Pizzicato 2.0

By Record Staff
SHERBROOKE

The Pizzicato restaurant, forced into bankruptcy last summer, will be rising from the ashes in the coming weeks under new ownership. The 20-year old downtown establishment celebrated its 20th anniversary in March before having to close in June.

The reborn restaurant, located in the former Au Bon Marché building on King West, wull be owned and operated by 36-year old Alexandre Côté who earned his chops in the local restaurant industry over the last 20 years working at the Chou de Bruxelles, Auguste, and at the original Pizzicato as a cook and server.

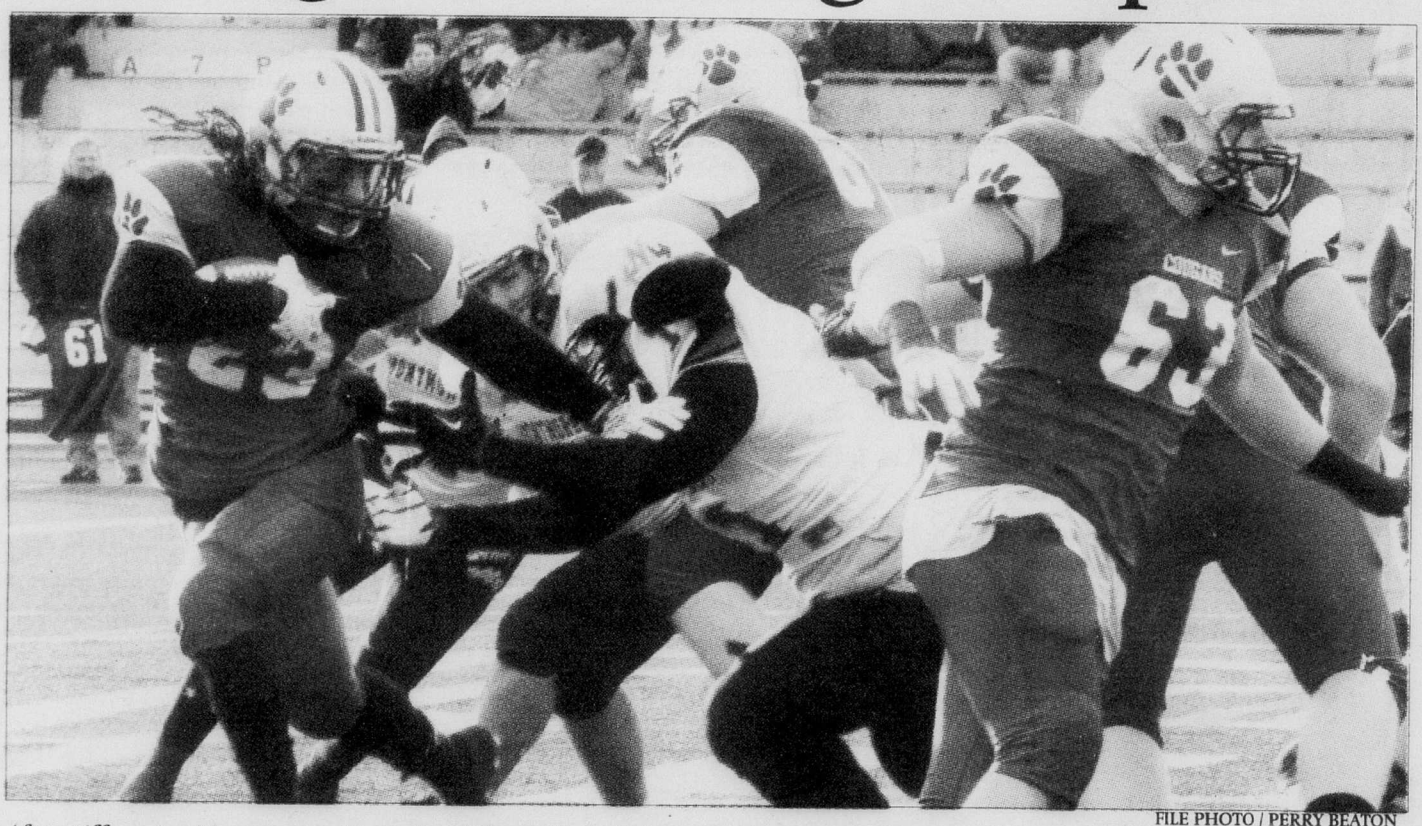

The lease was signed last Thursday, Côté confirms, and the new owner is now awaiting his permit and hopes to open before Christmas.

The "classic" thin-crust pizza, which was the original Pizzicato's signature feature, will return to the menu and the restaurant will be a "Bring your own Wine" establishment.

The new owner has also reached an agreement with the Brûlerie de Sherbrooke for the provision of quality coffees and teas. Since the new establishment will not serve alcohol, quality high end coffees and tea will be highlighted features.

The Pizzicato will initially employ between 15 and 20 workers and the restaurant is currently hiring.

Cougars looking to repeat

After stiff-arming Montmorency (shown) and Vanier in the first two rounds, the Champlain Cougars will now face old rivals Vieux-Montreal tomorrow afternoon in St-Jean for the Bol d'Or.

ST-JEAN-SUR-RICHELIEU

The Champlain College men's football team has scored 96 points in their last two games, playoff wins over the Montmorency Nomads and Vanier Cheetahs, but head coach Jean-Francois Joncas expects a low-scoring game when the Cougars meet the Vieux-Montreal Spartiates Saturday afternoon in the Bol d'Or.

"Both teams are good defensive teams and I don't expect a high-scoring game," Joncas said at a press conference at St-Jean-sur-Richelieu, site of Saturday's championship.

"Weather could be a factor and turnovers are always a concern. Field position is going to be very important; they are a team that likes to go for it on fourth down. They have good athletes."

GOOD READS

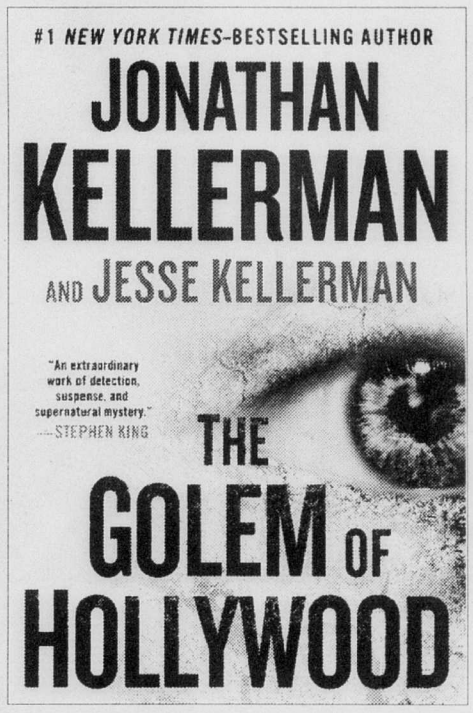

ELEANOR BROWN

The fat Scotch slug scorches a trail from tonsils to stomach.
- Hugo Long has a drink, in The Bone Clocks

There's something to be said for books that focus on the every day, on human habits and mistakes, on the small things that make up much of our lives.

For those who yearn for a quiet life, the unexpected twist can be just as disruptive as the fantastical madness some novelists drop into a character's path. How on earth can you remain connected to friends and family when you're trying to solve some sort of supernatural lunacy?

Consider The Golem Of Hollywood (2014), written by bestselling author Jonathan Kellerman, with his son, Jesse Kellerman (one of the many books offered to Lennoxville Library patrons during the recent Adopt-A-Book campaign).

In Jewish culture, a golem, you'll recall, is a clay figure come to life. (The best-known tale of a golem dates back to a rabbi in the Prague of the 1500s, who fashioned mud into human shape to help protect Jews from persecution.)

But our hero is Detective Lev, a sensitive homicide cop in 21st century Hollywood who's been transferred to the traffic division. He's twice divorced and can't get out of bed without a shot of Jim Beam. He finds himself suddenly shipped back into a murder investigation when a head is discovered. As the inquiry moves forward, things keep getting weirder and weirder.

Lev's new boss doesn't seem to exist, and the detective keeps hitting dead ends. Nothing is right.

Here's the tale of a guy struggling with his life, who eats hot dogs morning, noon and night, and is hoping for love (or at least someone to spend a couple of hours with). He's trying to solve a killing the old-fashioned way, by talking to suspects and potential witnesses, although the murderer may not be human. Interspersed with the modern-day narrative is a tale dating back to the time of Cain and Abel.

Now how can Lev find work/life balance with all this madness about?

In similar fashion, there's The Bone Clocks (2014), another Adopt-A-Book. English author David Mitchell is known for writing long, complex novels that jump about in time and space, yet offer a carefully considered narrative.

This book (sort of) follows the life of Holly Sykes, first glimpsed as a working-class 15-year-old who runs away from home after her mother tries some tough love.

