War efforts & regiments are remembered on stamps

Stamp corner

By Peter McCarthy

November is the month we have set aside to remember those who died for their country in the two great wars, the Korean and Viet-Nam conflicts. One day in a year doesn't seem to be all that much.

Philetelically, we are reminded of these conflicts each time we open our albums. Canada has done very well in both support and rememberance on stamps.

Shortly after the outbreak of the First World War, Canada imposed a one cent war tax in accordance with the Special War Tax Revenue Act of 1915. Several overprints were thereby created on the Admiral issue.

The first type to be issued were simply overprinted "WAR TAX" and can be found on the one cent and two cent denominations. There were eighteen plates laid down for the one cent and ten for the two cent denomination, during the period from March 1915 to May of 1917. Several minor varieties and hairlines may be found.

There was a very controversial over-printing on a further three denominations. The words WAR TAX appear in black diagnonally on both the five cent and twenty cents denominations while the same inscription in red is on the fifty cent stamp.

A SECOND TYPE

The second type of War Tax to be used appeared on the two cent red and the two cent brown. It is in the form of a white overprint which simply reads 1T¢. There are two different dies to the overprint. There are coils in this particular type and there are minor varieties including hairlines to be found in the complete printing.

In 1938 Canada issued a ten cent pictorial depicting the Memorial Chamber in the Peace Tower in Ottawa. This was set aside to honour those who died in World War I. The stamp comes from the 1938 pictorial issue. It also appears in two distinct colours, dark carmine and carmine rose.

ROYAL VISIT REMEMBERED

Canada was visited in 1939 by Their Majesties — King George VI and Queen Elizabeth along with their two daughters Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose. To commemorate the event, Canada released a three stamp issue depicting the Princesses on a one cent denomination, the King and Queen on a three cent denomination and on a two cent denomination, the National War Memorial Monument. This stamp is not known to have major varieties.

CORVETTE IN SHIP BUILDING YARD

ONE CENT WAR TAX

WAR MEMORIAL OTTAWA

No sooner thad the Royal Family left for home than we were once more plunged into war. This time, the devastation of World War II.

FINANCIAL HELP

In order to help with the financing of this conflict, Canada issued what has become known as the War Effort Issue. Not only was it a financial raiser but it also served as a patriotic booster.

The first six stamps of the issue were definitives depicting King George VI in military uniform of the three services. There are but five denominations, one cent denomination was issued in two colours. Dark carmine and rose violet.

The pictorial portion of the issue depicts a four cent denomination of ships loading grain from an elevator on the Great Lakes, en eight cent agriculture scene, ten cent centre block of the Parliament Buildings, thirteen and fourteen cents Ram Tank. The fourteen cent was a replacement due to a postal rate increase. The twenty cent denomination depicts a corvette, the mighty little convoy escort ship, being constructed at a ship building yard.

WAR EFFORT DEPICTED

The fifty cent denomination depicts heavy artillery being made at one of the many munitions factories that existed in the country. Finally, to complete the set, there is the dollar denomination depicting the "Lady of the Seas", a Tribal Class destroyer.

In addition to the regular issues, there exists two different sets of coils in the definitives. The first is a perforated 8 vertically while the second set is perforated 9½ vertically. The five cent denomination is not among the coil sets.

One may also find the first four denominations of the definitives in booklet form and sheets overprinted O.H.M.S. in black.

The whole of this issue is known to be officially perforated with the four hole O.H.M.S. The definitives remained in use until 1949.

HEALING TIME

With the end of the second world war came the influx of immigrants to the North American Continent. It wasn't long for the healing process to take over. It was back to business with war being remembered but once a year on November 11th. Two minute silences were held at eleven o'clock but, eventually even these were phased out.

The United States became embroiled in the Koren conflict with Canada as a minimal backup force. Those who died in this conflict had their names inscribed on cenotaphs but, philatelically, nothing was issued as a rememberance.

It wasn't until 1968 that Canada issued a further war memorial stamp. The stamp is a fifteen cent denimination and depicts the Vimy Memorial which stands near Arras, France. It is known as "The Defenders and the Breaking of the Sword". It commemorates the 50th anniversary of the end of hostilities in 1918.

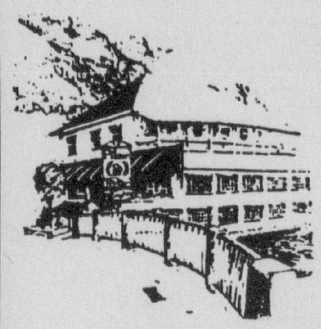

SLIGHT REMINDER

In 1980, we were given a slight reminder of war with the realease of four stamps depicting military airplanes. Two are quite noteworthy in that they participated in World War II. The first is the Lancaster bomber which appears in se-tenet form with an Avro Canada CF-100 Jet Fighter. Both bear the domestic rate seventeen cent denomination. The second is the Hawker Hurricane which appears in se-tenet form with the Curtis JN-4 Canuck. The Hurricane played an extensive role in the Battle of Britain. Both stamps bear a thirty-five cent denomination.

REGIMENTAL SOUVENIR STAMPS

Although stamps have been issued to commemorate anniversaries of Canada's three services, it wasn't until this year that two specific regiments were honoured philatelically for their service to the country in both world wars and the Korean conflict. They are the Princess Patricia Regiment from Ontario and the Royal 22nd Regiment from Quebec. The first is affectionately known as the Pricess Pats while the 22nd Regiment goes by the name of the Van-Doos. This is taken from the French, vingt-deux (twenty-second).

War is not a subject that needs to be dwelled upon. However, we must remember that we live in freedom thanks to those who gave their lives to that cause. Philately helps to remember. LEST WE FORGET.

Entire generations have been denied the government- paid adventure of war

An occasional war is a national tonic — Machiavelli

Who's who

By TADEUSZ LETARTE

What this country needs is a rattling good war.

Nothing stirs up the blood quite so much as a little war. Nothing brings people together and improves the circulation quite so much as martial music, Sousa marches, the skirl of the pipes, the trill of the bugle inviting us all to death and destruction:

"Cannons to right of them, cannons to left of them, volleyed and thundered, into the Valley of Death rode the six hundred!... "And the rockets red glare, the bombs bursting in air..." "Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition!"

An occasional war is a national tonic — as Machiavelli wrote somewhere — and that's just what Canada needs. It might inspire our painters and poets, novelists and film-makers, as never before. Look what it did for Homer and Hemingway, Francis Scott Key and Francis Ford Coppola — and nobody is quite so exalted in the national consciousness as victorious generals — Julius Caesar and Alexander the Great, Napoleon Bonaparte and the Duke of Wellington, Horatio Nelson and Dwight David Eisenhower. What are a few insignigicant lives agianst such glory?

But the average age of those chests swelling beneath hteir medals at the cenotaphs tomorrow will be 69. That means entire generations have been denied the opportunity to adventure in foreign parts at government expense and sacrifice themselves gloriously for all that we hold sacred. No wonder the country is falling apart.

George Whatsisname knows the value of a good war. He might have gone down into history as an inspired and inspirational leader of men if only the enemy didn't keep surrendering all the time. You have to feel for the man. When Daniel Ortega last week handed him the opportunity of renewing a teensy little war in Nicaragua, he leapt at it with his usual decisiveness. "We will," he thundered, "keep all our options open!"

Romping Ronnie Reagan understood that a good enemy could unite and inspire while diverting attention from homelessness and drugs, deficits and decay. During the campaign he hammered away at an 'Evil Empire' and two months after inauguration recruited and financed the Contras while pretending they were Nicaraguan freedom fighters. "The moral equivalent of our Founding Fathers", he said without the slightest blush.

VIETNAM TERNISHED THE IMAGE

But Vietnam had brought such ill-repute to the time-honoured and glorious institution that he had to confine himself to invading Grenada. It wasn't much but it was the best he could manage.

Maggie Irondrawers knows the diversion a lovely little war can provide a tired country. After invading the Falkland Islands — half a world away and deservedly so — she was able to crush the striking miners and reduce her political opposition to tatters so that she could ride gloriously forth at the head of her Britons like Queen Boadicea leading the blue-painted Iceni.

Queen Victoria knew the value of a good war, too, and generally managed to keep two or three going in odd corners throughout her lengthy reign. It was all those inspiring little wars against nignogs and hottentots, hindoo and heathen Chinee, that built the British Empire upon the horrors of life in England's industrial slums.

The shortest war in all history happened one Thursday morning, August 27, 1896, between 9:02 and 9:40. The British fleet had sailed into Zanzibar on the pretext of attending a cricket match. The Sultan considered that a violation of sovreignty, declared war on the British Empire and ordered his only battleship to destroy the Imperial navy.

But when his ship obediently opened fire, the British sunk it, then reduced the Sultan's palace to rubble, killing or wounding 500 of his palace guard. The Sultan fled to German-held territory and the 'War of the Cricket Match' went down in the record books as lasting exactly 37 minutes 23 seconds.

The British even proposed charging the population for the ammunition they'd expended.

In the glory days, any old excuse would do for a war just so the heart was in it. When the East India Company ran up a dificit in its trade with China, it imported illegal opium for a quick profit. The Chinese authorities objected and the British sent in troops to show them what's what. Then the wife of a Zulu chief roan away in 1879 and took refuge in British-held territory, his warriors crossed the border, kidnapped and killed her. That colossal impertinence was embraced as an excuse to destroy the Zulu nation.

THe 'War of the Spanish Succession' might be traced to 1704 when Mrs. Mashaur, and Englishwoman, spilled a glass of water on the Marquis de Torey, a Frenchman. She said it was an accident. He claimed it was an insult. The war lasted five years.

The 'War of Jenkins' Ear' dates from 1731 when the Spanish coastguard stopped his brig off Havana and cut off his ear. He laid a complaint — and his severed ear in a handsome leather display case — before the king of England but nothing came of it for another eight years. Then, when Britain needed an excuse for taking over the West indies, somebody remembered Jenkins' ear and passed it around the House of Commons to general indignation and outrage.

