Congratulations To Hector Provost

HECTOR PROVOST

Hector Provost, local manager of the Shawinigan Water & Power Co. accomplished a feat following the ice storm for which he deserves congratulations. It will be recalled that electric service was restored in Huntingdon town in approximately 48 hours from the time of the shutdown on Saturday night, Feb. 25.

The public utilities that serve this area proclaimed Huntingdon area the most severely hit by the storm. The S.W. & P. Co. had crews of linemen come here from Vermont, Ontario and many areas of Quebec Province to aid in the restoration of damaged electric transmission lines. These lines had to be erected in the air so as to be a protection against possible electrocution of pedestrians.

During one week there were 800 linemen working in this area, and all were strangers. From early morning to cessation of work each evening, Hector Prevost was continually on the go from one crew of linemen to another. He was cautioning them as to what wires were electrified and those that were otherwise. These crew foremen were cautioned not to work beyond a given point until Mr. Provost returned to direct them to another area to repair. With these 800 extra employees, working longer than usual hours and certainly under very hazardous conditions, not a single accident occured.

The Shawinigan men who have been stationed here know the lines thoroughly and they were not the worry to Manager Provost as were the strangers.

The Shawinigan Water & Power employees and also the Bell Telephone Co. men give safety first instruction and drill marked attention and with weekly regularity. Undoubtedly this "Safety First" consideration paid off during the repairing and reconstruction of 42 2/3 miles of electric transmission lines and the 175 miles of telephone lines following the storm.

Two close calls to what might have been fatalities occured during the first hours of the storm. At 2.30 a.m., February 27, a S.W. & P. lineman was part way up a pole in the Parish of St. Barbe when a string of poles collapsed. The Bell Tel. Co. had quite a similar accident when a man was up a pole and a string of poles crashed. The lineman was taken to the hospital for examination, fortunately no serious injury occurred.

On March 25th, the Bell Telephone Co., accorded telephone service to all 6500 customers in this area, except in a few isolated cases.

Anderson had to say, but one more thing might well have been added, and that is that COMMON SENSE is still the essential attribute of specialists, management and everyone else.

Agricultural Short Course Concludes At Ormstown

A highly successful Agricultural Short Course held its final sessions on Tuesday and Thursday of last week.

During the course, not only a wealth of information was presented by capable people in the persons of Prof Klinck, Dr. H. A. Steppler, Prof. Lloyd, Prof. Banting, Prof. Bubar and Prof. Brown all of Macdonald College, but keen questions and discussions followed.

On Tuesday evening Dr. Steppler dealt with the time of cutting forage in relation to value. To ensure the greatest yield with the highest per cent protien, it was suggested that a variety of forage species be used thus also varying the time of maturing.

A safeguard for the best results was an early start on haying or silage making.

Dr. Lloyd discussed the nutritive value of a crop. One fact to be considered is the acceptability of the feed, and the intake of the animal.

In summing up it was agreed that the most efficient production from the ruminant animal (cow, sheep, goat) is to be obtained through the proper utilization of roughage feeds. If the production of milk is the aim of the farm enterprise and the milk is to be sold with a margin of gain, then careful attention should be paid to the forage program.

Mr. J. D. Lang, of Howick, acted as Chairman for the above session.

Mr. R. Baker of Huntingdon chaired the final meeting on Thursday evening when the subject of pastures was dealt with.

Attendance was very gratifying throughout the whole course and it was felt that the combined efforts of the Ormstown Study Club and the various farm organization groups in the Chateauguay Valley had been well worth while.

The guest speaker, Mr. Ralph Cooper was introduced by Mr. Stuart Duncan. Mr. Cooper a native son of Ormstown, spoke on his four years as a missionary at Aklavik and showed slides which young and old enjoyed.

Following his talk many of those present took the opportuntiy to inquire about his experiences and his work.

The president thanked the speaker and then called on Mr. George Rutherford, who, with a few well-chosen words, presented Mr. Hugh Chambers with a pen as a small token of appreciation for his more than thirty years of service as treasurer for the Brotherhood.

Mr. S. McNeil President Of Havelock Fair

Mr. Stanley McNeil of Franklin Centre, is the new President of Huntingdon Agricultural Society Division "B" (Havelock Fair) and this week he visited the Gleaner Office with some interesting papers.

It is a tradition of the Society that when a new president takes over, the retiring president hands him over some papers that have been handed to him by the previously retiring president. Mr. W. Barr was the retiring president in this case and so into the possession of Mr. McNeil came the papers. It was some of these papers that Mr. McNeil brought to the Gleaner Office.

In this instance, there were two and they were old prize lists for Fairs, one in 1878 and the other in 1886. Evidently they had been printed at the Huntingdon Gleaner, in the days of the Founder ,the Late Robert Sellar. While the one of 1878 was beginning to show signs of wear where it had been folded, the printing was quite readable. The latter one was in much better state and was printed on better quality paper. It goes to show that quality counts even in printing.

These prize lists were not in book form, but were single sheets. In the case of the first one, there were two small sheets and in the case of the latter one, it was one large single sheet. At the time of the 1878 Fair, F. T. Boardman was the Secretary. The prizes being offered were much about the same as they are today. The Society was then known as Huntingdon Agricultural Society No. 2 and it was the eighth annual show. The 1886 Fair offered prizes that were about double what they are now and also doubled the 1878 show money. Robert Ellerton was the Secretary and this was the 16th annual show.

Mr. Barr received these papers from Mr. McCanse, who was his predecessor.

The 1961 Havelock Fair is the 90th Annual Show. In talking with Mr. McNeil, he says that attendance at the Fair over the past few years is such that more space is needed and they need to expand their present holdings to accommodate all that must get into the grounds. They are seeking means of doing this and hope at some time to be able to buy some of the adjacent lands.

An Open Letter To All Music Teachers In The Chateauguay Valley

Dear Teachers,

Having seen and heard parts of the recent Montreal competitive Music Festival, and having seen many children inspired and enthusiastic about working hard to improve their musical performance for another year, I am convinced that it would be a wonderful thing for us in the Chateauguay Valley to have our own Music Festival.

The standards of music in our district are, let's face it, very low. There is too little music in our schools, there are too few music teachers, not enough interest in music shown by the parents. In Franklin, for instance, I seem to be the only piano teacher, and I am not qualified to teach advanced students, having only reached Grade VI in the Royal Schools of London exams, which is equivalent to about Grade VIII in the Toronto Conservatory Exams.

Our own Music Festival would help in three ways :

1. It would give music students a real incentive to practise, and would inspire many more to start music lessons.

2. It would give the people in the district the chance to hear good music performed by our children, which would increase their interest and raise their standards of listening.

3. It would bring the individual help and encouragement to each competitor from the established musician acting as adjudicator.

The reason I think we should have our own festival (as do St. Lambert and many towns in Ontario)rather than send our pupils to the Montreal Festival, is because we could set our own standards of performance — not too high the first year, so as to encourage as many entrants as possible.

I realize that there would be many details to work out — test pieces to choose, program to plan, etc. but these can certainly be done if enough interest is shown. I am willing to do the secretarial work myself on a voluntary bases the first year.

Are you interested in this idea? Would you write to me, please and tell me :

1. If you agree that it would be a good thing for the district.

2. If you have pupils you would encourage to enter.

3. In which branches of music you think your particular district might be interested : vocal solos, duets? piano solos, duets? other instruments? choirs? bands?

Whether you would be willing to help in any way.

Address : Mrs. Christine Sherrington,
Franklin Centre, Que.

Rotarians Hear Address On Management

Rotarian Fred Anderson addressed the Huntingdon Rotary Club on Monday. The present day problems that confront management of industrial concerns was the topic of Mr. Anderson's address. In opening his remarks he referred to his early observations in his Father's spinning mill in England which he termed the end of the first era of industrial development. Industrial development to-day is of the automation type with specialists who have been schooled and educated so that when they start to work they are found occupying positions well up the ladder of attainment. To-day management must have a great number of specialists, and specialists in such a great variety of essential posts. These specialists are frequently an extremely nervous type of individual, due to being so involved with their particular part in the operation of the firm. In reality it is a case of one specialist being a cog in the wheel of automation forcing the requirements and speed off another specialist. With all this automation and specialists the manager of the concern indeed has his worries in operating any business of size today.

President George Thompson called upon Rotarian François Cleyn to express the thanks of the Club to Fred Anderson for the talk. Mr. Cleyn was pleased to accord the thanks to Mr. Anderson who happens to be one of Mr. Cleyn's key men of their Spinners Limited mill. Mr. Cleyn said he quite agreed with all Mr.

Police Want Co-operation

The police again ask the co-operation of all businessmen and their employees on Chateauguay Street, who have cars, to keep them off this street. A number are parking their cars on the street and leaving them there all day long. This hinders people who want to park their cars for shopping purposes and those leaving their cars for a longer period than sixty minutes are breaking the law. The police therefore ask that this practice cease as from now, or they will be compelled to issue parking tickets to offenders.

Spring seems to have arrived, as the warm sun melts the snow and ice, water and mud takes its place. It does however seem early when one considers it is not yet the end of March. The ice in the river is still waiting to go out, but parts of the river are clear. It should not be long nowever, before the ice will all go and the river be entirely clear. People have started to get out in their gardens to clean up in readiness. The broken branches of trees and litter therefrom have just about all been cleared away, in town, at least. Some patching has been done on the holes in the streets. All are sure signs of spring.

Attends Course In New System of Milking

At the right is Mr. George Renaud of Huntingdon, in the company of Mr. Thomas W. Merritt, president of Babson Bros. Co., of Chicago. Mr. Renaud attended a 3-days conference, for training in the system Tonganoxie for milking, held at St-Charles, Ill., organized by Babson Bros. Co. Manufacturers of Surge milking equipment.

Mr. George Renaud, of Huntingdon, has just completed an advanced training for 3 days, for the installation and maintenance of milking equipment by a system of pipes for milking rooms; and is of more and more importance in the dairy industry. Just as modern agriculture specializes gradually, the installation and equipment service demands a special intensive training. This 3 days of advanced study, allowed the participants to receive an exceptional training. A most interesting point at these training conferences was that the equipment was used on live cows to demonstrate it, in different kinds of installation for milking rooms were shown, as well as the system of supported piping.

On Being A Junior Executive

This article is for people who believe that progress can be made toward becoming an executive. It is not for those who look upon management as an inherited talents, or one which descends upon a man like a prophet's cloak when he is elevated to managerial rank.

Young men and women who feel the urge to move ahead in business have every encouragement to do so. No matter how greatly the economic life of the world may change, there will still be opportunities on the junior level of management open to people who have developed their executive ability and trained themselves in administration.

Who is a junior executive? Everyone is entitled to be called a junior executive whose job requires him to exercise independent judgment in the handling of staff and in dealing with business responsibilities. He may be a team leader, a foreman, a supervisor, a department or branch manager, or an assistant to the chief executive.

Whatever he is called, he is responsible for the proper conduct of his job, setting the top executive free from routine detail so that he may concentrate on the larger problems of the business. The junior will do, within his sphere, all that the chief himself would do if he were there.

Any two-by-four clerk can criticize. He can point to where his chief stumbled or where the workers could have done something better. The junior executive does not indulge in this sort of thing. He assumes responsibility for keeping his chief from stumbling, and accepts responsibility for the quality of his people's work.

Human skill is a basic requirement in the junior executive. He must gain the collaboration of his work group. He must bring out the best efforts of others and unite those efforts in a common purpose. If he can clear a path for other men to walk in, he has contributed greatly to them, to the business, and to his own satisfaction.

Cardinal Qualities

It is customary to summarize the executive functions in this way: originate, direct and scrutinize.

We should emphasize ability to originate. The junior executive who conceives and develops ideas is best of all; in second place, but still good, is the person who can accept and adapt good suggestions and put them into operation; behind these, and practically useless as managerial material, are those who cannot themselves think of new and improved ways of doing things and cannot accept, understand and apply suggestions from others.

The man in the top grade has many personal qualities: patience, self-control, perseverance, self-reliance and a sense of values.

Without these basic qualities no man can carry out the three persistent tasks of management applying science and technical skill to some material or service; systematically ordering operations; organizing sustained cooperation.

How are you to show your value as a junior executive? One of the best ways is by saving your superior's time. Before you go to him with a problem, try not to. If you must go choose a time when he is most conveniently able to give such matters consideration. When you do go, take a complete outline of your problem or plan, not just a sketchy suggestion. Half-baked ideas show you in a poor light.

Personality

Personality is your personal identity. It is what enables you to bring together a basic need and the results of research and digest them into a workable plan.

The more personal qualities you apply to your work the better junior executive you will be. The success or failure of any project of magnitude turns upon the individual skill, the capability, and the leadership of the man who whips it into shape.

Personality demands the discipline of character which can say "yes" and "no" to men and proposals, not out of blind obstinacy, but with the firmness which is derived from a conscious weighing of alternatives. This quality is the end result of good habits of thought.

Personality includes firmness of mind. George Eliot's Middlemarch, written in 1871, is not current reading for those responsible for administrative training, but it contains at least one seasonable sentence. Mr. Cadwallader, the rector, says of the squire: "Brooke is a very good fellow, but pulpy; he will run into any mould, but he won't keep shape." That is a true picture of a man who will never make an executive.

The man with an optimistic turn of mind has an advantage. People do not like to work for a pessimist. The up-and coming junior is always optimistically alert for opportunities to use his talent constructively.

Opportunity is nothing else but a special arrangement of circumstances in which we can, if we have the gumption and energy, show our excellence.

Special opportunity do not lie in any particular industry or business or profession, but within people. They are at hand according to a man's ability, his vision and his will for action. Ability presupposes constant learning; vision means seeing bits of evidence which others ignore; the will for action arises out of joy in striving with and overcoming difficulties: and this is the highest human felicity.