Each chapter is set in a different decade, beginning in 1984 – and each chapter is a novella in its own right. These are carefully crafted personality profiles of people who play a decisive role in the tale of Holly Sykes.

That first chapter portrays the United Kingdom of then-prime minister Margaret Thatcher, a controversial conservative: "The washing-up water glurps down the plug-hole, a teaspoon clatters in the sink, and Bob Dylan has a cardiac arrest halfway through 'All Along The Watchtower'. Oh, no! The tape's being eaten: when I press eject, a tangle of brown spaghetti spills out."

But there's something slightly off. As a child, Sykes had an imaginary friend. Now that she's on her own, complete strangers are far too nice to her – in exchange, they say, for what she will do for them in the future.

She is, it seems, in the middle of a war.

So are her friends, acquaintances and family. Although for them, the battles are more mundane. There's Hugo Long, a pick-up artist in 1991: "The choir troops out but the woman stays put. A tourist aims his fat camera at the Rubens before Security Goblin snarls, 'No flash!' The chancel empties, the goblin returns to his booth by the organ, and minutes trickle by. My Rolex says 3:30. I've an essay to polish on Ronald Reagan's foreign policy, but an eerie goddess is sitting six feet away, waiting for me to make a move."

There's a driven journalist stationed in Iraq, who survives a suicide bomber by accidentally bending over to tie up his laces. There's an author whose career is tanking, his latest book trashed by a protégé, a "friend" who can taste the top lit crit spot he's poised to usurp.

It's only in the last three chapters that the speculative fiction aspect is front and centre. (What's up in 2025? "The national networks hadn't run with the story, due to yesterday's gun massacre at Beck Creek, Texas, the reignited Sankaku/Diaoyu standoff between China and Japan, and Justin Bieber's fifth divorce.")

Still, there's always something strange just beyond Sykes' ken, but she can feel... something's off. How to cope?

LOCAL NEWS

Maurais continued by stating that municipal governments don't know the full scope of the work that is being done by the CLDs.

CLDs face uncertain future

Gordon Lambie
SHERBROOKE

With the announcement of the new fiscal pact between the provincial government and Union of Quebec Municipalities last week came the news that the province's regional development agencies, know as CLDs, would be eliminated, with their current economic stimulus activities falling under the responsibility of the regional county municipalities. Shortly after that, however, the government backtracked and said that the agencies would not be eliminated outright, but would simply have their funding reduced. The results of these successive announcements have been variable depending on the region, although in all areas it has created a climate of uncertainty and unrest.

"Right now the MRC or municipality is required to have a CLD by law," explained Yves Maurais, president of the Association of CLDs of Quebec. "In a hurry last week, the government wanted to announce that they had made a new agreement with the union of municipalities. Bascially they were hoping that they would be able to legally modify by-laws (to eliminate CLDs) before adjourning for Christmas, but it appears that this might not be the case. We're just waiting to find out what the transitional measure will be until they are able to modify the law."

Maurais described the current situation as a sort of limbo period for the CLDs. The legal requirement to have a CLD, he stressed, does not change the government's intent to eliminate them, but it does prevent their immediate disappearance while municipal governments ponder a choice to eliminate and absorb their local agency, or maintain its independent existence but with fewer resources.

"We're fighting to convince all the municipal organizations to maintain services through either a CLD or something similar. If the government leaves economic development to the municipality alone, it will be hard for them to structure a scope of work that would be adequate to help the different small business startups and ongoing growth."

Maurais argued that the CLDs have been building a network of business owners willing to invest time and energy into supporting local commerce and industry. That network, he said, would not have come to be with the municipality at the centre of economic development, because business owners do not connect with a municipal body in the save way they can with a CLD.

Maurais continued by stating that municipal governments don't know the full scope of the work that is being done by the CLDs and argued that they have neither the financial nor human resources to serve the need.

"Starting a new business is not like applying for a construction permit," Maurais said. "There's more confidentiality; there's more strategy involved, and there's also some financing that requires some skills that are not, at the moment, available through the municipal powers."

Magog Mayor Vicki May Hamm, who is also president of the Memphremagog CLD, said that she found that suggestion insulting and short-sighted.

"They implied that the mayors are not competent to engage in economic development," Hamm said. "I come from an economic development background and I think it is more and more our responsibility as a municipality."

Hamm argued that the municipalities and MRCs that choose to integrate their CLDs will use their resources in order to make sure that the right people are on the job. This she said, represents an opportunity to reinvent and optimize the service though, admittedly, on a budget that is 60 per cent smaller.

Drawing on that interpretation of the situation, the Memphremagog CLD has formed a committee to determine how best to reorganize remaining resources at the end of this month, on the understanding that the MRC there is leaning towards internalizing its services.

Pauline Quinlan, Mayor of Bromont and president of the Brome-Missisquoi CLD expressed that her agency is engaged in a similar discussion process. The CLD, she said, is analyzing all the aspects of the decision made by the government and how it might impact the local manufacturing, commercial and tourism sectors.

"We're looking at different ways to continue offering the services while also cutting costs," Quinlan said, sharing that their budget has been cut by $200,000. "We're really looking at what the best way to continue supporting and make the best use of our resources going forward."

The Brome-Missisquoi president was less certain of the choice that would be made in her MRC than Hamm was of Memphremagog, but she pointed out that the MRC would publish its budget on Nov. 26, at which point the decision would be clear. Given that uncertainty, she lamented the effect this news is having on the CLD's staff.

"For them, this is a time of great insecurity," Quinlan said. "I want to reassure our employees that we are looking at all the different solutions possible and taking into account the good work that has been done in the past."

In a recent interview with The Record, Sherbrooke Mayor Bernard Sévigny stated in no uncertain terms that Sherbrooke Innopole would remain independent of the city.

Innopole director Josée Fortin told The Record on Tuesday that the organization is in a position where it is clear that there are challenges ahead, but it is not certain just how those will manifest. Fortin said that right now the agency is looking at a cut of roughly $550,000, but added that because no exact figures have been confirmed yet, it is difficult to make any kind of solid statement about the future.

Fortin said that Innopole already dealt with a 10 per cent retroactive cut earlier this year and that, lumping that in with the new cuts, it is not possible for the agency to move forward without cutting into services in some way.

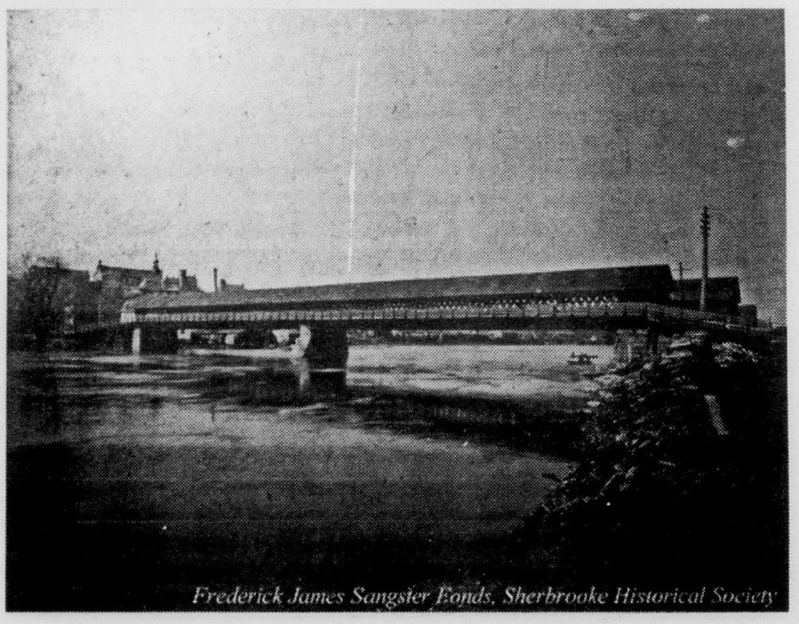

"It's not something that can be easily replaced," said Maurais. "In most cases (where CLDs are preserved) the budgets will be significantly reduced, and we will have to make decisions about what the minimum services required for us to provide are."

He argued that the work of the agencies is dependent on a range of specialists not all of whom are transferrable from one sector to the next but all of whom are doing vital work.

"It can't be the same people doing all the jobs," he warned. "We'll have to reinvent the way we do things."

According to Hamm, legislation addressing the legal uncertainty of the situation will be presented at the National Assembly next week.

GLIMPSES OF THE PAST

Frederick James Sangster Fonds, Sherbrooke Historical Society

The first Aylmer Bridge, built in 1837, was a wooden covered bridge built by the British American Land Company, but flood waters carried it away in 1863. In the photo above, the second bridge allowed travelers to cross the St. Francis River between 1864 and 1898. The influx of vehicles at the turn of the century led the town to replace the wooden structure with a metal bridge featuring three arches. It stood until 1929 when engineers reinforced it with steel.