Where there's a will, there's a way. In 1325, soldiers from Modena invaded neighboring Bologna to steal a wooden bucket and a few hundred citizens got killed in the adventure. Bologna mobilized its army and won their bucket back after twelve years and thousands of lives had been spent. That bucket is now triumphantly displayed in the campanile of Ghirlandina.

The -War of the Stray Dog' started in 1925 when a Greek soldier's dog scampered across the border into Bulgaria and the soldier chased after it. Bulgarian sentries, quite properly, shot him dead and Greece declared war. Nobody knows what became of the dog.

In 1864, when Paraguay went to war against Argentina, Brazil, Uraguay and anybody else handy, it had a population of 1,400,000. By 1870, when it called it quits, it had only 30,000 males of breeding and fighting age left. World War II cost almost sixty million lives and that's why this time-honoured and gentlemanly sport has fallen on such hard times. Everybody has to get in on it and spoil all the fun.

Still, if Brian Baloney wants to pull this country together and divert attention from the Meech Lake Discord, the Gouge and Squeeze Tax, VIA Rail and Acid Rain, he might do worse than declare war on — say — Greenland.

The exercise could do us all a world of good.

James McMurtry: an echo of early Dylan

By Bill Anderson
The Canadian Press

James McMurtry seems to have drifted into popular music like a tumbleweed, dry and prickly and with an air of something ominous about him.

His songs carry the impact of an early Bob Dylan — lean, literary, desolate, penetrating — and his first album, Too Long in the Wasteland, has to be considered one of the most compelling debuts of the year.

McMurtry, a 27-year-old Texan, is the son of American author Larry McMurtry, whose novels include Cadillac Jack, The Last Picture Show and the Pulitzer Prize-winning Lonesome Dove.

James McMurtry, who sings and plays electric and acoustic guitar, covers some of the same dusty roads as his father — using stark and seemingly effortless arrangements to spin gritty tales of rural rootlessness and fatalism.

In literary terms, the music is also close to the contemporary short stories of American writers Richard Ford and Raymond Carver.

PLAIN REALISM

It's a hard-scrabble world out on the modern plains, where blue-collar workers, drifters, outcasts and their lovers struggle against boredom, despair, and natural forces too powerful to even question.

But rather than howl in adopted anguish — the usual way in pop music — McMurtry spins his mordant stories in a calm, matter-of-fact monotone. Someone has described him as a rural Lou Reed, and that's about it. McMurtry may have an even sharper eye for detail, and certainly a subtler, sneakier approach.

The title track of the new album, for instance, is sung from the point of view of a nameless man who is returning to town after time away, possibly in jail for a crime committed while drunk. As he ponders the invitation of a former lover to come by, just like the old days, it begins to dawn on him that he has become an outsider.

"Hear the trucks on the highway, and the ticking of the clocks," McMurtry intones. "There's a ghost of a moon in the afternoon, bullet holes in the mailbox.

"Bullet holes in the mailbox, keyholes in my mind ... too long in the wasteland, and falling behind."

CAPTURE REGRETS

In the 11 songs on the record, McMurtry never fails to come through with characters who become real and details that ring true. Sometimes, in a song like Angeline, McMurtry takes just a few lines to capture the regrets of a lifetime.

The narrator of Angeline is another drifter, someone who got off a train long ago and struck up a summer romance with a girl in order to get a job on her father's farm.

"Now I watch the trains rattle on from the seat of the tractor, your daddy's old harness still hangs in the barn, and your mamma don't like it that our children all scattered, she swears it's my blood, it was not meant to farm."

Some of the credit for the record has to go to John Mellencamp, the million-selling pop star who produced the project at his Indiana studio and involved some of the accomplished sidemen from his band.

The bedrock, however, is the songwriting. As Mellencamp says, McMurtry writes "like he's lived 150 years."

That insight, keen as, well, a novelist's, comes out best in the song Crazy Wind.

McMurtry's personal favorite on the album, it begins with a woman watching her husband head off in the darkness to work the night shift.

Mr. & Mrs. Bridges film with Paul Newman — due Aug./90

By Andrew Selsky

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A pajama-clad Paul Newman stood silently in the doorway of a living room with a pistol in his right hand, glaring at a young couple making love on the floor.

The young man, his clothing askew, hurriedly disentangled himself from the woman and fled. The woman fumbled with her skirt and blouse and stood up. Newman, showing fury on his face, slapped her.

"Cut," said director James Ivory. He ordered the scene shot again, telling the Academy Award-winning actor that he had telegraphed the slap and that it should appear more spontaneous.

Newman and Kyra Sedgwick (Kansas, Tai Pan) got ready to shoot another take, as they continued filming Mr. and Mrs. Bridge, based on two novels by Evan S. Connell. The movie chronicles the lives of a middle-class American family from 1919 to 1944, detailing ordinary, everyday events.

The movie is being shot by Merchant Ivory Productions (A Room With a View, The Bostonians) this fall in Kansas City.

"Mr. Bridge is an upper-middle class attorney, and his first concern is that his family be well taken care of. He was familiar with the Depression and doesn't want his family deprived," said Connell, who wrote Mrs. Bridge in 1959 and Mr. Bridge 10 years later.

Even though the movie is a period piece, it will be relevant to today's audiences, he said. "Details of life change, but everybody's looking for the essence of life rather than the superficialities of it."

Newman and his wife, Joanne Woodward, star as Mr. and Mrs. Bridge. Sedgwick is one of their daughters.

The $8-million movie is the highest yet for a Merchant Ivory production, partly because extensive set renovations are needed for a film that spans 25 years.

PERIOD CHANGES

The house being used for much of the filming has been refurnished so it will look like a home in the late 1930s. The decor of the house, in a wealthy neighborhood with expansive lawns and ivy-covered walls, will be changed again as the story moves into another decade.

Scenes also will be shot in the Aztec Room, a lounge in the President Hotel that is being made to look like it was decades ago, and in the Plaza, a trendy shopping district.

Don Kling, a spokesman for the Missouri Film Commission, said the Bridge production was expected to spend $4.5 million in Kansas City for hotel rooms, food and other goods and services.

Movies are rarely shot in Kansas City, and the arrival of the cast and crew has given the city a touch of Hollywood fever.

Thom Marshall, who gave up his job as a bartender at a nearby restaurant to work as a production assistant intern, hustled forward to keep the crowd back.

"I wanted to break into the motion picture business somehow, and in Kansas City this seemed like the only way to start," he said. "So here I am, getting paid nothing, doing a lot, and loving it."

Helen Ostenberg, a Kansas City attorney, also got a job on the set and is now working nights at her practice. During the day she drives for Newman and Woodward. "Who could resist a chance like this?"

Those who were not lucky enough to have snared a job on the set can listen to the 'Newman Watches' on local radio stations in which listeners who have sighted the star phone in his whereabouts.

Merchant said shooting should be completed in Kansas City this month, and some scenes will be shot in New York. The film is tentatively scheduled for release next August.

Small Sacrifices — a love story

By Stephen Nicholls
The Canadian Press

Small Sacrifices, a two-part docudrama starting Sunday on ABC and CBC, is a real-life story of twisted love that turns into tragedy.

The show begins as a distraught mother arrives at the hospital emergency ward with three children — all four have been shot.

One child dies, another is paralysed, the third suffers brain damage.

The mother, wounded in the arm, says the shots were fired by a stranger who tried to steal the family's car.

The subsequent investigation shows that the mother did the shooting. It's suggested she shot the children out of a warped reaction to rejection by her former lover.

Small Sacrifices is based on the real-life story of Diane Downs, who was convicted of murdering one of her children and attempting to kill the other two on a country road in Oregon in 1983.

Farrah Fawcett stars as Downs, a disturbed and complex individual who alternately flirts with and flouts socially accepted behavior. She seems to need to manipulate men, yet she is bound by her obsession with her former lover, played by Ryan O'Neal.

Small Sacrifices, filmed in Alberta, follows the efforts of a district attorney (Emmy-winning John Shea) and a police detective (Gordon Clapp, veteran of many CBC productions) as they search for evidence.

They suspect Downs from the start, but no murder weapon is found, and the two surviving children aren't much help as witnesses. The boy is only three, too young to testify, and the girl is so traumatized by the incident she cannot talk about it.

Vancouver actor Garry Chalk plays Downs's estranged husband.

Fawcett is convincingly inscrutable as the conniving, multi-faced Downs. No simple character, we're never sure what lurks behind those sparkling blue eyes.

She fawns over her surviving daughter, but with a faintly menacing tone.

She seduces a professor, apparently to get pregnant. But is it out of some warped desire to have another child after killing one of her own? Or is it some sort of ploy to manipulate a man? Or simply a scheme to stay out of jail?

It's this convoluted character that breathes life into an otherwise standard docudrama-of-the-week.

Sheldon's first cassette — Changes — is already a hit in the E.T.

Lyndon Sheldon's country music hits the big time

By Claudia Villemaire

LENNOXVILLE — Catching Lyndon Sheldon and his manager Gerry Robitaille indoors, sitting down for some coffee, was almost impossible.

You see, they are both country lovin' folks - the kind you might find trudging through the bush when morning mist still fogs the horizon.

It was important to snag these two buddies for an interview, because Lyndon Sheldon is on the brink of something big. He's been making some of the finest country music around since way back in the '50s, and finally, this very week, his first tape is rolling off the press.

"You know, I always dreamed of doing something great," he said. "My Dad always said if you're going to dream, dream big. And that's what I did."

But after many years, the breaks didn't seem to head his way. Sheldon found his courage at a low ebb about a year ago.

"I guess I was at a crossroads or something," admitted the country musician. "That was about the lowest I had ever been. As a matter of fact, I guess I didn't really know which way to go at that point. It had been so many years and that dream still seemed a long way from happenin'," he said.

Fortunately, fate was keeping an eye on the talented songwriter and composer. Gerry Robitaille came along with an idea.

