

THE WEATHER

You'd better get your raincoat out because there's a 90-per-cent chance that the rain will continue today, tonight and tomorrow. Moderate temperatures will prevail throughout with winds from the northeast at 10 to 15 km-p-h, increasing to 20 to 30 km-p-h.

A zone of high pressure is continuing to give good weather in the northern areas with the south still in the grips of a depression which will slowly move northward over the next two days. While Saturday doesn't look too promising, things will improve on Sunday while the outlook for Monday is good — just in time to go back to work. Temperatures will remain normal, with a minimum of between seven to 10 celsius and a maximum of 19 to 21.

Quebec leaders split over future

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec leaders are debating, following Tuesday's election in which Quebec voted Liberal and most other provinces chose Conservatives, whether English and French Canada will continue to head along different political paths.

"It would be false to say that Canadians fall into two monolithic groups," Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan said in the national assembly Wednesday. The massive Liberal vote in Quebec showed "the strength of federalist forces here."

But Premier Rene Levesque said that, however thinly it's sliced, blood runs thicker than water.

"English Canada chose an anglophone and Quebecers chose a francophone," said the premier, adding that the election "will serve to dissipate the idea that we could build French power outside Quebec."

Rodrigue Biron, leader of the Union Nationale party, says he thinks the Progressive Conservatives can form an excellent minority government and has called on Fabien Roy's Social Credit party to support them in Parliament.

Biron, whose party has traditionally been considered the Conservative party's equivalent at the provincial level in Quebec, said Wednesday the PCs and the Socreds were natural allies because they were both parties of the "right" in economic policy.

And he said the Tories have shown more openness to constitutional change than the Liberals.

Biron added that Tuesday's federal election supported the view of the Task Force on Canadian Unity that Canada is split on regional as well as linguistic lines.

No dealing Clark tells Socreds, NDP

Prime Minister-elect Joe Clark has retreated to the scenic calm of Alberta's Jasper National Park to plan the takeover of power from fallen political giant Pierre Trudeau.

Clark expects to assume power within two weeks, ending 16 years of Liberal rule. Trudeau, who conceded defeat after 11 years at the helm, will present a formidable challenge to Clark by staying on as Opposition leader when the new Parliament opens in the fall.

Fresh from his Tuesday election victory, Clark firmly announced at a news conference Wednesday his minority government will make no deals with other parties to get support for the 136 Conservatives — six short of an absolute majority — in the 282-seat Commons.

Finishing behind the Conservatives were the Liberals with 114 seats, Ed Broadbent's New Democratic Party with 26 seats and Fabien Roy's Quebec-based Social Credit with six seats.

It is unclear whether Broadbent or Roy will be the powerbrokers in the new Parliament because the final standings could be altered next week by three recounts of Tuesday's ballots.

There were photo finishes in Vancouver Centre, where the Conservative was two votes ahead of the Liberal, in South West Nova, where the Liberal finished 10 votes ahead of the Conservative and in Halifax, where the Conservative finished 14 ahead of the Liberal.

Clark said he hopes all opposition parties will want to give his Conservatives a chance to govern. But at the same news conference, he said his party is still committed to selling Petro-Canada, the Crown oil company, a move strongly opposed by Trudeau and Broadbent.

Broadbent played it close to the vest Wednesday. He planned to meet advisers in Ottawa before announcing how his party will respond to the Conservative minority.

Roy, at St. Georges-de-Beauce, Que., said Wednesday it is out of the question for his six Quebec Socred members to participate in any formal alliance or coalition with a minority Conservative government.

Roy said the Social Credit members will support individual government

Gunman surrenders

GODERICH, Ont. (CP) — A lone gunman who took hostages at the federal government building and kept police at bay for 12 hours surrendered to police early today.

Police said Timothy Sheardown, 27, of Goderich was charged with attempted murder and dangerous use of a fire-arm in the incident and was to appear in court today.

Police put a blanket over the man's head and whisked him away from the building without revealing his identity or saying what charges would be laid against him.

The hostages all escaped uninjured. Most left shortly after the man took over the building.

Earlier in the evening, gunfire ripped through the courthouse square scattering spectators and hitting some with buckshot. Nine were injured, none seriously.

The incident began on a golf course just outside the town. It is believed the man lost his temper and headed into Goderich. A car windshield was shot out and the man, wearing a bandolier full of ammunition, strolled into the Canada Employment Centre about 1 p.m. EDT and herded eight persons into a back room.

Witnesses said he slammed the butt of his gun on a desk and ordered everyone into a back room. Those who had hidden under their desks crawled into the room.

Once they were inside the man slammed the door and ordered them to call police.

GRAFFTEY, SCOTT POSSIBLE MINISTERS

...cabinet certainty

Townshippers Gerald Scott and Howard Grafftey are two names being mooted as possible cabinet ministers when Joe Clark and his advisers draft a Tory cabinet.

Grafftey and Joliette MP Roch LaSalle, the only two Quebec Tories elected Tuesday, are generally considered to be almost certainly members of Clark's cabinet, while Scott and fellow defeated candidates Andre Payette and Peter Blaikie have good chances.

Senators and private citizens could conceivably be named to the cabinet by Joe Clark after he is asked to form a government.

The Gazette says that among names already submitted by local PC officials to national party advisers are: — Pierre des Marais II, suburban mayor and chairman of the Montreal

Urban Community;

— Pierre Laurin, director of the University of Montreal's business administration faculty and brother of Parti Quebecois cabinet minister Camille Laurin;

— Jacques Courtois, president of the Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League;

— Claude Dupras, engineer and Quebec Conservative president from 1970-74;

— Tory senators Martial Asselin and Jacques Flynn;

— Guy Charbonneau, PC Quebec finance chairman;

— Defeated candidates Andre Payette, Gerald Scott and Peter Blaikie.

Payette is a former CBC television news commentator, Scott an engineer and businessman and Blaikie is a lawyer and economist.

France: Clark win widens culture gap

PARIS (CP) — French newspapers view the Progressive Conservative victory in Tuesday's general election as a widening of the gulf between English- and French-speaking Canadians.

And this gulf, a number of newspapers say, may enhance the separatist aspirations of Quebec.

"An election which marks a new division between the two Canadas," says a headline in Thursday's edition of Le Matin, a Paris-based socialist daily.

"It is probable that the friends of (Quebec Premier) Rene Levesque are not unhappy to be confronted by this new situation which risks to accentuate the division between Quebec and the rest of the country," the same newspaper says in an editorial.

The highly-respected Le Monde draws a similar conclusion in a front-page editorial.

"The Pequistes will soon notice that (Pierre) Trudeau's failure further isolates Quebec within the Canadian entity without giving more firmness to this entity."

Le Monde, in the centre of the French press political spectrum, says that the PCs' failure to win a clear-cut majority will be detrimental in any future talks about changing Canada's political framework. The PCs won 136 seats, six short of a majority.

As well, PC leader "Joe Clark, who is without any experience and was nearly unknown until yesterday and after a rather dull campaign, will have at least at first neither the stature nor the necessary supporters to begin a dialogue with the leaders of Mr. Levesque's party without it turning into a cacophony," Le Monde says.

Le Figaro, a conservative Paris daily, calls Clark a "patient and organized" man whose victory provided the conclusive answer to the "Joe who?" question.

But "in this period of a constitutional crisis, coupled with an economic recession across Canada, Mr. Clark has numerous obstacles in his path," Le Figaro says.

L'Aurore, another conservative daily, notes that Quebec's overwhelmingly pro-Liberal vote showed a significant rejection of Levesque's call for an anti-Trudeau, pro-Social Credit stand.

"Levesque was not listened to." But L'Aurore attributes Trudeau's over-all failure in part to "weak" Liberal economic policies and to Trudeau's reputation among Anglophones as a "man of French power."

Tokyo meet to provide first foreign test

OTTAWA (CP) — Joe Clark faces his first test as prime minister on foreign soil in about a month when he meets the heads of the seven major industrial democracies in Tokyo.

Clark will have two days of intensive economic discussions with U.S. President Jimmy Carter, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain, President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing of France, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany and Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

The June 27 meeting will be Clark's first international venture since his ill-starred world trip in January.

That trip began with a four-day visit to Japan.

Clark and Japanese Foreign Minister Masumi Eskai agreed there were "virtually boundless trade opportunities for their two countries."

But their weighty trade discussions were overshadowed in Canada by reports of Clark's awkwardness with Japanese officials and the planning gaffes of his staff.

Clark cannot afford any such embarrassments this time. He will be the focus of attention for 50 reporters and cameramen relaying daily reports of his performance home to the voters who chose him Tuesday to replace Pierre Trudeau as prime minister.

These talks will put a different kind of pressure on Clark. Japan will be appealing to the other participants to establish a permanent association to discuss major economic and political problems whenever they arise.

The United States and the European nations will ask Canada to help them press Japan to keep a pledge, made at Bonn last summer, to maintain a high growth rate so it can continue to buy their goods.

Skyrocketing prices in recent months are making it difficult for Japan to achieve the promised growth target.

A spokesman said Wednesday there is no indication how long Clark will stay or whether he plans to visit other East Asian countries during the trip.

Clark makes his second major foreign trip in early August when he faces a potentially explosive debate over Rhodesia at the Commonwealth conference in Lusaka, Zambia.

The key question will be whether to recognize the newly-elected black government of Rhodesia. Clark refused to take a stand during the election campaign, saying he would wait and see what positions Britain and the U.S. take on Rhodesia.

News Briefs

Fighter proposal questioned

OTTAWA (CP) — Government and industry officials view with skepticism a proposal that the newly-elected Progressive Conservative government buy second-hand F-14s as part of a $2.3-billion fighter-aircraft package.

Allan McKinnon, MP for Victoria and a top contender for defence minister in the new government, renewed the F-14 proposal just after the Conservative election victory Tuesday night.

But Canadian air industry sources are worried this might reduce business they hope to get from the program.

And military informants say the cost of maintaining and operating the F-14s might be too high for the planned fighter budget.

Florida executions sought

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Attorney-General Jim Smith, surprised by two stays of execution won by John Spink, vowed Wednesday to see that the condemned murderer is executed before the death warrant expires at noon Friday.

"Our goal is to have the stays removed by noon Friday so that the execution can take place," Smith said in Tallahassee, Fla., before flying to New Orleans to ask the U.S. Appeals Court to reverse a stay of execution issued Tuesday by one of its justices, Elbert Tuttle.

TV standards too low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Federal Communications Commission criticized U.S. commercial television today, saying the best works of television writers and producers may be rejected simply because they are "too good."

"Instead of a system that thrives on the rich differences among us, we have chosen a broadcasting system that denies viewers their distinctiveness and your community a chance to create rather than imitate," Charles Ferris said.

Stock market up after election

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's two largest stock markets reacted with delight Wednesday to the victory by the Progressive Conservative party in Tuesday's federal election.

At Toronto, the TSE 300 index leaped 11.25 to 1,481.36, its largest gain since March 22. At Montreal, the composite index rose 2.41 to 250.65.

CANDU reactor said safe

OTTAWA (CP) — The Atomic Energy Control Board says it is satisfied with preliminary results of an investigation into the safety of Candu nuclear reactors launched shortly after the Three Mile Island nuclear accident in Pennsylvania.

However, a board statement Wednesday said Candu reactor operators have been asked to submit more detailed reviews of nuclear operations with respect to heat removal systems, reported as a major problem in the Three Mile Island nuclear plant.

Virus said cause of diabetes

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors experimenting with germs found in the body of a 10-year-old boy conclude that diabetes can be caused by a virus.

The discovery is the first evidence that diabetes in children is touched off by a virus, although scientists have long suspected that a virus might be one cause of the disease.

However, the researchers said the discovery has little practical application because they are not sure what proportion of juvenile diabetes cases is caused by viruses.

