Sixty-Fifth Year

Sherbrooke Daily Record

THE WEATHER

Sunny with cloudy periods, chance of afternoon showers, not so warm, less humid. Winds light. Outlook for Sunday, sunny and less humid. High today, 80.

HAVING FUN — No one enjoys a county fair more than the kiddies, and this happy pair was among the crowd that thronged to the Bedford Fair grounds yesterday as the 132nd annual Missisquoi County fair opened. Waving happily from one of the rides on the midway are, left, Bruce Bellingham, Stanbridge East, and his brother Rodney, 12.

132nd Missisquoi County Fair opens fair season in Townships

BEDFORD. — With the age-old atmosphere of candy floss, carnival dust and the excitement of the midway, the 132nd annual Bedford Fair — oldest in the Townships — opened here yesterday, ushering in the 1961 fair season in the E.T.

In spite of thunder, lightning, and heavy rain, crowds of exhibitors and visitors turned out for the first event.

The fair continues today and Sunday.

Royal Crown Exposition employees worked in the rain arranging the 40 truckloads of amusements which make up the fair's midway.

The first big event of the three day fair was the judging of the Calf Club entries.

Calf Club winners in their respective fields were: Grand Champion Canadian Calf, Denis Pettigrew of Frelighsburg; Reserve, Pierre Pettigrew; Grand Champion Senior Ayrshire, Pierre Beaudry of St. Alphonse de Granby; Reserve, Marcel Bousquet of Granby.

Winner of the junior grand champion award was Linda Mount of Phillipsburg, and Reserve, Norman Beaudry, St. Alphonse de Granby.

The owner of the winning Jersey grand champion senior calf was Nora Hadlock while the Reserve went to Vicki Hadlock. Both girls are from Frelighsburg.

Junior Grand Champion, Jersey was awarded to the calf entered by Max Dallenbach of Knowlton, representing the West Bolton Calf Club; Reserve went to Hans Steingruber of Cowansville.

Cattle entries in this year's fair are above average, C. A. Soule of Frelighsburg, secretary of the Missisquoi County Agricultural Society said.

"We have so many entries, that the barns are full now and exhibitors are still coming," he added.

To make room for other exhibitors all calf club entries were judged Friday afternoon.

Horse entries are higher this year than usual, too.

The Bedford Horticultural Society reported a different situation in their department however, flower and vegetable entries are fewer than in previous years probably because of the cold weather at the beginning of this summer.

In addition to the Gastoni Attractions who will give the grandstand show, a giant horse show will be held tonight.

The Juvenile Band of Phillipsburg composed of 80 youngsters will perform 20 different numbers during their appearances at the fair.

This morning cattle judging got underway at 9 a.m. and horse racing at 1:30 p.m.

Gastoni Attractions were to give two performances today; one at 1:30 and one at 8 p.m.

Mining halted

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP).—Copper production at big American-owned mines in Chile came to a halt Friday as 16,000 miners went on strike for higher wages and other benefits. The walkout virtually paralyzed Chile's copper industry, which accounts for 85 per cent of the nation's foreign exchange. The four mines involved had been producing about 50,000 tons of copper a month.

LOTS OF PROBLEMS

There are plenty of problems on hand. The painfully slow Algerian peace talks have broken down again amid the continuing explosion of plastic bombs. The touchy question of France's Bizerte naval base is still unsettled and the United Nations will debate it Aug. 21.

The farmers are acting up again, pressing for parliament's recall to discuss their problems, and, behind it all, the Berlin crisis is looming ever larger.

Advises CD committee by-law for city

By MYER SHIMELMAN
(Record Staff Reporter)

The head of civilian civil defence for Canada told The Record Friday that Sherbrooke should pass a by-law authorizing the setting up of a permanent civil defence committee as a first step towards a city survival program.

R. Burns Curry, chief of the Emergency Measures Organization outlined a plan of action for Sherbrooke in a telephone interview from Ottawa.

Mr. Curry was contacted after Mayor Armand Nadeau said at his press conference yesterday that when he tried to telephone civil defence officials in Ottawa earlier in the week, he was told they were all on vacation.

Once the by-law is passed, Mr. Curry said, the committee should be set up, "consisting of various civic leaders; the heads of the fire, police, health and engineering departments; and members of the local army and militia."

Mr. Curry said that the third step in the plan is to appropriate funds to hire a professional civil defence organizer.

Mr. Curry said that in Ontario men have been hired in cities the size of Sherbrooke as civil defence organizers for salaries ranging from $6,000 to $7,500.

"The hiring of a civil defence organizer is a vital step in the formation of an adequate civil defence program," Mr. Curry said.

He said there has been a marked upsurge in interest in civil defence matters in Canada this past spring and summer.

The plan outlined by Mr. Curry is applicable to all the towns and cities in Canada.

Mr. Curry said that there is a booklet available which gives detailed information on how a municipality should go about setting up a civil defence organization. This booklet can be obtained free, by writing to the Emergency Measures Organization, Ottawa.

Mayor Nadeau at his press conference said that he would not call a conference on civil defence.

Two weeks ago he set a one week deadline for action from Ottawa on civil defence. If nothing was forthcoming he said he would call a conference on his own.

"But now the matter is in the hands of city councillors," the mayor said.

City council, meanwhile is waiting for a reply to a letter which it sent on August 4 to Ottawa requesting information about setting up a civil defence program.

The letter read in part as follows: "The members of the city council wish to become better acquainted with the structure of a civil defence organization, the contributions made to this end by the federal government, and all the other relevant details concerning the setting up of a municipal civil defence organization."

"We would be very obliged, if you would send to Sherbrooke an expert from your department to meet with city council on this subject."

In reference to the study presently being done in Lennoxville on the matter of civil defence, Mayor Nadeau stated that their problem is not at all like Sherbrooke's as Lennoxville is a much smaller town and this greatly simplifies the problem.

At the Lennoxville town council meeting last Monday, Mayor Ernest Gilbey and his council undertook a survey of existing facilities with regard to their use as fallout shelters.

Border councils to discuss civil defence

By IVY HATCH

ROCK ISLAND. — The mayors of the border communities of Stanstead, Rock Island and Beebe will bring local civil defence and survival problems up for discussion at council meetings in the very near future.

Edward J. Struthers, mayor of the municipality of Stanstead Plain, told The Record Friday an adjourned meeting of the Stanstead council will discuss the subject on Monday.

Hugo Lapenna, mayor of Beebe, said he plans to introduce a discussion of civil defence in the area into the September council meeting.

And Alton Grady, mayor of Rock Island, said he will put civil defence on the agenda of a council meeting "soon."

None of the mayors said they had any definite plans to put forward.

Mayor Struthers said he felt the biggest problem, should there ever be a nuclear attack would be preparing border communities to receive the streams of evacuees that would probably come from Montreal, and perhaps even Sherbrooke and Granby.

He said he didn't think a family fall-out shelter program would be the answer under such circumstances.

However, Beebe's Mayor Lapenna came out strongly for family fall-out shelters.

He said there are 1350 residents of this town, and it would be an expensive proposition to build a central shelter for all of them.

He said he felt, too, that family shelters would be easier and quicker to get to in an emergency.

Mayor Struthers said that if there is to be an overall plan for the area, the lead should come from the Federal government.

CALF CLUB CORNER

By SANDRA PICKFORD

Preparing calves for the coming fair, holding club meetings to make last minute plans for the event, and entering Achievement Day contests are keeping Eastern Township Calf Club members running in circles. Newsletters this week were filled with tidings of the upcoming fairs and by the sound of some of the letters, the excitement is really rising.

LENNOXVILLE ACHIEVEMENT DAY, AUGUST 15 — Tuesday, August 15 is the date, and the MacDonald Farm on the Stanstead Highway is the place for one of the biggest events for members of the Lennoxville Calf Club, Achievement Day.

Achievement competition will be held within the Lennoxville Club. Hue MacDonald, Lennoxville Club correspondent says. The best calves selected from the Lennoxville Club will then compete with other area clubs at the local fairs.

The top beef calves will show at the Cookshire fair and, later, at the Sherbrooke Winter Fair in October. The Lennoxville Calf Club dairy calves go to Ayer's Cliff and then on to the Sherbrooke Summer fair.

Hue says one of the most important parts of Achievement day is the Showmanship contest which displays a member's ability to exhibit his calf. "Showmanship is a matter of training and grooming of a calf, showing the calf in competition and being able to lose or win fairly," says Hue. The members appearance is also taken into consideration in choosing a final winner. A memo to members to wear their white clothes when exhibiting their calf.

Hugh Peckham from Granby will be their judge.

TO BUY JUDGING TROPHIES — The Sawyerville Calf Club held a meeting August 8 says Gayle Forgrave, secretary-treasurer of the Club. At the meeting it was suggested that they buy judging trophies. A committee consisting of the president, Mahlon Grapes and secretary-treasurer, Gayle. Mahlon Grapes and Raymond Loveland have been chosen to look after the trucking.