His experience in the music business, (remember Gerry and Jo Ann?), had taught him well about big breaks and promotions. He too was at a career standstill. The two old friends and fellow musicians decided to try and do something great together.

"So, Gerry suggested if I wanted to break into country music at all, I should go for the gold — do it right from the top — and that meant going to Nashville, meeting the right people and putting out a quality product."

Sheldon laughs as he recalls his thoughts on going to Nashville, every country boy's dream of the Big Time. "Imagine me, the little guy from Fitch Bay, a real country bumpkin, going down to the town I had only heard about on radio and in the movies. We left before sunup and I'm sure my eyes were as big as saucers."

Sheldon drove most of the 1200 mile trip, not letting go of the wheel until fatigue forced him to give up the last few miles.

"We met Jim West, one of the finest gentleman I have ever had the pleasure of knowing. And when that man gave me a big bear hug, welcomed me into his gracious home and proceeded to set the wheels in motion that would bring in the best quality musicians and technicians to tape my songs..well, I swear I didn't know if I was dreaming or not," Sheldon said.

EARLY DAYS

The Sheldon family, an all-male household, lived near the tiny Fitch Bay village where mountains flow down to the water of Lake Memphremagog. "We didn't have electricity until I was probably 13 so my family grew up the hard way."

Times were tough and Sheldon was working by the time he was ten. "I even went to work one summer when I was eight years old" he remembers. "The job was two miles down a woodsy trail and I walked both ways every day. That trail was sometimes pitch dark by the time I was heading home, and I remember being pretty scared — especially the night a cow followed me and I was too frightened to look behind me to see who or what was making the footsteps I could hear."

Sheldon finally turned to find a cow behind him, when all of a sudden, a bobcat screeched. "I swear my legs were a blur and I cleared a four-foot fence as though it was nothing that night."

By the time he was a teenager, he was singing and playing, and spent several years with Bill Donaldson and the Sunset Valley Boys. "I played a few times with Sam Hopper, a well known band in the 50s and 60s. Sam was a good friend and adviser to me too," Sheldon recalled.

Before he was into his twenties, Sheldon formed his own country music band, one that would last for 15 years. "We played winters at Motel Bretagne and summers out at the Crystal Lake Hotel at Lake Louvering. I guess I organized the first country music jamboree out there at Crystal Lake in 1972 or so. Well, we started at 3 in the afternoon and had to put a stop to things at 3 in the morning. It was unbelievable how folks came out to hear all the bands that turned out that day."

"I grew up at the time the country music greats were at their peak. George Jones, Waylon Jennings, Merle Haggard, Hank Snow, Porter Wagoner. Of course, they were my idols too. Perhaps they are largely responsible for inspiring me to keep practising and begin writing," Sheldon said.

GOOD GUYS FINISH FIRST

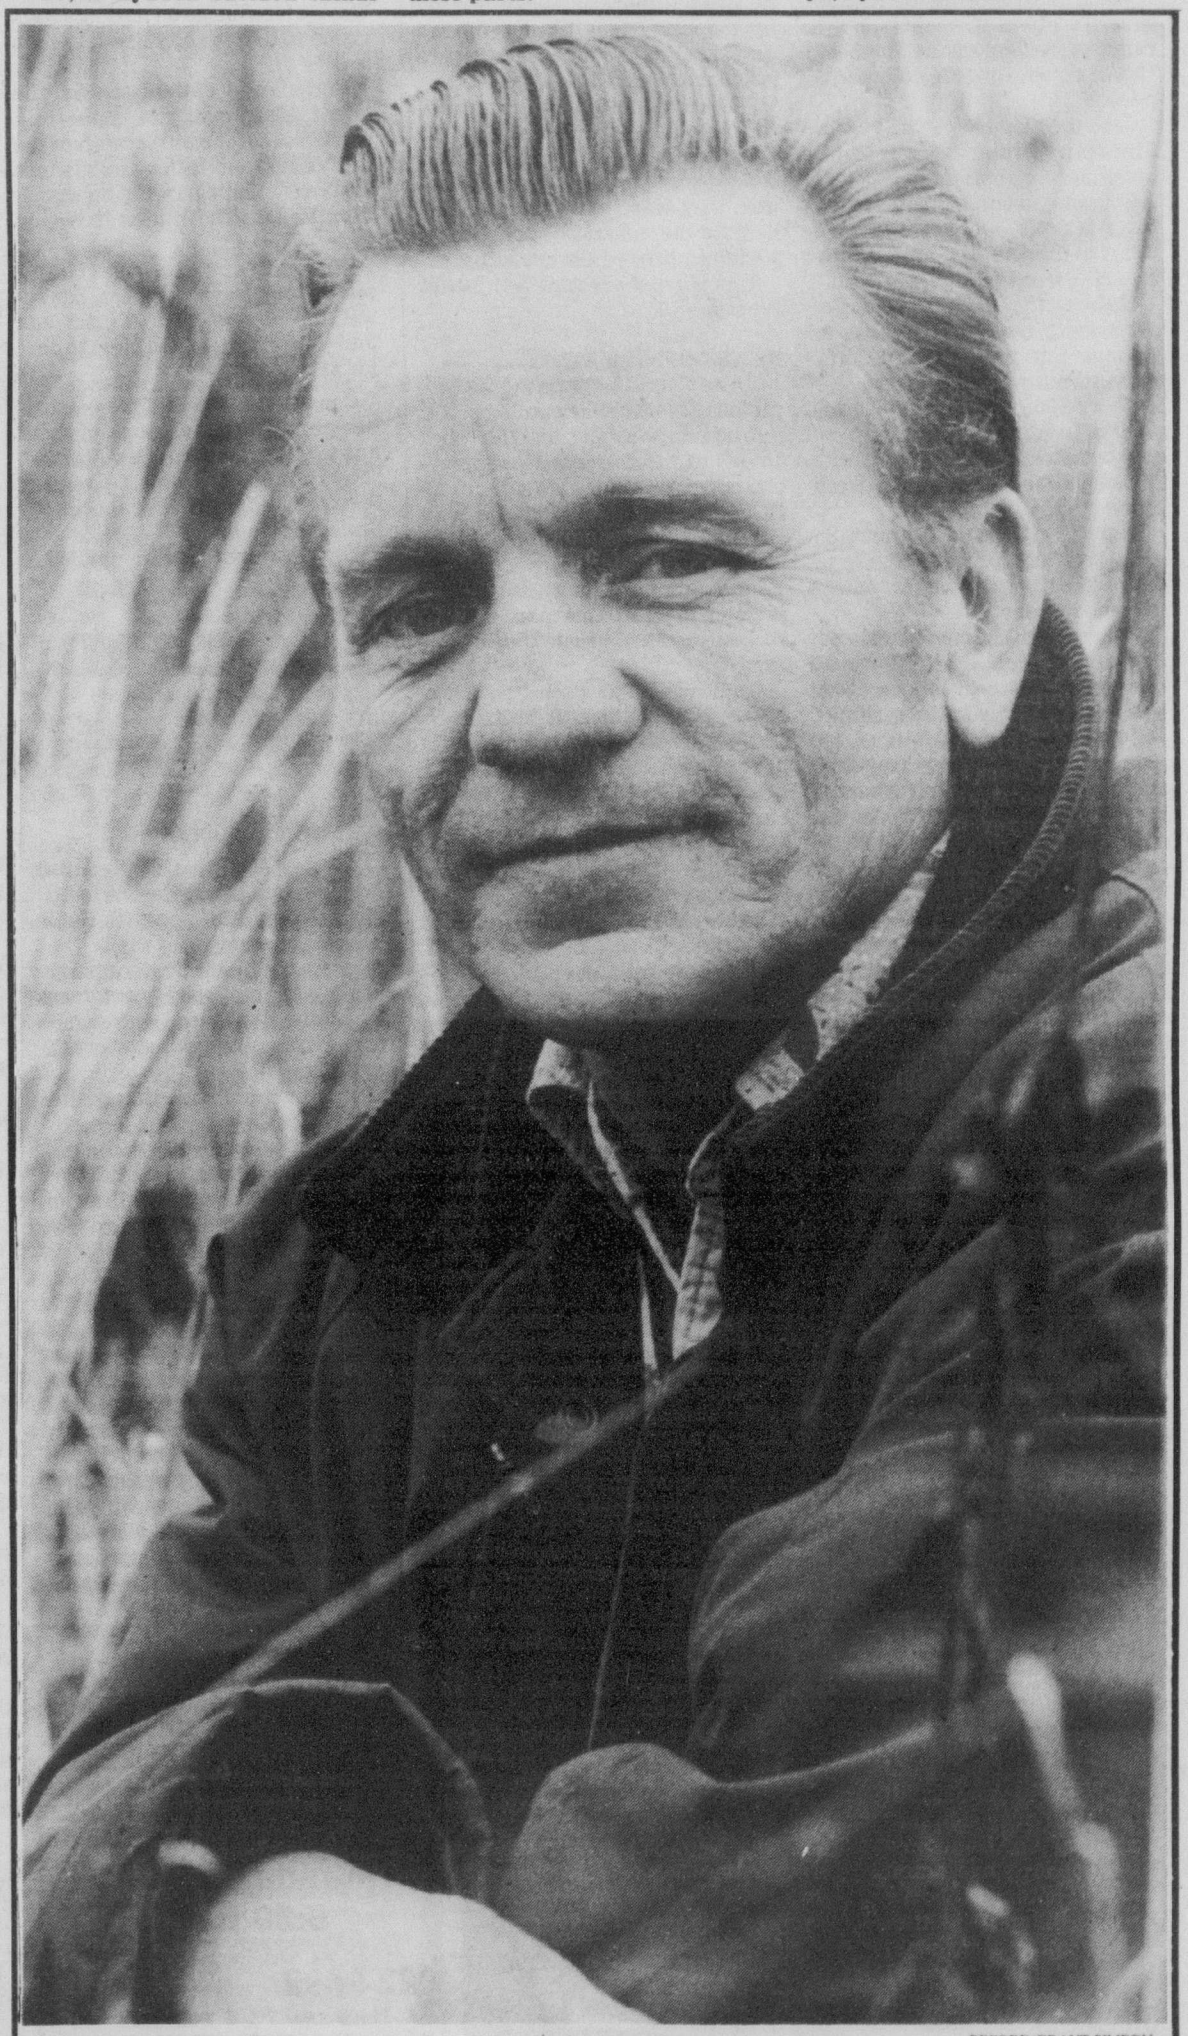

These days Sheldon and his musicians play mostly for charity benefits. "I think there comes a time when you have to look at all the good things that have happened to you, stop, and take time to show some appreciation. So, that's why we do mostly benefits for all kinds of good causes," he explained.

