Joint Hospital Campaign Starts October 15th

The Joint Campaign for Barrie Memorial Hospital and Huntingdon County Hospital, with an objective of $40,000. will be launched October 15th, and all plans are now in readiness for the canvassing of the Community. An office has been opened in the Sellar Block, on Bouchette St., for the purpose of handling the business of the Campaign and a member of the Campaign Committee will be in attendance daily during the weeks of the Campaign. The following members of our Community have generously consented to lend their assistance to the Joint Hospital project: Messrs. Gilbert McMillan, Chairman, and Francois Cleyn, Vice-Chairman; Mrs. W. K. Philps, Secretary of Campaign. Messrs. John G. Rennie, M.L.A., W. D. Fraser (Dundee), Ernest Watterson (Godmanchester), MacArthur Kelly (Hinchinbrooke), J. A. Brown (Elgin), Mr. Alex Fawcett and Francois Cleyn (Town), Mrs. D. J. O'Connor, Mrs. G. A. McHardy and Mrs. F. G. McCrimmon. Our local Doctors F. G. McCrimmon, Dr. Geo. Lefebvre, Dr. Kenneth G. Cameron and Dr. Paul M. Girard are lending their assistance in every way possible to make the Campaign a success.

HOSPITALS MUCH NEEDED ASSET

It is nine years since the Huntingdon County Hospital first became a much needed institution in our community. Then, the population of the Town of Huntingdon was about 1,952. Today it is 2,788. (This figure does not include Garden City). Not only has the population of our Town increased but the surrounding County has grown. With the increase in population the needs for our Hospitals has grown and they are dedicated to the health of the communities they serve. Today, through lack of space and impossibility of expanding of much-needed services, the Huntingdon County Hospital finds it has reached its maximum, whereas it should be growing and mutiplying to meet present and future needs. Above all, there is a lack of vital space. Realizing the need for more private rooms, modern surgery and laboratory, the Governors of The Huntingdon County Hospital are going ahead with a programme of expansion to take care of these needs, believing that the interest and generosity of the citizens of our community will make possible its realization from the financial standpoint.

HUNTINGDON COUNTY HOSPITAL NEEDS MORE ROOMS

Huntingdon County Hospital needs more rooms, supplying from six to eight beds and additional hospital facilities are required. These will be provided in a new wing which will be dedicated to the memory of the late Dr. H. R. Clouston. The Barrie Memorial Hospital needs assistance in reducing their bonded indebtedness and our County has received much benefit from the Barrie services.

This care of the health of the community can be completely successful, only, when each resident of the community becomes interested in the public's welfare.

You and your family are now being invited to become a member of these hospital organizations. These memberships are the cheapest insurance you can buy to help provide for that serious illness which may overtake you or any member of your family.

Looking After The Babies Born In Huntingdon County Hospital

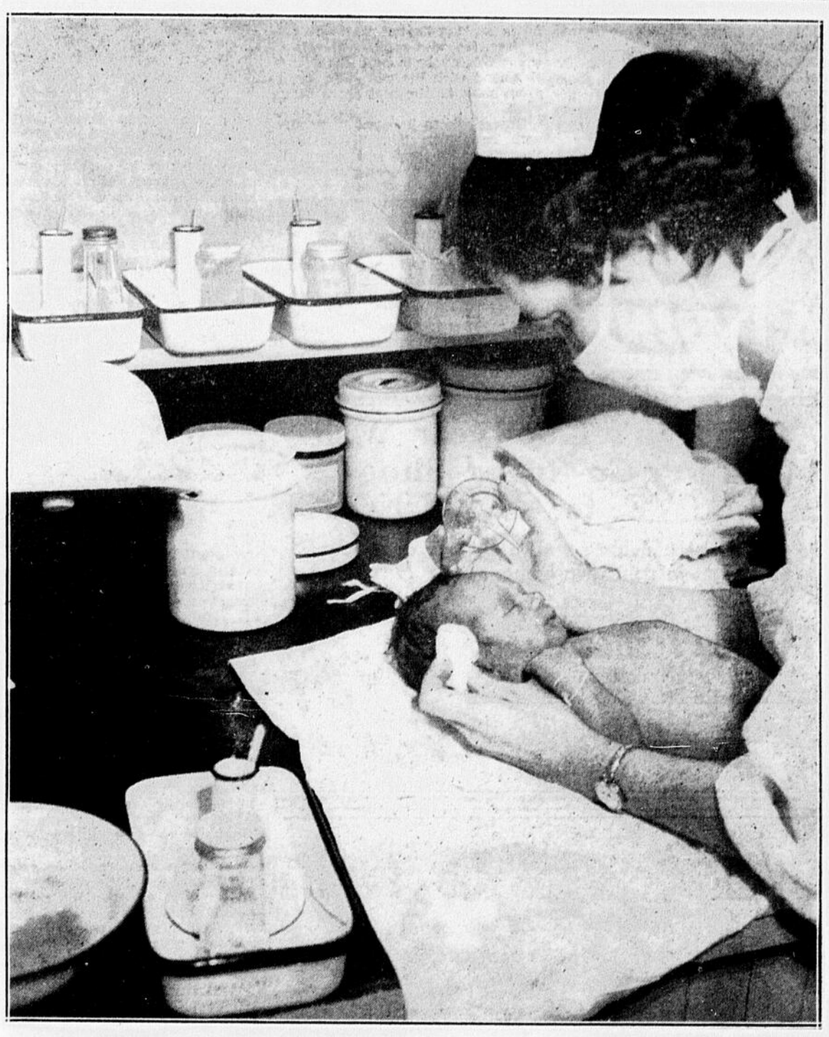

Being a description of the Photographs on this page.

With most people babies are always an interesting topic and in the photographs on this page are seen various views of babies and the first care they receive after they are born at the Huntingdon County Hospital. These photographs were taken to enable the people of Huntingdon to know something about what the hospitals are doing and to help in publicizing the big campaign that is just starting to raise $40,000. for the joint benefit of Barrie Memorial and Huntingdon County Hospitals.

The centre photograph shows a view of the nursery at the Huntingdon County Hospital and the babies are being cared for by Miss Doria Cool, R.N., on the left and Miss Teresa Vincent, R.N., on the right. These nurses are new arrivals at the Huntingdon Hospital. It will be noticed that masks are worn, this is to protect the babies from possible infection.

The Photograph at the left shows the Matron of the Huntingdon County Hospital, Mrs. E. Grant, R.N., at the incubator crib in which premature or very small babies are placed until they reach a maturity of the ordinarily born baby. Special care is given such infants and special temperatures are set for these incubators. Glass panels make the baby visible at all times so that close watch as to progress can be kept.

At the right, the photograph shows a procedure that all babies must go through. This is bathing time and as will be noticed on the shelf, each baby has its own set of utensils and the tray carries the name. On the left of the picture may just be seen the scales, by this means an accurate check of the weight of each baby is kept. Matron Mrs. Grant is the nurse who is looking after this important job. These are the future citizens of Huntingdon County.

Legion to Open Hall at Ormstown

October 20th Set For Ceremonies

A five-year dream will come true on October 20th when the new Legion Hall of Branch 196, Ormstown, is officially opened at Ormstown.

Quite a number of people do not realize the work carried on by the Legion Branches in their own communities.

Branch 196, Ormstown, in the five years since the end of World War II, with not too large a membership, has with the meager means at its disposal, furnished a room in the new Barrie Memorial Hospital at a cost of $550. They also will present at the official opening of their new hall, physio-therapy equipment to the governors of the hospital.

The aim of the Legion is to carry on the work and the hopes held by the men who laid down their lives so that this world would be a better place to live in.

Sometimes it seems such a hopeless task but the members have dedicated themselves to carry on.

Auto Thieves Caught Near Huntingdon

Four young men, one a minor, were apprehended on Thursday at about 7.30 a.m. by R.C.M.P. G. Crevier and charged with having stolen a car from Montreal with which they crossed the border at Trout River. Assisting Constable Crevier was Chief J. L'Heureux of Huntingdon.

The stolen car, a Pontiac sedan, was driven across the border at great speed and defied all efforts on the part of officials at the border to stop it. Officials were alerted at the border and word was sent to Chief L'Heureux at Huntingdon, who got in touch with the R.C.M.P. The young men abandoned their car at the home of a United States customs official and he was aroused by the noise of the car. He came out of his house with a shotgun and the men made off across the fields. Inspector Baxter was the name of the official and he notified American officials who in turn notified Canadian officials.

A watch was set and resulted in the four men being caught and brought to Huntingdon. They were lodged in the Town police cells until an officer came to take them back to Montreal.

The accused were: Maurice Blanchette, 19; Jean Guy Riofel, 23; Jean Mouffle, 21 and the minor age 17. All were from Montreal and Jean Mouffle, a member of the 22nd Regiment was listed as a deserter since September 29. The car was owned by R. Lazure, of Montreal.

Prize Distribution and Opening Exercises Held at Huntingdon High School

Rev. W. W. Conrad, Main Speaker, Talks on Education and Life

A capacity attendance was on hand on Wednesday evening, when the opening exercises of Huntingdon High School were held in the school auditorium.

The school band played an opening number and O Canada and considering this band is composed of practically all new members, it did very well. Bandmaster Moore was in charge. On the platform were members of the schoolboard, and invited guests included Rev. Thos. Knowles, Rev. J. B. Maclean and Rev. W. W. Conrad together with Principal J. B. Macmillan. Mr. Chas. Reid, chairman of the schoolboard, was chairman for the evening. Rev. W. W. Conrad was the main speaker, while Rev. T Knowles and Rev. Maclean said a few words of congratulation to the prize winners and graduates. Mr. Mac Ruddock gave a few words of welcome to the new members of the staff and to the pupils and staff in general.

Rev. Conrad took as the title of his subject "Education — To Make a living or Make a Life". He told the younger children that they did not go to school to learn to play hockey or football or to do just what they want, they went to school to prepare for the days ahead. It means hard work and attention to studies and he likened this to the ant that spent all the summer stocking up its food for the winter. If the pupils work hard, it will have results.

The speaker then went on to address himself to the gathering in general. In this he said that the student in the High School is not there just as a means to learn how to make a living. They must do more than that. They must get something done and the results would be what people would measure them by. Higher marks in exams are not enough, you are not being educated to make a living, but to make a life. A "living" is only part, the lesser part.

Farm Forum Rally at Ormstown, October 17th

Dr. E. C. Hope to Be Guest Speaker and Answer Questions

Dr. E. C. Hope, economist for the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, and of the outstanding farm economists in the Dominion, will address Chateauguay County Forums in Ormstown High School, on Oct. 17, at 8.15 p.m. Dr. Hope prefers to answer specific questions, which are invited from the audience, and the following are a few suggested as of interest to every farmer:

1 — What caused the recent drop in hog prices?

2 — Why do we have to pay 32 to 36 cents for binder twine?

3 — Why does the consumer pay so much for milk, in relation to the price received by the farmer?

4 — Why the spread of almost 100 per cent between the price received by Western farmers for their grain, and what we pay for it?

5 — Do high industrial wages help or hinder the farmer?

6 — Is the farmers' NET income falling?

7 — Does the 1934-39 period for establishing the price index give a true relationship of farm net income to others?

8 — Are farm prices, on the whole, in good parity relationship with prices farmers have to pay?

The audience will be asked to review the questions and are invited to use the question period freely, substituting any questions which are considered of more vital importance than any of the above.

The members are looking forward to a practical and worthwhile discussion and invite all farmers of Chateauguay-Huntingdon, whether or not they are Farm Forum members.

The Making of an Executive

To be a business executive is the ambition of many a young man. The business executive is a central figure in the economic and social life of Canada. Our prosperity as a nation and as individuals depends in no small measure upon the successful functioning of industry, commerce and finance under the hands of capable men.

Not everyone is a natural-born executive, but many can become good executives by training, by observing the methods and abilities needed, and by working toward self-development.

Being an executive is not merely having a massive desk and a nameplate on a door. It makes many demands upon a man, demands of temperament and drive and health. An executive is always meeting challenges. He must know his job, make sound decisions, and direct the work of other people. He needs imagination and courage.

The market value of an executive is determined by his special qualities. He is not paid for the thing he does, but for the moral content of his effort—his enthusiasm, his specialized abilities, his knowledge, his experience and his judgment.

Naturally enough, there are intelligence requirements, though successful executives differ greatly in their ratings on test. All of them have a high degree of ability to organize, and keen vision to see the path ahead. They are skilled in taking several seemingly isolated events or facts and detecting the relationships that exist between them.

We might say that it is not superior mental ability or age or social background or family affiliations that count in these days. The executive has transferred himself to a new arena, one in which his development of good mental habits is the key to success.

