Two facing charges

Bust closes drug lab

By JOHN McCAGHEY
EASTMAN — Two men are in custody and will be arraigned in Sweetsburg Court this morning on charges of drug trafficking and having conspired with one or more persons to traffic in hallucinogens.

Charges were laid after the duo, both in their twenties, were arrested by an RCMP task force during a raid on a clandestine laboratory near here on Friday.

Cpl. Marc Bourque, NCO of the Granby detachment, who headed the raid conducted by members of the force from Montreal, Sherbrooke, and Granby, described the operation as one of the most successful in the Eastern Townships.

The force, who had kept the 20-foot mobile home on an abandoned logging road near Lake Bonnalay, under surveillance for more than a week, swept in during the early hours of Friday morning and apprehended the suspects with pure LSD with a street value of approximately $5 million.

Cpl. Bourque indicated the lab could have supplied all the needs of North America. The drugs, which were not completely produced, included LSD, phencyclidine, and another substance tentatively identified as 'TCP'.

The suspects, whose names are being withheld pending arraignment, have been described as well-to-do Montreal-area chemists.

RCMP Inspector Gilles Favreau, officer commanding the Quebec drug control division which was seized in a pure state could have a market value of $2 to $4 million. He explained the laboratory was capable of producing two pounds of the pure drug daily and it would be cut 2,000 times before reaching the users at street level.

Arresting officers managed to circumvent three guard dogs prior to making the arrests, and sources close to the raid indicate the suspects were monitoring police radio wavelengths when they were apprehended.

It is expected they will be charged with trafficking in LSD according to article 33 of the Food and Drug Act, Trafficking according to article 4 of the Narcotics Control Act, and conspiracy on both counts, according to article 423 of the Criminal Code.

An RCMP spokesman indicated further arrests might be forthcoming in connection with the local raid. Several persons from neighboring towns have been arrested and were subsequently released pending either trial or preliminary hearings on counts of trafficking or illegal importation of drugs. The RCMP refused all comment on whether the same group might be implicated.

The last major drug haul of any consequence in this area occurred six or seven years ago when Robert Beaufils, of Longueuil, was apprehended in the Bromont KOA Campground when he was found in possession of 214 kilos of "Acapulco gold" which he illegally imported through the port at Rock Island. Beaufils was eventually convicted and sentenced to the minimum seven years by Sessions Court Judge Guy Genest.

Coincidental or not, Inspector Favreau was also in charge of the Beaufils investigation.

Air Canada pilots vote for walkout

TORONTO (CP) — Results of a strike vote by Air Canada's 1,700 pilots Saturday will overwhelmingly favor strike action, spokesmen for the Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association said Sunday. Ballots will be counted today but Ken Maley, association president, said: "There's no doubt in my mind that the vote will be very strongly in favor of a strike."

In a statement issued Sunday in Montreal, the airline denied being responsible for delaying contract talks and said it is willing to accept a one-year agreement.

Length of the contract has been a major issue. Air Canada still has one year to run under anti-inflation board controls and the pilots had sought a one-year contract while the company preferred a three-year agreement.

The airline also said it has told the association that issues involving Nordair are not negotiable because Air Canada does not own any shares in the Montreal-based regional airline.

The company said issues

Ryan fires Grits' number-two man

ST. MARC, Que. (CP) — Claude Ryan, leader of the Quebec Liberal party for only four months, ended a political era Sunday by announcing he has dismissed Paul Desrochers — once the second most powerful man in the former government — as party trustee.

During a day-long meeting of the party's nine-member constitutional strategy committee in this town 20 kilometres east of Montreal, Ryan announced he will take as over as one of three new party trustees.

The others are Gilles Hebert, chief fund-raiser for his leadership bid, and Jean-Pierre Roy, party treasurer. Ryan told reporters his mission is to accomplish the "intellectual restructuring" of the party, and as such he won't be asking Desrochers for advice.

The move is seen as a firm reinforcement of the power of Ryan's new inner circle, but as upsetting to elements in the Liberal organization who still regard 56-year-old Desrochers as the most gifted political organizer in the province.

Long before the former editor of Montreal's Le Devoir entered politics, Ryan had made it clear publicly that he regarded Desrochers as the epitome of what he disliked about the Liberal party.

Three years ago, Ryan wrote of Desrochers in an editorial: "Like many men who, after a taste of the military life have turned to business, Mr. Desrochers has a social philosophy that is simple, categorical and passably short."

"The accent he puts on values such as order, discipline and authority, his admiration for American political and financial institutions... the simplistic manner in which he views labor-management relations... all these things testify to a vision of reality that is typical of the milieu from which he emerged."

As recently as five years ago Desrochers was the second most powerful man in the Liberal government of Robert Bourassa, and took orders only from the premier. As Liberal chief organizer, Desrochers engineered Bourassa's electoral sweeps in 1970 and 1973.

As Bourassa's special adviser, Desrochers had his say in many of the major decisions made by that administration. An ex-army officer and accountant with a Masters degree from Columbia University, he was known for his conservative outlook and passion for efficiency.

Beyond that, even close associates knew little about the man once described as "a somewhat mysterious

SOCRED CHIEF BLASTS ANTI-LIFE

VICTORIAVILLE, Que. (CP) — Social Credit leader Lorne Reznowski says "the anti-life movement is in the hands of the sharks of high finance, who want a world government based on abortion, birth control and euthanasia."

In a fiery speech Sunday to about 200 enthusiastic supporters, Reznowski said "control the Canadian economy, and the Canadian people are the slaves of their monopoly."

Government debt is also enslaving Canadians, he said.

"Canada was not established to give the federal and provincial governments the financial means to finance sterility—in other words, non-productive economic activity and the abomination of abortion."

He did not elaborate on the abortion theme.

BOLDUC BUS FLEET PULLED OFF ROAD

QUEBEC (CP) — The six remaining buses of Autobus Bolduc, the company whose bus was involved in a crash in which 40 died at Eastman, Que., were ordered off the road Aug. 12, a Quebec transport department official said.

The buses were ordered withdrawn from service after an inspection by the department, Mrs. Suzanne Emond, a spokesman for the vehicle inspection service, said.

Mrs. Emond said Friday company owner Gilles Bolduc was given 48 hours to repair a variety of mechanical problems on his fleet on Aug. 10 but he did not meet the deadline.

The buses were checked after the seventh Bolduc bus plunged into a lake at Eastman, Que., about 100 kilometres east of Montreal, Aug. 4. Forty of the 47 aboard, including many handicapped persons, died in the accident.

Quebec City coroner J. Armand Drouin is currently investigating the Eastman crash, the worst bus disaster in Canada.

A ridge of high pressure will dominate most of our regions over the next two days. Temperatures will be near normal today and slightly above normal Tuesday.

Outlook for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday... Sunny and warm Wednesday. Becoming cloudy Thursday with showers or thundershowers afterwards. Warm. Variable cloudiness with a few showers Friday. Temperatures near normal Friday. Normal high 22 to 24. Normal low 10 to 14.

Parks Canada project

Students follow trails of early whalers

OTTAWA (CP) — Every morning, four young archeologists unzip down-filled sleeping bags, crawl out of their tents and step on one of the northernmost ocean beaches in Canada.

For the third summer in a row, Parks Canada employees Caroline Parmenter and Margaret Burnip are in the High Arctic to survey campsites left behind by 19th-century explorers seeking whales or the Northwest Passage.

Students Jim Light of Winnipeg and Colin Languedoc of Pointe Claire, Que. are helping them measure, photograph and record the locations of artifacts on Beechey, Ellesmere and Somerset islands.

On Beechey, a tiny island 3,000 kilometres north of Winnipeg, many of the sites have already been ransacked by bears and people.

"There were probably a lot of whalers up there and it's quite a favorite tourist spot," said Miss Parmenter.

Petroleum exploration has already started in the area and the project is to study the sites intact in case pipeline crews come through and damage them further.

SCHEDULE UNVARYING
The schedule rarely varies. At 7 a.m. they radio one of two daily weather reports to a scientist's outpost at nearby Resolute Bay: Usually five degrees Celsius and clear skies.

Then they cook breakfast in a large frame tent that also serves as an office.

Their food supplies consist mainly of frozen or freeze-dried products: Chili, beef stroganoff, ice cream, pork sausage, shrimp cocktail and dried fruit. These are added to boiling water and mixed with spices, tabasco and gravy mixes to give them flavor.

"Chocolate bars are a must for energy," said Miss Parmenter.

Their camp on a gravel beach has ready access to fresh rivulets of melting snow.

After breakfast, they hike inland about a mile to a warehouse built by sailors in the 1850s to cache food in case other ships got into trouble.

There is no soil or vegetation, so little digging is needed to expose artifacts.

GARBAGE DUMP FOUND
A garbage dump has been found in one corner. In another, cinders and coals indicate a forge.

A typical site might harbor rusted tin cans, broken barrels and pieces of whaling boats.

The team records exactly where each object is located, maps the sites and packages samples for shipment to an Ottawa laboratory where they are analysed and dated.

"We know pretty much what to expect before we arrive," said Miss Parmenter. "Journals and diaries written by the sailors give a pretty detailed account of expedition activities."

Throughout the day team members try to stay active.

frequently taking long walks to keep warm.

Summer temperatures hover slightly above freezing, barely fluctuating in the 24-hour sunshine, but the wind rushes in off the ocean at 30 to 40 m.p.h.

For protection against the cold, team members wear down-filled parkas, plus vests, long underwear, double wool socks and down-filled or sheepskin mittens.

They have sometimes returned from a day's work to find polar bears lumbering through the camp, attracted by the vertical shape of the tents and the smell of food.

BEARS DESTRUCTIVE
"When one of those bears puts a paw on a tent, there's not much left of it," said Miss Parmenter. "Sometimes they've walked in the front door and exited by ripping a hole in the back."

Miss Parmenter and Miss Burnip have lost two camps to bears on previous expeditions and team members carry rifles at all times to protect themselves.

"You can never tell how a polar bear is going to react," said Miss Parmenter. "They're so unpredictable. Banging pots and pans is an effective way to scare them off."

After three weeks at Beechey Island, the archeologists plan to move farther north to Fort Conger on Ellesmere Island for another three-week stay.

Last year, two grave memorials were recovered from the site, across a narrow strait from glacier-capped Greenland.

So were wooden barrels bearing the names of their ships and used as containers for ale, beans, peas, salt pork and tin cans. Liquor and even champagne bottles were recovered.

The findings at Fort Conger may eventually form the core of a 23,000-kilometre national wilderness park in the area, said planners for Parks Canada.

Thirteen thousand square kilometres are covered by glaciers and the park will include the most northerly point in Canada, 500 kilometres from the North Pole.

After Fort Conger, the archeologists will spend two weeks on Fury Beach on Somerset Island.

From there, Miss Parmenter and Miss Burnip plan to go to Auyittuq National Park on Baffin Island to examine whaling station sites.

Despite polar bears and cold weather, the expeditions are "wonderful" to Miss Parmenter.

Police officers receive CBA medals

VAN GEENHOVEN

STONE

ROSSI

Six Canadian police officers are to receive gold medals for their outstanding actions in combating crimes against banks, the Canadian Bankers' Association (CBA) has announced.

Four are from the Montreal area — Constable Normand Tremblay, Captain Detective Douglas Stone and Lieutenant Detective Carlo Rossi, all of the Montreal Urban Community

Police Department; and Constable Rejean Van Geenhoven of the Laval Police Department.

The other two officers are from British Columbia.

The incidents for which they are being honored include the dismantling of a bomb, a confrontation between officers and armed suspects holding hostages, and the wounding of an officer in an exchange of gunfire.

The Canadian Banks' Law Enforcement Award, consisting of a gold medal and a framed citation, was established by the CBA in 1971 to recognize outstanding police action in bank-related crimes and devotion to duty, and is presented during the annual conference of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police (CACCP).

The officers and their wives will be guests of the CBA during the CACP conference in Ottawa where the presentation will be made August 31. This year's presentations bring to 70 the number of policemen honored, two of them posthumously.

