Blaikie says Mulroney undermining Clark

MONTREAL (CP) — Charges by Progressive Conservative national president Peter Blaikie that an anti-Joe Clark faction has seized the Quebec wing of the party got a stiff rebuke Sunday from former leadership candidate Brian Mulroney.

Blaikie said a "certain group" — "I won't name anybody and you can draw your own conclusions" — wants to control the provincial executive so it can decide who goes as delegates to the Tories' national convention in Winnipeg next January.

That convention will likely be asked to either give Clark another vote of confidence or call for a leadership convention.

Mulroney, who lost the leadership battle to Clark in 1976 and now is president of Iron Ore Co. of Canada Ltd., reacted quickly to Blaikie's accusations.

"Instead of stirring up suspicions, the national president, whose mandate is to maintain unity and harmony within the party, should have the courage to publicly identify the people he's accusing," he said.

Blaikie never mentioned Mulroney in his comments to reporters at the close of the provincial Conservative association's weekend convention, but it was clear whose loyalty he was questioning.

He saw proof of an anti-Clark cabal in the election of Ed Ross and Jean-Yves Lortie to vice-presidential posts. Both are Mulroney partisans and they beat opponents who favor Clark.

Morin seeks Yankee trade links

QUEBEC (CP) — Jacques-Yvan Morin, Quebec's new intergovernmental affairs minister, leaves today for a four-day visit to several New England states in an attempt to stimulate economic links between the province and the United States.

One area of discussion is to be further sales of surplus electricity to the U.S. as well as the possibility of attracting American financing for accelerated development of the province's hydroelectric power.

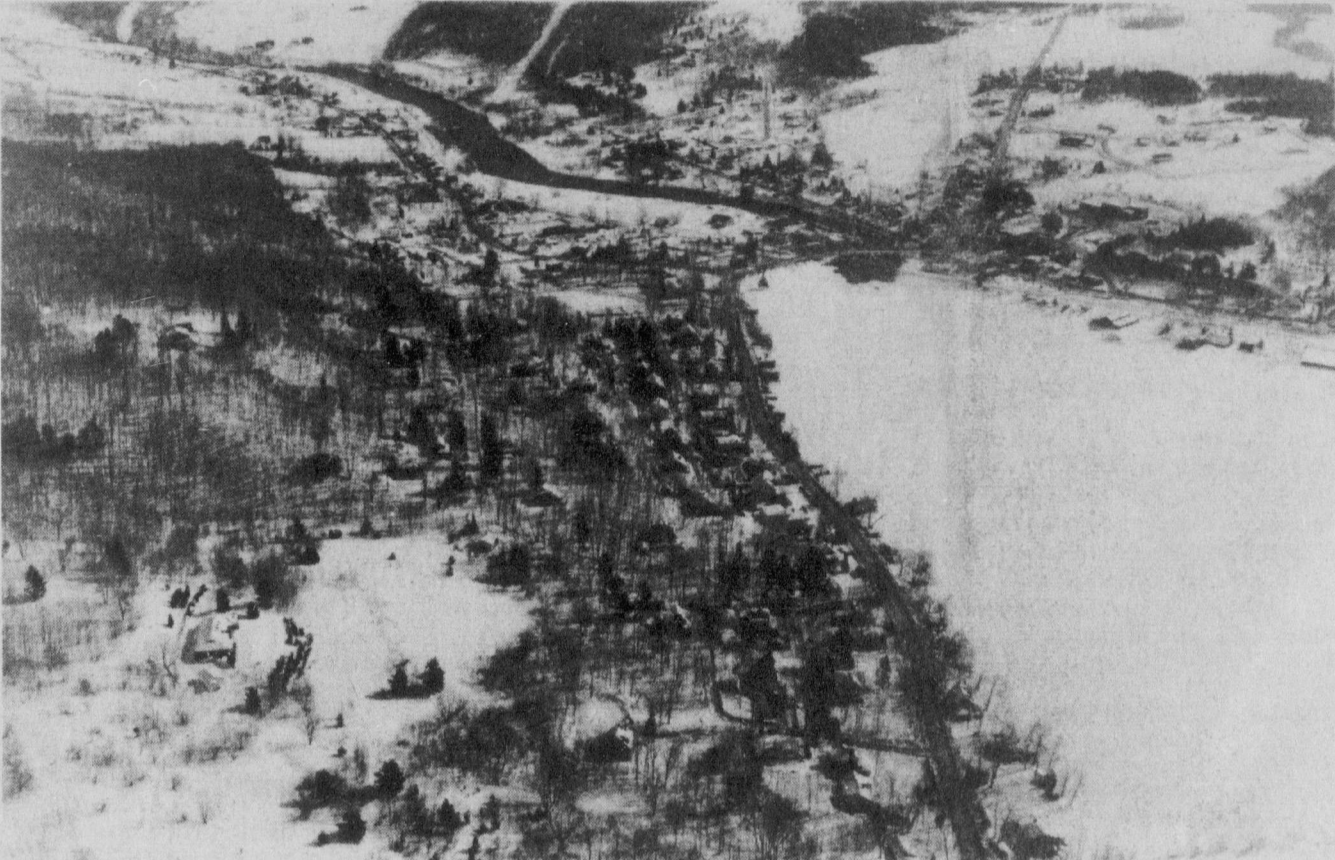

Another topic will be the problem of acid rain which has caused ecological problems in water systems in both Quebec and a number of New England states.

Morin, 50, is a graduate of both Harvard University and Cambridge University. Before his election to the Quebec national assembly in 1973, Morin worked 15 years as a professor of international and constitutional law and served as a member of the International Arbitration Court in The Hague for four years.

"Good sense makes it a priority to strengthen our relations with the U.S.," Morin said when he was appointed two weeks ago.

The effects of the economic recession on Quebec make it essential for the province to reorient "its external relations policy with the goal of increasing exchanges with our commercial partners," said Morin who also holds the post of vice-premier.

"Historically, Quebecers have maintained solid links with their neighbors to the south and the reinforcement of these ties can only serve the mutual interest of both Quebec and the U.S., especially as concerns commercial and cultural exchanges."

North Hatleyites hit Gabr on zoning

Businessman Saad Gabr has run afoul of a group of North Hatley citizens once again because of alleged violations of the municipal code. Led by Robert Gagnon, the owner of the Hatley Inn, the group has complained about Gabr's use of two residential buildings for office purposes. The two buildings, designed and zoned as residential, house, according to Gagnon, the offices for Gabr's fast developing financial empire.

Broken wheel derails freight train

HILLSDALE, Ont. (CP) — CP Rail officials have identified a broken wheel as the cause of the derailment Sunday of a freight train carrying dangerous chemicals that sent hundreds of residents from their homes in this rural part of central Ontario.

CP Rail spokesman Paul Thurston said today the wheel was on the fourth car from the engine, the first to derail, which was on a flatcar carrying steel.

He said because the fire is still burning, it will be some time before metallurgical specialists can examine the car to determine why the wheel broke.

The CP Rail train left the track and caught fire near this community 30 kilometres west of Orillia, recalling the events of November, 1979, when another CP Rail train laden with hazardous chemicals derailed and caused the evacuation of almost 250,000 residents of Mississauga, Ont.

While Sunday's accident was on a much smaller scale, there were similarities. As in Mississauga, no deaths or injuries were reported although the potential for disaster existed.

Dr. David Korn, Simcoe County medical officer of health, announced Sunday night a mandatory evacuation order for an area within an eight-kilometre radius of the accident.

Police estimate there are about 1,200 people within that rural area, but officials said it was hard to tell how many responded to the evacuation. One officer said 80 per cent had been evacuated six hours after the order was issued and policemen reported that most people were co-operative.

Officials at the accident site, about 10 kilometres northwest of Hillsdale, watched over the wreck as it continued to burn throughout the night. In particular, they were worried about a car carrying hydrofluoric acid.

The hydrofluoric tanker was at the bottom of a multi-car pile-up of burning box cars. The most dangerous aspect of the accident wasn't the fire itself but the heat from the fire, which officials said could cause the pressurized hydrofluoric car to rupture and spread its toxic contents as far as one kilometre away.

Korn said if the tanker ruptured and exploded, it could come down in the form of a deadly mist. If that happened, he said, "there would be the risk of death."

Hydrofluoric acid, which has a sharp, penetrating odor, burns the skin and eyes and irritates a person's respiratory system. The chemical is commonly used in manufacturing for such things as glass etching.

Korn and other officials who were called to the site — including Ontario Solicitor General George Taylor — said Sunday there were no indications the hydrofluoric tanker was leaking and added that the evacuation was called only as a precaution.

Other cargo on the train included hydrochloric acid, propane, butane, fuel oil, naphtha methyl alcohol and general cargo such as shoe polish.

Leaders eye small Salvador vote

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — With both campaign violence and the fighting between leftist guerrillas and government forces increasing, politicians predict a light vote for the March 28 election of a constituent assembly in El Salvador.

Retired major Roberto D'Abuisson, the ultra-rightist party leader wounded in a guerrilla ambush Saturday, said in an interview last week he expects 700,000 persons to vote, or 35 per cent of the estimated two million people of voting age.

David Trejos of President Jose

Napoleon Duarte's centrist Christian Democrat party said 500,000 would be a big turnout.

D'Abuisson, who leads the four-month-old National Republican Alliance, or ARENA, was attacked near San Salvador's Ilopango Airport. Doctors said he was shot through the upper right chest, but aides took him away from the hospital after he was treated, and one close associate said the wound was not serious.