Choosing Executives

The problem in business is to get the right men and women, keep them, and develop them into good leaders. Facts are better than opinions in this screening: what has this man done? how has he done it? what can he do today?

Length of service alone does not qualify a man for executive rank. It is, undoubtedly, an advantage, but during it the man must have developed alertly. He must have learned to perceive meanings that do not appear on the surface. He must be almost psychic in his ability to steer safely through dangerous economic waters. He must be able to get on well with people above and below him in the firm's roster of workers.

Above all, the executive must be a leader of men. No business and no department will run itself. It needs a leader who keeps a jump ahead of the procession.

A leader is not one who achieves by his personal powers, but one who inspires all those under his command. Morale is the child of good leadership. Men work best for the executive who holds his beliefs with confidence, who will stand up on Wednesday for the principle he believed in on Monday. The executive needs inner harmony, which shows itself in judgments based upon sound thinking and in his whole attitude toward his business and society.

Confidence and Control

The executive is a man who must trust his own judgment. Success will never be attained by a person who has to ask advice before doing anything important, or who leans on the boss, or who asks how to execute an order. A man's self-confidence measures the height of his possibilities, and no man passes his own self-imposed limitations.

Synthetic self-confidence will not do. The most painful tumble a man can take is to fall over his own bluff. The bluff may be caused by his conceit, or by a foolish and unproved belief in his ability.

Next to confidence, built solidly upon knowledge, comes self-control. There never has been, and cannot be, a good life without self-control. It enables a man to adapt himself to the perpetual shifting of conditions, to meet unexpected challenges, and to deal effectively with crises.

This is one of the most difficult of all qualities to attain. Men in more humble spheres may indulge in violence, engage in quarrels, express themselves in angry passions, but these are unbecoming in an executive; they undermine his authority and destroy the effectiveness of all his other virtues.

Discretion is imperative in an executive. It is true that a man who never goes out on a limb may preserve the safety of his position, but he will never rise above it. That is not the kind of discretion we mean. The executive should have a hundred eyes to scrutinize a project before he calls upon his people to carry it out.

Courage

The executive also needs courage. Many a brilliant idea has been lost because the man who dreamed it lacked the spunk to put it across.

The budding executive who finds that he is too conservative should practise taking chances in a small way until he gets the feeling of self-confidence that comes from exercising initiative. The courage he is seeking is not mere absence of fear. He who realizes clearly all the risks involved, and decides to go ahead with his plan, is a courageous man in the best sense of the word.

Bravado is to be equally censured with cowardice. The ill-considered acceptance of any and every risk has no part in the essence of true courage.

The executive must have the power of decision. Life is constantly confronting us with a series of choices. We cannot avoid deciding, because even to seem to make no choice at all is in itself to choose not to decide.

It is not required that the executive make decisions in rapid-fire succession, though this seems to come naturally to some men. More crucial is the ability to arrive without dithering at a decision that is wise.

This is one of the traits watched in a man when he is being considered for promotion: does he come to his boss with decisions or for decisions? The man who says "Do you want to do so and so?" is trying to use the head of the man above him. Some weaknesses can be covered up by superior qualities in other spheres, but if a person is not certain and decisive he has only dim prospects of becoming a good executive.

Administrative ability is taken for granted as a necessary quality. In a great many businesses it is more important than technical knowledge. The good administrator is able to develop an organization and keep it working purposefully and harmoniously.

The good executive leaves his emotions at home, and only his family knows of his temperamental upsets. It is a sad day for the rising executive when his secretary warns his subordinates: "Don't go near Mr. Blank today — he is in one of his moods."

Seasoned Youth

It may be that the need for so many perfections has contributed to the preference of men for executive positions who have attained a certain degree of co-ordination through years of experience. Age in itself is neither handicap nor benefit. Many men who occupy high places in industry are going strong at sixty-five, while others have wrecked businesses at half that age.

It is only a feeling, not a fact, when the mature man experiences a twinge of envy in contact with younger people. He has not their light-heartedness, their casual manner, their air of living for today. But on the other hand he has poise, knowledge of the world, and understanding of people: assets which, in the very nature of things, younger men cannot yet have acquired.

Whether a man ranks as youthfully immature or fixedly aged depends not at all upon his calendar age but upon his mental age and his flexibility of thinking. The expression "seasoned youth" covers all cases: the young executive may take a seasoned attitude toward life and make good; the older executive may take a mentally youthful attitude, with wide horizons still beckoning, and keep on making good.

The Firm's Responsibility

The personal qualities of a man, however good they may be, are not made use of except in the proper environment. One of the bitterest situations for a qualified and eager executive is to be given a title without authority. Rank should not be looked upon as a reward for past services; it is given a man for the sole purpose of enabling him to meet responsibilities.

Everyone in an organization should know precisely what he is responsible for, what his authority is, and who does what in directing effort. The executive has the right to be consulted.

Many a firm would benefit by a stocktaking in this area. Progress in business, as in the making of the world, is the domination of chaos by mind and purpose. It can be achieved only when there is a basic philosophy and a good plan.

Let us ask, have the objectives and policies of the firm been defined? This may sound academic, but unless there is a clear statement available, how are executives to mesh their efforts? How are they to obtain teamwork on their own or lower levels? How are they to be sure that their time and effort are being spent productively? How are they to avoid the all-too-common frustration that arises when projects are squelched because the firm doesn't know whether it wants them or not?

The Human Problem

It is good policy for an executive to refrain from doing anything that can be done sufficiently well by a subordinate. If he hugs his job to his bosom down to the last trivial detail, he is being unfair to himself as well as to his people. He deprives himself of the opportunity to deal with more vital problems, to consider and plan expansion and improvement. He is, truly, working himself into an early grave.

Of course, one must not go too far. No good executive tries to delegate everything, including his own responsibility for seeing that the job gets done well. Those who do so have probably come into their offices by inheritance or accident, and not by winning their spurs in the open field.

Of all the problems faced by an executive, the human problem far exceeds the mechanical in difficulty.

No predigested psychology will give the executive what he needs in human understanding. It is good to study, but theory must be tried out and applied so that the right response becomes habitual.

It takes a big man of superior quality to be capable of treating little men so as to gain and retain their respect and affection. He is the sort of man who, instead of climbing upon his fellow workers whom he has pulled down, sets himself to help everyone around him in order that he may go up with them. No man has true power, poise, charm or good personality unless he has a genuine interest in people.

It is necessary to get along well with associates on the executive's level. There is a temptation for the young or new executive to lean over backward rather than appear to be a "yes man." Instead of that, he should accept gladly every gesture of friendship and help, seek to understand his associates' problems, give the feeling that he is genuinely interested in their work, and accept in good part even irritating things if his good sense tells him they are for his benefit.

Only if morale is high in a firm will production be high, both in quantity and quality.

Morale means more than an occasional staff party. It means that every man is interested in the success of the firm and works for it. Field Marshal Sir William Slim, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, is quoted in the Canadian Army Journal as stating this in a striking way: "An army must have Generals to lead it, but if the only men in it who have the mark of greatness are the Generals, it will win few victories."

Praising and Scolding

All great executives have turned away from inspiring fear and seek instead to increase devotion. The best way to arouse enthusiastic support is by expressing appreciation and encouragement. In giving praise it is not necessary to use a trowel, but on the other hand it is not wise to omit praise just because only a salt-spoonful is warranted.

We need not wait for a perfect performance to bestow praise. Often when we praise an improvement in a man's work we give him an incentive to seek perfection. The old idea that "everything is all right unless I tell you otherwise" is not good enough. The executive who lets his people severely alone unless some occasion calls for criticism is losing his grip on them.

It is foolish to scold. Reproof should be grave, and not taunting. Able men take great pains to prevent others being humiliated, and back away from the barren triumph of forcing them to admit they are wrong. In short, the Greek playwright hit the nail on the head when he wrote: "Our high rank, with greatness long acquainted, knows to use its power with gentleness."

Anyone aspiring to an executive position will compromise his chances if he develops a habit of criticising his superiors, except to their faces. All men have faults and peculiarities, but those of high executives are especially apparent because these men are so much in the spotlight.

It is wise, also to refrain from the habit of criticising juniors. To be under a barrage of criticism is ruinous to a person's peace of mind, and it destroys his will to go good work. When something is wrong, it is better to approach it in a helpful spirit. The only virtue in pointing out a fault in one job is to show how the next can be done better.

Training Assistants

The wise executive is on the look-out for men who can relieve him of detail, fill in for him when he is absent, and contribute to constructive planning.

When a department ceases to function efficiently in the manager's absence, management is bad. Every head of a department ought to be able to leave his desk, even in times of crisis. If he can't he hasn't the right kind of men working for him, or he has kept them too much in leading strings.

A Time to Apply Brakes

There are some aspects of business that call for carefulness in a man's climb to the top of an organization.

One of the great marks of a good executive is the appearance of ease with which he performs his duties. The man in a hurry shows that the thing he is tackling is too big for him. It is the lazy or inefficient man who is always too busy to listen to an idea.

Hurry is wearing on the body and nerves, too. No matter how high the pressure may be, it is well, once in a while, to apply the brakes. Too many executives have the idea that their irresistible drive demands that they ignore questions of health, leisure and relaxation. They regard these as shifting values with which they may play, increasing them or decreasing them as the demands of their main purpose allows. They pay an exorbitant price, one that need not be exacted at all.

Only when the body is in splendid trim will the mind function at its highest efficiency. When the body is too tired to allow a man to read more than his evening paper, he is being deprived of mental sustenance in a way that will reflect itself in his work. When restlessness takes the place of directed activity, and a man starts to fidget, it may signify that he has been driving his machine too fast and should slow down.

Beware of Flattery

Another thing to look out for is the opiate of flattery. The higher our station in life the more care we should take to keep our thoughts within the compass of humility. That doesn't mean degrading ourselves, or sitting quietly waiting to inherit the earth. It means what Edison meant when he said: "I haven't any conclusions to give: I am just learning about things myself." It means what Robespierre meant by his "prudent resolution to be satisfied with possessing the essence of power, without seeming to desire its rank and trappings."

When he detects an incense-swinger in his office, let the executive be wary. He should examine with appreciation what is said in his honour, but reject whatever oversteps a certain line he has drawn. If he allows any and all flattery to make an imprint on his mind, he runs the danger of becoming self-satisfied, then lax in his self-discipline, and, finally, apathetic about putting forth the effort needed for further advancement.

Resting on past laurels means fixation, of which some of the symptoms are delayed decision, sluggish judgment, and management procrastination. It is an insidious disease arresting development and starving personality.

A balance is needed between the superior feeling likely to be cultivated by listening to flattery and the sense of inferiority that is coaxed into our systems by feelings of inadequacy. If we find ourselves self-conscious, self-critical, touchy, unpoised, and suffering from feelings of persecution, we should look for something that is making us feel inferior. Neither superior nor inferior feelings conduce to the success of an executive.

Probably the nearest approach to an ideal for the executive is to combine humble and conquering feelings into what we might call healthy self-confidence, and to strike the happy medium between in-growing and out-giving that psychologists call ambiversion. To reach this desirable state one needs to build a personality made up of seasoned youth, knowledge, personal maturity, emotional stability and mental and physical alertness.

This means continuing to learn. One great foe to efficiency in an executive is the thought that he knows it all. Experts in various activities may do jobs, but the direction and counsel and the organizing of big affairs are done best by men who are always learning.

The executive should have part of both active and contemplative life. He should spend time thinking. His character can be nothing else but the sum total of his habits of thought. Enriched life demands an enriched mind. And, to speak on a very practical level, ten years of effort directed to one's work may not be as effective as ten minutes of concentration backed up by an informed mind thinking in a disciplined manner.

On Measuring Up

The measure of success of an executive is the success that attends his efforts. He is not fighting on a static field. He is increasingly conscious of the extent of the territory yet unconquered, and his conception of the extent of territory conquered decreases with every year. His story is one of endless recommencements, of the dispersal and reforming of doubts, and of the need, every once in a while, to examine whether he is measuring up to his own standards and those set for him by society.

No matter how far an executive travels on his upward path, his ability is put to serious tests. So long as his physical and mental health hold out, he revels in these challenges. He would rather accomplish something in spite of circumstances than because of them. He likes an atmosphere of collision and disturbance. As an honest workman he even welcomes a failure, because it teaches him something and gives him a new starting place.

The opportunity to do worthwhile things crowds upon the man who is sensitive to it. Only weak men cry for "opportunity." Sometime in his life — many times in some men's lives — opportunity knocks imperiously at the door. It offers itself in proportion to a man's ability, his will for action, his power of vision, his knowledge, and his readiness. All of these are virtues within the reach of everyone in this country.

