Active cases back above 6,000 across Quebec

By Gordon Lambie

The Province of Quebec reported 720 new cases of COVID-19 on Thursday bringing the total number of people infected to 436,804. That increase also saw the number of active cases rise to 6,098.

There were two new deaths, for a total of 11,550 since the start of the pandemic.

The number of hospitalizations jumped back up by 10 to 205 with 46 people in intensive care, a decrease of one compared to the previous day. Of the 370 people who have been hospitalized for Covid across the province over the last 28 days, 210 have been unvaccinated.

In the Eastern Townships, the number of active cases increased to 739 and eight people were in hospital due to the virus, one of whom was in intensive care.

As of 4 p.m. on Wedenesday, Pulbic health had record of confirmed cases of COVID-19 in 53 schools across the region, including eight from the

The Maison Aube Lumiere's 30th annual poinsettia campaign begins this weekend. Having started in 1991 with only 500 plants, the fundraiser will this year be selling 6,400 for the benefit of the palliative care home's ongoing work in the community.

"It started five years before the first house on Kennedy street," said Vicky Bélanger, the Maison Aube Lumiere's Director of Financing and Communications. "It's how they started to raise money for the home."

Bélanger said that in those early years the plants were grown in the garages of committee members, but the operation has been based out the Serres Saint Elie nursery on industrial Boulevard for the last 25 years.

Mountweazels on Parade

Good Reads

Lennoxville Library

Review by Melanie Cutting

According to www.goodreads.com, The Liar's Dictionary by Eley Williams is "An exhilarating and laugh-out-loud debut novel from a prize-winning new talent which chronicles the misadventures of a lovelorn Victorian lexicographer..." A Victorian lexicographer? Really? Well, yes. Although it took almost one half of the book to get to an actual "story", when it does appear, it is pretty funny. The constant stream of wordplay can distract and detract, though. For those among us who are totally enthralled with words, especially the made-up kind, this book offers endless amusement; for those who aren't, it quickly becomes tiresome. That is, until the shape of the story finally emerges, at about page 121.

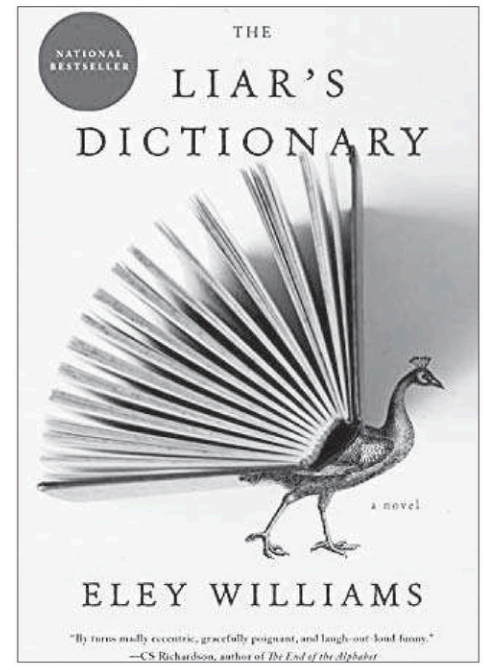

Once past the deluge of fictitious words (mountweazels), the interplay between the story of the aforementioned "lovelorn Victorian lexicographer" Peter Winceworth in 1899, and Mallory, a young female intern employed about 100 years later by the same library, Swansby House, comes clear. Each chapter is gifted with a title designed to offer the reader a clue about the contents. Example, G is for ghost (v.); M is for mendaciloquence (n.), K is for kelemenopy (n.), and so on. The chapters alternate in time, as we follow the hapless Winceworth in the Scrivenery at his task of culling the mountweazels from the legitimate words in Swansby's New Encyclopaedic Dictionary, and preserving the phony lisp that forms his best defense against having to socialize with the rest of the staff. His prescribed visits to speech therapist Dr. Rochfort-Smith's multi-hued orange office are particularly amusing. The doctor's bird "made a point of catching Winceworth's eye across the room once he was settled in his chair, then with something approaching real malice, visibly breathing in and doing the ornithological equivalent of letting it rip." For amusement, Winceworth drinks. Alone.

Meanwhile, back in the 21st century, Mallory is the sole employee at the venerable Swansby enterprise (still standing after all this time), unless you count the many cats, all named Tits, short for Titivillus, who wander the corridors keeping the mouse population in check. It is Mallory's task to weed out the numerous fake words as the process of digitizing the text of Swansby's encyclopedic dictionary moves forward. Her boss, David Swansby, scion of 1899's Gerolf Swansby, is not so very different from Winceworth. She too is shy, and reluctant to engage in social pastimes, but unlike Winceworth, who is merely antisocial, Mallory is queer, and quietly in love with Pip, her flatmate. Pip is gay and "out", Mallory is just gay. The recent excitement in Mallory's life comes from the spate of threatening phone calls to her office: "There's a bomb in the building." Followed by silence, and then by alarm.

One hundred years earlier, Winceworth's fate takes a rather unexpected turn when he meets Sophia, the girlfriend of an obnoxious colleague, lurking behind the same potted plant he has chosen as his hiding place at one of the infrequent social events he must attend. It is love at first sight. He wants to impress her with his skills. "He could not play the balalaika, but he had other talents. He could spin the etymology of the word hello from its earliest roots." Although they part as acquaintances, they soon meet again in St. James Park, where Winceworth has fallen asleep on a bench in a vaguely drunken stupor, and is rudely awakened by a blood-drenched pelican, locked in what appears to be mortal combat with a woman—Sophia! As it turns out, she is actually trying to save its life by, inexplicably, shoving Winceworth's broken Swansby pen down its throat. The pelican is rescued, and the path is laid for a relationship, of sorts, to form between the Winceworth and Sophia, despite her status as the fiancé of Winceworth's colleague.

Ultimately, Mallory and Pip cross paths– indirectly– with Winceworth as they discover that the clues to many of the mountweazels on index cards from long ago lead back to Winceworth's broken pen. And thus the circle is complete.

I leave the sleuthing over who is to be blamed for threatening to plant the bomb, and the ultimate fate of the Swansby building, to the reader. The trip through time, and even lengthier trip through a lexicographic miasma, will either bore you to tears, or leave you looking for more of the same. This is not a tale that will pull the reader, headlong, through the plot. If you have no interest in stopping and smelling the verbal roses, then, sadly, this is likely not the right book for you.

Eley Williams is a fellow of the Royal Society of Literature, and author of Attrib. and Other Stories. Her work has appeared in The Times Literary Supplement and London Review of Books, among other publications. She lives in London.

The Liar's Dictionary is available through the Lennoxville Library.

Local News | In most cases where a professor is terminated for just cause, they will typically file a grievance and take the university to court. However, it mostly depends on whether the faculty association has sufficient evidence to support a grievance.

Students create new petition, start GoFundMe for fired university professor

By Michael Boriero
Local Journalism Initiative

The backlash over Bishop's University's decision to dismiss a tenured professor, Dr. Christopher Darius Stonebanks, continued to evolve on Thursday, but the reasons for his dismissal remain behind closed doors.

The Record contacted Stonebanks by email, however, the former professor was unable to shed any light on the current situation. He is meeting with his legal team on Friday, though, where he expects to find out whether he can share information about his dismissal.

The university also has yet to respond to The Record's requests for clarifying information. Vice-Principal Academic and Research Dr. Miles Turnbull did not respond by press time. And Interim Dean of the School of Education Dr. Anthony Di Mascio was unable to speak on the matter.

The Association of Professors of Bishop's University (APBU) told The Record that President Mark Labenski would "be in touch soon," however, he also did not respond by time the newspaper went to press Thursday.

The Record spoke to the Canadian Association of University Teachers (CAUT), a federation of independent associations representing approximately 70,000 teachers, librarians, researchers, and other academic professionals across the country. The APBU is a member of the federation.