About Ambition.

The man promoted to junior executive rank must not be like the point in Euclid's first definition: having position but no magnitude.

Ambition is a dynamic thing, having an end in view and devising means to attain that end. It' is the driving force of the man who wishes to be, not to appear, the best.

The ideal way of promotion is this: your superiors pull you up because they need your help; your associates push you up because they believe in you and like you.

There is nothing neurotic about an ambition that works in this way. The man of neurotic ambition does not wish to make a contribution to anyone above or below him, but merely to surpass others.

Ambition is not fulfilled easily. It requires direction, energy, patience, vigilance and determination. Francis Bacon gave a new twist to Aesop's fable of the hare and the tortoise. As Bacon tells it: "The lame man who keeps the right road outstrips the runner who takes the wrong one. Nay it is obvious that when a man runs the wrong way, the more active and swift he is, the further he will go astray."

You must tailor your ambition to fit your abilities. Don't try to force it. Either make over your desire to fit your everyday life, or determine to make over your life to accommodate your desire. If there is conflict, if there is a seesawing, you and your family will be unhappy.

It does not pay to be an overeager, acquisitive, person, whose brow is crowned with a fevered diadem. Competition is, to such a man, too grim, too much a matter of taut muscles, to make a satisfactory basis for life.

Sir Walter Scott tells us in one of his stories that when Queen Elizabeth I gave Raleigh a diamond ring he used it to scratch on a window in the palace: "Fain would I climb but that I fear to fall." The Queen completed the couplet: "If thy mind fail thee, do not climb at all."

At every stage in his progress the junior executive needs to keep in mind that he is only as good as his performance proves that he is. If he fails to deliver the goods, he soon loses his reputation.

Preparing for Leadership

Your preparation must be suitable to the greatness of your hopes and the largeness of the enterprise. You are going to capture a fortress: make sure beforehand that your scaling ladders are long enough.

Preparation consists in pushing out the boundaries of ignorance. You need to learn not only what the job requires but how you measure up to the requirements and what you can do to prepare yourself to meet them triumphantly.

It is arrogant to think that you can solve complex problems, or compete successfully with shrewd opponents, or captain a team, without doing your homework. An orchestra leader does not have to be able to play all the instruments, but he does need to know how they should sound when played well, and how they blend to produce music.

Try to match your chief's vision of your organization. Know the universal principles of business, and proceed to bring the knowledge of individual parts to your fingertips. Don't depend upon other people to teach you: the key word in your progress is "learning." If you are not a self-starter you are not competent to start others. You may reach some success as a driver of men, but you will not become a leader of men.

One month of genuine research into your wants, your capability, your personality and the power of your ambition will be worth years of trying this and that in search of satisfaction. If there is any doubt in your mind about your ability and instinct to be a leader, resolve it. You will never be a good executive unless you are sure of yourself.

An executive must be able to face himself honestly, and profit by his mistakes. He cannot perfect his techniques as a spectator. He is the son of his own works. His development is self-development.

It is of the essence of learning to benefit by criticism. An envious jibe which rouses us to take a clear view of ourselves may improve our work. We may have been sailing a little lopsided, but when our attention is called to it we can take constructive action, shift our ballast, and get back on an even keel.

Virtues to Cultivate

Every young man who aspires to executive position must learn to obey. The man who has not learned the importance of carrying out instructions is not fitted to command. Obedience is a virtue that is only gained in one way — by practice in obeying.

Patience is needed. This word takes in a lot of ground: it implies mental health, maturity and urbanity.

We must be patient even when we are called upon to do things which seem to us to be below the level of our skill or dignity. In a philharmonic orchestra it sometimes falls to the lot of artists who are acclaimed in their own right to provide the conventional background music for the showy vocal parts.

It is not a sign of greatness to be impatient. The sun, the greatess sphere in our galaxy and the most important, ripens the smallest bunch of grapes as if it had nothing else to do.

The junior executive, more than any of those whose work he directs, has need for tact. He will use courtesy to take the sharp edge off power. He will never treat an idea, even a grotesque one, with contempt. He will pay attention to it and discuss it. He will deal justly, but tenderly, with complaints. He will not hesitate to ask pardon for his mistakes.

Making Decisions

By a happy combination of several of these virtues the junior executive lays good groundwork for his ultimate test: the acceptance of responsibility.

Decision making is a commitment of yourself. Before you reach it you must have tested facts rigorously and weighed possible results. You cannot always go by the plotted course. The realities may contradict charts and statistics. The leadsman on a ship sings out: "The water's shoaling rapidly;" the captain says: "There's six fathoms by the chart;" to this the leadsman replies: "Four by the line." Is the captain going to sail on, reckoning his chart a better guide than the lead?

When you come to make a responsibility-accepting decision, it is a great comfort to know that you have the respect and support of those around you. If everyone is pulling in the right direction, with esteem for you as a person as well as in your role of top man, your mind is free of jarring thoughts.

Very few persons in top management in these days cling to the idea of running things by dictatorial methods. No general in war, or statesman in government, or executive in business, can perform any glorious exploits, or notable service, without the concurrence of other men's endeavours.

To obtain this means the removal of friction and conflict. Co-operation must be practised by everyone, by those supervising as well as those being supervised. The state of affairs is not brought about by mimeographed messages from the front office, but by personal qualities.

The junior executive should cultivate the capacity for changing his mind. Consistency may be a jewel, but not at the cost of making a mistake. When your people produce new evidence of a convincing sort, repudiate your yesterdays with indifference to criticism. The man who sticks to his opinions tenaciously will find that the world has moved on and left him behind. Ralph Waldo Emerson did not write: "Consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds." He did write: "A foolish consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds."

Take Time to Think

You must learn to live positively in this age of transition, an age in which we are tempted to compromise and to drift with the tide. The enlightened statesmen of ancient Athens encountered such an age, but they had a saving principle that is valid today: they scorned false objectivity, which consists in keeping exactly the same distance away from each of two contrary opinions, regardless of the truth of either.

If you are forever hankering after the safety of straddling the fence; if you feel that what you did yesterday and the day before yesterday is all right for today because it got you into no trouble: if you think like that you are not displaying executive qualities.

Instead of contenting yourself with following a formula, you will ask about every case: is the formula applicable to these circumstances; has something happened to change the conditions under which the formula was arrived at?

This entails open-mindedness being willing to listen to and give consideration to other people's opinions. Only the mediocre person is sure beyond doubt. The executive-minded person is pursued by the feeling that there may be a better way.

That is why he takes time out for meditation. He may not call it that, but he does step aside from the noise and hurry of encumbering work to take a prospect of things as seen from the great distance of lake or stream, of garden or park or some other quiet place. There, he prepares himself to meet the surprises of the future, events that are yet unknown. Robert N. Hilkert, First Vice-President of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, told his staff: "Meditation may well be one of our best managerial techniques."

Some people flee from their thoughts. At lunch they poke dimes into music boxes to drown silence and thinking; in the evenings they stuff the void with television; between-times they fill with talk if they don't carry pocket radios. They explore no roots; they sprout no ideas; they grow no plans; they make no effort to cultivate their sense of values.

The junior executive is of a different sort, always on tiptoe to meet existence. Out of his well-ordered mind, where facts and experiences are not only stored but studied, he gives harmony to things around him, and brings new things into being.

Who else but such a man can attain dignity? His effective activity is sure-footed. He does not need the crutch of self-pride. He is given appreciation and does not miss adulation. He is known for what he is, not for what he might fancy himself to be.

Dealing with staff

Executives polled by Fortune some years ago about the qualities contributing most to their personal success placed "ability to handle people" above ability to make decisions or the possession of technical knowledge.

The main job of the junior executive is to achieve results through people who are under his direction. He must frame his instructions and orders with the difficulties in mind so as to win the best possible response.

You can give yourself good marks in this department if; (1) your workers leave your office after a briefing with a feeling of uplift and confidence; (2) your workers are clear-minded about what you want them to do; (3) your workers know that you are pulling your weight.

Employee resentment is roused particularly by these executive attitudes: saying "no" habitually to requests and suggestions; procrastination of decisions; inadequacy of instructions, leaving the worker to find his own way to an ill-defined goal.

You don't, as a junior executive in business, act like an army sergeant on the drill square. When he barks an order all he wants is a reflex; when you give an order you want intelligent reaction.

An ancient Greek poet said: "Our high rank, with greatness long acquainted, knows to use its power with gentleness." You know, of your own experience, how pleasant it is to have a boss who wants you to make good, who helps you to make good, and who rejoices when you succeed.

Vital to getting what you want is good communication of ideas. One of the special qualities of the proficient junior executive is his ability to translate complicated directives or muddy instructions into common-sense terms so as to get things done.

And here we come to the crucial test: getting things done. The junior executive's worth will not be determined by the number of reports and memos he writes. He demonstrates his managerial capacity by grasping quickly the essentials of a problem, deciding rapidly what he will do, making clear to all concerned what their part will be, and then seeing that his people get on with the job.

The executive's vocabulary is full of active verbs leading to effective work. He does not sit at his desk waiting for the day to come to him. He goes out to meet it, pushing himself into the way of ideas waiting to fall on those who are good catchers.

Keep on learning

You are not doing justice to your opportunities if you depend upon daily experience as your only teacher. You may be discharging your duties acceptably, but you may feel that you are not progressing. Listen to this: "A man's efficiency depends absolutely upon the strength of his purpose. Systems, time-cards, stop-watches, calculated economy of time and effort are as if they were worthless fiddle-faddle unless a man's spirit is

Aged Relieve Boredom By Working Hard

Each morning, a group of men and women converge on a Manhattan workshop, chat, hang up their coats, and get busy.

Could be like any other business place in town, except that most of these persons are more than 70 years of age—none under 60.

And they do their job in a converted automobile showroom, part of a project to help take the sting of loneliness and boredom out of their lives.

As an expanded pilot project its sponsors consider remarkably successful, it could point the answer for groups with similar problems eleswhere.

One of the workers put it this way:

"This place saved me from myself when I was on the verge of doing something I shouldn't do to myself."

Workers at the Non-Denominational Council Workshop for Senior Citizens, operated under the auspices of the National Council of Jewish Women, have a job as long as they have the desire and physical ability to work.

Manhattan director Dr. Allen Speiser says many employees start at the workshop complaining of illness and pains which seem to fade away as they work each day and make friends. After a while, he says, workers gain confidence, begin to look younger and even start to gripe a little.

"Then I am encouraged", he says, "because they're treating me like a boss."

Work is sub-contracted, largely from New York's garment industry. Workers sew buttons and cloth swatches on cards, parkage notions items and operate sorting machines.

Employees are paid but the money is not intended to be their primary means of support. The workshop's purpose is to provide employment and the psychological benefits which come from doing meaningful work.

TO THE WOODS — ON WHEELS

Camping — for family groups, hunters and fishermen — is becoming a pretty elegant affair, writes Beatrice Riddell in The Financial Post. Manufacturers of tents, trailers and outdoor cooking gadgets now try to lure you to the woods with all the comforts of home.

Latest luxury item catering to this "gracious living" outdoors is a well-equipped sleeping and living cabin — called a "camper" — mounted on a standard half-ton or 1-ton pickup truck. Already popular in the U.S., campers are entering the Canadian market in volume. Cost (about $3,500 to $4,500 for a furnished camper and truck) compares favorably with a traditional trailer (about $4,300 minimum for a new, one bedroom trailer, minus the car).

No Snakes, No Toads

Ireland is known as a country free from snakes and toads, but at least one other territory shares this odd distinction. It is the Isle of Man, in the Irish Sea about midway between Scotland and Ireland. The Book of Knowledge gives its dimensions as 33 miles lang and 12 miles wide, with a population of 55,200. In summer the population is multiplied as it is a popular holiday resort.

What's Ahead For Business?

There are important clues to what may well be the climate for business to be found in the talk by the Governor of the Bank of Canada to a Toronto audience, says Dalton Robertson in The Financial Post. If James E. Coyne has his way, these are the likelihoods: No big increase in the money supply and in the chartered banks' ability to expand credit. Coyne asserts that the banks have plenty of funds available for normal commercial trading. But the banks don't agree. They say they are relatively tight. For the commercial borrower caught in the middle of the liquidity argument — the banks wanting more to give them more room for manoeuvre and the central bank wanting to control credit growth closely — this probably portends a continuation of relative restraint on the credit front.

It appears unlikely that the consumer is going to be encouraged by the Bank of Canada anyway, into a borrow-and-spend frame of mind — even as a move to put more pep into the economy. Coyne says that the $800 million which consumers now owe to the banks is not an item "that some of us would regard with any high degree of approval."

Watch for a strong reaction from the chartered banks who are now deep in the installment business. They maintain that consumer credit is an accepted part of twentieth century living — and an essential support for the buying of consumer durables. This is another interbank row that could squeeze the consumer.

Antipodes From Greek

The name sometimes given to the lovely islands of New Zealand the Antipodes, is from the Greek words meaning "with the feet opposite". The Book of Knowledge explains that they are so-called because New Zealand is almost exactly half way round the world from the mother country.

Trading Stamps Threat To Canadian Economy, R.M.A. Asks For Federal Curbs

OTTAWA. — "Trading stamps, as we know them, are a threat to the economy of the country in that they increase the cost of food and household necessities", David A. Gilbert, National General Manager of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada, said in a brief presented today to Prime Minister Diefenbaker. The submission also asked the Prime Minister to give his personal attention to the Laws on Trading Stamps with a view to introducing legislation in Parliament to outlaw stamps.