What counts in a man's life is the number of opportunities he grasps. Small men waste their time looking for big opportunities, without preparing effectively to capture them when they come within reach. The big man uses his time taking advantage of the little ones as they come.

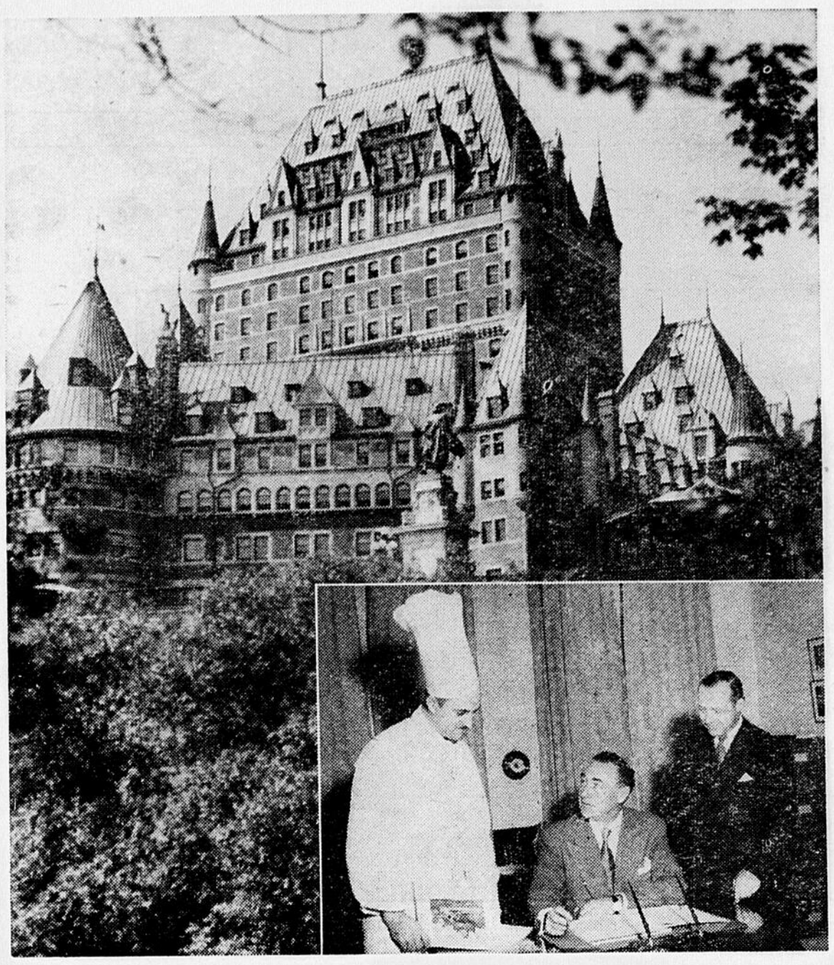

True Satisfaction

Complacency and self-satisfaction are dangerous traits. They cannot possibly lead to that sharp vision of higher and better things which is the mark and symbol of leaders. They mean, when we see them in a man, that he is content to flounder along on last year's or last century's knowledge, looking over his glasses severely and saying "no" automatically to everything new. He is a negative person, in whose way of life there is nothing to hope for, but only deterioration and destruction.

If there is one point worth remembering more than another, both by the aspiring young executive and by the man who has been through the mill, it is this: the successful business leader gets more satisfaction from doing a job than from contemplating the finished product. Far more real than completion and ease and prestige is the stimulation that arises from the sense of accomplishment. It is not a "game", as some like to call it, but a way of behaving and thinking that the executive finds rewarding, and in which he believes.

As to the executive's long view of his life and the purpose of it, he must have a certain idealism, a vision of what might be. He needs an honest purpose, founded on a just estimate of himself, and steady obedience to the rule of life which he has decided is right for him. He will, of course, have a sense of the perpetually unattained, but so long as he is, day by day, really what he desires to be accounted on that day, he is, too, perpetually attaining.

AWHILE back, he figured out just what a new tractor would do for his farm. He didn't have enough cash in the bank to handle the deal. So he talked things over with his bank manager, fair and square.

He got his bank loan — and the tractor. From now on, he expects to work more acreage, increase his farm income. Soon the bank will be repaid.

He looks to his chartered bank for market information, too, and any other banking service he may need.

That's what he wants. That's what he gets. Sound business all round!

Editorial Notes...

An Appeal You Cannot Refuse

THERE is an old saying that charity starts at home and we believe this can be made to fit the present drive for the community hospitals. There is nothing that has such a pressing call upon us as those things that affect our home life. In using the word home we do so in its widest sense so that it includes our town and community life. All of our public institutions are a part of our life in one way or another. We need our schools, our churches, our clubs and so on and they in turn need our support both in attendance and toward upkeep. None of these things will operate unless we give them our support morally and financially. The financial support given to each one may differ in its application, for instance we pay taxes and school fees to support our schools; we make contributions and we work for our churches; we pay fees and sponsor various events for our clubs.

But when it comes to our hospitals we look at it in another way. Why should a hospital need contributions, you have to pay for what you get when you go there and if you are not sick, then you don't need it anyway, so why pay for someone else? This may be a selfish outlook or it may be purely a business one without sentimentality. In some ways perhaps it is right, for if you pay a set fee for what you receive, then the hospital should be able to function on what it gets in this way.

Hospitals do not operate that way however. If they did, the average person would never be able to receive the aid of its services for the cost would be prohibitive. Now if that were the case and it became necessary for a person to go to hospital in order to save his or her life, that life would have to be lost because the charge would be too great. Thus it is that all hospitals have to go to the general public and ask them to give support in order that they can make it possible for everyone to take advantage of the services and treatment. The only other way in which they could operate would be for a special tax to be levied by the government on all people and then for each hospital to receive a sufficient grant to cover its operating expenses. We are already suffering from an overburden of taxation and it is quite evident that no one would want to be taxed a sufficient amount that would be needed to cover all the hospitals in Canada.

By everyone in a community making a contribution to the hospital the burden is much less and becomes a regular part of that community's effort. Such contribution rather than adding to the taxes helps to reduce them, for it can be considered in reckoning the amount of Income tax that has to be paid, as a form of deduction. Further benefits can be obtained if one becomes either an ordinary member or a life member. By being either of these and in the event that you become hospitalized, you would be entitled to a reduction in the ordinary daily fees charged by the hospital. Thus in cases such as this, let us say that rather than making a contribution, you are making an investment because it will pay you dividends in two ways.

Thus we go back to the first part of this editorial in which we mention that charity starts at home. By helping the campaign in behalf of the Barrie Memorial and Huntingdon County Hospitals, you will truly be following the meaning of that old saying. Your money will help the hospitals and it will in turn help you. We know of no other campaign that gives such excellent results. If you ever need the services of either hospital your investment in a form of membership will bring you returns by saving you money each day you are hospitalized. If you are never sick, then consider you have paid an insurance against the possibilities of poor health and you have won. In such an event, you will have saved money anyway. Perhaps you could also say that this is a selfish outlook, but if it is, then you have at least done your part toward helping another of our local and public institutions. May we therefore suggest that if you cannot afford a membership, that at least you give something, for every gift no matter how small swells the aggregate.

Welcome To Princess Elizabeth and The Duke Of Edinburgh

WE, The People, of Huntingdon, and the entire District of Beauharnois, are happy to welcome Their Royal Highnesses the Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh, to Canada. In view of the illness of the father of the Princess, His Majesty King George VI, and the trying few weeks that the Royal Family has passed through, it is most courageous of the Princess to face this visit and its tremendous responsibilities. We are also happy to know that the King is well on the road to recovery and thus the Princess will be relieved somewhat of her worries in this connection. It will be a strenuous time for the Royal Couple, meeting the various schedules, the throngs of people and attending the various festivals being held in their honour. Added to this is their hurried departure and arrival, on account of the postponement due to the King's illness.

While the people of this country were quite willing to forego the visit under the circumstances which seemed to make it impossible, they would have been deeply disappointed. It is therefore with the greatest appreciation that they welcome the Royal Couple who have done so much to keep their engagement with the people of Canada, despite the trying times they have had to face. Although it may not be possible for everyone to see this splendid and well loved couple, in the hearts of everyone in this vast country there will be great feeling and joy. Wishes for the success of the trip and hopes that the Royal Couple will thoroughly enjoy their visit, go out to them from the people of this District of Beauharnois.

Higher Phone Rates

LIKE everything else these days the cost of telephones is increasing to the consumer. A few months ago an increase in rates was authorized and passed along to the public. Seeing that telephone rates had remained stationary for some time, the public was not generally averse to this increase. Now, a further request is being made for permission to increase telephone rates and the feeling as to this is not quite so general. While there is no real hostile objection being raised there is a considerable voiced objection from many quarters. Several cities and towns are proposing to fight any further increase and many of the consumers feel that a new increase at this time is not welcome.

To press too strongly for this increase may be a bad move for the company in the fact that instead of increasing its revenue, it may find that with the increase it will remain either stationary or suffer a decrease. Many of the consumers who have a stationary budget feel that they are paying all they can bear for telephone service and if it is increased, they will just have to do without it. Many a wage-earner who is presently taking advantage of telephone service and who is already hard pressed by the rising cost of living, feels that to dispense with the phone would be one means to saving a little of his income.

With this feeling, we believe the company ought to view the application for increased rates with some alarm and apprehension. It is the private consumer who has built up the telephone service in the past several years and who has made it necessary for businesses large and small to give telephone service. It is this small private consumer that the increase in rates is going to hit first. From force of circumstances and not from choice, it is the private consumer who is going to be the first to have to dispense with the service. With a decrease in private users, the general service is going to suffer as well, as the small business may consider that it also can go along without the telephone. Those who may be contemplating the installation of the telephone, may also err in view of the increase in rates and cancel their application. It would not be profitable to the company if instead of a waiting list for new phones, it found itself with a surplus of instruments from which no revenue would be forthcoming.

Very little fault is found with the service which the company supplies its subscribers, so that reasons for dissent or reluctance to carry on would not be laid to that. It would be because the subscriber pressed from other directions had found that this was the straw that broke the camel's back. The telephone being easier to get along without than food, would be sacrificed in favour of the more necessary. Thus we believe that very careful consideration should be given the matter before actually being put into effect.

American engineers have been examining the Salmon River with a view to deepening it sufficiently for steamers to pass up to where the railway wharf is to be built. A meeting was held at Fort Covington on Tuesday evening to talk over the subject of the improvement of the river. Mr. Foster, who was unable from indisposition to be present, was represented by his son. There seems to be little doubt that the channel of the river will be cleared of obstructions and dredged where necessary next summer.

December 25

There are some who have been saving their wood for big prices, but they begin to think that instead of prices going up they will go down, as the demand is not nearly as brisk as last season. Coal is being used more and more every year.

Mr. Thomas McGavery of Godmanchester has a 3 year old filly that he raised from a nearly purebred French mare, and sired by Young Prince (one of the Bell horses) and which for size, form and action is hard to beat. She weighs 1,660 lbs., stands 17 hands high, girths 7 ft. and 4 inches. Has gained since last summer 244 lbs. and 1 hand in height.

Mr. McGibbon has had his salary as postmaster increased to $50 a year.

The bridge builders of the Canada Atlantic Railway are now working at the iron bridge that is to span the Chateauguay river. There have been three lengths of it on the cars at their station for some time.

Mr. Peter McFarlane of Kelso has rented the old Lang shop from A. and D. Bryson for five years. He is going to fit it up for a cheese factory. He has got the promise of over 300 cows to commence with, and it is expected the number will increase by another year if it works satisfactorily. The farmers here seem to have every confidence in Mr. McFarlane.

A party of amateurs from Burke gave a dramatic entertainment in Victoria Hall, on Friday, and had a full house. Several of the performers acquitted themselves very well, and the audience was tolerably well pleased.

On Saturday night customs officer Milne seized a sleigh and team, while crossing the lower bridge, with its load of four barrels of coal oil and a parcel of sundries. The owners got back their rig and goods by paying $275.

February 5

Mr. James Anderson, the Gore, has sold his steam sawmill, with the yard, five acres, and two small dwelling houses, to that enterprising business man, Mr. Henry Winter, who this winter at last, is getting out an immense quantity of logs. The reported price is $4,000.

George A. Mountain, resident engineer of the C.A.R. is preparing to build the swing bridge across the canal at Valleyfield.

February 12

Mr. Wright, the well known horse buyer from Boston, ships this week from Chateaugay, N.Y., a carload of the best draft horses that probably ever left this section. They are all animals in the prime of life, none younger than rising 5. Mr. Brecken took at the same time 18, his lot being more mixed and including some light drafts. Prices paid by both buyers were fair, for first class animals $200 being freely offered.