CAUT Executive Director David Robinson said he was unaware of the situation at Bishop's. However, he explained how a tenured professor could be dismissed from a university. It needs to be a serious violation, Robinson said, or breaking the law, such as academic fraud.

"Generally, I think, in terms of dealing with tenure, oftentimes people think that tenure means that you're untouchable. What tenure essentially is, is a guarantee that the only reason a professor can be dismissed or terminated from their employment is for just cause," he said.

But dismissal for just cause is rare. According to Robinson, there is maybe one case every other year. It doesn't happen often because of the arduous process involved in obtaining tenure in the first place, he continued, it's a major commitment by the university.

He told The Record that in most cases where a professor is terminated for just cause, they will typically file a grievance and take the university to court. However, it mostly depends on whether the faculty association has sufficient evidence to support a grievance.

"I think it's fairly common because again, it's relatively unusual for a professor to be terminated for just cause because the threshold of the just cause law is pretty high. You basically have to break the law, or engage in fraud misconduct," Robinson said.

The decision to terminate a tenured professor shouldn't come lightly, he continued, since the "tenure system is there to allow academics to engage in research, explore controversial ideas, without fear of being terminated." It can also effectively ruin a professor's career.

"Once you're released from a university, the academic job market is pretty tight [...] and the nature of academic careers is that even a short interruption in your research and teaching and service activities can have a lifetime effect so it's quite serious," said Robinson.

The 'We Stand With Stonebanks' Facebook group, formerly known as 'Fight For Stonebanks,' was also active for a third consecutive day, as members reacted to the loss of a petition that was created on Wednesday, demanding answers from the university's administration.

The petition garnered over 550 signatures, but it was later removed after its creator was intimidated into taking it down, according to Nikki Baribeau, a Bishop's student and member of the Facebook group. However, Baribeau did not clarify how they were intimidated.

She also created a new petition called 'We support Dr. Stonebanks, we stand against systemic racism and silencing of BIPOC at BU' Thursday morning, which has accumulated more than 200 signatures. Baribeau said she didn't want to be silenced by the university.

"I felt that this should not be put on hold again because this has been going on for a really long time, so I put up another petition to show that not everyone can be intimidated," she said, adding that there are rumours about Stonebanks' dismissal, which the group is trying to dispel.

However, she did not divulge any details about the rumours. She was also unable to provide any pertinent information regarding Stonebanks due to the nature of non-disclosure agreements at play between the university and the dismissed professor.

"I really would love to talk because I think this story should be shared, the rumours going around are completely ridiculous, about what he was charged with and I don't want to repeat them because it's really messed up," said Baribeau.

Baribeau shared another post on the Facebook group, roughly an hour after her interview with The Record, this time with a link to a GoFundMe page called 'Fundraising for Legal fees for Dr. Stonebanks', which has already raised $465 out of a $10,000 goal.

Stonebanks' daughter, Farah Roxanne, posted in the group shortly after confirming that "this case will be taken to court." She said any donation would help pay for l egal fees. She added that the original petition was removed due to "scare tactics," but didn't provide any context.

The Masion Aube Lumiere is a palliative care home for people with end-stage cancers in the Eastern Townships. It has welcomed more than 3,500 people and their families, free of charge, since opening its doors for the first time in 1997.

The goal of the fundraiser is to raise at least $150,000, roughly ten per cent of the $1.5 million they work to raise annually to serve their clientele. Looking at the detail's of this year's sale, the communications director shared that although the plants are slightly more expensive, it is not out of an effort to push harder on supporters.

"It had been the same price since 2018, but with the pandemic everything is more expensive," Bélanger said, adding that, "usually when we raise, it stays that way for a couple of years."

Those looking to pick up some of the festive flowers can pay between $25 and $45 depending on the size and colour of choice.

Although the sale officially begins on Saturday, Bélanger said that the doors to the greenhouse will be open Friday for those particularly keen to have a look. In theory the sale continues until Dec. 18, but the director encouraged those interested in participating in the fundraiser to do so sooner than later.

"Last year by Dec. 14 there was not a single plant left," she said.

Aside from the direct sales at the greenhouse, the Maison Aube Lumiere will also have a kiosk at the Carrefour de l'Estrie mall from Dec. 2 to 12, and will sell poinsettias at the Jardin Des Trouvailles nursery in Coaticook. Purchases can also be made online or by calling the palliative care home directly at (819) 821-3120.

"Last year we tripled home delivery," Bélanger said.

ONE COLUMN, FOUR VOICES

Open to the Spirit

Today's word: Access

By Revs Mead Baldwin, Rabbi Boris Dolin Lee Ann Hogle, and Rev. Carole Martignacco

1 Our word today "access" can be complicated. It can be a verb or noun, and "accessible" is an adjective. It might be used as a blueprint to change the entrances to a public building, or a plan to make sure as many people as possible exercise the right to vote, or even a policy to ensure government documents can be used to report news stories. How do we offer a single perspective to open us to the divine?

When I face writer's block I turn to music.

"Though ancient walls may still stand proud, and racial strife be fact, though boundaries may be lines of hate, proclaim God's saving act. Walls that divide are broken down, God is our unity. Chains that enslave are thrown aside, God is our liberty."

Those are the words to a modern hymn in our tradition. (It was written in 1974, long before Donald Trump started to campaign on building his wall.) It brings to mind the day Jesus let his disciples and the children into the temple; which had always barred women and children. It reminds me of how Paul opened up the new faith of Jesus to the Gentiles, and even Roman centurions. It points to the deaconesses in the early church, a radical change. Jesus' wisdom became accessible to all people.

Here are a few more lines from that hymn: "This broken world seeks lasting health, and vital unity", "the truth we seek.... unites us on a common quest for self and world made new", "a unity of serving love that lives to praise God's name". Thank you for the inspiration, Walter Farquarson. So good readers, let's break down the walls that divide us, and provide access to divine love for everybody.

2 We like to think we live in a land of equal opportunity. Our laws, our sacred scriptures, and our wisdom teachers all point to this aspiration. But we are not there yet, and we must continually be aware of the forces, both active and passive, that prevent access to all that life can offer us. I am of an age where the civil rights movement was one of the first times I was exposed to the inequalities present in our society. Since then, we have witnessed many more protests that make us aware of the limited access certain groups have to education, health services, steady jobs, and freedom from persecution. The forces that undermine access may be human greed, fear, indifference, or blindness to systemic inequalities.

More than ever, we need to listen to the voices from the margins, calling us to pay attention to these inequalities. Who are the people we are not hearing from? Do we get our news mainly through our social media accounts that tend to reinforce our already held views? In Christian terms we have to ask ourselves who are the invisible neighbours Jesus asks us to love. This is the challenge of our times

3 Only a few times have I gone camping and slept with no tent under the stars. Of course, the weather has to be reasonable and the number of creeping critters around the area must be low, but it can be quite an enjoyable experience. While not necessarily protected from the elements, these nights open up to so mny opportunities for beauty and surprises. From the clear view of the stars above, to the full view of the sights and sounds of the forest, there is access to the fullness of the nature around us. It can be quite a powerful evening without that tent.

There is a well-known story from the Bible about Abraham and Sarah who welcome guests into their own tent, and rush to give them a place to rest and some good food and drink. While we later learn that these visitors are messengers of God, it is clear that Abraham and Sarah act the same for everyone who stops by. There is a beautiful midrash, a story, that tells us that their hospitality was so strong that it wasn't just their open personality that made them special, but that they even designed their tent intentionally to be open on all four sides — open to every stranger passing by from any direction in the desert. Abraham has an open heart and an open hand. He is not content to wait for guests, but rather seeks them out, runs to greet them, brings them inside and takes care of them. He even decides that access to compassion and caring is more important than a wall separating his home from the outside world.