Two other incidents of campaign violence were reported during the weekend. Two truckloads of men attacked the ARENA headquarters in San Salvador with grenades and automatic weapons Friday, wounding four people. Guerrillas attacked a Christian Democratic motorcade in Usulután province Saturday, but nobody was hurt.

The leftist guerrillas have vowed to disrupt the elections, which their parties are boycotting. They contend that the army is going to rig the voting and would murder any candidates they put forward. Five top leftist leaders were assassinated in late 1980, and nobody has ever been charged with the killings.

The Christian Democrats and five rightist parties including ARENA are participating. Local politicians and foreign observers predict the Christian Democrats will win a plurality but not the 31 seats needed for a majority in the 60-seat assembly.

The National Conciliation party, which fronted for a succession of military governments from 1962 until the 1979 coup, also is expected to finish well.

D'Abuisson predicted the Christian Democrats will finish first, followed by the National Conciliation party and then ARENA.

The assembly is to choose a provisional government to succeed the junta, draft a new constitution and decide the procedure for election of a president and national legislature next year.

The last election acknowledged by all sides to have been free of fraud took place in 1928. Communists won control of the legislature, and a military coup followed.

Puerto Ricans take credit in Manhattan explosions

NEW YORK (AP) — Four explosions went off within an hour Sunday night at financial institutions in Lower Manhattan, including the New York and American stock exchanges, police said. The Puerto Rican nationalist group FALN claimed responsibility.

Damage was confined to windows and doors, said Sgt. Edward Leshack of police public information, and no injuries were reported.

"High-level" explosive devices were placed outside the doors of the New York Stock Exchange at 20 Broad Street, the American Stock Exchange at 6 Wall Street, the Merrill Lynch Building at 1 Liberty Plaza, and the Chase Manhattan Bank at 1 Chase Plaza, Leshack said.

Sgt. Leroy Barr of public information said the first explosion came at 11:40 p.m. at the Merrill Lynch building and after that, "they just started coming from all over."

He said the remnants of explosive devices were removed by police from the blast sites, and will be analysed by bomb experts.

Windows at the New York Stock Exchange and in buildings across the street were shattered by the blasts. At the American Stock Exchange, the blast blew out windows plus the metal bars protecting them. Glass lay on the sidewalk at each site.

Twenty minutes after the explosions began the Associated Press received an anonymous telephone call from a man who spoke with an accent, claiming to be with the FALN.

Eastern guilty of negligence in Brome derailment

By John McCaghey
SWEETSBURG WARD — Eastern Railway Siding Construction Ltd., of Ville St. Laurent, was found guilty of criminal negligence causing the death of Guy Gagne in West Brome on June 21, 1979.

Provincial Court Judge Claude Leveille, in a 14-page judgement, ruled the company had shown "wanton or reckless disregard for the lives and safety of other people" at the conclusion of his summation of the proof. The three days of the trial began in August and concluded January 15.

Gagne, 35, of Ste. Julie, an employee of Norwood Building Supplies in Boucherville, was killed instantly when his parked semi-trailer was projected into the path of an eastbound CP Rail freight train at the level crossing in West Brome about noon on June 21, 1979, when it was struck from the rear by an Eastern Railway vehicle driven by Gilles Barrette.

The impact derailed 17 cars including 14 containing toxic materials which spilled into the then-unpolluted South branch of the Yamaska River. The village was evacuated as a safety precaution.

Judge Leveille said testimony provided by Eastern's maintenance supervisor, Guy Gaboriault, concerning upkeep on the truck adapted for use on rail tracks to pick up used sleepers could not have been accurate. The reports filed by the defence suggested corrective work had been done on the brakes as well as certain gauges, including the speedometer in days before the mishap, yet truck driver Barrette said neither the speedometer nor the brake safety buzzer were working the day of the accident.

The judge noted Barrette had been hired as a laborer and had been driving the truck for approximately two months. Although he held a chauffeur's permit it did not allow him to handle the dead weight on the unit's license. The truck was loaded with used ties as Barrette was going to Montreal to have the crane repaired.

Judge Leveille considered expert testimony on the state of the vehicle's brakes and noted contrary to norms specified under the highway code it did not have any on the front axle, and the company had failed to inform the Ministry of Transport of the conversion.

He recalled testimony by Maurice Jolley, a retired trucker and resident of West Brome, who saw the truck pass and said it couldn't have stopped in time if the brakes had been in perfect order due to its high speed. He also noted Barrette had tried to gear down but couldn't as his engine was turning too fast. Barrette opened the door of his truck about 500 feet before the point of impact and leapt to safety. It was estimated the truck was proceeding at between 50 and 55 miles per hour in a 30 mph zone.

Other expert testimony revealed the vehicle could have stopped prior to the accident with the existing brakes if it had been driven at the posted speed limit.

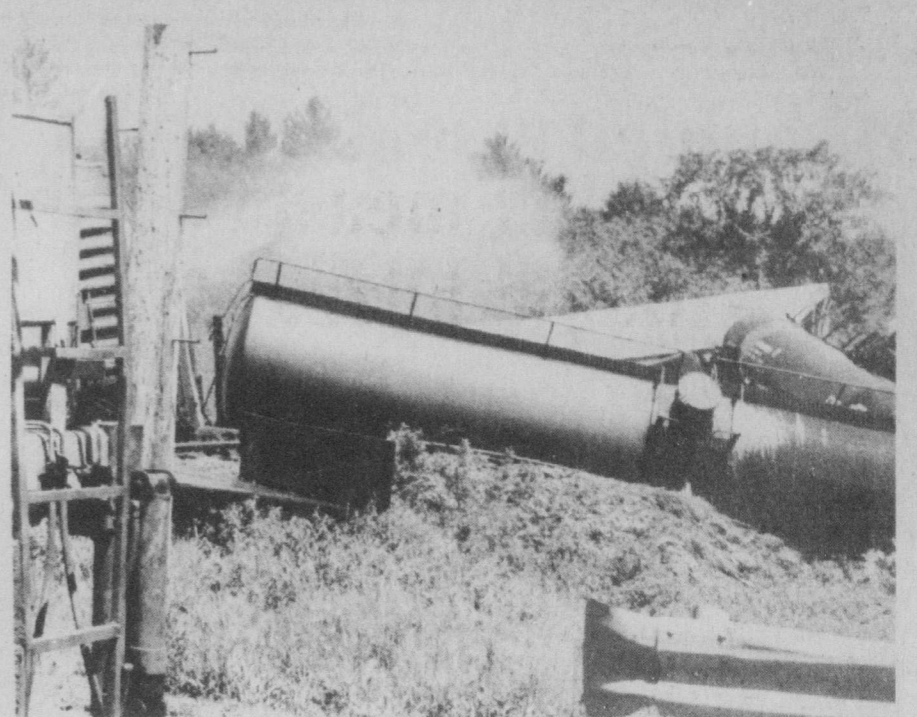

Judge Leveille said he had closely examined the case of GT Transport vs

The Queen which was brought to his attention by both defence lawyer Richard Shadley and Crown attorney Claude Noiseux. "There is a certain similarity in the cases," Judge Leveille said. "In this case the court is convinced beyond all reasonable doubt that Barrette's speed and the lack of proper maintenance on the vehicle were the cause of Guy Gagne's death."

"The defence also said that Guy Gaboriault was not a person vested with responsibility and the management of the company was not aware of the maintenance problems, and, as a result, could not be held guilty as charged. Nonetheless, Mr. Gaboriault was in charge of the garage and maintenance."

"The court is of the opinion it was unthinkable that management was not aware the vehicle was a public danger and that it was being driven by a person who was not qualified to do so."

Judge Leveille will hear representations for sentencing at 11 a.m. on March 19. No firm date has yet been fixed for Barrette's trial.

Eastern Railway Siding was found guilty of criminal negligence in the West Brome train derailment.

Little House

BY KATHARINE SNOW

Being a Catholic is more fun in Florida. Not since the days of attending benediction as a little girl in the lovely chapel at Mont Notre Dame have I felt so uplifted by going to church. At that earlier time of my life I was completely fascinated by the twilight beauty of that service. I passionately loved the candles, the incense and the heavenly music. I can still break forth in shivers just remembering the sound of the Tantum Ergo.

My appreciation now, although a bit less aesthetic, is more realistic. First of all, I attend a beautiful church about a mile away. It is called the Church of the Resurrection and is set back from the road on a wooded corner lot. I had to confess to my husband that I experience a definitely Anglican, Mrs. Miniverish feeling every time I go to Mass.

I suppose that the language factor makes the big difference. This is only the second time that I have ever heard the Mass in my own tongue. The sermons take on a totally new importance for me. This last Sunday, the young priest, who bears the improbable title of Father Pete, spoke, on the unquestioning faith of the fishermen who put aside their nets and followed Christ. He pointed out that we are all summoned daily to similar service but that our faith is too tinged with logic and cynicism and we are too involved in the power struggle to hear or to listen. He told the story of a man who was making a tour of religious shrines with a group of professed Christians. The man, by some mischance, became separated from his fellow travellers and stumbling through a wooded area suddenly lost his footing and fell over a steep cliff. As he fell, he reached out wildly and clutched a tree branch hanging in his path. Suspended thus over a deep, seemingly bottomless ravine, he cried out in terror, "Is there anyone up there?"