February 19

If Huntingdon has its toboggan slide Athelstan has its roller-skating rink, the old creamery having been fitted up as such. A capital floor of maple, scraped and waxed, has been laid at the expense of $140. The opening took place on Saturday evening, when the rink was fairly patronized, many being present from a distance. Barring a few tumbles, which gave proof of the hardness, as well as the smoothness, of Mr. Cranford's floor, all enjoyed themselves very much. The funds to fit up this new place of recreation were raised by small shares.

We regret to have to report that diphtheria which has been an unknown disease here for a long time, has appeared and several children are ill. One died yesterday. With one exception the disease is confined to the lower end of the village.

We hear the well known Clydesdale, Sir Walter Scott is dead. He had attained a fair age and will be long represented by the stock he has left behind him. He was one of Bell's best old horses, and his colts have brought much money into the district.

As the best possible proof of the correctness of the statements made in his letter, Mr. James Anderson asks the public to await the evidence to be given in the action to be taken against customs officer Milne for drawing and presenting a revolver in his store. As the matter will now be decided by sworn testimony it is needless for him to engage in a newspaper controversy.

The Pursuit of Security

By LEWIS MILLIGAN

Security is one of the most shop-worn words in the language these days. It is the agitator's war cry and the promise of the politician. There is collective security, national security, social security, economic security, old age security, job security, and union security. Even the security organizations are demanding security for themselves, But the pursuit of security, like that of happiness, is as vain as the chasing of bubbles. The word happiness is derived from "hap," which means to "snatch at." Happiness is something we get in snatches; it just happens. Security is defined as "the state of being free from apprehension, confidence of safety; sometimes over-confidence; freedom from danger."

These definitions obviously imply that there is no such thing as perpetual happiness or security in this world. The world itself is so constituted, with its continual change, as to render perpetual freedom from worry, danger and risk impossible. Even though our homes were free from the peril of earthquake, tempest, fire and flood, they would still be subject to the natural process of deterioration. No sooner have we built a house than nature begins to pull it down, and if we neglect to keep it in repair the structure will fall into decay. Every housewife knows too well that if she neglects her regular cleaning for a few days everything will be covered with dust.

Human nature is equally unstable, individually, socially and nationally. Mankind is made up of differing temperaments and talents; distinctive races, tribes and nationalities, living under a variety of climatic and social conditions. Although in some countries there appears to be little change from one generation to another, history is a story of continual human restlessness and insecurity. "Man never is, but always to be blest," wrote Alexander Pope, and he wrote two other lines which might well be taken to heart in these days of clashing political and economic creeds:

"For forms of government let fools contest;
Whate'er is best administered is best."

H. G. Wells spent most of his life in the promotion of Socialism, which he believed was the only form of government that would insure all-round equality and security. Latterly he came to believe that Socialism could succeed only if it were established internationally in the form of a "World State." That is what the Communists want, with Soviet Russia as the ideal and Moscow as the seat of World Government. But Wells had no admiration for Soviet Russia, and in his last days he had given up all hope of a World State. J. L. Hodson, the British novelist and playwright, in a recently published diary, quotes Wells as saying to him: "Both nature and human nature have turned against us."

"This is what happens to those who want to organize the entire universe their own way, says Paul Parsons in the British Weekly. Wells, like his friend, Bernard Shaw, died in disillusionment. It took those would-be reshapers of the world and its inhabitants a lifetime to discover what they could have learned from the Bible or from our own poets and scientists, that "the fashion of this world passeth away." When Margaret Fuller declared ecstatically, "I accept the universe!" Carlyle replied, "Gad! she'd better!" And we had better accept nature and human nature for what they are, with all their insecurity and imperfections, and make the best of them. We have witnessed in two world wars what happens to men and nations that wanted to organize the world their own way. They have made a horrible mess of things.

The Week At Ottawa...

OTTAWA, (CP)—He's Mike to his close Friends, Lester Bowles Pearson to the vital statistics people and External Affairs Minister to the country as a whole. For newspaper men he is also a source for good news stories.

For instance there wasn't much doing in the way of big stories on Parliament Hill. There was some behind-the-scenes activity as the cabinet got ready for the fall session but government spokesmen kept their plans to themselves. Preparations for the visit of Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh had been told already in great detail.

Then Mr. Pearson held his regular press conference, gave the story-hungry reporters different tidbits, all with considerable meat to them.

Naturally because of Prime Minister St. Laurent's visit to Washington to discuss the St. Lawrence seaway, it was a top subject. The External Affairs Minister, who many people see as a possible choice to succeed Mr. St. Laurent as Liberal leader, had something to say about it.

Still in Future

Difficulties in the way of the seaway will likely stall the start of construction beyond 1952, he said. Though Canada is going ahead with planning at full speed and there has been a surge of seaway activity in Washington during the previous week, the minister emphasized that many political and constitutional obstacles still lie ahead of the project. And most of the obstacles are in the United States.

Mr. Pearson is the only cabinet minister who regularly meets reporters in a press conference so the meeting usually covers a wide range of subjects.

During the course of the question-and-answer period, he also announced that Canada now has her own devices for detecting atomic bomb explosions in other countries, though not as fully developed as those in the U.S. News of Russia's recent second atomic blast reached the Canadian government from the U.S.

On the agriculture front, he said government information indicates the U.S. Congress may soon rescind a recent restriction on the importation of dairy products. As a consequence, Canada is not now contemplating retaliatory action against U.S. exports in this country.

International Scene

Turning to his own department, Mr. Pearson said Canada will shortly sign, with most if not all other N.A.T.O. countries, a protocol for the admission of Greece and Turkey to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. However, this country is not expected to be directly concerned with military planning for that area, and has made no troop commitments for the Middle East.

Canada soon will send a senior official to Europe for the first meeting of the Atlantic Pact committee appointed to work out plans for long-range, non-military development of the North Atlantic Community.

The External Affairs Minister said Canada agrees generally with Anglo-French-U.S. plans to moderate the Italian Peace Treaty. Any bid from Italy will get "sympathetic" consideration here.

Under a series of questions about the St. Lawrence Seaway, Mr. Pearson cautioned that the fact Canada has decided to go ahead alone if a joint Canada-U.S. scheme isn't possible does not mean in itself that the seaway will be built.

While President Truman agreed to give administrative sanction to a Canadian project if a joint one can't be started early, Mr. Pearson pointed to a possible new difficulty in the suggestion that even an all-Canadian undertaking would call for the approval of the U.S. Congress.

Since Congress has persistently held up the joint venture for many years, that could prolong matters indefinitely. Mr. Pearson said it might have to be ruled on eventually by U.S. constitutional authorities —presumably the Supreme Court of that country.

Meanwhile, he saw little hope of Congress at its current session giving full passage to seaway legislation revived since Prime Minister St. Laurent's trip to Washington late last month. It was pretty certain the Senate at least would not act at this session.

Before the House of Representatives was a new seaway bill introduced only last week. If that is passed, Mr. Pearson said, "the U.S. will have taken an important step

St. Andrew's W.M.S. Auxiliary Anniversary

CHATEAUGUAY — A very happy event took place at the home of Mrs. N. E. Jack, on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 3, when the Women's Missionary Auxiliary celebrated its 45th Anniversary.

Representatives from St. George's Anglican Church, W.A., St. Andrew's W.A., members and friends were present.

The president, Miss Rhoda McFarlane, welcomed the guests and conducted the worship service.

Mrs. Jim Johnson, president of St. George's W.A., and Mrs. Gerald S. Adams of St. Andrew's W.A., brought greetings and good wishes from their respective societies.

Mrs. David Lang gave an interesting historical sketch of the Auxiliary, which had been organized by the late Mrs. J. D. Anderson in 1906.

Mrs. W. J. Davidson delighted everyone with her rendition of two piano selections: "Song of Hope" and "Claire de Lune." Mrs. Jim Johnson sang very sweetly, "May the Good Lord Bless and Keep You" and "Bless this House." This was followed by a Candle Lighting Ceremony when several candles were lighted. The first one, by Mrs. David Lang, in memory of those who had been called to higher service,

"Blessed are they whose memories we cherish
Our thoughts add jewels to their crowns."

Mrs. L. G. Smith moved a vote of thanks to the hostess, the conveners Mrs. T. L. Cameron and Mrs. J. R. Dickenson, to the artists and the guest speaker.

As Rev. and Mrs. D. R. Morrison are severing their connection with Chateauguay, the president paid tribute to the high esteem in which Mrs. Morrison is held and thanked her for her co-operation and her services so willingly rendered to the Auxiliary in her capacity as Literature secretary and Leader of the C.G.I.T. Group.

Mrs. Lang and Mrs. Dickenson, on behalf of members and friends presented Mrs. Morrison with a Boudoir lamp and a cup and saucer. Mrs. Morrison expressed her thanks in a few well chosen words.

One of the pleasing highlights of the afternoon was the presentation of lovely corsages, by Mrs. Dickenson, to Mrs. Morrison, to Mrs. David Lang, the first president, to Mrs. Wm. Wright (in absentia) honourary president, and to Mrs. John T. Johnson who had recently celebrated her 85th birthday.

Following the benediction a social half-hour was enjoyed when refreshments were served. The tea table was centered by the birthday cake, which was cut by Mrs. J. R. Dickenson, the first treasurer.

Mrs. E. R. Richardson and Mrs. Ivor Jones poured tea. Assisting in serving were Mrs. Douglas Gilmour, Mrs. G. S. Adams, Mrs. Winston Herbert and Mrs. E. Moore.

Lover of Animals Presents Zoo For Children

The children of Huntingdon and surrounding district are privileged to be able to see many specimens of wild life being shown at the Zoo in Prince Arthur Square, Dalhousie St. Owner of the zoo, "Brown Owl", has chosen as his hobby the training and handling of wild animals, some native to Canada and many others imported from other countries. His main object in exhibiting these animals is to better the education of the children as to the proper treatment of wild life, to discourage the cruelty and mistreating that animals often receive. All the animals in "Brown Owl's" Zoo have been trained by him to do as he requests.

He started touring Canada 10 years ago, the first town he visited being Cochran, Ont. He remains about two or three weeks in each small town and much longer in large cities, to enable the children who are interested to become real friends of his pets. He spends his summer visiting these small towns and in the fall returns to his home in St. Gabriel de Brandon, Que., where he and his wife were married two years ago.

Included in his collection are: Russian Squirrels measuring 27 inches in length, a dancing monkey, a great Blue Heron, singing Sea Gulls, a Guinea Hen, Blue Jays, Angora Pigs, Hamsters, a Golden Pheasant, a 125-year-old turtle, and a 100-year-old Macaw which has been termed the nicest bird in the country, and many other pets. The outstanding friend of the children is a large Raccoon which has been tamed and trained by "Brown Owl" to play gently. "Brown Owl" delights in telling the children anything they want to know and is pleased when they ask questions concerning the habits or history of his pets.

How to Beat Inflation

War and the threat of war calls for the transfer of men and materials from peace-time production into the production of the implements of war. Men must be withdrawn from their regular tasks to enter the army, the navy and other war services. As this develops there is full employment, high total income, commodities become scarce and dear. The ordinary things men wear and eat increase in price.

There is an increase in spending power, a scarcity of goods, a tight labor market, a rapid turn-over of inventory. Wage rates increase, the cost of living moves up, we have boom conditions, an excess of purchasing power, scarcity of goods and easy credit conditions.

It's a dangerous situation. What are the remedies? There are three:

1. The government should set the example. It should cut out all non-essential expenditures. There should be no borrowing except for war needs. Credit should be restricted. This has now been done, to some extent.

2. This should apply to all other spending and not only to the expenditures of the federal government but to the provinces, municipalities and individuals. We should move in this direction, save money and stand ready to assist the war effort by loaning money when called to do so.

3. Installment buying should be restricted. Sensible people will not incur heavy obligations in periods of high prices which must be met in times of normal conditions. Meanwhile existing obligations should be liquidated. We shall be fortunate if the average citizen can clear up his obligations when wage rates are high and prices of farm products at top level.

The key note of today should be the reduction of present obligations. Dollars are plentiful. The sun of prosperity may not always shine. Look at this problem from two standpoints. Consider first the case of the farmer. Back there in the bad days of the depression in 1933 the index of farm products stood at 69. This is on the basis of 1935-39 equals 100. By March of 1951 the index of these same products had risen to 264.

If this seems difficult to understand, let us change it from an index which is purely a figure which represents a price. It means that a certain quantity of farm products which sold in 1933 for 69c reached in 1935-39 the level of $1.00 but in March of this year the same quantity of goods would bring $2.64. Controls, of which some people approve, are not a fundamental remedy for inflation. They treat symptoms, they do not remove the cause.