I often hold up Abraham's tent as a glowing model of "radical hospitality". It is a reminder of the importance of providing equal access to all people, and of the work of creating holy spaces where everyone can find their place and feel comfortable. In my own community, I make sure to tell visitors that when they step through our doors, they should not have to give up who they are, and that their story, their relationships, and their sense of self will be valued and welcomed. Being truly welcomed means that we can make connections and become part of something bigger than ourselves. We enter as individuals, and we leave as part of a community.

One word, three voices today. What does "access" say to you.

Rev. Mead Baldwin pastors the Waterville & North Hatley pastoral charge; Rabbi Boris Dolin leads the Dorshei-Emet community in Montreal; Rev. Lee Ann Hogle ministers to the Ayer's Cliff, Magog & Georgeville United Churches; Rev. Carole Martignacco, Unitarian Universalist is retired from ministry with UUEstrie and now resides in St. Andrews by-the-Sea NB, but keeps one foot in the Townships by continuing with this column.

Saint-Austin Church closing its doors

Record Staff

A last mass will be celebrated on Sunday, Nov. 21, at 9 a.m. at Saint-Austin Church located in the municipality of Austin. The small church, which is part of the Notre-Dame-du-Mont-Carmel parish, must close its doors due to low attendance and insufficient participation in the annual voluntary contribution.

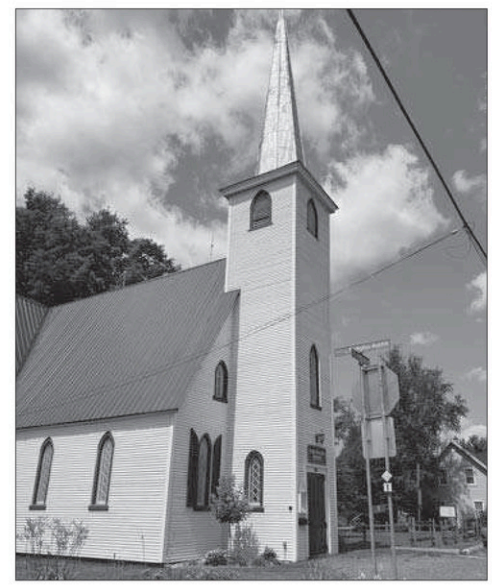

The parish committee is currently in discussions with the Austin municipal authorities about selling the building. The parish wants the church, built in 1865, to be able to serve the residents of the municipality.

"The building is in good condition and has been well maintained over the years. It is a source of pride for us to be able to bequeath a building that is in good condition," said Nathalie Taillandier, president of the Notre-Dame-du-Mont-Carmel parish committee.

The money generated by the sale of the church will allow the parish to continue its pastoral mission.

pastoral mission. Money will also be invested in the local cemetery.

St. Augustine's Church belonged to the Anglican community in the area until 1927 when it became a Catholic place of worship. Its origins give it a very special character, worthy of the history of the Memphremagog region.

In the last 18 months, Saint-Austin Church is the seventh church to close its doors in the Archdiocese of Sherbrooke. The churches of Saint-Jean-l'Évangéliste in Coaticook, Notre-Dame-de-la-Paix in Johnville, Saint-Clément in Bishopton, Sainte-Famille in Sherbrooke, Sainte-Praxède in the Brompton sector and Saint-Paul in Scotstown have also closed.

Bishop's principal commits to next steps regarding sexual assault policy

By Geoff Agombar
Local Journalism Initiative

Wednesday evening around 5:30 p.m. Principal and Vice-Chancellor Michael Goldbloom emailed Bishop's University students and community regarding the ongoing debates about sexual assault policy at the school.

"It has been anguishing to hear that students at Bishop's feel unsafe on the campus and unsupported by the University," the message began.

"I have heard the clear message from our students that we need to do more, and as principal I am accountable for ensuring that we do," Goldbloom declared. "Statements of support and expressions of good intent matter, but the actions of our administration and of our community will be what matter most."

The statement was published little more than 24 hours before this year's Take Back the Night March was set to begin, and two weeks after a message plastered along the bridge near the entrance to campus kicked off heightened frustration and debate among the student body.

Goldbloom stressed the sincere concerns and engagement required from the whole community to achieve advances, highlighted resources currently available, and committed to providing support and seeking justice.

Concretely, the message announced an upcoming meeting with students before the end of the week, an upcoming public townhall next week, and the engagement of a third party to investigate "the declarations posted on the bridge."

Me Danielle Gauthier was announced as an independent, external investigator to examine "the declarations on the bridge made by survivors." Goldbloom invited "anyone who wishes to share information about these disclosures," to contact Me Gauthier confidentially at daniellegauthier@lavery.ca.

Online, Gauthier's firm Lavery highlights her expertise in health and labour laws, alternative dispute resolution, arbitration and mediation, and the "new legal challenges in the world of labour law, the rules of governance and ethics, the impact of new social media on employers, demographic changes, and globalization."

Goldbloom and Linden-Andersen will jointly hold the townhall at 11:30 a.m. on Nov. 24 in McGreer Hall's Cleghorn conference room. Cleghorn is listed as a conference room with a capacity of 60 to 120 depending on arrangement and, presumably, Covid measures. The meeting will be livestreamed via Microsoft Teams.

Goldbloom and Dean of Student Affairs Stine Linden-Andersen will meet Nov. 19 with members of the Sexual Culture Committee and the students who volunteered to address the board of governors last Friday.

The SCC is a committee of the Student Representative Council, formally struck in January 2021 and has been working independently and in collaboration with the administration to improve information, services, policies, and training at Bishop's. The SCC's policy review subcommittee notably reviewed existing sexual assault and harassment policies and supports earlier this year. Their 26-page End of Year Report was submitted to members of the administration and board last April. An abridged version is available for download at www.linktr.ee/BUSCC.

The students who addressed the board of governors last Friday were spontaneous volunteers from among those who gathered to silently manifest their devotion to progress on these issues.

Jessica Landry, an honour roll psychology student, was among those volunteers last week. Speaking to The Record last Sunday, she described the experience as scary, but powerful and hopeful. She says the room was small, but filled with the biggest table she had ever seen. A camera was streaming the meeting via zoom. On one wall a screen projected the video feeds of remote participants, but all but one had their cameras muted so the screen was mostly black.

"There were only two women (board members) in the room," says Landry. "It is kind of scary to have to share your story about 'I was sexually assaulted as a child for many years.' And, it is difficult to have to explain that in front of, you know, a room of mostly men."

"I have not personally been assaulted by anyone at Bishop's, so I can't talk about that," Landry explains. "But this has always been a subject that is close to my heart. I had to live through it and grow through it, and I did have a lot of therapy. One of the things I have done for years now is to just openly talk about my story so others can feel comfortable sharing theirs."

"Even in 2021, there's still a taboo regarding sexual assault, so I always want to be sure I'm open about talking about mine," Landry specifies. "I'm not going to say I'm all better or that it's not still a painful situation. But I am in a better headspace than people who have just been recently assaulted."

Landry feels that the board members were mostly interested and engaged as she and the other students spoke. One spoke of inequities and fears particular to her experiences as a female student athlete. Another spoke of the heightened risks she lives with as an Indigenous woman. Another said she personally knows of three men living in her residence who have been accused of assault. Another requested a minute of silence for victims of assault.

"That's when we all held hands and we were crying a lot," Landry remembers. "There was a lot of people clearly nodding while we were talking. They seemed really interested."

Landry says it has been a very difficult two weeks, hearing everyone's stories and fears, but also really empowering. She wants to remain engaged in the process, feeling that her experience working in the insurance industry gives her a skillset to engage meaningfully in detailed policy work. Landry did not start university immediately after secondary school, choosing to enter the workforce. She started her studies at 23 and describes feeling a bit like a big sister among her fellow students at Bishop's.