The Sheldon home has accomplished its own share of good deeds. A dozen or so foster children have found love and encouragement there in the past year. Let's not forget Sheldon's work as a house painter, where customers find their painter back checking out the job, re-doing where necessary, and never sending a bill.

We haven't mentioned the five to six hundred songs this typical Eastern Townships country boy has written and that his first cassette, Changes, is a selection of songs written, and arranged, by Sheldon himself.

So, if Lyndon Sheldon thinks good things have happened to him, then there's no doubt those good things are affecting all around these parts.

Good sounds echo a long time and good works leave memories that are never erased. God Bless ya, Lyndon Sheldon!

"My Dad always said if you're going to dream, then dream big. And that's what I did"

Lawrence Martin writes about his life in Russia

By Ian Bailey
The Canadian Press

When Lawrence Martin sat down to write about his years as a foreign correspondent in the Soviet Union, he recalled the voices of the people.

Like the sleepy-eyed 32-year-old Siberian woman who told him about her 11 abortions.

She was one of many Soviet citizens Martin met during three years in the U.S.S.R. as a reporter for the Toronto Globe and Mail.

He met the Rockers, a motorcycle gang that came in with the glasnost tide after Mikhail Gorbachev assumed power in 1985.

"We're normal human beings, we like freedom, speed and risk," said a member of the group, notorious for riding noisy, cheap Czech-made cycles.

And there was Ina, Martin's Soviet secretary, who told him to get out of Moscow and see the world's largest country.

"There are 11 time zones in our country," she said. "You can't base your judgments only on what people are saying in the capital."

So Martin remembered the people in his book Breaking With History, subtitled The Gorbachev Revolution, An Eyewitness Account.

'PEOPLE STORY'

"My idea was to write a book that covered the political story but also flesh it out as a people story," Martin said in a telephone interview from Ottawa. "It's a book about Gorbachev and his people."

Martin, 42, arrived in Moscow with his wife and daughter in 1985 bolstered by five months of Russian language training that enabled him to understand television or a Gorbachev speech.

He took advantage of doors opened by Gorbachev's policies of glasnost and perestroika — openness and restructuring.

Among many places, he visited Siberia, Afghanistan, the Chernobyl area and Gorbachev's home town of Stavropol, 1,600 kilometres south of Moscow, where he was surprised to find little recognition of its most famous son.

During his travels, Martin says, he found impatient people, soured by too many unfulfilled promises and skeptical about a leader more popular abroad than at home.

"The Soviet people were a pessimistic lot, a cynical breed because they have been delivered promises for so long," he said. "Even when I left, they were still grim because despite the reforms, (Gorbachev) hadn't improved the economy."

But Martin admires the Soviet leader.

SENSE OF GREATNESS

"As a Canadian, I wasn't as suspicious of Gorbachev pulling off a public-relations line, like the Americans and Brits were. Their journalism was more skeptical. I thought he meant what he was saying.

"There's something about Gorbachev that made me feel this man is going to do it. This man is going to be one of the greats of the century."

Gorbachev has been leading a one-man revolution as he tries to jump-start the country with such measures as free elections, and Martin doesn't think the U.S.S.R. can turn back.

"The spirit of it is in the blood of the people. For some guy to turn the clock back ... some leader could try but there would be blood in the streets."

Openness and government efforts to work with the media are making Moscow more like Washington, says Martin. But obvious differences remain.

"One half of Washington is beautiful with limousines, wealth and an upper class living in style. The other half, the black half, is poor with drugs and handguns, which is a reflection of the society because of the extremes of wealth.

"In Moscow, it's uniform — equal poverty for all."

Stars sell Vegas for one dollar

By Robert Macy

LAS VEGAS (AP) — They draw six-digit salaries performing in the glitzy showrooms of Las Vegas. But when stars like Frank Sinatra, Bill Cosby, Barbara Mandrell and Wayne Newton go on national television to tout the city itself, the tab is only $1.

Under most circumstances, the talent fees would run in the millions. Not so for commercials of the Las Vegas Convention and Visitors Authority that carry the message, "Las Vegas: The American Way to Play."

When R and R Advertising sought out show business heavyweights for the TV and print ads four years ago it asked them to do it for $1.

Considering the fact the celebrities earn a healthy chunk of their annual income in Las Vegas' showrooms, it stands to reason they're willing to sing the city's praises for a buck.

The ads were the brain-child of R and R owner Sig Rogich and Billy Vassiliadis, the agency's president.

Rogich was a member of the Tuesday Team that produced former president Ronald Reagan's campaign advertising in 1984. And he was advertising director for the campaign of President George Bush in 1988. He placed his interest in the agency in a blind trust earlier this year when he went to Washington as a special assistant to Bush, handling media relations.

SOUGHT FRESHNESS

The idea of using stars evolved in 1985 when R and R was looking for fresh ideas to sell Las Vegas. It was hampered by rules of the Federal Communications Commission that prohibit gambling advertising.

"Surveys by the Convention Authority show that, next to gaming, entertainment is the city's leading attraction," Vassiliadis said.

The agency contacted Sinatra, the city's highest-paid entertainer at a reported $500,000 US a week. He is also closely identified with Las Vegas, having performed there for 38 years.

"He was very amenable to the idea," Vassiliadis recalled. "The town's been very good to him, and he's been very good to the town."

Or, as Sinatra put it himself, through a spokesman: "I have been married to the city of Las Vegas since 1951 and there will never be a divorce. I love it."

Once Sinatra accepted the $1 deal, other stars fell into place.

They include Cosby, Newton, Mandrell, Kenny Rogers, Rich Little, Joan Rivers, Paul Anka, Sammy Davis Jr., Jay Leno, the Pointer Sisters, David Brenner, the Judds, Lee Greenwood, the McGuire Sisters, Siegfried and Roy, the Smothers Brothers, Smokey Robinson, Natalie Cole, Don Rickles, Norm Crosby, and boxers Sugar Ray Leonard and Tommy Hearns.

TV change: from billionaire's wife to Sister Kate — a nun

By Stephen Nicholls

LOS ANGELES (CP) — Sister Kate is a nun of a different habit.

In another life, she was Sable Colby on Dynasty.

That's the television transfiguration accomplished by actress Stephanie Beacham, who's gone from billionaire's wife to orphanage nun.

For Beacham, the change has been a blessing.

"That's very tiresome, having six costume fittings a week," says Beacham of the array of glittering raiments she wore on Dynasty.

But on the new NBC sitcom, which also runs on CTV, she's found "heaven, just being in a little navy blue skirt and white blouse."

Her wardrobe for this news conference is somewhere in between.

The basic ensemble is certainly convent-friendly: Her shapely torso is conservatively swathed in a snow-white short-sleeved blouse, tucked primly into an olive-buff skirt that falls respectably below the knee.

But a dash of flash, in gold bracelets and a chic wristwatch, suggests the spirit of Sable hasn't been exorcised completely.

As the title character in Sister Kate, Beacham plays a nononsense nun who's capable of putting her wayward charges in place with a stern tongue and a frosty tone.

When one waif chances to hug her, she grimaces.

TOUGH NUN

A tough nun? Heaven forbid.

But Beacham has faith in the show, and she doesn't think Roman Catholics will object to her character's imperious and rather aloof nature.

"She's definitely good inside, and she definitely has an understanding of Catholic morality," Beacham asserts in the lofty, rounded-vowel dialect of the English upper crust. "She just, herself, is a difficult person."

To create the role, Beacham resurrected some personalities from her past.

She fashioned Sister Kate after the nuns at the British convent school she attended as a child.

"I'm very grateful that I've got those severe memories of nuns who I know loved us but frightened us," she says. Her smile takes on a slightly sadistic twist. "And didn't mind frightening us.

"I think that I owe them a hell of lot."

To further research and update the part, she dropped in on some 1980s nuns at a church-run "food-handout place" in Los Angeles.

NOT WIMPY

"I will be talking to them a lot because they're very keen that nuns don't seem wimpy.

"I think they're sick and tired of singing nuns and soppy nuns. These women are dedicated to improving everybody's lives, and also to not being seen as straight and boring and tiresome. They want to help and they want to have fun.

"They wear blue jeans, they wear nail varnish and they wear eye shadow and earrings," she says.

But don't expect Sister Kate to get so dolled up.

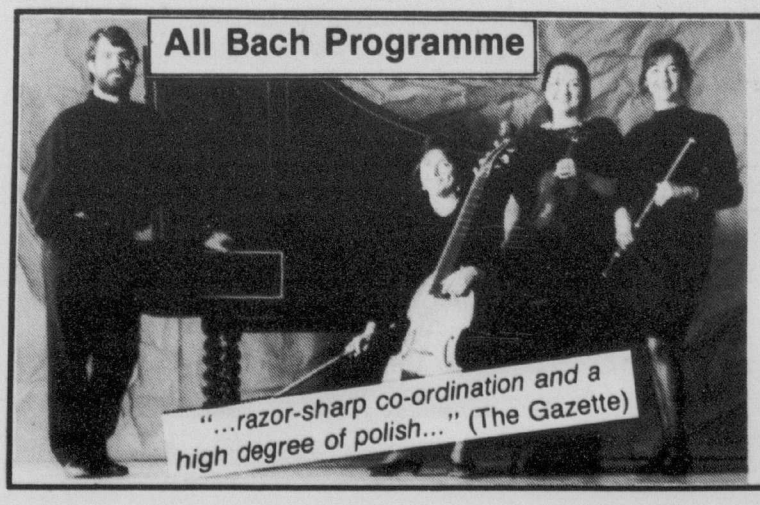

"Otherwise people will be accusing me that I want to look glamorous and I can't let go of the Colbys."