In their study, conducted at the National Institute of Dental Research and the National Naval Medical Centre in Washington, the scientists found that the disease was caused by a variation of the Coxsackievirus B4. This common germ causes a variety of flu and cold symptoms as well as more serious infections.

measures which his party considers to be for the good of the people, but stipulated that Clark must show greater flexibility than Trudeau did if he wants to ensure support for his government.

Clark said a Conservative government plans no immediate expenditures or changes in personnel. Referring to government-sponsored projects already in the works, he said: "Certainly no bridges half built will be stopped."

Speculation has begun to rise about which Quebecers prime minister-elect Joe Clark might name to his cabinet. Two Conservatives elected in the province — the Liberals won 67 seats and the Social Credit six — would seem to be natural choices.

Roch LaSalle, elected in Joliette, said he would like an economic post, possibly minister of state for small business. Heward Graffey (Missisquoi) said he was interested in something in the social field. Both acknowledged that the decision is Clark's.

RULES OUT DEAL

Social Credit leader Fabien Roy, who could hold the balance of power in the Commons and appears to share Clark's views on some matters, ruled out any formal deal with the Tories and said no Creditist would sit in the cabinet.

"There is no question of forming a coalition or anything like that," he told journalists Wednesday.

Shortly after the election outcome was known, provincial premiers started jockeying for recognition.

Social Credit Premier Bill Bennett of British Columbia said there are a number of joint federal-provincial agreements he would like to discuss with Clark as soon as possible.

Progressive Conservative premiers — there are seven of them — hailed Clark's election as a signal for improved federal-provincial relations.

Meanwhile, outgoing justice minister Marc Lalonde says his close associate Pierre Trudeau will remain on the political scene a while longer.

"Mr. Trudeau intends to stay in federal politics to defeat the PQ referendum," Lalonde said in an interview. "There is no question of his resigning at this stage of his career."

Meanwhile, spokesmen for Quebec's three major labor federations said Wednesday they were satisfied with the defeat of the Trudeau government.

Louis Laberge, president of the 285,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor which officially supported the NDP, said there are two reasons to celebrate: The Trudeau government had been defeated, and a minority government had been elected.

Clark has said he would be prepared to name Quebec Conservative senators to his cabinet. Possible choices could include senators Jacques Flynn and Martial Asselin.

Laberge was happy with the strong showing of the NDP, but warned if the party hopes to get a foothold in every part of the country it will have to change its attitude towards Quebec's national aspirations.

Norbert Rodrigue, head of the 200,000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions, said the parties which hold the balance of power can force the Conservatives to run the country with the needs of the people in mind.

And Robert Gaulin, president of the Centrale de l'enseignement du Québec, also expressed satisfaction with the defeat of the government which he called "anti-labor, anti-democratic, anti-social and anti-Quebec."

Gaulin, whose union represents more than 80,000 teachers, said the strong Liberal vote in Quebec proved something Prime Minister Trudeau has always refused to admit — that Quebec is different from English Canada.

PRESSURE DIFFERENT

These talks will put a different kind of pressure on Clark. Japan will be appealing to the other participants to establish a permanent association to discuss major economic and political problems whenever they arise.

The United States and the European nations will ask Canada to help them press Japan to keep a pledge, made at Bonn last summer, to maintain a high growth rate so it can continue to buy their goods.

Skyrocketing prices in recent months are making it difficult for Japan to achieve the promised growth target.

Clark makes his second major foreign trip in early August when he faces a potentially explosive debate over Rhodesia at the Commonwealth conference in Lusaka, Zambia.

The key question will be whether to recognize the newly-elected black government of Rhodesia. Clark refused to take a stand during the election campaign, saying he would wait and see what positions Britain and the U.S. take on Rhodesia.

Thetford workers laid off

THETFORD MINES (CP) — Les Produits Bellevue (1977) Ltee, a trailer company, will lay off 145 of its 220 unionized employees for an indefinite period starting Friday. Company spokesman Claude Tremblay said Wednesday the company is temporarily ceasing production of tent trailers and caravans because of weak demand, adding that trailer sales are down across Canada. The company has 275 tent trailers and caravans in stock, but Tremblay said Bellevue has a "90 per cent chance" of obtaining a contract in early June that would solve its problems "once and for all."

Damages awarded to motorcyclist

MONTREAL (CP) — An 18-year-old motorcyclist almost completely paralysed in a 1977 accident caused by an impaired driver was awarded damages of $450,000 in Quebec Superior Court Wednesday. Remi Roy, left a quadriplegic by the collision, is expected to spend the rest of his life in institutions. The award covers pain and suffering, loss of future earnings and future care. Justice Edouard Martel found that driver Craig Babonau was solely responsible for the August, 1977, accident. Testimony showed that Babonau's car on the wrong side of the road and noted that his "faculties were impaired."

Levesque to call byelections

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque said Wednesday that two provincial byelections will likely be called within the next few days even if the actual voting day is not until the fall.

Speaking to reporters at a news conference, the premier said the likely voting dates are late June or early fall.

The two vacant ridings are Prevost, in the Laurentians north of Montreal, and BeauceSud, south of here.

Lavoie wants numbers off lists

QUEBEC (CP) — Social insurance numbers should not appear on voters' lists, Liberal national assembly member Jean-Noel Lavoie told a legislative committee studying a provincial bill to set up a permanent electoral list. Lavoie said Wednesday that proposals for the list call for information with no pertinence to elections such as the sex, birthdate and social insurance number of each voter.

CP pilots ratify contract

TORONTO (CP) — The 537 pilots of CP Air have ratified a new contract that will give them a total wage increase of 17 per cent over two years. Most of the pilots will earn between $40,000 and $41,000 a year in the second year of the contract. Jumbo jet pilots will earn $96,000 a year.

Delinquency decreases

OTTAWA (CP) — Figures released by Statistics Canada Wednesday show a decrease in juvenile delinquency. The agency said 44,181 youths were brought before juvenile courts in 1977, a 7.7-per-cent decrease from 1976. Statistics Canada said violent crimes, including sexual offences, assaults and robbery, increased to 3,437 in 1977 from 3,337 in 1976, while drug-related charges declined 5.3 per cent and theft charges dropped almost 13 per cent.

Israelis blast Lebanon

BEIRUT (AP) — Israeli planes blasted guerrilla strongholds in Lebanon for the second straight day today then buzzed Yasser Arafat's Beirut headquarters following cross-border shelling that left two Israelis wounded and a guerrilla bombing that killed two Israeli women and a baby.

Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) said the Israeli jets bombed and rocketed guerrilla positions at Reihan mountain, 65 kilometres southeast of Beirut, and "maintained a thundering umbrella over all towns and villages in south Lebanon, crashing the sound barrier and causing panic-spreading sonic booms."

Some indicated plans to collect political debts.

Conservative Premier John Buchanan of Halifax, who campaigned hard for the federal Conservatives, said Clark's election will open a new era in social development in the Atlantic region.

Buchanan said the new government will give the provinces a greater role in the fishery and complete jurisdiction over offshore resources.

Laberge was happy with the strong showing of the NDP, but warned if the party hopes to get a foothold in every part of the country it will have to change its attitude towards Quebec's national aspirations.

Norbert Rodrigue, head of the 200,000-member Confederation of National Trade Unions, said the parties which hold the balance of power can force the Conservatives to run the country with the needs of the people in mind.

Government inaction prompts 'bomb'

By NELSON WYATT

SHERBROOKE — A local group concerned with the socio-economic development of the area has promised to drop a "bomb" by the end of the month if no action is received to settle the fate of a number of projects scheduled to benefit Townshippers over the next few years.

The ad-hoc committee, composed of regional mayors, businessmen and professionals working in cooperation with the Conseil Régional de Développement des Cantons de l'Est, includes Sherbrooke Mayor Jacques O'Bready, Coaticook Mayor Ernest Lafaille, Union Régionale des Caisses populaires director Roger Roy, Yvon Hamel of Asbestos, Andre Lupien of Richmond, Robert Girard of Magog, Union des Producteurs Agricoles Director Bernard House and labor leaders and tourist industry representatives.

During a press conference yesterday, they blasted government inaction on the projects and vowed to keep the pressure on until some results are seen.

To date their actions have taken the form of strong protest letters fired off to Minister of Economic Development Bernard Landry and other government agencies involved. It is highly likely that Landry will also get a cool reception when he visits the area in June.

Among the projects that have been delayed for many months, are the development of tourist potential of Coaticook Gorge and Megantic's Baie des Sables, a trans-Sherbrooke beltway to ease the traffic flow from the CHU to Lennoxville, development schemes for Mount Orford, a go-ahead on Highway 116 between Warwick and Richmond and control of development on the flanks of Mont Megantic.

The government has offered to help out financially with the Centre Régional d'Initiatives Pour le Progrès Economique (CRIPPE) over the course of the year but it is expected that a fourth of the aid will have to come from the region, the group said yesterday.

Word is expected on the fate of the Coaticook Gorge project by the end of May while a decision concerning route 116 should be received from the Ministry of Transport by June. Nothing has been said about the other projects proposed in the area, such as the Baie des Sables idea.

In the case of the development scheme for Mount Orford, no word will be received on this until a recommendation is put forth from the appropriate government agency. To this end the municipalities and regional organizations involved have participated in a number of meetings, none of which have as yet borne any fruit.

Frustrated by the government's inability to move ahead on the projects, the ad hoc consultation group has decided not to go ahead with any more planning until some concrete word has been received from Quebec. They have also delayed local consultation on a two-volume, 420 page report on Townships problems resources and problems until something has been decided.

Carried out by the Office of Planning and Development, the detailed study attempts to break the area's socio-economic structure down to its components, enabling the members of Region 5 to decide what development priorities should be.

CRDCE President Robert Routhier said recently government officials must realize that the Townships is a difficult place to animate and that the recent government inaction has led him to believe that "the sooner we realize we can't count on the government, the sooner we can begin to realize these projects among ourselves."

Racetrack backers seek $1,575,000

SHERBROOKE (FJM) — Harness racing may return to Sherbrooke — if the city decides to reopen and expand the Eugene Lalonde arena, if the provincial government decides to invest $500,000 in the project and if Ottawa agrees to lend l'Association Agricole des Cantons de l'Est (ETAA) a sum of $1,575,000, said Claude Dussault and Jean-Paul Raymond at the city council meeting last night.

Dussault and Raymond are the president and vice-president respectively of Les Promoteurs de l'Industrie des Courses a Sherbrooke, which supports the project of bringing harness racing to Sherbrooke after a six-year absence.

During the last few months Dussault and Raymond have met with directors of harness racing tracks in the province as well as representatives of provincial ministries responsible for racing activities.

Emphasizing that the project can be realized in stages, Dussault said the plan presented by his group would need $528,000 in order to make crucial initial investments in the track. The project calls for the city to accept the job of rebuilding the old race track which burned down on Terrill Plateau last year, but on the site of the old stables. The stables would have to be shared with the ETAA, who have a claim to half of the 200-by-500-foot building.

Dussault said the total cost to the city would be $1.5-million, the total sum set aside for real estate expenditures in this year's budget. The $1,575,000 required to pay for work on the EPAA's half of the stables would be obtained through a long-term loan from the federal government.

Only if these two conditions are met will the group be able to spend the $528,000 which it believes it can obtain from the provincial government.

The group is thus asking the City to extend the initial investment to rebuild the arena and to guarantee that they will not have to pay rent, although they do not ask to be exempt from paying taxes.

Dussault and Raymond presented the council with a petition containing 24,766 signatures supporting the project of returning harness racing to Sherbrooke.

The councillors did not discuss their reactions to the proposal.

Townships talk

OCQ loses key decision

SHERBROOKE (CP) — Judge Yvon Roberge ruled in sessions court Monday that lawsuits launched by the Office de la Construction du Québec must be authorized by the provincial attorney-general.