Landry has met with administrators at Université de Sherbrooke informally to understand why their sexual assault policies have such a strong reputation. "I have a 15-year-old niece who is thinking of going to cegep and then university... and I have to wonder, why

Christmas stories at the Sherbrooke history museum

By Gordon Lambie

The Christmas season has returned to Mhist, Sherbrooke's history museum.

From now until Jan. 9, visitors of all ages, and families in particular, are invited to come visit a new exhibit entitled 'Christmas stories' to learn about the history of treasured holiday traditions and get a look at how they may have taken place locally.

"We cover the tree, the music, the folklore, the characters," said David Lacoste, the museum's Executive Director. "We tried to look at a little bit of everything."

Marie-Ève Gingras, coordinator of the exhibition, said that the space has been created with fun and family in mind.

"We worked hard on the visuals, but also to create ways that children could be independent during their visit," Gingras said, explaining that the exhibit has activities suited to a range of ages, and features a return of some of the more hands-on aspects of museum displays that have been missing for the last 18 months.

In addition to photo and bilingual text displays built off of the museum's own archives, the exhibit hall is filled with displays of colourful toys and games drawn from the collections of other nearby museums, like the Beaulne and Colby-Curtis museums. These displays, while interesting on their own, also make up part of several scavenger hunt activities that have been planned.

The coordinator also pointed out the presence of Falala the arctic fox, who stands near several of the more significant displays to offer a little information to younger visitors in the form of a French audio recording.

"We tried to be as varied and dynamic as possible," she said.

Over the course of the next month and a half, Lacoste said that a full slate of school groups is set to come visit the space. Because of that fact he encouraged families interested in visiting to call ahead and make sure that they are coming at a good time.

On Dec. 4, the Museum will be offering a special 'children's' day' where families who sign up in advance will be able to visit free of charge and participate in special activities and crafting only available on that day.

'Christmas stories' has been set up in the museum's American-Biltrite hall, on the second floor of the building. The museum itself is located at 275 Dufferin Street, next door to the city's fine arts museum. For more information or to register for a visit, go to www.mhist.org or call 819 821-5406.

Editorial

The format of a My Take is 150 words - no more, no less - to express an opinion on a different topic each week. This week's topic was accountability.

My Take: By Gordon Lambie

Writing for a living makes you acutely aware of just how true it is that everyone makes mistakes. Try as you might to proofread and double-check details, eventually something ends up in print that just doesn't look quite right and you're left to face the judgement or confusion of your readers.

It's part of the reason why systems of checks and balances exist in the world. Typos might be the context that I live with, but there are much more serious errors that can be made, with much more serious consequences.

It is important that someone be there to double check the details when matters of finance, public health, or individual lives hang in the balance, but let's not pretend that's an easy job. I've never heard an ode to an auditor, and I can understand why, but that doesn't mean it's not important work.

My Take: By Geoff Agombar

Honestly, these My Takes are a stressful end to the week. Standing behind my own opinion in my own voice weighs on my anxieties. I try to find some clever formula and hit the 150-word count bang on. Clever formulae stroke my ego. Puzzles too. They pull me up into a sparkling, heady, prideful place. They drown out the rootier sounds of self-judgement and doubt, the fear of public exposure.

Everything we do in public is permanent and political. It is so much easier when I amplify the words I heard someone else say and they sounded good, or elevate the acts someone else did and they were good.

"I know it when I see it" is often called on to fill in when definitions get tricky. I'll know it when I don't, will cover others. Accountability is so much easier to demand than deliver.

My Take: By Matthew McCully

I'm always astounded when I ask to interview people who have expressed an opinion on social media and they respond, oh no, I don't want to go on the record.

The funny thing is, you are no less accountable for your statements on social media than you are in my newspaper.

The difference is, I built a career on choosing my words carefully and I have a legal obligation to accurately report what I see and hear without taking a side. So, we sink or swim together.

And just between you and me, if you go off half-cocked during an interview, I can separate passion from frustration and hurt from misguided anger to get your point across.

But what I can't do is turn a blind eye to witless online mudslinging, or just throw it in the free speech pile.

Please, think before you write.

My Take: By Michael Boriero

Accountability is not always a prominent trait found in people. It is easier to make excuses, rather than owning up to a mistake or explaining the reason behind an unpopular decision.

While we often hold politicians accountable — world leaders, corporations, etc — we fail to hold ourselves, the humble citizen, to the same standards.

But unfortunately that word, that trait, has been effectively thrown out of the window with the rise of social media. People feel safe to say what they please without any repercussions.

If we want to challenge institutions, and the greater powers in the world, we also need to look inward. If we do not hold ourselves to the same standards, then who are we to question others.

I think people, myself included, forget that actions matter. And words matter. Remaining silent on an issue moments after passing judgment, especially online, is cowardly.

Letters

Dear Editor,

I am writing about the low level of voter participation in both the federal and municipal elections, although it was higher in the federal election. Next year we shall discover if it is higher in the provincial election.

We have the priceless privilege of choosing those who governs us at all three levels of government. Those who don't take advantage of it should be ashamed of themselves.

Government is decided by voting, not by war.

In Cowansville, where I live, only 32 per cent of those eligible to vote did so!

Sincerely, use it or lose it
John Sergeantson

Farnham: A small village with a big military history

By Taylor McClure
Special to The Record

Farnham, a small village located in Brome-Missisquoi, is known for its picturesque downtown core that continues to reflect its Loyalists heritage. What makes the village more unique is that it is the site of a National Defense Base dating back to 1910. It served as a military training camp for soldiers during both World Wars. It also served as a prisoner of war camp (POW) for German soldiers, as well as interred Japanese Canadians evicted from British Columbia. The CFB Farnham faced the possibility of closure various times over the years, but it continues to be an important base, and one of the largest, of the 2nd Canadian Division Support Group of the Canadian Forces for the Quebec area that trains deployable joint forces for domestic operations.

The CFB Farnham was opened in 1910 by Minister of Military and Defense Sir Frederick Borden of the Laurier government. It was one of the first military base installments in Canada at a time when the country was slowly organizing its military to protect its borders following the American Civil War and the Fenian Raids.

It was originally used for Cavalry training before it became an important training camp for soldiers to be deployed to Europe during the First World War. It welcomed regiments from across the province such as the 26th Stanstead Dragoons, the 6th and 17th Hussars (Montreal), the 13th Scottish Light Dragoons (Waterloo), the 7th Hussars (Compton), and the 11th Hussars (Richmond).

It closed its doors in 1918 and the property started to be used by the Dominion Experimental Farm that was located not far from the site of the military camp up until the Second World War.

ETRC ARCHIVES

Possibly the 5th Princess Louise Dragoon Guards of Ottawa in camp in the Townships, 1904-1912

On Oct. 16 1940, the base reopened its doors to train soldiers for World War Two.

According to Record archives, the CFB Farnham served as a POW camp and internment camp for German soldiers and Japanese Canadians forced out of British Columbia, and it was kept under high surveillance. Interestingly, it was also a detention centre for German officers.

In the summer of 1943, a manhunt took place in the Eastern Townships after one of the German POWs escaped from the camp. He was a Nazi sea captain and he escaped the day he was to be transferred to another camp in St. Johns. Officials of the camp took notice when they did a line-up for attendance.

The camp was able to accommodate up to 700 people and around 2,800 internees and POWs passed through the camp between 1940 and 1946.

Following the Second World War, the camp was abandoned until it became the training grounds for the Canadian Forces in 1952. It trained recruits, reservists, and cadets during peace time.

The camp underwent various investments from the Department of National Defense in the years following to upgrade its facilities to ensure that Farnham could continue to support recruit training and military operations in Quebec as it does today.

Bishop's principal commits to next steps would I tell her to go to Bishop's when she could go 15 minutes away to Université de Sherbrooke and her rights would be more protected."