'Lest we forget': Remembrance Day at MES

The Scoop
Mable Hastings

Remembrance Day marks the anniversary of the end of the First World War on Nov. 11, 1918. This war resulted in the loss of lives both civilians and members of the military. Remembrance Day, also known as Armistice Day and Poppy Day, commemorates those who lost their lives.

At Mansonville Elementary School, the hallways and classrooms in the school were lined with poppies and a reminder to all, "Lest we forget," as the school staff and students respectfully remembered the lives lost and those who serve their country.

John McCrae, the Canadian doctor who penned the poem In Flanders Fields, would surely feel proud to witness how since his tribute was written, the poppy (a hearty flower) that once grew in graveyards where soldiers were buried and was the blood red flower that often blossomed on battlefields, has become a symbol of remembrance.

In preparation for their Remembrance Day ceremony, Mansonville elementary prekindergarten, kindergarten and Cycle 1 students made a nice handprint wreath to bring to the cenotaph. In Art class, students painted fields of poppies to remember those lives that were lost.

The school staff and students went up the cenotaph at 10:50 a.m. on Nov. 11th and stood around the monument that honors all the fallen heroes. In Flander's Fields was read by teacher Dan Aucoin and the lives of some of the "hometown" heroes related to the students were described.

"We were lucky enough to have a piper, Michael Darney, with us who played Amazing Grace," said MES secretary Tara Wighton. "Even our mayor, Louis Veillon, and David Oliver from the St. John's Masonic Lodge were present for the ceremonies," she added.

O Canada was sung in both official languages and a moment of silence was observed at 11:11 a.m. in memory of such great men and women. The students laid their wreath and left their poppies at the cenotaph as a way to show their admiration and respect. The piper followed the students back to the school playing the entire way.

COURTESY

"Remembrance Day is always an emotional day for me as my father and great-grandfather were in the war," explained Wighton. "There is not a day where I don't stop and say thank you to the heroes that gave their lives for my freedom," she continued.

"As the secretary of Mansonville Elementary School and in memory of my beloved father and all the soldiers that fought with him, I feel a great sense of pride in the staff and students at MES who take time to remember with respect for all of those who fought for our freedom. I feel that it is important to keep the spirit of Remembrance Day alive. In my opinion, it should be a part of every school's curriculum."

Richmond craft show on tap this weekend

By Claudia Villemaire

Richmond

Celebrating five years of successful craft shows, organizers of this year's event are confident another success will go on record.

"We have 55 exhibitors this year," France Cote, organizing committee explained, underlining every item must have been designed, created and, in many cases, labelled or signed by the artist.

Sharing the spotlight once again, the Richmond County Historical Society will present their traditional cafe featuring homemade goodies in a setting that takes the browser back through time with an exhibition of photographs and artifacts of a Richmond quite different and definitely notstalgic dating into the late 1800s and early 1900s.

After a short trip down memory lane with the Society's collection, visitors can step into quite a different world where the younger set, Richmond Regional and primary school youngsters have crafted a presentation of Christmas themed creations.

From the tiniest snowmen to collections of sparkling christmas figures, these young entrepreneurs are hoping to share proceeds to help finance heir school trip activities.

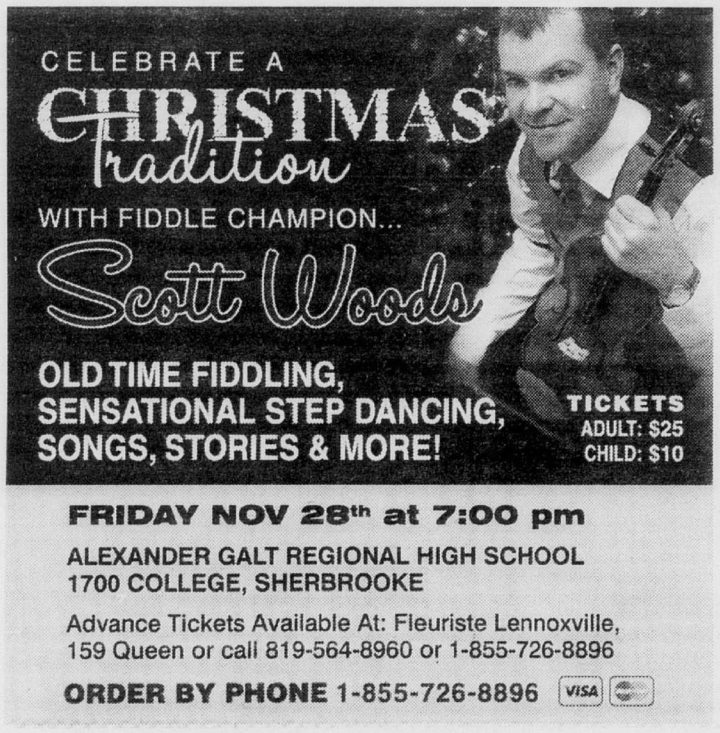

"We will have works of art from local folk whose talents have lured them into mediums such as glass moulding and blowing, fashioning unique, one-of-a-kind scarves and garments, hand-knitted articles, tempting treats such as fudges and maple candy — the list is varied and tempting. [There will be] works of art galore, locally designed and created jewellry — you can be sure anyone looking for that unique gift for the person who has everything just might find gift ideas and solutions at the show," said Cote and Martin Lafleur, heading up the organizing committe for the town's cultural promotions committee agreed.

Doors open at 10 a.m. Saturday and Sunday, closing at 5 p.m. both days. Admission is free.

Both teams advanced to the title game by virtue of road wins over the top-two seeded teams. Vieux-Montreal needed overtime to defeat Campus Notre Dame-de-Foy 26-19 while Champlain demolished Vanier 64-18, a win that gives them a chance to defend the provincial championship they won last year.

"It is good to be back," Joncas said with a smile. "We played well against Vanier, we had a lot of big plays and we were able to answer anytime they scored." I think it showed the character that this team has, we didn't stop after they scored but we kept grinding and we done that all year."

Vieux-Montreal and Champlain met once in the regular season, back in September, when the Cougars recorded a 38-28 road victory. In that game all-star running back Cedric Joseph ran for 120 yards and scored two touchdowns and he is coming off another strong performance against the Cheetahs when he acuminated over 200 yards in total offence. However the Cougars are by no means a one-dimensional team; they have a big-play passing attack featuring quarterback Michael Arruda and receivers Marc-Antoine Pivan, Yanic Lessard, Bechir Janfaoui and Guillaume Conraud.

However it football adage the defence wins championship and the Cougar D has been excellent during the playoffs allowing just 27 points in their two post season games. They are led by a trio of 2013 all-stars, Adam Auclair, Kevin McGee and Fredrik Robitaille.

Kick off is set for 3 p.m. at CEGEP St-Jean.

More support for Nikitotek roof

A shingle vote by city council could leave roof supporters beaming

Record Staff
SHERBROOKE

Animation Centre-ville joined in the call for a roof over Place Nikitotek with its own balance sheet Monday while arguing for a recurrence of programming. The addition of a roof, even if it isn't needed, would be appreciated, the group says.

Animation Centre-ville was responsible for programming at the downtown outdoor stage for the first week of July and the last week of August, presenting performances by the Flip Fabrique circus, the Sherbrooke Symphony Orchestra, and the Orchestre du 7e Art.

Animation Centre-ville director Alain Lafontaine says a roof would make it much easier to promote shows if a decision is taken early in the year.

"It is important that there be a recurrence and that it stop being a concern whether we go or not, because if you don't know if it will be renewed or not, it's more difficult to manage. When you throw yourself into something, you have to dive. There is a risk worth taking. I think it would be good if this was fixed this year," he said.

"If we carry on into the future in the appropriate time slot and can announce the show earlier in the year, we are confident that the results will continue to improve."

The most popular show has been one presented by the Orchestre du 7e art, which attracted 1,606 people.

"We had more people than we thought. This helped to offset the deficit from the Symphony Orchestra. I had very good feedback."

The other two shows by and Flip Fabrique and the SSO were seen by 593 and 421 people respectively.

"The first week of July following the end of the school year is too early for our target family audience, which is generally not yet looking for things to do. It would be more strategic in our opinion if our time at Nikitotek could be grouped together in the last two or three weeks of August," Lafontaine added.

Councilman Vincent Boutin said it was interesting to note that Animation Centre-ville is 90 per cent self-financed. "If you opened up Place Nikitotek longer, I can easily see Animation Centre-ville fulfilling its mandate."

Lafontaine confirms that the presence of a roof could make all the difference.

"The weather factor is real. In fact, people often make same-day decisions, depending on the temperature. Performances outside can't continue forever, and when September approaches, I get resistance. After the roof, we'll have to put in heaters should be put heaters. As much as I am for it, let's not go too far."

SQ Commandant promoted

SHERBROOKE

The District Commander of the Sûreté du Québec Estrie has been appointed the provincial police force's new Deputy Director General, essentially second-in-command.

Inspector and Commander Sylvain Caron will join Director-General Martin Prud'homme at the SQ's headquarters in Montreal.