The move may have far-reaching consequences on the Quebec construction industry, and could conceivably render null and void several actions launched by the office, a government body which oversees hiring and job benefits in the construction industry.

Judge Roberge was ruling on a suit against Roger Hebert, a Sherbrooke tradesman who allegedly failed to file a report required by the office. The judge said it was not legally valid.

Historical Society willed $2,000.

SHERBROOKE (NW) — The Eastern Townships Historical Society has received the sum of $2,000 from the will of the late notary Leonidas Bachand. Commenting on the gift, the Society's President, Dr. Rosario Cousineau spoke highly of Bachand's long involvement with the Society, saying he had been very active in all aspects of it and in the artistic cultural and social sphere in Sherbrooke.

Cause of fire sought

ROCK FOREST (BP) — Municipal police are investigating a fire of questionable origin at the Nid de l'Aigle Bar Salon on University Road early yesterday morning.

Det. Reginald Henri said the fire, which began in the building's attic, was being looked into by himself and Const. Jean-Guy Cote. He would not term the cause as suspicious but added it would be a few more days before his report would be complete.

It was apparently the bar's proprietor, Raymond Arsenault, who turned in the call at 6:41 a.m. Wednesday when he arrived to begin his day's work. Sherbrooke firemen were on the scene for a little more than two hours. Another crew of firefighters returned about 4:30 p.m. when another hot spot was discovered but it was quickly extinguished. The attic area was apparently empty at the time.

An insurance adjuster on the scene following the afternoon fire estimated about $8,000 damage was caused by flames, water and smoke. He had no idea what could have caused the fire because he had not seen the location at that point.

Having problems sleeping? CHU researchers want you

By JASPER MEYERS

SHERBROOKE — Dr. Louis Munan, associate professor of Epidemiology at the CHUS, has sought The Record's assistance in getting replies from about 400 families in the Townships who were sent two-page questionnaires as part of a study on people's sleep behaviour. He has received only 600 of the 1,000 questionnaires sent out in the beginning of April. He assured us that his aim was not to get publicity but to complete the field study on which he is engaged.

Munan says the questionnaire contains ten questions, some of which are important to his study and some of which are there simply to detract from his real purpose and to try to ensure unbiased replies.

When Munan has received a sufficient number of questionnaires he will ask for volunteers to spend part of one day and one night at the CHUS, for which they'll be paid.

Munan's real interest is in a phenomenon called sleep apnea, whereby healthy men stop breathing for periods ranging from 10 to 50 seconds when they are asleep. The condition was discovered by a team who performed a study on the sleep habits of 49 volunteers, chiefly doctors, nurses and health workers, at the University of Florida.

The researchers said they did not know why the phenomenon occurred but that it could open up new avenues of research into some conditions such as heart disease that affect more men than women.

Munan says he is most interested in measuring the extent of the condition within a specified population and how the people with the characteristics under study differ as a group without the characteristics.

He says this will give him a lead to identify factors which might be casually or closely associated to the sleep apnea syndrome, or be merely coincidental.

Since he is taking the household as the unit of study he will also get a reading as to how affected households differ from similar households in which the syndrome does not prevail. He says he may even be able to get some perception of the familial, hereditary and environmental patterns of sleep apnea.

So, if you received a questionnaire from the CHUS in April but were too sleepy to fill it out, give Dr. Munan another chance and look it over.

Sweetsburg Ward

by John McCaghey

SWEETSBURG WARD (JM) — Tommy Reimann, of Montreal, who earlier pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering the Cowansville Medical Centre and theft of drugs and syringes, benefited from the clemency of the court when his sentence was suspended and he was bound over to keep the public peace for two years.

Pierre Gibeau told the court his client had appeared at least 10 times concerning the case and he has successfully completed a drug detoxification program at the Portage Centre. "He is still under the supervision of their outreach program, is working, and is reintegrating into society," Gibeau said.

"I am satisfied with his participation in the voluntary program and I feel the interests of justice would be well served with a suspended sentence and a two-year probation," Crown attorney Claude Noisieux said.

Judge Guy Genest imposed the sentence suggested by the Crown.

Judge Genest upheld a motion to quash proffered by the defence in the case of Donald MacFarlane and dismissed the charge. MacFarlane, of the Town of Mount Royal, was charged with extortion in the Town of Brome Lake during 1977.

Christian Tardif, of Baie des Capucins, Gaspé, changed his option and pleaded guilty to a charge of disturbing the public peace in Cowansville, on May 13.

He then pleaded guilty to his arraignment on charges of having been drunk and disorderly in a public place in Cowansville on May 17, and to having ignored a probation order which prohibited him from frequenting any drinking establishments in the District of Bedford.

Pierre Gibeau pointed out his client was unemployed, had been held for four days before being arraigned before a judge, and the heavy fine suggested by the Crown would be tantamount to a jail term. He then suggested a fine of $25 on the first count and $75 on the remaining two citing his client had no prior record.

"He may come from Baie des Capucins but he certainly isn't a friar," Crown attorney Noisieux quipped. "He wasn't held on the charge of disturbing the peace but for assaulting a police officer in the performance of his duties. The defence is completely wrong in stating he has no prior record as he has prior convictions here for simple theft, breaking and entering and disturbing the peace."

"He was granted his provincial freedom on May 13 when he was prohibited from entering any drinking establishments pending his trial on the first count of disturbing the peace. Four days later he was drunk on the street and assaulted the police officer who arrested him. I sincerely hope he will return to Gaspé as the defence has suggested."

Judge Guy Genest noted he had no visible form of income and fined him $25 and costs, in default eight days, on the first count, $25 and costs on the second, and $50 and costs, in default eight days, on the third. He then bound Tardif over to keep the public peace for one year and the probation order stated he was neither to enter nor frequent any drinking establishments in the District of Bedford for the duration of the probation order. "If you are caught in a bar or a tavern you'll be behind bars for a while," the judge said.

The Crown said it had no proof to offer in the case of Michael Eldridge who was charged with simple theft in the Town of Brome Lake and Judge Genest dismissed the case.

Louis Jalbert, of Granby, renounced his right to jury trial on a charge of breaking and entering a dwelling in Adamsville, chose trial before a magistrate alone and pleaded guilty.

Pierre Gibeau told the court his client had been sentenced to nine months in Granby for similar infractions which occurred during the same time span and suggested a concurrent term of imprisonment would amply serve the interests of justice. Crown attorney Noisieux said he had no special remarks to offer and Judge Genest imposed the nine-month concurrent term.

Bench warrants were issued for Andrew Forster, of Cowansville when he failed to appear for sentencing on two counts of fraud.

Gilbert Boutin, of St. Isidore, pleaded guilty to a charge of having operated a motor vehicle when he had consumed .160 mgs. of alcohol. He was fined $160 and costs, in default 30 days.

Bench warrants were issued for Daniel Reynard, of Farnham, when he failed to appear for trial on one count of breaking and entering and preliminary hearing on a second, similar offence.

Waterville Cellular hiring 100

WATERVILLE (FJM) — Produits Cellulaire Waterville will take on 100 new employees between now and July 15, due to a substantial increase in the number and volume of orders it has received.

Since it was purchased more than a year ago from B.F. Goodrich by a number of local businessmen, the company has seen its number of employees increase in number from 275 to 405. Much of this increase has been due to a $2.5 million contract the company signed with the Ford Motor Company of Canada for 10,000 sealing joints a week used in the manufacture of trucks.

Two other contracts with General Motors and Chrysler result in the production of rubber seals — worth a total of $1.5 million — used in the air conditioning systems of cars.

These contracts have required the company to invest about $1 million in 40 new presses and other equipment for the manufacture of rubber goods. Some of the new equipment will be used in a few months time for the manufacture of items of rubber of different densities.

According to the factory's director, Emile Couture, the company has signed a contract worth $350,000 involving the sale of rubber moulds to other companies in the province. He says the high level of technical competence achieved at the Waterville factory will enable them to expand in this area of sales in the future.

Couture added that the only problem right now is to find the people to fill 100 jobs.

From London to Montreal, the editorialists react

LONDON (CP) — "Goodbye Pierre, hello Joe" is the way the London Standard sums up the Canadian election.

"Trudeau toppled" is the headline on The Evening News.

Because of the time difference between Britain and Canadian points, the large morning newspapers went to bed today with little mention of Canada's general election.

The two evening tabloids, however, devoted most of their front pages to the event.

The News, in a secondary headline, stated:

"Canada's premier ousted after 11 years by Honest Joe, aged 39."

In its story from Toronto, The News said:

"Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau was ousted by a virtual unknown today, while his wife Margaret went disconcerting in New York."

Late-morning radio programs stressed speculation that the defeat might lead to a Pierre-Margaret reconciliation.

PARTY AT CANADA HOUSE

The Canadian high commission threw a party for invited guests which began at Canada House about midnight and went on well into the morning as results poured in from a CBC feed.

The news was quick to editorialize and, under the heading "Making of Joe Who," said:

"Canada's election campaign was a classic battle between an uncertain newcomer and a once-revered leader, now more loathed than loved."

"Standing against Pierre Trudeau, a polished, intellectual millionaire, Joe Clark at times looked like a country bumpkin."

The News says Trudeau gradually "lost the affection of Canadians because of his arrogance which meant he virtually ran a one-man government."

The following is a selection of excerpts from editorials in Canadian newspapers commenting on the election of a minority Progressive Conservative government, compiled by The Canadian Press:

The Montreal Gazette: Joe Clark has pulled it off.

Despite the critics' ridicule and faint-hearted support even within his own party, Mr. Clark's Conservatives have won more seats than any other party in the House of Commons. That gives him the right, at 39, to be our youngest prime minister in history.

In this province above all others, the first instinctive reaction will be regret at the defeat of Pierre Trudeau, the most brilliant leader Quebec has produced in generations.

Mr. Clark has stressed his talents as a conciliator and his ability to bring together disparate people and forces to work toward a common goal. He will need those talents and more to meet the challenges ahead.

Montreal La Presse: Few observers gave the Conservatives much chance of improving their position substantially in Quebec, even if some of their organizers did not hide their hopes of taking away at least three or four seats from the Liberals. They failed lamentably, once again.

They never had a chance from the start. Except for the election of 1958, Quebec has never been fertile ground for them. But, it is normal to think that the position taken by Joe Clark near the end of the campaign, in which he refused to accept Quebec's right to self-determination, made the task of his people more difficult. By apparently looking for votes in English Canada, he accepted the alienation of some of the votes he could have received here.

Owen Sound Sun Times: Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau did the honorable thing and bowed out gracefully.

Clark does not face an easy future. He must win the confidence of the House of Commons but doesn't seem disposed to pay a high price for third-or fourth-party support. The onus to deliver isn't entirely on Clark, however.

All parties will have to accept the voters' verdict and recognize there is an obligation to make the next minority parliament productive.

Toronto Sun: Any way you want to read it, it was a thunderous slap in the face for Pierre Elliott Trudeau, the Liberal who has seen his last day as prime minister of Canada.

Looked at in total, the story of the election is Trudeau, Clark hasn't the image of a world-beater, but Trudeau has so outworn his credibility by what he has done to our country in the past 11 years that Canadians were in no doubt that he must go. And Ed Broadbent's NDP profited from uneasiness about Clark.

The legacy of the Trudeau years may be that he has reduced the Liberal party from a national party to a regional party in Quebec.

The Globe and Mail: The most difficult and most important task awaiting Joseph Clark is the winning of Quebec.

The election of a Progressive Conservative government was not a rejection of French Canada or the aspirations of the French Canadian people. The change of government must be, and must be seen to be, an opportunity for constructive resolution of the problems that have divided Ottawa and Quebec City and, indeed, Ottawa and provincial capitals across the country.

We have a new prime minister, a new government, and a new sense of anticipation. It is a time for congratulations. And for honest prayers.