Inflation is brought by an excess of money in relation to goods. It arises out of the fact that during war or preparation for war we produce guns, tanks, 'planes. These are not consumable commodities, we cannot use or eat them. The money spent in their production is spread across the country. It provides purchasing power, it can be used for the purchase of other commodities. The result is the creation of an enlarged demand, a shortage of supply.

We need therefore the combined effort of the nation to produce more, consume less, save our money, liquidate our obligations. All this will tend to strengthen the position of the nation. Yes, strengthen the position of the free world. If, as may be possible, Korea is only one step towards a world war then our task is to strengthen our own position, prepare to take our part. Yes, we can beat inflation but it will take a strong and united nation to carry out the task.

Lunch Boxes—Make Them Prize Packages

WHETHER you pack lunches for a working man or for school youngsters, you're really preparing surprise packages for them. And lunch every day should be a happy surprise, the kind they'll enjoy.

Three menu "must's" for a lunch box are these: Something hot. Something hearty. Something fresh and crisp. Include those items and you're sure of grin-winning lunches.

For the something hot, soup is the perfect satisfying dish. You have a wide assortment to choose from in the condensed soups—tomato, asparagus, cream of mushroom, vegetable, chicken noodle. Just add the required amount of liquid and heat the soup. If you use a lip pan, you can pour direct from the pan to the thermos. The luncher may eat or drink the soup from his thermos cup. Be sure to send a spoon.

The hearty part of lunch is often a sandwich. Try new combinations of fillings and a variety of breads to keep up appetite appeal. Now and then, send a cup of salad instead of a sandwich. Potato salad with slices of frankfurters or a cottage cheese salad can be mighty tasty. Deviled eggs too are perfect lunch-box fare.

To round out the repast, fix crisp vegetable relishes and send some fresh fruit almost every day. Apples, pears, grapes, oranges — any one is refreshing. Just try to make it something different each time.

You'll find it easier to pack lunches if you plan them a week ahead. Here are some menu ideas to start with.

Special Treat

Cream of Chicken Soup
Doubledeck Bunwich (One Layer Cheese, One Ham on Round Bun)
Orange Segments and Grapes
Oatmeal Cookies
Surprise Package (Hard Candy and Peanuts)

Box Picnic

Bean with Bacon Soup (Prepared with Milk)
Deviled Egg
Fresh Tomato Wedges
Bread and Butter Sandwiches
Banana Chocolate Cookies

SOUP SCOOPS

CHEESE VEGETABLE SOUP: Next time you serve condensed vegetable soup, give it brand new appeal this way. Stir some shredded Canadian cheese into it just before you pour the soup into bowls. About 2 tablespoons of cheese is the right amount for 1 can of condensed soup.

• • •

CORN-AND-BEEF SKILLET SUPPER: Brown ½ pound of ground beef with some chopped onion and green pepper in a big skillet. Then stir in 1 20-ounce can of drained whole kernel corn and 1 can of condensed tomato soup. Simmer for 5 minutes. That's dinner all ready to go to the table with green salad and buttered French bread.

Letter Writing Should Be A Joy

Do you enjoy letter writing? If not, maybe it's because you do it in a place more suitable to a medieval castle than a twentieth-century home.

It's hard to make daily correspondence sound like Dickens or Hemmingway at a cluttered, poorly equipped or poorly lighted desk. Yet, although the average family's members spend many hours a week writing letters, homework, menus, notes or checks, little planning is given to the writing spots in many homes.

Homeowners whose writing desks or tables could stand modernization, improvement or more scientific placement should profit from the suggestions offered by Miss Jerlyn Madison, consumer consultant.

1. Most important, the writing corner should be well equipped. A good pen is essential. A modern pen holder—desk set, adds charm and reminds users to return the pen to its place instead of carrying it away.

2. Every writing corner, whether it's in living room, kitchen, work room or children's room, should be well lighted. Situated close to a window, it will have good natural light and will be close to an air supply on stuffy days.

3. Living room writing desks need not be new, expensive furniture pieces. An unfinished desk can be matched to surrounding furniture by a finish of coloured lacquer or an expert varnishing job.

4. The kitchen "business corner," equipped with fountain pen, mechanical pencil and spindle for bills, is a boon to any housewife. A desk conveniently built into a corner takes little space. An extra telephone in the "housewife's office" will enable her to do all her writing while keeping an eye on her cooking.

5. The children's writing corner should be a quiet spot away from home traffic lanes, preferably the children's bedroom. It should be equipped with fountain pen, ballpoint and mechanical pencil to give the small fry practice with each. Writing equipment won't disappear if attached to the desk by a gaily coloured cord.

6. The family writing desk is being transferred from living room to dining room in many modern homes. A seldom occupied room corner can be converted into productive space by a simple desk or table, built-in or ready made, painted or lacquered to match dining room furniture.

No matter where the writing corner is or how it's finished, it should always have a calendar and dictionary and afford easy view of a clock. Writing thank you notes, composing letters, paying bills and planning for shopping is less a chore and more a pleasure if done in surroundings planned for utility and charm.

TOWN AND NEWS

Donation Received

Huntingdon Citizens' Band wishes to acknowledge, with thanks, a donation of ten dollars received today (Wednesday) from the Huntingdon United Church Evening Auxiliary, "in appreciation of the help the Band so willingly gave towards making the Strawberry Social in June such a success".

Coming Engagement

Arrangements have been made for the Band to play at a regular Quebec Senior Hockey League game at Valleyfield Arena on Thursday evening, November 1st. The bandsmen will be seated near the electric clock and will play during the half-hour preceding the game and also during the first and second period. As is known to all hockey enthusiasts, Les Braves de Valleyfield were the Amateur Champions of Canada last year and it is no small honour that Huntingdon Citizens' Band be asked to play at one of their first regular games of the season. Incidentally, the Band hopes that a large number of Huntingdonians will attend this tilt, when the Braves will face the new and formidable Shawinigan Cataracts aggregation.

Band Practice

Band practice was held as usual this week on Monday evening at the Legion Hall. The previous week practice took place in the auditorium of Huntingdon Academy as the regular practice rooms were not available. Several new numbers, including popular and classical pieces, have been undertaken in the past few weeks and have considerably helped in "rounding out" the Band's repertoire. Next practice will be held on Monday at 8 o'clock in the regular practice rooms.

J.C.C. Hosts

Members of the Band and their wives and friends were guests of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at a weiner roast at Mr. David's farm, Route 52, on Thursday evening. A huge bonfire was made and the reflection of the fire could be seen for miles. The night was ideal for the outing and all enjoyed themselves in the "cool, cool, cool of the evening". Later the party adjourned to the Legion Hall on Fairview Road and dancing and entertainment rounded out the evening. The party was organized by Bandmaster Moore who is president of the local Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Dundee

W.I. News

DUNDEE—On Wednesday, Oct. 3, the Dundee W.I. held their monthly meeting in the Community Hall. Several guests were present, including Mrs. Clarence Carpenter, of the Home Bureau, Bombay, N.Y., and our county president, Mrs. Bernhardt, Athelstan, Que. The title of Mrs. Carpenter's paper, "Aging Successfully" intrigued her audience at once. "The longer we live the more like ourselves we become," was one of her first statements. Happiness is a state of mind in which our thinking is pleasant most of the time. Our emotions affect our health. An illustration of this was an experiment tried on a sheep. A bell was rung and the sheep given a shock. This was done several days and the sheep learned to expect the shock when he heard the sound of the bell. He began to anticipate these shocks and to become afraid. He lost his appetite, became very thin and was of no more use.

We must learn to be satisfied with what we have. We should try to keep on liking people. The speaker then told her audience to meet troubles bravely and to tackle everyday problems as they come.

Another necessity in aging successfully is to maintain a good sense of humour. Also one must keep usefully at work. Everyone should have a hobby. Each one can choose his own hobby. This is defined as something he wants to do in his leisure time. If what he does is fun then it is a hobby. What one person does as a hobby might be hard work for another if he dislikes doing it. A hobby offers an escape in time of trouble. It takes a person away from his daily routine. It helps one to become a more important person for often others are attracted to what he is doing. He contributes to more enjoyable family living for he can share his hobby with other members of the family and thus the family is more closely knit together. There are many kinds of hobbies such as Doing, Making, Collecting and Learning. It is never too late to begin. Some are chosen late in life, others have been started when the person was a child.

Another factor in the business of aging successfully is the menopause in women of middle life. This is the rerouting of the blood. The menopause is often dreaded for fear one will go insane at this time. This is an unnecessary fear for insanity does not result from the menopause. Diet is important at this time. The middle-aged needs fewer calories and not as much sleep is necessary. However a rest period in the middle of the day should be on the daily schedule. Also the mental attitude is important.

To close Mrs. Carpenter touched briefly on the bodily changes that also occur in a man in middle life. Certain glands do not function as formerly and he must take life easier.

If one watches all these things then one will age successfully.

Mrs. Bernhardt, the other guest speaker, spoke about the annual convention held at Macdonald College in June. Present there at that time were also 1700 delegates to the Associated Countrywomen of the World. She said each branch should try to make a scrapbook so there would be one to present to each delegate at the next convention of the A.C.W.W. in 1953.

She said the W.I. was trying to establish more cultural courses for the members. She also spoke about the fund being established for an agricultural bursary. This would mean about 50c for each member to pay. Each branch should compile a history of their own community. She said the Ormstown Fair Institute Booth was the best ever, $150 clear being realized. The Q.W.I. Service Fund is the only fund used entirely for its own members so each branch should contribute generously. Mrs. Bernhardt also spoke about the bookmobile which travels throughout Huntingdon County and the Eastern Townships. From this Institutes and other organizations can get library books.

Mrs. Bernhardt persuaded Mrs. Perkins of Huntingdon to bring the hooked rug with which she won first prize in the provincial contest last year. This rug is hooked entirely with used material which she had dyed herself. Also the pattern is an original one. Mrs. Perkins also showed two other of her rugs, one made with used silk goods and the other of the regular rug wool yarn.

Another guest of the afternoon was Mrs. Nigel Leclair of Bombay, N.Y., who won the household hint prize by telling how to transfer a pattern from a piece of embroidery. She said to place the material to be stamped on the embroidery, then to take an old worn spoon, rub it on the hair of your head and then on the materials over the embroidery and the pattern will be stamped perfectly.

Jams and jellies are to be brought to the next meeting for the Huntingdon hospital. Plans were also made for the card party to be held on Friday, October 12.

The Legion members are willing at all times to help and encourage all worthy endeavours in the district.

The new hall comprises a main hall for business and entertainment, a kitchen, a full-size basement.

Upstairs will be used by the Boys' Band to store their instruments and uniforms and band practice will be held in the basement.

A work of art is the new fireplace which visitors will certainly admire, and above the fireplace a bronze plaque will hang bearing the names of the men who laid down their lives and are buried on foreign soil.

On Saturday night, Oct. 20th, starting at 7.30, a parade of Legionaires will march from the Ormstown High School to the new hall on Barrington street.

Members from neighbouring branches have been invited to attend and it is hoped the public will come out and share in this night which means so much to the Legionnaires.

A high official from the Montreal headquarters of the Legion will cut the ribbon officially opening the front door.

The evening will be celebrated by refreshments and Bingo in the basement.

A cordial invitation is extended to everyone to come to the hall at approximately 8 p.m. and witness the ceremonies and join the gathering for the rest of the evening.

In Memoriam

SAMPLE — In memory of a dear son and brother, Melbourne, who passed away Oct. 14th, 1941 —
Little we knew that morning
As it dawned another day,
Before the shades of eventide
God would call you away.
Time cannot mend a broken heart
Or mend a broken dream,
All we have left are memories
Of a world that might have been.
Loved and remembered always by Father, Mother, Sister and Brother Will.

C. of L. Index New Record

Some Food Items Lower But Others Rise; Rent Increases Shown

OTTAWA, (CP)—Consumers were hit again in August as the cost-of-living index continued its post-war climb, but a decline in prices for a variety of food items kept the increase to the smallest since last April.

The index jumped 0.9 points to a record 189.8 from 188.9, the Bureau of Statistic reported. The peak jump this year was 4.5 points in February; the lowest, 0.2 points in April. The index is based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100.

For the first time since last April, the food sub-index, considered the most important item in the general index, declined 0.3 points from its peak of 251.4 from 251.1.

Prices were lower for a range of vegetables, including potatoes, carrots, cabbage, turnips, onions; pork shoulder cuts and lamb; bananas, various fish products; and vegetable shortening.