Constable Tremblay responded to an alarm from a Bank of Nova Scotia branch in Montreal last February. He obtained a description of the armed robber and direction of his flight. Tremblay immediately decided that the nearby subway station offered a good avenue for escape. Constable Tremblay recognized the suspect as being wanted by police for some 25 armed hold-ups and was able to arrest him in the crowded area without a shot being fired.

Captain Stone and Lieutenant Rossi negotiated for eight hours with an armed robber to obtain the safe release of an entire staff of a Bank Canadian National branch in Montreal, as well as two customers and a child, late in October. Eight days later, the officers responded to similar situation at another Bank Canadian National branch and once again obtained the release of hostages. The robbers were arrested in each incident and there were no injuries.

Constable Van Geenhoven was alerted by a citizen that a hold-up was taking place at a branch of the Bank of Montreal in Laval in March of this year. Two armed bandits rushed from the branch and began shooting at the constable and a police cadet. Van Geenhoven chased the robbers through the bank parking lot and caught up to them as they reached their getaway car. One of the robbers turned and pointed his revolver at the constable but Van Geenhoven shot first and fatally wounded the suspect. The other robber sped off in the getaway car with a third suspect. The constable fired at the tires but they managed to escape.

The other 1978 recipients are: Special Constable Thomas Townsend of the North Vancouver Detachment, Royal Canadian Mounted Police and Constable Laurence Mortimer, West Vancouver Police Department.

Domtar plans to consolidate

MONTREAL (CP) — Domtar Inc. announced Thursday it plans to consolidate operations in Canada by amalgamating most of its Canadian operating subsidiaries.

The companies to be amalgamated are St. Lawrence Corp. Ltd., Hinde and Dauch Ltd., Buntin Reid Paper Co. Ltd., McFarlane, Son and Hodgson (Ltd.) and Superior Box Ltd.

Domtar said all outstanding preferred shares of St. Lawrence and Hinde and Dauch are being called immediately for redemption at prices of $101.75 and $51.66 respectively.

The company currently owns more than 99 per cent of the common shares of St. Lawrence, Hinde and Dauch, and Buntin Reid. It owns all the shares of McFarlane and Superior Box.

Pitfield Mackay Ross Ltd. is to act for Domtar to determine the fair value of the common shares of each of the amalgamating companies with minority interests.

Domtar said the final value of the common shares of these three companies will be determined by the respective boards of directors on the basis of the reports of Pitfield Mackay Ross.

The company said the companies involved must be continued under the Canada Business Corporations Act.

Following this, their shareholders will be asked to approve a plan of amalgamation which will result in the conversion of St. Lawrence, Hinde and Dauch, and Buntin Reid shares into redeemable preferred shares having an aggregate value equal to the "fair value" of the common shares. These preferred shares will then be redeemable.

Domtar said all of the transactions will be completed by Oct. 31, barring unforeseen delays, with the redemption dates for the preferred shares scheduled for mid-November and for the debentures at the end of November.

MEMO

Social climbing diminishing

GENEVA (Reuter) — The urge to make sacrifices for money, a career, possessions and a higher rung on the social ladder is diminishing among people in industrial countries, a United Nations agency report published today says.

Even in job-conscious Japan, home life was regarded as more important than work, the 135-country International Labor Organization (ILO) said in a study of labor in the developed countries.

Today's younger generation wanted a good life outside their work, the ILO reported.

Between 1955 and 1969, the percentage of Japanese who chose work as the most important part of their lives fell from 65 to 45 per cent, the study said. The choice of home went up from 35 to 51 per cent.

But new demands for a worthwhile job and the good life were outrunning society's present capacity to supply them, the ILO warned, adding: "Efforts to improve the quality of work must be extended and intensified and the range of alternatives . . . considerably broadened."

Canadians owe $26 billion

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians owed $26.40 billion, mostly to banks, at the end of June, an increase of almost 13 per cent from a year earlier, Statistics Canada said Thursday.

A total of $20.5 billion was owed in personal loans to chartered banks, up 16 per cent from last year. Loans owed Quebec savings banks increased by 19 per cent to $98 million. Policy loans from life insurance companies increased in value by 3.4 per cent to $1.31 billion.

About $1.48 billion more was owed sales finance and consumer loan companies for large loans, up 0.1 per cent, and department stores and furniture stores, television and radio and appliance stores were owed $1.4 billion, up 8.1 per cent.

Personal loans from trust and mortgage companies totalled $405 million, almost a 24-per cent increase over June last year.

Salmon sales resume

LONDON (AP) — Food company John West said Thursday it will resume sales of Canadian canned salmon after a case of botulism poisoning which was blamed on a can manufactured in the United States.

Derek Price, a director of the Liverpool-based firm, said in a statement it will put Canadian and Japanese canned salmon on the market but not cans from the U.S.

The firm stopped all canned salmon sales when four elderly persons were taken ill July 31 after eating from an infected can. One of the four, 64-year-old Jesse Farmer, died in a Birmingham hospital Wednesday.

Meat standards won't change

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal health department said Thursday it will not change current standards applied to a meat preservative which appears to cause cancer in rats.

A department statement says that after considerable investigation, the benefits of using nitrite to cure bacon and some other meats still outweigh the risks.

Laboratory tests conducted for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration suggest that nitrite produces cancer in test animals and may increase the incidence of cancer in humans.

Standards set by Canadian health officials in 1975 allow 150 parts per million of nitrite in bacon processing and 200 parts in other meats, although U.S. meat processors were recently limited to 120 parts per million.

"In considering appropriate action on nitrite, it must be kept in mind that its use is required to prevent growth in cured meats of clostridium botulinum, a microorganism which causes botulism, a serious and often deadly disease," the department said.

The health department says it will eliminate the use of nitrite if a safe and effective substitute is found.

Coffee bean prices fall

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Brazilian weathermen Thursday predicted warmer weather in frost-damaged coffee-growing areas, and coffee bean futures prices fell slightly from levels they hit when the winter cold snap began earlier this week.

Officials told a cabinet meeting in Brasilia there could be about a 20 per cent reduction in the 1979 crop because of freezing weather. But cabinet ministers and coffee policy-makers at the meeting said the prediction was preliminary. The 1978 crop has been harvested.

The damage appears to be far less than the 1975 frost that wiped out 70 per cent of the country's crop, doubling the price of coffee on the supermarket shelf. More than a billion coffee trees had to be replanted.

United States government agricultural experts here said it is too early to forecast coffee losses. Teams of agronomists and technicians are examining coffee trees leaf-by-leaf in the southern state of Parana and Sao Paulo.

BUSINESS CANADA'S

By Bruce Whitestone

Hopes have been expressed that there is a developing trend to a conservative fiscal and monetary course of action in North America, but these have been conclusively dashed by recent developments.

Events in the United States, which have a decisive effect on the economies of the Free World, are sufficient to daunt even the most optimistic.

The economic policies we have been pursuing in North America provide a clear preview of the economic outlook over the next year or so. The statements of politicians, of course, are just rhetoric; it is their actions which will set the stage for coming events.

It is generally acknowledged that a rapidly growing money supply means more inflation. When the government spends more than it receives, it issues debt securities to bridge the gap. The central bank issues a cheque to pay for the government bonds it buys, in effect creating money to pay for the bonds.

In view of the need to pay for budget deficits the U.S. (and Canadian) basic money supply has been growing rapidly over the past few years.

It has been stated repeatedly that inflation is our number one economic problem, that this time central banks recognize the need for restraint and will act accordingly. These interpretations of central bank policy seem far removed from reality.

It seems clear that the U.S. Federal Reserve Board is attempting to provide funds to the market by an easy money policy regardless of the effect on inflation.

All of this is the result of the needs of the U.S. Treasury to borrow huge sums in the credit markets at low rates of interest to cover a deficit, unprecedented in size for the third year of economic recovery.

There is initially a lag of about one year for excess money supply increases to become apparent in the consumer price index. Yet by mid year the U.S. consumer price index was rising at 112 per cent pace. This does not reflect recent, accelerating increases in money supply, which have climbed from about 7 per cent in 1977 to over 9 per cent lately.

The U.S. Federal Reserve System is now confronted with a major dilemma. If the present posture of easy money is maintained at the levels of the past few months, inflation will gather even more momentum with all its evil consequences.

If the government is willing to apply the brakes on its spending, and to the money creation needed to cover budget deficits, then business activity will slow and unemployment will rise in this, an election year.

In our view, the U.S. Government will react to this "Hobson's Choice" by continuing spending and pursuing its bias in favor of inflation. Recent history seems to confirm this view.

The Federal Reserve Board maintains an illusion of restraint only by its tough rhetoric. The Federal Reserve Board with an eye on pending elections has been reluctant to show restraint.

Only "politics" can explain the Federal Reserve Board's unprecedented failure to raise stock market margin limits despite the huge rise that has taken place in share prices over the past three and a half years. It is not surprising, then, that margin debt has soared to record levels of over $11 billion.

Moreover it has been disclosed that Chairman Miller of the U.S. Federal Reserve June 30th opposed a move to a more conservative monetary policy, revealing the hollowness of his inflation rhetoric.

If the U.S. Federal Reserve Board and, of course, the Bank of Canada do not change existing policy, the U.S. dollar as well as the Canadian dollar will decline relative to other currencies, inflation will accelerate seriously, interest rates will skyrocket, and an inevitable depression will follow.

Coffee, desserts distant memories

TORONTO (CP) — Joy Moon says coffee, tea and desserts are distant memories for her family of four "but we don't miss them."

Mrs. Moon, 40, her husband Andrew, 39, and their two children are among the 30 per cent of Canadian families of four living on annual incomes of less than $15,000.

The Moons feed, clothe and house themselves on an annual income of $12,000—making and growing what they cannot afford to buy, or doing without.

The Hartwick family, Jack, Valerie and their three children, stopped buying coffee when the price went up, except for an occasional jar of instant purchased for dinner guests.

Even their family income of $40,000 a year does not give them immunity from inflation, Mrs. Hartwick said.

With the annual inflation rate in Canada running at about 9.2 per cent, people such as the Moons and Hartwicks say they are trying to find ways to cut corners and save money.

GROW VEGETABLES
Although some consumers have stopped eating fresh vegetables because of the prices, the Moons enjoy homegrown tomatoes, cucumbers, squash and lettuce grown on a small plot they lease near Metropolitan Toronto's lakeshore.

Moon said he turned old door frames into planters and the family now grows bumper crops in them on their garage roof.

Mrs. Moon said she shops for herself at used clothing stores and buys clothes for the children, Alina, 8, and Jonathan, 10, at sales "when the prices are good."

Entertainment for the family includes jogging, cycling and cross-country skiing.

"We do things with the kids because it's so expensive for a babysitter," Mrs. Moon said.

They bought a home for $26,000 in 1967 and over the years have made renovations costing about $11,000.

The top floor of the home is rented to university students, giving the Moons an extra $1,000 a year.

"The boarders make it possible for us to have a house," Mrs. Moon said. "A lot of things—like the interest on the mortgage, the insurance and improvements—are deductible from our income because of them, so we pay less income tax."

NEVER WORRIED

She said she never used to worry about food prices but now, with a weekly food bill of $70 to $80, she checks specials, coupons and grocery receipts.

The Hartwicks are among about 7.4 per cent of Canadian families living on incomes of $35,000 a year or more.

"A few years ago we were living on a lot less and doing a lot better," Mrs. Hartwick said.

Payments on their house, and car total almost $1,000 a month while their weekly grocery bill is between $100 and $150.

She said clothes for the children, Melanie, 9, Greg, 7, and Kyle, 5, are a big expense.

"To outfit them for school, it cost $200 for the three of them," she said. "And that was for 12 or 14 items like jeans and sweat shirts—nothing expensive."

She said she buys good shoes for the children but relies a lot on hand-me-downs from friends and family and watches for bargains.

Mrs. Hartwick, 32, drives 80 kilometres each day to her job as a secretary and although she says the family lives fairly well, "we don't have a hard and fast budget but we're both fairly disciplined when it comes to money."

She said she buys cheaper meats such as chicken, pork and big hams—foods that can be used for both dinner and sandwiches.