There, but for...

We seem to detect a certain degree of smugness in the air, not to mention complacency, when Canadians hear stories of the dire straits of gas-hungry Americans lining up for miles at the pumps.

It doesn't take a genius to see we're in the same boat, and that it's sinking. Canada, like the U.S. developed after the Second World War on the premise of cheap, plentiful energy in the form of oil. Canada, like the U.S., expanded in linear fashion, spreading its suburban and exurban sprawl across the face of the nation with little regard for energy conservation. The cheaper forms of mass transit — trains, buses, boats — were scrapped in favor of faster, more personal conveyances like the car and the airplane. The governments of this nation were like those in the U.S., following the line of least resistance toward a fancy highway network, dependent on petroleum for the very pulse of the nation.

Through the halcyon days of the fifties and the blissful ignorance of consumption in the sixties we went, steering a fool's course with little regard for anything but our own creature comforts. Nothing was spent on the development of alternate energy resources. Wind power was ignored, or worse, described as the concern of crackpots and Rube Goldberg tinkers. So were various forms of methane-producing digesters. Solar energy was used to power gadgets on the desks of the politicians while government offices were heated with oil and cooled by electricity at the same time while special glass reflected the sun's natural heat.

We're going to have gasoline shortages in Canada this summer. They've already started, as we'll all begin to notice in the next few weekends. The crunch won't be dramatic. It will be a slow, steady erosion of what we once felt was our God-given right to consume like a bunch of damfool idiots without any thought about tomorrow.

This week we voted for a new set of leaders. Based on what they said during their campaign, they're just as ignorant of impending hard times as the gang which went before. They claim they're doing all they can, but it's pitifully obvious that's a heap of lies, the bleatings of fools.

The gasoline circus is over, folks. It's time we all came home to the truth.

JAMES DUFF

Poor solution

Social Affairs Minister Denis LaZure's announced intention to seek higher prices for beer, wine and spirits to combat Quebec's growing incidence of alcoholism is no more and no less sensible than a hike in gasoline prices to discourage driving.

Human nature being what it is, both the drinker and the driver grumbles, curses the government — and reaches deeper into his pocket to pay the piper. Alcoholism being what it is, the unreformed boozier will let other aspects of his life — or his family's — suffer before he leaves his thirst unslaked.

Higher prices don't discourage the abuse of alcohol, just as strict laws can't control illicit drug use. The only control on any drug abuse is self-control, and that can only come about through education, experience and openness. If Mr. LaZure really wants to help Quebec drinkers, he'll stiffen the fines and penalties for drunk drivers, ensure tighter controls on underage drinking and make treatment for alcoholism available to everyone, regardless of status.

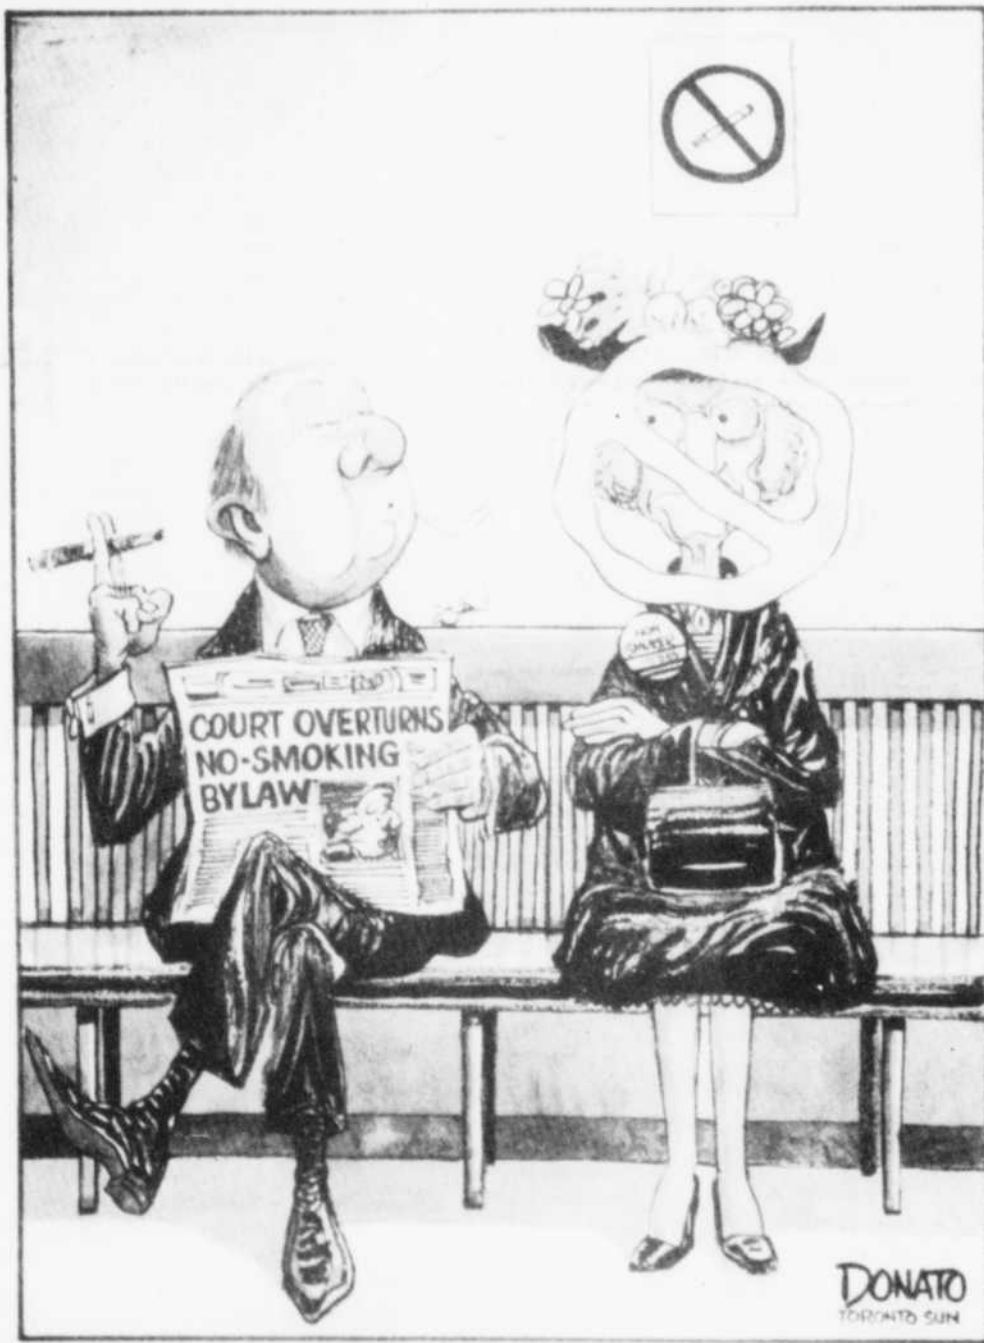

Letters

Editor:

I have made several attempts to write a brief reply to Mr. Clifton, and failed each time, so I have decided to take the necessary space to explain my views and hope the Record will publish it, since Mr. Clifton's first two commentaries were quite long. In pointing out something in one of his letters he observed "for example, Jesebel is a treacherous harlot; Esther almost a saint, though both commit the same moral offenses". I'll admit I took him literally though it seems he was using a figure of speech. NOW he tells me the moral offenses were "miscellaneous forms of treachery to their husbands."

DONATO

Esther of course, was one of the Jews who at an earlier date had been taken captive by Babylon. King Ahasuerus called for all the fair young maids to be brought to the palace, that from among them he might choose a new queen. Esther was brought to the palace with many others and she was the one chosen.

Later when two of the king's chamberlains turned against him, Esther's uncle heard of it, told her and she told the king, probably saving his life. Still later when there was a plot to destroy the Jews, Esther's uncle again brought it to her attention. THIS time the king was in his inner court where no one could come without being called, not even the queen, on penalty of death, unless the king held out his golden sceptre toward the person. Esther took the risk; she found favour in the king's sight and was able to give him her message with the result that the enemies of the Jews, instead of the Jews, were killed. Is this what Mr. Clifton means by treachery against her husband?

In using The Song of Solomon to prove that Solomon had a liaison with the Queen of Sheba, he is using a popular ploy of the day, that of using a set of facts to prove a point while ignoring a whole other set of facts. 1 Kings ch 10 and 11 Chronicles ch 9 both tell of the Queen of Sheba's visit and if there had been anything more I suspect it would have been recorded, since David's shameful affair with Bathsheba is recorded in detail in Samuel. Mr. Clifton points out that ch 11 of Kings says "Solomon loved many strange women; the daughter of Pharaoh and Moabite, Ammonite, Edomite, Sidonian, and Hittite women." I presume this is supposed to help prove that she wrote the songs of Solomon. Actually these are all nations living close to the land of Israel. Reference to them can be found in 11 Samuel 8:2 Joshua 3:10 11 Kings 8:21 Judges 10:12, Joshua 9:1. While the Bible doesn't give any clue as to just where The Queen of Sheba's country was, it is generally thought she came from a land much to the east of Israel. The Bible states she came with a great train of camels. Actually there is no reason why the Song of Solomon couldn't have been written either for or by, any one of Solomon's seven hundred wives.

Again Mr. Clifton mentions a legend or tradition that Solomon wrote for the "Shulamite which was given to David." This again doesn't prove anything. If the Shu-la-mite mentioned in the Song of Solomon does mean the same as the Shu-namite mentioned in 1 Kings; 3, it only indicated that the Queen of Sheba would not be a shulamite since it says they sought throughout the coasts of Israel and found a Shulamite. The life of Solomon is found in the first 11 chapters of 1 Kings and the first 9 chapters of 11 Chronicles.

No, Mr. Clifton I have to admit I don't read the Bible every day, but I have read it through consecutively from Genesis to Revelations twice.

Editor:

I have just spent the day endeavoring to participate in what purported to be a federal election. Were it possible to give your readers an instant replay of what I witnessed, it should be recognized at once for what it was, namely, a second-rate farce. The entering of the names of voters on the voting lists in particular seems to have been done with a singular ineptitude. I have lodged a complaint by telegram with the Chief Returning Officer for the Stanstead-Compton-Megantic Riding and also with the appropriate authorities in Ottawa. It seems to me essential that all Canadians who went to the polls in good faith but were turned away should voice their complaints. I am willing to collect information from those in Ascot Township who wanted to vote but were prevented from doing so, if they would get in touch with me not later than this Friday, May 25, by calling me at 563-5299. I would also suggest that in other areas those who were deprived of their votes should get together and submit their complaints to Ottawa.

Alaskan fishermen's wages freeze U.S. out of market

WASHINGTON — Alaskan fishermen can be excused if they think the Japanese won World War II. As in so many other commercial areas, our erstwhile enemy has undercut American fishermen in the lucrative harvest of pollock, cod and bait fish from Alaska's coastal waters.

The icy waters of the Gulf of Alaska each year yield up more than 5 billion pounds of these so-called bottom fish — those that feed in vast schools on the ocean floor and are scooped up by the ton in huge trawling nets.

The great bulk of this $2 billion annual catch is taken by Japanese, Korean, Polish and Russian fishing fleets and shipped home. The processing is done, for the most part, aboard modern floating fish factories on the high seas, by workers paid as little as 35 cents an hour.

By contrast, a cannery worker in Kodiak, Alaska, makes $4 to $7 an hour. The result is that American fish processors are frozen out of the U.S. market by foreign suppliers of fillets and fish sticks.

"It would at least double the prices of (frozen) fish if we had to buy from Alaska," we were told by a spokesman for Mrs. Paul's Seafoods, a major importer of foreign fish products.

We sent our reporter Hal Bernton to Kodiak to study the situation. He discovered that the only reliable market for American-caught bottom fish is the booming crab industry, which uses the delicate, highly perishable fish as bait.