These more than offset higher prices for beef, bacon, butter, cheese, eggs, cocoa, oranges and canned vegetables.

But there were other headaches for consumers. Rents were higher, so were woollen goods, footwear, coal and coke, dishes, hardware, floor coverings, transportation and recreation costs.

The entire range of price climbs pushed living costs in Canada up 88.3 per cent since August, 1939, and cut the purchasing value of the dollar to about 52 cents of its value in the 1935-39 period.

The Bureau recorded lower wholesale prices in September, but there was no certainty how soon or to what extent these lower prices would affect the cost-of-living index.

With the exception of food, all sub-groups in the index were at peaks.

Rents, based on a quarterly survey, jumped 2.9 points to 142.7 from 139.8. With coal and coke higher, the fuel and light group increased 1.3 points to 149.5 from 148.2.

Higher prices for footwear and woollen wear boosted the clothing group 2.3 points to 206.9 from 204.6, while price rises for hardware, floor coverings and dishes increased the homefurnishings and services group 0.1 points to 199.1 from 199.0.

JOURNEY BY HOME-MADE LAUNCH

Four Canadian sea cadets had the greatest adventure of their lives this summer when they and their commanding officer sailed through England in a home-made motor launch they took all the way to England from their Northern Alberta home. In the above photo, the Canadian boys are shown on board their boat on their arrival at London after covering the distance from Liverpool by inland waterway. The boat, under the charge of Rev. Father J. E. McGraine, Roman Catholic priest from Lac la Biche, Alberta, was met at London by Captain A. D. H. Jay, DSO, DSC, RN, representing the Admiralty, shown greeting Father McGraine, and R. A. McMullen, Agent General for Alberta in London. The cadets, of English, German, Ukrainian and French extraction and from Lac la Biche, are left to right: Jackie Wolstenholme, 17, Harold Klein, 16, Wilf Woychuk, 17, and Romeo Lebeuf, 15. Prize Distribution ..

Parents may have in their minds what they would like their sons and daughters to be, but these sons and daughters may have other views. Consequently, the children did not always do as their parents would want them. He quoted several instances of this, among them Florence Nightingale, who was to have been a society girl with lots of leisure, but who became the founder of modern nursing. He spoke of Robert Louis Stevenson, whose father wanted him to be an engineer, but who finally became a writer.

Education is preparing for life. Life is always bigger — more important than its material rewards. Mere achievement is not enough — nor money with the powers it gives us to get what we desire to have. True living is always on a higher level. The best teachers will never be paid what they are worth. The best parents are alive to the pliant, changing, unpredictable personality of boys and girls, and will not too strongly try to impose on them their own aims and ideas. Let us take this high and serious aim in all our educational aims and efforts.

Following the addresses, the prize distribution took place with Principal Macmillan reading off the names and the chairman handing the student his or her prize.

An Appeal on Bebalf of The Blind at Valleyfield

Can you with all your faculties, afford to neglect those who through no fault of their own must live in a world of darkness? On October 1st, the Valleyfield District of The Canadian National Institute for the Blind launched its second Annual Campaign in aid of the sightless inhabitants of Valleyfield, and it will be asking you, Mr. and Mrs. Public, to rally behind it and help it to reach its objective of $5,000.

$5,000. is not a great amount when distributed over 22,000 people. Every dollar which you subscribe will go toward helping some sightless person either with direct financial aid, employment, home teaching, hospitalization and other medical services, or what is even more important, it may restore sight to some man, woman or child, or it may prevent one with sight from becoming blind. Every householder in Valleyfield will be receiving or will have received a pamphlet, setting forth the work which the Institute has performed over the past year. Read the Institute's position on these pamphlets carefully and judge for yourself and your employees what the Institute is doing with your support. We leave you to be the judge. The only thing we ask you to remember is the blind person who lives on the next street to you and those children who this year were placed in a school for the blind due to the efforts of the Valleyfield District of The Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

When the canvasser calls on you do not send him on his way empty handed. Every donation, large or small, will be greatly appreciated and any donation of $1.00 or more will be acknowledged by an official receipt for income tax purposes.

If the canvasser fails to call, send your donation to The Canadian National Institute for the Blind, 45 Jacques Cartier St., Valleyfield, or to Mr. Duchesne, Manager of the Royal Bank of Canada, Valleyfield.

Obituary

THE LATE JOHN ROBERT HELM

Mr. John Robert Helm, a resident of this district, passed peacefully away early Sunday morning, Sept. 23, at his home. Born on the Ridge Road he was the eldest son of the late Jacob Helm and Agnes Laird. His entire life was lived on the farm on which he died. As farming was his profession he always had a good herd of purebred Holsteins. He was a good neighbor, always willing to lend a helping hand in time of trouble and will be greatly missed by them. On Aug. 28, 1940, he was united in marriage to Margaret Foster. To this union three children were born. In addition to his wife and three children, Linden, Joanne and Donald, he is survived by one brother Joe, two sisters, (Sadie) Mrs. O'Neil of Shelborne, Vt.; (Elizabeth) Mrs. Sangster Lindsay of Tatehurst; a sister (Jessie) Mrs. Ernest Pringle predeceased him a number of years ago.

Funeral service which was conducted by his pastor, Rev. W. S. Hatcher was held in St. Paul's Church, Herdman, Que., on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 25th, and was one of the largest attended funerals in this district for some years, showing the esteem in which the deceased was held.

The pallbearers were William Tully, Sam Herdman, William Irwin, Donald Hamilton, Cecil Murphy and Alex. McKay. Burial was in the family plot in St. Paul's Anglican Cemetery. The flowers were many and beautiful.

Those who attended from a distance were Mrs. Sadie O'Neil, Warren and Marion of Shelbourn, Vt., Mrs. M. Burnfield, Alex., Mr. and Mrs. John Burnfield of Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. C. Bennett, Miss Marion McArthur of Verdun, Mr. and Mrs. J. Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Foster and Mr. John Foster of St. Urbain, Miss Janet McKay, R.N., of Lachine Hospital, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McKay, Kenneth and Stuart of St. Urbain and Mr. Wylie McArthur of Ashley Falls, Mass.

Ormstown Study Club Discusses Civil Defence

Ormstown Study Club met at Ormstown High School on Wednesday evening when courses for this years session were introduced. Study groups in the first section included Typing with instruction by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur White, Senior and Junior French under the leadership of Mrs. Laird Lindsay and Miss Isabel McOuat, respectively. Mr. R. E. Corkran gave a most informative talk on "The Service of a Bank to the Community."

An extremely interesting talk on Civil Defence was given by Chief Inspector Bleau followed by an informative discussion with the audience. The attendance could have been better but those who were present were shown how the involved workings of Civil Defence operated and how personal this subject could be to each one of us.

Chief Inspector Pleau outlined the over all Federal organization before detailing the municipal grouping of operations while Dr. Lamquin supplied practical demonstrations of self aid against radio-activity and contamination. Mayor Balcer also assisted in the panel discussion.

The main impression gathered from the folks was the emphasis on Self-Aid; how much each one could do for himself and neighbours in a time of emergency.

This Week In Quebec

Specially written for THE HUNTINGDON GLEANER

QUEBEC, (CP) — This ancient capital Tuesday greeted Princess Elizabeth and her husband, Prince Philip, as they opened their month-long tour of Canada.

The royal couple, after being greeted by Lieutenant-Governor Gaspard Fauteux and Premier Duplessis as they detrained at Wolfe's Cove, visited the legislature buildings, Laval University, City Hall, The Citadel, the coliseum and Bois de Coulonge.

The visitors arrived in Montreal by plane Monday and proceeded to Quebec on their special 10-car train, spending Monday night "somewhere in Quebec."

The Princess and the Prince, the Duke of Edinburgh, also made an appearance at a concert of the Quebec symphony orchestra, celebrating its 50th anniversary this year.

At a state dinner, tendered by the province, the charming Princess spoke a few words after Premier Duplessis proposed a toast to her health.

The Quebec government is considering adoption of a town planning code for the province, Premier Duplessis announced at last week's press conference.

Acting on a suggestion made by the union of county councils, the government is looking into the possibility of drawing up a code which would apply to all cities and towns in the province, and all settlements bordering provincial highways.

The town-planning code will not interfere with municipal autonomy or the rights of individuals, the premier said, but he did not indicate whether such a code might be ready for the session of the Provincial Legislature opening Nov. 7.

Premier Duplessis also announced the government approve any plan to establish a newsprint plant on the St. Lawrence north shore exclusively for European consumers.

Such a plan would help overcome the world newsprint shortage, the premier said, and at the moment Canadian and European industrialists are interested in the idea.

"In Europe," he said, "and throughout the world there is a shortage of newsprint. This shortage presents numerous disadvantages, for instance, anti-communist publications in Europe do not have enough newsprint to meet their needs."

He dismissed other suggestions to increase newsprint production in Quebec, which now produces 51 per cent of Canada's total output.

These suggestions include Sunday work and stepped up production in existing mills.

Quebec mine owners are planning to operate on a "collective ownership" basis mineral ore refineries to be built at a cost of $10,000,000, Premier Duplessis said.

The Premier said the refineries project, previously announced, "would decentralize industry in the province, and would keep the refining operation of locally mined ore within Quebec, and within Canada."

WAR ON RAGWEED

FREDERICTON, (CP)—Premier McNair of New Brunswick declared "ragweed in New Brunswick must go" when he launched a government-sponsored drive to eradicate the weed by spraying. The province is already free to a large extent of ragweed, bane of hayfever sufferers.

Puffing Billy Being Replaced By Modern Diesel

It is a long time since anyone saw a train such as the one depicted above and the steam locomotive of today is as far removed from this one as the Modern Diesel shown here is from today's locomotive. This is advancement of the ages. As much as people of the era of the steam train above were horrified at this monster when it first appeared, so are people curious of the modern diesel shown below. Each is designed to do the same work, but the design is so vastly different that neither one has a comparison. The old puffing billy above would probably roar along the rails at 10 miles per hour, while the diesel below will probably travel at speeds in excess of 60 miles per hour.

For long years we have listened to the whistle of trains as they neared certain spots, but this is gradually being replaced for the deep sounding horns of the diesel. Many an oldtimer will miss the whistle of the steam train as many of them claim they could tell the state of the weather or impending weather by the tone of the whistle. There are some other people who will welcome the news that the whistle is on the way out, as they claim it disturbed their rest on many occasions. But there is a certain amount of magic in that whistle, it recalls travel to distant places and when one sits in the train at night with the wheels buzzing off the miles with that clicking noise. We can always remember the whistle as it sounds from the distance and then fades away again into the distance and we say that is the old 9.15 and we set our watches. Yes, we shall miss the steam train, be it old puffing billy or the later 6000 type. The modern world is gradually turning to oil burning locomotives of the diesel type and the coal burning locomotive is giving way to them.

Thus it is today that we find a number of the trains passing through Huntingdon are drawn by diesel powered engines and we hear much of those deep sounding horns. These will be noticed on the diesel shown in the photograph. How long it will be before the steam train has entirely disappeared, we cannot say, but it bodes no good for Mr. Lewis and his miners. The steam train has been a great source of business for the coal mines for years and each diesel presents a loss to that industry that may well be regretted.

Thames Swans Hit Headlines

England's pet swans on the Thames rate a press that many a movie star might envy.

Even when they get a bath it's news, as happened lately when more than 60 of the birds were given a shore shampoo after ship's oil and bilge had discoloured their snowy plumage.

Earlier in the year, a note of emergency marked still another report of mass swan scrubbing by the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. A number of swans had been contaminated by tar flowing into the river at Oxford. The shampooing was administered at urgent speed lest the birds, in cleaning themselves, should die from eating the sticky substance.

Each July the Thames is the scene of a traditional ceremony known as swan-upping, the National Geographic Society notes. For days a flag-decked procession of skiffs cruises upstream from London carrying brightly costumed swan masters. Their job is to up, or lift the birds out of the river, and mark new young ones with the proper symbol of ownership.

In accordance with centuries-old custom, the Thames swans belong only to the King and to two of London's ancient guilds, the Dyers' and Vintners' Companies.

The King's swans are unmarked, a reminder of the time when no subject could own the royal bird without license from the Crown. Each of the two companies still uses its own swan-mark. A penknife nick on the right side of the beak distinguishes the Dyers' swans; nicks on each side of the beak indicate those of the Vintners.

There are now 600 or more swans on the Thames. Ownership of each season's additional crop of cygnets, or young, follows the mark of the brood's parents. In cases of mixed mating, the offsprings are divided as evenly as possible between the owners of the parents.

Crop Sequence In Mixed Farming

OTTAWA.—A proper sequence of crops is a definite aid to the farmer in Eastern Canada in providing a profitable income and at the same time maintaining a high level of soil productivity. While the kind of crops to be grown are dependent on many factors, once they have been selected, the operator often has several alternatives in determining their particular cropping sequence.

