the best. That's the kind we use. The excellence of ivory is in its whiteness, fineness of grain, the absence of streaks, and its ability to retain color.

The poorer grades of elephants' ivory come from high and dry regions, where the ivory has bluish streaks and turns yellow with age, while the best grades come from the hot, low, damp districts where the effect of environment is to produce ivory of very fine grain, of purest white, and which grows whiter with time.

The latter is the only kind used in the Pratte Pianos.

Come into our warerooms and you can see samples of various grades of ivory.

The handsome ivory keys of the Pratte Piano are in keeping with the excellence of its finish in every part.