The brief, signed by both Mr. Gilbert and Mr. Arnold Rands, General Manager of the National Foods Division of the R.M.A., described the trading stamp as a scheme for obtaining something for nothing; a kind of secondary currency which, if allowed to spread, may well have a pronounced effect on our monetary policy; a potent source of discrimination between large and small retailers. The Association submitted that it is the right and duty of the Federal Government to legislate so as to protect the public against these evils.

Pointing out that the present provisions of the Criminal Code are not effective against the present day Stamp operations, and that provincial authorities charged with enforcing the law are now faced with an impossible prosecution situation, the Association claimed that the public interest requires the Federal Government to take action to amend the Criminal Code so as to prohibit the use of trading stamps. The submission reviewed the history of trading stamp legislation and asserted that the stamp of today was essentially the same as the stamp which the enactment of 1905 was designed to prohibit. With the revision of the Criminal Code in 1954, certain changes in wording concerning stamps were made and to these changes may be attributed the imunity of stamp schemes today. The brief submitted, however, that whatever the reasons stamps schemes were able to operate, Parliament should clearly and definitely state the law to prohibit them.

Stamps are an unfair method of competition; susceptible of fraudulent practices; induce people to buy things they do not need; a form of compulsory selling; and, while costly to the consumer and merchant, make a large profit for the Stamp Company from unredeemed stamps; the brief said. It outlined lengthy arguments against stamps under the following headings: stamps are not a substitute for price reduction; stamps increase consumer prices; stamps lead to improvident buying and confusion of values; stamps are not a substitute for advertising; stamp schemes are parasitic; stamp schemes are discriminatory; they are a secondary form of currency.

Teatime Topics

The Christmas tree is down and the ornaments, lights and tinsel are put away for another year.

If you received a Christmas plant, it can be salvaged for next Christmas too.

The poinsetta thrives in a good light in a cool spot. The plants keep best in temperature in the mid-60s but if the temperature drops below 60, the leaves will turn yellow and drop off. Drafts and dry roots can give the same effect. Fertilizer is needed every two weeks.

If the plant is to be carried over for another year, horticulturists with Ontario's department give this advice. After flowering, place the plant in a cool location and let the soil dry out — but not too much. If the plant becomes too dry the stem will shrivel.

When the soil is somewhat dry, place the plant in a larger pot, water and put in a warmer room. You might cut the plant back slightly just before repotting it.

The Christmas cherry plant also is at its best in a good light and with the room temperature in the 60s. Excessive foliage will cover the berries so don't be too anxious to fertilize these plants.

To propagate, sow seeds from the plant either this month or next. They needn't be dried first. When the new leaves appear, transplant into flats with the plants two inches apart. As they progress, they may be placed in 2½-inch pots and kept in a room at 55-60 degrees.

When the danger of frost is past, move them into the garden. Set the plants 16 inches apart. Bring them back indoors the first autumn frost.

Cream of the Crop

Whipping cream is the magic formula for transforming the plainest dessert into a gourmet's delight, says the consumer section of Canada's agricultural department, but the experts advise against getting into the habit of buying cream "blind".

Read the label on the carton when buying cream. Provincial and municipal regulations determine the amount of butterfat in sweet cream but there are four general types.

Cereal cream, sometimes known as half and half, contains about 10 per cent butterfat. It's usually used on cereals and in coffee and tea.

Table cream varies from 15 to 30 per cent butterfat but in most markets it contains from 18 to 20 per cent. It's usually used on puddings or other desserts.

Coffee cream usually has the same richness as table cream — from 18 to 20 per cent butterfat.

Whipping cream is the richest of all and contains from 30 to 35 per cent butterfat.

To make the job of whipping easier, chill the cream, beaters and bowl first. To increase the volume and to decrease the whipping time, add sugar before the end of the whipping process.

For special occasions, color whipped cream with a few drops of food coloring, or try flavoring with flavor extract.

For a chocolate mint parfait, add green coloring and peppermint flavoring to whipped cream then alternate layers of chocolate pudding and tinted cream in a parfait glass.

There is considerable, although not obvious, difference between fruit juices and fruit drinks. And the Canadian Association of Consumers says housewives will get more for their dollar if they buy juices.

The words juice or drink on labels indicate a difference between a product that is less than 10 per cent fruit juice—with the balance sugar, acid and water—and a product that is 100 per cent juice.

Prices attract the homemaker, but the cheaper product has little more nutritive value than its equivalent volume in soda pop.

No Requirements Set

There is no vitamin content regulation for fruit drinks and the label "vitamin C added" easily dupes the buyer, says the CAC.

With apple juice, a minimum of 35 milligrams of ascorbic acid (vitamin C) per 100 millilitres is required by the Food and Drug Act. Usually, the drinks contain less than 20 milligrams and sometimes as little as eight.

Where an ordinary glass of vitaminized apple juice provides the daily requirements of vitamin C, a glass of a drink "with vitamin C added" leaves the customer short.

Confusing Carcus

The anatomy of the hog may cause some confusion for the inexperienced shopper. The loin of pork extends from the shoulder to the leg and because there are many different types of cuts, the consumer section of the federal agriculture department offers some helpful tips.

The loin is divided in three main sections—leg end, centre cut and rib end—which may be sold as roast or chops.

The leg end is the meatiest and contains most of the tenderloin and some back bone. The bone may be removed and replaced with a well-seasoned bread stuffing.

The most expensive and choicest is the centre cut. There is little or no tenderloin and the bone is T-shaped.

Roasts are cooked in a 325-degree oven, allowing 40 to 45 minutes a pound. The boneless roasts take 45 to 50 minutes a pound.

A Tasty Dish

Combine 1½ pounds minced pork ¾ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper, ¼ to ½ tsp. marjoram, sage or savory, 1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce, 1 egg, 2 tbsp. water and ½ cup finely chopped onion.

Shape into 12 patties, half an inch thick. Brown slightly in a little fat over moderate heat, about two minutes each side. Pour off excess fat and turn meat, cover and continue cooking slowly over low heat about 10 minutes each side.

Reclaimed Bogs Fine For Vegetable Crops

That's the word from the Canada Department of Agriculture whose scientists have been experimenting for some time with reclaimed peat bogs and marshlands at several Ontario and Quebec centers.

Their experiments carried out at Ste. Plaise and Ste. Clothilde de Chateauguay in Quebec and at Alfred Ont., prove that such lands, when properly drained and treated, are well suited for production of leafy and other types of vegetables.

It can take up to five years of hard work to restore peat bogs to the point where peak production is possible. But good crops of potatoes and onions can be raised in the first year after the land has been reclaimed.

Canada, according to the CDA has an estimated 500,000 square miles of organic soils in the form of marshlands, muck, peat and muskeg. Farmers across the country are showing more and more interest in reclamation of this land for agricultural purposes.

Only bogs that can be easily cleared and drained and are adaptable to mechanized truck farming should be reclaimed for growing crops. Care must be taken not to overdrain a bog.

Because most bogs are strongly acid, adequate liming must be carried out. Agricultural limestone is most commonly used for this purpose but hydrated lime can be used to correct soil acidity. The soil of a raw bog also contains a large amount of nitrogen unavailable to plants, and nitrogen therefore must be added the first two years at the rate of 100-150 pounds per acre.

Weeds are not a serious problem for the first few years after acid dome bogs have been reclaimed. But because plants grown on organic soils have heavy tender foliage, diseases must be carefully controlled.

An informative, illustrated book — entitled "Reclaiming Acid Dome Peat Bogs for Agricultural use" has been prepared by the Canada Department of Agriculture and is available free of charge. Farmers requiring additional information on the subject can receive a copy of the booklet by writing to the Information Division, Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Of Many Things

By AMBROSE HILLS

This morning I chatted with an elderly woman who has been doing social work all her life. She is one of the finest persons I have ever met, and I think she told me something that is of great value to everyone.

"Just about every person wanting help," she said, "would sit across from me and tell me of this problem or that one—unpaid rent, unsatisfactory job, illness, all sorts of immediate things to worry about.

"I used to listen to it all, but in the back of my mind I knew that none of those things was the key problem. I knew in my own heart that the person had a bigger trouble somewhere inside, and that if he or she would face it and solve it, the other things would look after themselves—even the health problem, believe it or not."

She went on to say that she had once heard William Faulkner talking to fellow authors. He told them, she recalled, that "the problem of the human heart in conflict with itself alone can make good writing because only that is worth writing about, worth the agony and the sweat."

She said that this struck her as being so very true. "I could have paid the rent for some of these unfortunates," she told me, "or even provided a better job, or obtained medical advice for them. But the thing I knew I had to do if my help was to be of any lasting value was to get across to them the fact that their first and most vital problem was within themselves. They needed to win some sort of inner fight in order to be real men or women with character and strength. Otherwise, all their days and years would go by with others having to straighten this or that out for them. But if they could win the inner struggle, it would not be too long before they would be standing on their own feet, helping others instead of needing help."

I have repeated what this social worker said as best I can. She is a woman who faced great personal problems herself and the fact that she licked them is apparent in her very carriage, the shine in her eyes, the assurance in her voice. She has made her own living and helped many others for a great part of her more than seventy years. She earns a good income today, and recently won a valuable award for her services in competition with hundreds of younger women.

We all have problems, no doubt, and they often seem to loom large. But each of us, if the inner struggle is won, can take the worst the world can offer and transform it into something fine.

The Paradox

It has always amazed me the way we take ideas from our enemies.

When Hitler and Mussolini were in power, we were so impressed with their so-called efficiency that we adopted a good many of their schemes. For example, our Canadian broadcasting system was based, to a great extent, on the German system. We have modified it, but the experts who studied the matter were so impressed with the German system that they would have had us adopt it completely had not the Canadian public rebelled.

In a similar way, we are now adopting or have already imported many of the early Russian techniques. And if some of the experts have their way, there will be more and more direction from the top down, and more and more of the nations' revenue going into the hands of governments. Ironically enough, the Russians have already found some of these techniques to be useless, and they are tossing them out and instituting Capitalist methods. They are paying their biggest rewards to the biggest producers, an no longer pay even lip service to the Marxist doctrine of from each according to his ability, to each according to his need. Today in Russia they see to it that he profits most who serves best.

It has been demonstrated again and again that profits mean jobs and yet we harp away on the evil of profit. Can a firm that makes no profit be a good employer? Of course not! But to listen to some of our public oracles, you would think that we'd have Utopia here it we could only force Canadian business to the wall.

Many problems in Canada have arisen from giving up the very principles which were most successful! From a policy of limited government, we have switched over to giving government more and more power. We pay old age pensions to millionaires, and unemployment insurance to preperous housewives and others who simply do not need it. We pay higher and higher wages to those who have jobs with the result that more and more Canadians are without jobs at all.

Isn't it time we told the government to get back to the proven practice of rewarding the jobmakers, of setting the people free, of urging self-reliance and individual productivity?

For Your Information

Milk should never be taken raw. Unpasteurized milk may carry the germs of undulant fever, bovine TB, septic sore throat and other serious diseases. If you are staying at a summer cottage or some place where pasteurized milk is not available do the job yourself. All you need is a double-boiler and a dairy thermometer. Probably a cooking thermometer would do just as well. Heat the milk in the double-boiler to about 145 degrees F. and then allow it to stand covered for 30 minutes, keeping the temperature around 145. Then cool as quickly as possible to 45 degrees.

A study of more than 250 boys and girls has revealed that a plump child generally grows faster and matures earlier than a slender child. A report by Stanly M. Garn, Ph. D., and Joan A. Haskell, B.A., Fels Research Institute, Ohio, said though body size in childhood is determined by a number of factors, including the size of the parents, accumulated fat is clearly related to size superiority during the growing period. Therefore, they concluded, an excess of calories in children is growth accelerating.

Government Printing Bureau Not The Answer

A BRIEF has been presented to Premier Jean Lesage, by the Montreal district Junior Chamber of Commerce, urging the establishment of a provincial department of public printing and stationery. This to be set up under a Queen's Printer of Quebec.

We could favor the appointment of a Queen's Printer and perhaps a secretary, or very small staff, but we cannot go along with a full printing bureau. Not because we are in the printing business, but because we know that such an undertaking would end up in a tremendous cost to the Quebec taxpayer and in the end not accomplished very much.

Some years ago, under a previous Liberal Government, there was such a department as we have mentioned, but the actual printing was done by the various printers throughout the Province of Quebec. The Dept. merely sent out the copy and instructions for the printing job to be done and checked the job all through and looked after the payment for same. This was of great help to the Provincial printers who were able to earn a few dollars thereby. If you are thinking that there was graft attached, then you are wrong. No, the printer could not charge whatever price he liked, or be a favorite with the Party in power, all were treated alike. How was this accomplished? The Queen's Printer Dept. had a booklet printed which covered all the charges and operations for the jobs which the printer would be called upon to do. When the job was completed, he would list his charges for the job according to those laid down in the Government booklet. Yes the charges allowed a profit, but no more than could be obtained from any other customer for a similar type of job. However, the printers were satisfied for it meant they were doing jobs that would otherwise be lost to them.

We believe this system would work very well and comply with the plan the Junior Chamber of Commerce has in mind, but be less costly as a whole to the Provincial taxpayer, which is just little 'ol you and me. The initial outlay for machinery alone for a government printery would run into millions, to say nothing of office equipment and staff. Our plan would use the existing equipment of the printers of the Province and only a very small staff would be needed to check on the sending and receiving of the orders when required. It would probably be found that the cost of the actual printing would be far less than if the Government maintained its own equipment. At the same time a number of printing shops could likely use more help and thus aid the present unemployment situation.

Public Speaking Contests

THE Woman's Institute has sponsored Public Speaking Contests in the schools in this area for a number of years, they now appear to be having good effect. On Friday evening, the finals were held in Huntingdon High School and the calibre of the contestants was quite good.

We are seeing now, those who started in the contests at an early stage and have had the benefit of several years of competition. They have perhaps been eliminated in early contests, or they may have won in their respective grades from time to time. All of this has been good training and has built up a confidence in ability, which is what the competition is supposed to do.