Some earthly temptations may figure into the show, though.

"She will be trying to lead her life very straight and narrow, and the slightest (transgression) ... eating chocolate during Lent, can be a comedic possibility."

Believe it or not, she says Sister Kate is much easier to play than Sable. "It's much deeper in my background than is some billionaire's wife."

Old habits die hard.

Midnight Tourist Twilight Zone — a quirky story

Midnight Twilight Tourist Zone by Sharon Riis (DOUGLAS & McINTYRE): $21.95, 136 pp.

Alberta writer Sharon Riis's novel is aptly titled Midnight Twilight Tourist Zone, in light of the fact that parts of it verge over towards Rod Sterling's "Twilight Zone" after a completely prosaic opening.

What begins as a simple narrative about a public health nurse who ventures into the frozen outback of rural Alberta to visit an ailing and elderly Polish gentleman, takes a turn into the supernatural quite unexpectedly. Rosalie, who is married with two children, decides that she should pay a neighbourly and professional call on Josef Przysieszny, an infirm man in his eighties who lives in an isolated cabin near her. When she arrives at Josef's humble abode she finds him languishing in his bed, delirious, calling out for someone named Wanda.

SUSPENSE TO THE END

Not until the end of the novel does the reader find any realistic explanation for Josef's fixation on Wanda, and it would be unfair to divulge the book's strange conclusion. Between the banal, innocent opening, and the revelations of Riis's ending, however, there is a great deal of unexplained action that can only be understood as either hallucinations, or some sort of psychic experience shared by nurse Rosalie and her quirky patient.

Nurse and patient alike go through a series of reminiscences about their past: Rosalie recalling former lovers, and experiencing strange dreams; Josef drifting off into European events such as attending a play by Hanns Johst, whose famous line "When I hear the word culture I slip back the safety catch of my revolver", is often mistakenly attributed to Hermann Goring.

EVEN EROTIC DANCING

Stranger still is the strange erotic dance that is played out between Josef, Rosalie, and the sudden materialization of the woman known as Wanda. Riis's novel weaves the exchanges between this odd trio together in a chimera of half-remembered dreams and strange dialogue. As well, there is a sexual menage-a-trois played out that is as bizarre as anything in Canadian fiction, with Rosalie seemingly becoming Wanda, and both women being in competition at times for the sexual favours of the octogenarian Polish gentleman.

The quirky shifts in place and person keep the reader on his toes but Sharon Riis's novel relies on more than surprise to keep attention keenly focussed on her compelling characters. There is something fragile and precarious about Josef's character when we first meet him, but he takes on an identity that is far removed from the invalid figure seen in the book's opening.

Rosalie, too, has an interesting background, and as she and the old man find their lives intersecting, the reader shares in the mystery of Riis's fictional concoction. For such a slender volume, author Sharon Riis provides us with much to ponder in Midnight Twilight Tourist Zone.

RECORD REVIEWS

Chris De Burgh Spark To A Flame (A&M)

George Harrison Best Of Dark Horse: 1976-1989 (DARK HORSE — WEA)

Canadian fans of singer/songwriter Chris De Burgh — and his numbers north of the border far exceed his American market showing — may be fooled by the title to this album, but it is sub-titled "The Very Best Of". This can only mean that the month of November is upon us and the countdown of shopping days until The Season will reveal countless "Best Of" packages, not to mention "Anthologies", "Collections" and "Double Live" sets of many familiar performers.

Luckily the first two such packages feature tried and true artists in Chris De Burgh and the gentle Beatle's retrospective of the past decade or so.

De Burgh's gathering of a generous British baker's-dozen-plus-one of fourteen songs is culled from his albums The Getaway, Flying Colours, Man On The Line, Into The Light, and Spanish Train & Other Stores. Two new songs, produced by Roy Thomas Baker, are added to the dozen hits and semhits here, but neither "This Waiting Heart", nor "Diamond In The Dark" will have the impact of material like "A Spaceman Came Travelling", one of the earliest De Burgh successes.

More recent tracks like "Missing You", or "The Lady In Red", reveal that the mellow, balladeer side of the Irish composer has replaced the spinner of narrative tales such as "Spanish Train". The result of his homogeneity of composing can be heard on this relaxing album which showcases the lighter side of Chris De Burgh.

For George Harrison's retrospective, it would be fair to say that without the two looking-back-at-the-Beatles tracks, "All Those Years Ago" and "When We Was Fab", the gathering of material from Gone Troppo or Somewhere In England might have left this record a bit thin in the songs department.

Thanks to the Cloud Nine offerings and the wonderful tribute to Lennon. "All Those Years Ago", plus the rollicking send-up of the Liverpudlian scuffling days, "When We Was Fab". George's thirteen year anthology has some brilliant high spots.

Had the albums like Thirty Three & 1/3 been the only measuring stick, then songs such as "Blow Away", the answer to "Here Comes The Sun" titled "Here Comes The Moon", and the pretty ballad, "Love Comes To Everyone" might have been a fair measure of Harrison's songwriting talents on his solo stint away from the smothering influence of competing with the greatest rock craftsmen of all time, Lennon & McCartney.

George's Top-Ten breakthrough song, "Got My Mind Set On You", is included here, and it's only fitting that a song from obscure American rhythm and blues musician Rudy Clark should propel George into the limelight again, the way that John & Paul's crooning of Smokey Robinson & The Miracles' "You've Really Got A Hold On Me" helped do the same for the Fab Four back in 1963.

"Crackerbox Palace", on the other hand", is more along the lines of the kind of material that was probably submitted for group inclusion on albums like Abbey Road, only to be rejected so that songs like Lennon's "Because", or McCartney's "Oh Darling" could be assured of space on the album. It is indeed strange to think that a whole generation of music lovers will pick up this collection on the strength of the track "Got My Mind Set On You", hoping that this artist's talents might have been intact a few years before that hit. Wait'll they hear about All Things Must Pass from almost two decades ago!

Mental As Anything Cyclone Raymond (COLUMBIA)

Scrap all those impressions of Mental As Anything as being that rather unhinged, nutty Australian Group that is a down under version of the Lovin' Spoonful or some other sixties madcaps. Reg Mombassa and the other four wacky members of the Mentals blend a whole range of North American song styles together to create their most powerful, listenable album yet.

It would be easy to view Mental As Anything as Little River Band with their tongues-in-cheeks, if were not for the fact that they are able to take a great many Camican influences — rockabilly, early rock, Nashville, and R&B — and transform them into something that is their own trademark sound.

With four of the band writing tunes, there's no chance of the Mentals getting into a rut as far as their sound is concerned. Mombassa's "The Walls Of The World" is a heavier song than the acoustic, quiet rhythms of Martin Plaza's "Some Feelings", and the changing of vocalists (each writer singing his own track?) makes for a pleasant rotation of styles.

Peter O'Doherty, bassist, reveals the universal Elvis influence on the beaty track "Baby You're Wild", which kicks off side two in the same spirit as the record's first side closed with Chuck Berry's "Rock And Roll Music", as good a cover of the classic heard lately. Greedy Smith, the keyboard specialist contributes a moody ballad, "The World Seems Difficult", which features lots of close harmonies and what sounds like some ARP synth string effects.

On Martin Plaza's "In The Sunshine" they layer on the vocals and effects to come up with a track that sounds like it could have been on XTC's Skylarking album, while on "Get You Back", you would swear that this Australian group had been doing a lot of listening to Ronnie Milsap and other uptown country singers. Even if they are all over the musical map, the thing about the music of Mental As Anything is that the good-timey feel of it comes across to the listener the way that the Spoonful stuff did in the sixties.

CBC television's Family Hour presents Emmy award-winning Cirque du Soleil: We Reinvent the Circus, Sunday, Nov. 12 at 7. This is a one-hour entertainment special taped under the big top in Montreal that brings the fantasy and magic of Quebec-based circus troupe Cirque du Soleil into homes across the country.

A four-hour, two-part mini-series begins Sunday at 9 and continues on Tuesday, also at 9. Titled Small Sacrifices, it tells the story of Diane Downs' three young children who were shot point blank with a .22 revolver for no apparent reason by an unknown assailant on a dark, deserted road, with the result that Downs was convicted of cold-bloodedly trying to murder her children. Filmed in Edmonton, Small Sacrifices stars Farrah Fawcett as Diane Downs.

CTV HIGHLIGHTS

In between the two part mini-series — Small Sacrifices — on CBC, on Monday night that is, CTV will talk to Farah Fawcett about her thoughts on this shocking, real-life story. That's on Entertainment tonight, Monday at 7.

A famous movie comes on at 1 in the morning on Thursday. For those night owls who appreciate watching the old classics, there's War and Peace, the story of three families caught up in the Napoleonic wars in Russia during 1805 and 1812.

Friday at 8, CFCF presents a special titled Back to the Future starring Michael J. Fox.

VERMONT ETV HIGHLIGHTS

Nature goes to Hong Kong in Land of Dragons Sunday at 8. On Monday at 9, Art of the Western World examines the realism of Courbet who paved the way for the major Impressionists.

By Claudia Villemaire

On Thursday at 7:30, Search for Common Ground examines traditional and untraditional ways of treating cancer. Friday, Letters from the Park, a short story by Gabriel Garcia Marques adapted for film appears on Great Performances at 9.

Events

The Sherbrooke and District University Women's Club will welcome Clifford Lincoln as their guest speaker at a dinner meeting slated for Thursday, Nov. 9 at Auberge des Gouverneurs, 3131 King West, Sherbrooke. The evening's topic is the Environmental Issue. Dinner begins at 5:30.