Immediately a voice responded, "I am the Lord. Place your trust in Me. Let go of the tree."

A silence followed then the man shouted anew, "Is there anyone else up there?"

Father Pete told us to give the story a bit of thought.

I am enriched too, by the hymns. During Communion they frequently sing, "Let There be Peace on Earth and Let it Begin With Me" or else the beautiful prayer of Saint Francis of Assisi put to music. Last Sunday was the first time that I had ever heard "Amazing Grace" sung in the Catholic Church.

One of the loveliest ceremonies at the Church of the Resurrection took place on Christmas Eve. A children's Mass was celebrated at 5:30 p.m. on the south lawn. Youngsters of all ages, excited and enthralled, gathered to acknowledge that above all, before the tinsel and the superficiality of the Santa Claus world, Christmas Day commemorates the birthday of the Christ Child.

Jane Trahey once wrote that she had the good fortune to be born a Roman Catholic and I have always shared her feeling. The Mass, of course, remains the Mass - the most sacred and intimate contact between God and man - but somehow, stepping out in the glorious sunshine of a Florida Sunday makes the going much easier.

End of the Line blasts Quebec CPR ballast stand

By Merritt Clifton

SUTTON — The Quebec Environment Ministry has vigorously renewed its defence of the Canadian Pacific Railway use of asbestos as track ballast, coincidental with energy minister Yves Duhaime's asbestos-selling mission abroad. Acting 'End Of The Line' chairman Bill Nunnally doesn't believe the coincidence is accidental.

"I'm just caught by the fact," Nunnally points out, "that the Quebec government keeps coming back with the insistence that asbestos is safe, anywhere, any time, when they're a major owner and producer of asbestos. There's conflict of interest, since they're also supposed to be responsible for consumer protection."

'End Of The Line' has been campaigning against the asbestos ballast ever since studies from both the federal and provincial government documented two years ago that it is contaminating Brome-Missisquoi air and water, formerly almost asbestos-free.

while waterborne asbestos has been identified as a certain carcinogen since 1978—the same year the CPR's ballast was laid.

The latest Quebec ballast defence was authored February 11 by Jean A. Roy, Director-General for Research and Development, in reply to 'End Of The Line' criticism of a December 9 position paper by Environment Minister Marcel Leger.

Leger had claimed that asbestos counts of from 12 to 14 million fibres per litre found in trackside streams and ditches were normal for the area. 'End Of The Line' returned that Lake Brome, a major Yamaska River headwater, contains no detectable asbestos according to Environment Canada, as compared with up to 57 million fibres per litre on the same branch of the river near Farnham. St. Jean tapwater, drawn upstream from the tracks, shows 0.1 to 0.2 million fibres per litre, while Cowsville and Farnham water, drawn downstream, show from 2.0 to 26 million, depending upon weather conditions. Natural airborne asbestos has long been recognized as a cause of cancer, along only one branch of the Yamaska River, near Call Mills. Roy argues that even if the tracks are shedding significant amounts of asbestos fibre at some of the 15 sites Quebec sampled, "when you consider the volume of the water courses studied, you may perhaps deduce how small the amount of asbestos fibres contributed by these little streams to the southeast fork of the Yamaska is, considering how much the flow increases to dilute the concentrations of fibres delivered to the river."

"For example," Roy continues, "supposing that the flow of a stream included in the preliminary studies contributes 10 per cent of the flow of the southeast fork of the Yamaska, or of the Sutton River, the appearance of high levels (of asbestos) is reduced ten times after mixing with the water of the rivers above mentioned. In reality, we estimate, without great risk of error, that the outflow of the watercourses in our preliminary studies contribute less than 10 per cent of the flow of the rivers mentioned."

While this would be true if the 15 sites Environment Quebec studied were the only asbestos pollution point-sources along the Yamaska and Sutton Rivers, in fact 'End Of The Line' has identified 78 total streams and ditches connecting the rivers and the railroad tracks. These include more than 70 per cent of all Yamaska and Sutton tributaries in Brome-Missisquoi. As 'End Of The Line' has illustrated with a series of topographical maps now en route to numerous provincial and federal politicians, the result is that instead of decreasing asbestos counts as water volume increases, the asbestos counts increase as fast or faster than the water volume.

The remainder of Roy's response to 'End Of The Line' repeats Leger's argument that University of California studies linking asbestos ingestion to gastrointestinal cancer are invalid because they did not consider cigarette smoking. The U.C. studies measured rates of gastrointestinal cancer in 13 adjoining cities in the San Francisco Bay area, some of which draw drinking water from reservoirs contaminated with low levels of asbestos while the rest have asbestos-free water. Those drinking the asbestos-contaminated water showed a dramatically higher gastrointestinal cancer death rate.

As 'End Of The Line' has told Roy, "Cigarette smoking," unlike asbestos exposure, "is a constant, varying little from community to community... The residual level of gastrointestinal cancer caused by smoking should remain essentially the same" in the communities studied.

"There is one reason and one reason only why you, M. Leger, and the citizens of Quebec should be concerned with cigarette smoking in relation to the Cooper-Murcho study (at U.C. Berkeley.) This reason is that according to Statistics Canada, Quebecois do smoke significantly more than other Canadians: 47.4 per cent of adult males here smoke, compared with only 38.6 per cent elsewhere in Canada... cigarette smoking is known to increase the likelihood of developing cancer after asbestos exposure."

Combined, the two carcinogens tar and asbestos seem to be about 10 times more virulent than either one is separately.

Townships talk

SHERBROOKE (TB) — A 31-year-old Sherbrooke man was arrested by police yesterday evening after he broke into his father's home, beat up his 60-year-old parent and stole $10.

The man, whose name has not yet been released, apparently arrived while his father was sleeping. After kicking in the door, he then proceeded to attack the sleeping man punching him about the head and neck. The father then threw his wallet at the son who withdrew the money and fled.

Before leaving the building however, he apparently smashed in the door of another apartment. This time the resident of the apartment called the police and the young man fled.

SCOTSTOWN (SM) — Quebec Provincial Police in Cookshire are holding two men in connection with the beating and robbery of an elderly woman in town late Friday night.

According to Detective Michel Belzil of the Cookshire QPF detachment, the two suspects, Pierre Duchesneau, 26, and Claude Duperron, 25, both from Scotstown, broke into the house of Marie Trudel, 84, last Friday night around 11:30 and entered the woman's bedroom, looking for money.

Police say the two grabbed her, threw her on the floor and tried smothering her with a pillow in an effort to find out where she kept her money. Trudel finally told them where $42 was, at which point they tied her arms and legs and fled.

The police were only notified the next morning when a neighbor dropped by Trudel's house around 11:00 a.m. and found her nervously drinking coffee. She was able to identify Duchesneau because he lived nearby and neither of the two suspects bothered to wear masks when they broke into her home.

According to Belzil, Duchesneau has a previous record for burglary two years ago in Scotstown. He has been on parole since his release from prison last June.

Misguided assault

The United States ambassador to El Salvador last week attacked Canada's decision to withhold help in supervising that country's election March 28. But the decision was correct and the criticism simply an extension of the Reagan administration's policy of contempt for any position that differs from the U.S. line.

Former External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald led a group of five Canadian MPs who visited the Latin-American country and who were the targets of the envoy's misguided assault. The Commons delegation found that the situation in El Salvador was not stable enough to guarantee that the election would be truly democratic. Fighting in that republic is so widespread and fears of government reprisal are so strong that many political factions, from both the left and the right sides of the spectrum, are not even running candidates, let alone campaigning.

Weekend events confirmed the MPs' findings, if any confirmation was needed. Right-wing party leader Roberto D'Abuisson was the victim of an assassination attempt Saturday, only a few days after he had said that fewer than 35 per cent of the eligible voters would cast ballots. His party headquarters was attacked by two truckloads of guerrillas armed with machine guns and grenades. In another incident guerrillas attacked a campaign motorcade urging voters to the cause of the centrist Christian Democrats.

If the Canadian Progressive Conservatives shot up, say, the office of Irene Pelletier, we wouldn't think the political atmosphere was stable enough to hold an election. We wouldn't feel very secure about the outcome of a Canadian election only a few weeks after an attempt on Joe Clark's life either. The long-suffering people of El Salvador deserve a chance to vote safely as much as Canadians do. And if an election is not free, why bother?

The last free election in El Salvador was held in 1928. And the next one won't be in 1982, whether the Reagan folks say so or not.

The little paper that grew too big

TORONTO (CP) — The "little paper that grew" has finally grown up, said a dejected-looking Peter Worthington, editor of the Toronto Sun, the city's racy and irreverent morning tabloid.

Worthington was speaking last week, shortly after the newspaper announced its engagement to media conglomerate Maclean Hunter Ltd.

Worthington said the $54 million Maclean Hunter will spend in a two-stage deal to acquire half the shares of The Toronto Sun Publishing Corp. will help the company retire its $15-million debt and expand into other markets.

However, Worthington, concerned about the newspaper's independence, said frankly he would have preferred that things remained the way they were.

"I'm feeling kind of wistful," he said in an interview. "I'm not pleased with the deal."

Last week's transaction is the latest chapter in the story of "the little paper that grew," as The Sun likes to call itself in promotional radio, television and in-house ads — a media success story which has long had its critics shaking their heads in bewilderment.