Results of crop sequence experiments by the Division of Field Husbandry, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, reports W. E. Cordukes, indicate that the yield of most farm crops are higher following crops of alfalfa and red clover than such cultivated crops as potatoes, corn or mangels. For instance, the ten year average yield of corn following alfalfa was 17.74 tons per acre as compared with 14.37 tons where corn was the preceding crop. Similarly, potatoes yielded an average of 265.9 bushels following alfalfa, 255.6 bushels after red clover, but only 226.7 bushels and 160.7 bushels per acre when preceded by crops of oats and potatoes respectively. In the same experiment, the average yield of oats following corn was 57.6 bushels per acre as compared with 49.2 bushels when preceded by an oat crop. Thus, for the mixed farming areas of Eastern Canada, the growing of crops in the following sequence, cultivated crops, cereal grains and then hay or pasture crops, would provide the maximum benefits to be gained from crop sequence, and allow the operator a flexible cropping program.

When such a sequence of crops is followed, farm manure and or commercial fertilizers may be applied to the most responsive crops and the overall productivity of the land increased.

Franklin Centre

Franklin W.I.

The October meeting of the Franklin Centre Branch of the Women's Institute was held on Friday afternoon, October 5th, at the home of Mrs. Murdoth Rosevear with Mrs. Rod Arthur as joint hostess and an attendance of 14 members and visitors.

In the absence of president and vice-president, Mrs. Jas. Bruce took charge of the meeting, which was opened with ode and creed.

The roll call was answered by naming an illness beginning with your initial and the remedy for it.

The traveling library was discussed and it was suggested that we discuss the matter later on at a meeting with a larger attendance of members.

Home Economics gave the convener's of Home Economics report. Publicity read an article on the Traveling Bookmobile. Mrs. Bruce read an article on Quebec Laws of Margarine Attacked for agriculture. She also read an article on "What I have learned on being a member of the W.I.", written by Mrs. T. S. Gardner. Mrs. R. J. Blair gave a short talk on Thanksgiving, which was enjoyed and commented on.

Mrs. C. Cowan demonstrated an ornamental doll dressed in strainer pads which was much admired; also a dust cloth bag made from a small-sized flour bag.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Trans-Canada Road Spans Hundred Miles Of Water

The development of Port aux Basques in the southwest corner of the island of Newfoundland, which is now beginning, marks a new stage in the construction of the Trans-Canada Highway, which will ultimately run its course for about 6,000 miles from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Victoria on Vancouver Island in British Columbia.

For about 100 miles, or 2 per cent of its entire length the new highway will be by water, that is from Port aux Basques to North Sydney, Nova Scotia; from Prince Edward Island to New Brunswick and from the mainland of British Columbia at Vancouver to Vancouver Island on the Pacific coast.

The new province's segment of the Trans-Canada Highway which ultimately will span the island to St. John's the capital, is now being built between Port aux Basques and Corner Brook, about 100 miles up the west coast. It is expected that the new transport facilities will be a great help to trade between Newfoundland and the rest of Canada and to the island's tourist traffic. Building the highway across Newfoundland will not be an easy task and will take some time, as the course it will follow will be tough and rocky.

The construction of the highway across the country is progressing in varying degrees. The road, which is not to be a speedway but a first class, hard-surfaced, two-lane highway, is getting ahead considerably more rapidly in the provinces of British Columbia and Ontario than in most of the other provinces. In two provinces, Nova Scotia and Quebec, no agreement has yet been reached between the federal and provincial governments. Agreement will likely come, it is believed, when certain points of difference are smoothed out.

In some other provinces, while differences on the line of the highway have been satisfactorily settled, there are other urgent calls on the public treasury which prevent an immediate all-out program in the highway construction.

The costs of the highway are divided equally between the federal government and the provinces, and the central authority credits the provincial governments with one-half the cost of older roads which are the foundation of the transcontinental highway. The whole cost of the highway has been estimated at $300,000,000.

With the road making strides in Ontario, particularly in the North, where there has always been a hiatus in road travel, and in British Columbia, where mountains have to be traversed, it seems reasonable to believe that in a very few years there will be a transcontinental highway across Canada, even if some stretches will not come up to the standards of the original program. The original time estimate for the completion of the road was seven years.

Aureomycin Used For Calf Scours

Recent experiments in several states have proved that calf scours, greatest killer of dairy calves, can be greatly decreased by the addition of small amounts of aureomycin to the diet.

It has been estimated that scours, or diarrhoea, costs the dairy industry untold millions annually. This disease occurs in calves any time from 12 hours after birth up to a few months of age.

Tests carried out in Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Pennsylvania and New York with aureomycin also showed that calves had a growth rate increase of up to 25 percent. over calves not getting the antibiotic.

Scours may be caused by either to poor sanitation. Since rapid ingestion of milk can also bring on scouring, most dairymen recommend that rate of consumption be regulated.

By feeding 14-week-old calves larger amounts of aureomycin in a feed supplement, Dr. L. L. Rusoff of Louisiana State University brought about an average daily gain of 1.42 pounds in four weeks, compared to 1.04 pounds for those not receiving aureomycin.

In a paper presented before the American Dairy Science Association at Knoxville, Drs. Rusoff and A. V. Davis reported that aureomycin caused a growth increase of 25 percent. in Jersey calves and 15 percent. in Holstein calves. They also noted that the antibiotic appeared to lower the incidence of scours.

Further reports from state experiment stations in Kansas and Iowa told of increased growth rates, a decrease in scours and colds, and a marked improvement in the appearance of the animals.

Recent trials were made at Pennsylvania State College with 53 cases of calf scours. The report showed 46 were cured with aureomycin, five calves improved, and only two died. The report concluded that aureomycin treatment is superior to any combination of sulfa drugs.

Discover Oddities In Ancient By-laws

FORT FRANCES, Ont. (CP) — Fort Frances town councils have passed a lot of legislation during the past half-century but the municipal fathers still get a kick out of some of the early by-laws.

One of the first — by-law No. 10 — was passed June 15, 1903, by a town council led by W. J. Keating, the first chief magistrate of Fort Frances. It was fearlessly created to govern "public morals and nuisances" and included almost everything from swimming to making use of "obscene, blasphemous, or grossly insulting language" within the town limits.

It prohibited the use of bows and arrows, fire "squibs" or crackers, and galloping of horses, oxen or mules "at an immoderate rate" on town streets. The streets were also to be kept clear of "nine or ten pins, cricket and ball."

A tremendous volume of by-laws have been written into the town books since then, much of which has slid into obscurity. The last legislation passed was by-law No. 1653.

Canada's Future Has No Ceiling: Canco President

A time when Canada will be capable of supporting a population of between 50,000,000 and 75,000,000 people is foreseen by W. C. Stolk, president of the American Can Co. He spoke in ceremonies formally opening the firm's new multi-million-dollar Chatham container manufacturing plant.

"I see no ceiling whatsoever on Canada's future," the New York executive told a luncheon group of government and industrial figures following the opening of the new factory.

Pointing out that Canada is now completely self-sufficient in the production of tinplate for the manufacture of well over 2,000,000 containers per year, Mr. Stolk also foresaw a rise in Canadian steel production.

"It is highly probable that you will see another substantial expansion of Canadian steel production in the very near future. Certainly, the increasing need for steel is becoming more and more apparent as industry turns to the development of Canada's natural resources, with all the attendant construction of buildings, equipment, transportation and other facilities that the opening of vast new industrial frontiers will demand."

Manure and Fertilizer Used in Combination

OTTAWA — Experiments at the Dominion Experimental Farm at Nappan, Nova Scotia, show that fertilizer used in conjunction with moderate amounts of manure can produce yields which compare favourably with those obtained where large amounts of manure were used, according to E. T. Goring, research officer at the Farm.

It is well recognized that manure is the most valuable material in building up and maintaining soil fertility. It not only returns a large part of the plant food removed by crops, but it replenishes the organic materials, building up the humus content and the moisture holding capacity of the soil. Furthermore it supplies bacterial life to the soil.

However, the manure produced on a farm does not contain all the plant food elements that were removed by the growing crops. Some, at least, of these elements are sold or used off the farm with every sale of produce. Other parts, while in the manure originally, are lost in storage and handling before it is returned to the land.

Thus a loss of plant food takes place continuously, and this loss must be made good if the fertility of the soil is to be maintained or built up.

In one test on a three year rotation (swedes, oats and hay), where applications of 20 tons of manure are compared with 10 tons of manure combined with 500 pounds of 2-12-6, the results over a period of 15 years show that the returns are about equal and that 500 lbs. of fertilized have replaced 10 tons of manure satisfactorily. Other tests of a similar nature bear out these results.

In view of the usual shortage of manure on our farms and the value of making it cover as large an acreage as possible, the combined use of manure and fertilizer is a sound proposition, says Mr. Goring.

Canadians Using Less Butter

The average Canadian is buying less butter these days than a year ago.

The Bureau of Statistics estimated this week that during the first seven months of 1951, domestic consumption on a per-capita basis declined in July to 1.93 pounds from 2.12 pounds in July last year.

At the same time the Bureau noted that though production of milk on farms is down, sales of fluid milk have increased.

Farm production was down mainly because of a decline in the Canadian dairy herd to 3,541,000 head from 3,609,000 a year ago.

Losing By Default?

Disturbing things have been said recently by men who have returned from the front lines in Korea — independent men, who have had years of training in gathering facts and reporting them accurately.

One of them was Bill Boss, veteran correspondent for the Canadian Press. He declared that both sides seemed to be more concerned with making propaganda than in making peace. He added:

"This is a waste of time for both. We will never be able to affect the picture the Communists will give their own people of the negotiations, and might as well accept it.

"The pity is that we seem to have stooped to trying to play their game.

"The real battle — for men's souls — is already on. In a sense we have already lost it to the Communists in Korea — by default — despite our victories in the field."

Are we in danger of losing the war for men's souls? If so, why? Would it be because we have been content to think that military power and economic strength were enough?

The Communists have no such illusion. They know that it is the ideas in which men believe that determine how they live, and fight — and die. Russia controls China today, not because of a great military exertion, but because for 25 years men trained in the Communist ideology have been winning the Chinese to their ideas.

Would our troops be better ambassadors of Democracy's Big Idea if we at home returned to practising as well as preaching it — the idea that God has dominion from sea to sea, in the home and at the workbench.

There may be still time to win the battle for men's souls, if we add this idea to our exports of men and materials of war. Let us not lose this battle by default!

CANADA HAS A BOUNTIFUL HARVEST THIS YEAR

Once again Thanksgiving Day has passed and homemakers are preparing to use the fruits of our bountiful harvest. Primed with information from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics that grain foods are to be plentiful this year, the home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture hope that people will eat more grain products.

The story of flour is an old one, one that begins in the wheat field and ends in the kitchen. In between, are the careful selection of wheat varieties and the meticulous control of milling processes used to produce the fine, modern flours which are available for home baking today. Many flours besides white flour are used to make bread and each requires understanding to ensure best results. For example, whole wheat flour when used alone, makes a dough that is too sticky to knead. For this reason, this flour is usually combined with at least an equal amount of white flour. Bread, made entirely of rye flour is dark and heavy because this flour fails to hold the leavening agent and of course this affects the shape of the loaf. To overcome this difficulty, a sponge is made from white flour, allowed to rise and then rye flour is added in sufficient quantities to make a dough. From our bountiful harvest Canadians have a variety of flours to choose from for baking in the home.

All Canadian women have heard and will be hearing, more and more, about the "Thrift Campaign" which is being sponsored by the National Council of Women in co-operation with the Canadian Association of Consumers. Each homemaker will be working out what economies she can practice in her home. Some will feel that they want to start by making their own bread and rolls.

There is nothing that smells so good and looks so attractive as a pan of crusty-brown, freshly baked rolls. No doubt they make one hungry just to think of them. Plain rolls either white or brown may be varied in many ways to produce a number of special ones. For instance, butterscotch rolls may be made by brushing the dough with melted fat and sprinkling it with a mixture of sugar and butter. The dough is then rolled up like a jelly roll and cut into one-inch slices. Some of the butter-sugar mixture is sprinkled on the bottom of the pan and the rolls are placed in this and baked.

An interesting flavour may be obtained by inserting a small amount of pimento process cheese or chive cream cheese in the top of each roll before it is baked. Cinnamon rolls may be made by brushing dough with melted fat and sprinkling with sugar, cinnamon and raisins. The dough is rolled as for jelly roll and cut into one-inch slices. A good trick is to use a thread for cutting instead of a knife. This will make a clean cut without denting the roll. Fruit rolls may be made by adding any variety of fruits, such as raisins or currants, to the dough. While Good Friday seems a long way off, there is no need to save delicious hot cross buns till then. They may be served at any time during the year.