I attended the Eastern Township sheep breeder's annual meeting and field day held at the Lennoxville Experimental farm Wednesday and noticed that two sheep club members were among the winners of the sheep judging contest held. They were Lynn Forgrave of Sawyerville and Susan Mastine of Trenholmeville. Incidentally, the outdoor Bar-B-Q lamb was delicious!

FAREWELL TO HARVEY STATION VISITORS — The Lennoxville members had a most enjoyable day with their Harvey Station visitors from New Brunswick say Hue MacDonald. "We were disappointed they could not stay longer."

CONTEST WITHIN A CONTEST — Members of the Richmond Calf Club will not only be competing for judging honors during fairtime. At a meeting of the Club held August 9 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Crack, Richmond, it was decided to offer a cash prize to the boy and girl who keeps their calves and belongings (meal boxes etc) in the best condition during the fair. I understand 35 Richmond calf club members will be showing in the Richmond fair this year.

RICHMOND CALF CLUB CRESTS — Members of the Richmond Calf Club received their Calf Club crests August 9 at their monthly meeting. The crests are 8 inches with a black backing, green 4H leaf clover and the word 'Richmond' printed in gold. The SAWYERVILLE calf club ordered one dozen crests for their club August 9, so members can expect to receive them soon.

TWO MORE ACHIEVEMENT DAYS COMING UP — August 17 is Achievement Day for the Richmond Calf Club in the Richmond Arena. The Sawyerville Calf Club will hold their Achievement Day contests August 18 at the Cookshire Fair.

INTERESTED IN IMPROVING YOUR JUDGING? — Hue MacDonald says any Calf Club members wishing to improve their judging will have a good opportunity to do so by attending the following fairs. Richmond, August 18 at 9 a.m.; Cookshire, August 18 at 1 p.m.; Ayer's Cliff, August 24 at 1 p.m.; and Sherbrooke, August 31 at 9 a.m.

Buckman's death held accidental

A verdict of accidental death was returned at an inquest held Friday morning into the death of 57-year old Dean Buckman last Friday night when he was run over by a train near the Grand Forks Street overpass.

Four witnesses testified at the inquest which was held at the municipal police headquarters. Wesley Hurd, 54, of Montreal, engineer of the train which hit Buckman, testified he had reduced the train's speed to 30 miles an hour before he first saw Buckman lying across the tracks. Hurd said he put on the emergency brake and he saw the man roll over and look up at him and wave before the train hit him. Hurd said that the victim didn't seem to realize that he was lying on train tracks because he made no effort to get up.

The train came to a stop about 75 feet past Buckman's body. He had been killed instantly.

The body was identified by Frederick Pettigrew of Sherbrooke, half-brother of the victim. Sergeant Arthur Hamel of the Sherbrooke police department was in charge of the investigation. He and the police photographer were the only other witnesses called.

Dr. Francis District Coroner St. Louis Gagnon presided at the inquest. A five man jury returned the verdict.

Patience essential for photos of children, pets

One of the camera's greatest uses is photographing children and pets.

And more often than not pets are shown with some member of the family. This usually adds extra interest.

There are two ways to photograph this kind of photo. One is 'Candid,' which means spontaneous or without rehearsal. The other is 'under direction.' The latter may have better photographic qualities as lighting, camera angle, etc., is more easily controlled.

On the other hand, candid shots could be equally effective providing the subject is not aware of the camera's presence. The 'posed type' will be our topic for today and I'll suggest a few helpful hints.

The personality of the person directing the scene has an important bearing on the success of this type of picture.

The photo shown with this column was naturally directed although not an outstanding example of direction. The interest was maintained by close cropping, that is, eliminating unwanted objects from the picture area.

Many hobbyists shoot a picture too far away from their subject, which, naturally, loses the impact of the subject because it becomes cluttered with uninteresting objects which draw away the attention of the viewer.

In a posed type picture you must first establish a location for your posing, taking into consideration your background, lighting, and its influence on the subject. Next, take your camera angle and position.

With the composition of your picture well in hand, your subjects must now be directed into action. You must direct their expressions to portray the feeling and mood of the picture. This is where the personality of the camera man is utilized. How well he is able to explain what Sherbrooke may get a water-filtration in the very near future if the public shows the proper interest.

This news was revealed by Mayor, Armand Nadeau at his weekly press conference Friday.

According to His Worship, he has contacted various clubs and associations in the city of Sherbrooke recently in reference to "this most important problem". Mayor Nadeau said that council has brought the subject of a water-filtration plant to the public five times since he has been a member and each time it has been voted down by the people.

Since the council has been unsuccessful in bringing this problem to the people, the mayor stated that the council is now trying to stir up enough interest behind the scenes so that the public will bring the problem to the council.

The mayor claimed that the people of Sherbrooke are becoming more interested in this vital problem every day and so the water-filtration plant may become a reality in the near future.

In reference to the possibility of taking the water for the city from Lake Memphremagog, Mayor Nadeau said that according to an engineer's report that he had gotten two years ago the water in the lake is also full of bacteria and thus it would be to no advantage.

What is needed according to his worship is a water-filtration plant for the city of Sherbrooke.

Polish-born pianist at JMC Sunday

Marek Jablonski, 21-year old Edmonton pianist and recent 1st prize winner of the J.M.C. National music competition will be heard in recital at the Jeuneuses Musicales summer camp, Mount Orford, on Sunday at 8:30 p.m.

Marek Jablonski was born on Nov. 5th, 1939 in Krakow, Poland. He began playing the piano by ear when four years old and entered the Krakow Conservatory when he was six. After spending a few years in England after the war the Jablonski family finally settled in Edmonton, Alberta in 1949.

During the summers of 1954, '55 and '56 Marek attended the Banff Summer School and in 1956 he spent the year studying with Mrs. Gladys Egbert in Calgary. In 1957 he received a Dmitri Mitropoulos scholarship to attend the Aspen Summer School. Heard by Mrs. Rosina Lhevine in Aspen young Marek was encouraged to register at New York's Juilliard School of Music. Besides studying the piano with Mme Lhevine at Juilliard, Marek Jablonski has been working towards his Bachelor of Science degree.

He has played for Arthur Rubinstein on several occasions, each time receiving praise and encouragement from the latter. Jablonski's musical tastes have been formed mainly through his own intuition and through many hours spent listening to recordings of the world's greatest pianists.

He speaks Polish and English, is an avid reader and enjoys skiing, skating and going for long walks.

Marek Jablonski's programme for next Sunday will include works by Mozart (Fantasy in C minor), Beethoven ('Les Adieux' Sonata), Brahms (Intermezzo & Rhapsody) and Chopin (two Scherzi, Waltz & Mazurka).

Reserves judgment in new trial of Sherbrooke restaurant owner

Judge Joseph Marier said in Sherbrooke Court of Sessions Friday that he would hand down his decision in the case of the Queen versus Thomas Hendy, proprietor of the Luxor Restaurant in downtown Sherbrooke, on Friday, September 1.

Mr. Hendy was charged with not paying the hospital tax on meals served in his restaurant.

The trial was originally held early in July but Judge Marier demanded another trial as there "was too much conflicting evidence" in the first trial.

Richard Crepeau, representing the Crown, submitted a letter Friday concerning the whereabouts of the missing bills for which Hendy is charged with not paying the hospital tax. The judge did not make the letter public.

A Sherbrooke teenager was sentenced to spend the next month in jail after he pleaded guilty to a charge of indecent assault.

Jean-Guy Breton appeared before Judge Joseph Marier Friday to receive his sentence. He had appeared before the court for proceedings in the latter part of July.

Proceedings are scheduled to take place on August 25 in the case of a Notre Dame de la Guade loupe man who is charged with passing counterfeit Canadian ten dollar bills. Judge Joseph Marier set the date of the hearing for Rosaire Lecours Friday.

A middle-aged Sherbrooke man was sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs or on default to spend the next 15 days in jail by Judge Joseph Marier.

Judge Marier fined the company $100 and costs for this infraction as well as $2 a day since February 5, 1961, as this was the day the company was notified about the infraction.

Normand Bergeron pleaded guilty to driving while under the influence of alcohol.

In the case of the Queen versus the Laurent Paquin et Fils Company, the company was charged by the provincial department of health with having unsanitary quarters for its help in its mine.

Test ban firmness

President Kennedy's announcement at his Thursday press conference that he will send his atomic test ban negotiator, Arthur Dean, back to Geneva shortly for a "decisive" showdown session with the Russians is significant, for the President implied that the United States would feel free to resume nuclear weapons tests if the Soviets do not speedily agree to some form of reasonable provision for an inspection system to enforce a permanent test ban.

It is a reasonable move on the part of Mr. Kennedy, already under stiff Republican pressure at home to resume testing.

He has decided to make one last try to reach a reasonable agreement with the Russians, before declaring himself free to decide on an independent course of action on the testing issue.

The President has taken this latest decision in light of the findings of a special scientific panel, whose report to him Wednesday made it clear that, without an adequate inspection system, there can be no assurance that a closed society like Russia is not conducting clandestine nuclear tests.