The crabbers can afford to pay 30 cents a pound for prime eating fish, which they cut up and use to lure the giant king crabs into their traps. In contrast, a fish processor who supplies products for U.S. dinner tables can afford to pay only about 15 cents a pound to remain competitive.

Despite the financial rewards possible in crabbing — a crewman willing to risk his life in the treacherous Alaska seas can earn as much as $100,000 in a single winter crab season — there are still skippers willing to struggle for a living as bottom fishermen. One of these, a former Montana miner named Oral Burch who first came to Alaska in a troop transport in World War II, invited Bernton along as a crew member on a two-day fishing expedition.

Burch's boat, the Dawn, left at midnight to take advantage of favorable tides to get around a particularly dangerous point of land. Each crewman was equipped with an insulated survival suit in case disaster struck in the frigid Alaskan waters.

Chugging into the Shelikoff Straits, Burch dropped the two long trawling nets from outriggers on either side and headed for a large school of fish pinpointed by the boat's sonar. After eight hours of trawling on the ocean floor 500 feet below, the crew hauled up some 10 tons of fish and dumped them, flopping, onto the deck.

The catch was a good one. The crew spent hours sorting out the catch of pollock, flounder, gray cod, flatfish and perch. The cod was gutted and flash-frozen to preserve its top market value.

The skipper was in high spirits, but not for long. Once in port, he learned that the Star of Kodiak processing plant would purchase only a small portion of his catch. The plant's manager did send two workmen to unload Burch's fish, but would agree to pay for it only if he found a way to sell the fish to crabbers. Such a sale was unlikely because the crabbers were in the middle of a month-long strike for higher prices.

Footnote: A 1976 law was designed to protect U.S. fishing rights within 200 miles of the coastline. But the foreign fish corporations have continued to dominate the market because of their modern facilities and low labor costs.

Washington Whirl: Congressional junkies are traditionally justified as necessary to the legislative process — an excuse that loses a good deal of its point when the junketeer is a lame-duck member. Yet the lame ducks are often among the most high-flying travelers at taxpayers' expense.

Former Rep. John Flynt, D-Ga., for example, announced last summer that he wouldn't run again. He then winged off to Switzerland, Belgium, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Italy, South Africa and Rhodesia, running up a tab of $7,998. This lame-duck flight was even more wide-ranging than the one he took two months before he decided to retire. That $4,128 junket took him to Sweden, Austria, Spain, Morocco, Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union.

It's a rare and refreshing experience when a reporter gets through to a senator or congressman without having to go through a press secretary. But there's one solon who handles his own press inquiries — Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont. Trouble is, of course, that as word of this eccentricity spreads, the volume of his press calls may increase to the point where he'll be forced to hire a $30,000-a-year press aide like everyone else.

Esther Peterson, the White House consumer affairs champion, was delayed in New York on her way to an international conference in Stockholm. It was nothing sinister. Her office had simply forgotten to revalidate her special diplomatic passport.

Antiquarians' dowager banks on truthful rep

TORONTO (CP) — Marjorie Wainman-Wood, an antique dealer from St. Andrew-By-The-Sea, N.B. is meticulous about alerting individuals with antiques to sell about the value of their property.

Known as the dowager of antiquarians in Canada, the widow of a Royal Canadian Navy commander is one of 28 antique dealers exhibiting at the 10th annual fair of the Canadian Antique Dealers Association. The association's stamp is the consumer's hedge against fakery.

Mrs. Wainman-Wood, a founding member of the association which has grown in 12 years to more than 60 members, grew up among antiques from generations of Nova Scotians.

"My grandmother wasn't very concerned about things that had been handed down in the family," she said in an interview this week. "When my mother grew old enough to appreciate them, she was shocked to realize grandma was using a 1760 New England block-front desk as a laundry chest in the bathroom. She rescued it."

Mrs. Wainman-Wood's education in antiques expanded as she followed her navy captain husband to various postings in England, Malta, Canada and Europe.

HAD LITTLE MONEY

"You might say we took a really intensive course in the 1930s. My husband was taking a course at the Royal Navy Staff College in Greenwich, and when the Depression hit there was a big decrease in his pay."

"We had holidays coming, but no money to travel. So we walked London for weeks, visiting antique shops, taking lectures, going to museums."

This immersion course spurred their interest as collectors. On retirement, the Wainman-Woods moved to a 27-acre place on Vancouver Island, 80 kilometres from Victoria, and settled down to garden.

"One day I picked up an antique magazine with an ad offering information to those wishing to set up antique businesses. For $5 or $10 I received an excellently detailed blueprint of what to do."

As the property near Victoria became too large to handle, they sold it and returned East to find a home and shop. A Georgian house in St. Andrews suited perfectly.

HAS ENGLISH PIECES

Since her husband's death, Mrs. Wainman-Wood has continued handling only the beautiful English craftsmanship from before the 1870s.

Their World and Ours

by Donald Hilton

This is the second in a series of articles by Dr. Hilton, an assistant professor at Bishop's University's Department of Biological Sciences, dealing with insects and their relatives. During the summer, people have all kinds of encounters with insects on their plants, pets and themselves. Some of these insects are pests and need to be controlled, while others are beneficial and should be encouraged. Dr. Hilton is writing about important insect pests of the Townships, discusses their biology and control and from time to time will consider some of the more beneficial insects. If you have any questions or observations, you may write Dr. Hilton, either care of The Record, or directly, at Bishop's University, Lennoxville.

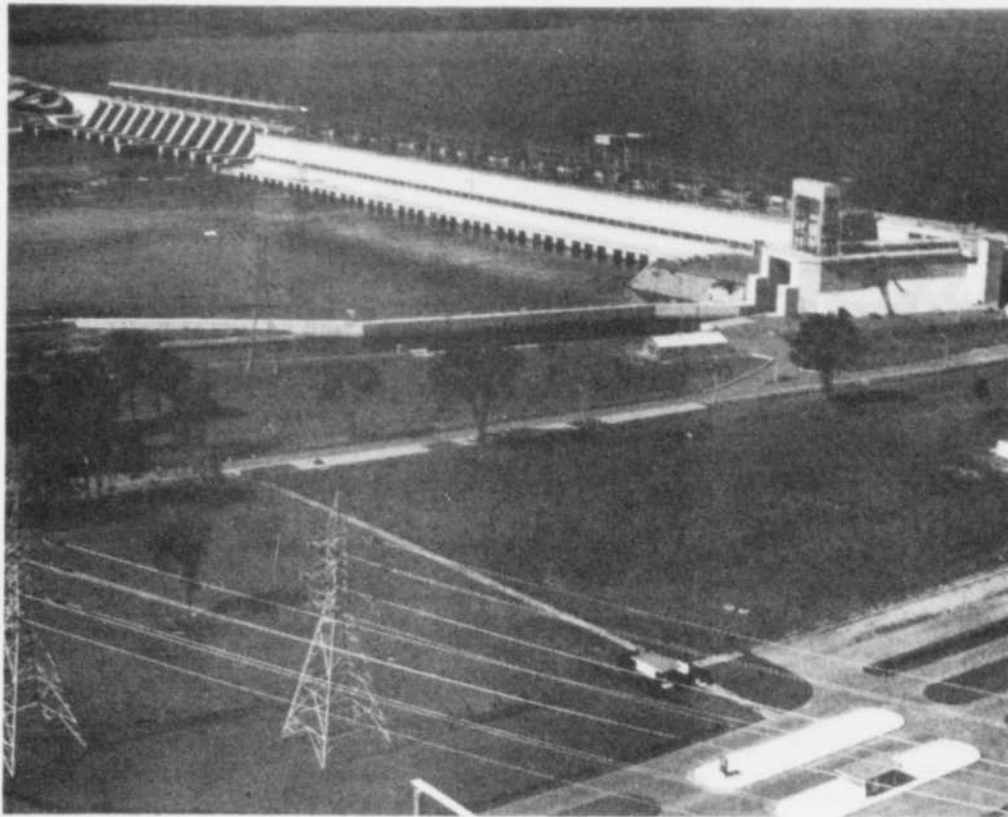

"Bees Do It Sweetly"

The above title is the wording on a T-shirt I have that is sold by F.W. Jones & Son Ltd., suppliers of beekeeping equipment. This quotation is a good example of double entendre. Since bees make honey out of flower nectar, and honey is a sweet liquid, it is obvious that bees are involved in "sweet" labors. Another, and somewhat indelicate, implied meaning is that bees copulate "sweetly". In fact, their sexual relationships are far from sweet, at least from the point of view of the male bee (drone).

Prior to taking up permanent residence on the hive, a virgin queen goes on a mating flight and mates with several drones. Following insemination, the reproductive organs of the male are literally torn out of his body (sometimes with an audible pop) as he disengages from the queen. Of course, this means death to the drone. Why should drones commit hara-kiri? Evolutionarily, it matters not one iota what happens to the drone after he has mated with the queen. It is only important for his genes to be passed on to his offspring since genes (the units of inheritance) determine the physical, physiological and behavioral characteristics of the next generation. Such characteristics are acted upon by the process of natural selection and determine who will live and, in turn, pass their genes on to succeeding generations (i.e. "the survival of the fittest").

Furthermore, it would be to the male's evolutionary advantage (as far as his genes are concerned) if he could promote the survival of his offspring. Some male animals such as primates, wolves and geese (to name a few) do this by assisting the female in feeding or protecting the young. Certain insects like the praying mantis accomplish the same ends by more drastic means. While the male mantis is perched on the back of the female during copulation, the female swivels her head around and proceeds to eat her mate, beginning with his head. "How macabre!" you might say. Nevertheless, such behavior fulfills two important functions. First, it removes the male's brain and prevents him from deciding to terminate copulation before he has fully inseminated the female. He has a patch of nervous tissue near his reproductive organs which coordinate their action and ensures that mating is completed after the brain is gone. Second, the male's body provides the female with a good protein supply at a time when she needs it most - as her eggs are developing. Thus, as in the case of the drone honeybee, the male is of no evolutionary use after mating and what better way to assist in the survival of your genes than by contributing your own superfluous body tissues to be incorporated into those of your children?

It has been said that the body of a plant or animal is Nature's way of making more sperm or eggs for the transfer of genes.

Hydro-Quebec sites open

Hydro-Quebec is again preparing to receive Quebecers wishing to visit its power facilities during the summer.

The growing number of visitors it has each year - 75,000 in 1978 - has led the utility to reopen the doors of some of its larger and more representative installations.

Thus this year's program of industrial visits includes the wind-powered generator on the Magdalen Islands and six powerhouses: Carillon, Rivière-des-Prairies, La Tuque, Manic 2, Manic 3 and Manic 5.

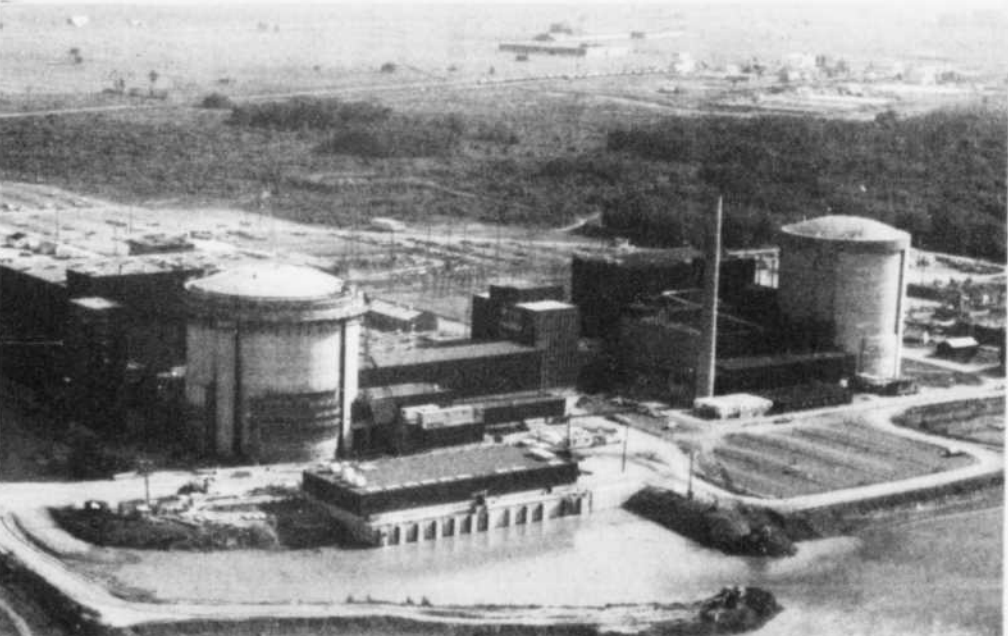

In addition Beauharnois and Gentilly power stations may be visited year round, and Tracy thermal power station and the research institute may be toured on request.