Caron assumed the position of district commander in July 2010, after beginning his career with the Sorel Police in 1981. He also served as an instructor at the Québec provincial police academy. In 2002, he joined the SQ.

Caron's appointment was endorsed by cabinet on Wednesday.

The associate deputy minister of Public Security, Yves Morency, was also named as Deputy Director General along with Caron.

Editorial

But, there is good news to feed our hopes of a better world in the future.

Good news from the front!

François Tanguay

In the recent weeks we have been on a severe die*t of bad news from the environmental front. The poles are fast losing ice, the oceans are on an overdose of carbon and turning too acidic for the world below and California is drying up really fast.

But winning the Idiot of the Year award was Aussie prime minister Tony Abbott, a good pal of our own P.M. In an amazing span of just a few minutes he came up with more insane declarations on coal ever assembled. Get a load of these:

"Coal is vital for the future energy needs of the world," he said. "So let's have no demonisation of coal. Coal is good for humanity." Or even better...

"The future for coal is bright and it is the responsibility for government to try to ensure that we are there making it easier for everyone wanting to have a go.

"It is a great day for the world because this mine will keep so many people employed ... it will make so many lives better. "

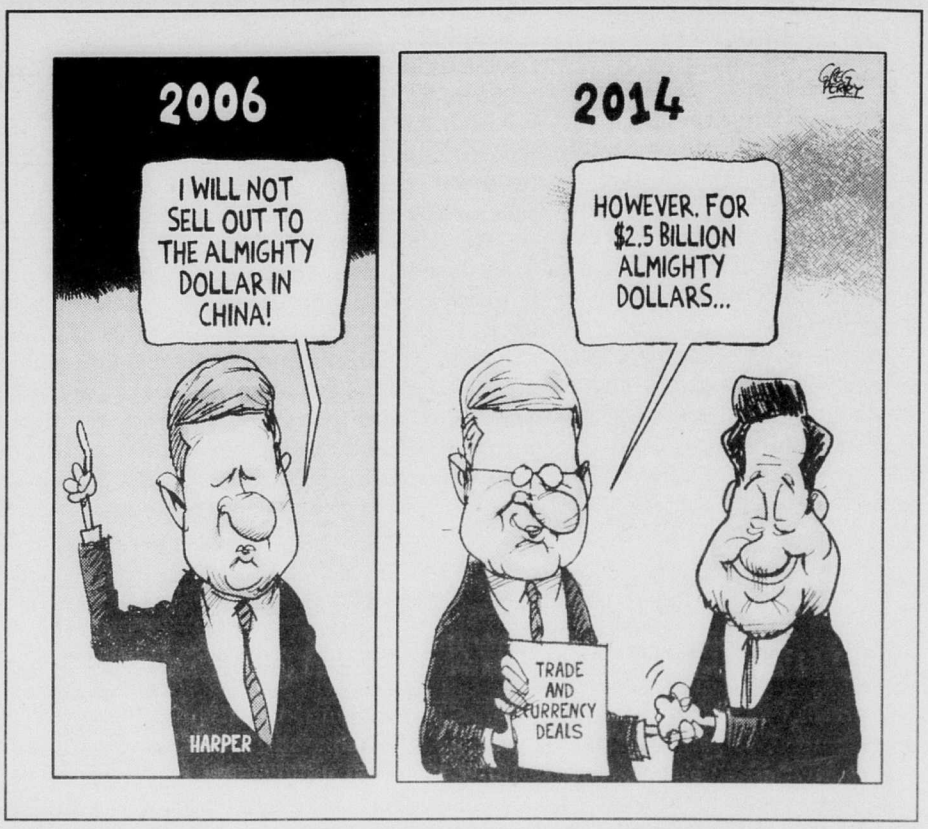

These gems and a few more while cutting the ribbon on a new coal mine operation to be run by industrial giant Mitshubishi. On the other hand we have Mark Carney, the ex-Bank of Canada boss and now CEO of the Bank of England who declared recently that most fossil fuels can't be burned. Who is more credible? A right wing coal baron who claims exploiting as much coal as is possible is good for humanity, or...Mark Carney, the International Monetary Fund..and the UN Panel on Climate change and...well, you get the idea.

But, there is good news to feed our hopes of a better world in the future. New electricty production in 2013 around the world came from solar and wind power than from any other source, even coal and nuclear. Oil demand has levelled off somewhat, one of the reasons why gas has been cheaper at the pump in the last little while. Coal plants are being closed in the US, Canada. China has announced it will ban the use of coal for domestic purposes as of December.

In France, the highly contested Hollande government has managed to pass a law that will fade out nuclear energy's contribution to electric power by 33 per cent within the next ten years. On some nights in winter, as much as 85 per cent of all French households are on nuclear! This will be done by way of an audacious strategy that aims to reduce energy needs to the point where in 2050 France will use only the equivalent of demand in 2012. A 50 per cent reduction in demand will be boasted by a full fledged effort from the European Community to reduce energy needs, what ever the source. All new home built after 2020 will have to be NZEB, or Net Zero Energy Buildings. Heating needs reduced by 90 per cent and residual energy needs to be met by renewables. An amazing turn around.

Actually, according to the International Renewable Energy Agency, there are more than 6.5 million jobs in this sector world wide, with a fast rising curve. It has also been estimated by most experts that for each million dollars invested in renewables, 11 jobs are created, compared to two in the fossil business. As stated, in a study previously cited in this column, it has become very risky to invest in oil and gas. Big investers are stepping away from the holy land of oil.

On a more social note, Ecovillages are coming out of the ground like mushrooms after a rain. Rich and poor nations are host to a vast variety of collectives that gather around social, moral and environmental views, with a strong focus on ecojustice. Below the radar things are-a-changin'... Stay tuned, we just may have entered the age of energy sobriety.

Mitchell is best-known for 2004's Cloud Atlas, shortlisted for the Booker Prize and made into a satisfying Hollywood movie (Cloud Atlas is on the adult fiction shelves, as is Mitchell's semi-autobiographical Black Swan Green [2006], narrated by a 13-year-old stutterer).

Once you're done these two good reads, it's back to dusting and laundry. Until the next book!

The Giller

Montreal resident Sean Michaels won this year's Giller Prize Award, and the astonishing $100,000 that goes with it. The book is Us Conductors. The jury describes it as "based on the life of Lev Thermen, the Russian-born inventor of the Theremin, the most ethereal of musical instruments. As the narrative shifts countries and climates, from the glittery brightness of New York in the 1920s to the leaden cold of the Soviet Union under Stalin, the grace of Michaels's style makes these times and places seem entirely new. He succeeds at one of the hardest things a writer can do: he makes music seem to sing from the pages of a novel."

QWF Gala

The Quebec Writers' Federation holds its annual awards gala on November 18 in Montreal (tickets for the cocktail and awards show are $50; it's $20 for just the ceremony; check the website for details at qwf.org).

Here's the shortlist.

Concordia University First Book Prize: Anna Leventhal for Sweet Affliction; Sean Michaels for Us Conductors; Caroline Vu for Palawan Story. QWF Prize for Children's and Young Adult Literature: Marie-Louise Gay for Any Questions?; Monique Polak for Hate Mail; Monique Polak for Straight Punch. Paragraphe Hugh MacLennan Prize for Fiction: Jon Paul Fiorentino for I'm Not Scared of You or Anything; Sean Michaels for Us Conductors; Guillaume Morissette for New Tab. Mavis Gallant Prize for Non-Fiction: Issa J. Boullata for The Bells of Memory; Chantal Hébert with Jean Lapierre for The Morning After: The 1995 Quebec Referendum and the Day that Almost Was; Margaret Lock for The Alzheimer Conundrum: Entanglements of Dementia and Aging. A.M. Klein Prize for Poetry: Angela Carr for Here In There, Jon Paul Fiorentino for Needs Improvement; Sina Queyras for M x T; Gillian Sze for Peeling Rambutan.

Art Opening

Please visit us on Saturday for a vernissage to launch the new art exhibit, paintings by the Groupe d'art de Lennoxville. That's Nov. 15 from 1 to 3 p.m., at the Lennoxville Library, corner of Queen and College. The show is up until Dec. 20.

Get a library card at the same time! Membership is free to residents of Sherbrooke.

Also: Every Saturday, children aged 5 to 11 are invited to a reading and crafts workshop. It's bilingual, and scheduled from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

For adults, Books And Brown Bags is Wednesday, Nov. 19 and Dec. 3, from noon to 1 p.m. Bring your lunch and a book to talk about. All are welcome.

If you're housebound, we can bring books and audio books to you through Books on Wheels.

We have large-print books too, plus an Easy Reads section. There are sections for Young Adult novels and graphic novels, plus children's non-fiction and fiction. Inter-library loans and ebook rentals are now available.