Sutton Junction's Frimac Market

Countrystore worth the worry

by TERRY SCOTT

Bob McMaster still remembers the sleepless nights he spent wondering whether there was enough cash in the till of his Frimac Market to meet daily obligations.

It's a way of life for that slowly vanishing species known as the village grocer, with larger retail outlets drawing rural consumers like a powerful magnet. Yet, in spite of its tendency to inflict insomnia, even after 14 hour working days, McMaster displays all the contentment of a guy who's been awarded concession rights at the Olympic Stadium.

His confidence hasn't changed since that day last May when he and partner Ron Frizzle leased the Sutton Junction business (with an option to buy) because "I felt the store had a lot of potential and there were enough people in town to help the store operate."

Running the place at maximum efficiency, however, meant certain modifications to the country store setting and the 24-year-old manager concedes some of the folks in the village are disappointed at the alterations.

"People have to realize you no longer can have a country store the way it was," he insists. "The government will only allow you to do so many things. But I don't think this store has lost the old-time atmosphere."

"Some nights we have as many as 15 people in here and we let them hang around and shoot the breeze. We don't close the door to anyone." While McMaster relies to some extent on trade provided by this community of about 250, tourists passing by on their search for summer tranquility or winter ski-slopes supply the backbone of a week's revenue.

"It's timing," says the young merchant. "We count on the sunshine. If it rains we may as well close the door. One day I made $90 because of the weather and that's the worst day I've had in quite some time," he adds, reflecting upon earlier takes which amounted to $30, sometimes $50 loss.

Eking out an existence is a relatively new experience for McMaster, an Oshawa, Ont. native who observed the food industry from a different perspective before his present occupation. He worked as a chef for seven years in such reputed kitchens as the Windsor and Queen Elizabeth Hotels.

"All this is new to me - even the Townships is something new. No, I don't have any complaints about the area or the people. It's an easier, cosier life. I don't have to run for anybody, not even myself."

Though he's still attempting to become fluent in the province's primary language, the blonde-haired businessman has coped admirably with the deficiency.

"It's been no problem. I'd say that 25 per cent of my customers are French-speaking and though I speak very little we're able to compromise."

His understanding has been prevalent, too, in coping with the diversified personalities which compose a compact, tightly-knit village. The country storekeeper learns through experience, for instance, that such practices as credit extension and an extra dab of friendliness are part of the enterprise.

"Oh, you just have to allow credit to certain amounts," he affirms. "It's part of your survival. I have one person who spends $100 a week on credit and if I said no I'd lose her."

"You have to analyze everyone before doing something like cashing a cheque. Get to know them, and if that person has shown himself or herself to be a good customer, I'll cash it."

If all else fails, McMaster relies on ingenuity, as the time he warned a recalcitrant customer that he could always pin his rubber cheque to the wall for public inspection if he failed to get his account in proper order.

"There's a lot of unemployment right now so you pretty well have to carry credit," the merchant repeats. "People have rent, hydro, and heating oil to pay and if I took their whole cheque that wouldn't be any good. I don't want to see them grow hungry, yet at the same time I don't want to be used."

A customer enters the store and begins to purchase a few staples, all the while engaging McMaster in good-natured banter. With the sensitivity of a master psychologist the storekeeper returns the repartee, his analysis of personality having long since measured his response.

"Look at that ridiculous price," kids the gent, dropping a box of laundry detergent on the counter. "I could go down to Abercorn and get it for $1 cheaper."

"You tell me where," replies McMaster, "and I'll personally go there and buy it for you."

The pair trade good-natured insults for more than 10 minutes before the customer leaves, short a penny to pay for the order.

"I'm not going to worry about a penny," McMaster informs the gent, "now get outta here."

This, according to the merchant, is a treatment which a few of his clients revel in. "Some of them aren't happy until you tell them to leave," he grins. "That's what they want to hear."

A five-year-old in shorts and sandals hesitatingly puts down some change for a popsicle, his first of several daily trips to the store.

"Merci, Sebastien," shouts McMaster, recognizing the sale as though someone had just purchased half his inventory.

"We try to cut costs for consumers as much as possible by doing our own shopping at wholesalers," he explains. "If we can get a carton of tomato juice for $1 less, we'll pass it on to our clients. Generally, there's a 20 to 25-per-cent markup on groceries, and most of the luxuries are 30 per cent."

In the future, McMaster hopes to turn the market into a bus stop, where residents can engage in idle chatter and take shelter from the rain. He's still waiting for approval from Voyageur, however.

"I've even considered getting one of those pot-bellied stoves from the old-time country store for the place," McMaster reveals, "but I checked my lease last night and I can't make those kind of changes unless I own the building."

Maybe for starters he could run up a cracker-barrel and a few pounds of cheese.

Township talk

Reward offered for saddle

Two saddles, one English and one Western, were stolen early Saturday from the barn of Aubrey Schwartz, between McTavish's service station and the Narrows Bridge in Georgeville.

According to Mr. Schwartz, he heard a vehicle parking below his property and saw at least two persons walking toward the house between 3 and 4 a.m., but thought nothing of it until the loss was discovered.

He says at least two vehicles passed the parked car or truck, one of them heading toward the Narrows Bridge, the other in the direction of Georgeville. The latter may have had to brake to avoid hitting the parked vehicle, he added.

The drivers of either of the passing vehicles are asked to get in touch with the Sherbrooke Quebec Police Force or with Mr. Schwartz at 843-4125.

The Western saddle is decorated in silver and is one of a kind, according to its owner, who is offering $100 for its safe return.

Four die on townships roads

Three youths riding mopedettes, killed Saturday in a highway accident between St. Madeleine and St. Hyacinthe, were among at least 49 persons who died accidentally across Canada this weekend.

Serge Chretien, 19, his brother Claude, 16, and Claude Rivest, 18, were riding two motorbikes when they were hit from behind by a car.

Two were pronounced dead on arrival at the Honore Mercie hospital in St. Hyacinthe and the third died moments later.

In other accidents in the Eastern Townships, Allie Laurier, 28, of Asbestos died in a motorcycle-truck mishap on Highway 255 near Danville.

Marcel Bonnaeu, 38, from St. Hubert was killed Saturday afternoon when his car hit a bridge on Highway 117 near Ste. Cecile.

Two cyclists perished in separate accidents on Saturday. Christian Dalpe, 19, of Granby, died when he was struck by a car on Highway 212. Claude Blanchard, 26, from Waterloo was killed on highway 241 near Warden.

St. Jean man sweeps CNE prizes

TORONTO (CP) — Benoit Deschenes of St. Jean, Que., won the two leading categories in a wood-carving exhibition at the Canadian National Exhibition on Friday, collecting $1,500 in prize money.

Deschenes won prizes for the best over-all exhibit and the best Canadian carving.

Other prize winners include Basil Self of Bolton, Ont., who won the Marples Championship award of a two-week trip to England, and Huber King of Windham, Ohio, who won the $1,500 Carlsberg Championship Team and Wagon award.

Foster-Campbell show opens

NORTH HATLEY (PT) — Local artists George Foster and Loni Todd Campbell are having an exhibition and sale of Raku and Stoneware ceramics, bronze sculptures and jewellery at The Flying Shuttle, in the office of the Anglican Church, in North Hatley this coming weekend and Labor Day weekend; wine and cheese throughout. The opening is Friday August 25 from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Waterloo mobile homes retaxed

WATERLOO (DV) — The town council of the city of Waterloo has decided to rescind two resolutions pertaining to the taxation of mobile homes on Beaugard St. in order to levy additional taxes due to raising service costs.

Mobile home dwellers will now pay $288 a year for rent, water tax, garbage removal and other services. The new rates will come into effect before the end of 1978.

Council's unanimous decision marks the first time mobile home taxes have been raised in six years.

A trailer permit now costs $120 and half of that will find its way to the local school commission, according to a clause in the town's articles. Revenue for Waterloo will amount to $228.

Peerless accused of pollution

DRUMMONDVILLE (PT) — A team of biologists from the regional office of the Ministry of Tourism, Fish and Game in Sherbrooke, have found Peerless Rug Ltd. of Acton Vale responsible for the dumping of a chemical or various chemicals into the Noire River since July 4, 1978.

In a report released recently, biologists Demers and Gonthier said the substances caused great damage to the river, killing wildlife and birds. They also claimed that the waste put into the river by the rug company was responsible for the death of at least three tons of fish at Acton Vale in the beginning of July.

In their recommendations to the Environment Protection Service, the biologists said they hope this pollution case receives the attention it merits. They suggested the service begin an inquiry into the pollution discharged into the river by the company and that they set up a system whereby the water from the plant is purified before it enters the river and that this system be checked regularly by qualified government inspectors.

If these recommendations are followed, the company would be responsible for the cleanup of the river, which includes restocking it with fish and cleaning up and removing the dead ones.

Whether or not these recommendations are followed now rests with the Environment Protection Service.

Construction permits down 50%

SHERBROOKE (DV) — The value of construction permits in the City of Sherbrooke dropped almost 50 per cent in the month of July compared to the previous year at this time.

A total of 98 permits were issued amounting to a value of $1,591,810. A third of the value arises from four government projects in the western quarter of the city, worth $527,000. In July 1977, 103 permits were issued for a value of just over $3 million, of which $2 million is attributable to government spending.

The recent figures reveal no permits for industrial projects were granted. Government spending aside, construction is about the same as it was last July.

The Sherbrooke Fair midway was the best ever, everyone agreed, and yet attendance was down.

Sherbrooke Fair revamp underway

SHERBROOKE (AD) — Though the Sherbrooke fair has fallen on hard times recently with the untimely destruction of the arena a month and a half before the fair was to start, the organizers seem confident that the moment has come to begin anew.

Sensitive to figures which show that attendance is down to 71,500 from last year's 115,000, Antonio Pinar, President of the Eastern Townships Agricultural Association, admits the agricultural sector of the fair had to be cut back this year, creating an imbalance.

Without downplaying the importance of the carnival side of the fair, Pinar insists its main purpose of the fair is the agricultural exhibition. When the arena burned, this emphasis was upset.

Pinar says the directors of the fair are planning a new set-up for next year. Starting this week, representations are going to be made at different levels of government to finance a new complex to replace the arena, "one which is sufficiently all-purpose to serve other sectors as well."

As well, the directors would like the city to fulfill its contract by opening more premises to the fair "since they gain appreciably on taxes during the festival."

Rand workers approve contract

SHERBROOKE (GG) — All threats of a conflict have been eliminated between Ingersoll-Rand and its 350 employees for the next three years, following a secret ballot Saturday.

The new contract was accepted by 67 per cent of the union membership. The employees will benefit by an hourly wage gain averaging $1.50 for the next three years of the contract. The average hourly salaries will be $6.46, $6.92 and $7.50 for each year of the collective agreement. This represents an overall increase of 29 per cent. Also included in the contract is a cost of living adjustment to be every three months.

Other beneficial changes have been brought on most of the social aspects of the contract regarding seniority, relocation of personnel in case of layoffs, holidays, pension plans, medical and life insurance.

On the other hand the company has recalled some of the 200 Ingersoll-Rand employees who had been laid off because of a shortage of work.

Many Eastern Townships People Beat Inflation

That's right, many Eastern Townships shoppers have learned to fight inflation by doing their own sewing, and they have even more by purchasing their fabrics during the Bon Marche Warehouse Fall Fabrics Sale.

There'll be a large advertisement in The Record tomorrow that will give a better idea of the low, low Fall Warehouse Fabric Sale prices.

The sale starts Wednesday, 9 A.M. at the Depot Street Warehouse. Au Bon Marche buyers have been picking up bargains in fabrics from leading Canadian and American mills for many months and have bought what they consider to be the best selection ever of yard goods; coatings, sportswear fabrics, dress fabrics, curtains, etc., etc.

So, if you'd like to join the other folks who are saving big money by doing their own sewing... and saving even more by buying fabrics at the Bon Marche Warehouse Fall Fabrics Sale, be on hand at the Warehouse when this tremendous sale begins Wednesday of this week at 9 A.M.

Indian giving

We understand there are at least 10,000 Quebecers who have sent their $85 federal tax rebate to Quebec City, presumably prompted by the belief that money rightfully belongs to Quebec.