PROSPEROUS VENTURE

In an industry where newspaper closings are becoming the rule, The Sun has survived and prospered, although its recent foray into Calgary, the fastest-growing market in the country, has drained millions of dollars from its treasury.

For more than 10 years in Toronto and three years in Edmonton, The Sun has succeeded on its anti-Liberal — some would say anti-Trudeau — political philosophy, heavy coverage of sports, crime news and entertainment and its racy look, including the scantily clad Sunshine girls usually seen on page 3.

The Toronto Sun grew out of the closing in 1971 of the 96-year-old Toronto Telegram. Many of the Telegram's staff and some of its characteristics — a lively business page and an interest in Toronto history — were preserved in The Sun.

The new paper was an immediate success, mainly because its organizers perceived and believed in a market others had ignored — the morning commuter.

Whelan plays to an empty house

By ROD CURRIE

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, who has a terrible time with names, seemed to rate a match misconduct for the telegram he shot off to Wayne Gretzky on that record-breaking 77th goal.

According to the press handout, he spelled it Gretskey.

But a spokesman says it isn't so. Only the press statement was wrong, she said with a great sigh of relief, and the telegram itself was letter perfect.

Trudeau is notorious for forgetting names or getting them mixed up. Not long ago his press statement was wrong, she said with a great sigh of relief, and the telegram itself was letter perfect.

Trudeau issued a correction noting that in the transcript of a news conference he referred to Stuart Smith, retiring leader of the Ontario Liberal party, as George.

But Trudeau's office also took the blame for that one, saying it was a typing error.

Speaking of names, it seems Trudeau is a dirty word in the House of Commons. Well, at least, it is deemed to be unparliamentary language.

So is the word Cosgrove.

The issue came up after Tory Ray Hnatyshyn read a newspaper article referring to Housing Minister Paul Cosgrove by name.

Liberal Rene Cousineau protested saying that "A word that is unparliamentary may not be used even if it is being quoted from a newspaper article."

Hnatyshyn, MP for Saskatoon West, said if Cousineau preferred he would simply refer to the housing minister as the "un-mentionable minister."

Acting Speaker Rod Blaker acknowledged the ban against referring to members by name in the House but said he did not believe Hnatyshyn was abusing the principle.

Cousineau, insisting MPs must be referred to by their department or constituency, pointed to a ruling by Speaker Jeanne Sauve a year ago that "members cannot use words which are unparliamentary just because they are quoting."

On that occasion the offending word was Trudeau. Hnatyshyn wasn't involved in that skirmish, but he put in his two cents' worth anyway, saying: "If that is unparliamentary, I apologize, but I do not think that particular word (Trudeau) is unparliamentary."

The tradition of referring to MPs in the House as the minister of such-and-such or the honorable member for so-and-so is an ancient one and expert Philip Laundy says the idea is to "remove any personal element from the course of debate."

Laundy, former director of the research branch of the Library of Parliament, says the tradition emphasizes that differences between MPs are political rather than personal in nature.

It was an anniversary of sorts.

Five years, eight months and seven days ago, said Tory MP Tom Cossitt, he had submitted a written question asking the names of persons connected with the Canadian Transport Commission — which governs Air Canada — who were issued Air Canada passes.

"If they are using government funds to give passes to people who are not government employees and so on — girlfriends, yes, I will say that, too — then I think it is a pretty serious situation."

David Smith, responsible for handling written questions, gave the stock government reply — that it had answered thousands of questions and that the Joe Clark government hadn't answered Cossitt's question during its nine months in office.

Later, Tory House Leader Erik Nielsen took up the fight, charging it is the "deliberate intention" of the government to delay answers that are embarrassing.

But, as Speaker Jeanne Sauve noted, there isn't anything much they can do about it. Answers are left to the initiative of ministers, she said, and the Speaker can in no way help members to insist on a reply.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan was warned, so the story goes, that most of the agriculture writers were covering the Canadian Federation of Agriculture conference in Moncton, N.B.

But he insisted on calling a news conference to announce a $21-million grant to a farm equipment manufacturer and ended up talking virtually to himself. Two reporters showed up and Whelan was furious.

History repeated itself several days later when, in Charlottetown, Whelan nagged his staff to set up a news conference despite their reservations that there wasn't a big press contingent there.

Again two reporters showed up. And Whelan was even more furious.

Senate Opposition Leader Duff Roblin got an invitation to a B.C.W.W. and was confused.

Could the government leader, Senator Ray Perrault, explain?

"I have never been favored with such an invitation before," he said, "and I wonder if someone could tell me what I am letting myself in for."

The British Columbia Wonderful Wednesday party was one of a continuing round of Liberal parties given on Wednesdays with various ministers as host. On this occasion the hosts were fellow senators Perrault and Jack Austin, minister of state, both from B.C.

Could it be? The NDP issuing a report with a sexist cover!

NDP Task Force on the Economy, a 22-page report, has a cover depicting three blue-collar types, rugged men in a touque, a hard hat and a cap.

But the dominant figure is that of a gorgeous blonde woman with a sultry, far-away look — not your average working type.

Some NDPers are said to be a bit embarrassed.

"I think she's a welder," said one with a nervous laugh.

Play taught us to use our talents

Editor:

After reading the article that Mr. Edgar Ransom wrote about the Massey-Vanier school play, I feel the need to give my comments as a student.

I realize that everyone has a right to their own opinion, but I do not feel that this play should have any bearing on judging the character of our principal, Mr. Douglas.

I took part in this play and I might add that everyone in the play worked diligently to do our best to show our talents and to entertain the public.

Frankly, I must agree that some wording and some topics of conversation in the play were not appropriate, but this was true insight as to what our generation (or part of our generation) IS today.

Mr. Ransom asked Mr. Douglas, "Do you have children and are you proud of what that play taught?" I do not think that this play taught us anything we do not already know. It did however, teach us how to act and how to show our talents.

As far as the play telling us

"what the 'in' world expects of us who are 'with it,'" I feel it depends on us, as a student or as a young person growing up, whether we choose to follow them or go in our own direction, as taught by our parents and our church.

One point in the article that irked me was when the writer spoke of the Lord as "his" Lord, when He is "our" Lord.

If Mr. Ransom wishes to look at another side of the play, he should look to understand the person, in the character of "Sandy" as a shy girl, who was able to be brought out of a shell.

I know that there are several viewers who did not completely approve of this play, but they kept their comments and discussions to themselves.

In concluding this letter, I would like to mention that everyone who participated in this production gained many friends and had a lot of fun putting it on!

Way out of line

Editor:

I am writing this in reply to a letter published Feb. 22 from a man who signs himself G. Edgar Ransom, The Lord's Farm, Mansenville.

I would like to suggest to Mr. G. Edgar Ransom that he study the history of the white man's Bible from which he loves to quote. When it comes to sexual filth, murder, war mongering and assorted ignorance the book from which Edgar Ransom quotes takes first place on all counts. I have read the Bible from cover to filthy cover in a slow studious manner.

When Mr. Ransom compares the Bible composed by over sixty ignorant old men over two thousand years ago and then makes comparisons with a play put on by educated people in the year 1982 he is way out of line. There just is no comparison. A public school today is better educated than the entire Kij and Kaboodle of authors who wrote the white man's Bible.

Another thing I would like to mention to this gentleman is the fact that nearly one hundred per cent of the educated people on earth today are atheists. Furthermore, I would like to suggest to Edgar Ransom that he run his farm while he leaves the running of schools to those he has the nerve to condemn.

Scotstown H.S.

Editor:

I would appreciate the use of The Record to pass on an important message to all former students and teachers of Scotstown High School and Scotstown Model School.

Invitations for the Reunion this July have now been sent out where names and addresses were known. If you are a former student or teacher of either of these famed institutions, and have not yet received your invitation, please drop us a line at the address mentioned below. If you have received your invitation but have not yet answered it, please do so as soon as possible. Postage costs dictate that our second mailing, providing additional information on events, accommodations, and tickets, will be sent only to those who have expressed an interest in attending.

The response to date indicates a smashing success and our organizing committee estimates 500 former students and teachers from all parts of Canada and the U.S.A. will be returning to Scotstown for the Reunion weekend. If you are one of the chosen few from those hallowed halls of learning, don't miss this historic event. There never was anything like it before, and there never will be anything like it again.

Quebec public sector negotiations should be a knock down fight

QUEBEC (CP) — With contracts talks between the Quebec government and its 350,000 public sector employees on the horizon, both sides are dusting off the boxing gloves for what is shaping to be the nastiest fight between the unions and government in years.

Like good pugilists, each side is doing its darndest to psych out the opponent before entering the ring.

Though the contracts don't expire until year-end, negotiations are set to start this spring. Negotiating with the government this year are civil servants, teachers and hospital workers.

At issue are job security, the right of hospital workers and others providing essential services to strike, and the cushy contracts many of these workers won during the last round of bargaining in 1979-1980.

Those contracts — signed when the government was campaigning for its May, 1980, referendum on sovereignty-association — included indexed wages for government employees and an "enrichment clause" providing real wage gains over and above the inflation rate.

Now, with the referendum and an election behind it, the Parti Quebecois government is realizing just how costly the contracts are. The public treasury is already strained, and the government is frantically trying to shrink a projected $3-billion-plus deficit.

Since the cost of paying salaries to government, school and hospital employees takes up 63 per cent of the budget, public sector contracts are a candidate for trimming.