The type of speeches given on Friday evening, showed that contestants have given good thought to the subject and to the presentation, both of which tend to make it more interesting to the listeners. The judge, Mr. Brash, Supervisor for English, Protestant School Boards, remarked on the closeness of many of the contestants from winning higher recognition. He said only one point separated many of the contestants. He regarded the competition as excellent.

It became quite evident as the contestants reached the higher grades and chose harder subjects for their talks, that earlier training had meant much to them. They gave very intelligent talks on matters in which it might be said they would not be too interested in. It showed however, that they had studied their subject and formed their own conclusions.

Will We Have Another Korea?

EVENTS move swiftly and the scene of unrest has shifted from the Congo to Laos and is approching the critical stage. The trouble in the Congo is by no means settled, nor are the troubles in other areas settled. The Laos trouble sprang up in the midst of all the other troubles. It is more pressing because it involves Communistic influence and assistance to rebel forces. There has been a dangerous Communist infiltration in this area and the Western authorities are convinced now that it has gone far enough and presents a positive menace to the whole world.

A Cease Fire proposal was handed to Russia with a date for reply on Monday, March 27th. A crisis meeting has been held by U.S. and U.K. Leaders, who were responsible for the notes to Russia. It was believed there was good chance of Russia giving assent to the proposals and if that is the case, then the danger will have passed for the moment at least. Both the U.K. and the U.S. have obligations with regard to Laos under the SEATO agreement. Both these parties want peace restored and for Laos to be a neutral zone under protection of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

There are grave feelings however, that Laos may be another Korea and the nations are making preparations for such an event if an unfavorable reply is received.

This is the first "get tough" action that President Kennedy has conceded since his inauguration. It is part of the policy he stated when on his election campaign and since his coming to the Presidency. The incident was sparked by the crossing into Laos from North Viet Nam of Communist Troops. They joined Laotian rebels in a fight against the Royal Army. The Communists already have a considerable holding in North Viet Nam and have been making gains.

The word is that it is hoped settlement will be reached by political negotiation and that the use of force will not be needed. While the use of force is shrouded in the reports, there are signs that movement of troops and other war material has been ordered and said to be on its way to strategic points in the Laos area. It would seem that if the situation warrants, that force will be used to protect Laos from being invaded.

By studying a map of the area it is not hard to see the danger of allowing the Communists to gain a stronghold. It would be another distinct threat to the safety of the world against Communist domination. While we do not want war of any kind, we cannot stand by in a sort of passive resistance while we see countries being gradually eaten up by the Communist monster. If we do this it will be too late to stop the thrust that is in the making. If we look again at the map we can see that we are slowly being encircled by a giant pincers. It is taking time, but as we have pointed out many times, that is what the Communists have a lot of if they are to achieve their aims. Russia does not want war, she is doing very well without. We must be prepared to make counter moves if we are to prevent the bloodless victory for Communism.

The Week In Quebec

Quebec (CP) The Provincial Legislative Assembly adjourned for the Easter holidays this week, after finally adopting the controversial bill revising the Quebec liquor act which dates back to the 1920s. Vote on the bill was 42 to 27.

The bill will go to the Legislative Council — Provincial Upper House — when the Council reconvenes April 12.

Among the main provisions of the bill is the creation of a five-man liquor board to replace the old Quebec Liquor Commission and to hold public hearings when objections are made to the issuing of liquor-selling permits.

All liquor-selling establishments are granted longer selling hours under the bill. Approved hotels and motels will be able to serve liquor by the glass in rooms.

Two opposition-moved amendments were defeated 42 to 23 and 42 to 27.

Opposition Leader Antonio Talbot proposed that the bill be amended "to assure the respect of Sundays." The bill now authorizes nightclubs to sell liquor between 6 p.m. and midnight on Sundays and Holidays in Montreal and Quebec city.

Daniel Johnson (UN-Bagot) moved that the bill be amended to restrict the number of liquor-selling permits in rural areas.

Attorney-General Georges Lapalme replied that he has tried to draw up a liquor act that can be enforced. The present liquor act, tailored for the 1920s, has engendered contempt for the law, he said.

Mr. Lapalme said the liquor board will issue just enough permits to meet the public interest.

Royal assent was given to nine government bills, 33 private bills and two subsidies bills, making them law.

Among the government bills sanctioned were bills creating two new government departments — cultural affairs and federal-provincial affairs — and a bill authorizing the creation of a royal commission into education.

The two new departments are among four created this session. Also established were a Department of Natural Resources and a Department of Revenue.

Premier Lesage told reporters after adjournment that new Cabinet Ministers will be appointed and sworn in next week. He did not say how many new ministers will be named.

There now are 16 ministers.

A decision of the Quebec district taxation office to check receipts for charitable donations issued by parish priests to their parishioners stirred up a storm of protest.

Labor groups, business and patriotic organizations issued strongly-worded statements condemning the federal investigations after some parish priests refused to co-operate with the two-man inspection teams.

"Our books are open to the investigators," the priests said in a letter, "but we do not intend to waste entire days going over them with the inspectors."

We are ministers of religion, not civil servants."

Premier Lesage said in the legislature he has told Provincial Tax Officials to accept "with confidence" the charity receipts filed by taxpayers.

Meanwhile François De Couonval, Director of the Quebec District Federal Taxation Office, said on his return from Ottawa "nothing has changed and nothing will change" in the office's methods of verifying tax receipts.

Some 400 delegates from the Quebec Federation of Roman Catholic School Boards presented a brief to the government asking that a two-per-cent sales tax be levied everywhere in Quebec province.

The Federation, which has advocated the move since 1951, said 378 of the province's school boards levy a sales tax in their districts, 268 collecting two per cent and the remainder one per cent.

Spreading the tax across the province would realize an estimated $70,000,000 annually. The sales tax brought in $32,804,000 in the 1958-59 school year.

Premier Lesage asked Federation President Paul Desrochers to poll the opinion of boards who do not levy the tax.

The Premier said it would help the government to decide if the boards who do not levy the tax were to pass a resolution favoring it in their areas.

Attention Is Centred On Jungle Kingdom Of Laos

Everyone, it seems, is more concerned about the fighting in the jungle kindgom of Laos than the easy-going Loation people.

At week's end there were these developments in the world's capitals:

Radio Moscow agreed that the situation was growing more serious daily but the Russians apparently made no move to stop furnishing supplies to the pro-Communist rebels in Northern Laos.

President Kennedy in Washington warned the Soviet Union to call off military attacks and said the U.S. was obliged by the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization to deal with aggression in Laos and "no one should doubt our resolution on this point."

Mr. Kennedy's tough stand got little firm support in Paris and London but Prime Minister Macmillan asked Russia to agree that if a cease-fire is arranged, Prime Minister Nehru of India would be asked to reconvene a control commission to police the truce. Canada and Poland also are members of the commission and Prime Minister Diefenbaker reiterated Canada's willingness to take part.

"Urgent" Attention

The Soviet government promised "serious and urgent" consideration. But observers feel that Moscow, and probably Peking, are determined to exploit the situation to the limit. They apparently want to keep the Laotian pot boiling as long as possible by backing and supplying the Pathet Lao forces.

Premier Khrushchev seems to have concluded that he has little to lose and a great deal to gain from this course. If the Pathet Lao are victorious, the Communists would gain control of a land mass that could be used to exert pressure on neighboring neutral or pro-Western countries such as Thailand, Cambodia and South Viet Nam.

This situation made the Laotian crisis the major item on the agenda of the SEATO conference which opened in Bangkok Monday.

Nehru, asked by Mr. Kennedy to use his prestige and influence with Moscow to achieve a Laotian cease-fire, sent word to the president that he will do all he can.

Rugged Country

Lack of French and British enthusiasm for the U.S. proposal to use force in Laos apparently centres around the belief of military experts that there could be no quick or easy victory for anti-Communist forces in the rugged landlocked Southeast Asian kingdom.

Treacherous swamps and jungle in the South and soaring peaks and precipitous mountain trails in the north provided ideal terrain for hit-and-run guerrilla warfare such as the pro-Communist rebels have been waging there for the last 10 years.

U.S. forces would have to fight on Laotion terms, packing weapons and rations on their backs because the terrain in most places is too rugged to haul anything bigger. There are few roads in Laos.

And most European observers believe the U.S. could not rely on the easy-going, fun-loving Laotian people to fight any determined anti-Communist war for them. It is not, they say, a matter of military equipment but of basic human attitudes.

Not Warlike

Laotians, from farmers to cabinet ministers to generals, have never been a warlike race. They have had 10 years of war and, though most of them treat it as a sport rather than a life-and death struggle, they want no more of it.

At the height of the current crisis the Laotions showed they are more interested in fun and games than war when the rebel-threatened administrative capital of Vietiane became a fairyland of fireworks, colored lights and elaborate neon-lit floats happily poking fun at weapons of war.

On the other hand, the pro-Communist Pathet Lao are a different breed, trained and directed by dedicated Communist officials.

Boy Kidnapped

Tommy McNevin, 10, was just about to leave his Belleville, Ont., home for a hockey game when the telephone rang. Who he talked with is not known, but two hours later his father, Donald, was told over the telephone: "If you want to see your boy again, follow instructions closely."

The instructions concerned a nearby newspaper box which contained a note demanding $25,000 in small bills of the creamery owner who was described as not especially wealthy.

Then, the following morning, Tommy's cub scout leader, Warren Williamson, called at the McNevins' and said he had found kidnap notes designating him as the "delivery man" to receive the money and return the boy.

Williamson was questioned by police and four hours later was found dead from a blast from his own shotgun.

Tommy's body was discovered the following day. He had been tied to a tree and died of exposure after being knocked unconscious. Crown Attorney John Pringle said he didn't believe Williamson's story about being an intermediary when he first told it "and I don't believe him now."

Fatal Formula

A solution of boracic acid, apparently poured into a jug marked "distilled water," was taken to the formula room at the Grey Nuns Hospital in Regina. There, all the formulas for all the infants in the hospital are prepared.

Sister Superior Fortier said it appeared seven or eight babies out of 22 being fed by bottle received a formula made with the boracic acid. Five died.

Spies Sentenced

Five Soviet spies were sentenced in London to 15-25 years in prison.

Gordon Lonsdale, said to be a member of the Soviet intelligence service and the "directing mind" of the ring, was given the heaviest sentence. An American man and wife, Morris and Lorna Cohen of New York, received 20 years each and Hugh Houghton and his fiancee, Ethel Gee, both British civil servants, got 15 years each.

Ancient Roman's First Again, They Started Easter Parade

Despite the claims of New Yorkers, the Easter Parade did not originate on Manhattan's Fifth Avenue but — of all places — in ancient Rome.

That's the word from a gal who should know. She is Diane Burnley, curator of the Coutts Hallmark Historical Collection, and part of her job is to keep track of the origins of various occasions.

"Of course, the Romans at first did not celebrate Easter as such," she explained. "It was their New Year, and they made it a time for gay new clothes and elaborate ceremonies."

The Romans felt that new clothes on the day we now observe as Easter brought the wearer good luck all the following year, said Miss Burnley. It wasn't long before the custom spread to other parts of Europe and eventually to the New World.

While this practice has stayed with us, others — also once popular — have passed from the scene. And, said Miss Burnley, "We probably wouldn't want them back."

She cited these examples:

In 13th century England, "lifting" was all the rage. This represented Christ being "lifted" through Resurrection. A chair decorated with streamers or ribbons and lined with silk or satin was carried the first day by the young men. Each girl they met had to sit in it while the men lifted her as high as they could. Next day, it was the girls' turn to lift the men. This practice was abandoned after too many of those being elevated hit the ground with unexpected suddenness.

In the year 1400, a free shave for the church goers in the church yard proved a big hit, and the custom continued well into the 19th century. Just why it ceased isn't too clear, but it may have had something to do with bloodletting going out of fashion.

The small fry too had their ways of celebrating Easter. Boys would seize little girls shoes or at least the buckles; the girls would snatch off the boys' caps. Lost possessions were redeemed by making a small payment.

"One custom that is still very much a part of Easter is that of sending greeting cards," said the curator. "Just where the Easter card originated is not known; some historians think Germany, while others say the U.S. The earliest card I know of is one from 1867.

Despite the great changes during the past century in virtually everything produced by man, modern Easter cards are not strikingly different from those of the 1800's, noted the curator.

The Week At Ottawa

OTTAWA, (CP) One bright spot was dabbed onto the Canadian economic picture this week by Opposition Leader Lester B. Pearson.

But it had trouble shining through the drab strokes applied by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Mr. Pearson told the Commons there is a chance the recession may be over by the end of the year.

"It may well be that in the second and third quarter we will get out of the trough of this depression in the summer and will begin to move up in the Autumn."

The DBS strokes were grimmer:

Canada's unemployment rose to a postwar record of 719,000 in mid-February, the bureau reported. One of every nine persons in the labor force of 6,363,000 was out of a job.

Figure "Average"

A joint report by the bureau and the labor department said the 26,000 increase in unemployment between January and February was "about average for this time of year." But this didn't make government critics, including Mr. Pearson, labor leaders or the unemployed, any happier.

Mr. Pearson said that if things did brighten this summer no credit would be due to the government. The government, he said, didn't recognize there was a recession.

He tackled the government especially on its attitude towards the so-called depressed areas of the country where unemployment was highest. The government's attitude simply was "to deny their existence."

A government system of determining chronic unemployment areas and then allowing industries in these areas double depreciation was "ludicrously inadequate, confused and restrictive."

He called for a federal area rehabilitation agency to work with the provinces and local authorities in an over-all plan of economic aid to depressed areas. And he urged a flexible fiscal policy, including capital grants for development, tax incentives for distressed areas, special public and winter works projects, easier credit facilities, special vocation training and special urban renewal measures for blighted areas.