ONE COLUMN, FOUR VOICES

Opening to the Spirit

Today's word: Honesty

By Revs. Mead Baldwin, W. Lynn Dillabough, Lee Ann Hogle, and Carole Martignacco

1) I remember being told as a child the story of George Washington and the cherry tree. When asked if he was the one who chopped it down he confessed to the heinous act. We were all expected to be honest too, though this didn't necessarily mean we wouldn't be disciplined. We never did find out if little Georgie was punished.

I studied the Moliere play in college, "La Misanthrope", about a man who made a vow to only speak the truth always. This total honesty got him into all sorts of trouble in his social circle. The wisdom of the author was that too much honesty can be a dangerous thing.

Once when I was a ministry student in Montreal I jumped the turnstile at the Metro because there was no one in the booth and I was late for church. I returned to the same booth later in the day to pay for my morning ride. The attendant was baffled by my request and didn't want to take my money without giving me another ticket.

Society is not used to such honesty. It puzzles people, and they wonder what you are up to. "Everybody does it" they say. "Why declare all your income? It doesn't hurt anyone. It's not a crime if you don't get caught."

For me honesty is not a slogan, it's a way of life. I feel better about myself when I'm honest with others. Honesty is not just "the best policy". It's who I am and how I want to be.

2) It seems that everyone places a high value on honesty. Unfortunately, this sometimes only means that we place a high value on other people being honest with us. We tend to be a little more careful when it comes to our honesty with others - and, maybe, rightly so.

Does anyone remember the brief social experiment in total honesty? It was a bit of a movement some time in the 70's. The idea was that people could be freed by the practice of unfiltered honesty with each other, saying everything that was on their minds and answering every question with open and sometimes brutal honesty. It turned out to be a total disaster.

An important developmental stage for children is something called "theory of mind", and it is marked by a new ability to lie. When we are able to imagine things from another person's viewpoint and change what we say in order to manipulate that viewpoint, we can now lie. Developmental psychologists say that this is an important thing to be able to do. Imagine, if you will, the end of a dinner party with friends. The food was not so good and you are experiencing indigestion. Someone is telling a long and self-centred story, which you find boring and annoying. Do you say, "Well, I'm not having a good time anymore, so I am going home"? Or do you say "Thank you for the lovely meal and the good time, but I really must be going..."?

Lies come in different clothing and serve different purposes. Some are destructive, but some can help us to care for each other. Lies to make ourselves look better or, worse, to make others look bad are nothing but pure destruction. But those social lies that we say for kindness? If you ever come to my house for dinner, I hope you will!

3) When I think of honesty, my first thoughts turn towards my father. Above all else he taught us to value honesty. Through all the ups and downs of our tumultuous relationship, I think this was the greatest gift he gave me.

It's a funny thing about honesty though. Just when you think you are being completely transparent, you discover some hidden truth about yourself. Just when you are sure you know a person through and through, some dark corner comes to light that changes everything. I am not talking about deliberately concealing the truth.

Honesty, in my opinion, is a bit like an onion. There is an outer layer of truth, and then there are the inner layers. We can live our whole lives in that outer layer, but unless we do the hard work of peeling back and exposing the inner layers we will inevitably end up hurting those we love most, including ourselves.

Does this sound like a tear-filled process? It can be, but the alternative is that we go through life being superficially honest but never truly understanding ourselves and our loved ones. Our reward for all this hard work? Each time I peel back another layer, I feel a tremendous weight lifting off my shoulders. I seem to get closer to my true person. I care less about what others think of me and instead focus on searching out my unique life purpose. Jesus teaches us that the essence of God is love.

At our very core resides this essence. Each time I discard another layer of my onion, it feels as though I get a little closer to accepting, even loving myself, just as I am.

4) Growing up meant learning statements beginning with "in all honesty" don't necessarily. Nor is everything printed in black and white absolute truth - history books lie - as do textbooks, newspapers, magazines and marketing ads.

At one point I studied journalist so I could tell the truth about things, ugly or beautiful. Instead I became a poet hoping to speak truth to power. As a practicing storyteller, I face a dilemma: How honest can one be and still be entertaining? Gifted or cursed with a lively imagination, I struggle to make the humdrum exciting. Honestly, creativity is a dicey business; it all comes down to sending the right signals. Opening lines like "Once upon a time..." are literary devices inviting listeners to suspend belief, consent to be enchanted. If a child, the listener may ask with startling directness - "Is this a true story?" Ah well, the details are made up, characters and events invented out of thin air - but yes! In some heart sense - beyond the realm of fact - a good story is always true.

Truth-telling, responsibly representing everyday facts as we know them, is a minimum required for sharing a functional reality with fellow beings. Yet as a minister, having listened deeply to countless stories of the human heart, I've learned we are all, as Russell Baker admits in his own memoirs, struggling to "reinvent the truth." And even conflicting stories are true. Sometimes what we tell of or to ourselves is sketchy, with less than perfect memory, sometimes we obscure because we cannot face the difficult facts, often important things remain unsaid.

Yet somewhere deep inside, each of us holds a piece of the truth. From our unique perspective of being one actor in a cast of thousands, perhaps the best we can any of us do is agree to speak with all the honesty we can muster those truths that really matter, whatever lies closest to our hearts. And hope we're all being as honest with each other as possible, under the circumstances.

One word, four voices - now add your own: What is it like for you to live a life of honesty?

Scott Woods Christmas Tradition returns to Galt

With local special guest

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE AULIS

The fundraising event, Scott Woods Christmas Tradition, will take place Friday November 28 at 7 p.m. at Alexander Galt Regional High School in Sherbrooke. Fiddler Scott Woods is well known in the Townships as well as everywhere in Canada for his talent, but also for his dedication.

Scott Woods is a two-time winner of the Canadian Open Fiddle Contest, two-time winner of the Canadian Grand Masters Fiddle Championship as well as Fiddle Entertainer of the Year.

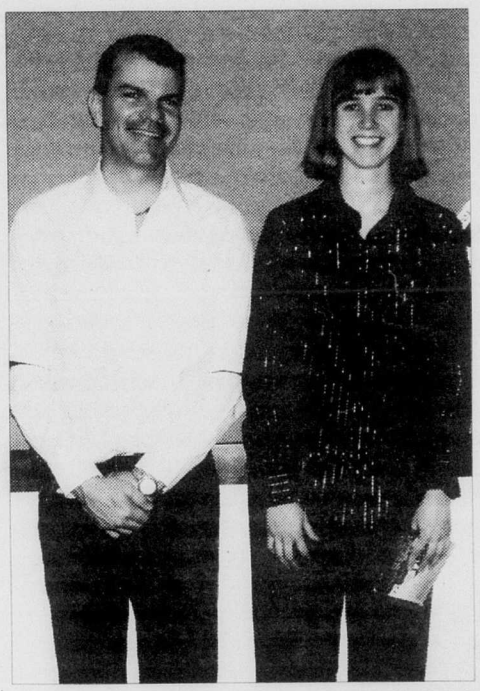

From the time he was a small boy, Scott Woods from Fergus, Ontario loved the beautiful and melodic old time style of fiddling that he had heard on recordings of Don Messer's Jubilee.

For seven years, Woods was the musical director and played the part of Don Messer in a show called Memories of Don Messer's Jubilee, paying tribute to the late great icon.

Now, Woods and his band carry on the tradition of old time fiddle music in a special two-hour live show called Christmas Tradition.

The Scott Woods Band has its roots in The Merv Woods Orchestra, originally started by Scott's father Merv in 1950.

Woods is known affectionately across Canada as "The Flippin' Fiddler" and tours extensively across the country every year raising funds for churches, charities and community service organizations.

Scott Woods with local fiddler, 17-year-old Courtney Drew of Cookshire-Eaton.

To date, over $2 million dollars has been raised for these different groups. Canadian Fiddle Champion Scott Woods and his band offer a fast-paced, uplifting show that will kick off the season and put you in a celebrating mood.

This show celebrates Canadian Christmas tradition with old time fiddling, impressive step dancing, songs for the season, inspirational stories, trick fiddling, family humour.

A special presentation will feature Gary and Nadine Boles. They will charm you with their warm and rich vocals while 14-year old singing, fiddling and step dancing sensation Amanda MacInnis promises to make this show memorable.

Making a very special guest appearance is 17-year-old Courtney Drew of Cookshire-Eaton. Drew has studied classical violin since the age of seven and soon discovered a passion for playing old-time fiddle music.

The young lady recently graduated from high school receiving the Governor General's Academic Medal with a 97.15 per cent average. She is also part of a Praise and Worship team and plays fiddle music regularly with her brother and parents for dances, at retirement homes and for many community events.

This is without a doubt an excellent way to kick off the season, give back to the community and put you in a celebrating mood.

Advance tickets are on sale at Fleuriste Lennoxville 159 rue Queen or call 819-564-8960 or toll free 1-855-SCOTTWOODS (1-855-726-8896). Adult $25, children age six to 12 $10, children age five and under admitted free.

Farewell concert CD a must-have

Some albums, you just have to buy. Some albums let you discover a new talent while you buy other albums to complete your collection and there's this album by George Strait that you just can't miss.