JOBS AN ISSUE

Privately, government employees concede they generally have better pay, benefits and working conditions than workers in the private sector. The real issue, they say, will be protecting their jobs.

But protecting government jobs doesn't always wash well with the public, so the unions are portraying themselves as defenders of the public's right to services the government is cutting.

"Of course strikes disrupt things," Robert Gaulin, head of the Centrale de l'Enseignement du Quebec, Quebec's largest teachers' union, said at legislature committee hearings last fall in public sector strikes. But they allow society to "check the deterioration of certain public services."

"They are a means which, through temporary disruptions — disruptions which all unions try, I believe, to minimize — allow for a correction of situations which otherwise would be deplorable."

But the government is determined to be tough.

"Any union gains will be made at the expense of services," Treasury Board President Yves Berube said.

The government's psychological approach is clear: it's going to enter the ring in its birthday suit. It won't even have pockets to turn inside out.

To get its message across, the PQ has planned a conference for early April to bring together government and union spokesmen.

There, the government, like any employer negotiating during tough economic times, plans to tell the unions just how bad things are, just how little money the province has to give.

OPEN BOOKS

"We will have to open our books to the unions," Berube said.

"Negotiations usually take place with each party having a certain number of cards up its sleeve and wanting to end the game with as many cards left as possible. This time, the situation is very different."

A memo prepared by the Quebec Treasury Board sums things up: The deficit is $3 billion-plus, tax bills here are 20 per cent higher than the Canadian average and 10 per cent of the budget is taken up with the servicing of the $14-billion debt.

And the government doesn't even count the operating deficits of its social affairs institutions — about $150 million — in the provincial deficit.

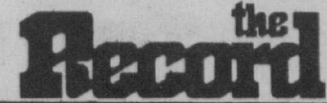

Berube says the union leaders should co-operate with the government to moderate demands and make cutbacks as painless as possible.

If they are unwilling to co-operate, the government will go over their heads and appeal to the rank and file, a tactic used successfully by the PQ earlier this year when a party convention adopted resolutions the top brass didn't like.

Berube says he is convinced an appeal to the average union member will work, for two reasons.

One is that "we're in the worst economic situation since 1929," the other that the people at the base of the unions are the same ones who form the political base of the Parti Quebecois.

Business

Auto workers now appear in own advertisements

Many Canadian auto workers — the ones left on the assembly lines, not just the executives — are getting angry at the old saw which says they can't turn out a quality product.

Ford of Canada Ltd. is one producer trying to use workers in media advertising to convince potential car buyers that North American quality is at least as good as that from overseas workers.

Ford president Ken Harrigan said the company's employees have become fed up with the myth about superior workmanship from Japan or Germany.

So the company now is using workers in what it says are unrehearsed advertisements to promote North American quality.

Despite the latest furore over whether the United Auto Workers union in Canada should give manufacturers a break by agreeing to contract concessions — as some of their brethren in the United States have done — the future of Canada's auto industry will likely boil down to two points:

Productivity and quality. Productivity can be measured many ways, but the usual definition is how many widgets — or cars — do you make for each hour of work.

PRODUCTIVITY LESS
On this basis, North American workers — including Canadians — don't measure up very well against those in Japan, among other countries.

In one of his last speeches as Ontario's industry minister, before he got shifted to another portfolio, Larry Grossman noted the Japanese now require 80 hours to design, assemble and market a car.

In North America, he said, the time for the same job is 144 hours.

The results have shown up in employment figures. Of 80,000 UAW members involved in Canadian vehicle production, 18,000 now are laid off, the union says.

It's hard to see how anyone can survive against Grossman's productivity figures, without a heavy degree of government-imposed protection.

Another choice, suggested by the auto union, is to impose requirements for Canadian workers to produce 85 per cent of the parts used in imported vehicles.

Either of these choices, however, will presumably mean that the customer will pay more.

If imports, especially from Japan, are limited by bilateral agreement, customers who might have turned to a Toyota or a Mazda because they are cheaper than a Ford or Buick will find import prices jacked up because of limited supplies.

Again, compulsory introduction of Canadian-produced parts will add to the price of an import, unless special productivity savings can be made.

What about quality? It's rated right up there with fuel efficiency and price as key factors customers are seeking.

North American producers admit that the buying public has looked on overseas imports for years as being superior in quality. They don't really concede the point, but they do agree the public perception is there.

Now they're fighting back.

TROUBLES GONE

At a press preview last summer of future models, Chrysler Corp. officials talked of cars that will be virtually trouble-free for 160,000 kilometres.

"Can the Japanese do that?" asked one senior official.

A General Motors of Canada executive recently said overseas imports built their quality reputation because floor mats fit tightly.

"There's more to quality than that," he argues.

The Japanese and Germans would agree, and point to their reputations for trouble-free maintenance.

North American producers, however, now are claiming their vehicles are at least as well made as overseas imports.

Phone company proposal irks businessmen

TORONTO (CP) — Businesses wanting to use satellites for transmitting information across Canada are expressing frustration with the way several telephone companies are proposing to implement tariffs for such services.

Proposed tariffs submitted by Bell Canada of Montreal and British Columbia Telephone Co. of Burnaby, B.C., on Feb. 15, may "thwart easier access to satellite-based services for Canadian business users," said Peter Godfrey, president of the Canadian Industrial Communications Assembly.

Business users had anticipated that as a result of a regulatory decision last summer, and a December, 1981, amendment by the government, companies would be able to obtain country-wide satellite access directly through Bell and B.C. Tel, rather than other carriers.

USERS FRUSTRATED

The two federally-regulated telephone companies have instead proposed tariffs only for satellite use inside their own territory. As a result, "business users still remain frustrated," said Douglas Towers, a spokesman for the Forum of Canadian Users of Satellites.

Godfrey said the assembly is "surprised and disappointed" by the telephone companies' interpretation of an order to file partial satellite channel tariffs, which are insensitive to distance and number of locations served. He said the proposed tariffs would result in only minimal competition between the Trans-Canada Telephone System and CNCP Telecommunications.

Although observers suggest that the telephone companies are only paying lip service to the spirit of guidelines — set out by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission — to broaden business access to satellites, spokesmen for B.C. Tel and Bell said that they intend to implement such service on a national basis once they complete discussions with the other members of the TCTS.

BOUNDARY LIMIT

Rene Bouchard, a general manager with the TCTS, said Bell and B.C. Tel were asked to file tariffs on very specific items, to which "we've attempted to respond to directly." He said the tariffs "do not in any way restrict offerings previously available" over satellite, such as voice, radio or data transmission.

However, if the CRTC approves the tariffs, a user obtaining satellite ser-VICES from, for example, B.C. Tel, could only originate and receive the service within the boundaries of B.C. Tel's exchanges, said Godfrey.

Stuart McPherson, a spokesman for the CRTC said the commission may soon invite public comment on the tariffs, as it did with Telesat Canada tariffs filed a month earlier.

"I wouldn't say they (the telephone companies) have been uncooperative," said McPherson, "They have just chosen to interpret the order more narrowly" than the communications assembly would have interpreted it.

One observer, who asked not to be identified, said that with respect to the telephone companies' interpretation of the tariffs, "it does to an extent comply, but they are certainly not going out of their way to be enthusiastic" about easing business use of satellites.

Job insurance would pay exec for two years

TORONTO (CP) — With firings and layoffs of executives and professionals on the rise, a company has come up with a new job insurance plan which will pay full salary and fringe benefits to dismissed managers for up to two years.

The insurance plan, called CareerGuard and offered by the specialty insurance firm Gestas Inc. of Montreal, is the brainchild of John Lorrinan, a 35-year-old manager who found himself dismissed two years ago from his position as a senior executive with a major life insurance firm.

Lorrinan, mulling over the events of his firing, noted that his colleagues treated him with the same deference he might receive if he were dead — even referring to his going-away party as a "wake."

"I found myself fighting the idea of being fired just as I would fight death," he said recently at a news conference. "So I thought if death is insurable, why not a firing."

Before CareerGuard was launched, Gestas Inc. referred to a number of surveys and statistics on executive dismissals and layoffs and found that in 1981 about 42,000 managers and professionals were unemployed because of job loss. That was more than double the figure of seven years ago.

Based on the rate of firing, the company estimated that one of every two managers and professionals will be fired at some time

The more people worry, the more they smoke...

MONTREAL (CP) — Fears about the current economic recession mean "the more people worry, the more they smoke... or need pills," Imasco Ltd. president Paul Pare said Wednesday.

And maybe that's why net earnings at Imasco, which makes cigarettes and operates a chain of drugstores, rose 45 per cent in the nine months ending Dec. 31 to $94.04 million after extraordinary item.

Pare told the Montreal Society of Financial Analysts that Imasco's Imperial Tobacco division currently enjoys a 48-per-cent share of the cigarette market in Canada and that this should rise to 50 per cent "by this time next year."

Pare also predicted that a new report by the U.S. surgeon general that cigarette smoking poses health risks probably won't affect Imperial.

"So far, with all the medical research that's been done, it has not been possible to identify any product's contribution to any illness," Pare said. "Users have determined that they want to continue to enjoy the product."

NEARLY $3 BILLION

Imasco is a diversified tobacco, restaurant, food, and retailing company that reported consolidated sales of $2.922 billion in the nine months to Dec. 31.

Pare said he expects a good fourth quarter — the company's fiscal year ends March 31 — but he doesn't think Imasco will "retain the rate of the first nine months (of fiscal 1982)."