We also see a Revenue Ministry study group is assessing ways to gather the rest of the $186 million, Ottawa's way of paying its share of the federal sales-tax scheme launched this spring.

We would assume this to mean we're all going to be forced to hand over that $85 one way or another, and that can only mean some form of tax surcharge or something.

There are mutterings we'll be required to report the $85 as income in our 1978 provincial tax returns. We wouldn't put it past Mr. Parizeau to arrive at a solution like that, even if it is akin to Indian-giving.

Look at it this way - this whole scheme hasn't done much for us. Quebec's selective sales tax cuts on furniture and footwear were no more effective than Ottawa's across-the-board proposals. Yet it'll end up costing us something in the end, even if it's nothing more than the extra hassle of finding the money after spending it.

So if you haven't spent that cheque yet, we'd advise you to hang onto it. But sending it back to Quebec before we're forced to?

Somehow, our zeal for joining these little Ottawa-Quebec trickeries has just about evaporated.

JAMES DUFF

Plan ahead

A municipally-owned transit system for the Sherbrooke-Lennoxville corridor? Wonderful, indeed - if Sherbrooke and Quebec aren't afraid of a little planning and investment.

For too long now, bus users have been subjected to interminable waits, often cold, wet or otherwise dreary, and it can't be said to be entirely the fault of the system's owners.

Too many urban bus lines, Sherbrooke's included, have grown higgledy-piggledy, with men and machines thrown into whatever gap in the system most needs filling.

Population densities change, new residential areas are built, and the net result is a system which travels empty part of the time and erratically the rest.

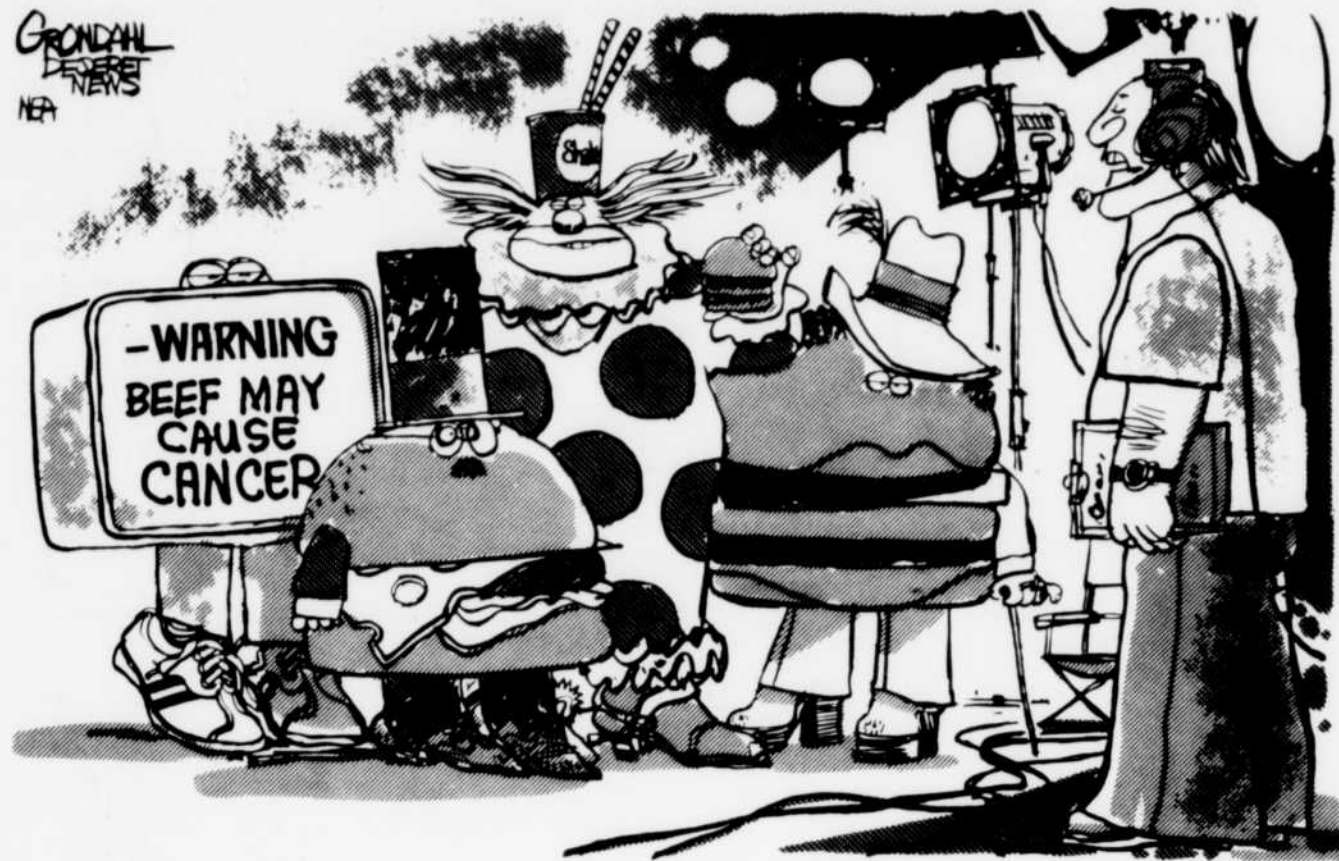

Rather than spending the dollars for new equipment right away, the city should engage a top-flight transit consultant to draft a master plan.

That way, needs could be met and the money spent would be evident in improved service.

We know Sherbrooke has never been too keen on master plans. But here's a heaven-sent opportunity to start from scratch. Let's take it.

And not before consulting with the system's users. The customer is always right.

JAMES DUFF

"That was a good take, fellas. But Chancellor Cheeseburger was blocking out the warning label."

Letters

Worst of all

Editor:

I have heard discriminatory laws. But the rottenest one I have heard of yet is the one that a child under 12 years old unaccompanied by an adult must have a ticket to enter the Sherbrooke Fair grounds, when perhaps the child's parents have neither the time or money to accompany the child to the fair. Those who have time, money and perhaps a Rolls Royce to go to the fair - their children can enter free.

If the fair is run as it was last year it will take a lot more than they collect from those lone children to equal what they lost by those bums who crawl under the fence or go through the hole they cut in the fence up at the top of the fair grounds. I passed there one day last year and there were more who entered the fair grounds by crawling under or going through the hole they made in the fence than there were who bought tickets. Few if any were under 12 years old, many were dressed well enough to go to heaven. They had neither shame or spunk and now the fair tries to make up the loss from the children under twelve. If Sherbrooke can't have a fair and admit all children under twelve years old free they should fold up and quit.

W.J. McELREAVY,
 Sherbrooke

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Pretty-boy English's ledger tale takes test

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON - Gerard Denono, a competent hand with a gun or a baseball bat, started out as a street thug. He rose rapidly in the rackets, gaining status as a hit man for the crime combine.

In keeping with his new status, he adopted the name Gerry English and adorned himself like a fashion model. He favored expensive jewelry and sharply tailored suits. He was a ruggedly handsome, mustachioed man, slender and personable, who usually had a beautiful woman on his arm.

His advancement was recorded, in part, on police blotters. He wound up at age 41 with three murder convictions. The last one should keep him in the slammer for the rest of his life.

But the canny Denono tried to make a deal. In return for an easier life behind bars, he offered the FBI an underworld ledger. It contained a list of alleged mob transactions, including the amounts of gambling money skimmed from Las Vegas casinos, illicit corporate deals and syndicate loans. Its pages were liberally sprinkled with the names of the nation's most notorious crime chiefs.

The ledger certainly was a tantalizing document, if it could be authenticated. In an earlier column, we related how we learned about the ledger and obtained 13 Xeroxed pages from it. Our associate Marc Smolonsky has spent a year investigating the ledger's contents and Denono's story.

He concluded that Denono lied about stealing the ledger from a Mafia bagman. Unperturbed, the hit man simply changed the theft from Las Vegas to New Orleans. He stole the account book, he said, from Dr. Salvatore Canale, a New Orleans physician and friend of Mafia godfather Carlos Marcello.

The FBI arranged to have Denono call Canale from prison and taped the conversation. Canale confirmed that Denono, indeed, had stolen several articles from the house. But there was no mention of a missing ledger. Through an intermediary, Canale and Marcello passed word to us that they had no knowledge of the account book.

Possibly it's a clever hoax, which the dapper Denono arranged for just such a contingency. But its contents, experts tell us, give accurate names and details; at least the pattern of associations appears genuine.

Our investigation of the mysterious ledger led us through a subterranean labyrinth, with labor racketeering, bigtime gambling, shady business deals and murder at every turn. One trail led to Las Vegas, a mob mecca, which lately has been swarming with investigators.

A federal grand jury is zeroing in on Anthony Spilotro, the reputed godfather of Las Vegas, and Allen Glick, a wealthy casino operator whom investigators claim is fronting for Spilotro. The federal organized crime strike force in Las Vegas recently filed a secret affidavit in court alleging the Spilotro-Glick connection.

Based on the evidence, FBI agents were granted 83 search warrants which they used in a massive raid on the holdings of the two men. The agents rummaged through homes, cars, offices and safe deposit boxes. They also searched the homes of people associated with Glick and Spilotro. Sources familiar with the investigation tell us the evidence may be used to secure indictments against Spilotro.

The Las Vegas police unexpectedly have been drawn into the affair - on the wrong end of the investigation. FBI agents discovered confidential police reports in Spilotro's home. Detective Joe Blasko, an organized crime specialist, allegedly funneled the documents to Spilotro.

Result: Blasko is now under investigation by the FBI. Agents reportedly discovered $18,000 in Blasko's safe deposit box and are checking into the possibility that it could be payoff money. This same Blasko, incidentally, was once accused of murder. He allegedly beat a cab driver to death during an arrest but was acquitted of the charge.

In a related matter, a former deputy sheriff, Gene Clark, is now under fire for accepting $75,000 in loans from Glick while the deputy was on the Las Vegas police force. Sources close to the Glick investigation told us that evidence taken from the home of Glick's secretary indicates Glick himself repaid the first $25,000 loan. Clark used the second loan to invest in an Atlantic City casino.

Meanwhile, the Law Enforcement Intelligence Unit, a nation-wide source of organized crime reports for police departments, has suspended the Las Vegas police from its membership rolls. The suspension was ordered after a complaint from the Phoenix, Ariz. police.

According to the complaint, the Phoenix cops had wiretap information that bets were being placed across the Nevada-Arizona state line. They contacted the Las Vegas police, whose help was needed to execute search warrants. The Phoenix police discovered through additional wiretaps that the gamblers learned of the search warrants in advance.

The leak, which apparently came from the Las Vegas police, caused a rift between the two departments. The suspected leaker, we have learned, is Blasko.

Footnote: We were unable to reach any of the suspects named in this column. A Las Vegas police spokeswoman told us that Clark has admitted accepting the Glick loans but has insisted he repaid them. Clark is not under investigation. An attorney for Spilotro said his client "emphatically" denied all the allegations.

Postal peace: The John Douglas Drope Phippen solution

Dear Mr. Prime Minister:

Your recent announcement of transforming the Canadian Post Office into an independent Crown corporation may be something new for most Canadians, but it is not a novel suggestion. It has already been tried, with unfortunate results, in Australia.

The more salient shortcomings of the independent Australian postal service, to which I was a first-hand witness, were:

A virtual doubling of postal rates.
 No improvement in the performance of the new corporation's duties, a performance which had already been severely lacking in reliability for several years.

No lessening of labor unrest and strife by the postal workers' union.

I would suggest that the same unsatisfactory results will occur in Canada, under an 'independent' postal service, as did occur in its Australian counterpart - unless some revolutionary aspects or concepts are introduced in formulating the structure of the "new" Canadian Post Office.

The problems inherent to the present postal service must be boldly confronted. Some radical concepts must be applied in order to ensure the basic structure and long-range operation of the "new" Post Office achieves certain socially acceptable goals for both the citizens of Canada and those persons working in the postal service.