One of the program's objectives is to allow the public to become more knowledgeable about Hydro-Quebec. But it also aims at explaining electricity, sensitizing the public to energy matters, and providing Quebecers with an opportunity to visit various parts of the province they may not have seen before. The Ottawa River, St. Maurice River, North Shore and the outskirts of Montreal are just some of the places vacationers can add to their itinerary for a summer "at home".

Powerhouses are open every day of the week and guides are available. Visiting days and hours vary from site to site, but groups exceeding 10 should advise the public relations department of the region concerned.

Anyone interested can obtain more information on Hydro-Quebec's industrial visits or receive a leaflet on the facilities open this summer by telephoning (514) 285-1711, extension 8778, or by writing Hydro-Quebec, industrial visits, public relations, 75 Dorchester Boulevard West, Montreal, H2Z 1A4.

Shopping-mall habits challenge independents

TORONTO (CP) — "When I first got into this business, it was fun and exciting," said Helen Ellison, a clothing boutique owner. "Now, it's just bloody hard work."

She was lamenting the passing of the golden days of the independent retailers in the 1960s when everybody could hope for a piece of a constantly growing pie.

Today, the independent retailer is faced with slow economic growth, high inflation and the pull of shoppers to the large enclosed malls.

The malls helped spawn the growth of specialty clothing chains such as Dylex Ltd. of Toronto whose financial strength and fashion know-how have made it formidable competitors for both the independents and department stores.

The independent's share of the men's wear market slipped to 34 per cent from 44 per cent between 1972 and 1977. For women's wear, it slipped to 21 per cent from 25 per cent.

Picking up the lion's share of the market was the chain stores.

GROWTH STALLED
Sales by independent clothing stores have grown at half the rate of the chains since 1972.

For the small store, the temptation is strong to match the sales prices of larger competitors.

"There is simply no way that your average merchant can hold sales 10 months a year and still show a profit," said Ervin Enchin, co-owner of the House of David men's apparel in Guelph, Ont. "And this is what some of them are trying to do."

Another problem is that the small retailer does not have the same access to bank loans as do the large stores with their sophisticated financial systems.

"Many find they can get loans for expansion but not for operating income," said Pat Porth, head of the independent stores division of the Retail Council of Canada.

Mrs. Ellison said it is hard for the entrepreneur because management has become so sophisticated.

"The entrepreneur knows how to buy and sell, but now he spends his time going to accountants and bankers and filling out government forms," she said.

"I see the independent sinking, not growing."

ONUS ON SERVICE

Nevertheless, the small stores survive because they can offer personal service not available in the larger establishments.

"Our greatest strength is our ability to serve the customer in a conscientious way," said Jack Brown, owner of Brown's of Brantford, Ont., a ladies' and men's wear store.

"By department or chain store standards we're over-staffed. But people often don't get the service they feel they're entitled to in those stores."

Prairie farmers worry over late planting

WINNIPEG (CP) — Farmers are anxiously waiting for the weather to loosen its cold, wet grip on the Prairies so they can get on with the job of spring seeding.

In many areas, the sun has been playing an annoying game of peek-a-boo and most farmers need a week of warm, dry weather before they can undertake full-scale seeding operations.

But despite the weather-caused delays, there were no indications of panic among farmers contacted by telephone this week.

"We're really late," said Einar Loveseth who farms in the Viking area of east-central Alberta.

"It's been a very cold spring without much sunshine. I'm way behind what I usually am but we still have three weeks yet where we can still get the seed in."

Across the border in west-central Saskatchewan, Bob Bullock of Maidstone said the weather has been cool. But he expects crops in his area will be in by the first of June "unless we have more rain or something."

"We're late in comparison with the last couple of years but we're not really late yet I don't think."

CONDITIONS GET WORSE
Things are much worse further east in Saskatchewan.

"In this area literally nothing has been done yet," said Bob Gilmour of the Carrot River district of eastern Saskatchewan.

"The first tractor I saw moving was up in the Nipawin area and that's the very, very beginnings of anyone on the best land moving."

A farmer in the troubled Red River Valley of southern Manitoba where floodwater still covers thousands of acres of farmland, said conditions vary widely but seeding won't be general for some time.

"Where the water has moved off it might be ready to go in four or five days of good weather," said Leslie Forrester of Emerson near the Manitoba-North Dakota border.

"But some fields are still flooded and it could be another three weeks before they can seed. Some might not seed at all this year."

In the last few years, spring weather conditions have allowed much earlier seeding and some farmers had completed the annual chore by as early as the end of April.

PREDICT CROP CHANGES
With the delays being experienced this year, some agricultural officials are predicting changes in cropping practices with farmers opting for earliermaturing grains such as oilseeds.

Gilmour, who estimates it will be 10 days before a general start is made on seeding, said if there is a noticeable shift in his district which traditionally grows a lot of rapeseed, it will be away from the Argentine-type rapeseed to the earlier-maturing Polish varieties.

"There still will be a considerable amount of rapeseed grown but possibly a little shift into barley," he said.

Loveseth, who says he has been able to seed only about 60 acres of wheat so far, said his neighbors don't appear to be planning cropping changes yet.

"I don't believe the rapeseed acreage is going to increase like a lot of people thought," he said.

"They were talking like about nine or 10 million acres. I would be very surprised if it goes over eight."

Loveseth, who estimates only five per cent of farmers in his district have started seeding, said much of the delay this spring was due to poor runoff caused by last fall's heavy rain saturating the land.

He said no one is too concerned at this point.

"In three months you can raise a crop in this country so even if you didn't get it seeded until June you could still get a crop. A lot depends on the fall weather."

Bullock says one unusual development in his area this year is "for some reason or another, farmers are doing some aerial application seeding of rapeseed."

He said he guesses farmers have seeded 20-to-25 per cent of their crops around Maidstone where about a third of the crops normally are rapeseed.

"I would doubt very much if you will see much change in cropping here."

CHANGE CROPS
But Forrester says he expects many farmers in his area, particularly those most seriously affected by flooding, will change some of their traditional crops.

"There are some farmers that might not seed at all this year and those that do might be looking at an early-maturing crop like rapeseed or flax. I'll be putting in a little flax myself this year and it will be only the second time in my life that I've grown flax."

Forrester, who said that over the years a late spring often brings a late fall, which can be crucial to crop production, added that the

Parental attitudes, education, subject of information evening

By JANET ELEMENT

An information evening was held in the Asbestos-Danville-Shipton Elementary School Library on Thursday evening, May 10th. A large number of parents were present to listen to Doctor William Talley, an educator and psychologist at McGill University for the last eleven years. Dr. Talley's special area is in child development.

The chairman of the School Committee, John Millen, introduced Doctor Talley and Brian Woods, Head Teacher commented on the length of time Doctor Talley spends in the Eastern Townships with the Local School Board, Regional Board and Lennoxville Board in the testing services.

Dr. Talley told the meeting a bit of his background in Kentucky. He has taught at the elementary level, has been a high school counselor, and has taught in the under-graduate college of Psychology. At McGill, he primarily teaches in group therapy, psychological testing, adolescent development and auto-psychology. Dr. Talley explained that he comes to the Eastern Townships every spring to do observation and testing work in the above mentioned school boards and the Dixville and Butters Homes.

He thinks very highly of the Eastern Townships and has sent his son to Champlain College. He explained that Jefferson Davis, also from Kentucky, came to Montreal in exile from the South, and sent his two sons to college in Lennoxville.

Doctor Talley spoke on Parental Attitudes, their effects on children's education and on how to motivate children to learn. He described different kinds of prejudice both positive and negative. There can be prejudice against formal education, cultural ethnic prejudice, academic and vocational prejudice, and prejudice involving an overvaluation of formal education as opposed to experimental education.

One negative prejudice involves the placing of too much emphasis on one aspect of development. This can create a rebellion in a child and also causes children to daydream in school. A child can become very anxious and develop a very low conception of self. If the child's image of the value of education is not good, he may feel that the reward is not worth the effort. This can stifle curiosity and openness; young children are very curious by nature.

The positive prejudices involve giving a child a good attitude toward education. Many children are under great pressure at school, and this should be reduced at home. A child should be given greater expectations, and enthusiasm should be fostered in him. It is surprising, but some university students are not interested in anything. Parents should be enthusiastic since children model themselves after their parents. A child should be told that he is not being educated just for work, but for life which is more interesting and meaningful.

The learning process can be affected by negative perception. Learning is not affected just by ability; motivation is a tremendous factor. Children should be given good life experiences. They are known to have short term memory problems, but are highly verbal. The emotional health of the child is extremely important. If there is tension in the home, the child cannot be expected to learn, for he won't be able to concentrate on his work. A child should be encouraged and rewarded, even if only by means of a gold star or something similar; this stimulates the child to work. Study skills are very important. A child should be taught how to study in a systematic way.

The atmosphere of the home has an impact on how the child will perceive education in general.

At this point, a lengthy question-and-answer period followed. The meeting came to an end with doughnuts and coffee being served.

Distention problem

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 42-year-old woman, 5 feet 1, 124 pounds and I've always had a pouchy stomach. Now I'm distended from under the breast bone to the bladder area almost all the time. I exercise regularly and bicycle but I still look quite pregnant.

Four years ago I had a hemorrhoid operation and subsequently a lower GI study and was not advised of any problems. I've been through the cancer prevention center and was told I was in good health.

When I asked about bloating I was advised that some people are allergic to some foods but my diet is simple meat and potatoes — no rich foods. I probably eat a little more sugar than I need. My bowel movements are regular but I do have a gassy system and I feel nauseated at times.

I have stretch marks that I never had when I was pregnant. I would be very interested in your opinion and what course of action you feel I should take.

DEAR READER — Generalized distention of the degree you are describing has to be associated with the accumulation of gas in the colon. It comes from either swallowing air or the fermentation of incompletely digested foods and sometimes from both. About 10 percent of the general population does suffer from severe gas difficulties. Everyone has gas except it doesn't accumulate or isn't trapped in the digestive tube in such a way to cause the kind of problems you are describing.

I'm sure you eat something else besides meat and potatoes. Perhaps you use milk. A reasonable percentage of the adult population has milk intolerance because they can't split the lactose sugar in milk. It's a double sugar and has to be split into single sugars before it can be absorbed through the intestinal wall and into the bloodstream.

Anyone having the degree of difficulty you describe should see a specialist in gastroenterology. If you should have a food problem such as milk intolerance, it won't show anything at all on the X ray but your history of the type of food consumption and general characteristics will tell your doctor what the problem may be.

To give you more detailed information on such problems, I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-8, Controlling Gaseousness. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

In the meantime, I would suggest that you eliminate all milk and milk products, eliminate coffee, including decaffeinated products, tea, cocoa, chocolate and all soda water drinks of any kind.