Labor Minister Starr said he had few inquiries about the plan for helping depressed areas, indicating that "not too many areas regard themselves as depressed." The onus for declaring themselves depressed should not be on the individual areas, said Mr. Pearson.

Urges Controls

CCF Leader Argue turned to the wartime Liberal government for a solution to the unemployment situation.

He called for price controls and suggested the government expand the money supply, increase purchasing power and promote Canadian investment in resources.

Finance Minister Fleming cautioned that price controls could not be enforced without wage controls. Mr. Argue said he was aware that non-arbitrary wage controls flow naturally from price controls.

Both CCF and Liberal members demanded that James Coyne, governor of the Bank of Canada, be brought before a Commons committee to answer questions on statements he has been making about Canada's economic situation.

The governor and the government showed a "shocking lack of coordination," said Mr. Pearson. He said Mr. Coyne indicated in his annual report that there were answers to the unemployment problem. He should be asked to elaborate before a Commons committee.

Labor Minister Starr announced that the municipal winter works incentive program is being extended another month to the end of May. He said extension of the program, which began Oct. 15, six weeks earlier than in previous winters, was made at the request of municipalities. The program had topped government expectations.

He said the program had provided work for more than 105,000 persons on actual winter works projects and another 105,000 indirectly. Total value of the works already approved is estimated at $259,520,713.

Council Meets

Canada's national productivity council, 24 men and one woman given the task of helping to revitalize Canadian industry, held its first meeting this week.

The closed meeting named a steering committee which is to hold further meetings in Ottawa within the next few weeks.

Increased employment prospects, if not survival, looked brighter for one industry at week's end.

The hard-pressed uranium industry learned it had a $240,000,000 nest egg, some four years in the hatching.

W. M. Gilchrist, president of the crown-owned Elorado Mining and Refining Limited, said that the agency had signed a contract with Britain March 29, 1957, to supply 24,000,000 pounds of Canadian uranium between March 31, 1963, and Dec. 31, 1966.

The first public announcement of the contract, signed by the former Liberal administration, caused a stir in the industry.

Asked why it was not made sooner, Mr. Gilchrist said:

"It was thought prudent not to make any announcement until the situation in 1963 became clearer."

Hemmingford Chamber of Co Hears Speaker on Town Planni

On Monday evening, March 13th, in the Lounge of the Frontier Inn, members of the Hemmingford Chamber of Commerce were pleased to welcome as their guest speaker Mr. Burroughs Pelletier, Director of the Provincial Bureau of Town Planning. Invited by President Charles Barr to introduce the Speaker, Mr. Alister Somerville, M.P.P. gave members a brief outline of Mr. Pelletier's career which followed his graduation from McGill University in 1918 with a degree in Civil Engineering.

In 1944, he was appointed to his present post as Director of the Provincial Bureau of Town Planning. Mr. Pelletier is a member of the Town Planning Institute of Canada.

It would be difficult, said Mr. Somerville, to find anyone more conversant with the growth of the small towns and villages of Quebec than Mr. Pelletier, or one who, after viewing the district, would be better able to advise as to the future possible lay-out and zoning. The Councils of Hemmingford and the Township, the members of the Chamber of Commerce and indeed all serious-minded citizens were looking forward to the future expansion of this village and municipality and wished to be as sure as possible that the steps they might be taking in the near future would be the right ones. So it was with the greatest pleasure that he presented to them an expert in these matters, Mr. Burroughs Pelletier.

Having a perfect command of both languages, Mr. Pelletier spoke alternately in French and English. His main topic was, planning for the future. He spoke of the evils which in the past have been perpetuated in many districts by the lack of foresight on the part of city fathers. He cited instances where considerable sums of money have been spent on the erection of pleasant homes in agreeable surroundings, the values of which were considerably depreciated when, perhaps, a factory or other building not in keeping with the surroundings was erected nearby. In some instances, said Mr. Pelletier, the owners ,whose services would have been of much use in the community, have moved right away, thus constituting a double loss. For any community interested in expansion the first step, said Mr. Pelletier, should be the passing of good zoning by-laws. These would uphold real-estate values and were of primary importance because on these values rests the taxes. Even with good zoning laws there would be many border-line cases, but these laws would provide a foundation on which to build and would give firms, who might be interested in settling here, an indication of the future development of the district. Mr. Pelletier cited the instance of a firm of medical suppliers, who for several years have been established in a nearby district. Before they decided on their present location, they viewed another very suitable area, but it was not zoned as their present site was. The lack of interest in the matter of zoning displayed by the other Council was sufficient to swing the decision in favour of the Municipality whose far-sighted Council had zoned the entire area and could therefore lay a clear-cut plan of future growth before the prospective buyer. Municipal Councils must, said Mr. Pelletier, sometimes act as father of the family does. When little Billy comes home from school with complaints against this one or that, and a fierce determination never to go to school again, Father (or Mother) investigates the complaint but the following day or the next, little Billy is sent back to school. A decision against the child's wishes but taken for his ultimate good.

Zoning was simply a matter of putting ones' house in order, said Mr. Pelletier, and asked members what they would think of a man with a family who deliberately tore down all the interior walls of his house so that the bathroom, the kichen, the living-room and the bedroom were all exposed in one large room, with no privacy for any member of the family. Humourously visualizing the chaotic result, Mr. Pelletier pointed out that the decent separation of rooms for specific purposes was a form of zoning and that is what a Council does when it passes good zoning by-laws. It takes all things into consideration, previous buildings, prevailing winds, texture of soil and decides which areas should be considered residential, which should be industrial and which should be left as agricultural. An example of good zoning was the case of the farmer who wished to sell part of his land (agricultural zoning) for the erection of a factory, a fertilizer plant. Although the site seemed ideal, a distance from the town, on investigation it was discovered that the prevailing winds would carry the strong, unpleasant odours from the plant continuously over the town and the permit had, therefore, to be denied. But, said Mr. Pelletier, had the factory been manufacturing a non-oderous article, then the permit would have been granted. Then there was the case of the pretty little village with no zoning by-laws where an operator built a small glue factory right opposite the Church. The resulting odour in both Church and Presbytery could easily be imagined. Council immediately zoned the whole district and no second factory was built but the new laws could do nothing about the odour from the first, which continued.

Mr. Pelletier had been met in Montreal by Mr. Harry Warner and motored down to Hemmingford in the early afternoon where he had been received, in the absence of Mayor Fortin, by Pro-Mayor Mr. Walter Smith and taken on a tour of the village and its environs. He had also been given the opportunity of studying the by-laws already enacted by the village council. There were also some excellent clauses among them, he said, but there were also some which appeared to clash. If the Municipality of the Township decided to go ahead with the zoning of the district they would, no doubt, profit from the mistakes made in the past, said Mr. Pelletier, and he was sure the two Councils would be able to draw up sets of zoning by-laws which would ensure the future growth of the Village and Township in a manner which would be pleasing and acceptable to future generations. One last word of caution he would leave with them, the best of laws are not worth the paper they are written on if they are not strictly observed.

Following his talk, Mr. Pelletier answered many questions put by members. One of his answers was to the effect that he and his Staff would be pleased to come to Hemmingford to assist with the drawing-up of a zoning plan and the necessary by-laws and for this help there would be no charge.

Mr. Walter Smith expressed the feelings of all present when, in thanking Mr. Pelletier, he said that his very able presentation of such a vitally interesting topic was so keenly enjoyed that all wished his talk could have been extended. Perhaps, Mr. Smith said, members might again have the pleasure of a visit at some future date. Following the adjournment of the meeting Mr. Pelletier enjoyed a Buffet Supper with the members.

HEMMINGFORD TOWNSHIP COUNCIL MEETING.

The meeting of the Township Council was held in the Town Hall, on Monday, March 20th, Mayor Alister Somerville presiding. All Councillors were present with the exception of Councillor F. Dauphinais. Following the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting by the newly-appointed Secretary, Mr. Conrad Priese, and discussion of business arising therefrom, Fire-Chief Harry Warner, who was accompanied by Brigade Engineer Gaetan Fortin and First Lieutenant Jean Laberge, asked Council for a clarification of the duties expected by the Council, from the Fire Brigade. For the benefit of the newly elected Councillors and the Tax-payers, the Mayor asked the Secretary to read the resolution passed at the November, 1958, meeting, which dealt with this question. By this resolution the Brigade will answer all calls whether they be from the village or country and it is left to the discretion of the Fire-Chief whether and for how long the fire is to be fought. The Secretary affirmed that as far as he could discover there had been no motion made to rescind this resolution, therefore it was still in force. The Mayor and all Councillors expressed their entire satisfaction with the splendid work done by the men of this volunteer Fire Brigade.

Mr. Gaetan Fortin, on behalf of the Hemmingford Athletic Association, asked if Council would consider making a grant towards the Association Funds. He reported an excellent season of winter sports. The ice-rinks had been kept in splendid condition for 13 weeks, almost a record,but this had, of course, entailed extra expenditure. On the motion of Councillor Derrick and Councillor Beatty it was agreed to contribute the sum of $50 to the Association Funds. Mayor Somerville noted with approval the fine work done by the Association members in the formation of the Minor Hockey League and the large number of boys actively participating. The appointment of Assessors for the municipality was, after some discussion, postponed until the April meeting. Councillor Paré moved, Councillor White seconded the appointment of Mr. Harvey Duquette as Municipal Inspector for 1961-62. On the motion of Councillors Poissant and Beatty Mr. Leonard Houle was appointed Pound Keeper for Covey Hill and Mr. Arthur Robinson for Barrington.

A discussion arose concerning the upkeep of the roads this past winter. All Councillors reported many complaints over the lack of sand on Route 52 and the Hemmingford Border — Sherrington Highway, all other roads in the Municipality were well-sanded, during the several weeks of icy surfaces. It was pointed out that the two aforementioned roads were the responsibility of the Government now and not the municipality. Mention was made of several culverts crossing the Covey Hill road which had been repaired last fall but not black-topped. These had now washed out and constituted a serious traffic hazard. There were also the usual large surface holes and 'bumps' on many roads in the district, none of which were marked with either flags or signs. It was resolved that the Minister of Roads be advised regarding the poor sanding of Route 52 and the Hemmingford-Laprairie Highway during the past winter and that a copy of this resolution be sent to Mr. G. L. Lecavalier, Chief Engineer of Roads, Ormstown. A second resolution was passed to the effect that Mr. G. L. Lecavalier be requested to have the culverts on Robson Street, Quest Road, Fisher Street and other roads in the municipality filled immediately and that these roads be kept in good condition. Councillors White and Poissant moved and seconded both resolutions. The following bills were passed for payment : — Auditor Mr. W. F. Welch $125, Mr. R. Fisher and assistant, cutting tree and removing from across Fisher Street $10, Wilson & Lafleur for Municipal Codes $67.70, Huntingdon Gleaner $3.60. The Secretary was asked to write to Shawinigan Water and Power Co. and to Social Services, Valleyfield for clarification of outstanding bills. Bills for sand and calcium were laid on the table until the next meeting. The Mayor and Secretary-Treasurer were authorized to sign the convention presented by the Minister of Roads for the upkeep during the winter months of Route 52 and the Hemmingford-Laprairie Highway amounting to the sum of $5616.08. The auditors transfer of accounts from the previous Secretary--Treasurer to the present holder of that position was read by the Secretary and the various points arising were discussed. It was moved end seconded by Councillors Paré and Beatty that the financial statement for year-ending December, 1960, should be printed in the near future and a copy sent to each Tax-payer together with a statement of taxes due and arrears, if any.

Three Pleasant Surprises

On Friday morning, February 24th, Mrs. W. F. Orr, who is staying with her daughter, Mrs. A. Trotter of Dorval, opened the door to greet a number of friends from Hemmingford. Mrs. H. A. D. Somerville, Mrs. R. Williams, Mrs. R. Hayden, Miss G. Spearman and Mrs. D. Orr had motored to Dorval to visit Mrs. Orr on the occasion of her birthday. Following a pleasant luncheon party Mrs. Williams, on behalf of herself and the other ladies, presented Mrs. Orr with a gaily wrapped parcel which, when unwrapped disclosed, an elegant umbrella. Mrs. Orr was very touched by the kindness of her friends in remembering her birthday and journeying to Montreal to make her day a pleasant one and leaving behind pleasant memories to cherish.

On Tuesday, March 7th, Mrs. Walter Keddy was busy packing for a little holiday when two friends casually dropped in during the evening and after a little manoeuvering one of them, Mrs. R. Williams, persuaded Helen to go back with her to her house. Mrs. Keddy was astounded, on entering the house, to find about a dozen guests and a birthday cake all waiting for the party to begin. Lovely surprise.

Then on Tuesday, March 21st, some nine or ten ladies arrived at the house of Mrs. Pat Simpson and announced to the surprised Mrs. Simpson that they had come for the afternoon. As they had brought the 'makings' for an enjoyable birthday party a good time was had by all. Mrs. Simpson was delighted with the visit and says she will certainly remember this birthday.

Athelstan

ATHELSTAN — The Southern Division groups of the Woman's Missionary Society and Woman's Association met jointly for their March meeting on Wednesday evening last at the home of Mrs. T. J. Graham, with a good attendance. The Presidents of these groups each conducted their own programmes. The Worship Service was presented by four members the topic being "Voices from Abroad" The Christian Stewardship Secretary gave an excellent item on this Department.