The Geneva talks themselves have been little short of a mockery, an example of the Soviets' technique of keeping the donkey going by continually dangling the carrot just out of reach in front of him.

If anything, movement in the talks' three weary years has been backward — to the point where the Russians now insist on their prized brain-child of a 'troika' or three-power system of control, which allows at all times a Communist veto and would thus effectively hamstring any attempts at impartial inspection of suspected testing sites.

The travesty has been perpetrated too long.

Mr. Kennedy, in line with his more forceful stand on other issues recently, is finally telling the Russians to fish or cut bait as far as a nuclear test ban is concerned.

The Babe's presence

It's been a big year for breaking records in the sports world. This winter Bernie Geoffrion of the Montreal Canadiens broke Maurice Richard's long-standing hockey mark of 50 goals in one season.

Track and swimming records have fallen by the boards this spring and summer.

And now New York Yankees' Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris are making a determined attempt to best one of the most durable and sacred sporting marks still on the books — Babe Ruth's legendary 60 home runs in one major league baseball season.

More than the craft of enemy pitchers, the skill of opposing fielders, and distance of outfield fences, however, may be working against the muscular pair.

If we are to believe Joe DiMaggio, another baseball great, the spirit of the Babe himself will be on hand to help preserve his record. "As Mantle and Maris edge up to record possibilities," said DiMaggio recently, "they will find the shadow of Ruth hovering over them and defying them to do better than he did."

While one may not accept the rather mystical concept of the spirit of the Babe looking squint-eyed at the present Yankee sluggers as they take their cuts, DiMaggio has definitely put his finger on the fact that psychology may play as large a part as physical factors in the success or failure of Mantle and Maris in their attempt to break the record.

As the season nears its end and games left run out, as the full glare of publicity focuses ever more intensely on the challengers' approach to the magic number of 60; as opposing players bear down harder on the big boys — psychology will definitely be working against Mantle and Maris. It could lead them to make the fatal mistake of pressing too hard, rather than just successfully doing what comes naturally.

All this is not to say definitely that they won't make it. After all, Geoffrion did break Richard's seemingly impregnable mark — and with The Rocket sitting right there in the stands during his stretch run.

Overpopulation, India's problem

The almost insurmountable difficulties which expanding population place in the path of the economic and social advancement of underdeveloped countries is contained in the survey accompanying the latest five-year plan approved by the Indian Government.

During the past ten years, Prime Minister Nehru's government had poured billions of dollars, much of it coming from western nations, into various projects but despite these efforts, the per capita income of his people in 1961 is estimated at $69.30 largely because the population boost offset production improvements.

And for the same reason the government has been forced to revise its estimates for the five years ending 1966. It had hoped to increase per capita income to $83.18, but this week reported the objective had been cut to $80.85.

The report says that special efforts should be made to reduce the rate at which the population is increasing and points to the difficulties of maintaining 438,000,000 people on the present land area.

Report on West Germany: Part 3

Complaints have German flavor

By ROD CURRIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SOEST, West Germany, (CP) Life in the nine forts that comprise the home of the Canadian infantry brigade in Germany is surprisingly similar to that in any military establishment at home. But the complaints here have a German flavor.

Everyone is an amateur economist watching the rise and fall of the deutchmark and the Canadian dollar.

Living costs continued to advance for the 13,800 Canadian troops and their dependents in the camps that sprawl over a 400-square-mile area just east of the industrial Ruhr Valley.

Officers and others in the higher pay brackets find it a nuisance. For those in the lower ranks—particularly those living in German civilian accommodation—there is a definite pinch.

Revaluation of the German mark in March was the first blow. Then came the devaluation of the dollar and there are rumors among the amateurs—and some professionals—that the mark will be revalued again this fall.

Estimates of the loss in buying power of the pay cheque range from 10 to 15 per cent, depending on whether the family lives in quarters or outside. Of the 5,500 men of the 4th Canadian Infantry Brigade

Group in Germany, about 62 per cent are married and most have their families with them—a total of 2,800 wives and 5,500 children.

It is this growing band of dependents that is causing concern among army officials.

The information has accommodation for 1,920 families and the additional 1,250 live in the surrounding towns and villages.

Those in the modern, smartly furnished apartment blocks provided by the army have the rent, calculated according to rank, deducted at source.

Those living on their own find it tough to stretch their pay to cover high rents and other costs.

Col. Kenneth H. McKibbin of Port Arthur, Ont., officer in charge of administration, says new quarters are planned but "they will actually be just a drop in the bucket."

Aside from things economic, the Canadians generally seem to be enjoying their stay of about three years in their Canadian community where every type of facility and service possible is made available. About one-third of the brigade is rotated home each year.

There are eight schools, including the slick glass-and-stone high school in Soest, staffed by about 140 Canadian teachers.

The close to 3,000 students follow the curriculum set out for Ontario schools, except French-speaking children who follow the Quebec system.

More than a dozen buses transport students from distant bases to schools and there is a complete extra-curricular program which includes hobbies, sports, swimming and boy scout and girl guide companies.

There is an army-operated supermarket which offers delivery service and a holiday shop which stocks a wide variety of radios, cameras, jewelry, sports goods, records and the like at prices considerably below those in Canada.

In the towns of Soest and Werl there are excellent restaurants, night clubs and smart shops.

Many Canadian families are making an earnest effort to get the most out of their stay here—studying German, touring the continent whenever possible and taking a keen interest in local history, customs and politics.

Even those who grumble most about the mark and have some other justifiable complaints agree that their stay here is a fine opportunity for them and their children.

The hare and the tortoise

U.S. plans to win space race

WASHINGTON — The space race, as one American sees it, is the story of another famous race, between a hare and a tortoise.

The hare, according to the tale, became over-confident, stopped for breathers, took it easy and the tortoise ambled by to win the race.

For hare, read Russia; for tortoise, read the U.S.

Despite their embarrassing position in the space race, Americans, like the tortoise, are planning for victory.

The success of the Soviet cosmonaut did not cause the total confusion it might have done here because, despite the setbacks now, there is an incredible confidence about success.

This exists despite the widespread nervousness felt here about U. S. attempts to put a man into orbit with an Atlas rocket.

The Atlas is fine as an intercontinental ballistic missile, but it has failed on the three of four occasions it has been used for launching a space capsule.

It is really impossible to say when the U.S. could put a man into orbit with the Atlas, the only rocket available.

If the rocket continues to fail, the space lag between Russia and the U.S. will accelerate rapidly.

An Atlas, mated to a capsule was fired on April 25, but was blown up by the range safety officer at Cape Canaveral.

An attempt will be made soon to orbit an unmanned space capsule. Then a chimpanzee will make the flight. Then, tentatively around the end of the year, an astronaut will follow.

But this all depends on what absolute surrender to Him.

kind of safety ratio can be whipped out of the Atlas as a space vehicle.

ABSOLUTE SAFETY
The prime consideration is the absolute safety of the astronaut, but there is a limit to the time the U.S. can wait to achieve it without being out of the race.

The main reaction here to cosmonaut Titov's flight centres on the military threat posed in such massive technical know-how.