With fourth-quarter results still to come in, Imasco has already surpassed its sales and profits figures for all of fiscal 1981.

The conglomerate's tobacco, restaurant and food are doing fine, Pare said, but there is a problem with some retail operations. The Shoppers Drug Mart division, a chain of 417 franchised and company-owned pharmacies in Canada and the U.S., did well everywhere except in Quebec, where the company is known as Pharmaprix.

"We are generating the sales (in Quebec) but somehow or other that's not translating to the bottom line."

Urban trends make future life difficult for elderly

HAMILTON (CP) — While the world's population is aging, it's also growing more urban, a trend that may make life harder for future generations of elderly, a McMaster University professor says.

Karl Kinanen says that in an increasingly urban society, "intensive, intimate, long-lasting relationships may be difficult to maintain." That means elderly people may not be able to turn to their families or may not even have close family members to turn to for financial support, he said. "There is growing concern about the family's ability to look after the elderly. "And you already hear stories, though I don't know how true they are, of elderly parents in Hong Kong being locked out of their adult children's homes where they once lived."

Kinanen, co-ordinator of the Office on Aging at McMaster, said in Canada we have reached almost zero population growth, which means there may not be enough adults in the future to do the necessary jobs as well as pay for medical and social services for the elderly.

He said a shortage of workers has been predicted by as early as the year 2000. However, alarmists who predict there will be no pension money for the aged in the future have fears that are not very well founded.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: You've been like a close friend at our breakfast table for so many years, and now we are turning to you for help. I'm writing about my sister.

Celia and Bill had a wonderful marriage. Three months ago, shortly after they celebrated their 20th wedding anniversary, Bill suffered a sudden coronary and died within hours.

Celia considers Bill's death a personal insult from God. She is filled with rage and has become so vindictive and unpleasant nobody wants to be around her.

Friends, family and neighbors quit paying calls weeks ago. They just couldn't take her outbursts of self-pity and personal attacks. She screamed at me last week. "Sure, it's easy for you to say I should be grateful for the good years we had! YOU still have your husband!"

How does one deal with a person who can't come to terms with grief? Please don't suggest professional help. We have done that already, and she thinks all psychiatrists are crazy. What now? — Also grieving in N.J.

Dear N.J.: Stop catering to your sister. Treat her as you would any other unpleasant acquaintance. When she discovers that her behavior is unacceptable, she will stop trying to punish everyone for the misfortune in her life. Or — she will find herself very much alone.

Dear Ann Landers: Our church group has a social club for "Over 60" — mostly widows and widowers, with the exception of a few who have never been married. We meet twice a month in our homes and have a good time.

Several weeks ago I bought a new wig. It looks very natural and I have received many compliments on how nice my hair looks lately. When folks comment, I say, "Thank you." I don't feel it is necessary to say more.

Last night we had the "Over 60" meeting at my home. A member brought her widowed brother from out of town. The first thing he said to me was, "What lovely hair you have!" Before I could say, "Thank you," Mr. X, a loudmouth member of long standing, blurted out, "That not her hair — it's a wig!"

I told him in private to keep his big mouth shut about such matters. He said letting the man believe it was my own hair was the same as lying. What is your think on this matter? — Sedalia, Mo.

Dear Sed: Some women don't mind if the whole world knows they wear a wig — others would just as soon keep it quiet. It's up to the woman to decide how she wishes to deal with it.

When you received that nice compliment, it was not incumbent upon Mr. X to offer a statement of origin. He was out of line.

Dear Ann Landers: I work in a fine shop that gives me a 25 per cent discount on all purchases. Several friends know about the discount and have asked me to get dresses and coats for them.

I don't mind doing an occasional favor, but it has gotten out of hand. Two friends have made me wait as long as three months for my money. Another woman denied that a certain purchase was for her. Another wore a dress several times and asked me to return it.

How can I stop this practice without destroying friendships? — Westwood, Calif.

Dear West: If the company knew what you were doing, you could lose your discount privileges. Put an end to the "favors" at once. The friends you may lose because of it are better off "lost."

Women's Canadian Club

The Women's Canadian Club, Inc., held a luncheon meeting at Holiday Inn on February 18. Mrs. Doris Conley, a club member, was introduced by Mrs. Flora McIntyre and gave a slide presentation of her trip to India in October.

She visited Rajasthan province and eight major cities of northern India, a rich region of the country indicated by its famous architecture. In the pink city of Jaipur many buildings are built of sandstone of a naturally pink shade. By the same method of coloration Jodhpur is known as the Blue City, Udaipur as the White City. She visited the beautiful Amber Palace by riding an elephant taxi to the top of a hill; and travelled by camel in the Thar Desert to the top of sand dunes, which move 500 feet per year.

As many palaces that were owned by maharajahs before 1967 are now converted into hotels, she stayed in one in Jodhpur containing the original artifacts. The Lake Palace in the middle of man-made Pichola Lake was another.

In Delhi she photographed an iron pillar built 1600 years ago that has never rusted, as well as a conservatory built in 1725. Also in Delhi a 234 foot tower, known as the most perfect tower in the world, was built in the 13th century.

The slides of the Taj Mahal in Agra attested to the dedication of the photographer as they were taken at sunrise and at sunset, when the marble adopts pastel hues. In early morning people bathe, wash their clothes, and draw water from the same spot at the river's edge.

Through Doris' slides the audience visited teeming bazaars, the women all wearing colorful saris; saw snake charmers in action, costumed bellringers chiming tunes, sacred cows wandering the streets, and close-ups of interesting faces.

The next meeting will be held on March 23, at which Judge Gobeil will speak on The Youth of Today.

Bridal shower

Family and friends of Susan Rothney, now living in Calgary, Alberta, gathered at the home of Mrs. Steven Haddon, Sherbrooke, to honor her at a surprise bridal shower, on Tuesday, February 23.

On her arrival, she was presented with a pretty corsage of sweetheart roses, and her mother, Mrs. Russell Rothney and her oldest sister, Mrs. John Robinson were presented with corsages of miniature carnations. The groom's mother, Mrs. Kenneth Cook, also living in Calgary was unable to attend.

The bride-to-be was escorted to a decorated chair and was presented with gifts. After the gifts had been opened and shown, Sue thanked the hostess and her husband for the shower and the guests for their contributions towards the gifts.

The hostess with her husband Mr. Steven Haddon's help, served a light lunch of dessert and coffee, including a decorated shower cake.

Guests present were those who worked at the Sherbrooke Hospital. Sue is a registered nurse, and previously worked there.

All left for home wishing Sue all the best with much happiness.

Engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Lynah of Wellesley, Massachusetts announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Gertrude, to Mr. Peter Clark Bishop, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Curtis Bishop, of Sherbrooke.

Ms. Lynah studied at the University of Paris: Sorbonne and New York University in France and received her B.A. from Colby College, Waterville, Maine. She is now employed in the Computer Center at Colby College.

Mr. Bishop is also a graduate of Colby College and currently holds the position of Assistant Secretary-Treasurer at Eastern Townships Produce, Limited of Sherbrooke.

Tuesday, March 2

Bernice Bede Osol

March 2, 1982

This coming year you should be quite fortunate in ventures or enterprises you initiate which are both imaginative and creative. Ways will be found to utilize your bright ideas.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This is not the right time to start complicated ventures you may not be able to follow through to completion. Be sure you finish what you start. Predictions of what's in store for you in each season following your birth date and where your luck and opportunities lie are in your Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The temptation to talk about things told to you in confidence may be a force you'll have to reckon with today. It's best you keep silent.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Take a hard look at your budget today. If expenses are getting out of hand, seek ways to eliminate nonessential expenditures. They can be found.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) This is not the day to take positions opposing persons who could cause problems for you in your career. If angered, they might do just that.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Much of your effectiveness will be lost today if you worry about things which may never happen. Live in the "now." Let tomorrow care for itself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Make it a point today not to pry too deeply into the affairs of a friend who doesn't want to make public his or her present happenings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't rely too heavily on others today to help you realize your goals. What is important to you may be of small significance to them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Serious problems could develop today if you treat coworkers haughtily, or fail to do that which is expected of you. Hold up your end.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Steer clear of involvements today where you know you would be out of your element. Don't become immersed in situations with too many unknowns.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Things may not run too smoothly on the home front today. You and your mate must be careful not to blame each other for the foul-ups.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Count to 10 today before criticizing others, even when their faults are blatant and apparent and in need of correction. Cutting comments could fuel a fight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Guard against tendencies today to be extravagant or wasteful. You're likely to be less disciplined than usual in management of your resources.

UCW meeting

WATERVILLE — The Waterville UCW met on the afternoon of Feb. 17 at the home of the Misses M. and E. Swanson. The meeting opened with the UCW Purpose repeated in unison, this made easier by an enlarged copy, donated by Mrs. Doris Fidler, which will be hung on the wall of the church hall.

Mrs. K. Spafford led the devotional period, choosing to speak on "Love". After reading three short portions of scripture dealing with this theme, she went on to say that "love" is our most beautiful and meaningful word - the identifying mark of a true christian. The most important commandment that Jesus gave was "to love one another", not in a small and narrow way, but limitless, loving all people regardless of race or background, as He, Himself, loves all the world. This commandment must be taken seriously or dire consequences will result, as we are now experiencing in many parts of the world.