I don't want you to stay off of milk for a long period of time because you might develop a calcium deficiency. Milk and milk products are our major source of calcium. It's all right to test yourself as I have suggested but please see your doctor for a more detailed examination and see if he can help you identify which foods are a problem.

If your difficulty should prove to be milk, there is an enzyme called Lact-Aid that you can add to milk which may solve this problem for you. You can get more information about it from SugarLo Company, 3540 Atlantic Avenue, Atlantic City, NJ 08404.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My father-in-law drinks a mixture of equal parts of honey, cider vinegar, black strap molasses and dry sherry wine and says it corrects deficiencies causing arthritis. I don't see how this could help arthritis. Am I wrong?

DEAR READER — No, you're right as rain. If it were that easy to relieve arthritis, the disease would have been cured long ago.

Osteoarthritis, the common form in middle-aged and older people, is not a deficiency disease. Often it's called wear and tear arthritis or degenerative arthritis associated with wearing, overuse or improper use of joints.

If your father-in-law enjoys his mixture, that's great but he shouldn't be deluded into thinking it's really correcting his arthritis.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-10, Osteoarthritis. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Ann Landers says

Don't blame the parents

Dear Ann Landers: My oldest sister's children are 11 and 15 years of age. They have yet to acknowledge a letter, a birthday gift, a graduation gift or a Christmas gift. We don't expect anything elaborate in the way of thanks. A card or a word or two written on a piece of scratch paper would please us enormously.

These children live 1,000 miles away. We love them dearly. They need many of the things we send and it gives us great pleasure to buy them. When we see the children we ask if they enjoyed the presents and they always say, "Oh, yes..." and then go into great detail about how thrilled they were to receive the package.

Whose responsibility is it to teach children to write thank-you notes? Shouldn't parents supply stationery and stamps and keep after the kids? Do teachers ever speak of this in class?

My husband says we should not send another gift until we receive an acknowledgment for the last one. What do you say? — Hurt By The Silence

Dear Hurt: I agree with your husband. Children who never say thank you and continue to receive gifts learn that it is all right to be "takers."

Don't blame the parents if children are remiss. You can buy kids all the stationery in the world and send self-addressed stamped envelopes requesting a reply, but if the kids don't want to answer, they won't. Some teachers make it a class project on Mother's Day or Valentine's Day to send something to Mom — in which case every kid brings home something. It's awfully nice, but unless a child wants to say thank you for gifts received, he will manage not to. My advice is to cut off the gifts for a couple of years — then try again on a modest scale and see what happens.

Dear Ann: Your answer to "Sad in the Shadows" could not have been better. You were perfectly right to say, "If a man does not believe he has the strength to honor the vow of celibacy, he should not take it. After he has taken the vow, if he discovers the celibate life is too great a sacrifice, he should turn in his collar and change professions." You didn't state approximately the number who have left. Have you any idea?

To the Catholic priests and nuns who have abandoned the religious life, I say, thank God for that. If you were not able to make the sacrifice and honor your vows, you were not suited for the vocation to start with and the Church is better off without you.

We are all tempted in our daily lives, regardless if we are single, married or members of a religious order. The secret is to fight temptation — and win.

When "Sad in the Shadows" realized she was falling in love with a priest, she should have taken a cold shower and looked for a priest who resembled Barry Fitzgerald in "Going My Way". — Canadian Reader

Dear C.R.: I'm glad you understood my response. Some readers interpreted it as a slam against the Catholic church. Nothing could be further from the truth.

According to Father Andrew Greeley, professor and sociologist at the University of Arizona, approximately 6,000 priests and 25,000 nuns have left their religious vocations in the last decade. I've said it before and I'll say it again, I believe that eventually Catholic priests and nuns will be permitted to marry... and I hope it happens in our lifetime.

Is alcoholism ruining your life? Know the danger signals and what to do. Read the booklet, "Alcoholism — Hope and Help," by Ann Landers. Enclose 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Y's Men's track meet continues to fund club projects

SHERBROOKE (FJM) — The 37th Sherbrooke Y's Men Annual Eastern Townships Interscholastic Track and Field Meet will be held at the Alexander Galt track in Lennoxville on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Teams from Alexander Galt, Richmond Regional, Massey Vanier, Bishop's College School and St. Andrew's College will be vying for ribbons and trophies in what has become perhaps the best known event of its kind in the region.

Although the English school boards have indicated that enrollment in most schools is dropping, track meet organizer Bob Jarjour says this has not yet made any dent in participation in the meet. The club has had to turn down requests from schools in Montreal and the South Shore interested in taking part simply because the increase in numbers would make the meet unmanageable, he added.

Jarjour, who has run the meet together with Curt Bishop since 1960, says the establishment of the three large regional schools in Richmond, Lennoxville and Cowansville has made organization work somewhat easier, since he now deals with five rather than 15 schools.

The meet was run in conjunction with the Hi-Y Club, a boys' organization active in Sherbrooke until 1970 and closely connected to the Y's Men's Club in its time. Jarjour said the sudden loss of organizational and practical help from the Hi-Y boys was a setback at the time.

but that the Y's Men have managed quite well on their own since then.

The Y's Men Club in Sherbrooke which was founded in 1923, has dropped in membership from 60 ten years ago to only 12 today but has not cut back on the effort it directs toward its central annual project of raising funds for Shore Acres, a day camp on Little Lake Magog open ten weeks each summer for children from Sherbrooke. The Club has run the camp since 1926.

Y's Men spokeswoman Betty Ross, describes the club as a "work club" rather than a "social club" which meets once a week for dinner and conversation, and contributes money to community projects on the side. She says the Club raises about $2,000 through advertising in the track meet brochure and also earns money for sponsoring club activities through their annual sale of nuts and party mix.

She stressed that club members are involved in running activities at Shore Acres, which gives 55 children a two-week vacation each year. The camp usually receives 85 per cent French speaking and 15 per cent English speaking children. Another major activity sponsored by the club is the swimming classes for remedial children held at the YMCA in Sherbrooke and at the Bishop's University sports complex.

The Y's Men Track Meet is traditionally a family affair providing good entertainment. A canteen will serve food at the Alexander Galt track throughout the day next Saturday.

The 37th Annual Eastern Townships Interscholastic Track & Field Meet is organized by Sherbrooke's Y's Men's Club

Thousands mob Canadiens along parade route

MONTREAL (CP) — Setting records is nothing new to Montreal Canadiens, but the one they established Wednesday over the eight-kilometre route of the Stanley Cup victory parade came under difficult circumstances.

After trouble getting their open float started, the Canadiens, who won their fourth consecutive Cup title Monday night with a 4-1 National Hockey League victory over New York Rangers, switched to an open-sided sight-seeing bus and covered the route from their Forum home to City Hall in 90 minutes. No one could remember a quicker trip.

Montreal Urban Community police estimated the crowd lining the route to greet the champions at more than 100,000, but the Canadiens had found the answer to piercing the throng in riding in one vehicle.

In recent parades, players, coach

Scotty Bowman and other club personnel have ridden in pairs in jeeps, more vulnerable to being surrounded and stopped by admiring fans.

"It's unbelievable," said right winger Mario Tremblay. "There were people shouting, people crying, people pulling their hair."

"It's really unbelievable to see everybody in the street to cheer us. This is what winning the Stanley Cup is all about."

about."

FEW GOT INSIDE

Once at City Hall, the players mingled at a reception with those few fans lucky enough to make their way in, while thousands more milled outside, cheering whenever one of their heroes ventured to the edge of a second-floor sun deck to wave and return shouts.

They downed oversized sandwiches and signed autographs while waiters coursed through the crowd, topping up glasses of champagne.

The Stanley Cup sat in an empty flower box lining the roof, in view of the crowd below, which broke into cheering and chants of "We're No. 1" when one or another of the players hoisted the trophy aloft.

No outburst was greater than that which greeted Guy Lafleur's appearance.

A beaming Mayor Jean Drapeau oversaw the signing of the guest book before being asked if he didn't grow tired of playing host to the Canadiens virtually each spring.

"Once a year is all right," replied Drapeau in a mock-serious tone.

The Canadiens were celebrating their 22nd Cup title. They went to a party Wednesday night to end a gruelling season of 96 regular-season and playoff games.

short notes...

Bird Fidrych disabled again

DETROIT (AP) — Mark (The Bird) Fidrych is back on the 21-day disabled list.

Detroit Tigers made the move on their sore-armed pitcher Wednesday after he was examined by doctors at Ford Hospital.

"Mark is free of pain in his shoulder and his old injury is apparently healed," said Dr. Edwin R. Guise Jr. "But because of his long period of inactivity, he has a weakness of the muscles in his upper arm and shoulder."

"He will now go through a program of exercises with weights and resistance devices to restore his strength."

Simons dubious of Memorial win

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Jim Simons has slim hopes of keeping his title in the Memorial golf tournament that began today at Muirfield Village because of recurring left shoulder problems — a wrestling injury that's bothered him since college.

He's tried almost everything to cure the problem, including a visit to Toronto to see Dr. James Bateman.

"He's one of the best in the world," Simons said Wednesday. "He said an operation wasn't necessary. He felt with isometric exercises, it would tighten up. What he doesn't understand, you don't want to tighten up your muscles in golf."

Monaco GP qualifiers underway

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Qualifying for the 37th Monaco Grand Prix begins today with 24 Formula 1 entries battling for the 20 unusually-critical starting positions. And, says world champion Mario Andretti, "every position is a milestone."

"Monaco stands out as the circuit in which it's almost impossible to overtake," Andretti said.

The Grand Prix racers will have only two 90-minute sessions around the streets of the Riviera principality, one Thursday and one Saturday, to determine the grid. Two other one-hour sessions provide the only practice through the narrow, twisting streets lined with guardrails and curbs.

Cruyff debuts with Aztecs

Midfielder Johan Cruyff made an impressive debut for Los Angeles Aztecs in a North American Soccer League game Wednesday night, although there was no immediate dividend in crowd support in Pasadena, Calif.

The Dutchman scored two goals in the first seven minutes to lead the Aztecs to a 3-0 win over Rochester Lancers before 9,735 fans in the 100,000-seat Rose Bowl.

In three previous home games, the Aztecs averaged 6,800 fans.

Yanks' ex-manager to settle

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Billy Martin slipped into town quietly on the eve of a planned meeting today with the sports writer whose black eye and chipped teeth threaten to terminate Martin's once and, maybe, future career with New York Yankees.

Martin was to settle with Ray Hagar the civil suit filed after the former Yankees' manager allegedly slugged Hagar during a Nov. 10 interview.

Nordic team protests housing

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Key members of the United States Olympic ski team may be housed outside the Olympic Village during the 1980 Winter Games because of what team officials call a potential health problem.

The move would go against expressed wishes of an International Olympic Committee panel, which has inspected the village and pronounced it adequate. The ski team is the first U.S. team to announce it will use other quarters.

Bennett returns to Flames

ATLANTA (AP) — Curt Bennett, who was traded to St. Louis Blues two years ago from Atlanta, has returned to the Flames for Bobby Simpson, the National Hockey League team announced Wednesday. Bennett, 31, an eight-year veteran, played for six years with the Flames before going to St. Louis.

Canadian volleyballers off

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's national men's and women's volleyball teams embark May 30 on a 20-day exhibition tour to China, Korea and Japan to bone up for the Pan-American Games in July.

Ian Stoddart, executive-director of the Canadian Amateur Volleyball Association, said Wednesday both teams have undergone complete roster changes since the Montreal Olympics in 1976 and are still in the development stage.

Quebec protest bears fruit

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Quebec Ice Hockey Federation's charge that the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association lacks leadership in hockey development has already produced results, says Arthur Lessard, executive director of the federation.

"They have indicated they really mean to bring some action in order to bring corrections to this situation of hockey in Canada," Lessard told the association's annual meeting on Wednesday.