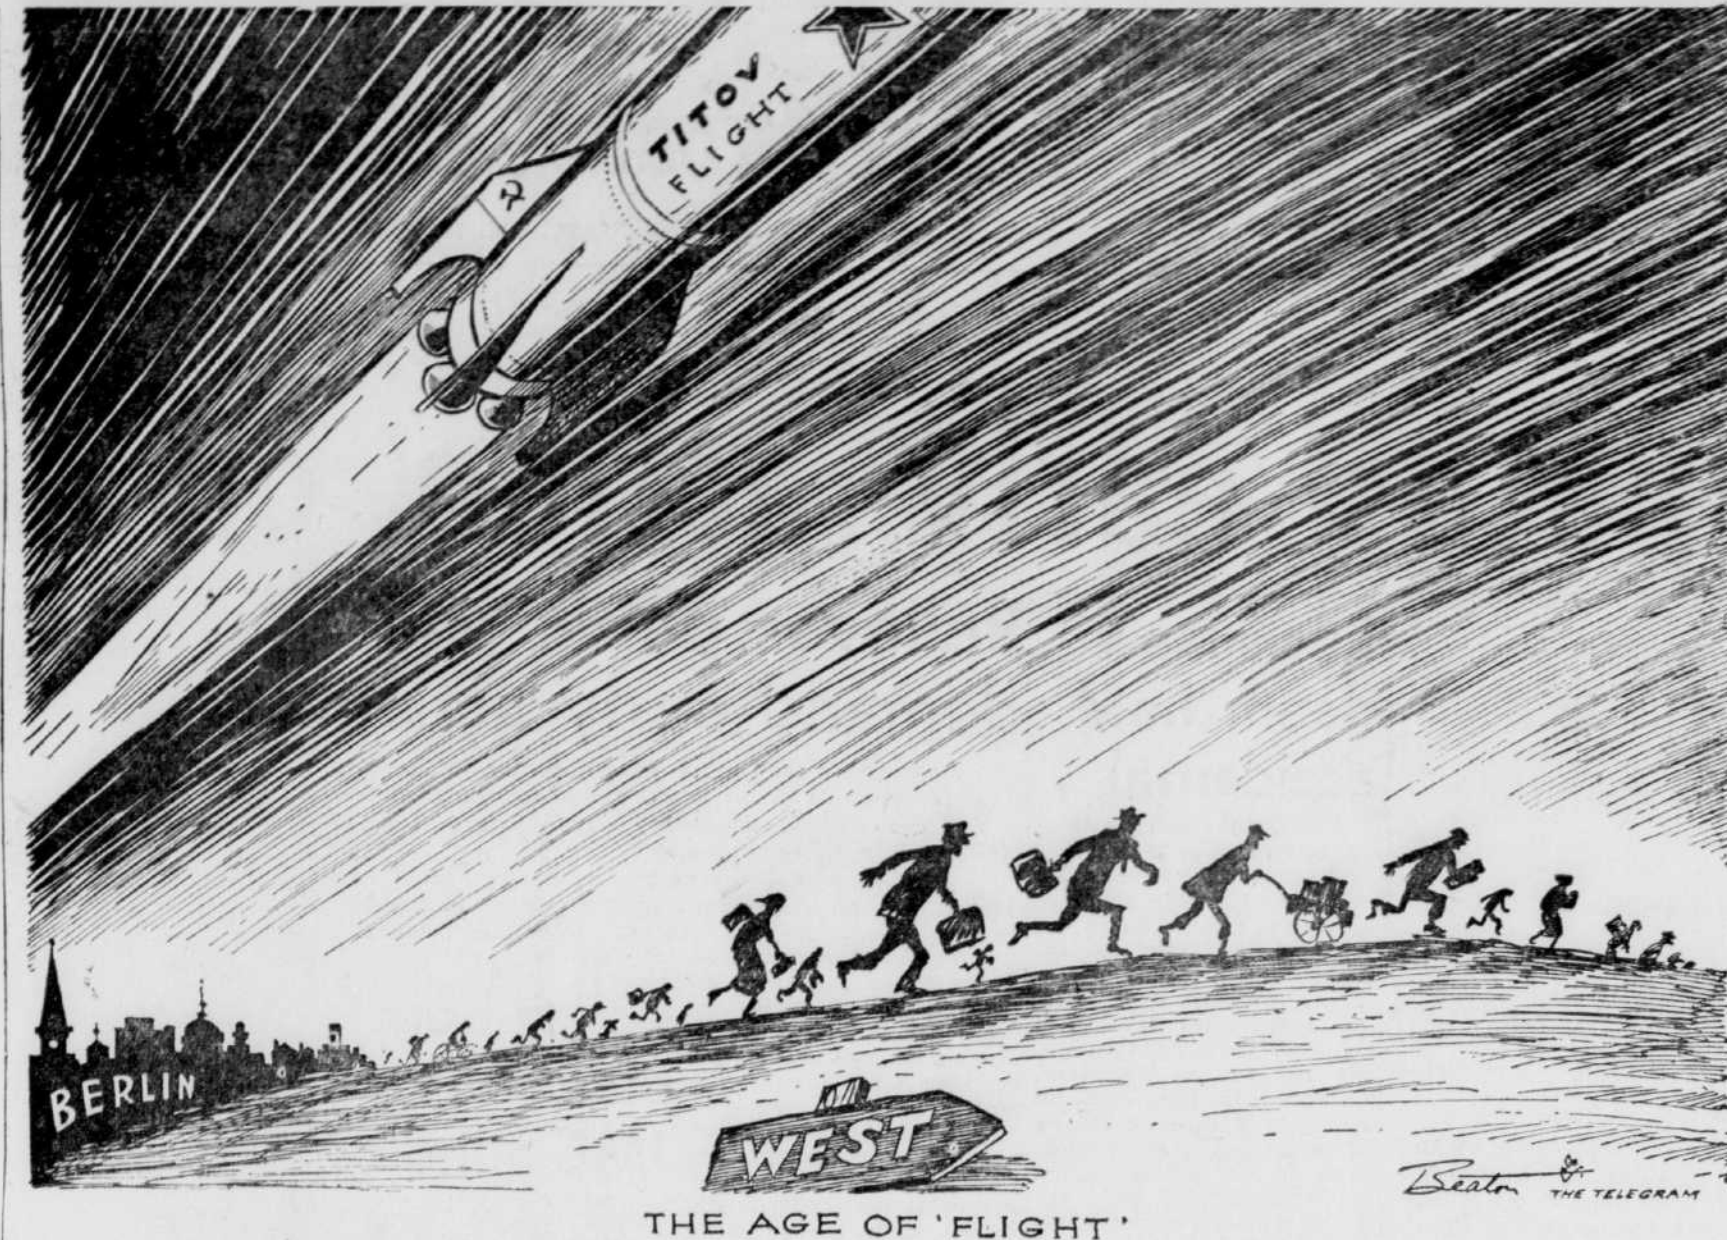

It is likely, some people feel, that at this advanced stage of space flight, a major pitch will be made at the United Nations General Assembly this year for international guarantees against the horrors of space warfare.

Titov's feat has almost dealt a death-blow to the lingering doubt here about the Gagarin flight: Did he go or didn't he?

"GO FOR BROKE"
While most American space experts insist on playing cool, one of them feels the U. S. should "go for broke" on a 27-hour space flight, instead of the four-and-a-half-hour orbital flight now in view.

Colonel John P. Stepp, former president of the American Rocket Society, said it before Titov's flight, so it was a bit prophetic.

Gerald Waring REPORTING

OTTAWA — The fable of the goose that laid the golden eggs has a parallel in our trade picture. The goose: Japan.

In the fable the goose was killed to get the gold whence the eggs came — only there was none. In the modern parallel we are slowly starving the goose, yet expecting each year's egg to be bigger.

The question is: at which point do the eggs begin to shrink?

Trade with Japan last year was hugely in our favor. The golden egg, to carry on the analogy, was Japan's purchase of $178 millions worth of Canadian wheat, other farm products, minerals, metal scrap, wood pulp, plastics, synthetic rubber, coal and parts for adding machines.

The goose's diet — our purchases from Japan — was $10 millions worth of textiles, radios, electronic tubes, toys, plywood, cameras, oranges, sewing machines, canned tuna and other manufactured and processed goods.

But the goose of our modern fable is no goose when it comes to subtracting 110 from 178 — and she is not satisfied that she's getting her egg's worth from us. If we don't increase the feed ration, the goose threatens to reduce the size of the eggs.

Japanese-Canadian trade is based on a "most-favored-nation" trade treaty signed in 1934. Under it our sales to Japan nearly doubled in seven years; our imports from Japan increased nearly five times. Japanese Ambassador Toru Hagiwara predicts his country's imports from Canada will total $200 millions this year, rising to $400 millions by 1970.

The Japanese strongly object, however, to the discriminatory nature of the "voluntary" quotas that they have placed on exports to Canada of textiles, rubber footwear, radios and tubes, plywood and flatware. The Japs complain they were given the choice of imposing these quotas or having Canada put arbitrary tariff valuations on their goods. No other most-favored-nation has received such a hollow favor, and there are no quotas on Hong Kong textiles.

If Canada wants to restrict imports, the Japanese say, let it start with countries that have big trade surpluses with Canada (e.g., the U.S.), not with those that have big deficits.

Can we afford to ignore the Japanese protests? Manufacturing and labor interests obviously want the protection. Mining and forest industries are not worried — the Japs need our raw materials. But Japan bought $98 millions worth of wheat, flour, flax and rapeseed last year — and if it chose it could buy US or Australian wheat, to the economic distress of western farmers and the political discomfiture of the government.

The Japanese would like to boost exports by setting up Canadian subsidiaries for final manufacturing or assembly of semi-finished Japanese products, using Canadian labor. But the tight Canadian restriction on Asiatic immigration bars Japanese managerial and technical staffs needed to carry out such plans.

Insiders predict the government will lower these bars.

For domestic political reasons it is unrealistic to anticipate the government acquiescing to any relaxation of the Japanese trade quota system before the election that most observers now expect next June. But the Japs have an argument — namely, wheat — that will command the attention of whatever government the people elect in 1962.

SOUTH OVERCOMES ALL OBSTACLES

George Gooden points out that the attacking diamond lead is preferable to the conservative club opening. West isn't likely to pick up any tricks with his seven-card club suit; the diamond suit is a better proposition.

South counts his losers and sees one spade loser, one or two diamond losers and a possible heart loser. The contract is in jeopardy.

He plays low from dummy; maybe East will play the king or the queen, but East sticks in the 10 and returns the suit.

South wins in dummy and leads the 10 of hearts. He intends to finesse in any event because the finesse play will gain a trick against either king-small or king and two small in the East hand. The ace play will only gain against a singleton king in West.

Actually, East puts up the king so South has no problem.

Now South tries for an over-trick. He cashes dummy's ace of clubs, plays a trump to his own hand, ruffs his queen of clubs, returns to his hand with a third trump, leads a spade and plays dummy's ten.