For the ambitious homemaker who wants to vary the meals from day to day, there are dozens of ways to change the shape of the homemade roll. If the family prefers a crusty finish to the rolls, they should be placed one-inch apart on a greased cookie sheet to bake. For clover leaf rolls, the dough may be shaped into small balls, each one brushed with melted fat and then three placed together in each muffin. They will bake together to give a clover leaf effect. Finger rolls are another common type. To make these, the dough is cut into small uniform pieces, shaped into balls and rolled to the desired length and thickness with the palm of the hand. Other shapes of rolls are those which are made by twisting or braiding the dough before baking.

In the event the international scheme petered out again and Canada got a go-ahead from the U.S. government, Mr. Pearson was unable to say how long after that it would be before the physical job of getting the power-navigation project under way could start.

For one thing, he said, there would be lengthy hearings before the International Joint Commission, the body that has control of the use of boundary waters. That would take at least several months. With that out of the way there should be litle delay in getting the job rolling, because the government's plans would be prepared in the meantime.

Lone Woman Mayor

Ottawa became the only Canadian city with a woman mayor when Dr. Charlotte Whitton, 50-year-old social worker and a member of the civic Board of Control, was chosen to fill out the unexpired term—to Jan. 1, 1953—of the late Mayor Grenville Goodwin.

She is the first woman mayor in the history of Canada's capital.

One of her first actions was to order the refurbishing of an old, throne-like hand-carved wooden chair formerly used by Ottawa mayors.

The chair, along with a painting of an early chief magistrate, McLeod Stewart, had been gathering dust in a fire station since the city hall burned down 20 years ago. Both chair and portrait are being restored and placed in the Public School Administration building where city council now meets.

Dr. Whitton also took a tip from the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Denys Lowson, who recently visited Ottawa, and inspected his chains of office with gold shoulder clips. She has had similar clips fitted to her own clothing.

She told reporters the new clips would keep the chain in place during the most stormy council meeting.

Instalment-Plan Buying For Five Per Cent Down

No One-Third Down-Payment on Canada Savings Bonds

"While down-payments on most instalment purchases run to a third or more of the total cost, there is one valuable commodity you can buy with an initial payment of just one-twentieth — that's Canada Savings Bonds, the best investment you can buy," Ken Pope, manager of the Bank of Montreal in Huntingdon, said this week when discussing the new issue of Government bonds.

"People who cannot afford the full cash price of these bonds can purchase them for a five per cent down-payment. Just $2.50 down on a $50 bond, or $5 on a $100 bond. The remainder can be paid in easy, regular instalments over the next 12 months."

One special feature of the 1951 bond issue which Mr. Pope emphasized was the new high rate of interest. The old rate of 2.75 per cent has been discarded. Each bond bears 10 coupons at the rate of 3.5 per cent a year. The first coupon covers a period of 21 months (equal to 2 per cent per annum), due August 1, 1953. From that date, one coupon at 3.5 per cent is payable annually on August 1, until 1962. This amounts to 3.21 per cent over the life of the bond.

Mr. Pope invites Huntingdon people to take advantage of this easy-payment plan by getting their bonds at the B of M. "We shall," he said, "be glad to assist anyone in the purchase of Canada Savings Bonds, whether for cash or on the instalment plan."

King Signs Proclamation Dissolving British Parliament

Churchill Wants a "Broadly-Based Government", Will Speak on October 15th

In a firm hand, King George in his Buckingham Palace bedroom signed the proclamation dissolving parliament in preparation for the British general election Oct. 25. The King continued his steady recovery from his dangerous lung operation on Sept. 23.

With Prime Minister Clement Attlee and Conservative leader Winston Churchill as the chief protagonists, the British campaign speeded up. The first attempt to plumb the depths of Churchill's reference to a "broadly-based government" appeared in the British press.

The Daily Mirror said one conclusion drawn from the Conservative leader's keynote speech is that one or two Liberals might be offered government posts if the Conservatives win the election.

In his major speech Churchill promised that a "broadly-based" government would be established if Labour was defeated. He said that in a Conservative administration there would be no "dull exclusion of Liberal and Independent forces."

Churchill himself is to speak at a Liberal meeting in Huddersfield, Oct. 15 and some Conservative newspapers were curious about the extent of Liberal and Conservative collaboration. It ranked in interest with the truce that has been patched up between Attlee and his former health minister, Aneurin Bevin, who quit the Labor cabinet weeks ago in protest against the scale of rearmament.

Costly Dock Strike

The dock strike in Manchester, England, which involved 87 ships, cost £150,000 in lost wages and a loss of 86,330 working days, was promoted and prolonged by a Communist-led organization, says a London parliamentary report. The strike of 2,500 Manchester dockers lasted six weeks in April and June.

The report published by British Labor Minister Alfred Robens said the unofficial strike leaders "went to unusual lengths" to keep the strike going. "The strike ended only when the men repudiated them completely," it said.

The port workers committee in London, blamed for instigating the Manchester strike, previously had been accused in an official White Paper of causing the long and costly London dock strike of 1949.

Fierce Malaya Campaign

Sir Henry Gurney, the lean, intent leader of Britain's Malayan jungle war against Communist guerrillas, was slain in an ambush on the lonely mountain roads north of Singapore. The 53-year-old British High Commissioner for the Federation of Malaya was accustomed to moving more freely than any other official among the scattered people of the peninsula which has been terrorized by guerrillas for many months. A large band of guerrillas were reported to have ambushed his convoy.

Gurney was known in the British colonial service as a strong man in dealing with disorders. He was appointed High Commissioner in September, 1948, shortly after the organization of the Malaya Federation, a semi-independent government set up in an attempt to meet strong postwar demands for Malayan independence.

Russia's Atom Bombs

Generalissimo Stalin disclosed at Moscow that Russia recently exploded an atomic bomb in a test, and plans similar test blasts of "atomic bombs of various calibres." News that Russia had exploded another A-bomb was issued by President Truman a few days previously on the basis of American scientific devices which registered the blast. But this was the first time the Soviet Union itself has announced an atomic explosion.

Stalin advised American leaders not to "get excited and raise the alarm about the atomic bomb explosion in the U.S.S.R." He said the Soviet bombs are no threat to American security because "the Soviet union is not contemplating an attack on the U.S. or any other country whatsoever at any time."

The Russian leader said that Soviet bomb developments are for her own defence against aggression. "The testing of atomic bombs of various calibres will be carried out in future also according to the plans for our country's defence against the Anglo-American aggressive front," said Stalin.

Big Korean Attack

The big Allied offensive in Western Korea had secured most of its objectives by the week-end. The western offensive by 100,000 men from nine United Nations including the Canadians had gained up to five miles in four days. It was the biggest Allied drive in three months and the Commonwealth division spearheaded the attack.

The Canadian 25th Infantry Brigade actually touched off the big attack when they encountered probing Communist forces as the United Nations units were getting into position.

In the western sector the Allies moved into the best positions they have held for a year, and sent patrols reaching three miles ahead of the newly-won hills. The new line forms a parapet of defences north of the winding Imjin river.

Meantime American and French infantrymen led by flame-throwing units seized virtually all of bloody Heartbreak Ridge, a key-point in the eastern end of the line which had been bitterly contested for weeks.

Great Lakes Trade Boom Causes Shipbuilding Race

Great Lakes shipping, with or without the St. Lawrence seaway, is moving into a new era that will crowd the inland water routes with larger and faster ships ferrying substantially more cargo than the United States and Canadian ocean merchant fleets.

Canada and the United States are in a race to streamline fleets and to launch new giants for the fresh water artery linking Duluth, Sault Ste. Marie and Buffalo. There is an undertone of grim emergency to their programs, which are touched by a sense of national need rather than commercial competition.

The sprawling lake system cradles and feeds North America's major industries, a task that this year has become more strenuous and difficult than ever before.

The 700 Canadian and American freighters, despite the fastest round trips in lake history, have more business than they can handle. The season when completed, might prove to be the busiest on record, and also the most troublesome.

The lakes shipping expects to reach a record movement of 90,000,000 tons of ore with an additional 7,000,000 tons being shipped by rail. At the start of the season the United States Government took every step possible to increase shipping capacity to help the mobilization program. It was reported that 91,500,000 tons of iron ore were needed from the Mesabi Range area in northern Minnesota in 1951 to keep the steel mills in business. A longer navigation season than usual is expected to assure this.

The volume of the ore movement this year, if it reaches the desired mark, will be topped only by that of 1942 when 94,300,000 tons of ore were carried across the lakes.

Due to an unusually short navigation season in 1950, only 78,200,000 tons of ore were moved.

The American ships alone would not have been capable of handling the vast ore tonnage required for the defence effort, and were assisted by a large portion of Canada's 190-ship inland fleet. Indications this month are that the assistance has, in turn, given rise to other serious problems.

Lack of shipping threatens the greatest transportation crisis to hit western Canadian grain producers. Canada is harvesting an estimated 582,000,000-bushel crop this year, and faces the problem of dispersing it to shipping points on a sorely-pressed transportation system.

Canadian lake steamship owners say there is only one answer to the problem: more and faster ships before next season.

SHEEP JUMP HIGH

RICHARD'S LANDING, Ont., (CP)—Sheep farmer George Furkey of St. Joseph Island near Manitoulin figures the price of sheep has jumped 80 per cent in 20 years. He said he had recently sold 17 sheep for $487 and "the same number of sheep in 1931 brought in $63." He puts the present price at 42 cents a pound.

Temporary Committee Formed For the Blind

A meeting was held at the County Building, on Tuesday evening, for the purpose of organizing a local committee to work in conjunction with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Quebec Division. A fairly representative gathering was present for the Town of Huntingdon, but no representation from other County points or from Ormstown and Howick, which are included in the district.

Mr. L. A. McClintock, Supervisor Field Services; Mr. A. Zuplaski, Representative Field Services, and Mr. Rene Corbeil, District Field Man of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, were present at the meeting. Mr. McClintock gave full explanation of what is required of the committee and how necessary it is to the blind people of the district.

Following this explanation and the citing of several cases in the area to be covered, it was decided to form a temporary committee until all those who were to be present at the first meeting, could be brought together. In view of the various activities at the present it was decided to call another meeting early in November when a slate of officers will be named. For the present a committee composed of the following will carry on: Mrs. Philps, secretary; Mr. W. R. Wilson, treasurer; Mr. S. Smith for publicity; Fr. A. Pigeon, Rev. T. Knowles, Rev. W. S. Hatcher, Rev. R. D. MacLean; Mayor Cappiello. Messrs. W. K. Pope and N. Foisy were named as directors.

My grandfather, Dr. William T. Hornaday, the zoologist, was known for his beligerence as a wildlife conservationist. Consequently, when he came home one day from his director's office in Bronx Park to tell us that he had delivered a crushing blow to one of his bitterest enemies, the family had dire visions.

"Did you attack the man with your fists, William?" asked Grandmother in trepidation. He shook his head.

"Are we open for libel? Will he sue us for slander?"

"Much too roundabout and subtle for any court to understand," said Grandfather with triumph. "On a sudden impulse this afternoon I mailed each of his four children a package of 100 crayons."

The Reader's Digest

"Mother, I wish I didn't look so flat-chested," said my 15-year-old daughter as she stood before the mirror in her first formal dress.

I remedied the matter by inserting puffs of cotton in strategic places. Then I hung around Mary's neck a string of seed pearls — just as my grandmother had done for my mother and my mother for me.

At midnight her escort brought her home. The moment the door closed behind him Mary burst into tears. "I'm never going out with him again," she sobbed. "Mother, do you know what he said to me? He leaned across the table and said, 'Gee, you look sharp tonight, Mary. Are those real?' "

"I hope you told him they were," I said indignantly. "They've been in the family for three generations."

My daughter stopped sobbing. "Oh, the pearls! Good heavens, I'd forgotten all about them."

Van Packer Chimney

One of our best sellers is the Van Packer Chimney. Having a round flue tiled with fireproof liner, 2" Zonolite Insulation, with an outside finish of fine Aluminum. These chimneys are better than a brick built chimney. For an inside chimney the VAN PACKER is fastened to the floor beams and will take both furnace (oil, coal or wood fuel) and kitchen stove. If for a kitchen stove only, the chimney starts from the floor above and stove pipe leads directly to chimney. Since we introduced VAN PACKER to the public some three years ago our sales of Van Packers have more than doubled each year. Give us a call and we will demonstrate VAN PACKER superiority.