As one concrete example, Landry says at UdeS, when a student reports an assault, the administration can remove the accused from class as a first-level response while investigations are underway. The initial message on the bridge at Bishop's spoke specifically of a survivor's accused aggressor still being in class. After the last townhall, Landry was frustrated to recall statements to the effect that a student could not simply be removed from class pending investigation, because education is a right. At Ude S, Landry says she understands the accused is not suspended, rather they continue their studies remotely, a mode of study which has become quite achievable and commonplace since the pandemic.

Another comparison, not raised by Landry, would be to the degree of transparency toward sexual violence and harassment annual reporting at the two schools. In a recent interview, Linden-Andersen said that Bishop's does track sexual assault reporting statistics and reports those numbers to government every year as required by law, but cannot share these numbers publicly to protect confidentiality of survivors within the school's small community.

Dr. Gregory Brophy of the Committee for the Prevention of Harassment and Sexual Violence confirms these statistics are collected, but cannot be shared publicly because Bishop's has not received consent from survivors to share this information. He says the school's Sexual Aggression Response Coordinator is working on a procedure to solicit consent from complainant/survivors so that Bishop's can publicize statistical data while respecting the confidentiality.

UdeS has already taken the step of staffing an Équipe-conseil en matière de respect des personnes (Respect for Persons Advisory Team) which pursues a proactive mandate, including the publication of detailed and nuanced annual reports. These reports include qualititative analysis such as noting that employees statistically trend toward seeking information and mediative supports, while students trend toward wanting to make disclosures, reports, or formal complaints. Quantified insights in the form multiple graphs and tables which break out reports by category, by month, report annual totals, or plot curves over multiples years are also included. Three years of reports are currently available as pdfs at www.usherbrooke.ca/respect/a-propos/rapport-annuel.

For her part, Landry wants to see increased accountability and transparency from her university. She knew they had promised to hire an external firm to conduct an investigation, but wondered whether final reports or summaries would be fully public. "That why I'm fighting for student representation throughout this process."

"I wanted to stress that I am hopeful," Landry adds. "Right now, I really want to work with the administration, and I'm really hopeful that they do reach out to speak with us."

"I want to see where we can go from here. I want to fight for survivors," she adds. "But I'm committing myself to keeping them accountable throughout this process."

How an 'atmospheric river' drenched British Columbia and led to floods and mudslides

By John J Clague, Emeritus Professor, Earth Sciences, Simon Fraser University
The Canadian Press

The West Coast of Canada is known for its wet autumn weather, but the storm that British Columbia's Fraser Valley experienced over the weekend was one for the record books.

A weather system called an ``atmospheric river'' flowed across the southwest corner of the province and, over a period of two days, brought strong winds and near-record amounts of rain, which caused widespread flooding and landslides. So far, one person has died.

Hope, Merritt and Princeton, which were particularly hard hit, received 100-200 millimetres (or more) of rainfall. And all of the highways connecting Vancouver to the rest of the province were closed due to washouts and landslides, isolating the city from the rest of Canada, at least by road, with significant economic impacts.

What is an atmospheric river?

An atmospheric river is a band of warm, moisture-laden air many hundreds of kilometres long and hundreds of kilometres wide that borders a large cyclonic low-pressure system.

The term has been applied to bands of moisture-associated weather systems that move inland from the Pacific Ocean. An atmospheric river can reach the coast anywhere between southeast Alaska and Northern California.

Because of the large amount of moisture conveyed in these weather systems, the term has become a metaphor for a terrestrial river. However, atmospheric rivers are not carried in a channel like a real river and can dump prodigious amounts of rain over large areas.

Was it a record-breaking rainfall?

The weekend storm was noteworthy for both its duration and its intensity. It rained continuously over much of the storm track for more than 24 hours and the rate was higher than normal autumn rains.

In both cases, rapid runoff exceeded the carrying capacity of streams and rivers, causing them to spill out onto floodplains. In addition, flat areas like the Sumas Prairie area between Abbotsford and Chilliwack had already been saturated with October and early November rainfall, were unable to drain away the water and were consequently flooded.

Furthermore, snow at high elevations melted under the warm rainfall, exacerbating the flooding. Rainfall on Nov. 14 set records for many places in the region. For example, Abbotsford recorded 100 millimetres of rain that day, exceeding the previous record of 49 millimetres set in 1998. Hope had 174 millimetres, five times the amount in the record year of 2018.

Did summer wildfires make the situation worse?

B.C. had a its second worst wildfire summer season in 2021, with more than 1,600 fires charring nearly 8,700 square kilometers, mainly in the southern part of the province. Only 2017 saw more forest lands burned.

Soils in forested landscapes are hydrophobic after severe fires _ they repel water. Super-heated air during a wildfire disperses waxy compounds found in the uppermost forest litter layer. The compounds coat mineral grains in the underlying soil, making it hydrophobic. The water-repelling layer is typically found at or a few centimetres below the ground surface and is commonly covered by a layer of burned soil or ash.

Many areas burned during the 2021 wildfires, such as around Merritt, were deluged by rain the weekend of Nov. 13. It is possible that runoff from these burned grounds was greater and more rapid because of the hydrophobicity of the soil.

Is this related to climate change?

Scientists are generally reluctant to attribute single extreme weather events to climate change, but the exceptional events of recent years are shifting opinion.

Examples of such exceptional events include flooding in western Germany and eastern Belgium and in Henan Province China, both in July 2021; extreme heat and wildfires in Siberia in 2020 and 2021; and the "heat dome" over western North America at the end of June 2021.

These events are so far "off scale" in comparison to past historic extreme events that climate modellers assert that they would not have happened or would not have been as severe were it not for climate change.

Such events are consistent with predictions made by atmospheric scientists that weather extremes will become more frequent and more severe as Earth's climate continues to warm.

CHRISTMAS BASKET CAMPAIGN

The AGRHS Christmas basket campaign has been a long-standing tradition in the community. Over the years we have been fortunate enough to have received generous donations from our community. Again this year, I ask for your support during these even more challenging times in bringing a little Christmas spirit to our less fortunate families.

The baskets will benefit families from Alexander Galt Regional High School sector (elementary and high school).

We hope we can continue to rely on your support, as it remains very important for the success of our Christmas basket campaign.

Please, make cheques payable to

TALK

YOUR WEEKLY GUIDE TO TOWNSHIPS CULTURE

NOVEMBER 19 - NOVEMBER 25, 2021

You can dance if you want to

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE PELLETIER

They are back! The members of Firehouse Productions are resuming where they left off prior to the pandemic. François Gilbert was proud to talk about their current projects as well as plans in the making for the near future.

Firehouse is comprised of five directors: Gilbert as president director, Scott Passmore, Chris Fowlis, Claude Leclair and Bruce Giddings. Three of the five members of The Firehouse Productions team are also members of The Lennoxville Fireman's Association and are either currently firefighters or used to be firefighters.

For seven years now, they have been working to bring us some great shows, but this dedicated group of men is truly implicated in the community and the group is comprised of very committed individuals.

"Part of the profits generated with each show are donated to help the community. There are many good causes to support in the Townships and our goal is to help as many of them as possible," said Gilbert in an interview.

Everything starts this Saturday, Nov. 20 at 8:30 p.m. when they will be presenting their very first dance since before the pandemic at The Lion Pub in Lennoxville, featuring local group Slightly Haggard. Tickets (if any are still available) are on sale for $15 at Clarke and Sons, in Lennoxville.

The following Saturday, Nov. 27 at 9 p.m. Slightly Haggard will be back for another special Firehouse Productions dance, this time at the A.N.A.F. (The Hut) on St. Francis Street. Tickets (only 225 available) will be on sale for $15 at The Hut starting Monday, Nov. 22, 2021.

"We think that at this time (post pandemic), it is important to support our local musicians more than ever. We want to promote them before hiring someone who's not local. Also, we wanted to be the ones who would start the ball and help with the economy," shared Gilbert. He also added that it was time to get back to some normality.