On Monday the federation threatened to withdraw from the CAHA unless it was given veto power.

CAHA BANS BODYCHECKING

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has forbidden body checking in age levels below pee-wee.

The association also announced at the association's annual meeting Wednesday a four-man committee to study a federal report on minor hockey.

The report, critical of CAHA's player development program, was written by Mr. Justice John Arie of the Supreme Court of Canada.

and submitted March 10 to Iona Campagnolo, then-minister of state, fitness and amateur sports.

However, Gord Renwick of Cambridge, Ont., past-chairman of CAHA, told a news conference the association was positive about the report but that he was "a little critical of the constant barrage of inquiries thrown at hockey from both the federal and provincial governments."

"The government goes out and throws $20 million to the pros, but we couldn't squeeze an extra $30,000 or $40,000 out of them."

Earlier this year, Campagnolo announced a plan to offer $18.5 million in Loto Canada earnings to Canadian cities acquiring National Hockey League franchises.

SUGGESTIONS COSTLY Renwick said that if the CAHA implemented all of the programs suggested in the report, "we could be talking $10 million."

The association's new bodychecking rule will be enforced with two-minute penalties.

In another move to reduce injuries, CAHA's representative with the Canadian Standards Association, Albert Watkins of Peterborough, Ont., said hockey helmets and face masks must meet CSA approval beginning March 1, 1980.

column

In 1941, the championship game of the National Football League pitted the Chicago Bears - the notorious monsters of the midway-against the Washington Redskins, who were led by the amazing quarterback Sammy Baugh. The game was a sellout in anticipation of an exciting duel. However, it was not to be, as the Bears swamped Baugh and his mates by a staggering 73-0 tally. In the gloomy and embarrassed Washington dressing room afterwards, Baugh was collared by a horde of sportswriters, all of whom wanted to know the reasons for the slaughter. One scribe, who had done his homework religiously, questioned sad Sammy about a play early in the game when the Skins, who were trailing 7-0 early in the first quarter, drove to the Bears 20-yard line and appeared to be on the threshold of tying things up. However, an errant Baugh pass was swallowed up by an eager Bear, who returned the interception for a touchdown which signalled the end.

Reporter: "Sammy, that play seemed to turn the whole game around."

Baugh: "Yep."

Reporter: "If you had completed the pass instead of having it intercepted, what do you think the score would have been?"

Baugh: "73-7."

The turning point of the Canadiens-Rangers series seemed to me to be when the Rangers allowed a weak Hab goal in the second game of the series. Up until that point the young Rangers had led 2-0 in the game. After the goal, Les Glorieux exploded for six straight bombs past a beleaguered John Davidson and the rest, of course is history. The Habs showed their customary class throughout this rather anticlimactic final. Bob Gainey deservedly received the Conn Smyth trophy for his heroics, and the stars and lesser lights (Langway, Engblom et al) came through with clutch performances. Perhaps the only sidelight of the inevitable victory was the classless way in which the fickle Habs fans treated their heroes. Ok, so Ken Dryden was not at his best during this playoff season. Maybe he is pompous, boring and egotistical. The fact remains that he is above all, a winner. It would be hard to imagine the Philadelphia fans (who are some of the most notorious front-runners in the world; a few years ago they booed Santa Claus at the Spectrum) coming down on their beloved Flyers the way the Montreal fans did to the Habs-especially when the Habs have maintained the standard of excellence for decades. Anyway, that's it for hockey for this season. Thank God.

This story was related to me by Leon Harris, who is probably the all-time devoted Expo fan (apologies to Mike Hallam). Larry Bearnarth, who until recently was the pitching coach for the Expos, used to toil for the New York Mets in the early years when they won the hearts of New Yorkers with their exciting, if inept play on the diamond. How bad were the Metsies in their formative years? In 1962, the Mets finished the year with a record of 40 wins and 120 losses - a cool 60% behind the league-leading San Francisco Giants. As we all know, the manager of the Mets was none other than Charles Dillon Stengel. Casey stories are legendary. Anyway, it seems the Mets and Giants were going at it at the fabled Polo Grounds and the Giants were leading 11-6 in the top of the ninth inning. Casey summoned Bearnarth from the bullpen to mop up. Bearnarth set down the Giants in order. Incredibly, the Mets scored five runs in the bottom of the ninth to tie it up. Again Bearnarth set down the Giants in the tenth, eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth. At this point, his arm was close to falling apart completely. In the sixteenth inning, Bearnarth had to face the meat of the San Fran lineup which included Willie Mays, Orlando Cepeda and Willie McCovey.

Mays opened the inning with a double, Cepeda walked and McCovey followed with a smash up the middle. However, for some unexplained reason, Mays was held up at third base, thus loading them up. Bearnarth was glaring at the Mets bench beckoning Casey to take him out. Stengel ambled out to the mound and uttered one piece of advice to Bearnarth which went, "Tra-la-la." Puzzled, the big right-hander nevertheless induced the next hitter to line into a triple play. Inspired, the Mets won the game in their half 12-11. The Mets locker-room was bedlam. Amid the celebration, Bearnarth strolled over to Casey and asked him the meaning of the tra-la-la statement. "Simple" Stengel said without missing a beat, "That's my signal for the triple play."

Rogers, Expos continue win streak

By TERRY SCOTT
MONTREAL (CP) — Righthander Steve Rogers of Montreal Expos walked a tightrope through the heart of Pittsburgh Pirates' batting order Wednesday but unlike many of his fellow pitchers, he was around at the finish to tell the tale.

Not only that, he could boast of an eight-hit, 3-0 National League baseball shutout, even though the Pirates had the leadoff batter on base in six of nine innings.

Omar Moreno had three of those leadoff hits but twice he died at third base when Pittsburgh's fearsome duo of Dave Parker and Willie Stargell failed to deliver a hit in eight plate appearances.

"Any time Moreno is on base that often, with the big guns behind him, then you've got to be lucky," said

Rogers. Tonight, they were hitting it right at somebody.

That happened in most of the innings that the Pirates mounted a threat, but in the eighth it took a diving grab of Stargell's grounder by second baseman Rodney Scott to preserve Montreal's 1-0 lead.

GREAT PLAY

"Rodney made a great play," lauded Rogers. "That play changed the whole complexion of the game."

Until that point, a run-scoring triple by Tony Perez after Scott had beat out a bunt in the fourth inning, was the only break in a string of scoreless innings fashioned by Rogers, 4-2, and Pirates starter John Candelaria, 3-3, and reliever Kent Tekulve.

The Expos promptly added a pair of insurance runs in the eighth when Andre Dawson and Scott singled and both scored — Dawson on an error by Tekulve and Scott when Warren Cromartie snapped a 0-for-10 slump with a single.

"That was an exciting ball game," said Montreal manager Dick Williams. "I don't know about you guys but I was excited watching it from the dugout."

"Moreno's got some stroke, hasn't he? He's liable to hit .360 with his speed."

The 25-year-old centre fielder's speed also resulted in a sixth-inning stolen base, the 158th of his career, tying him with Pie Traynor for eighth place on the all-time Pirates stolen base list.

Rogers stymied Pittsburgh's big guns in spite of feeling a sharp twinge in his back in the fourth inning which lasted for the rest of the game.

Rangers' Oliver hammers out 7-2 win

The first clue that Al Oliver was in for an extraordinary night came in batting practice before Texas Rangers met Minnesota Twins in an American League baseball game Wednesday.

After hitting three home runs and driving in four runs to spark the Rangers to a 7-2 win over the Twins, Oliver said:

"I hit one out of the park that broke the bat; another one broke the bat and hit the wall. I felt super strong."

The 11-year veteran hovered near the 400 mark the first month of the season but had been in a mini-slump lately. He had nine hits in his 48 latest atbats going into Wednesday's series-ender with Minnesota.

"In April I was embarrassing the other guys on the team because I was getting all the hits," he said. "In May, they've been embarrassing me. But this game was great. I hope I'm back on the track again."

Elsewhere, Cleveland Indians beat Toronto Blue Jays 4-3, Baltimore Orioles downed Boston Red Sox 5-2, Milwaukee Brewers nipped California Angels 1-0, Detroit Tigers defeated New York Yankees 4-3 and Chicago White Sox topped Oakland A's 6-1. Kansas City and Seattle were not scheduled.

SCORED HOMERS
All of Texas' runs came on home runs. Oliver and Pat Putnam hit two-run homers in the first. Mike Jorgensen hit a one-run homer in the fourth, and Oliver made curtain calls for solo homers in the fifth and eighth.

INDIANS 4 Blue Jays 3
Wayne Garland, who made only six appearances last season before undergoing surgery for a torn rotator cuff in his shoulder, allowed four singles for his first complete game since 1977 as the Indians nipped the Blue Jays 4-3 and two of the Toronto runs were unearned.

ORIOLES 5 Red Sox 2

Pat Kelly's first home run of the season, a three-run drive in a pinch-hitting role, ruined a complete-game effort by Bob Stanley and came after Billy Smith's one-out infield hit and an error by third baseman Butch

Hobson.

BREWERS 1 Angels 0

Paul Molitor scored the game's only run on Don Aase's bases-loaded wild pitch with two out in the seventh inning and Billy Travers hurled a sixhitter for his second shutout.

North Hatley Legion looking good

By GUS HAIG

The North Hatley Legion is making noises that they will be the team to beat as the Mississippi Softball League heads into its fourth week. After an opening-day loss at the hands of the Army Navy Air Force, the Legion has romped over five straight opponents to take over first place in Division 1. Over the weekend North Hatley swept a pair of games from the Ayer's Cliff Reds by scores of 3-0 and 7-1. The wins, coupled with the Golden Lion Pub's split of a doubleheader with ANAF, catapulted the Legion to the early lead in the standings.

In North Hatley on Sunday, Jack Bruun pitched a four-hitter in the opener as son Steve and Andre Call blasted home runs. In the nightcap, Bob Lamey smashed a pair of round-trippers, and Bruun again was superb, allowing just three hits. The Reds Billy Goodsell was tagged with both losses as his record dropped to 3-5.

In Lennoxville on Sunday, Bryan Perrault was the hero for the Pub as he allowed just four hits in the opener. Perrault helped his cause as he drove in both runs to break a scoreless tie. Only Danny Westman's home run in the last inning of the first game prevented a shutout. However, the ANAF came back in the second tilt to win a wild one by a 9-8 count. Bruce Hodge provided the offensive spark for the winners as he went two for two with three runs batted in. Stan Cathcart picked up his second win of the year against two losses. Mike Hallam, despite a perfect game at the plate, took the loss. Dave Shields was three for three in a losing effort.

In other games over the weekend, Waterville and Sawyerville split a pair. Waterville won the first game 8-5, while Sawyerville rebounded to win 10-5 in the second. In the opener, Wayne Westman's homer proved to be the difference as Ian Warcup evened his pitching record at 1-1. Sawyerville, in the second contest, on the strength of Dan Lachance's hitting and Ricky Hodge's hurling, salvaged the split.

Elsewhere on Sunday, Bill's Country Kitchen and Huntingville traded wins, The Kitchen dropping the first 7-6, before whipping Huntingville 8-3 in the second. Terry Harron and Larry Brazel helped Alan Bradley earn his second victory of the year in the opener, while Mario Carrier aided his brother Alain (who picked up his initial win of the young campaign) as he belted a homer in the second.

In perhaps the finest pitching exhibition of this season, Denis Boulet of the Ayer's Cliff Blues twirled a no-hitter against Compton as the Blues won 4-0. Ron Haseltine was the victim of non-support as his record dipped to 1-3. Claude Dupuis gave Boulet all the cushion he needed, going two for three in that contest.

In upcoming games this week, Army Navy travels to Sawyerville tonight to do battle, while Compton will try to upset North Hatley tomorrow evening.