The modern dance company called Axile will present their new show at the University of Sherbrooke Nov. 4, 10 and 11. There are three choreographies titled Relais, Chère Helene and Femme. That's in La Petite Salle at 8 each evening.

A musical group called Groupe Show will present their latest music and song Nov. 11 and 12 at 8. The show includes more than 40 players on stage, turning out in 150 costumes in a constantly changing program of song and dance.

The United Church Women of Calvary United Church, Pleasant Street, Sutton are holding their Annual Christmas Bazaar on Saturday, Nov. 11 from 1:30 to 4. Baked goods, crafts, nearly new articles and, of course, tables for tea are all featured. What a spot for some particular christmas shopping and a bite or two of sweets.

Thérèse Dassylva, Coaticook artist, is at the Municipal Library this week. See EXHIBITIONS.

Music

The second in the 89-90 Music Chez Nous series from the Department of Music at Bishop's University will feature two well-known Eastern Townships pianists: France Dupuis and Tom Gordon. Offering a program of all two-piano repertoire they will perform works by Mozart, Robert Schumann, Darius Milhaud and Rachmaninoff. The concert will take place tonight, Nov. 10 at 8:30 in Centennial Theatre on the Bishop's University campus. Tickets are on sale at the Centennial box office at $5 ($3 for students and seniors). For info, call the Department of Music at (819) 822-9642.

Modern dance soloist Margie Gillis brings her boundless talent to the Centennial Stage at Bishop's University Nov. 18. A Montreal native, Gillis has been touring the globe for more than ten years, dancing for audiences from New York to Spain, China and beyond. The Gillis solo dance performance is the second event of the 1989-90 Dance Series. Tickets are now on sale at the theatre box office, open daily - Monday to Friday. Reservations may be made by calling (819) 822-9692.

Another evening to remember has been organized by those folks at Centennial dedicated to bringing great artists to our fair corner. An evening of Bach with Ensemble Orion at Centennial Theatre is scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 23 at 8:30. Performing 18th century chamber music, the ensemble is comprised of four musicians, each of whom specializes in period performances of the Baroque repertoire. Ensemble Arion is the third presentation in the 1989-90 series. Call Centennial Theatre box office for information and/or reservations - (819) 822-9692.

Internationally renowned Scottish harpist William Jackson will give a concert Nov. 18 at the Unitarian-universalist Church in Derby Line, Vermont. Jackson's talents, which include playing traditional Scottish harp, the Clarsach, also extend from sensitive interpretations and creative arrangements of traditional Scottish music to his own warm and evocative compositions, such as Wellpark Suite. The concert is scheduled for 8 — admission is $5 U.S./$6 Cdn. For info call (819)876-2805 or (802)873-3454.

There's a Peace Concert and Annual Forum planned for 8 o'clock at Plymouth Trinity Church, corner of Dufferin and Montreal Streets, Sherbrooke on Nov. 11. Proceeds from the benefit concert will go to the Innu defense fund to help the native peoples of Labrador and northeastern Quebec in their current campaign against low-level flights and other military exercises. A Chilean group, local jazz musicians and performers of folk music with Irish overtones will make up a most enjoyable program. An added attraction is a modern dance troupe from Montreal. Special guest musician is Innu Gabriel Jourdain performing traditional Innu music. Tickets, at $6 may be purchased at the door or at the Video Club in Lennoxville. Reservations may also be made by calling 569-9787.

This concert is the concluding event for the Annual Peace Forum which begins Friday night and runs all day Saturday, Nov. 11, with workshops and conferences, at College Mont Notre Dame.

And on Armistice Day, the Magog Branch — Royal Canadian Legion will hold their annual Armstice Day Dance — Nov. 11 — with the Bolton Brothers doing the honors.

The Motel Le Marquis, in Richmond, are breaking in their new bar called Salle Le Grand Duc, with some ringing country music sounds. This month Country Fever with Steve Aulis and his goodwife Jessie are the performing stars with their own excellent sounds of country. They'll be on hand every Friday and Saturday at the IN spot, just up the hill on Craig Road, not far from the intersection of route 116 and 143. Of course, Steve has trimmed those fetching locks a little short I noticed last week. Probably the pressure of having so many secret admiring females was too much for him. So, he trimmed down that face hair. I just happen to know one lady who stated in no uncertain way she thought he was even more fetching with the trimmed look.

Coming to the Hut, (Army, Navy and Air Force Association) in Lennoxville is the Rocky River Band for the month of November. They'll tune up every Saturday night around 9 and won't put their music away until 1. The night starts early and, if you've a mind, leave time for one more stop before you head home.

While we're talking about the Hut, don't forget St. Andrew's Day comes around again on November 30. I'm not sure if the folks down there had this in mind but they have planned a special evening for the lovers of all that is Scottish including the skirl of the pipes. The Eastern Townships Pipe Band will be donning those tartans again, tuning up the reeds and putting on a show of Scottish music and dancing in between regular country music sets on November 25. They did the same last year, and folks talked long and loud about their enjoyable evening on Scottish Music night. So, mark you're calendar, pin on a bit of the 'plaidie' and get your dancin' feet and listenin' ears down to the Hut for this event.

The Good Ole Boys have moved back to the Motel Bretagne, near the Waterville turn on the Stanstead highway. That great reputation for lively, traditional country follows them too so go on out and take a listen to these talented people. They're makin' music Friday, Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons all month.

At the Golden Lion Pub this weekend, the Bludgeon Brothers Band featuring Butch Coulter on harmonica (he's absolutely great) and Steven Barry, a famous bass player from Montreal. Admission is $2 and music starts around 10:30.

Late news: Country Express is at the Manoir Waterville every Friday in Nov.

The Bolton Brothers are at the Magog Branch, Royal Canadian Legion tomorrow night for the annual Armistice Day Dance.

The Canadian Forces Band will put on one of their excellent concerts at the University of Sherbrooke, Salle Maurice O'Bready on Nov. 14. Music begins at 8:30. This particular group is especially talented, presenting a mix of music styles and selections that can't help but please just about any taste. They cover Glen Miller and even modern day rock with some comedy thrown in. It's a great show.

Exhibitions

At Sherbrooke University, ongoing exhibitions by Bernard Rousseau and David Sorensen.

At Galerie Horace, 906 King St. W., Sherbrooke, an unusual event — an auction of works by artist-members of the gallery after a month-long exhibition of their works. The exhibition by 29 artists opened last week in Salle 1 and continues until auction day Nov. 26 at 1.

Galerie Horace has another display of recent works by Gilles Larivière, who works in wood sculptures, titled CONTES/DECOMPTE. This exhibition continues all month. The gallery is located at the corner of King West and Esplanade (opposite Queen).

k.d. lang's Buffalo Cafe airs for the first time Sunday, Nov. 12 on CBC. See NOTES.*

Arts Sutton presents an exhibition of well-known artists opening Nov. 7 at 2 and continuing each week from Thursday to Sunday from 12 to 5. Works by Sylvain Boulanger, Anna di Giorgio, Thérèse Huard, Jane Kantor and Stansje Plantenga. For info call (514) 538-2563.

At the Beaulne Museum in Coaticook, Yvan-Louis Roy is presenting his recent work to the public. The show continues until Nov. 12.

The firm of Raymond, Chabot, Martin, Paré located at 455 King St. W. in Sherbrooke officially opened an exhibition by the three first-place winners of the Metiers d'Art de l'Estrie competition recently. The show will continue until Dec. 8. Featured are the works of Sylvie Boisclair, Annette Huet and André Godbout.

Coming Nov. 24, to the Rose Window in Knowlton, an exhibition of the best works selected in their third Open Art Competition.

You remember our recent Townships Week star Emoke de Galocsy? Now this talented artist is bringing her work out for all to see. Her exhibition opened at the Caisse Populaire St. Jean de Brebeuf, 2105 King W., Sherbrooke. Viewing hours are Monday to Wednesday from 10 to 3, Thursday from 10 to 8 and Friday from 10 to 6. The exhibition continues until Nov. 30.

At Caisse Populaire de Sherbrooke-Est a show of works by three artists — Pauline Boudreau, with her watercolors, Léon Leblanc, sculptor and Michel Martin, artist in glass, continues until Dec. 1. Gallery hours are Monday, Tuesday and Friday from 10 till 3, Wednesday from 10 to 5:45 and Thursday from 10 to 8.

A travelling art collection owned by Union Vie Mutual will be on display at Musée des Beaux Arts on rue Palais in Sherbrooke until Dec. 3. The Sherbrooke exhibition is the last stop in a year-long tour across the province.

The Cowansville artist Myriam Bardoul will exhibit her latest work at the gallery l'Espace at 497 Main St. W. in Magog from Nov. 4 to 14. Gallery hours are Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 5, Thursday and Friday from 1 to 9.

Also at l'Espace until Dec. 3, Denise Coté's astonishing, original works titled Coté Irrationnel are on display. At the same time, in Salle B, an exhibition of photos and panels by Hélène Plourde, paintings by Marie-Hélène Roy, ceramics by Nicole Girard and last week's featured artist's masks spotlighted until Nov. 14 at 5.

The Sherbrooke Historical Society has prepared yet another eye-opener exhibition. This one links our elected deputies and members of Parliament with the signs of the zodiac and leaves the viewer to devise which signs fit. The exhibition, titled Etes-vous Député(e) Non, je suis Bélier begins today and continues until February, 1990.

At Galerie Jeannine Blais in North Hatley, an exhibition by Guy Boulizon began Saturday, Nov. 4 and continues until Monday, Nov. 13. Gallery hours are from 10 till 5 everyday.

The Homestead will present the seventh annual exhibition of recent paintings by Gordon Ladd beginning Nov. 18 and continuing until Nov. 26 at their exhibition hall, 3905 Route 147, Lennoxville. Viewing times are Saturday from 9 to 5, Sunday from 1 to 5 and weekdays from 10 to 6. Gordon Ladd is a well known Eastern Townships landscape artist and was the first Quebec artist to have his work reproduced on a collector plate.