In planning the structure of the "new" Post Office, I would suggest the following goals must be realized:

The provision of a postal service whose level of performance establishes a world landmark in efficiency.
 The provision of incentives and rewards for postal service workers.

 The elimination of management - employee disputes.

The key to the achievement of these goals is to be forged, I firmly believe, via a novel corporate structure or organization of the "new" Post Office. It is quite possible to forge this structure in a way which will eliminate many of the current problems within the existing postal service.

The major alloy to be used in forging this 'key' is to make the "new" Post Office an organization which is entirely owned and operated by both ordinary citizens and the postal workers. This can be achieved by a simple corporate design and stock plan in which both common citizens and postal workers become the actual owners or shareholders in the "new" Post Office.

A corporation is allowed to have both common (voting) and preferred (non-voting) shares. The "new" Post Office could be structured corporately to allow every postal worker to own common (i.e. voting) shares. Preferred shares could be made available to the ordinary citizen in a number of different ways.

But it would be essential that every person working in the postal service would do so as a working shareholder, who, by virtue of his ownership of common stock, would have a voice in the actual policies of the new Crown corporation.

Supplementing the transformation of every postal service worker into an actual part-owner of the "new" Post Office, would be the implementation - from the very start - of an unalterable wage policy which would allow each postal worker to share directly in the profitability of the new corporation.

This would be achieved by having a two-stage wage policy for all working shareholders. The first phase would be the provision of a basic salary. This would be set at a figure which is slightly below the existing national average wage in industry in Canada.

This first-phase salary would be supplemented by the second phase of the two-stage wage policy. This second phase provides for the allocation of an established percentage (say 20 per cent) of the "new" Post Office's profits for distribution amongst all working shareholders on, say, a quarterly basis.

In addition to the above second-phase benefit, I would suggest an additional, fixed percentage of the new corporation's profits - say another 20 per cent - would be placed in a trust account to provide funds for a pension and medical benefits program for all working shareholders.

To provide an additional incentive for the postal service's personnel to achieve a high degree of efficiency and profitability, it is further proposed that income tax be levied only on each person's basic, or first-phase, salary. Thus, second-phase salary income, based on the "new" Post Office's profitability, would be free and clear of any taxation - and no postal worker would be financially penalized for increased personal effort and dedication to his duties.

The remaining profits of the new postal service could be used in many ways. A primary use, I would suggest, would be to designate a portion of these profits for the payment of dividends on both common and preferred shares. Thus the ordinary citizen, whose preferred shares get first call on any dividends, receives a return on his investment in a public service. Also, with the payment of dividends on the common stock, a postal service worker will receive a third source of income for his efficiency.

Monies required for physical plant, equipment, and facilities by the "new" Post Office can be raised through the sale of preferred shares to the general public. Postal service workers would also be allowed to purchase preferred shares, if they so desired. In this way, the ordinary citizens will be able to participate in the provision of a better postal service - and to share in the profitability of that service.

Of course, once it is properly functioning, the "new" Post Office will be able to use some of its profits to provide funds for new plants and equipment. Some of the profits could also be used to stabilize postal rates - thus offering an advantage which would be shared by all Canadians using the postal service.

I should think it would be an essential feature of the "new" Post Office that, once the above-mentioned, prescribed allocations of profits have been met, that any surplus profits should be dedicated to either stabilizing or, even, reducing postal rates.

In essence, the "new" post office would become a profitable, non-profit organization. It would be profitable up to the point where certain benefits and financial returns are allocated to the postal workers and to the citizens who have invested in preferred shares. But, once these profit-requiring obligations are satisfied, any surplus profits (allowing for a sinking fund for future expansion or maintenance or replacement of postal service equipment) will be used to reduce the cost of the postal service to the general public.

The board of directors, or management, of the "new" Post Office should be composed of directors elected from the working shareholders and from the preferred shareholders. A ratio of 60 per cent of the directors being elected by working shareholders and 40 per cent of the board members being elected by the ordinary citizens (the preferred shareholders) is suggested.

To maintain contact with Parliament (in recognition of the monopoly position which the new crown corporation would hold), it is suggested that the chairman of the board be elected from the members of Parliament at large - in much the same fashion as is the Speaker of the House.

The foregoing, of course, only presents to you the 'bare bones' of my concept for a radically "new" Post Office - the basic theory, so to speak.

At first glance this concept may appear to be revolutionary and unworkable. Revolutionary, it may be. Unworkable, it is not. Certainly not if all parties involved are honestly prepared to dedicate themselves to the establishment of an effective, efficient, and profitable postal service.

There are, of course a multitude of finer points or details regarding the basic structure and organization to be considered. But to go into any meaningful discussion or explanation of these details, at this time, would be to hopelessly lengthen an already long letter.

I would, of course, be happy to discuss such details of theory, implementation, organization, and long-range operation with you at any time which is convenient.

I have put the above proposal to you, Mr. Prime Minister, in the form of an 'open letter' because I believe the matter of the "new" Post Office should, since it affects every Canadian, be as politically depolarized as possible.

Hopefully, should the various newspapers to which I have sent copies see it to be within the area of their public responsibility to print this letter within their columns, there will be a reasonable degree of public input on my suggestions. Certainly I will welcome any comments which concerned Canadians may wish to direct to me. Or, as you might put it, there will be a degree of participatory democracy evoked by my method of presentation.

Ryan: Queen's role 'not major concern'

ST. MARC, Que. (CP) — The monarchy is "not an important topic in the field of constitutional reform," Quebec Liberal party leader Claude Ryan said Sunday. While stressing that Quebec Liberals are not necessarily opposed to the Queen's status as head of state, Ryan said the eventual role of the monarchy should not be a central concern in the constitutional debate. "In the end," Ryan told a news conference following a day-long meeting of the party's nine-member constitutional strategy committee in this town 20 kilometres east of Montreal, "there will have to be some sort of package deal where everybody will have to make concessions. "But for the moment, there are more important questions to be settled than the role of the Queen under the new constitution." The Liberal leader said he is aware that the Queen has become a central issue in English Canada ever since Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's recent constitutional reform proposals recommended a reduced role for the monarchy in Canadian affairs. The party has commissioned 27 studies in 18 different areas of Quebec and will base its policies on the results. Ryan says he plans to consult political parties—both governing and opposition—in other provinces, through an emissary he plans to send on a cross-country tour later this year. "We are approaching the question with Quebec's specific interests in mind," Ryan said, "but we are aware that we have to take attitudes in other provinces into consideration. It would be useless for a Quebec-based party to draft a constitutional position that would immediately be rejected by the other provinces."

set out by (Prime Minister) Trudeau bring about this result, the great hubbub he created in this area will produce nothing positive." He said Trudeau's approach to constitutional change makes him "look rather like a football player who thinks the important thing is to run with the ball without caring too much about the direction he's running in."

Reznowski, chosen federal Social Credit leader at a convention last May in his home town of Winnipeg, was speaking near the conclusion of a weekend organizing meeting in Lotbiniere riding, where a byelection has been set for Oct. 16. He spoke entirely in French.

Victoriaville, 160 kilometres east of Montreal, was the home of former leader Andre Fortin, who died in a car crash 14 months ago. The party's new candidate in Lotbiniere is Richard Janelle of nearby Warwick.

The meeting, which brought together the executive of the party's Quebec wing, chose Pierre Bernier, a 29-year-old political organizer from Granby, as Quebec lieutenant and chief electoral organizer for the province. All eight Social Credit MPs in Ottawa represent Quebec ridings.

'Not unusual,' says palace

Basford meet unheralded

LONDON (CP) — Buckingham Palace has admitted that notice of a meeting between the Queen and two Canadian government emissaries here June 15 was omitted from the list of royal appointments at Canada's request.

Word of the meeting came out in Ottawa last week when Marc Lalonde, federal-provincial relations minister, disclosed that a former justice minister and a prime ministerial constitutional adviser had given the Queen a letter from Prime Minister Trudeau referring to the position of the Crown in Canada.

Generally, notice of such a meeting would appear in the exhaustive list of royal appointments and activities published daily in major London newspapers. In the June 15 list, the activities of the Romanian president on a state visit here were fully recorded.

QUEBEC STUDYING MUTUAL-INTEREST BODY

HALIFAX (CP) — The Chronicle-Herald quotes Claude Morin, Quebec's minister of inter-governmental affairs, as saying a body of elected representatives from a sovereign Quebec and Canada, to make decisions on some matters of common defence and other things that would be involved in "sovereignty-association," Morin said in an interview.

He added that none of this has yet formed the basis of negotiations with federal authorities and he doubted it would be discussed at federal-provincial constitutional talks expected this fall.

Boa ends Le Grand Melvin's career

LA TUQUE, Que. (CP) — As 150 people watched in horror, Le Grand Melvin, a 25-year-old entertainer who dressed as a vampire and performed morbid acts, was strangled by his 2½-metre-long boa constrictor at a nightclub early Sunday.

The incident occurred shortly after midnight when Melvin, whose real name was Jean-Guy Leclair, was playing with the snake near the end of his first act of the night at the Club LaTuquois in this community 210 kilometres north of Montreal.

"He seemed to miss a reflex and the boa wrapped around his neck," said Gaetan Grenon, manager of the cabaret, in a telephone interview. Grenon said when he noticed Leclair becoming blue in the face, he called the police, who arrived within minutes.

But Le Clan Murphy, an act featuring Quebecois singers, continued on the second-floor of the cabaret, which remained open after the accident, he added.

Leclair, who "had blood coming out of his mouth," was taken to St. Joseph hospital here.

Dr. Jean Bennet said the performer was pronounced dead on arrival.

"Strangulation seems to be the cause of death," he said, but added he could not be certain. An autopsy is to be performed in Quebec City later today.

Provincial police officer Mario Grenier said that after he and his colleagues freed Leclair from the snake, he took it outside and shot the boa with a .38-calibre pistol, even though it was already dead.

Expo '67's Churchill dead at 65

SARATOSA, Fla. (CP) — Col. Edward Churchill, the engineer who headed construction of Montreal's Expo '67, died of a heart attack Sunday near his retirement home here. He was 65.

The son of a Winnipeg merchant, Churchill set up numerous military installations during an army career dating back to the Second World War.

In 1963, Churchill was loaned by the department of national defence to act as director of installations at Expo, the 1967 world exposition held in Montreal to mark Canada's centennial.

After Expo he became president of a Montreal engineer consulting service. In 1970 he and his wife, the former Helen Black of Ottawa, retired to Florida, where he continued contributing articles to engineering journals.

Ontario students safe

COCHRANE, Ont. (CP) — Two geology students missing in the bush since early last week were found Sunday. Police said Winston Mottley, 37, and Anna Bivi, 19, were located on a bush road by a passing motorist who was not involved in the extensive police search.

A police spokesman said the two are well. Earlier in the day, searchers, using two teams of tracking dogs, and five helicopters, found a makeshift shelter which they believed to have been made by Mottley, a University of Toronto geology student, and Bivi, a geology student at Queen's University.

The students, on a geophysical survey for the natural resources ministry, were dropped off at a lake about 100 kilometres northeast of Cochrane by a ministry helicopter last Tuesday morning with only a light lunch and no survival gear. When the helicopter returned to pick them up later Tuesday they could not be found.

Meteorite 'new class of rock'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A meteorite found in Antarctica last winter has been identified as the first of an entirely new class of space rock, the National Science Foundation announced Sunday.

The rare meteorite, one of hundreds of well-preserved samples recovered by a U.S.-Japanese expedition, is a type called achondrite. Samples of this general type comprise only about seven per cent of all known meteorites.

Banjo King Bolyer dead at 57

TORONTO (CP) — Maurice Bolyer, the man known throughout North America as King of the Banjo, died Friday in hospital at the age of 57.

Bolyer of Edmundston, N.B., made three gold albums, played concerts all over Canada and the United States and made regular television appearances.

He started playing the piano when he was three and then learned to play guitar, violin, double bass and mandolin. When he was 18, Bolyer bought a banjo and, after initial difficulties in playing it, became world famous performing with such musicians as Hank Snow and Tommy Hunter.