Adventures with God

New is often a re-arrangement

by JANET SCOTT

It is not my intention to "sit by the side of the road and hurl the cynic's ban" but current events tempt one to do so.

The constant emphasis on new things points up the truth of Solomon's words recorded in Ecclesiastes 1: 9-10. "The thing that hath been, is that which shall be; and that which shall be done, and there is NO NEW THING under heaven."

It is not a new thing for leaders to produce new platforms.

The New Deal promised by Mr. Khrushchev, Canada's new party and the New Look have been occupying the press and radio commentators in recent days.

Fashion writers are straining to find new ways of describing old fashions to convince the public that designers have come up with entirely new creations. But citizens who have been around for a long time recognize the old lines in the new guise.

They are nothing more than a rearrangement of what has gone before. Khrushchev's program for a great new deal has a familiar ring and so has the program of the new party.

Mr. Khrushchev and the new party promise to eliminate all the errors and problems of the past and to bring in a wonderful era of peace and plenty when "every man shall sit under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid."

IN HIS NAME

What they fail to recognize is this: Man cannot bring in the Utopia until politicians and people "walk every one in the name of his god and say (and mean it.) we will walk in the name of the Lord our God forever and ever." Micah 4:3.

"Is there anything whereof it may be said: See, this is new? It hath been already of old time, which was before," asked Solomon.

Even a cursory glance at the wonders of the ancient world and the mistakes of the ancient people reveal the same skills and the same sins and problems which we now face.

Modern architects pride themselves on their great skyscrapers built with the aid of power tools and cranes. But not one of the late designs can hold a candle to the Pyramids built with infinite detail and unsurpassed craftsmanship.

The tricks of the trade were known to the Egyptians. The heavens were charted by ancient without telescope or Wilson Observatory.

Not only scientific knowledge was understood but the ancient understood human behavior.

NEED CONFIDENCE
Parts of the Hebrew Bible read like pages from Jung or Freud. Moderns are too smart to accept the Biblical formulas for peace of mind.

But they are not averse to paying $25 for a visit to a psychiatrist who probes their subconscious and tells them in modern parlance that "their hearts are like the troubled sea casting up mire" and they ought to rest and try to cultivate confidence.

The Bible says: "In returning and rest shall ye be saved, in quietness and confidence shall be your strength."

What our world needs more than a new party is a full surrender of all parties to the plan and the program of God.

He alone has the solution for the ills of a sick society and He has stated the condition on which He will step into history and bring in the Utopia of which men dream.

There can be no equity or justice on earth until Jesus Christ is made Lord of all and until men of all nations and all parties fall on their knees in absolute surrender to Him.

Then and only then shall we experience the new heaven and the new earth for which all men seek.

Farewell party

Beebe couple is honored by United Church groups

BEEBE — Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Mallieu were guests of honor at a farewell dinner-party tendered them at the Dufferin Heights Country Club house by friends of the Beebe and Granvilleville United Churches.

Mr. Mallieu has been transferred to the Farnham branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, after completing five years as manager of the Beebe branch.

Supposedly dining out with Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Haselton, they were taken by surprise on arriving at Dufferin to be greeted by over 50 friends.

Dinner was served by the club staff. The tables were set with vases of sweet peas and the head table was decorated with an arrangement of red roses. Assorted summer flowers completed the table decoration.

Seated at the head table with Mr. and Mrs. Mallieu were Mr. and Mrs. Haselton, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Beane, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bullock, Harold Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Eryou, Mr. and Mrs. George Wilkinson, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Corey and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Eryou.

In the absence of Rev. and Mrs. Ralph Rogers, who are on vacation, grace was said by Harold Taylor. Mr. Haselton was master of ceremonies and extended a welcome to the guests. In brief remarks he expressed gratitude for the help the church has received from Mr. and Mrs. Mallieu in their short stay in Beebe.

Mr. Mallieu was for some time superintendent of an active Sunday School and also assisted in forming a Sunday School at Granvilleville.

and landed exactly in the predetermined area. All the space ship's equipment worked without fault. I felt in excellent health.

No one in the Western world doubted that Titov did exactly as he said. Messages of congratulations poured into Moscow by the dozens.

By coincidence, the first man in history to orbit the earth, Maj. Yuri Gagarin, was in Canada at the time of Titov's flight. Gagarin, visiting Cyrus Eaton in Pugwash, N.S., immediately took off for Moscow to be present at the welcoming for the new Hero of the Soviet Union.

NEWFOUNDLAND FIRES

A forest fire that levelled 15 buildings in a Newfoundland community two weeks ago blazed relentlessly on during the week, threatening further destruction in a bay are about 130 miles northwest of St. John's.

The steel advance was led by small gains in Dominion Bridge which reached a new high of 20 1/2, and National Steel Company of Canada, Atlas and Algonoma.

In the papers, Fraser took the lion's share by rising more than five points, while International followed close behind, up 3 1/2. Both reached new highs in moderately active trading.

Banks were somewhat better with Montreal, Nova Scotia and Royal all hitting highs, along with Argus Corporation in the financial institutions. All, however, backed down later in the week.

Refining oils and liquors were the weakest of the industrial groups. In the former, Texaco jumped 1 1/2 while fractional losses went to Superpet, TransCanada, Trans Mountain, Interprovincial, BA and Alberta Gas Truck A. Among liquors, trading was light with a number of fractional falls. Walker - Gooderham, Canadian Breweries and Distillers Seagrams all slipped in the 1/2 % range, while Corby's reached a new high of 19, up 1/2.

THE SIX' BECKONS

Tired of being a wallflower out of step with the rest of Europe, Britain began to woo in earnest the European Common Market this week.

Prime Minister Macmillan made formal application Thursday to join "The Six" after gaining Parliament's approval the previous week. Soon another country - Denmark - was knocking at the Common Market door. Norway and Ireland, too, were expected to apply.

EICHMANN TRIAL

The prosecution's case against Adolf Eichmann, accused murderer of millions of Jews, was rested by Attorney General Gideon Hausner of Israel Thursday. Next comes the defence.

The prosecutor did not ask for any specific penalty. Under Israeli law, that follows conviction of the accused.

CRASH KILLS 39

Trying to navigate his aircraft in gale-force winds and driving rain, a pilot ferrying 34 Bletchley school boys to a holiday in Norway crashed his twin - engine plane into a mountain near Stavanger, Norway, Wednesday night.

All of the boys, between the ages of 13 and 16, were killed. The others in the plane—two schoolmasters and three crew members—also died.

KHRUSHCHEV SPEAKS

With the Soviet Union's latest scientific feat as his backdrop, Nikita Khrushchev replied to President Kennedy on the Berlin issue Monday.

But Khrushchev offered no change in his previous demands over Berlin.

The Soviet premier called for East-West negotiations on Germany and at the same time accused the West of pushing the world toward war over Berlin. He also threatened to increase Soviet military strength in East Germany.

THE WEEK IN QUEBEC

Three former members of the now-defunct Quebec liquor police — including one - time Quebec City district director Rosario Lemire — have been charged with defrauding the government of more than $500,000.

Lemire, 73, his stepson Dell-Ray Laforet, and Leopold Perrault were charged after a four - month investigation by Quebec Provincial Police.

All members of the force before the Liberal election victory in June 1960, they are accused of collaborating in smuggling liquor, conspiring to help liquor policemen work in federal and provincial elections campaigns, using police and public money to build houses and widespread falsification of expense accounts.

The Wilbert Coffin murder case, one of the most controversial in Canadian legal history, was back in the news Wednesday as a former QPP detective said it is "about to be re-opened."

Coffin was hanged in 1954 for the murder of three U.S. hunters in the Gaspé Peninsula a year earlier. Detective Henri Doyon, bringing suit against the QPP for wrongful dismissal, said he never believed Coffin guilty and was taken off the case because of this.

Spotlight On Business

With one exception, this week's four days on the Toronto stock market was the dullist in recent months.

Tuesday brought a bit of excitement with the setting of a new high on the industrial index—602.69. The rise was led by gains in papers and steels. The index pushed over the top Tuesday, the day after the holiday, in a continuation of last week's record - breaking trend.

Volume, however, remained low and the week's figure was a mere 6,442,000 shares.

The industrial index closed at 601.13, up .19 on the week.

The steel advance was led by small gains in Dominion Bridge which reached a new high of 20 1/2, and National Steel Company of Canada, Atlas and Algonoma.

In the papers, Fraser took the lion's share by rising more than five points, while International followed close behind, up 3 1/2. Both reached new highs in moderately active trading.

Sunday Sermon Subject for August 13, 1961

Mankind's need for a spiritually meaningful set of values will be emphasized at the services in the Christian Science churches this Sunday, in the reading of the week's Lesson-Sermon on the subject "Soul." Scriptural authority for this viewpoint will include the following from Matthew: "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" And correlative readings from the Christian Science text book "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will include: "Mortals must gravitate Godward, their affections and aims grow spiritual, — they must near the broader interpretations of being, and gain some proper sense of the infinite, — in order that sin and mortality may be put off."