Love being the basis for St. Valentine's Day, Mrs. Spafford told us that Brother Henry, whose name was Valentine before entering the monastery, didn't feel he had any outstanding talent, so he decided to help people. He left gifts for them with a red heart attached, and remained anonymous until his death, when a supply of red hearts was discovered in his cell. Prayer and the Lord's Prayer closed devotions and the offering was received.

The minutes of the previous meeting were accepted as read, and the treasurer reported all commitments met.

Miss Swanson drew attention to the World Day of Prayer March 5 in St. John's Church at 2:00 p.m.; the food sale March 12 in the Town Office at 10:00 a.m., and the May 6 Luncheon and Bazaar, which will open at 12 noon. She also reported some of our members had donated food to the Special Olympics held recently in Lennoxville.

The next meeting will be held on March 17 at the home of Mrs. Doris Gale.

Business concluded, Miss Edith Swanson gave a talk on the United Church crest, which is the legal signature of the church, and is on all official documents. It was designed by Dr. V.J. Mooney, and its shape resembles a fish, an ancient christian symbol. The X is the traditional symbol for Christ; the dove, emblematic of the Holy Spirit; the burning bush, symbol of the destructibility of the church; the open bible, emphasis on God's truth that makes men free; the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet tell us God was and is to come. The Latin inscription translates "that all may be one".

At the conclusion of Miss Swanson's interesting and informative talk, the benediction was pronounced by the president, and a social hour followed, during which the hostess served refreshments with Mrs. Doreen Glavin presiding at the tea table.

Galt easily dumps Massey-Vanier

By Bobby Fisher

LENNOXVILLE — Alexander Galt Senior boys' basketball team took one more step towards a Quebec championship Saturday as they breezed to an easy 69-42 win over Massey Vanier High School.

Galt was very impressive in rolling up first quarter and half time leads of 12 and 26 points. The Pipers' totally dominated the game. Massey Vanier was obviously suffering from mental fatigue after having clinched a berth in this weekend's Visser tournament, emblematic of high school basketball supremacy in Quebec, the previous night in a close two-point win over Centennial High School.

The Piper scoring attack was evenly spread out as each player on the squad had at least one point. High scorers for the winners were Geoff Pille with 17 points, Marcus Gass, 15, and Andy Cunningham chipped in with 14. Massey Vanier's top point-getters were Ted Whittall with 14, while Roger Wallis had 10.

Galt coach Bruce Stevenson was very pleased with his team's effort and feels Galt "has the best chance to win the Visser that we've had in 10 years." Stevenson was also lavish in his praise of guard Andy Cunningham. Andy had a great day today, going seven for eight in shooting, and bringing the ball up the court for us. Everybody played well today and I'm really looking forward to this weekend," Stevenson said.

Blaine MacDonald, coach of the Massey Vanier team, gave Galt full marks for the win, "they just outshined us today, but we're going to work hard in practice this week and I'm sure you'll see a much better performance from us next weekend in the Provincials."

Earlier in the day the girls' version of Massey Vanier basketball won the E.T.I.A.C. title by topping the Galt Pipers 49-35.

Massey Vanier built an early 10-point lead before Galt narrowed the gap to two with a minute left in the first half. The second half was a different story, however, as Galt turnovers were readily turned into Massey Vanier baskets.

Brian Flann, coach of the winning team, said the key to the win lay in the fact Galt tried to concentrate on his top two players, Margo Quigley and Terry Long (12 and 15 points respectively), thus leaving Lisa Tryhorn (10 points) open. Flann also said, "We played consistently well from start to finish. Galt is the best team we've met in either league this year and we enjoy playing against them, not only because of our great rivalry but because the girls get along so well off the court."

Meanwhile, Bill Rourke, coach of the Pipers said his team did not play their style of game which is, forcing turn-overs instead of making them. Said Rourke, "We didn't shoot very well today and we gave the ball away too many times. In order for us to win it is necessary to be putting on the pressure and forcing the other team into mistakes."

Once the basketball formalities were completed, most of the crowd then reassembled at the W.B. Scott Arena to watch Galt square off against Stanstead College in the first game of a best two-out-of-three final for the E.T.I.A.C. senior boys' hockey championship.

The Pipers, led by a three-goal performance from Serge Ouimette and the solid goaltending of Tom Wharry, simply outworked their rivals en route to a 6-3 victory.

"I felt we were in control of the game, with the exception of early in the third period when they scored two quick ones," said Piper head coach Brian Heath, who went on to add, "Mac (assistant coach Learned) and I try to emphasize a lot of hitting and forechecking which is exactly what the boys did today." Learned said that the puck control of the defensemen, notably the Cote brothers Ron and Larry, was a major ingredient in the win.

Other marksmen for the winners were Keith Maurice, captain Troy Kerr, and Dave Champoux, while Jamie Caughlin, Brad Moss and Chris Racicot replied for the visitors.

The two teams resume action Monday as the series shifts to the Stanstead College arena. Game time is 4:30 p.m.

Beavers eliminate Montreal from first

By Bobby Fisher

SHERBROOKE — Sherbrooke Beavers completed another routine weekend last night defeating Chicoutimi Saguenens 8-7, courtesy of a goal by Michel Lanouette at 6:09 in overtime and Friday the Beavers virtually eliminated Montreal Juniors from the race for first place in the Q.M.J.H.L., landing their fourth loss in five meetings 6-2.

Last night Sherbrooke got single goals from John Chabot, Sean McKenna, Gerard Gallant, Luc Bachand, and Alain Menard, while Dave Kasper had a pair. Friday, in what Sherbrooke coach Andre Boisvert labelled as the "biggest game of the year", the Beavers rode a two-goal two-assist performance by defenceman Paul Boutilier to the win over a Montreal team that displayed a lacklustre offence. The locals also received tallies from John Chabot, Mike Fafard, and Alain Gilbert (2).

In the first period it looked as if it was going to be one of those nights when Montreal goalie, Jeff Barratt, made two enormous saves on would-be Sherbrooke marksmen. However, on this night the Beavers were not to be daunted, and although Montreal took an early 1-0 lead, on a goal by Tony Fiore, the hometown squad came out of the period with a 2-1 advantage in goals and a 16-12 margin in shots on net, much to the delight of the 4,279 spectators.

In the second, the two teams came out cautiously and the period featured some closer-checking. While the Beavers increased their lead to 4-2 they got a couple of big stops from goaltender Michel Morissette. Sherbrooke outshot the Juniors 21-10.

Gilbert dashed any hopes Montreal might have had when he scored at 1:36 of the third and then again at 16:32, beating Barratt, who faced a total of 53 shots in the game.

After the game, Barratt, who was chosen as a star of the contest along with Boutilier, said his team panicked once they were down two goals. "We are a defensive team and that's how we were winning before, but lately we've been trying to become involved in shootouts, which is not our style," explained Barratt, who added, "We still have two more games with Sherbrooke and if we beat them it will give us a psychological lift for the play-offs."

Junior coach Pierre Creamer had already conceded Sherbrooke first place. "I thought our guys were ready tonight but I guess they just didn't want it," said a crestfallen Creamer.

Over in the victor's camp Boisvert was still playing it conservative and would not say the win meant first-place but did concede that "it (the win) is a big step" towards their goal of first over-all. "Our big line (Chabot, Gallant, McKenna) seemed a little tired so we decided to try going with four lines instead of three. The kids (Fafard, Pigeon) are always ready and he (Creamer) was trying to match lines so we decided to change the rhythm of the game," continued Boisvert.

Boutilier meanwhile, took the win in stride saying, "That pretty well knocks Montreal out of the picture but we've still got to play Hull and they're tough at home."

Sherbrooke's next home game is Friday against the Trois-Rivieres Draveurs. Face-off time is 8 p.m.

Beaver Tales: Friday night's win gave the Beavers 500 in the club's history, a milestone in the Quebec league, General manager George Guilbault isn't saying much, but will concede that the Winnipeg Jets want to send at least 11 players here should Sherbrooke obtain an A.H.L. franchise. Talk is that the Boston Bruins might send some too. Guilbault also admitted to having had talks with former Montreal Canadien Yvan Cournoyer about selling the Beavers and relocating them in Lachine. Rumour also has it that Boisvert is a candidate for the head-coaching job should the A.H.L. come to town.

Canada completes biggest downhill race

WHISTLER, B. C.

(CP) Todd Brooker, the big redhead, hugged and kissed his girlfriend, Dave Irwin, the quiet veteran, displayed one of those "at last" smiles and youngster Bob Styan beamed from ear to ear.

The three Canadian downhillers had just combined with national team stars Steve Podborski and Ken Read to give the country one of its greatest triumphs in World Cup skiing, before a wildly excited home crowd of about 15,000 at Whistler Mountain Saturday.

Canada placed four in the top seven and five in the top 13. Not since Val D'Isere, France, in December, 1980 — when five of the top seven were Canadians — has the country been so well represented.

"It's fantastic," said national team coach John Ritchie. "I'm really pleased."

Podborski all but clinched the World Cup downhill title with a second-place finish behind veteran Peter Mueller of Switzerland. Podborski's time was two minutes, 15.53 seconds, 1.15 seconds behind Mueller and 20 ahead of Irwin.

Brooker, who has been the surprise of the men's World Cup season

Paris, Ont., was fifth — his best World Cup result — in 2:16.37. Read was seventh in 2:16.62 and Styan, a 21-year-old from North Vancouver, was 13th in 2:17.85.