He performed on national television with Arthur Godfrey, Pee-wee Hunt, Victor Borge and Lawrence Welk. A spokesman from the Lee Funeral Home Ltd. in Streetsville, Ont., said Saturday the musician had been in hospital a week suffering from an undisclosed illness.

Bolyer was living in Terra Cotta, Ont., when he died. He leaves his wife, Joanne, and three children. The funeral will be held Monday in Streetsville.

Tennant, Rothwell fall off stage

LEWISTON, N.Y. (CP) — Veronica Tennant and Clinton Rothwell of the National Ballet of Canada escaped serious injury Saturday when they fell three metres into the orchestra pit during a performance of La Fille Mal Gardée at Artpark, near here.

Rothwell, carrying Miss Tennant on his shoulders, was backing up when he misjudged his steps and fell into the pit.

Rothwell was treated for minor injuries and released from hospital. Miss Tennant, who landed on top of Rothwell, was unharmed. The performance at the outdoor theatre was cancelled after the accident.

Synthetic skin developed

BOSTON (AP) — A surgeon and a mechanical engineer have produced a semi-synthetic skin tested successfully on animals and expected to be used on human burn victims in less than a year.

"Over the past four years we've tested a material which in animal studies has proven to be a satisfactory but temporary replacement for skin," Dr. John Burke, surgeon-in-chief of the burn unit of the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in Boston, said Sunday.

Sadat may visit Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau recently invited Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to visit Canada but there has been no indication to date when the meeting would take place, an external affairs department spokesman said Sunday.

Sadat is scheduled to be in Washington Sept. 5 for Middle East peace talks with U.S. President Jimmy Carter and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

N.S. election campaign underway

The Nova Scotia election campaign picked up steam during the weekend, the three men trying to become premier Sept. 19 engaging in a cross-fire on energy developments, the monarchy, and political patronage.

Liberal Premier Gerald Regan, Progressive Conservative Leader John Buchanan and NDP Leader Jeremy Akerman spent part of the weekend at nominating conventions where their parties chose candidates for the voting next month.

Quebec growth potential there

MONTREAL (CP) — The growth potential of the Quebec economy in a world where there are great shortages of energy and raw materials should not be underrated, says Bernard Landry, minister of state for economic development.

In an interview published today by the daily La Presse, Landry said the province's economy is not only staying afloat, but has made some enviable progress.

Consumer demand has grown 9.6 per cent during the first five months of 1978 compared with the same period last year, he said, but it is still less than the national average of 10.9 per cent.

Sales of items from which sales tax has been removed, including furniture, clothing and textiles, increased by 16.9 per cent in May 1978, compared with May 1977. The devaluation of the Canadian dollar, he said, has allowed several Quebec industries, especially pulp and paper and the mines, to increase exports. However, in-

Four arrested after shooting

FLORENCEVILLE, N.B. (CP) — Maine state police have arrested two men and two women wanted in connection with the shooting of Constable Calvin Mosher who was critically wounded following a high speed chase here Sunday.

RCMP in Fredericton said the state police picked up the suspects near Bridgewater, Me., at 2 a.m. EDT today, and it was expected they would be returned to Canada.

No further details were immediately available. The police constable was shot in the abdomen about 6 p.m. Sunday in an isolated yard just off the Trans-Canada Highway about eight kilometres north of here.

Experts test two-gun theory

DALLAS (AP) — Shots rang from the old Texas School Book Depository, pale echoes of the gunfire that struck down President John F. Kennedy, as acoustical experts tested the theory that more than three shots were fired at the president 15 years ago.

Just after dawn Sunday, police marksmen took aim, shooting rifles at three piles of sandbags marking the approximate position where Kennedy was hit while riding in a motorcade through Dallas.

Pistol fire came from police stationed at a grassy knoll near the depository, the site named by some theorists as the source of shots directed at the president.

Karpov leads 3-1

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — World chess champion Anatoly Karpov took a commanding 3-1 lead over challenger Viktor Korchnoi with two stunning victories in one day.

The boyish-looking 27-year-old champion from the Soviet Union won the adjourned 13th and 14th games Sunday in less than three hours of play, giving him half the six games he needs to retain his title and win the $350,000 first-prize money.

Israeli jets retaliate

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli planes attacked two Palestinian centres in Lebanon at dawn today in retaliation for a Palestinian grenade and sub-machinegun attack on an Israeli airline bus in London less than 24 hours before.

The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) said three guerrillas were killed and 14 were wounded in the Israeli attack on the Burj el Barajneh refugee camp on the south side of Beirut. The communiqué said the village school in Damour, 22 kilometres south of the Lebanese capital, also was attacked, but there were no casualties there.

Anti-reformers burn theatre

TEHRAN (AP) — The government blamed opponents of the reforms of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi for the arson of a movie house in Abadan in which 377 persons died during the weekend. The police chief of the oil-refinery city reported 10 suspects have been arrested.

Gen. Reza Razmi, the Abadan police chief, said "anti-reform radicals" splashed gasoline around the outside of the Cinema Rex and set it aflame Saturday evening. He named no particular group but said "provocative elements, and those who wear different masks to fight the Iranian revolution were responsible."

It was generally assumed that the arson was the work of ultraconservative Moslem fanatics who oppose the shah's reform programs and also demand all public entertainment be shut down during the holy month of Ramadan, now in progress.

Flowers from Heaven

"Flowers from Heaven" fell on the wedding party in front of Grace United Church in Brookbury on Saturday, July 22. The ceremony, just completed in the Church, which had been closed for many years and only reopened for service one year ago, joined together in marriage Mary Lynne Furlong and Peter Thomas Hindrichs, both of Montreal. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar C. Furlong of Dorval and the groom the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Hindrichs of Montreal.

The ceremony was conducted by the Reverend Gordon Simons of Sawyerville and Father John Walsh, formerly of St. Veronica Dorval, a close friend of the bride's family. The organ was played by Mrs. Florence Harrison of Bishopston.

The bride was attended by her sister, Lesley Furlong. The groom's brother, Stephen Hindrichs acted as best man for the groom. The ushers were Susan Hindrichs, the groom's sister and Robert Furlong, the brother of the bride. While the guests congratulated the newlyweds after the ceremony in front of the Church, flowers floated from the sky and shortly afterwards a bouquet of lilies on a parachute descended into the church yard with congratulations and best wishes from the groom's family.

The newlywed couple then left in a horse drawn buggy, which had been beautifully decorated by Joyce and Junior Thompson and their children, for Brookridge Farm, the groom's family farm in Brookbury. Here, a garden reception had been arranged for the guests from Montreal, Ontario, Germany and friends and neighbours from Brookbury.

After the reception the couple left for a honeymoon in California.

The flowers were expertly dropped by pilots Jean-Marc Ledoux and Mario Bilodeau of the Sherbrooke Flying School.

Social Notes

Bridal shower

BULWER - On Tuesday evening, August 8, several friends and relatives gathered at the Bulwer Community Centre to await the arrival of an August bride, Patsy Stanley, who was unaware of what was happening, until her sister, Mrs. R. Rand, stopped at the centre, instead of continuing on to the home of a friend.

Patsy and her mother, Mrs. Lambert Stanley and the groom's mother, Mrs. A. Bennett were all presented with gladioli corsages, by Mrs. Sidney Prescott. Donna also presented the gifts to Patsy, along with the best wishes of the people.

The many useful and lovely gifts made the usual circle for everyone to admire and then were displayed on a table in the centre of the room.

Patsy thanked everyone for her gifts and asked them to visit her in her new home in Sawyerville.

The lace-covered buffet table was centered with a large yellow candle with vases of summer flowers on either side. Bouquets of flowers were used elsewhere in the hall, as well. The flowers came from Donna's garden and the glads from Morris Smith's beautiful array, in his garden.

Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Sidney Prescott and Mrs. M. Ward, assisted by Mrs. Stuart Merrill, who also made the corsages.

50th Anniversary

SAWYERVILLE - Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hodge were honoured by a family party on Aug. 12, the occasion being their 50th Wedding Anniversary.

The event was held in the Legion Hall with about 50 members of their family present, also Leon and Minnie Desruisseaux and Annie Dawson, attendants at the wedding 50 years ago.

The afternoon and evening were spent in visiting and listening to music. Supper was served, and included a beautiful Anniversary cake made and decorated by Mrs. Raymond L'Esperance.

They received several gifts, including Family rings and currency.

Lunch was served later in the evening, before all left, wishing them many more happy anniversaries.

Guests were present from Toronto and Ottawa, Ont. Lithia and Belchertown, Mass., Montreal, Lennoxville and surrounding area.

Fashion show

KNOWLTON (KT) - On Saturday, July 15, a Fashion Show was presented by La Petite Armoire, Reg'd., of St. Paul's Road, at Le Pavillon, St. Edouard's Church. The event was sponsored by L'A.F.E.A.S. (Association Feminine, Education and Social Action) Mrs. Pierrette Lessard was organizer and coordinator in cooperation with L'A.F.E.A.S. and Mrs. Los Campbell and Mrs. Jean Harvey, proprietors of La Boutique.

There was a gratifying attendance of 276 persons. The beautiful floral arrangements were by courtesy of Knowlton Nurseries.

The clothes, which were modelled by local people, featured golf clothes, sportswear, "at home" wear, clothes "for the young at heart", afternoon dresses and more formal wear. The models were the Mrs. Evelyn Blackwood, Juliette St. Francois, Eleanor Broderick, Janet Campbell, Francois Dubec, Mireille Le Maitre, the Misses Anne Poiras, Star Cote, and Lyn Lefebvre, the Mrs. Andre St. Jean, Jones Lavigne, Diana Timmins and the Model Committee chairman, Mrs. Janet Campbell.

Following the Fashion Show, wine and cheese was served on St. Edouard's Church lawn, the tables being prettily decorated with summer flowers.

The main objective in initiating the affair was "to get people together". It was bi-lingual and a great success, particularly for the friendly, relaxed mood and pleasant mingling together. Thanks is extended to everybody who contributed in various ways in making it such an outstanding afternoon.

The committees were: Ticket Committee, Music and Flowers Committee, Wine and Cheese Committee and Welcoming Committee.

Mrs. Evelyn Blackwood, wife of the Mayor, Mrs. Juliette St. Francois, president of L'A.F.E.A.S. and Mrs. Pierrette Lessard, Chairman of the Organising Committee, served together on the Welcoming Committee. Mrs. Blackwood, Mrs. Celine Lauzere, and Mrs. Therese Lefebvre were in charge of Flowers; the Wine and Cheese committee consisted of Mrs. Therese Lefebvre, Mrs. Therese Poiras, Mrs. Pierrette Ouellette and Mrs. Claudette Dubois.

Retirement party

ROCK ISLAND (CT) - A surprise retirement party was recently held in honor of Mr. Ellie Hartley at the Odd Fellows Hall in Rock Island.

Lured on the pretense of going to a birthday party, Mr. Hartley was greeted by about 70 awaiting guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellie Hartley were met at the door by their daughters, Connie and Sandra, who pinned a corsage and boutonniere on them. On his arrival, Lees Flanders played "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" as he came through the door.

The guest book was in charge of his granddaughters, Tamara and Tracy.

During the evening, Ivy Hatch gave a reading about the years before Ellie's retirement. His granddaughters then presented him with a gift box containing cards and currently, made by his daughter Connie.

Ellie thanked all for coming to make the party such a success and Connie also thanked everyone for their help on behalf of Sandra and Arnold and the rest of the family.

The rest of the evening was spent chatting and dancing to the music of Lees Flanders.

The hall was decorated with yellow and white streamers and balloons and the buffet table was centred with an arrangement of roses and pansies.

Around 12:30 a.m. a delicious lunch of sandwiches, squares, pickles, olives, cheese, and coffee was served. Punch was enjoyed during the evening.

Out of town visitors attending the party were Ellie's sisters, Alice Bailey, Marion, Alta., Bertha Bowler, South Royalton, Vt., and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Whipple, Ayer's Cliff.

1970 title winner

Miss World high commissioner

OTTAWA (CP) - Not many high commissioners are former Miss Worlds.

But 30-year-old Jennifer Craig—newly-appointed High Commissioner to Canada from Grenada—is just that. Mrs. Craig, then 22-year-old Jennifer Hosten, won the Miss World title in 1970.