The guys from Firehouse Productions are currently working on another project which will be presented after the holidays. A much bigger project is being planned for May while there's also an annual Festival in the works for 2022. No further details are available at this time, but Gilbert promised to keep us posted.

Of course, a proof of double vaccination will be required at the door at both places, as well as proof of identity. The mask is still mandatory, and dancing is permitted, with your mask on!

"We have been working in collaboration with the A.N.A.F. (The Hut) to improve the hall. There's a new stage that can be enlarged to accommodate different venues and the stage is not at the same place either. There's a new lighting system to give the place a more professional and refreshed look," Gilbert explained.

And he added "We are eager for people to see it and we invite them to come and witness the transformation and new concept while having a nice evening out, dancing to the sound of Slightly Haggard's great music".

COURTESY FACEBOOK

As for the band, they don't need any special introduction. The band has been entertaining crowds for the last 15 years. The band includes Brian Curtis, Jeff Bray, Chris Curtis, Kevin McVety and Jerry Goodsell (replacing Wendell Pehlemann).

"We all missed playing during the last year and a half. This will be our first gig inside in a long time. We played outside in September, in Stanstead, for a Family Day, but this will be our first dance," said Brian Curtis, reached at his residence.

Of course, Curtis said that he now knows what it is to spend a Saturday night at home, watching a good movie with his wife. This is something he never really had the chance to do in his life because he started playing in bands when he was barely a man.

Just the same, after this long pause the guys are really excited to start playing again and these two nights should find them in top shape and happy to see their followers again.

On the other hand, Wendell Pehlemann has announced his retirement from music and for now, Jerry Goodsell is the one who is replacing him. Happy retirement to Pehlemann, he sure will be missed!

Make sure to go get your tickets because there's only a limited amount available due to public health regulations.

The most beautiful melodies in the world

Violins by candlelight in Sherbrooke and Magog

Record Staff

With subdued lighting, in a church illuminated solely by candles and an ambiance among the most muted and the most propicious for listening, the musicians of the string quartet "Ambitus" will perform a concert full of charm, elegance, rapture and wonder!

The program will include Pachelbel's famous "Canon", one of the most well-known works of classical music, followed by a medley of four of the most beautiful tangos ever composed, followed quickly by a concerto for violin composed by none other than Antonio Vivaldi! Then Glazunov's Autumn (the music that was the theme of the Canadian TV drama series Les Belles Histoires des pays d'en-haut) as well as the music from the film "Un homme et son péché" will follow.

Charles Aznavour, with his four most beautiful songs including "La Bohème" will surely enchant the audience. The first part of the program will end with three extracts from George Bizet's opera "Carmen", including the famous Toreador!

The Bolero of Ravel and a suprise piece will open the second part of the concert, followed by the most beautiful of all of Vivaldi's concertos for violin! Another waltz to dazzle the public – Strauss's The Blue Danube Waltz! The music from the Beatles will not fail to evoke nostalgia for the most beautiful rock music of all time. The show will conclude on a most joyous note with Brahms's fifth Hungarian Dance.

These two concerts The most beautiful melodies in the company of the string quartet "Ambitus" will take place on Friday, Nov. 19 at 8 p.m. in the Cathedral St-Michel, at Sherbrooke and on Saturday, Nov. 20 at 8 p.m. in the St-Jean-Bosco church in Magog. Resevations can be made on the website : concertchandelle.com. It is also possible to buy tickets at the door the evening of the concert.

Double exhibition at the Beaulne museum

Record Staff

The Beaulne Museum is currently presenting two different exhibitions at the museum, located at 96 Rue de l'Union, in Coaticook.

"Le temps des rêves" by artist Isabelle Frot, and "Perte de monde" by the artist Sophie Roy will be running until Jan. 23, 2022.

Isabelle Frot loves painting, horses and fairy tales. She tells stories in paintings bursting with colours inside an imaginary universe where past and present mingle in an offbeat reality, the dreams that inhabit her universe. The paintings exhibited are inspired by storytelling and poetry, such as: "Hommage au plat pays ou Le lion amoureux". Others, such as « Coeur vaillant », trigger the urge to tell stories. Frot's work inspires all to dream and escape, as books allow, but through pictures.

French writer and artist from Quebec, Isabelle Frot is passionate about horses and the grandiose landscapes of Canada. With a master's degree in visual arts from the University of Paris 8 and a teaching certificate from Concordia University, she divides her time between painting, writing and teaching the arts.

Drawing is the basis of her artistic training. But beyond drawing, painting allows her to express thoughts and emotions that touch our hearts. It is a real transformation: chemistry of colors, lacquers and textures. Slowly, her creation emerges from the chaos and comes to life.

Frot's colourful paintings tell stories: writing plunges her into the world of fairy tales and fantasy, while painting opens the door to imagination, to visions, halfway between dreams and reality. She ultimately sees herself as a visionary artist. Her credo: a brushstroke, a breath, the breath of life and dreams.

Sophie Roy's artistic practice evolves around alternative photographic methods, such as digital manipulation as well as mixed media that combine image transfer and painting. Through her work, Sophie Roy explores ideas, concepts and universal themes such as living beings, nature and society today. The artist seeks to create poetic and symbolic works in order to arouse emotions and reflections in the spectator. She does this by superimposing, juxtaposing and manipulating various photos of landscapes, urban places, people and animals. She sometimes combines recent photos and archival photos, highlighting the past and the present while opening up new temporal perspectives. Unlike a photographic snapshot which captures and freezes a precise moment in time, photomontage allows her to express a dynamic vision of life, made up of changes, movements and transformations.