Everyone is invited to an exhibition and talk by Coaticook artist Thérèse Dassylva at the Sherbrooke Municipal Library on Nov. 14 at 7:30. Dassylva will speak about her experiences as an artist during the past 12 years. The exhibition continues until Dec. 4.

Theatre

Next week, Saturday — Nov. 18 — Theatre Lac Brome will be presenting Youtheatre's production of Shades. This show has been getting standing ovations during its current Montreal run which has been extended by three weeks. The show starts at 8 — tickets are $10 and reservations may be made by calling either (514) 243-6121 or 1-800-363-7079.

Movies

Continuing again this week at the Cinéma Carrefour — Look Who's Talking, rated G. This comedy is totally delightful, the script is great and Bruce Willis comes on in one of his strongest roles. Curtain rises Saturday and Sunday at 1, 3:10, 5:15, 7:20 and 9:30. Weekdays: 7:20 and 9:30.

Two films come to Cinéma Princesse in Cowansville this week. Sea of Love, beginning each evening at 7:15 followed by Kickboxer at 9:20. The Tuesday night special — $3.75 for each show — is still in effect.

At Merrill's Showplace — Next of Kin opens at 7:10 and 9:25 Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Weekend matinées begin at 2:05 and shows begin at 7:25 during the week. Sea of Love continues this week starring Al Pacino. It's kind of bizarre but heard it's got a better script than Next of Kin. Curtain rises at 6:50 and 9:20 on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Weekdays at 7:20 with matinées Saturdays and Sundays at 1:55.

The Fabulous Baker Boys opens this week too. Times are Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 7 and 9:15, weekend matinées at 1:45 and weekdays at 7:30.

Canadians can head for the slopes in cut-price Europe

By Bill Beacon
The Canadian Press

A strong Canadian dollar could make Europe, especially Austria, the place to go this winter for Canadian snow hounds with an urge to ski bigger and better slopes.

While world-class Whistler in British Columbia remains the single most popular ski destination for Canadians, the time is right for those who like European culture with their high-mountain powder.

"You can go to Europe (from eastern and central Canada) for $100-$200 more than it costs to go to Whistler," says Herb Ratsch of Montreal-based Five Seasons Ski Tours.

"The difference is the ambiance and you can't put a dollar value on that."

While the old continent generally suffered from lack of snow the past two years, Austria, particularly the Arlberg region in Tyrolia, was the exception.

Most ski tour operators have added Austria to their schedules this season. Good food, excellent beer and a village atmosphere are key attractions, not to mention Alpine skiing as good as any in Europe.

TOP RESORTS

The Tyrol region of western Austria has the big-name resorts — Kitzbuehel in the east, with its awesome World Cup downhill run, Innsbruck in the middle, site of the 1964 and 1976 Winter Olympics, and St. Anton in Arlberg in the west. The region is a skier's mecca, with 1,200 lifts, tows and cable cars.

Kitzbuehel alone has 35 kilometres of trails in 60 runs. To make lineups non-existent, there are 56 lifts to the top.

In all of Austria, there are 3,000 ski-lifts in 800 towns and villages.

As well as downhill challenges, Austria offers visitors mountain villages, smaller hotels and inviting chalets quite unlike the functional but unromantic gloss of most North American resorts.

"There are no condos," says Mimi Chugami of the Austrian tourist bureau in Montreal. "You won't find any modern, glassy buildings in the ski areas. Mostly, there are chalets."

Most ski vacations to Austria are directed through Munich, with a final night in the lively Bavarian capital as an added attraction.

Prices of European ski holidays for Canadians now are as low as they have been in years.

Alitalia is offering 10-day packages in January and February ranging from $849 to $1,509 for return air fare from central Canada, plus seven nights' resort accommodation and two nights in Rome. The price depends on the type of accommodation.

Skican, a tour operator based in Toronto, has one-week trips to Austria, France or Switzerland starting at $1,100 for air fare, transfers, hotel and lifts.

Another Toronto operator, SporTours, offers custom vacations — groups of at least four clients choose their own travel schedule — to the same countries.

Swissair has a package to Switzerland that allows people to stay at one resort but ski at seven different resorts throughout the week.

MARKED DOWN

Exchange rates are particularly favorable to Canadians.

Brian Griffith, vice-president of foreign exchange at the Royal Bank of Canada, said the loonie is eight- to 10-per-cent stronger against the West German mark, the bellwether European currency, than it was a year ago.

But best to head over this season — Griffith says the dollar is likely to weaken next year.

"We're at a plateau now. We're at the high point of the current four-year cycle."

Still, Canadian tour operators say most skiers will stay in North America — with Whistler, north of Vancouver, the main Canadian destination.

With more high-speed lifts being installed at Whistler, lineups should be short even when the hills are operating at capacity.

$500 A WEEK

Excluding air fare, week-long ski packages begin at about $500 at Whistler and other western resorts like Banff and Jasper.

Mont Tremblant, in the Laurentians north of Montreal, is a perennial favorite in the East. With a vertical drop of some 650 metres, it's the highest peak in Quebec.

Mont-Ste-Anne, near Quebec City, has an impressive new cable car and a new village to make it another attractive alternative in the East.

South of the border, SporTours is pushing Utah which boasts it has "the best skiing in the world" and guaranteed powder, starting at one week for $889.

Colorado and the giant Killington in Vermont are other favorites for which reasonably priced vacation packages are available.

Fallingwater is enchanting

By Patricia Zengerle

BEAR RUN, Pa. (Reuter) — In a countryside best known for white-water rafting and other outdoor pursuits sits one of Pennsylvania's most popular tourist attractions — Fallingwater, the Frank Lloyd Wright design that many consider the greatest house of the 20th century.

The house is off the beaten trail, 115 kilometres from Pittsburgh or a 3½-hour drive from Washington. But 120,000 people visit each year, many from distant places and about 15 per cent from overseas.

Indeed, last summer, the 50th anniversary of the house's completion, 1,100 visitors a day made pilgrimages, and sometimes visitors had to be turned away.

"There's very strong interest in the period, increased interest in architecture in general and in design," says Lynda Waggoner, Fallingwater's curator.

FOREIGN DISPAY

For foreign visitors, Waggoner's staff has developed tape-recorded house tours in French, Spanish, German, Italian and Japanese.

Fallingwater is particularly popular with the Japanese, she says. Wright was greatly influenced by Japanese architecture; he visited Japan in 1913 and lived there for five years starting in 1916.

Elements of Japanese design — its organic quality, horizontality and reverence for nature — are major reasons for Fallingwater's enduring appeal, Waggoner says.

Yet Wright was "the quintessential American architect," she adds, and Fallingwater was one of his quintessential American works.

'AMERICAN SPIRIT'

"It has an American spirit that is born of the earth here, that doesn't look to historic precedent," she said.

Built in a forest ravine, Fallingwater is a series of cantilevered concrete trays that resemble a stack of huge stone tablets perched on top of a waterfall.

Its fireplace core is built of sandstone quarried on the property and, though Wright's low ceilings in the interior give it a warm, cave-like feeling, most of Fallingwater's wall area consists of windows.

Virtually every room opens out, either on to a terrace or, in the living room, to a staircase leading to the falls below.

The windows, terraces and staircase — as well as a boulder from outside the house that acts as the base of the living room fireplace, illustrate Wright's belief in "organic" architecture, integrated with nature, Waggoner said.

'ORGANIC'

Wright, who died in 1959 at age 92, said in a 1953 interview: "Organic means, in a philosophic sense, entity, where the whole is to the part as the part is to the whole, and where the nature of materials, the nature of the purpose, the nature of the entire performance becomes a necessity."

Says Waggoner: "That coming together of nature, architecture and the client is what made Fallingwater possible."

Wright designed Fallingwater as a vacation home for Edgar Kaufmann, a Pittsburgh department store mogul, who was not a crass millionaire.

He and his wife surrounded themselves with art and artists and, when commissioning their vacation house, were receptive to Wright's insistence that he have complete control over the house's furnishings as well as its design. They were also intrigued by his ideas about the environment.

"The Kaufmanns lived a very active and very busy life in Pittsburgh," Waggoner said. "Fallingwater was a chance to get back in touch with nature."

'NOT GLITZY'

Despite the paintings and sculpture dotting the house and grounds, "This house is not glitzy," she added.

Designed in 1936 and completed in 1939, the house remained in the Kaufmann family until 1963. Then Edgar Kaufmann Jr., Kaufmann's only survivor and a noted art historian who had persuaded his father to commission Fallingwater, presented the house, its contents and seven-square-kilometre grounds to the Western Pennsylvania Nature Conservancy.

The conservancy maintains Fallingwater and provides public tours of the house and guesthouse, the main rooms of which remain as the Kaufmanns left them.

The house attracted interest from the start. Tourists visited during construction, the New York Museum of Modern Art mounted a Fallingwater exhibition in 1937, and the house appeared on the cover of Time magazine in 1938.

"From the very beginning," said Waggoner, "it was clear it was a great building."

Langkawi Island emerges from a legendary curse

LANGKAWI ISLAND, Malaysia (Reuter) — Langkawi Island, condemned to ignominy by a legendary beauty accused of adultery, is cashing in on its centuries-old curse to woo tourists.

The palm-fringed island off Malaysia's northwest coast, steeped in Malay myth and folklore, had been virtually ignored by tourists.

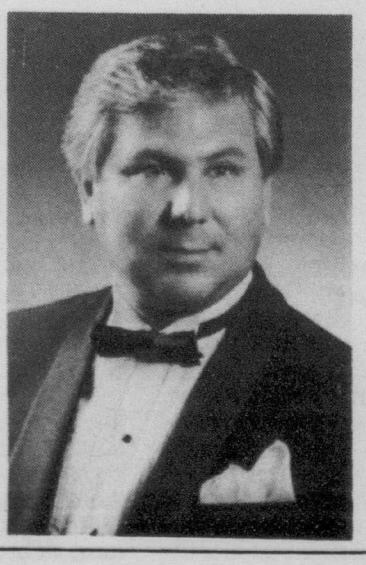

Now government officials and investors are counting on its natural beauty and an unusual legend to lure visitors.