The new high commissioner says she will work hard to acquaint Canadians with what she considers the most beautiful of the Caribbean islands.

Mrs. Craig has numerous contacts in the travel industry which she hopes will help Grenada get its share of the Canadian tourist dollar.

She was an air hostess, based in Trinidad, before her year as a beauty queen and has since been working part-time in customer relations with Air Canada here.

Born and raised in St. George's, capital of the island of 120,000, the tall, lithe beauty completed her education in London, studied broadcasting with the British Broadcasting Corporation and worked for its Caribbean service before becoming an air hostess.

The job as high commissioner will really be the second time Mrs. Craig has represented Grenada. The first was in the Miss World contest in London's Albert Hall in 1970.

ENJOYED TITLE

She says she enjoyed her year of world travel and fame as the winner. That's understandable when one hears she rubbed shoulders with such greats as Bob Hope, the late actress Joan Crawford and Cincinnati Reds' slugger Johnny Bench.

But she was happy, she says, when the time came to turn the crown over to her successor.

"It was a pretty lonely life, living in hotels for a year, travelling with nine or 10 suitcases, making several store appearances and television and radio interviews in a day."

In 1972, she married computer expert David Craig, whom she had met in Trinidad while she was an air hostess. They moved to a farm outside Ottawa when he was transferred. They've spent the last five years there raising Sophie, 2½ and Beau, 1.

Now, the farmhouse will be rented so Mrs. Craig can live closer to the high commission offices in the city.

"It's my only regret in taking this job," she says.

Ann Landers says

Summons means no foolin'

Dear Ann Landers:

Please don't tell me you aren't a lawyer. I already know that. If you were a lawyer, you'd be sitting back shovelling in money like the rest of 'em instead of slaving over seven columns a week.

You say you want to help people. Well, I need plenty right now. My wife and I went to an open-air theatre last week and sat right behind a couple of gabby women. We asked them very nicely — twice — if they would keep their traps shut so we could hear the lines. They said they paid to get in, just like we did, and were there to enjoy themselves. The noisiest one yelled, "If you don't like it, move."

After 25 minutes of listening to those magpies my wife lost her temper and slammed the noisiest one over the head with her umbrella. The woman let out a terrible scream which could have been heard in the next county. The manager rushed over, took our names, refunded our money and asked us to leave.

Yesterday my wife received an order to appear in court. The charge is assault and battery. The loudmouth was neither assaulted nor battered. She had on a wig that a bullet couldn't have pierced. Must my wife go to court and defend herself against these phony charges?

Where's Justice?

Dear W.J.:

Since you already know I'm not a lawyer, I don't have to tell you that. I will tell you, however, that you'd better hire one because your wife received a summons and this means no foolin'.

The "loudmouth" may not have been battered but a blow on the head is considered assault — and there's a law against it.

Dear Ann:

Our neighbor's daughter is getting married and my daughter is a bridesmaid along with two other neighbor girls. Last night the bride's mother held a shower in the community center building. After the shower she presented the three bridesmaids with a bill for $52. They were to share the cost equally.

Since there was cake left over, the girls divided it to take home. The bride's mother stormed out of the building, calling them "hogs". Please set me straight. Were the girls wrong to take the cake? Also, was it their place to pay for the shower? What are the duties of bridesmaids these days?

Need Updating

Dear Up:

I cannot imagine such gall as handing the bridesmaids a bill for a shower, unless it was agreed in advance that they would pay for it. As for taking the cake home — if the girls accepted the bill they automatically became "hostesses", which entitled them to it.

Dear Ann:

I have an answer for insensitive people who compare the size of children. Our son is small for his age. I'm tired of biting my tongue when acquaintances (I'd hardly call them friends) make remarks such as: "Is he the shortest child in his class?" Or, "I can't believe he's seven. Look at how much taller my son is."

I invented an answer out of desperation 12 years ago and it has never failed to stop the questioner cold. Just smile and say sweetly: "We've always told Johnny we'd rather he be short and smart than big and dumb (long pause), like some people." It works!

Exercise after bypass

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - As a bypass patient, may I offer some encouragement to your readers? If you want to reap the benefits of your operation, do what your doctor tells you no matter how hard it may be. You will have to walk until your legs feel they will fall off but after you get used to walking 10 miles at a stretch, it becomes easy. Just be sure to get some thick soft-soled shoes. Sneakers will just not fill the bill. A treadmill will keep you in good shape in bad weather.

After about 14 months of walking I was able to discontinue all medication. I eat no meat but veal or baby beef, fish or turkey. Of course, chicken is good if you have cooked it without the skin, but I don't eat chicken.

Get off salt at the table. The natural salt in food is all you need after you get accustomed to it. Don't borrow trouble with your imagination. After you get in shape with lots of good exercise, your heart rate will settle down to a good easy rhythm.

Later you might experience some minor pains in the tissues in between your ribs and sternum, but as long as you can touch the pain with your fingers it does not mean anything. Be sure to tell your doctor during your check-ups. Remember you probably have several hundred small scars in the chest tissues due to the cutting and stretching during surgery and sometimes these hurt.

Remember exercise is the name of the game if you want to get well.

DEAR READER - Thank you for your good words. Many readers with coronary bypass operations will appreciate your attitude. I would like to point out, however, that many patients with coronary artery disease can improve significantly by following the same routine without surgery. It's much smarter to take preventive measures before surgery than having to do them after surgery. If you're in the coronary age group, and most middle aged American men are, an adequate daily walking program with other exercise and diet could eliminate the need for surgery. That way a person can avoid all those little pains that follow the surgery that you talk about.

The diet is important and it must be a diet that causes a person to eliminate every ounce of excess body fat, not just part of it.

I'm not in complete agreement with your diet since both veal and baby beef contain as much cholesterol as mature beef. The point is to eat very lean meat, cutting away all the fat before cooking. Eliminating fat makes it easier to lose weight. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet, Preventing Atherosclerosis for general guidelines that will help you. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. With the exception of severe cases demonstrated by special X-ray studies, I feel that every candidate for a bypass operation should first try a strict dietary program coupled with a sensible exercise program. Of course, cigarette smoking should be totally and completely eliminated.

Kay's Kitchen Korner

By Kay Taylor

Here is a little cookie from Lake St. Jean.

CUSTARD COOKIES

¾ cup butter
1 cup flour
¼ cup icing sugar
2 tablespoons custard powder

Knead well together, form into balls and place on cookie sheet. Press down with fork. Bake at 350 degrees F.

ROCK COOKIES

(375 deg. oven)
Cream until soft:
1 cup butter or margarine
Blend in gradually ½ cups brown sugar

Add 3 eggs, well beaten
Combine above ingredients very well.
Dissolve ½ teaspoon soda in 2 tablespoons hot water
Add ½ cup currants
½ cup raisins
1 cup chopped nuts

Sift, then measure 3 and one-third cups flour
Resift with 2 tablespoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon allspice
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Combine with rest of ingredients. Drop on well greased tins.

While traditional Christmas fare, shortbread is very nice with fruit or as a cookie any time of the year. The following is an economical version that may please some readers.

SHORTBREAD

¼ lb. butter
¼ lb. lard
1 cup fruit sugar
½ cups all purpose flour

Beat lard, butter and sugar to a cream. Then work in flour with hands until the mixture leaves the hands clean - if necessary add a little more flour. Line tin with wax paper and place dough, kneading flat with knuckles until about one half-inch from the edge. Pinch edges, prick with a fork. Bake in moderate (350 deg.) oven about 30 minutes.

Honored on 80th birthday

BROME (KT) - On July 29, Mr. and Mrs. Dana Frizzle of Rensselaire, Ont., and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Butler, Jr., of Candiac, Que., and their respective families hosted a Dinner Party at the Brome Hall, in honour of their father and grandfather, Mr. Lester R. Ball who celebrated his 80th birthday on July 22nd. About 75 relatives and friends sat down to a delicious dinner prepared by Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Hamilton, of Brome, assisted by several young women of that place.

Upon arrival at the hall, Mrs. Dana Frizzle pinned a yellow and gold corsage of roses on Mrs. Ball and Miss Sonia Butler pinned a white boutonniere on her grandfather. The guest of honour accompanied by Mrs. Ball, proceeded to the head table where white candles in crystal holders and a bouquet of roses centred the table.

Mr. Blake Frizzle of Ajax, Ont., paid tribute to his grandfather and then called on Mr. Alden Mizener of Brossard, to say grace. Mr. Bryan Frizzle of Markham, Ont., expressed his pleasure at being able to attend this very happy occasion and called on his father, Mr. Dana Frizzle to act as Master of Ceremonies. Mr. Gary Frizzle of Islington, thanked his mother Phyllis, his aunt Barbara and his brother Bryan, for coming up with the idea of a party for their father. He also thanked Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Hamilton for preparing such a lovely dinner. Mr. Harry Butler, Jr., proposed a toast to Mrs. Ball, and the Master of Ceremonies called on his son Bryan to propose a toast to his grandfather. He then called on Mr. Grayson Cousens to make the presentation which consisted of a mammoth hand-painted Birthday Card with envelope to match, the card bearing the signatures of all those present and containing many cards and gifts of money.

The guest of honour voiced his appreciation for such a lovely and memorable evening and for the many cards and gifts of money. As the birthday cake was brought in, a trio composed of Philip Mizener on the euphonium, Alden Mizener on the cornet and Warren Mizener on the trumpet, played "Happy Birthday" followed by "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow". The beautifully decorated birthday cake with candles and displaying the number "80" was made by Mrs. Harry Butler, Jr.

A happy evening of dancing, cards and singing was enjoyed. The four Cousens brothers, with Mrs. Guy Cousens as accompanist, sang several numbers to the delight of all present. The music for dancing was provided by the Mizener group, assisted on the drums by Mr. L.J. Crandall. Among the guests who attended were: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Butler, Mr. Blair Butler, Miss Sonia Butler and Master Drew Butler, Candiac, Que., Mr. and Mrs. Dana Frizzle, Rensselaire, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Frizzle, Markham, Ont., Mr. Blake Frizzle and son John, Ajax, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Gary Frizzle, Islington, Ont., Mrs. Donald Frizzle, Springfield, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. Keith Mizener, Mrs. John Badger, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Badger, Mr. William Pettes, Mr. Archie Ladd, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Grayson Cousens, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Cousens, all of Knowlton.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cousens, Waterloo, Mr. Frank Cousens and Mrs. Henry Jorgenson, Bolton Glen, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Mizener and son Jason, Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. Alden Mizener, Mr. Philip Mizener and Miss Ruth Mizener, Brossard, Mr. and Mrs. Emile Dubord, Ville d'Anjou, Mr. and Mrs. Orson Inglis and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ball, Montreal, Mr. F. Dougal, Mr. and Mrs. Bryce Dougal, Mrs. Antoine Coderre and Mr. Nick Haunterman, Cowansville, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Butler, Sr., Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Simons, Finch, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Kinkaid, Massawippi, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas McClay, West Brome, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Marsh, Brome and Mr. and Mrs. William Hinves, Knowlton.

Richmond County Historical Society News

Sunday, August 6, dawned a beautiful, summer day, just the right kind of day to take a picnic lunch and drive through the picturesque countryside of the Eastern Townships.

Many people decided to do just that. About noon, it began to look as though many roads led to the museum at Upper Melbourne where coffee and cool drinks were being served with the visitors' picnic lunches.

Guests from neighbouring historical societies, as well as friends and members, were welcomed by the President, Mr. Donald Healy, Mrs. Healy, and Miss Bernice McAdam who had been responsible for arranging the event.

The museum is housed in an old frame building dating back to the 1850's. The surrounding grounds and trees make an ideal setting for this ancient clapboard-covered structure where the axe-marks on the hand-hewn beams may still be seen in the attic.

The building served as a hospital and an inn or stage coach stopping place before it became, earlier than 1867, the home of John Mairs and his bride, Jane Sloane. The road directly in front of the museum was once part of the stage road leading to Waterloo.