King George's fans were sad when he announced in 2013 that he was about to start his last tour to retire from the road. Of course the country music icon promised new albums, but made it clear that touring had come to an end for him.

Following the last date of the last tour, George Strait is offering fans a 20-track live album recorded at his momentous "The Cowboy Rides Away Tour" finale at AT&T Stadium in Dallas, Texas. This album commemorates a night of celebration for one of the most influential figures in country music.

The MCA Nashville release contains hits from throughout Strait's remarkable 30-plus year career, songs that he sang during his last concert. The album features special guests (who performed with Strait during this last show) Jason Aldean, Ray Benson, Kenny Chesney, Eric Church, Sheryl Crow, Vince Gill, Faith Hill, Alan Jackson, Miranda Lambert and Martina McBride, and introduces George "Bubba" Strait, Jr.

This farewell concert on CD is well worth owning even for casual fans of George, one of the most consistently competent country performers in the history of the genre. Actually, the whole concert is not included since it offers 20 songs out of 38 that he sang that night.

Just the same, any of Strait's fans would have loved to be part of this special event. This was, after all, the largest audience for an indoor music event in North America. "The Cowboy Rides Away: Live from AT&T Stadium" epitomizes the energy and shared emotion largely thanks to a Texas-sized crowd of nearly 105,000 fans.

During his whole career, Strait always seemed to find great songs that suited his style and his personality and produce worthwhile albums. He had the ability to offer exactly what the fans had come to expect from him.

This show was worthy of being preserved on disc as the memorable event that it truly was. There's only one problem with this new album. The producers decided to auto tune the recording and I would have preferred it not be.

This seems to take away some of the energy and qualities of a live performance. Nevertheless this album captured a wonderful moment of country music history in the making. The undisputed King of Country Music and winner

Loving like breathing: Kyra Shaughnessy

COURTESY OF STOP! TV

Kyra Shaughnessy performing on the STOP! studio set.

MAURICE SINGFIELD

Kyra is a singer/songwriter from Quebec with folk music roots and a large appetite for helping to make the world a better place. She possesses an innate attention to detail, a kind of political correctness when it comes to her work, guiding her along the often bumpy road to success.

"In terms as to why I do music, it's not so much related to success or stardom," says Kyra. "It's more just a personal desire from the heart to do something that I think can affect the way people live in the world. I grew up in the town of Audet, which is a little town near Lac Megantic...right on the border of the Beauce, and after that I moved to Montreal when I was fifteen."

Before she started writing songs she wrote poetry and began performing her work with Leave Out ViolencE (LOVE), an international organization founded in Montreal which is dedicated to the empowerment of youth.

"I started doing slam poetry because of LOVE," recalls Kyra, "which is a photo journalism project for youth who have been witnesses, victims or perpetrators of violence. I joined that program...and was able to get a lot of support for my writing...That's what led me to music eventually. I would often perform an "a cappella" song mixed in with my poetry."

Her spoken word performances at CBC Montreal's Poetry Slams, the Blue Metropolis Festival (2003), the 2004 NFB documentary XS Stress: Teens Take Control, the POP Montreal Festival (2005) and the Festival Accès Asie (2007), to name just a few, got her voted as one of Montreal's top ten spoken word artists in 2006-2007.

"Since I've been doing music it's led me to travel quite a bit," says Kyra. "I've been all over the place. I've traveled across Canada a few times by train. I toured on the west coast, the Yukon and ended up in Europe because I have roots in Ireland... I got an opportunity to go to a songwriting workshop there and toured in Denmark and Germany."

Always ready to help communities throughout her travels, in 2007-2008, she took part in the School for Designing a Society (SdaS); a school for composers interested in affecting social change through art, at Patch Adam's Gesundheit! Institute in West Virginia (where she also began clowning). As well, in Urbana, Illinois she helped found the AIEOU (As Is Ensemble Of Urbana), focusing on protest songs, klezmer and micro-tonal music.

In 2012 she worked for a couple of weeks at the Power of Hope summer camp for youth in B.C. as a mentor, giving workshops on spoken word poetry and activism, swing dancing and how to support yourself with the work you're passionate about.

Always wanting to participate in programs aligned with her beliefs, she recently became involved with Manawan 2014. "...it's a project that was organized by a group in Sherbrooke called 'Partenaires pour la Paix', which aims at bridging the divide between native and non-native communities in Quebec," says Kyra.

"One of their initiatives is to have workshops/retreats in native communities where artists will go, and co-write songs together. I was one of the four artists that had the opportunity to go and co-write songs within the Atikamekw community of Manawan for a week, just north of Joliette, and it was

October Crisis still resonates with Quebecers, says Governor General's Award nominee

By Sheryl Ubelacker
THE CANADIAN PRESS

Claire Holden Rothman was just 12 years old in 1970 when Quebec — and indeed all of Canada — was rocked by the October Crisis, the kidnapping of British diplomat James Cross and the hostage-taking and murder of cabinet minister Pierre Laporte that led to the War Measures Act being enacted by then-prime minister Pierre Trudeau.

Forty-four years later, the Montreal writer revisits this seminal event in Canadian history with her novel "My October," which has been shortlisted for a Governor General's Literary Award for fiction, to be announced Tuesday. (The book and her first novel, 2009's "The Heart Specialist," were both long-listed for the Scotiabank Giller Prize.)

While "My October" is set in 2001, its characters' lives are still being informed by the long-ago events that helped fuel Quebec's separatist movement, often pitting francophones against anglophones and nationalists against federalists.

Set against the background of the anniversary of the October Crisis, the novel focuses on a Montreal family in the midst of unravelling: francophone writer Luc Levesque, revered as the nationalist voice of his generation, is struggling with his latest book as well as his marriage to Hannah, an anglophone who translates her husband's works into English.

Their son Hugo, a typical teenager in most ways, is suspended from school after he brings an antique handgun to class in his backpack, setting off the family's own October crisis, which his parents deal with in divergent ways.

Luc moves out of the house, ostensibly to find a more inspiring place to write, but also to pursue a new muse in the form of his agent's beautiful young assistant, Marie-Soleil. Hannah, who has dedicated her life to Luc and his literary art while distancing herself from her parents, her culture and language, finds herself devoid of a support system and spirals into a deepening depression.

Hugo, who has grown up in his father's shadow, seeks to understand his full family history by connecting with his maternal grandparents, who live in Toronto, even adopting their last name, Stern, as his own.

"Oh, I'm totally all over in it — but not," says the 56-year-old author and translator, when asked whether the novel is at all autobiographical.

Rothman, who grew up in Westmount, remembers that the homes of some of her parents' friends were guarded by soldiers during the bombing campaign by the FLQ (Front de liberation du Quebec) that preceded the kidnappings.

From 1963 though 1970, the FLQ was responsible for more than 160 acts of violence, including the bombing of the Montreal Stock Exchange, in which seven people were killed. As part of its terrorism campaign, the group also targeted Westmount, placing bombs in about 10 residential mailboxes.

"Westmount was kind of the symbol of economic domination and power, and so there were bomb threats," says the author, recalling that she and other students at Westmount High were marched to a nearby armoury while bomb squads scoured their classrooms for explosives.

"I never felt afraid," says Rothman, who has two grown sons with her husband, actor-writer Arthur Holden.

"My overall feeling and wonder about that time was that we were so innocent as a society ... Now, with the world as it is and terrorism in the headlines all the time, we wouldn't be reacting like that. People would be hitting the roof."

It wasn't until Laporte's kidnapping that panic set in, and when his body was found in the trunk of a car a week later, a pall settled over Montreal, she says. "The city just went kind of silent and shocked, and by then it was crawling with soldiers."

But what really sparked Rothman's interest in writing about the period was seeing the 2003 documentary "L'Otage" ("The Hostage"), by Quebec film maker Carl Leblanc, in which an 80-year-old James Cross is interviewed at his Sussex, England home about the horror of being held hostage for two months by the FLQ, and life after his release.

"It was really moving and I was so caught, because here was this man, and I hadn't heard about him in all those years since 1970," she says. "And I was thinking: 'Why have I never heard this guy's story?'"

"He was incarcerated for 59 days, at gunpoint. Sometimes strapped to dynamite. It was huge what happened to that man and it is part of our history. And I was just so struck. And my fiction antenna started to kind of buzz a little bit."

The former British trade commissioner to Canada's below-the-radar existence in the aftermath of the October Crisis was in stark contrast to that of Jacques Lanctot, one of five FLQ members who had abducted the diplomat and negotiated safe passage to Cuba in return for their captive's release. Lanctot returned to Canada in 1979, served two years in prison for the crime, and later became a publisher and writer.

Every October, Rothman says, Lanctot would be interviewed by the media about the 1970 events, but Cross seemed to have disappeared.

"And then, all of a sudden, here I was in this movie watching James Cross tell his story ... And I thought, 'Wow, we're still dancing around this issue in Quebec ... it's a very touchy issue still."