Children grow at their own rate --- don't push

Listen Mama! So junior is throwing a fit because he has to take a "silly old girl" to a dance. Or sis is driving you crazy because she is still a tomboy while her young friends are busily experimenting with lipstick and getting fussy about their clothes.

Well, just relax and quit pushing. All in their own good time (and in plenty of time, at that) junior and sis will willingly leave childhood behind them. What's the rush?

Grownups who force a child to be sociable are likely to teach the child to become a lonely member of a lonely crowd. Pressure of adults on children will not promote social growth," says Dr. Robert W. White of Harvard University, who maintains that children develop social interest when they are ready for it.

The trouble is the majority of mothers today seem to be pushers—where their children are concerned. They just can't wait for them to grow up naturally.

So they start organizing a social life for sis and junior before they get to junior high school.

And if sis and junior hold back and stubbornly refuse to fit in with mama's plans for their social development, then mama frets, stew, worries, and pushes harder and harder.

For residents, mid-summer in Paris means long trips to far-away bakeries and butchers, since the near ones unfailingly are "closed for holidays"; no laundry service or dry-cleaning, since these shop owners, too, are on vacation.

For the pretty model girls who have just shown the newest Paris creations to the international experts and buyers, August in Paris means long photographic sessions huddled in winter coats, wearing fur hats, the new booties and mufflers to pose in mid-summer heat at picturesque Paris half-marks so you can see the photographs in your magazines in September.

Native Parisians who want to "take a tour around the world" right in their city, sit in the sidewalk cafes at the Opera square to watch the visitors from the four corners of the world parade by chatting in their native languages.

There are the tourists from Great Britain recognized by their sensible walking shoes and flower printed dresses, Germans hung with the latest models in cameras, healthy looking Dutch with girls and men showing preference for tight trousers; dark-eyed and dark-haired Italians whom one usually hears even before seeing; Indians recognized by their saris and smartly dressed Americans wearing fancy sunglasses and lugging huge, even fancier handbags.

Beauty Tips

Did you know that 50 years ago a daily bath indicated your social position? It seems a magazine columnist believed a "thoroughbred girl" took the daily dunking while a "middle class girl" didn't.

Eyes tell more about a person's habits than we admit. Lack of sleep and poor eating show up in dark circles, bags and bloodshot eyes. None of these is very flattering. One good night's sleep will not erase the signs of three or four hours sleep for several nights.

Casseroles for supper

By LOUISE MOORE

It isn't always possible to vacation in summertime but with a little ingenuity a summer in town can be made a very pleasant change. Either eat out of doors if possible or create an outdoor atmosphere in a cool spot indoors.

A good idea is to remove all doo-dads from the dining area, replace them with pots of blossoming flowers and trailing ivy, then use your gayest linens and bright pottery and serve meals picnic fashion.

Plates are served from the kitchen and only milk in a gay pitcher with glasses to match and the bread and butter are placed on the table.

ONE HOT DISH

These meals should be simple with but one hot dish and this may be the main dish in a casserole or hot soup or a mixed hot vegetable casserole — then the main dish could be cold cuts. With plenty of good bread and butter or rolls, sliced tomatoes, fresh fruit for dessert and cool fresh milk no one need go hungry to bed.

Serve these meals leisurely and talk of pleasant things if you wish to keep cool. Mother can have fun too with this kind of summer living.

CASSEROLES

A casserole may be prepared in the cool of the morning and ready for last minute heating and if you have a freezer many casseroles may be frozen weeks in advance of serving.

There is no dearth of casseroles from good old macaroni and on many of the packages come recipes for delightful casseroles. Some of these products even have added vitamins to make them more nutritious.

Canned cream soups simplify the making too for they serve in place of the white sauce.

CHICKEN LIVERS WITH RICE

Cook 1 cup rice according to package directions until tender and all water absorbed. Melt 2 tbs. butter in skillet and in it saute 1 pound chicken livers cut in halves — use the fresh or frozen. Brown them quickly. Add one 3-ounce can mushroom pieces and the liquid, 1 can cream of mushroom soup and 1/2 cup milk. Season with a dash pepper, a few grains nutmeg, 2 tbs. finely chopped parsley, 2 tbs. white wine and cook until piping hot and smooth.

Mix with the rice and pour into a buttered 2 1/2 cup toasted

COATICOOK

Mr. and Mrs. Guelph Parker, of Beauharnois, and Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Rousseau, have returned from a holiday at the Glen Brown cottage at Lake Lyster. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Turnbull, of Montreal, are spending the balance of August at the same cottage.

Employees of the Town Electrical Dept. have been installing new electric light poles on Child Street, placed in new positions on the sidewalk rather than beside the curb, to allow for additional parking space.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Akhurst are enjoying a week's holiday at their cottage at Lake Massawippi.

Mr. Robert McAlpine is visiting his parents in Paris, Ont., during his annual vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Turnbull and daughter, Lenore, of Montreal, visited Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Cromwell and were overnight guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Beerworth, Lennoxville.

Mr. George Kidd, who is spending several weeks in Coaticook, at the Kilgour factory was at his home in Montreal over the weekend.

Dr. and Mrs. S. W. Boyd visited their son in Granby on the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Turnbull, Mrs. Stanley Cromwell, Mrs. Stanley Beerworth, Betty and Sandra, visited Mr. and Mrs. Jim Turnbull, in Valois.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bell, of Bennington, Vt., are visiting relatives and friends in town.

Interest in life keeps you young

One of the best ways to stay youthful looking has nothing to do with cosmetics. It has, rather, to do with a vibrant interest in life. Some women concern themselves only with their immediate families. They're not eager to make new friends, to learn or to explore.

Their conversation consists of gossip rather than rich ideas. Quite often they are opinionated without the facts to back up their opinions. And all of this is reflected in their faces which frequently are dull and hard.

No matter what your role—housewife, working mother or career girl—have an interest in something beyond yourself and your own small world. Exercise your mind in the same way that you should exercise your body to stay fit. For a mind that isn't used grows flabby.

It is simply impossible for a woman to be really vibrant and attractive if her mind is blank and her eyes turned inward. And this is true no matter how much she spends on a chic coiffure and careful make-up.

Tough Teens
Despite all of those glossy magazine ads which show all of you teen-agers having a glorious time all of the time, the fact remains that a good many of your quite often have a rotten time.

You agonize over braces on the teeth (or the need for them), lanky hair, extra poundage or a skinny frame, acne, awkwardness and just plain growing up.

Well, there are no quick cures for any or all of these. But there is one way to tackle your problems: TACKLE them. Don't agonize. Do something.

If the family budget doesn't permit braces for your teeth, earn enough during the summer to pay for them yourself.

Use a hair brush on that lanky hair, watch your weight and take extra care to keep your skin scrupulously clean.

This is the time to learn that you will have to spend a lifetime solving one problem after the other. And each of them will look every bit as tough as the ones you're facing now.

Scalp Savvy
If you make frequent use of a hair spray and find that it makes your hair oily, there's just one solution. Shampoo your hair often.

Most of us can't do without a hair spray of some sort, particularly if we haven't a permanent. A spray is essential to hair styles set on rollers. But at the first sign of oiliness, get out the shampoo bottle.

A richness of word and thought

RESISTANCE, REBELLION, AND DEATH by Albert Camus 272 pp. . . . McCLELLAND & STEWART . . . $4.50.

Albert Camus died in an automobile accident on the road to Paris at the age of 47. Almost as much controversy has been stirred up over the nature of his death - was the driver of the car going too fast, had he had too much to drink etc. - as will probably continue, for some time, to be stirred up over his stature as a writer.

One thing is certain Camus was as prodigious with his talent as his early death made him with his years. Gems of thought, which a lesser writer would have treasured and around each of which he might possibly have built a whole thesis, Camus has tossed off and left almost hidden in an obscure paragraph in a perhaps not too important essay.

To the writer, one of the greatest joys in reading Camus is the discovery of these rich veins of thought tucked away in presumed aridity. However along with the joy of discovery there is always the tug of sadness because one cannot help but wonder if his prodigality with words and thoughts stemmed from a premonition of not too many years in which to use them.

Albert Camus, son of a working-class family, was born in Algeria. Journalism took him to France. During the war he fought in the underground and wrote anonymous editorials for the clandestine COMBAT. His major works include THE MYTH OF SISYPHUS, THE STRANGER, THE REBEL, and three works of fiction, THE PLAGUE, THE FALL, and EXILE AND THE KINGDOM. Three years before his death he was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature.

Included in RESISTANCE, REBELLION, AND DEATH are essays on Spain, Hungary, Algeria, the liberation of Paris, capital punishment, religion (Camus claimed to be an unbeliever) and numerous other subjects. Threaded through them all is a steadfast absorption with freedom, from the state, freedom from the church, freedom from everything that might interfere with the individual's liberty.

The essays in this book were collected by Camus himself in the two years prior to his death. He intended them as a record not only of these exterior events in which he was involved, but of his growing interior vision.