During the Commonwealth conference in Malaysia in October, the island served as a retreat for the assembled leaders.

Officials have declared Langkawi a duty-free zone and hope to attract visitors by the boatload to the island and its fringe of more than 90 smaller islands.

Coconut palms sway in the breeze above buffaloes grazing in the mud around the rice fields. Traditional wooden houses on stilts are silhouetted against mist-covered hills.

Travel executive honored

SHERBROOKE — (CV) — Michel Iannantuono, CTP, with Voyage Club Animation Inc. in Granby, Quebec is a recent graduate of the National Tour Foundation's Certified Tour Professional (CTP) program. In achieving the CTP title, Iannantuono has earned the highest level of professional recognition in the group travel industry.

The program was developed in 1985 to recognize the professional skills of those candidates who earn academic credits and provide service to the group tour industry and the National Tour Association. Candidates must complete a written examination or write an in-depth research paper as the final evaluation in the program.

Look out stardom: Celine Dion is coming through

By Ingrid Abramovitch
The Canadian Press

LAVAL, Que. (CP) — Move over Michael Jackson. Step aside Barbra Streisand.

Make way for Celine Dion, a 21-year-old singer from tiny Charlemagne, Que., who is determined — and she means determined — to join the ranks.

"I see myself with the biggest people — singers, actors — in the world," Dion stated matter-of-factly in a recent interview.

"With Michael Jackson, Whitney Houston and Barbra Streisand. I see myself there."

Sounds like a typical youthful fantasy. But Dion is not a typical young woman.

Discovered at the age of 12 by Quebec impresario Rene Angelil, her first album, D'amour ou d'amitie (Love or Friendship), went gold in France within a year.

She has since recorded nine albums, sung for the Pope and won a record 15 Felix awards, Quebec's version of the Grammies.

Last year, she took first place in Eurovision, the international competition that launched Abba, Julio Iglesias and Nana Mouskouri.

COMING SOON

In January, Dion makes her English debut on CBS Records.

The giant recording company sank $1 million into the project and placed her in the care of David Foster, the Canadian-born, Los Angeles-based producer of Barbra Streisand, Kenny Rogers and Chicago.

"I want to be — I have to be — known," Dion explains. "That's why I'm doing my first English album."

In Quebec she is entertainment royalty and her rise to fame is a legend.

She was the youngest of a family of 14 children in Charlemagne, a rural village outside of Montreal. It was a family of musicians and performers, although none well-known.

Celine made her singing debut at age five at a brother's wedding. Since then, she claims, she has thought of little else.

When she was 12, a brother sent a tape of her voice to Angelil, who then managed the Dion family's idol, Quebec singing star Ginette Reno.

NO TRICK

Hearing that tape "was the shock of my artistic life," Angelil said. "I had her sing live in the office to see if it was a trick, but she was even better live."

Angelil mortgaged his house to finance her first album.

At a recent concert in Joliette, Que., a glamorous Dion, clad in a fluorescent yellow minidress and silvery pumps, stood in the spotlight before thousands of rapt fans.

A full orchestra accompanied her through a song repertory that ranged from Gershwin to ballads with lyrics like "I am the captain of a boat of pain."

It's towns like Joliette which first adopted Dion, bought 800,000 of her records and stood by her during her crooked-teeth phase.

So Dion broached the subject of the English album carefully. "You don't know how exciting it was for a little Quebecoise to record in the same studio as Barbra Streisand," she told the Joliette audience, which responded with cheers.

Cream bassist returning with his own real sound

By The Associated Press

Jack Bruce, the former bassist for the 60s rock trio Cream, has released an album on Epic Records called A Question of Time. Bruce, whose playing partners in Cream were Eric Clapton and Ginger Baker, recently spoke about his past and the new album:

"Cream was together 2½ years, 1967 to '69. To me, that was just one of my projects. I started professionally when I was 17, when I left college and went on the road.

"Cream happened, and that gave me the possibility to do what I wanted to do musically. I could make records saying things that for me were important. A surprising amount of people — not millions of people — all over the world followed my records over the years. Then the music business changed.

"This is an attempt by me to make a record that is honest and commercial. It's not an easy thing to do these days. It is worth a shot. If it fails, I'll just have to become a brain surgeon."

A Question of Time is Bruce's first record for a major label in nine years.

"I would love it to be a big hit. I would like to make a record every year. We're going to tour in November and December, I hope."

Bruce said after Cream folded he could have formed another trio and made "zillions" but didn't.

"That was a conscious decision — a working-class guilt thing. I was never happy with the money."

Bruce was born in Glasgow, Scot., where his father worked in a factory.

ACCEPTS CHALLENGE

Asked why he decided to make the new record, Bruce said: "When I was listening to music, I couldn't hear what I wanted to hear. I thought, 'If nobody else is doing it, I better do it myself.'

"I wanted to hear honest, human music with lyrics that really were trying to reflect what is happening in the world, instead of music made by machines. I used as few machines as I could get away with — just people and musical instruments."

Among the musicians on the album are Bruce's two sons. "They did ask me to play it down a little bit," Bruce says. "I'm so proud of them, I find it difficult to do so.

"I've married twice. The breakup of a marriage is like living death, what you have to go through. I love the fact I've got another chance to have kids. I love kids. My little girls are 4 and 7.

"One of my sons goes to the Guildhall School of Music. He's following the same route I started. I got a composition scholarship to the Royal Scottish Academy of Music when I was 16. I hope he'll stay the course. I dropped out."

TV NOSTALGIA

By Chris Fuhrman

He was a precocious singer/songwriter. She was a studio backup singer. They were love-darted by Cupid at a recording session, then married and formed a nightclub act called Caesar and Cleo. Later, after the divorce, she became a "serious actress" and a showcase for Bob Mackie gowns. He washed up on "The Love Boat," beached alongside Divine in "Hairspray," opened some Italian restaurants and was elected mayor of Palm Springs.

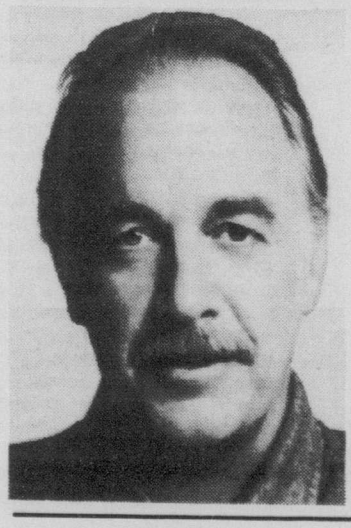

But between "I'm yours forever, darling," and "We're finished, you dwarf," they were Sonny and Cher, stars of a 1971 summer variety series that survived into the fall season and beyond. They offered a middle-of-the-road version of the psychedelic couple – Sonny in platform shoes, Monkees hair and a mustache; Cher in derriere-length locks and little else. He played dumb, she played smart, and much of their patter featured women's lib put-downs vs. new male whining. Their music, nominally rock 'n' roll (Jimi Hendrix, rest easy), featured softy hits such as "I Got You Babe," and "The Beat Goes On."

"The Sonny and Cher Comedy Hour" was a collage of music, laughs and animated cartoon blackouts. Regular skits included "Sonny's Pizza," a pizzeria for customers with abnormal tolerance; "Vamps," a cheesy peek at historical vixens; and kitschy "Dirty Laundry," with laundromat-gossip Laverne. Co-starring regularly were Steve Martin, Teri Garr and Sonny and Cher's daughter, Chastity.

The couple stunned TV-land in 1974 with the announcement of their divorce, and the series ended. They reunited later, on-screen only, for a new show. But they didn't get enough ratings, babe. Say bye-bye, Chastity.

QUESTION: What is the name of Cher's son by Gregg Allman?

ANSWER: Elijah Blue Allman.

CHECK LISTINGS FOR EXACT TIME

CABLE VIEW

Showtime's 'Put It There' is highlight of the week

By J.T. Yurko

Although Showtime and The Movie Channel might be most noted for airing feature films, they also offer original programming. Here are a few shows you might want to catch this week.

Paul McCartney

Paul McCartney has a new band and a new album, and fans will want to tune in to Showtime on Wednesday, Nov. 15, for the "rockumentary" entitled "Paul McCartney: Put It There." The film is highlighted by footage of the band in rehearsal for the upcoming tour. They play not only the new songs, but some classic Beatles numbers as well.

Interspersed with the music are interview segments where McCartney candidly discusses a multitude of subjects, ranging from the environment to his relationship with John Lennon and life before, during and after the Beatles.

McCartney's new album is entitled "Flowers in the Dirt," and the new band is comprised of Hamish Stewart (Average White Band) on guitar, bass and vocals; Linda McCartney on keyboard and vocals; Robbie McIntosh (The Pretenders) on lead guitar and vocals; Chris Witten on drums; and a fellow known only as Wix on keyboards.

• "Firstworks" is a half-hour show on The Movie Channel that die-hard film fans shouldn't miss. The series takes a look at the debut works of major film directors, as well as those of new filmmakers through interviews, clips and behind-the-scenes segments. On Monday, Nov. 13, "Firstworks" highlights the early work of one of the hottest directors working in films today, Bob Zemeckis. His last two films,"Back to the Future" and "Who Framed Roger Rabbit," have grossed hundreds of millions of dollars, and "Back to the Future, Part II" will be released in theaters this month. Also featured is an animated work by University of Southern California film student Sharon Altman.

• If silliness is what you're after, catch the second installment of "Super Dave," a comedy/variety show on Showtime, Friday, Nov. 17.

"Super Dave" is hosted by comedian/stunt man Dave Osborne. Each week the show departs from the studio for a "fantastic finish" as Super Dave performs an outlandish stunt.