"It's fantastic what we've done here today," said Podborski. "We've been saying for a long time that when you come to any country it's good for you."

Irwin's third-place finish was especially sweet. The 27-year-old from Vernon, B. C., who will retire at the end of the season, has struggled with injuries and equipment the past few years, never regaining the form that won him two World Cup events in the mid-1970s.

"That's my best result since Schladming (Austria) in 1975 when I won," he said. "It's great, but no, I don't think it will make me decide to come back. I've been a Canadian ski team member for 10 years now. I'm ready to retire."

Ritchie said it has been psychologically draining for Irwin to be "sort of the back end of the team when he's been to the very front. I'm very happy to see him at the forefront again."

Brooker, who has been the surprise of the men's World Cup season for Canada this year with two 13ths and two 14ths, said the screaming crowds helped immensely.

Alexander Galt completely dominated action against Massey Vanier Saturday.

Lady Gaiters eclipse McGill, head for nationals

By Anthony Ross

LENNOXVILLE — It doesn't always have to be a close game to be a good game and the Lady Gaiters proved that Sunday.

Canada's number one ranked women's basketball team blew McGill Martlets out of the gym Sunday afternoon 102-48 and it was a pleasure to watch them do it.

As has been the case all year when the Lady Gaiters are involved in a league game, everyone including the opposition knows beforehand who is going to win. Often the games are boring or embarrassing to watch because Bishop's is so much better than their opponents. (They haven't lost a league contest in five years.) But Sunday things were different.

Bishop's played at the top of their game and it was a delight to watch eight superb athletes performing to the best of their ability. As Lady Gaiter captain Connie Classen said afterwards, "It was probably the most fun game I have ever played."

Bishop's players stole the ball, played defence, soared to the basket on layups and rebounded at both ends of the floor. "It was a big score," said Gaiter coach

Wayne Hussey, "but we didn't try to run it up. We were just playing very well and it is nice to go into the nationals like that. We played zone at least half the game and if we had wanted to run up the score we would have been in a full court press."

Bishop's got to the final game by defeating Trois Rivieres Friday 67-27 and held UQTR to just eight points in the second half while scoring 39 themselves. Andrea Blackwell was the top point-getter for the Gaiters Friday with 17 followed by Karen McComber who chipped in 14.

Sunday Blackwell was again tops with 22 while Lynn Polson who played a fiery game scored 20. Other scorers were Classen with 16, Denise Dignard with 14 and McComber and Teresa Grant each with 12.

Hussey feels his club is in a good position heading into the nationals even though he doesn't know what other teams will be there. A rematch of last year's final between Bishop's and Victoria however is a good bet.

"Everything we've been doing has been geared for the nationals and today we really started to play so it feels good," explained Hussey.

The tournament begins on Thursday in Saskatoon.

The men's team begin its playoffs Friday night against McGill, with the winner playing Concordia in a sudden-death final Sunday. The men's game Friday begins at 8 p.m.

Bishop's Lady Gaiters posed with yet another QUA pennant after yesterday's win over McGill.

RECORD/PERRY BEATON

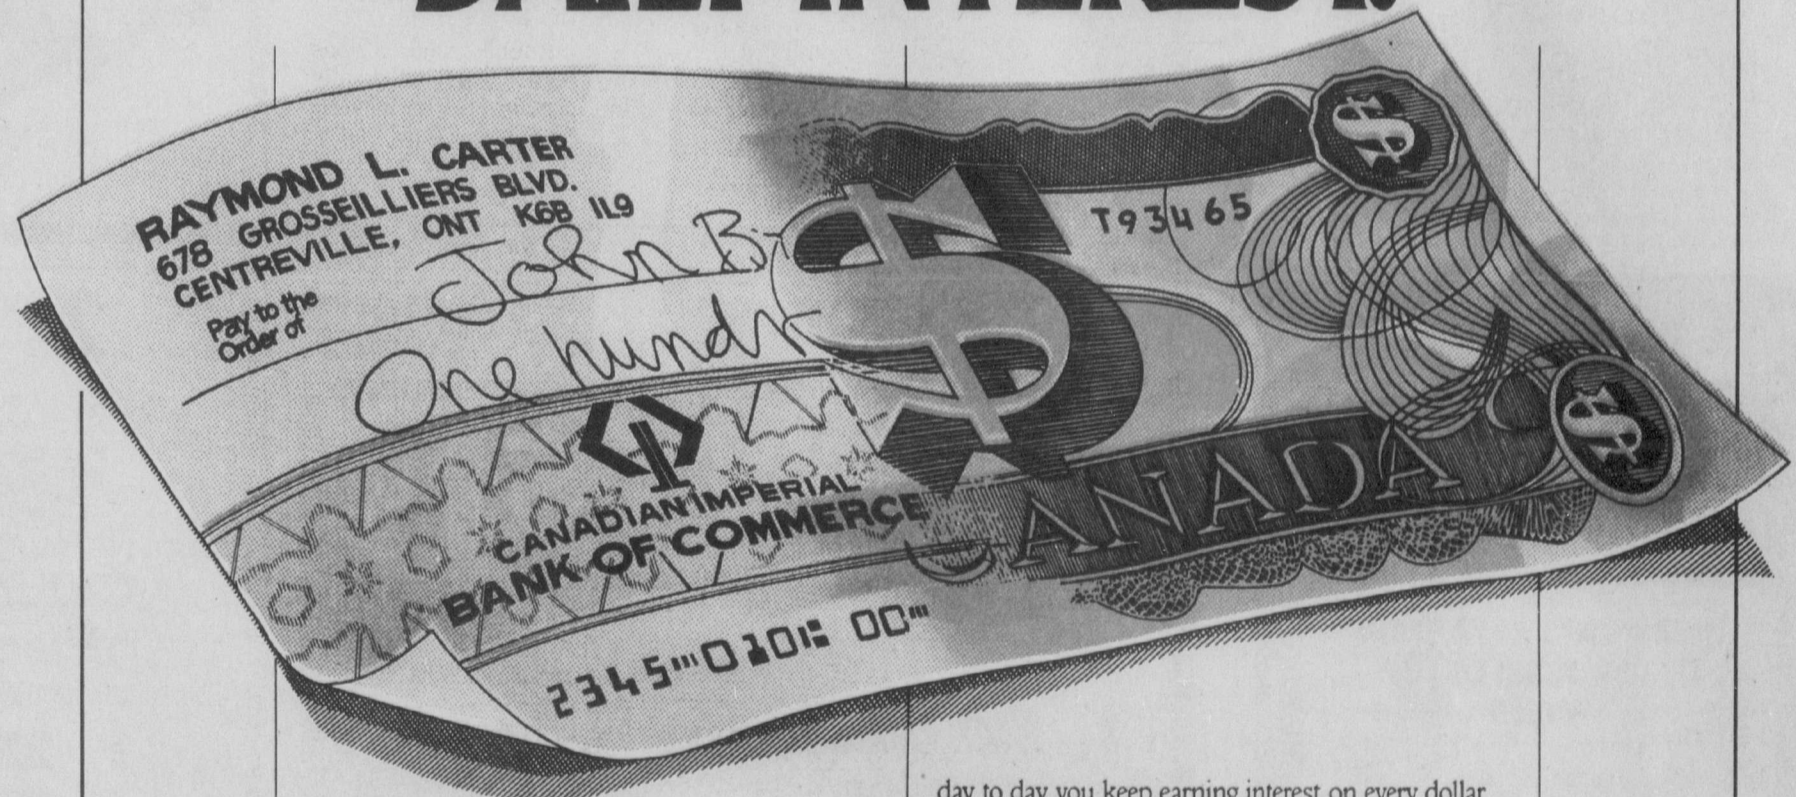

Andrea Blackwell came up big for Bishop's Sunday and will be counted on to continue her outstanding play at the nationals this week.

Congratulations to the Women's Institutes for 85 years organization

DUNHAM (BH) — Congratulations to the Women's Institute of Canada, who celebrated 85 years of its organization, February 19, 1982.

This organization came to be through the combined efforts of Erland Lee, of the Farmers Institute and Mrs. Adelaide Hoodless, Founder of the Stoney Creek Institute in Ontario.

The W.I.'s motto is "For Home and Country". Their objective, when it was first organized was to provide a means for rural women to meet together and discuss problems and possible solutions, and to learn more about carrying on their responsibilities and become better homemakers and citizens.

Through the years this organization has achieved what it set out to do, and today, includes all women from every walk of life, and all denominations. Now world-wide, it is also affiliated with the Associated Women of the World, an International Organization.

The first Women's Institute in the Province of Quebec was organized in Dunham, Jan. 27, 1911. Its Founder was Elizabeth Ann Beach. Her daughter, Ella Brown, still resides in the beautiful stone house on the Cowansville-Dunham Road, which was the home of Mrs. Beach.

To commemorate the organization of the Q.W.I., one can find in the centre of the small town of Dunham, a Cairn which was erected by the Provincial Quebec Women's Institute, and has been marked as an Historical Site.

Many worthwhile things have been and continue to be accomplished, as women all over the world meet regularly and continue to remain true and endeavor to work for Home and Country.

+ + +

Please note the following corrections to the Dunham W.I. news of February's report. The Missisquoi County meeting will be held on Tues. April 27, (not 25). The 500 dessert card party sponsored by the Dunham W.I. will be held Thursday, March 11, at 12:30 p.m. in the United Church Hall.