The book is therefore the testament of a writer, particularly a writer who, more than any other of the twentieth century, believed that the artist must be committed to his times, in other words that the artist's "only justification . . . is to speak up . . . for those who cannot do so."

A warm picture of family life

THE CONSCIENCE OF THE RICH — by Sir Charles Snow — Penguin Books, 333 pp. 75c.

THE CONSCIENCE OF THE RICH is a Jewish-Gentile story, told in the first person by a gentile. The emotional adjustments and maladjustments, the fears, the generosity, of a community of old, established, wealthy and powerful English Jews, and especially of the younger generation are told through the eyes of the author's character Lewis Eliot, the "I" of THE CONSCIENCE OF THE RICH.

The most interesting character in the book is undoubtedly Mr. March, Mr. L as his children call him, a man of brief spurts of anger, vast good humour and lively anecdotal habits. His son Charles, whom Eliot does not know to be a Jew until after their friendship has lasted many months, and Katherine, the lovely daughter are prototypes of the young, sensitive Jew, seeking an honest place in the world regardless of ethnic background.

The warmth of the March's family ties, in spite of problems and disappointments, are typical of Jewish life as I know them.

In a time when some of our Canadian Jewish authors write disparagingly (especially in the eyes of their conferees who speak openly and regretfully of the disturbing attitude of these men and women whose talents seem directed against their own people) of the Jewish community, this English author's portrayal is heart-warming and engenders understanding and admiration of an ethnic group important in almost every community.

A book about a shallow city

LAS VEGAS — CITY WITHOUT CLOCKS — by Ed Reid, Prentice-Hall, Inc., 225 pp. — $3.95.

This "Cook's Tour of the gambling city Las Vegas left me with one main impression: 'Thank God, I don't live there.' It left me with several other impressions, too.

1) The author writes well, and it seemed to me that he is begging rehabilitation for this 'lady of the streets' — a laudable, though no doubt futile effort. Las Vegas chorus girls make up to $225 a week, waitresses sometimes a hundred dollars a night, while schoolteachers have to take after-school jobs as gas-station attendants and what-not in order to eke out meagre salaries. (Teachers are notoriously underpaid the world over, but not quite to this extent.)

2) Las Vegas is a place for those who are so bored with life that to rub shoulders with a Frank Sinatra or to see a top-ranking movie star acting as a shill brings spice and glamour to existence.

3) Las Vegas seems typified by a story told of an exceedingly wealthy gambler who saw an ancient citizen digging ditches to earn his living; the gambler removed his coat, finished the digging, indignantly that the poor old coddler had to work so hard, and then went off to his sumptuous existence without doing anything constructive such as providing a pension for the old man who would not have to dig the next ditch.

4) My final impression is of a nucleus of intelligent and interesting citizens being trampled to death by a mob of money-hungry, hysterical spongers.

Perhaps because Las Vegas itself is shallow, I found a shallowness in this book about it, a shallowness not evident in books about London, Paris, or Rome, but them it must be difficult to write something about nothing.

How Kennedy won

Some of the secrets revealed

The Making Of The President, by Theodore H. White; Longmans, Green; $7.95 — Why did Kennedy win? Political analysts will be struggling with it for decades, but I predict that no one will answer it better, with more awesome perceptiveness and style, than Theodore White in this book.

It certainly confirms him as one of the great modern chroniclers.

Another member of that small, superb group, Kennedy biographer James MacGregor Burns, says of White and his book:

"It is a stirring preface to the high politics of the nineteen sixties. May White stay around to tell that tale."

After reading through its 400 pages, I was left with the conviction that all the secrets have not been told, of the strange political alliances, of the Kennedy strategy, of Joseph P. Kennedy's part in the campaign and of Adlai Stevenson's last-minute thrust for the presidential nomination.

And where Richard Nixon went wrong.

The Kennedy strategy was simple. Since national politics are only people, he set out in 1956 to learn who the right people were.

Between 1956 and 1960, no Democrat, not even Adlai Stevenson, the party's titular head, spoke in more states, addressed more Jefferson-Jackson day dinners, participated in more local and mayoralty campaigns for deserving Democrats than did John Kennedy.

The master-plan for victory was prepped on October 28, 1959, in the living room of the Hyannis Port home of Robert Kennedy. Sixteen people attended and the nation was divided up for areas of action.

Joseph Kennedy was present and backed Jack against his other son, Robert, in favor of entering the Wisconsin primary that could have stopped their presidential hopes early in the day.

Joseph Kennedy was usually criticized as a gray eminence in his son's campaign, but his exact role was never clear because it was never a public role.

But at that Hyannis meeting he was given the job of using his private resources to win New York and New Jersey for his son.

It was Joseph Kennedy who won the votes of New Jersey delegates and alienated that of the Wisconsin primary that could have stopped their presidential hopes early in the day.

Delightful and well written

MILENKA'S HAPPY SUMMER by Mary Libal Barker Dodd, Mead & Company (Canada) Limited Illustrated by Paul Lantz Price: $3.50.

Milenka's Happy Summer is a delightful and beautifully written story of a Czechoslovakian family farming in Virginia, Nebraska in 1920. Suitable for children eight to twelve, parents will thoroughly enjoy reading it aloud to even younger children.

Dedecheck who was Grandfather Vašek is the principal character in the story and the author draws a beautiful word picture of the little old man with the clipped curly mustache and one arm, who smelt delightfully of peppermint candy and pipe tobacco, who spoke no English and often had his daughter Milenka translate for him.

Dedecheck loved all his grandchildren dearly and split his time between his son's family in Kansas and his daughter's family, the Kora-lek's in Nebraska. This is a story of his summer in Nebraska, of the fishing, hikes and story - telling sessions with the three oldest Koralek children. The resourceful old man brightened up the summer for these farm children. It is a tale of a happy farm family, of their hard work and of their pleasures and gives a glimpse of old Czechoslovakian customs and foods and of the trials and adjustments of an old country family in a new land.

There are 187 pages in this well illustrated book. Each chapter begins with a small illustration of some aspect of farm life and there are many larger illustrations showing the Koraleks and Dedecheck enjoying their summer's activities.

This lively book, with its fine family relationship, received the Dodd, Mead Librarian-Teacher Prize Competition Award.

STAMP CHAT

by Milton Cronenberg

The United States Post Office Department has just announced that a special 4-cent commemorative stamp will be issued on August 20, 1961, at San Diego, California, to mark the golden jubilee of Naval Aviation.

The design of the new Maass of Philadelphia, a member of the Postmaster General's Citizens Advisory Committee, features a picture of the United States Navy's first airplane; the Curtiss A-1 of 1911.

The commemorative will be issued in blue. Because the postal service decided to release the stamp at the last minute, reproduction in monochrome rather than printing in two or three colors on the Giori presses was necessary.

United States naval aviation saw its inception in 1908 when naval officers, attending the test operations of the Wright brothers at Fort Myer, Virginia, conceived the idea of using pontoons to expand the usefulness of the flying machine.

The first successful result of this idea came in November, 1910, when Lieutenant Eugene Ely flew from a specially built platform on the bow of the U.S.S. Birmingham, at Hampton Roads, Virginia.

In January, 1911, he both landed on and took off from the U.S.S. Pennsylvania, and a few days later Glenn Curtiss the famous aviation pioneer, made a water landing and take off alongside the same ship. The first naval aviation unit was formed in 1911.

The first day sale of the new commemorative stamp will be held in connection with a meeting of the Institute of Aerospace Sciences, August 19 to 24 in San Diego.

The actual first day ceremonies on August 20, will be a part of the dedication of the North Island Naval Air Station at San Diego at Halsey Field, honoring Fleet Admiral Will F. (Bull) Halsey. The program will include a flight by an exact reproduction of the Curtiss A-1 which the Navy has built for the occasion. After the flight the plane will go to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

First day cover collectors may send addressed envelopes together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed, to the Postmaster, San Diego 1, California.

Each envelope must be marked in pencil in the upper right corner indicating the number of stamps to be affixed.

The outside envelope to the Postmaster should be clearly marked "FIRST DAY COVERS NAVAL AVIATION STAMP." Enclosures of postal card thickness should be placed in each envelope and the flap either turned in or sealed.

The Naval Aviation first day cover requests must be postmarked before midnight August 15, 1961. Requests postmarked after that date will be returned unserved.

Collecting in the E.T.

By IVOR WHITEHOUSE

Stamp collectors of the Townships will be shocked to learn that Mr. Stanley Godden is in hospital following a serious car accident. On a journey late at night in Sussex, the car collided with a tree. Mr. Godden was killed and Mr. Godden suffered two broken legs. His step-daughter, Anne, who was also a passenger in the car is in hospital with injuries, though happily not severe. Mr. Godden is well known as a dealer in fine British North American stamps, and as a collector of B.N.A. His expert knowledge of Canadian stamps has added a great deal to philately. He was at the stamp convention in North Hatley this past spring representing the British North American Philatelic Society as its President. Mr. Godden and their daughter accompanied him. Collectors from the area were all amazed at his knowledge of our stamps and covers and took advantage of his presence to ask questions and seek answers to various problems. It is hoped that Mr. Godden will make a rapid and full recovery, and we extend to him our sincere sympathy.