"It definitely still resonates and it's something that we're still uneasy about, very emotional about. And it made me think we need to bring this out into the open. We're ready for this talk now."

of multiple awards performed for more than 1 million fans during his two-year, record-breaking, final U.S. tour.

You can feel Strait's sentimentality and immense gratitude for his legion of fans as he talks between numbers. Strait enlisted a bunch of friends to help out, including Vince Gill on "The Love Bug," Miranda Lambert, who once toured with him, on "Run," Kenny Chesney on "Ocean Front Property" and Eric Church, who offers a good take on "Cowboys Like Us."

So does Martina McBride on Johnny Cash's "Jackson." Strait's friend in the traditional country music department, Alan Jackson, helps on their hit "Murder on Music Row," which about sizes up where Strait has been musically all of these years.

But no matter who his guests are, George Strait remains faithful to his style and gives the fans what they love. This album can be seen as a tribute to a great career. Of course, with 60 No. 1 hits, he had to leave out a lot of hits ("Amarillo By Morning," "I Cross My Heart," "Heartland," "Blue Clear Sky," and many more). In fact, he offered a newer song, "I'll Always Remember You," that has a special meaning because it's all about his fans.

One thing surprised me about this release. The CD booklet does not include songwriter credits! For a physical release to not credit songwriters in 2014 was entirely unexpected but maybe it was just a question of faster and cheaper for the producers.

Also in 2014 she completed a program called "l'École nationale de la chanson" at the Granby CEGEP, which is a school for singer/songwriters. "It's a French program pretty well known throughout the francophone-music community," says Kyra. "The reason I decided to go was partially because language is very important to me and I really value being a multilingual artist.

I really wanted to work on my French writing and aside from that there were a lot of other classes that interested me... I was looking forward to having some practical theoretical knowledge, which I thought would be very helpful for continuing my career."

In 2010, Kyra put out her first album (self titled) and in 2013 she released Waiting for the Light. "I'm starting another album, but with a producer," she says. "It'll be my first more produced album with Danny Placard as producer. He produced Chantal Archambault's last album, he's worked with François Faubert. He's worked with Alexandre Belliard also. My preference in music is pretty minimalist, so we're not going for heavy drums and bass. But it will be arranged and produced with his assistance. I am interested to see where that goes."

Sopranos' cast to attend New Jersey Hall of Fame where late James Gandolfini to be inducted

The Associated Press

Six cast members of "The Sopranos" will be on hand as the man who played mob boss Tony Soprano is inducted into the New Jersey Hall of Fame.

James Gandolfini died in Italy last year.

The HBO series' creator, David Chase, is also scheduled to attend Thursday night's event at Convention Hall in Asbury Park.

Other inductees include NBC News anchor Brian Williams, jazz great Dizzy Gillespie, chef Alice Waters, author Dorothy Parker, basketball great Patrick Ewing, The Shirelles and former governor Jim Florio.

Since 2008, 80 people with ties to New Jersey have been inducted into the web-based hall. They include Bruce Springsteen, Jack Nicholson, Whitney Houston, Toni Morrison, Buzz Aldrin and Yogi Berra.

"She holds the kids accountable and she is one of the most technically sound coaches that I've seen. The kids are lucky to have a coach like that."

Stanstead to host girls' hockey tournament

By Brian MacIver
Special to The Record
Lennoxville

The Stanstead College Spartans women's hockey team is hosting the McMaster division weekend in the North American Prep Hockey Association today through Sunday.

The Spartans are coming into this season with an almost completely new team, as several players from last year's division-winning team, as well as the head coach, Scott Bridgeman have moved on.

"We are significantly younger than we've been in the past," said James Rioux, director of hockey operations at Stanstead College. "The girls' team is in a little bit of a transition phase as a lot of girls have graduated and our head coach has left us to pursue a Master's degree in Ottawa. But we have more balance and depth than we did in previous years."

Samantha Rhainds will be leaned on this year to provide veteran leadership and scoring, as she is currently in her third campaign with the team.

As for the head coaching position, the Spartans did not have to look too far to find a person to lead the team. Sherbrooke native and two-time Olympic gold medallist Sarah Vaillancourt has made the transition from assistant coach to taking the helm of the Stanstead College team.

Vaillancourt brings a pedigree of winning to the prep school. She left the province in 2004 to pursue her studies and hockey career at Harvard, where she was a star for her entire college career, and had made the Canadian women's hockey team the previous year.

As a member of the national women's hockey team, she won gold medals at two Olympic games, and a World Championship.

But now that her playing career is over, Vaillancourt is focused on her new job.

"She is a true professional," says Rioux of his new head coach. "She holds the kids accountable and she is one of the most technically sound coaches that I've seen. The kids are lucky to have a coach like that."

"The impact [Sarah has had] is immediate in the sense that things are very organized. She has the opportunity to put her stamp on things."

This division weekend will be the first test for the Spartan as four teams from the Prep school league visit the Pat Burns Arena. Their first opponent will be Rothesay Netherwood School Riverhawks, who they play today at 10 a.m. The Riverhawks were a very difficult team to play against last year, only allowing 17 goals in 11 games, the second only to the Spartans in their division.

But for Rioux, the key to Stanstead's success lies in focusing on what is in their control, saying that "the girls need to be ready to go and not worry too much about who they're playing."

The Spartans will then play King's Edgehill at 8:15 p.m. tonight, before facing Northwood on Saturday at 6 p.m., and Rice Memorial Sunday at 12:15 p.m.

PGA Communications Manager Doug Milne takes his running in stride

A Runner's Mind
Christine Blanchette

We take steps to get faster, longer and more resilient. It's not an overnight thing, not a race. — Doug Milne

This week, Doug Milne, Communications Manager of the PGA Tour and avid runner celebrates his one year anniversary as a guest running columnist at The Record. Here is Milne's 13th and end-of-year installment.

There was a time when it would've been hard for me to believe that, by virtue of this piece, I've written a monthly columns for this publication for a year now. That time would've had me filled with trepidation at the thought of writing anything with substance every month for a whole year. I would've likely doubted myself, questioned myself at best. My mind was then wired to look at the big picture and become overwhelmed. At point A, I would try to visualize point Z. After all, that is where I needed to be. That was the goal, right? These days, however, from point A, I look only as far ahead as point B. Redirecting my thinking to get where I need and want to go has made so much more attainable for me. Not to mention, a lot less stressful. The events which comprise our lives, I profoundly believe, need to be taken in steps, not leaps and bounds.