The Easter Thank Offering meeting is to be held in April at the home of Mrs. Dawson. The Roll Call responses were verse of Hymns. The Study for the day was an interesting one, written by a Missionary, now home on furlough from India. Rev. Norman MacKenzie, who also had served in China at an earlier period. This Study entitled "The Modern Church At Work in the World", was also presented by other members under these headings:— 1. "Future Intertwined"; 2. "Church Aware of Trends"; 3. "Brothers Come to Serve". Rev. MacKenzie stated that the first thing one notices in the Orient and Africa today is that the great masses of people in these growing parts of the world are not contented but are extremely restless; they are in revolt against the past and the present and are looking for a new way of life. Thus a challenge confronts not only Christians across the seas, but each one of us in Canada.

The singing of a hymn closed this part of the meeting which was followed by the woman's Association programme. Poems and items on Easter were given in answer to the Roll Call. Some finished articles of work were on display. Work for the months ahead was discussed. The Mispah was repeated in closing, followed by the playing of a guessing game. Mrs. Dawson and Mrs. Graham, the hostesses for this meeting, served delicious refreshments at the close of the evening.

Easter Thank Offering Meeting

The Easter Thank Offering meeting of the Presbyterian Woman's Missionary Society was held on Thursday afternon, at the home of Mrs. Garnet Green. The Call to Worship was given by Mrs. McIntyre. An Easter hymn and prayer was given. Mrs. Grant gave the Easter story as contained in St. Matthew's gospel.

Their was a splendid attendance of members and invited guests present. A Scripture verse containing the word "Hope" was the Roll Call response. The guest speaker was Mrs. Stanley Ruddock of Huntingdon, who gave a splendid address in keeping with the Lenten and Easter seasons. A vote of thanks was tendered the speaker by Miss Emily Kimball. A social hour followed when the hostess served delicious refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Rabidoux and children were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. DeBanks, in Montreal South.

A politician said the other day that he was always ready to tackle a male heckler at a meeting, but the women weren't so easy to silence. True to their sex, they manage to have the last word.

But The London American tells the story of the U.S. politician who administered what they call "the perfect squelch."

After a woman had been shouting at him for some time he fixed his gaze upon her. "I remember you," he said. "You were at one of my meetings six years ago. I don't know your name, but I remember your dress!"

PRUNING

Ottawa, — Although it may be more profitable to severely prune and head back mature McIntosh apple trees, the job should not be undertaken unless there is promise of heavy bloom.

This warning comes from W. M. Rutherford, of the Canada Department of Agriculture's experimental farm at Smithfield, Ont., who has been experimenting with McIntosh apple trees since 1954.

Severely pruned trees he states, yield about three bushels less per year than lightly pruned ones. This loss, however, is more than compensated for by improved fruit size and color.

Reduced costs of spraying and harvesting, coupled with higher prices for better quality fruit, make severe pruning worth while.

But care should be taken to permit sucker growth for new fruiting wood. Tree heights should be reduced to about 15 feet to force low sucker growth. It is essential, Mr. Rutherford believes, to leave only those suckers that develop low on the main limbs or the trees soon will be much higher than the recommended 15 feet.

Fertilizer applications should be reduced by a third after pruning to maintain foliage at a satisfactory nutrient level.

CANADA GETTING WARMER

Canada, a big part of it anyway, is getting warmer, writes Terence Robertson in The Financial Post. We're not exactly ready to grow bananas yet, but the trends show plainly.

The East has been getting steadily warmer, and even the North shows the same upward temperature trend. The West has been getting colder by the year (although now it seems to be getting a little warmer).

Morley K. Thomas, Department of Transport climatologist says: "An average annual temperature for the country as a whole has shown a definite upward trend during the past 100 years. Canada is now in the region of 3 deg. to 4 deg. warmer all year round than it was in the mid-1800s".

Work Proceeding In Opening Up Chateauguay River

The amphibious jeep mentioned in our last edition arrived, but proved totally inadequate to the task required of it, and has since returned from whence it came.

However, Mr. Henri St. Marie and his crew appear to be making considerable headway.

Last Wednesday, a mild and sunny day, brought out the sidewalk superintendents. The river bank was lined with spectators, some afoot, others in cars, evidently hoping to see the publicized jeep ice breaker in action, but the only action discernable was the sawing and blasting by Mr. St. Marie and his crew.

Tuesday, March 28th, after a spell of very favorable weather the channel is now open up to and beyond the railway bridge to a point opposite Staton Ave.

Good progress is still being made in ice which in the present location is 30" thick and more.

Mr. St. Marie notified your reporter that he intends to open a further 2/300 yards of channel but at this time he would not estimate when he expects the ice to move, everything depends on the weather.

When the ice does move the danger point appears to be at the new bridge below the railway bridge. The river here is both shallow and narrow.

Heights Take Laurels In Play-Off Finals

By Mildred McCutcheon

After several weeks of waiting for indoor ice The Chateauguay District Minor Hockey Organization finally completed their play-off finals in the Verdun Auditorium last Friday evening.

In the first game the Rangers from Chateauguay Heights, League Champs, faced off against West End for the Pee Wee playoff title. Rangers came through with a decisive 5-0 win. Brian Alberts was the big gun for the Rangers with 3 goals. Steve Bossart was also in for his share of honor with 1 goal and 2 assists. Ian Emberly scored with Derek Butt assisting. Terry Yarnell came up with a pair of assists.

The first period was a scoreless one, with both teams finding the ice surface very fast and large. It wasn't until the sixth minute mark of the second period that Brian Alberts opened up the scoring, taking a pass from Steve Bosshart and lifted the puck into the right hand corner of the net. Dan Emberly made it 2-0 for Rangers on a pass from Derek Butt to end the second period. Alberts, Bosshart and Alberts again finished off the scoring in the third period. Scotty Cushing, Barry Pingell and Ron McIntosh, played an outstanding game for West End. Both teams played well and each player deserves credit for their fine effort.

In the second game of the evening Red Wings also from Chateauguay Heights, who won the League Championship in the Bantam Section, played off against Prudential Warriors. Red Wings came through with a 6-2 win, to take the play-off title. At the 2 minute mark, Michael Dettmar got the Red Wings off to a flying start with a goal, assisted by David Grant. Charley Baronowski came through with the second goal on a pass from Mark Lauser making it 2-0 for Red Wings to end first period. Willie Nitoff opened up the scoring in the second period, making it 3-0 for Red Wings, scoring unassisted. Barenowski combined with Dettmar to make it 4-0. Prudential got on the score sheet at the 12 minute mark. J. Bouthillier scoring on a pass from G. Theoret to complete the scoring for the second period. The third period saw Mark Hauser and Danny Rose score for the Heights and J. Bouthillier notch his second, unassisted, for Prudential. R. Johnston, R. Thibodeau, G. Theoret and J. Bouthillier were outstanding for Prudential. Both teams played hard fought hockey throughout. Roy Vetland and John Dempter did a fine job officiating both games. Many thanks to all those who gave up their time to attend these games and helped in transporting the players.

A Father and Son Banquet will be held on Friday, April 14 for all the boys who played in both leagues. With the full support of all the parents the league directors intend to present each boy with a trophy for his interest in the sport and also to encourage these youngsters to participate in future sports. It is the heart-felt wish of the board that this evening be a great success, and that can only be acomplished by the full support of each parent. Hope to see you all at the Banquet.

Heights Plan Spring Art Exhibition

(By Mildred McCutcheon)

Preparations are now under way to organize the 5th Spring Art Exhicition which is being planned for Sunday, April 30th at The Heights Recreation Club on Carlyle Avenue, Chateauguay Heights. Entries will be accepted from residents of Chateauguay and neighbouring districts whether they be amateur or professional. In previous shows which have been very successful, prizes have been awarded to those receiving the greatest number of votes from the people attending the show, or by "the popularity method". However, due to the increase in the number of artists and students in the area who are now doing "original" work, it has been decided to have entries of original drawings or paintings judged professionnally. Tentative arrangements have been made to obtain the services of two professional artists who are fully qualified to act in this capacity. Further details will be forthcoming later.

It is interesting to note that the Art Group of The Heights Recreation Club evolved from a small private enterprise begun some years ago by Mr. W. Hovermann, at that time a resident of Chateauguay North. The first meeting was held in the Town Hall at Chateauguay Basin and the first class ended up with the score even — one teacher, one student. The name of that pioneer is Gerry Sullivan. The class met at Mr. Hovermann's residence from then on as the rent was cheaper. Art being contagious, more people were bitten by the bug and the numbers increased. To name a few, Herb. Murphy, Bev. Barclay, Molly Bartram, Evelyn Retallack, Mattie Lepine, Marion McGregor, Helen Morrison and others soon joined in. When Mr. Hovermann moved away from Chateauguay, the group were left homeless orphans during the inactive period in the summer. At this point Bob Fair and others in the group undertook to organize the continuation of art classes in the Heights. The board of Management of The Heights Recreation Club provided the "home" by making the Clubhouse available and Mr. Hovermann agreed to continue his work of teaching. The group then took the name "Art Group of The Heights Recreation Club" and were back in business on Thursday evenings, October to April.

Mr. Hovermann, come blizzard or high water, appears on schedule to show the students the light — and of course the shade. The present active members of the group are Mrs. R. Craik, Mrs. E. Faber, R. G. Fair, Mrs. W. A. Gay, Mrs. Reg. Holmes, Mrs. Fred Hulme, Willard Kilgour, Mrs. J. Leahy, W. D. May, Mrs. R. Mosher, Mrs. W. Hovermann, Mrs. M. Payne, Mrs. J. D. Poland and Mrs. H. F. Tietgen. New members are welcome and may call Bob Fair for information.

During the past few years additional groups have been formed in other areas such as the Valleyfield Beaux Art Club and the Woodlands Recreation Club Art Group. The local group sponsoring this exhibition hope to encourage a healthy growth in this very interesting hobby. And let's face it — it's work, but very pleasant work. Keep the date open, Sunday afternoon, April 30, for an interesting and enjoyable time.

Chateauguay Aquatic Club News

(by Rex Lawman, C.A.C. paddler)

Final Notice

This week-end only paid members will be allowed in the club, so please get hold of Mickey Lang and give him your $2.00. Note: Don't forget this also applies to paddlers. Pay $2.00 now and the balance when we start paddling.

-o-

Attention Gals

Would it be possible this summer to turn your attention from those boys down at the club and paddle? If so, contact Mary Lee at OX 2-9536. It should be a real good sight to see! All those beautiful gals paddling. It will attract spectators at least.

-o-

Notice to Juvenile Paddlers

I don't want to sound like a broken record, but wouldn't it be nice if more juvenile paddlers showed up for training. The quicker we get in condition the quicker we can get in the water. So how about it, let's see more of you young 'uns down at the Pie XII School on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

-o-

Attention Paddling Fans

Yours truly this year will cover every regatta and put the results of each race in this column. So try to stick with me until then.

-o-

Gratitude

Now that it is the end of the winter, I think everybody will agree with me in thanking Kevin Duffy and Micky Lang for taking time out on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays to keep the club open so that we kids would have a place to go, thus keeping down the rate of Juvenile Delinquency.

Chateauguay Briefs

Town of Chateauguay Sewers and Water.

Contracts and Bond Issue for the sewer and water project mentioned for the past two weeks in this column have now been awarded.

The majority of the work will be done by the firm of Marier et Fils, and the bond issue was awarded to Credit Quebec Incorporated at a price of $96,345 and an interest cost to the town of 6.24%.

-o-

Early last Sunday evening an accident occurred on Salaberry in which a single car was involved. Previous to this the town had a trouble free record of three weeks.

There are occasions when business gives way to pleasure and this week is one of them. Because of the hockey playoff Tuesday, the council meeting has been postponed to Wednesday.

-o-

An accident occurred March 23rd, 2.30 p.m. at St. Martine between a milk truck and a passenger car. The car owned by Mr. Denis Reid, a Chev. '54 was driven by Mrs .Reid, and the truck owned by John W. Nussey was driven by Gordon Watson.

No one was injured, and the damage was estimated at $400.

Want Ads Tell About Business

Another faint sign of a business upturn is to be found in "help wanted" classified advertising which is perking slightly in a number of Canada's daily newspapers, writes Norton Anderson in The Financial Post.

Help wanted advertising has been extremely sensitive to changes in general business conditions on this continent over the last 40 years. One day's tabulation of job offerings in want ads by 10 dailies in 10 cities across Canada revealed one stark fact: There are almost no jobs for unskilled workers. Toronto employers were looking for 100 men to deliver advertising door-to-door. A few openings existed in other cities for young men and women to start as learners to become clerks, managers, salesmen. Few — very few — called for laborers and farm hands. Thousands of unemployed truck drivers could only look to two job openings in Winnipeg.

Another classified ad in Montreal called for "elegant young ladies for style showing", and a herdsman and hogman were wanted in Vancouver. Someone in Saint John wanted a male reporter, and in the whole of the 10 cities checked, only Winnipeg wanted a barman, although barmaids were needed in the east. A Calgary advertiser sought several carhops. Secretaries and stenographers were in demand, but advertisers were not frantic for their services. Only Saint John called for one male stenographer (employment experts say he used to be common, and often made his way to top management).

BEAU CHATEAU CURLING NEWS

(By Doug. Lang)

On Friday evening Cliff Butler president of the curling section announced that the club was going to hold a Community Bonspiel throughout the month of April.

The Speil will be open to all citizens of the Beauharnois, Chateauguay area and it is hoped that all interested citizens of the area will take this opportunity to familiarize themselves with curling. A maximum of 480 people will be able to participate.

The match committee is composed of Bob Murphy, CO. 8-4122, Marcel Vinet CO. 8-4689 and Doug. Lang OX. 2-8028. The teams will be made up of one experienced curler, at least one lady, and all players will participate in three games.

Individuals interested should contact the match committee.

The typical family man has a billfold full of pictures and no money.