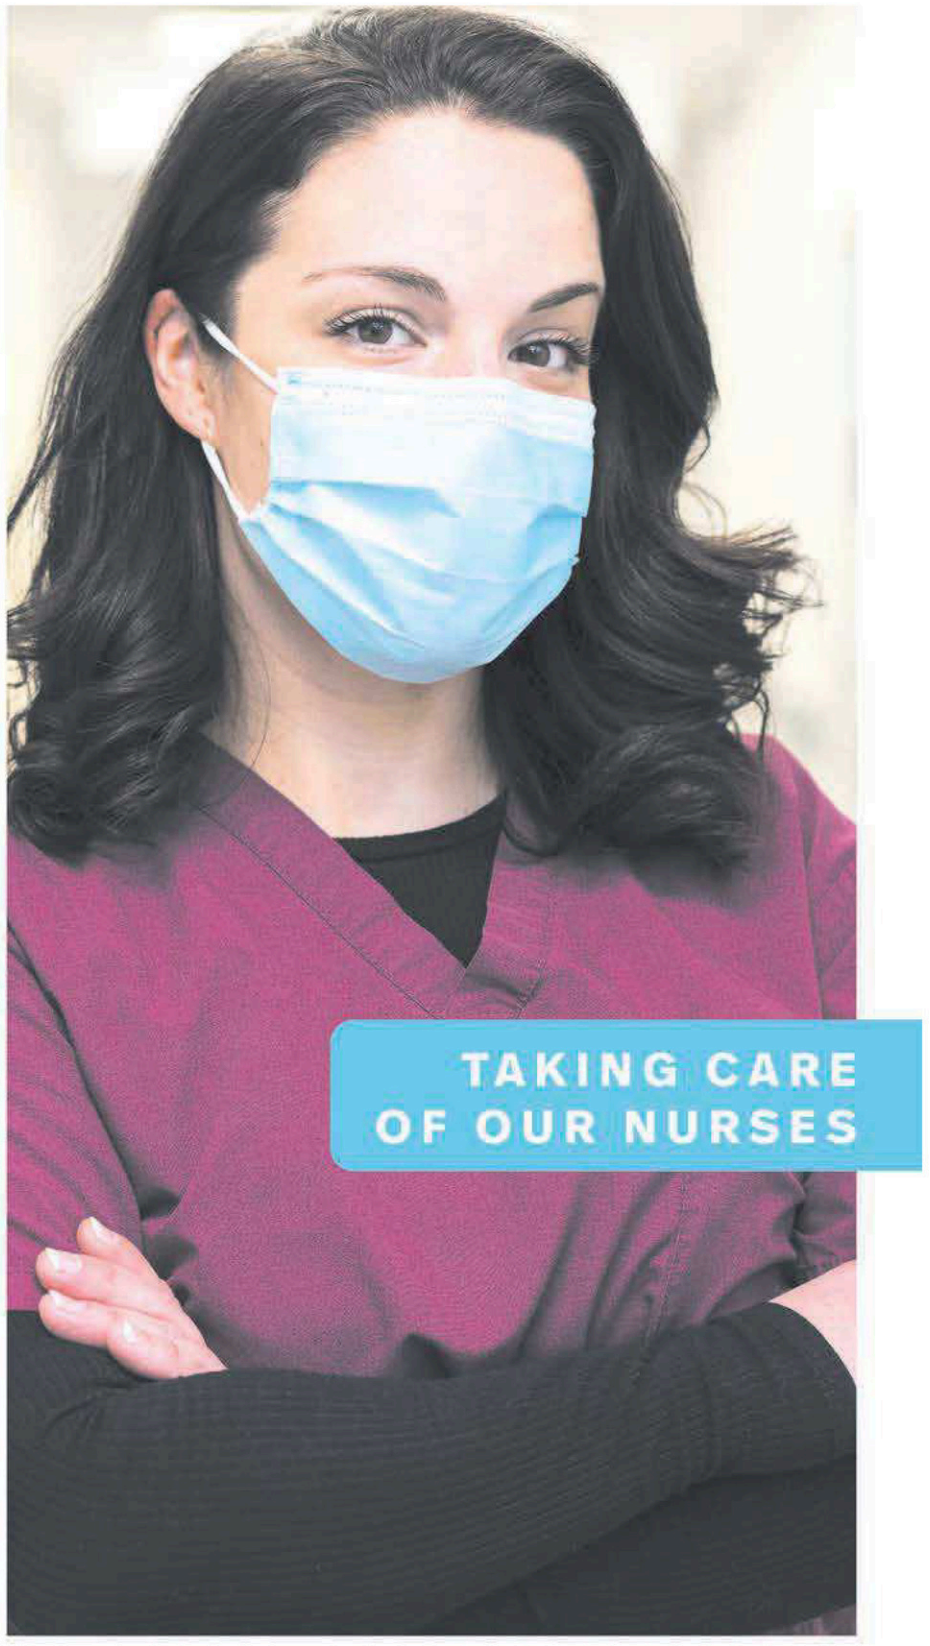

Sophie Roy is a visual artist who lives and works in the Montreal, Canada area. She has exhibited her work solo on several occasions and participated in group exhibitions across the region.

Nurses have always put their heart and soul into caring for patients.

Now it's our turn to take care of them by giving their abilities the recognition they deserve and ensuring a better work-life balance–starting today.

This is also an opportunity for those who've left the public health system to come back and provide assistance under better working conditions.

Now more than ever, we need their help to improve patients' lives.

Do just one thing

by Danny Seo

If you see a houseplant with yellowing leaves, one of the most important things you should do is trim them off.

Yellowing, almost-dead leaves won't revive and turn green again, so it's better to help the plant by removing them so the plant can dedicate all of its energy to generating new leaves.

When you are done pruning, be sure to wipe the pruning blades with rubbing alcohol. This will disinfect the blades so you don't transfer any diseases to other plants.

Studies indicate fitness trackers can predict illness

ASK THE DOCTORS by Eve Glazier, M.D., and Elizabeth Ko, M.D.

Dear Doctors: My husband caught a cold this summer, and he swears the readings from his fitness tracker a few days before warned him that he was about to be sick. Do you think that's really possible?

Dear Reader: Your husband's observations about how changes in the data from his fitness tracker preceded the onset of a cold actually dovetail with the findings of a study that were published at the start of the year. And it's not the first research of its kind to make the connection. With millions of people now using fitness trackers, scientists are diving into the trove of uploaded data to see what the details may be able to reveal about public health.

For anyone unfamiliar with fitness trackers, they're wearable sensors, much like a wristwatch, that measure a range of activity and health metrics. Depending on the device – there are dozens of different brands and types – fitness trackers measure steps taken, total mileage, speed, direction, elevation climbed and duration of activity. On the physiological side of things, they can track heart rate, heart rhythms, skin temperature and minutes of sleep. Some manufacturers even claim that, using motion sensors and algorithms, their models can map how long someone spends in the various stages of sleep. (Full disclosure: Many sleep specialists are skeptical about the accuracy of the sleep-stage results.)

In a recent study, researchers from the Scripps Research Translational Institute analyzed data collected from the fitness trackers of 47,000 adult women and men. Using a minimum of two months' worth of readings taken over the course of two years, which included activity, heart rate and sleep, the researchers found that their predictions of regional flu outbreaks matched the statistical data collected by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention during those same time periods. An earlier study, published by researchers at Stanford University in early 2017, had come to similar conclusions. In that study, the scientists collected 250,000 daily readings from just 43 individuals over the course of a year. The participants wore a range of biosensors, which collected information about daily activity, heart rate, oxygen saturation levels, skin temperature and sleep data. They even tracked exposure to radiation, such as the X-rays and gamma rays encountered in air travel.

As with the Scripps study, certain changes to the readings collected by the wearable sensors predicted coming down with a cold or the flu. These changes included persistent increases in resting heart rate, which were coupled with increases to daily sleep. One of the Stanford scientists, who was also a participant in the study, noticed he had an increased heart rate and a decrease in blood oxygen saturation. It turned out that he didn't have a cold; instead, the data from the eight different biosensors he was wearing for the study led to an early diagnosis of Lyme disease, before any other symptoms of the condition had appeared.

It's a fascinating line of inquiry that no surprise, is getting additional study In the meantime, listen to your body, stay home if you think you're getting sick and please, get your flu shot.

(Eve Glazier, M.D., MBA, is an internist and associate professor of medicine at UCLA Health Elizabeth Ko, M.D., is an internist and assistant professor of medicine at UCLA Health.)

Your Birthday

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 2020

Engage in something that makes you feel alive. Put an end to what's no longer of importance to you. Be aggressive and innovative moving forward, and you'll discover you have something to offer that you enjoy doing. Aim for peace of mind, explore possibilities and embrace love and romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) – Look at the possibilities and do something that excites you. It's your responsibility to make things happen, so stop waiting and start doing. Reach out to a friend or colleague and share your thoughts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) – Keep your emotions hidden. Be secretive about your plans until you have everything in place. Don't let anyone use emotional manipulation to throw you off track. Trust your instincts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Don't let temptation take control. Size up situations and be accountable for what you say and do. How you respond to others will determine what you get in return.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) – Follow through with your plans, and don't argue a moot point. Don't get involved in joint ventures or shared expenses. Focus on what you know and do best, and keep your life simple.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) – Chat all you like, but stick to the truth. If you exaggerate or embellish, someone will speak up and make you look bad. Focus more on what you can do for others instead of trying to outmaneuver them.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Budget for something that will make your life easier. Refuse to let anyone talk you into a shared expense that will add to your debt and cause worry. Take good care of your health.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Concentrate on achieving your goal, and don't stop until you get satisfactory results. Refuse to give in to someone's manipulative rhetoric. Put your responsibilities first, then enjoy your downtime.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Set up a plan and follow it through to completion. How you do things will provide a lesson to onlookers. Refuse to let anyone interfere or take charge. Embrace life wholeheartedly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – A creative outlet will attract attention. Take a step in a direction that allows you to express yourself openly and offers you a chance to explore possibilities. Romance is favored.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Reach out to someone who understands you. Having supportive people around will encourage you to deal with situations that are dragging you down. Finish what you start, and move on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Accept a leadership position, and you'll get things done. Your ability to take on opposition using common-sense integrity will raise your profile. Make plans with a loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) – Pay attention to what things cost before spending money on something you don't need. Focus more on personal improvement, health and fitness. Enjoy the company of someone sensible.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 2020