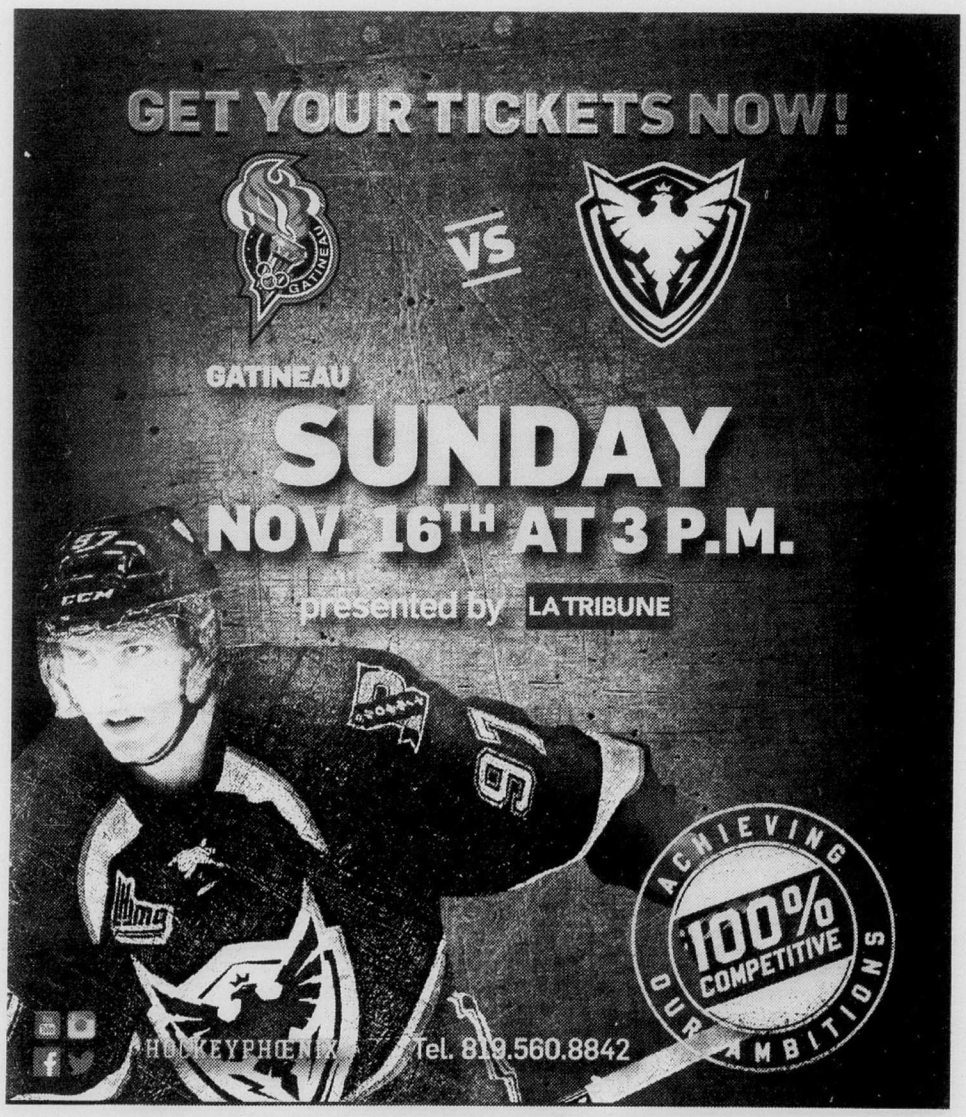

The exact same approach applies to one's exercise. We take steps to get faster, longer and more resilient. It's not an overnight thing, not a race. Just as one does not become overweight overnight, we do not achieve our ideal workout results overnight. I've mentioned in the past that even though I've run for 30 years, there was a lull in the daily routine for two years when I really let myself go. When I decided enough was enough and that I wanted back what I had let slip, I took steps to get there. I had once been able to run a sub-eight-minute mile for 4-5 straight miles. Ideally, I wanted to get that back. When I began running again after that slump, I wasn't able to run one single nine-minute mile without stopping. Sure, I was frustrated, by undeterred. I took steps to build back up. Eventually, I got to where I was back to where I left off. Sensible steps now have me in a position to run 6-7 miles a day at a pace of about 7:15 per mile. I got there in steps and strides, not leaps and bounds. Embrace the gift of time. I do not believe in endings, therefore my goals are not based on a "finish," per se. That has allowed me to smell the roses as I cultivate new flowers along the way.

Ralph Waldo Emerson wrote; "Do not go where the path may lead, go instead where there is no path and leave a trail." I am a disciple of that mindset. The contents and actions of our lives are precisely what make us unique. As you make your trail, cut a swath a swing – or step – at a time, don't feel like you have to torch the entire jungle.

Recently, I sensed an anxiety in my wife. She was completely overwhelmed by everything she had on her plate this week. As a first-grade teacher, she had parent-teacher conferences, papers to grade, report cards to grade and then all her tasks as a mother to three young kids at home. She was overwhelmed. She was looking not at individual things which needed to be checked off one at a time, but at one giant, discombobulated hurdle to mount. In the few days that have elapsed, she has taken one thing at a time and, guess what? Her plate is clean and everyone got from her what they needed. I understand that sometimes time is of the essence, but more times than not, quality is sacrificed when it needs to be the prevailing factor. Ride in stride. You'll get there.

I'm reading a wonderful book right now, called "Wild," by a woman named Cheryl Strayed. It's her memoir of retaliating against a haunting past. Death, divorce, promiscuity and a host of other dark days led her to the Pacific Crest Trail at a time when she thought she had lost everything. With more than 1,000 in front of her, she hiked from the Mojave Desert through California and Oregon to Washington State. Against all odds, she took things – quite literally – one step at a time. I suspect it would have been utterly overwhelming to stand at the starting point that first day and envision her arrival into Washington State. Instead, she saw the trip in a way that made it attainable. She took it a step at a time, and she got there. People start off exercising a bit at a time, but get there. I started with one column 12 months ago and I'm getting there. Again, nothing needs to be an end, but simply the segue into a new beginning. The world spins slowly, but makes full rotations. As one who resides in that world and on its ride, I find it only natural to go at it the same way.

Ayer's Cliff Fifty Plus Club

October is the month when the first frosts usually occur. The harvesting of many crops ust be completed by this time. But the cold weather does not come to stay. Many warm days, hazy sunshine with fresh autumn tang will follow. Leaves change to brilliant crimson, russet and gold. In October nature begins to prepare for the winter ahead. Many insects are killed by the frost. Most birds have left for the south. The sparrows, however, are very fond of the fall weather, for they are seed eaters, and the dry fields and meadows are rich with seeds. Farmers should welcome the sparrows at this time because they eat millions of weed seeds which could do damage to the next crop. Snowbirds come to mind as the cold season approaches. As a usual practice, a few members of the Fifty Plus Club will soon travel- south to bask in the sun until spring. The majority of members will brave the weather and continue to gather at Beulah United Church vestry, the first Tuesday of each month, for fun and fellowship. New members and guests are always welcome, please contact the president, Linda Grenon. The October meet took place on the 7th. A lovely fall day, inside and outside. The decor was an array of fall colours and Halloween reminders of leaves, pumpkins, cornstalks and hats. Linda Grenon, president, welcomed all including the guests. She informed us that a cheque of $300.00 had been received from the National Assembly. The monies will certainly assist the executive board in the planning of special projects for the club. Linda thanked Phylilis and Melvin Dustin, May Cunnington and Pearl Goodsell for the colorful decorations, she continued with thanks to all other members who lend a helping hand each month. Rev. Lee Ann Hogle offered the grace. The dinner consisted of a tomato-macaroni-beef dish, breads, pickled beets, caesar salad, birthday cake with ice cream. The money drawings were won by: Trevor Wilson, Lois Dobb and Jeanne Goddard. Door prizes were won by: Marilyn Cass, Barbara Carboneau, Phil Kerwin, Wallace Mosher, Arnold Mckeage, Linda Grenon, Margaret Higgins, Barbara Smith, Rev. Lee Ann Hogle and Royce Martin. The afternoon activity was a Halloween hat contest for women and men. All contestants walked about the hall to display his/her Halloween hat, fashioned with skill. Participation by the men added a bit of zest to the parade. The two judges, Sandra Dezan and Jenne Goddard, after deep thought, decided to award Margaret Gillam with first prize for the women and Ben Cunnington for the men. The day's program concluded with "pass the pumpkin" game, won by May Cunnington.

Military Whist Card game at Bulwer

On the cool and rainy afternoon of Thursday, October 23, folks gathered at the Bulwer Community Center for an afternoon of Military Whist.

With 11 full tables, folks were eager to start, and play continued at a steady pace with some pretty high scores! There was a tie for first place with 2 tables showing enough flags to earn 26 points each. The winners were: table #5 Captain - Margaret Vintinner, and partners Beulah Turnbull, Keith Vintinner, Len Swallow. Table #8, also with 26 points, Captain - Georgie Charland and partners Marion Cox, James Andrews, Alan Bullock. Second place winners with a score of 24 points were: table #9, Captain - Doreen Lancaster and partners, Ann Auray, Phil Auray, Joyce Beattie. The consolation prize for 15 points went to table #11 with captain - Bev Suitor and partners, Laura Fleury, Grace Betts, Caroline Rowe.

The three lucky winners of 'sharing the pot' were Georgie Charland, Helen Digby and Harris Olson. There were several door prizes going home with most of our players that afternoon.

Following the game, tables were cleared and the invitation was issued to proceed to the food table for a supper of beef stew, mashed potatoes, coleslaw, Caesar salad, homemade rolls, then angel cake, ice cream and strawberry sauce plus tea and coffee; good food for a cool and rainy day.

Thanks to all who came out for the card game and supper!

Missisquoi County Women's Institute

On October 10, the Missisquoi County Women's Institute's semi-annual meeting was held at the United Church Hall, Cowansville with the Fordyce Branch hosting. There were 24 members and 3 guests in attendance.

Everyone met at 9:30 a.m. for coffee and muffins and a lot of chit and chat.

At 10 a.m., the President, Joyce Martin, called the meeting to order and thanked the hostesses and everyone for coming. She read the story, "Rainbow of Many Colors."

The minutes of the Missisquoi W.I. annual meeting were read by Secretary Betty Perry. They were approved and signed by the President.

The Treasurer's Report was given by Shirley Vaughan.

Correspondence: Thank you cards were received from June Royea and Shirley Vaughan.

The Bursary Report and the Past President's report were given by Norma Sherrer. Pictures of the Past President's Essay winners were passed around.

The Nominating Committee is Past Presidents - Judy Page Jones, Jean Cogswell and Mary Jones.

Q.W.I. President Norma Sherrer gave an update of the Q.W.I. and F.W.I.C. Pat Clark, Q.W.I. Treasurer, spoke about events coming up at John Abbot College such as plays, etc. Sheila Needham the A.C.W.W. Canada Area President gave some updates and spoke about the Ereland Lee Home.

At 1 p.m., we stopped for lunch. After repeating Grace, a lovely lunch was enjoyed.

Several subjects were brought up by the members and discussed. The date for the annual meeting will be decided later. The host Branch will be Stanbridge East.

Courtesies were said by members and goodbyes were said.

Until we meet again.