St. Andrew's Congregational Dinner Well Attended

A warm and homey atmosphere prevailed at the Congregational Dinner held in St. Andrew's Memorial Hall, on Friday evening, March 24th commemorating the 128th Anniversary of St. Andrew's United Church.

A large number of parishioners and friends enjoyed a hot turkey dinner prepared by members of the Woman's Association. The Sunday School Staff assisted in the serving. The Rev. Douglas S. Brooker, Minister of St. Andrew's opened the dinner party with prayer at 6.30 sharp.

Following the usual hustle, bustle, subdued hum and clatter which seems to accompany Church suppers, the Master of Ceremonies, Mayor David Currie of the Heights, appeared on stage and the entertainment was on. Dave well known for his jovial manner and sense of humour soon had everyone relaxed and sitting back eager for the entertainment which followed.

A bevy of tiny excited dancing dolls from Mrs. Helen Walker's Dancing School (Colonia) opened the show amid much applause.

Mrs. Lee Gilbert and her young daughter Doreen captivated the audience with two lovely piano duets.

Mrs. Margaret Pritchard and her group of young ladies presented some songs in a charming manner accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Elaine Rowell. Miss Betty Stanley of the Gardens performed two pianoforte solos and was applauded heartily. Mrs. Rollie McFetridge played the piano for a sing song of 4 or 5 numbers which followed and upon request played a couple of solos one being the catchy "Tea for Two" which caused a lot of toe-tapping.

Mrs. Lee Gilbert wound up the delightful program singing two solos. Mrs. Gilbert's voice was we thought, particularly lovely in her rendition of "Look to the Rainbow."

The Rev. Douglas Brooker's appreciation message and the singing of the "Queen" closed a most enjoyable evening.

CANNED SPARROWS ANYONE?

Quite recently an eyecatching item appeared in the local press to the effect that English purveyors now offer, in addition to their staple foods, such delicacies as canned sparrows and canned pheasant. What really caught the eye was the fact that the price of a can of sparrows far exceeded that of a can of pheasant. There is no mention of how the sparrows were caught and this leads to speculation by inquiring minds this side of the ocean.

Goodness knows we have more than a sufficiency of the perky and sometimes pesky little sparrows, but why consider sparrows when we have starlings. They arrive in clouds in early spring, produce their families, leave their debris in the roofs, eaves and rafters of the house, damage the corn crop, and come fall they fly south in still larger numbers, to repeat the performance ad infinitum.

Anyone care for canned starlings?

West End St. Patrick Dance A Success

(by Mrs. K. Smeall)

The St. Patrick's Dance organized by West End Social Committee can be described as no less than a huge success. From beginning to end everything went off smoothly and the number of people attending was just sufficient to make it sociable, with plenty of elbow room at the tables for everyone. There was no overcrowding on the dance floor and the Blue Sky Revue once again entertained with a varied programme. Draw tickets were sold during the evening and among the lucky winners were Mr. Stapleton, Mrs. W. Roy, Mr. R. Sylvestre and Mr. Powis. The lucky winner of the door prize was Leo Larocque. Around 12.30 Barbecued chicken was served to everyone, which completed a very successful evening.

West End Homeowners Discuss Parks, At General Meeting

(by Mrs. K. Smeall)

The General Meeting of the West End Homeowners' Association took place on Thursday, March 16th at 9 p.m. in the Chateau-Gai Motel. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and accepted on a motion by Mr. N. Stock, seconded by R. Powis.

Mr. Hulshoff and Mr. Chiasson attended the last meeting of the City Council and reported to the members present and also read a letter received by the Secretary in reply to one sent by the Homeowners in reference to clearing the parks in West End. The question of the roads came up again and it was decided that Mr. Hulshoff would contact Mr. Laberge to make further definite inquiries regarding road finishing in West End. Mr. C. Cotton presented his detailed financial report and he asked that the books be turned over to the Trustees for inspection as per the Constitution.

Mr. Don Moore reported on the Sports Committee. Three more games are to be played by the Pee-Wees and these will be played at the Verdun Auditorium.

An election Committee consisting of Mr. N. Stock, Mr. R. Emard and Mr. G. Willsmore was formed for the purpose of receiving nominations for the forthcoming election next month at the General Meeting.

Mr. R. Emard very kindly consented to take over the Red Cross Campaign and Blood Bank which Mr. N. Stock generally looks after in West End.

The meeting adjourned on a motion by Mr. Stock seconded by Mr. M. Chiasson.

Chateauguay Gleaner

Historical Notes Gleaned From "Sellar's" History

Mr Ellice was disgusted and cowed by what was going on around him. He was a big, softish sort of man, without much energy or presence of mind, and who, had he not been wealthy, would never have been heard of. At that time there was an infatuation as to the efficacy of constitutional government as a sovereign remedy for the ills of society. The creation of the American republic had started it, the French revolution had aided to develop it, and the prolonged agitation over the reform-bill had grafted it in men's minds that there was a magical efficacy in the government of the people by the people, and constitution-making was regarded as of the first importance. Mr. Ellice was one of the circle of whose opinions the Edinburgh Review was the exponent, and he had rather pitied those who were opposed to granting the demands of Papineau. It was a great shame to deny the French Canadians a full measure of self-government, most illiberal to distrust how they would use it; remove all checks and throw the entire responsibility upon them of governing themselves, and you will see what wonders will be wrought. Such were the sentiments of this Englishman on the 3rd November, 1838; on the 4th November of the same year he had not a word to say in favor of the virtues of paper-constitutions or of his protegees. In one hour the French Canadians had turned a friend into an enemy, and a theoretical politician into a practical one, prepared to acknowledge that the Imperial authorities ought to be satisfied on two points before entrusting a dependency with self-government, 1st, that its people possess sufficient intelligence to use it; 2nd, that they are loyal to the head of the empire. When it was intimated to him, that he was to be taken a prisoner to Chateauguay Basin, he was overcome with fear that his life was in danger. Before daylight, he, along with Brown, Ross, Norman, Onslow, and Bryson were put in carts, and guarded by some 40 men, started. On reaching Norval's house, which was outside the village, a halt was cried, and the rebels bursting in the door entered his bedroom. Altho' taken unawares, Mr. Norval resisted, when he heard the voices of his friends outside shouting to him to submit. When he had dressed, he was hurried out, and, being placed in the caleche beside Brown, their wrists were tied together. All the other prisoners were similarly bound, except Mr. Ellice, who had also a seat for himself, probably on account of his being a very stout man. The procession then dragged its way to Chateauguay, over roads deep in mud and under a pouring rain. What galled Mr. Norval and the others most of all was that the Canadians who were treating them in such a manner were their intimate neighbors, whom they had helped in their necessities a hundred times, and who, up to the last hour, had professed the greatest friendship. When the cavalcade halted in front of Duquette's tavern at Chateauguay bridge, the rebels came swarming around it in scores, and were greatly elated on seein Ellice and Brown prisoners. On Mr. Ellice's alighting, the coachman, Finney, wheeled his horses to return to Beauharnois, when a rebel raised his musket. A comrade beside him prevented his drawing the trigger by seizing his arm, and shouting to Finney to halt; he left his seat, which was taken by a Canadian who drove the team to Ste Martine, where the horses, fine blacks, were used as mounts by the rebel leaders. At 10 o'clock the exultation of the party at Duquette's was dashed by Edward Dalton, who came riding at post-haste with the intelligence of the capture of Cardinal and his party. It was now all the leaders could do to hold the habitants together, and even they felt that circumspection was needed. The decision was come to, that the passengers by the steamer be allowed to go on promising not to bear arms and that the Beauharnois captives with McDonald be kept in close confinement, as they might be of value yet in compounding with the government for their own safety. In the afternoon they were removed to Mallette's house, and confined in a large room; the shutters were closed, a guard posted, and all communication with the outer world cut off, even the wives of the prisoners being denied permission to see them.

When the party at Beauharnois had disposed of Ellice and the others by sending them to Chateauguay, they began preparations for their next enterprise, which was the capture of the steamer Henry Brougham, which plied between Lachine and the Cascades, forming a link in the communication with Upper Canada. She was to leave the Cascades before daylight and would touch at Beauharnois on her way down about 5 o'clock. The plan proposed by Charles Rapin (then a bailiff and afterwards a well-known hotel-keeper) was that a few men should be on the wharf as usual to catch the lines, and that, when securely moored, a rush should be made by the party in concealment behind the buildings. Everything turned out as anticipated. The steamer came unsuspectingly up to the wharf, was moored, and captured in a twinkling by a number of Canadians rushing on board. One of their number, Rochon, a carriage-maker, unscrewed the starting-bar of the engine and took it away, so that the vessel could not possibly escape, but, to make doubly sure, a hole was bored in the hold and she was scuttled at the warf. The passengers, 17 in number, and who were all from Upper Canada, were made prisoners, and taken up to Prevost's tavern. Ultimately they were removed to the Presbytery, where Mrs Ellice and the ladies who had accompanied her from England were also placed. Altogether there were some 40 prisoners in the house, and except overcrowding, they had nothing to complain of, the priest, the Rev. M. Quintal, being exceedingly kind. A strong guard was kept round the doors, and they were not allowed to go out. The other Old Country people, who were not confined here, were yet, in a measure, prisoners, as the sentries posted on the different roads would not let them pass. Very few remained to be thus treated, for, after the surrender of the mansion-house, the majority of those who apprehended molestation, took canoes before daylight and escaped to Lachine. The week that followed was an exciting one to the rebels who, to the number of about 500, held possession of the village. There was a succession of rumors causing marches and countermarches to Chateauguay and Baker's. Among the leaders there was only one stranger, Chevalier Delorimier, a Montreal notary, who maintained a disguise by dressing in grey and wearing green goggles. On the forenoon of the 10th there was great excitement caused by a small steamer seen approaching from Lachine. It ran close in shore and then headed for the Cascades. It was laden with arms for the Glengarry militia and its menacing Beauharnois was a piece of bravado. The rebels felt that they were more likely to be assailed from the landside than from the lake, and in a field westward of the village, above Buisson point, they converted a stone-fence into a barricade and flanked at with wooden cannon. This was the only direction in which defence was needed, for to the south the village was covered by the camp at Baker's and to the east by that at Chateauguay.

Hi Folks. What a beautiful spring week-end with so much sunshine and everyone out cleaning their lawns and basking in the sun, some brave ones even taking off their storm windows. In another week the daffodils will be in flower and the tulips are now breaking through the ground. It sure makes one feel good knowing the winter is over for another year. But now that it's past it wasn't too bad. Soon we'll be gossiping over the fence and getting a sun tan.

Bowling Playoff

On Friday night, April 28, all teams will bowl for the semi-finals and on Saturday afternoon, April 29, the three highest teams will bowl for first place, and on Saturday night, April 29, we will hold our Bowling Banquet. It has not yet been decided where it will be held but it will be in your column at a future date. Please do your best to attend for the next few weeks of Bowling. The attendance has been falling off and in order to keep this league going next year we will have to have a better attendance and more interest shown. It is very disappointing to the men who worked so hard to start this league and I, for one, would hate to see it fall through. There will be no bowling on Good Friday night.

Any children interested in bowling some Saturday morning, please get in touch with Pete Bedard, Stan Cahill or Dave Bulivant and we will make arrangements with the Bowling Alley for the number of alleys needed, but we have to have an idea how many, so be sure and let us know if you are interested.

-o-

We would like to wish a pleasant trip to Edith Adams who left Sunday night for Windsor, Ontario, to visit her daughter who will be presenting her with her first grandchild any day.

On Friday, March 24th, the Verdun Auditorium was the scene of the last hockey game of the season between the West End Pee-Wees and the Chateauguay Heights Team, which saw West End defeated.

The coaches are very proud of the performance the boys put on and hope in future years to interest more boys in active sports. Don Moore wishes to thank all parents for the wonderful cooperation he received when he phoned asking for cars to take the children to Verdun. There were more than enough cars and it looks as though West End parents can be counted on when called for assistance.

This was surely a "Red Letter Day" in the lives of our Pee-Wees and I am sure no matter what auditorium they will play in in future years, nothing will quite compare to the thrill these youngsters got on Friday, when for the first time they played in an Auditorium and pictured themselves as real "Pros."

-o-

A Father and Son Banquet will take place on Friday, April 14th at the Chateau-Gai Motel for all those who played in the Chateauguay Minor Hockey Association League. An N.H.L. player will be present on this occasion and each player will be presented with a trophy of their own.

Mrs. P. Cresswell would like to thank Mrs. L. Golden and Mrs.

Sorry to report that Mrs. William Gilbert, (Kay) Crépin Ave., is ill. The doctor expects she will be up and around again before Easter. Best wishes for a rapid recovery, Kay.

Two popular members of the Heights Station Bowling Club, Miss Eleanor Watt and Mr. William Perry, have set their wedding date. They are to be married on Saturday, April 8th, 1961. Time and place will be announced later. Our very best wishes for your future happiness, Eleanor and Bill.

With "hockey fever" at its height, there is not much to report on the social scene. Most people prefer to remain home, sprawled comfortably on a sofa in front of the television set cheering their team on to victory and blessing (???) the opposing-team. However boring this may be to some of the viewers on the distaff side, there is one consolation, as most people congregate in groups, there is a chance to exchange views on interesting topics with ladies in the same boat as oneself. Oh, well! May the best team win!

The bowling season is fast approaching the end. There is but one more week of competition in the regular schedule for the Heights - Station club; then the fun begins, with each team playing off against every other team to determine the championship. Good luck to all the teams, especially the "Jets" eh, Betty?

Mrs. John Christo, (Freda) Crépin Ave., is taking driving lessons and is getting along famously. She admits to being nervous in making turns, but that will come with practice, Freda, so relax.

-o-

Many people have expressed fear of flooding due to cessation of blasting operations on the river. They may take heart when they learn that blasting has been resumed and a channel has been cleared as far as the railway bridge as of March 25th, thus eliminating much of the danger.