While waiting for the arrival of the guest speaker, Mr. Shigeo Suwa, from Montreal, the 150 guests filled in the time by making leisurely tours of the museum rooms. The old furniture, dishes, pictures, cooking utensils, and tools, are arranged to represent the way a middle-class family of the period actually lived and worked. Albums of old-fashioned photographs were pored over; the ancient piano was opened and tried. In the shed chamber, the visitors could examine the saddles, bridles and harnesses belonging to another era. Probably this furnished an opportunity for the retelling of a few horse trading stories.

On the second floor, Mrs. Jeanne Reed had set up an attractive display of dolls. This collection has been gathered over a number of years and many of the international costumes which dress the dolls have been made by Mrs. Reed herself or by her mother, Mrs. LaRoche.

About 2:00 p.m. the guest speaker and his party arrived. After enjoying refreshments, Mr. Suwa, a Japanese artist and doll-maker of renown in his own country, proceeded to give a demonstration of his art. This proved to be both interesting and educational. Surely it will provide someone with an incentive to develop a worthwhile hobby.

After leaving the museum, Mr. Suwa and his party were directed to the farm of Mr. Boersen of Melbourne where they were treated to a demonstration of a Canadian farm in operation - complete with a ride on a hay wagon.

From the farm, the party proceeded to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michel Roberge on the Fourth Range of St. Francois Xavier de Brompton. Mr. M. Roberge is the brother of Mr. Claude Roberge who is the interpreter for the Japanese group. After he had enjoyed a little trout fishing and a buffet supper, Mr. Suwa left. The members and friends of the Richmond County Historical Society thank him for adding a great deal to the day on their turn to entertain the neighbouring historical societies.

WI Meetings

WATERLOO - On Wed., Aug. 2nd the regular monthly meeting of the Waterloo-W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Joyce Hogan with Mrs. W. Ramsay and Miss A. Ashton as co-hostesses.

Mrs. A. Marcotte opened the meeting with all repeating the Mary Stewart Collect and singing the Ode. Roll call answered by thirteen members and one visitor by giving their opinion of what a well balanced breakfast should be.

Minutes were read by Sec. Mrs. Thompson who also read a letter from Cansave office. At this meeting, a sweater and a good number of knitted squares, also several pairs of eye glasses were given in to be taken to the Montreal office.

Treas. Mrs. Sicard gave a satisfactory financial report. Pennies for Friendship were collected and the mystery package, given by Helen Ramsay was won by Mary Sicard.

A very pretty hand-made cushion was donated by Mrs. Plunkett to be drawn for, along with other articles, at our Autumn card party.

Articles were read by two convenors.

The meeting was then turned over to Health and Welfare Convenor, Mrs. Hilliker who had prepared a contest on various names of lakes. Prizes in this went to May Copping, Alice Ashton, Maude Plunkett and Audrey Marcotte. A Silent Auction was also held with a good number of articles on the table. Proceeds from this, to go to Cansave, amounted to $13.35.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Hogan.

The September meeting to be held with Mrs. Hilliker at South Stukely on Sept. 6.

Members were pleased to welcome Mrs. Annie Dryden from Belleville, Ont., one of our past presidents and still a member.

After a bountiful feast of picnic fare, a short business meeting was held.

President, Mrs. Lewis made arrangements for transportation to Dixville on August 9, for all wishing to go.

Plans for September meeting were also discussed, at which Fordyce will be entertaining Sutton W.I. Group pictures were taken and after a social time, all departed for home.

Richmond hosts first 'Kooky Olympics'

RICHMOND (WL) — Twelve teams from the Richmond area gathered on the grounds of the recreational centre for the first annual 'Kooky Olympics'. The teams were formed by local merchants and societies and the main purpose of the day was fun rather than competition.

The opening message was presented at 10:00 Saturday by Mayor Andre Lussier to the 300 people present.

The day's activities included three-legged races, obstacle races, relay races, sack races, long jump, discus throw and hammer throw.

A disco dance in the arena opened the event on Friday night. Closing ceremonies were also held in the arena.

The day was a social as well as an athletic event with a corn roast given for the participants during the day. Hostesses on Saturday were Louise Goodhue, Louise Delaney and Marie-Claire Fillion.

These Richmond men look like they are ready to take off in last weekend's 'Kooky Olympics'.

In all events, first, second and third place winners were awarded ribbons and medals for their efforts. With this year's 'Kooky Olympics' being such a great success, organizers are hoping to continue it next year and make it an annual affair.

Padres drop Expos 5-4

MONTREAL (CP) — Broderick Perkins lofted a sacrifice fly to score Dave Winfield with the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning as San Diego Padres defeated Montreal Expos 5-4 in a National League baseball game Sunday.

starter Bob Ojchinko. The Padres scored two runs in a two-out first-inning rally against starter Woodie Fryman. Walks to Don Reynolds and Gene Tenace around an infield single by Winfield loaded the bases and rookie Perkins followed with a two-run double.

Disabled open olympics

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Athletes from across Canada begin competition in St. John's today in the 1978 Canadian games for the physically disabled.

The 354 blind, amputee and wheelchair athletes and about 250 support staff attended official opening ceremonies here Sunday.

Iona Campagnola, federal minister for fitness and amateur sport, Newfoundland Premier Frank Moores, Tom Hickey, provincial rehabilitation and recreation minister, and Mayor Dorothy Waytt of St. John's, took part in the ceremonies.

Athletes compete for gold, silver and bronze medals in such sports as archery, swimming, basketball, pentathlon, table tennis, track and field, volleyball, wrestling, pistol shooting and fencing.

E. John A. Harnum, chairman of the local organizing committee and former Newfoundland lieutenant-governor, said he hopes the events will be well attended by the public.

Beavers host tournament

Record - Bruce Porter

Honorary president of the Sherbrooke Beavers Jere Gillis puts at the Beaver's Invitational golf tournament held on Friday at the Sherbrooke Country Club.

Sherbrooke Mayor Jacques O'Bready lifts the pin for him while Beavers president Guy Bureau looks on.

By LEN O'DONNELL. SHERBROOKE — Robert "Bob" Mailloux walked off with the honors in the 2nd annual Sherbrooke Beavers Golf Tournament held at the Sherbrooke Country Club Friday.

He posted a 74 gross, three over par, for the 18-hole event. Paul Lindell copped third with his 76 while Denis Brousseau and Laurent Delaney were deadlocked at 77. Normand Hebert and Guy Roy finished tied with 78's. They were all in invited guest list of the event.

Denis Dussault of Milby, a former Beaver, was tops among the hockey players with 76. This section included all former and present members of the Beavers. In second spot were Normand Dussault and Bernard Harbec, each with 83. Denis Messier was tops among the newsmen with 77. Gordon Breen earned the low net in the section.

Claude Lefebvre walked away with the prize for the most honest player. He belted a grand total of 138 for the 18-hole event, while Pierre Tremblay earned the prize for the hockey players.

Jere Gillis, honorary president of the tourney, played only nine holes after being delayed with car trouble on the Autoroute. Other members of the foursome were Guy Bureau, president of the Beavers, Jacques Laverdiere of the Rock City Tobacco Company, and Mayor Jacques O'Bready.

Only 85 players competed in the tourney which was well below the number expected by the organizers.

The weather was excellent for the day and all enjoyed a fine time.

Following the golf a dinner was served, which was prepared by Gerard Cote, cook at the Hut. His piece de resistance was a replica of a golf course, in cake form.

Jimmy Mann, Pierre Tremblay and Sylvain Locas, were present although they quit the training camp of Canada Olympic Hockey ahead of time. It was held at Laval University in Quebec City. Georges Guilbault, general manager of the Beavers, played with Marcel Robert, president of the QMJHL, along with Ghislain Delage and Pierre "Boom-Boom" Meilleur, former trainer of the Beavers and now with the Montreal Canadiens.

A's defeat Royals, lose to Sorel

SHERBROOKE — The Athletics dumped Drummondville Royals Saturday to take their quarter-final series in five games, but lost Sunday to Sorel Tigers in their semi-final opener here.

Sherbrooke took a 9-4 victory over the Royals in Drummondville in the deciding game on five hit pitching by Alain Cyr while Pierre Archambault limited the locals to four hits in a 4-2 ninth inning Sorel triumph.

Archambault was unknown to the Sherbrooke club until last night but he struck out 14 Athletics as the Tigers took their extra-inning win.

Sorel scored twice in the third on four hits and a base on balls, leaving three men on when the side retired. A's rebounded for a pair of runs themselves in the bottom of the inning when Marco Roby was walked, Alan Watkins reached base on an error and Daniel Pepin sent them both home on a double.

The battle continued until the ninth inning when Sherbrooke committed three errors to send the Tigers to victory. With one out, Jean-Marc Pontbriant's hit ball eluded Normand Houle at second base and went out into centre field. Daniel Cadorette singled Pontbriant home and went to second when the incoming throw from Serge Collins went astray near the A's dugout. Sherbrooke hurler Richard Vachon picked up the ball and threw to third in an attempt to cut down Cadorette, but again a relay was off and the Sorel runner trotted home for the insurance point.

Vachon gave up 11 hits in the game but didn't seem to have any great difficulty defensively except in the third and ninth innings. He also struck out five. Pepin had a double and single for Sherbrooke, while Pierre Provencher hit a double and Watkins got a single to account for the A's hitting.

Saturday, Yves Gazaille gave up three runs on three hits and a pair of walks before leaving the game and becoming the loser. Alain Cyr and Marco Roby each had two runs batted in while one RBI each went to Daniel Pepin, Pierre Provencher, Pierre Begin and Michel Benoit.

Cyr allowed four runs on five hits in the first three innings before he was replaced in the winning cause.

Semi-final action continues tomorrow evening in Sorel while the teams come back to Amedee Roy Stadium on Thursday.

Smith settles for silver

WEST BERLIN (CP) — If Graham Smith's fingers had been just a shade longer, he would have won a gold medal at the world aquatic championships Sunday.

But they weren't, so he had to settle for silver in the men's 100-metre breaststroke behind Walter Kusch of West Germany.

The difference between first and second was four-hundredths of a second—a razor-thin margin even for swimming, where photo finishes are common.

Kusch was timed in 1:03.56 and Smith in 1:03.60. That broke the Edmonton swimmer's own Canadian mark of 1:03.81 set at the recent Commonwealth Games, where he won six gold medals.

Smith blamed his final touch at the wall for the loss. He had led from the start and only lost his advantage in the final 20 metres, when Kusch pulled alongside.

"I'd like to see the replay of the finish, because I think I lost it there," Smith said. "I'm sure I misjudged my timing at the wall, and that was probably the difference."

The 20-year-old Canadian headed out fast in the first 50 metres and led over Kusch and countryman Gerald Moerken at the half-way point.

"Just glancing out of the corner of my eye, I thought I had a pretty good start," Smith added. "Coming down, I felt pretty good for the first 50 and wanted to turn quickly, but coming home I tired a lot."

Smith's silver was the only medal for Canada on the opening day of swimming competition.

Most of the glory went to the United States, which won the other four events and made a tremendous start in diving, winning both men's and women's divisions Sunday.

Local playoff action continues

SHERBROOKE — Local Little League playoff action continues this week for Sher-Lenn while Sher-Mont begins their post-season competition.

Tonight and Wednesday evening at 6 p.m. at the Parade Grounds, the White Sox and Senators tangle in the opening games of their best of five final Sher-Lenn series.

Starting Tuesday in Sher-Mont, the Orioles meet the Twins and the Elks take on the Red Sox. Wednesday, the Red Sox and Elks meet again in their best of three semi-final series, while the Twins and Orioles oppose each other on Thursday.

Purina Calf Growena

Success is in the bag
When Purina Dairy Research scientists developed Purina's popular program for feeding and managing Heifer Replacements, Calf Growena was included for very important reasons.
This palatable ration is formulated to provide just the right nutrition calves need during the important third to sixth month of their growth and development. It contains 16% protein with a carefully calculated balance of proteins and energy, minerals and vitamins calves must have for fast, efficient gains. It is often called "The Rumen Builder" because it stimulates important early rumen development.
Start your calves with Nursing Chow and Calf Startena Then follow with Calf Growena fed free-choice with good quality hay.