Assess what's going on around you and embrace changes that will help you reformat your routine to fit your lifestyle. It's up to you to start doing things that bring you peace of mind. Refuse to let others push you in a direction that doesn't suit your needs.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) – Too much of anything will weigh you down. Pass along things you no longer use. Take a strict approach to decluttering your space and making it more conducive to furthering your long-term goals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) – Take care of unfinished business. You'll feel better when your responsibilities are taken care of and you are free to do something enjoyable with someone special. Be honest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Don't take on too much. Look at what you are up against and call in people you can count on to help. Sharing and caring will set the stage for a great day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) – Spend time at home. Clear a space that will allow you to pursue something that interests you. Take charge of projects, and delegate jobs to people you want to work alongside.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) – Leave nothing to chance when dealing with emotional situations. Don't get involved in gossip or neglect to complete important paperwork. Take the necessary steps to achieve your dreams.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Get involved in something that will help your community. Your input will lead to an unexpected opportunity. Don't take risks that can lead to illness or injury. A joint venture will be disappointing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Embrace change, go with the flow and navigate your way through obstacles like a pro. Use experience, intuition and intelligence, and you will outmaneuver any challenger or rival.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Stick to the truth and ask questions if you think someone is withholding information. Educational pursuits will help you understand the ins and outs of something that interests you. Expand your mind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Find a way to use your skills differently, and you'll come up with a shortcut that will help you stay ahead of your workload. Sign up for something unique, and it will give you a needed boost.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Consider what's going on in your vicinity and voice your opinion. Anger won't solve anything, but a valid suggestion will help you win support. Do what you can to improve your life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Control your emotions. When in doubt, be a good listener. Plan something special for you and a loved one. An affectionate gesture is encouraged. A proposal may be slightly misleading.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) – Take nothing and no one for granted. Ask questions and address anything that might pose a problem for you. Know what you are up against, and you'll figure out a way to succeed.

Affection is absent

Dear Annie

FRIDAY, JANUARY 24, 2020

Dear Annie: My spouse and I have been married for over 40 years. Our children are married with children of their own. They seem happy and well-adjusted, and our whole family seems happy and healthy. I am very blessed and glad things are the way they are.

The problem: There is no love or affection in our marriage, and there hasn't been for over 20 years. We sleep in separate rooms. Despite my requests, which I don't make often, there is never any cuddling, affection, hand-holding ... nothing. When I suggest counseling, the response is that I am the one who needs counseling, that I am needy and insecure. I am in decent shape, take care of myself, have good hygiene, and do most of the housekeeping, grocery shopping, meal prep, etc.

All I want is a little attention. I am in my mid-60s, and the thought of spending the rest of my life like this really depresses me. I don't want to have an affair or get divorced, but I don't want to be lonely the rest of my life. The thought of the grandchildren going to separate homes to see Grandma and Grandpa makes me sad. Any advice would be greatly appreciated. – My Heart Aches for Attention

Dear Heart Aches: Don't let your husband convince you that being needy and wanting affection are the same thing. Props to you for communicating what you want rather than expecting him to read your mind.

It sounds like you're stuck between a rock and a hard place: You don't want a divorce, but your husband is unwilling to work toward a solution. Unfortunately, relationships are a two-way street; they require effort from both parties. If he's unwilling to make your needs one of his priorities – by at least going to couples counseling – perhaps this is not a marriage you want to be in.

Your grandchildren deserve the most joyful, affectionate version of yourself that you can give them. That's far more important than who Grandma shares a house with.

Dear Annie: I've had a girlfriend for two years.

When COVID hit, she was with me 24/7. Now that COVID has died down, she does not hang out with me. I have not seen her for four weeks. She works way too much and travels with her daughter for swim.

When I tell her I love her over text, she just sends me hearts. She doesn't call or text me much.

Do you think I should end this relationship and move on? Because to be honest, I don't see it going anywhere. I have kind of lost interest with her. We were engaged, and she always wore her ring. Now she does not wear it anymore. I'm confused. Please help. – Am I an Ex?

Dear Am I: It sounds like your girlfriend/fiancee has both feet out the door. She's been gradually ghosting you, and now you're left in the dust, alone and confused.

Though puzzling for you, this is a blessing in disguise. If you don't see a future and you've lost interest in her, too, then you aren't really losing much; you're gaining an opportunity to move on and up with your life.

Make contact with this woman and officially break things off. Put it all out on the table and get the clarity you need to put your confusion to bed. You have a whole new chapter waiting for you – may it be with someone who never leaves you guessing where you stand.

Your Birthday

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 2021

Lowering your stress will help you make better decisions, form strong relationships and live a healthy lifestyle. Aim to get along with everyone and make adjustments that give you the freedom to follow your heart and let your imagination run riot. Choose balance and equality over discord.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) – Damage control will help you address a tense situation with a friend, relative or loved one. Don't overreact when kindness and understanding are what's required. Affectionate gestures will be welcome.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) – Work with a loved one to make a difference. Talks will be spirited, but the result will be a beneficial and welcome change that allows you to plan for big things ahead.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Consider what you can do to improve your chance to excel or head in a direction that excites you. A change you make to your resume or qualifications will pay off.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) – Your ideas will exceed your budget. Consider what's important and how to satisfy what you want while staying within your means. Offering an incentive to someone will help close the gap.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) – Emotions will be difficult to control. If you want to get things done without conflicts or setbacks, stick to the truth. Search for common ground when working with others, and you will find a path that satisfies everyone.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Touch base with someone you find motivating. The enthusiasm you gain from a spirited conversation will help you take care of unfinished business and move on to exciting opportunities.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Distance yourself from unfavorable situations, and you'll get a better glimpse of what's happening. Look for a way to minimize spending that still enables you to get what you want.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Step back and review what's happening. Look at what's trending, and consider how you can utilize your skills, knowledge and experience to get ahead. Stay focused on what's viable and promising.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Don't be fooled by the hype. Ask questions, then sift through information that will help you make a good decision. Taking a risk with your health or finances will cause undue stress.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Set high standards and don't budge, regardless of what others do or say. Follow your heart and do what's best for you. Discipline will come in handy when dealing with temptation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Put your emotions aside and be realistic. A change in pace, living arrangements or the crowd you hang out with will help you get back on track. Don't be fooled by someone trying to push you in the wrong direction.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) – Spend time with people who bring out the best in you. Activities that motivate you to take care of yourself will give you a new lease on life. A healthy diet and a good exercise routine are encouraged.

Can you afford to take a peek?

By Phillip Alder

Exposure" script, "They say dreams are the windows of the soul – take a peek, and you can see the inner workings, the nuts and bolts."

In bridge, they say that one peek is worth two finesses. But can you always afford to take that peek? Look at the West hand in today's diagram. You are on lead against three no-trump after the given auction. What do you lead?

After the opponents have bid two suits at the one-level, fourth hand is said to be in the sandwich position. You and your partner need to agree on meanings for double, one no-trump, two of either of their suits and two no-trump.

Let's dispose of the easy one first. Double shows exactly four cards in an unbid major and four or more cards in an unbid minor.

Nowadays, most experts treat two of all four suits as natural. One no-trump is also natural, showing 16-18 or even 19 high-card points. A jump to two no-trump is unusual, promising at least 5-5 in the unbid suits.

In a head-to-head match, one West could not resist taking a peek at the dummy. He led the spade ace and shifted to the club nine, but it was no use; partner was out of spades. Declarer took 10 tricks: five hearts, four diamonds and one club.

The other West, nervous that his partner would have only one spade, led the club nine (top of nothing). East won with her ace and shifted to her spade, giving the defenders the first five tricks.