Signs of spring: Dad going over his tackle box and fishing equipment with an eye to replenishing same. Daughter and sons refurbishing bikes and getting out the marbles, and mon (poor old mon) casting a jaundiced eye over drapes, rugs, curtains, walls, etc., with an expression in said eye, boding good to nothing and no-one, particularly Dad's pocketbook.

Please Note

Our sincere apologies to two subscribers who were kind enough to phone in items for publication that were not printed in this column. As one item was more than one week old, it was no longer considered "news" The second item pertained to an event taking place elsewhere than in the Station Area and was covered by the correspondent of that district.

To avoid confusion, the area covered by this correspondent is from the town line at the Centre to Woodlands bridge at the other end.

Any event occuring outside these boundaries will be covered by the correspondent of the area affected if he or she is notified.

Seems P. V. is having boy troubles. Problems! Problems!

W. N. has been seeing a lot of D. B. lately. Finally got your wish. Well, nice going boy.

A party was held at the home of Carol Brophy on Saturday night and we heard everyone had fun.

L. D. has her eye on a boy in the Garden. Good luck!

Now that the Stanley Cup playoffs have started, everyone seems to be in a betting mood. Take if from me folks, it's Chicago and Detroit. I've won a couple of bets on them.

That's all for this week folks. Has everyone broken hands? My phone hasn't been that busy. Let's get going, I'm sure there must be more news in Chateauguay than what's contained in this column. So how about using the phone, O.K.?

Prodential Previ:ws

The Homeowners of Prudential met on Monday night, at the Chateau Gai Motel. Mr. Mongeau the engineer of Chateauguay Centre and Mr. Jean Paul Pitre our councillor, were present to answer questions concerning items of interest to our area.

They informed us that all drainage problems will be solved during this summer but surface drainage and curbs are too costly at this time. The Ravine running through Parkview and Prudential has caused a great deal of trouble but it is to have large drainage tile put in, and covered with earth taken from the new Shopping Centre excavations nothing is to be done about paving of any streets this year as no grant has been applied for. For the town to do it themselves each homeowner would be taxed $22.00 a year over a period of 10 years or $14.00 a year over a period of 20 years.

The entrance to our area is now in the hands of the contractor so this will be good news for those of us who have been using Parkview Blvd. It is also very bad but we were informed that it would be restored by the builders who made the cuts across the road. Work also is to be started on St. Joseph Blvd., running from Parkview to Highway No. 3 and they hope to have this completed by the summer.

The residents of St. Ferdinand Pl., will be happy to know that the small park on their street will be sodded this summer.

The subject of Parks and Playgrounds was brought up but no definite news was available since there is no space large enough for this purpose at the present time.

All motorists take warning that there will be street signs installed and no doubt will be enforced.

These are some of the Highlights of this meeting and I'm sure they will please most residents of the area.

Suggestion

A suggestion that a number of folks would like to see put in effect, and that is for the large stores in the shopping centres, making a washroom available to the public especially the grocery stores. Often when shopping with youngsters the parent or person with the children have to leave in the middle of their shopping to go in search of a washroom. At times due to a time element have been unable to return to continue their shopping. A number of folks thought this would be a good time to submit this suggestion with the new shopping centre on Route 3 under construction and that this suggestion will be seen and put into effect.

Rare Penny In Change May Be Worth $25,000

SAN FRANCISCO, Caro Martin, 35, paid his breakfast cheque of 52 cents and may have received about $10,000 in change.

For Martin, a bank clerk and amateur coin collector, spotted a copper 1943 penny minted in Denver.

He rushed it to coin dealer Edward Baker who first offered him $100, $200 and then $10,000. A gasping Martin refused the offers so he could take time to think it over.

Meanwhile, a dispute has arisen over the coin's authenticity.

The Denver Mint and U.S. Mint in Washington have expressed doubts that there were any copper pennies minted in 1943. The pennies in that wartime year were steel with zinc coating.

Leland Howard, assistant director of the Bureau of the Mint in Washington said that other alleged wartime copper pennies have turned out to have been copper plated or else to have had their dates altered.

But Baker said he had given the coin acid, weight and magnetic tests and was convinced it was genuine. He said it appeared to show normal wear. Baker said he had reports of one other such coin.

Martin, married and the father of three, said he was "penniless —except for the one penny." He came to the United States from England in 1955.

Current plans call for Martin and Baker to put it up for auction. Other dealers have estimated that if it is genuine, it will bring $10-$25,000.

most common illness a doctor in general practice has to deal with."

Another physician is quoted as saying: "Every doctor's office should be a suicide prevention station."

The article points out that while suicides in Canada officially number 1,300 a year, the actual number is probably much higher because many people kill themselves in such a way as to make their deaths look accidental, and other suicides are hushed up by relatives and friends.

It's time, says the author, for the Canadian public "to discard the attitude that nice people don't commit suicide and that if they do, it isn't polite to mention it.

"The fact is that most people who take their own lives wouldn't do so if they got help in time."

Suicide Can, And Should Be Treated As A Disease

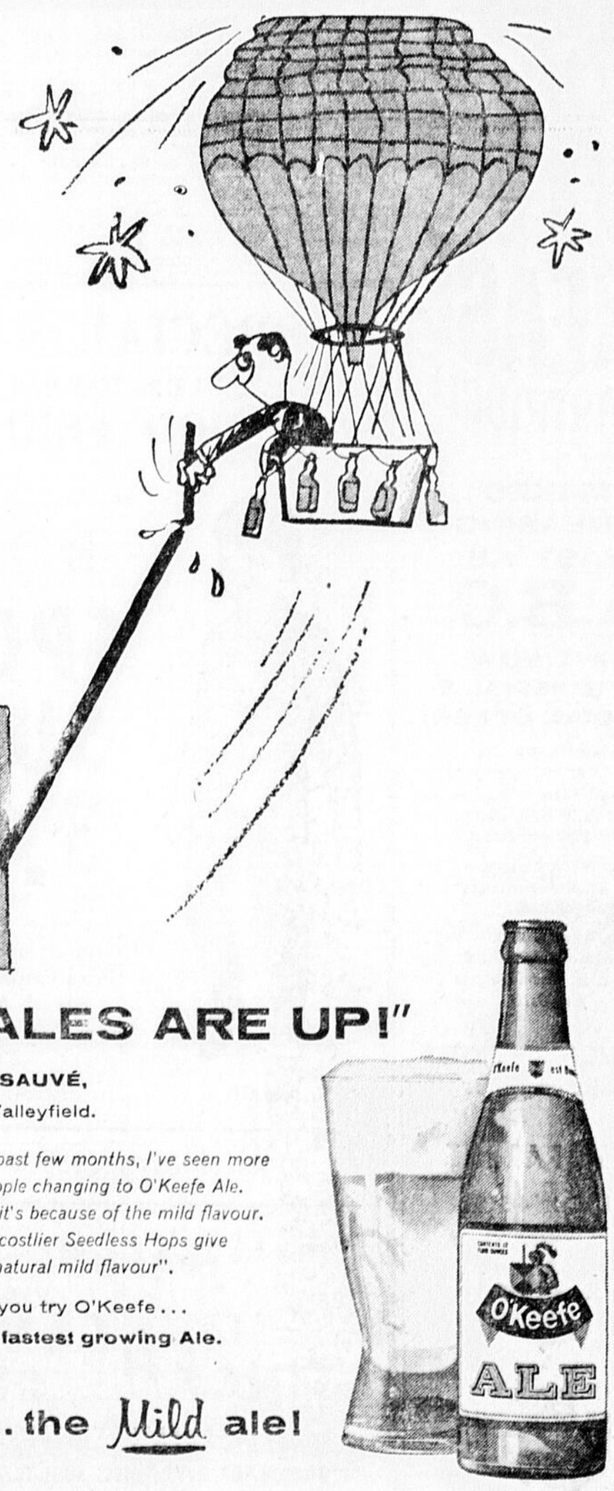

Jailing a person for attempting suicide makes no more sense than jailing somebody for having pneumonia, says an article in Maclean's.

And yet, the article adds, the Criminal Code of Canada makes attempted suicide a crime punishable by a jail term up to six months and/or a fine up to $500.; and the Christian and Jewish faiths regard it as a sin.

However, doctors are learning more effective ways of preventing suicide than have ever been known before, reports author Catherine Jones.

"The most effective means of prevention," she predicts, will be the early diagnosis of depression, which masks itself under a host of ordinary ailments." Among the common ailments that sometimes disguise a state of depression are asthma, heart disease, ulcers, obesity, alcoholism, migraine and arthritis.

The author quotes one doctor as saying: "At a conservative estimate, 50 percent of the people a doctor sees in his consulting room are not organically ill. They are depressed. Depression is the

EASTER GREETINGS TO ALL

Hemmingford

Mr. and Mrs Walter Keddy started out on the morning of March 9th to break trail for Toronto and Detroit. Literally! Remember the snow storm? After bucking drifts for some time and getting nowhere they back tracked, returned to the village and looked for a friendly snowplough which might be going their way. Finally they got away and had a pleasant ten-day visit with relatives in the two cities. They stopped off for a day in Riverdale to visit two well-known past residents of Covey Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Kearns. They found them well and were asked to convey greetings to all their friends in Hemmingford.

On Thursday evening, March 23rd, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. L'Espérance motored to St. John's to atend a performance of the play 'Separate Tables' given by The Hertel Mountain Theatre as their contribution to the Western Region Drama Festival. This group of talented amateur performers hails from McMasterville, Mr. L'Espérance's home town, hence the particular interest in this play, watching their friends in action. Four Drama Clubs were chosen to present plays in this Festival, the winner will be invited to the Dominion Drama Festival to be held in Montreal in May. In studying the programme Thursday evening, Mrs. L'Espérance discovered that Hemmingford, too, was well represented at this Festival. The play on Wednesday evening was 'La Cruche Cassée', given by the University of Montreal Drama group, directed by Henri Abran, son of Doctor and Mrs. A. J. Abran of Hemmingford, and he also took one of the parts. The announcement of the winner out of these four plays is eagerly awaited.

FURTHER SIGNS OF SPRING.

And the end of the School year coming into view! Data for the Year Book of Hemmingford High is coming in nicely now and the first few pages are already in the hands of the publisher. On Friday morning the boys of Grade 11 at St. Roman's High looked very elegant in their dark suits, white shirts and black bow ties and the girls were charming in pretty dresses and hair-do's. Reason? A visit to Valleyfield planned for the afternoon to have pictures taken for the composite picture of the 1961 graduating class which will hang in the 'Halls of Fame'. They are also planning to hold a Bingo in the Assembly Hall of the School on Thursday evening, April 6th to raise funds for graduation expenses.

A VISIT TO THE DOMINION WEATHER BUREAU AT DORVAL.

By JOE PARE

Have you ever wanted to know how Pilots are briefed on weather for their flights, where and how our weather maps are made and where our radio weather reports come from? Grades 9 and 11 of Hemmingford High School decided to find out and on Saturday, March 18th, we left in three car-loads for Dorval Airport in Montreal.

We were met there by a very aimiable gentleman who acted as our guide for the interesting tour. Our first visit was to the room where weather reports from stations all over Canada are received by teletype. The machines and the duties of the employees who operate them were explained to us.

Our next stop was at the adjoining room where the information received in the teletype room is decoded and where the weather maps are begun. The next room we visited was where the weather maps are drawn in a complete form. All the information received in the first room and decoded in the second is placed on these maps by the use of many different symbols.

We were then introduced to the very important briefing room where the information from the maps is put into forms which are used by pilots who must know the weather in store far them on their flights. This room and the pecple in it perform one of the most important functions known. In the next room we were shown the working of the various instruments and equipment needed for acquiring weather information. Then on to the Control Tower where we observed how all air traffic is controlled and how airplanes are aided in landing and take-off. This part of the tour was the one most enjoyed by the group. From here we went to the ground control room, the main nerve centre of the airways. Here men keep track of all flights in Canada and a great part of the United States by the use of maps and radar screens.

The final part of our tour was a visit to a room containing a complicated recording device where weather reports are kept for future reference. At this time the opportunities for employment here was discussed.

The weather offices are in great need of High School and College graduates who have an interest in meteorology. These offices have their own college facilities in Ottawa where they train young men and women for a period of three months or so, after which they are instructed on the job for a remaining period of about eight months. The whole course takes approximately one year to complete.

So ended our very educational and interesting trip, from which we all agreed a great deal was learned about the efficient and intricate system by which we are informed of the weather.

(Editors note. Joe Paré, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Paré of Hemmingford, has been a keen weather student for many years. In his garden are temperature and rainfall measuring instruments, installed by the Quebec Department of Hydraulic Resources from which Joe or members of his family take readings twice daily. He is one of Canada's 1350 amateur weather observers.)

Hemmingford W. I. Enjoy Tour of Dutch Greenhouses.

On Thursday, March 23rd, the Hemmingford Women's Institute enjoyed a tour of the Dutch Greenhouses, near Napierville.

The group was welcomed by the owners of the greenhouses, Leaf Jacobson and Peter Nissen, who conducted the tour of their five greenhouses.

It was most interesting to all. The Easter plants and flowers were in full bloom and were certainly beautiful. The ladies were amazed by the beauty of the flowers and by the variety of those grown.

This is a very enjoyable and educational tour worth recommending to all. Anyone interested in buying beautiful flowers of any kind will find these at the Dutch Greenhouses just off No. 9 highway enroute to Napierville.

After the tour all enjoyed delicious refreshments served by the owners.

Before leaving, Mrs. C. Winter, an behalf of the Women's Institute, thanked them for their courtesy in showing the ladies around and for the refreshments served. Thus all departed with a cordial invitation from Leaf and Peter to return at any time.