HERE AND THERE IN THE STAMP WORLD — Stamp collectors will be surprised with the small quantities sold of the higher values of the Queen Elizabeth set from Gibraltar which was withdrawn last October. There are less than 50,000 complete sets. The quantity of the 10/- value sold is 49,331. How many of these were sold for purely postal purposes and afterwards destroyed is impossible to estimate, but we can safely believe that about 30,000 mint and used may have survived. To have this number of sets available to collectors throughout the world is not impressive. Can it be that the stamps of the Commonwealth are not as popular as in other years? This set was on sale for 7 years. Perhaps it would be wise to have a set on hand, in fact I would suggest a set complete used and one mint.

The Government of Fiji are issuing eight new postage stamps to improve and standardize the current definitive series. The 10/- value is to be re-introduced and the 2½/- value withdrawn. In addition the designs of a further seven values are being changed. The first of the new designs is the 8/- and was released for sale on August 1st. This stamp depicts the exotic hibiscus flower, accepted today as symbolic of the beautiful South Sea Islands.

Collectors of Irish stamps will be glad to know that the Irish set issued to commemorate EUROPA in 1960 is a scarce item. In fact it is selling for over three dollars in Europe. Don't overlook the sets from Great Britain to be issued August 28th, September 18th and September 25th. These stamps will come during the so called "off season" unless booked as new issues they might be difficult to come by at new issues prices later on. This brings up a question of increased cost for stamps after the new issue date, and it is worthy of some explanation. Most dealers offer new issues at a small mark-up over face value, and in no some instances have had their money deposited with the agencies of the countries concerned for periods ranging from two weeks to three months, and there is no interest on this money. Then the stamps are sent out to subscribers on approval, and at times it takes several weeks to get the money, by this time the dealer is not making much profit, if any, and so subsequent sales must take this into consideration. The fact that when a larger dealer carries in the vicinity of fifty complete sets and more of a current British Commonwealth set with a face value of $7.00 he is lying up money, and multiply this by fifty countries, and so on. Stamp dealing is no easy road to success. The new card with the different Canadian commemoratives mounted on it is now available from your Postmaster for fifty cents, complete with envelope for mailing. These make nice additions to your Canadian collection as they are official issues from the Post Office Department.

STAMP NEWS

A lively and interesting bulletin is issued every month to add to your collecting pleasure, this contains current special offers, new issue news, facts and news, it will be sent to you free as a trial offer, all customers receive it as a part of the service offered by this, the oldest and largest stamp company in the Townships, why not drop us a line, no obligation to buy, the bulletin will be sent along a few times on this basis, and then it is up to you to decide whether or not our offers are worthwhile.

PHILMAR REG'D

DIXVILLE, QUE.

New coin introduced by selfish Roman emperor

Although the reign of the Roman emperor Caracalla (211-217 AD) was marked by extravagance and cruelty, he is remembered by coin collectors as the emperor who introduced a new coin called the antoninianus, after him.

His name was actually Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, but the nickname of Caracalla was attached to him because of the long Gallic tunic known by that name which he introduced to Rome.

A variety of portraits appear on his coins, from his boyhood, which were struck under his father's reign, through to maturity when he became emperor, and struck the new denomination of coin.

The silver denarius of pure silver which was established as the standard coin of the empire by Augustus and been gradually debased over the years by different emperors, until by the reign of Caracalla, it was barely 40 per cent. silver.

Caracalla, hard pressed for money, further pursued this unreasonable procedure by introducing a larger silver coin showing his head with a radiate crown in place of the laurel wreath. This piece, called the "antoninianus," he tarified as two denarii, although it was equal in weight to only one and one half denarii.

However, the antoninianus rapidly deteriorated also, until it became only a bronze coin with a slight silvery wash. It did, though, surpass the denarius, and during the third century became the major silver coin of the empire, before it was officially abolished by Constantine the Great in 312 AD when he instituted a new monetary system.

Caracalla was the son of the Emperor Severus. On the death of his father, in England where they had repaired the wall of Hadrian, Caracalla and his brother Geta returned to Rome as co-emperors.

Music on Records

by Hugh Doherty

MODERN SERIOUS MUSIC, especially the 12-tone variety of Arnold Schoenberg, can fall strangely on contemporary ears, but a recent release by LONDON records may go a long way towards eliminating this:

HUMPHREY SEARLE — Symphony No. 1; London Philharmonic Orchestra, Sir Adrian Boult cond.; MATYAS SEIBER — Elegy for viola and small orchestra, composer cond.; Three Fragments from "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man"; Peter Pears, speaker, Dorian Singers, Melos Ensemble, composer cond. (LONDON stereo CS 6196) — While Searle's vigorous symphony is intended to be the showpiece of this disc, the work that steals the show is Seiber's Three Fragments from James Joyce's Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man. It is a fascinating mating of music and the spoken word, matching some of the most eloquent of Joyce's writings with choral work and 12-tone composition.

In it, the music takes its cue from the words, but the words themselves, half sung, become part of the melody. The composition is in three parts; one loud triumphant movement in between hushed sections of delicate, haunting beauty.

The Searle symphony is a powerful jagged thing, again in the new 12-note idiom. There are many unusual effects achieved, but what holds the whole thing together for the average listener is a large number of string section passages which weave gracefully in and out of the thunderous percussion arrangements, the chirping woodwinds and the strident, harsh brasses. Because of these passages, if one is to make friends with the 12-tone musical system, this symphony can help create the proper bonds.

The Elegy for viola and small orchestra is a short sombre piece, composed in the modern mood, but not on the 12-note scale. It contains within it, in addition to some luminous viola playing by Cecil Aronowitz, the seeds of serious introspection.

SCHUMANN, SPRING SYMPHONY — No. 1 in B flat; Manfred Overture; Boston Symphony Orchestra; Charles Munch cond. (RCA VICTOR mono 2474) — Schumann's pastoral symphony, while hardly as successful as Beethoven's famous Sixth, is gaily evocative of the bouncy mood of springtime. Mr. Munch leads the orchestra through a first movement surging in exuberance; a gentle and peaceful second movement, a lilting third movement, and an exciting final movement that alternates between fine orchestral sweeps and unabashed single notes of joy. All in all, a version characterized by the mood of joy it creates so successfully.

By GLADYS TAYLOR

I can't imagine anything more frustrating than being told about contests and never hearing who won them. In case some of the readers of this column are feeling just such frustration at not having heard the names of those who won awards mentioned in Jottings at various times, I am going to review some of the prizewinners announced in the past few months.

A 29-year-old schoolteacher Miss Jean Little of Guelph, Ontario, won the 1961 LITTLE, BROWN CANADIAN CHILDREN'S BOOK AWARD. She received the $1,000 prize for her book MINE FOR KEEPS which will be published next spring. Miss Little, who was born in Formosa of missionary parents, accepted her award in person at the Canadian Authors Association Awards dinner in Toronto, in June.

The THOMAS B. COSTAIN AWARD of $500.00 which DOUBLEDAY PUBLISHERS offered for the best essay written by any high school student in Canada on "Alexander Graham Bell and the Invention of the Telephone" was won by James Clarkson, a Grade 13 pupil at Brantford Collegiate Institute.

Margaret Laurence was this year's winner of the BETA SIGMA PHI AWARD — a prize of $1,000 offered each year for the best first novel by a Canadian. Mrs. Laurence won with THIS SIDE JORDAN. Mrs. Laurence also won the President's Medal of the University of Western Ontario for the best short story by a Canadian. The name of her story was "Gourdful of Glory" published in TAMARACK REVIEW.

McCLELLAND & STEWART, members of the "Formontor Group" of publishers, have announced that the $10,000 Prix Formontor for 1961 has been awarded to Jose Garcia Hortelano of Madrid, Spain, for his manuscript "Tormenta de Verano" (SUMMER STORM) and that the $10,000 Prix des Editions has been divided between Samuel Beckett of France for his "Molloy" tetralogy and Jorge Luis Borges of Argentina for his work "Ficciones" (FIC-TIONS).

The RYERSON ALL-CANADA FICTION AWARD CONTEST has been discontinued so of course there was no winner to be announced by them this year.

Included in the courses at Banff School of Fine Arts is one on writing, this year conducted by Wilfrid Eggleston, director of the department of journalism at Carleton University, Ottawa. On August 7th, Camera Canada took viewers on a guided tour of the school which numbers 700 students. The program was appropriately titled Campus in the Clouds.

The eleventh printing of William L. Shirer's THE RISE AND FALL OF THE THIRD REICH (MUSSON) comes off the presses in a few weeks making 258,500 copies in print. In addition the French edition has just been published by Librairie Stock, and editions are scheduled to appear within the next few years in Germany, Israel, Denmark, Holland, Italy, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Japan and England.

RECORD FLIGHT — First non-stop flight from England to Australia by an RAF Vulcan jet bomber June 21, 1961, covered 11,500 miles in 24 hours, three minutes.
