1909 cancellations tell of a more efficient postal system

Stamp corner

By Peter McCarthy

In the past, I've always been a supporter of our postal system. In general, I have found it to be much better than most countries. I have criticized people who have complained of post cards taking three weeks or more to arrive from Florida. Little do they realize that the Canadian Post Office handles mail from the border only. They can't be responsible for mail outside our country.

Up to about a year ago, Canada Post actually worked its service on first class mail to overnight delivery in some areas. I can vouch for that through personal experience, having corresponded with people on a regular basis within a 100-mile radius. Anything farther could be counted on being delivered within two days.

There was and is an exception. Mail having to go through the Mississauga sorting centre can't be relied on being delivered for at least eight or nine days. Now however, delivery service within the 100-mile radius is about four days. For this we now pay 36 cents.

Canada Post recently announced that they intend to live up to the following guidelines: delivery within the same city, two days; between two cities within the same province, three days; and between two cities in different provinces, four days. The announcement says that this will be an improvement in service.

The second goal is to lower the deficit. Judging by the 1987 stamp program, the rate hike and the issuing of a slew of new definitive stamps and booklet panes, I think Canada Post expects philatelists to wipe out the deficit completely by the end of May.

The upper echelon of Canada Post might not realize that many philatelists are also postal historians. Being a postal historian does not necessarily mean reading and studying volumes of postal documents. The collecting of postally cancelled covers or envelopes is also known as postal history. Here is a good example.

A letter addressed to Lansdowne Ontario from Morrisburg Ontario, was received by the Morrisburg Post Office on Feb. 9, 1909 in the P.M. as indicated by cancellation number one. The letter was put on the night train west to Toronto, as indicated by cancellation number two. The letter should have been left at Kingston.

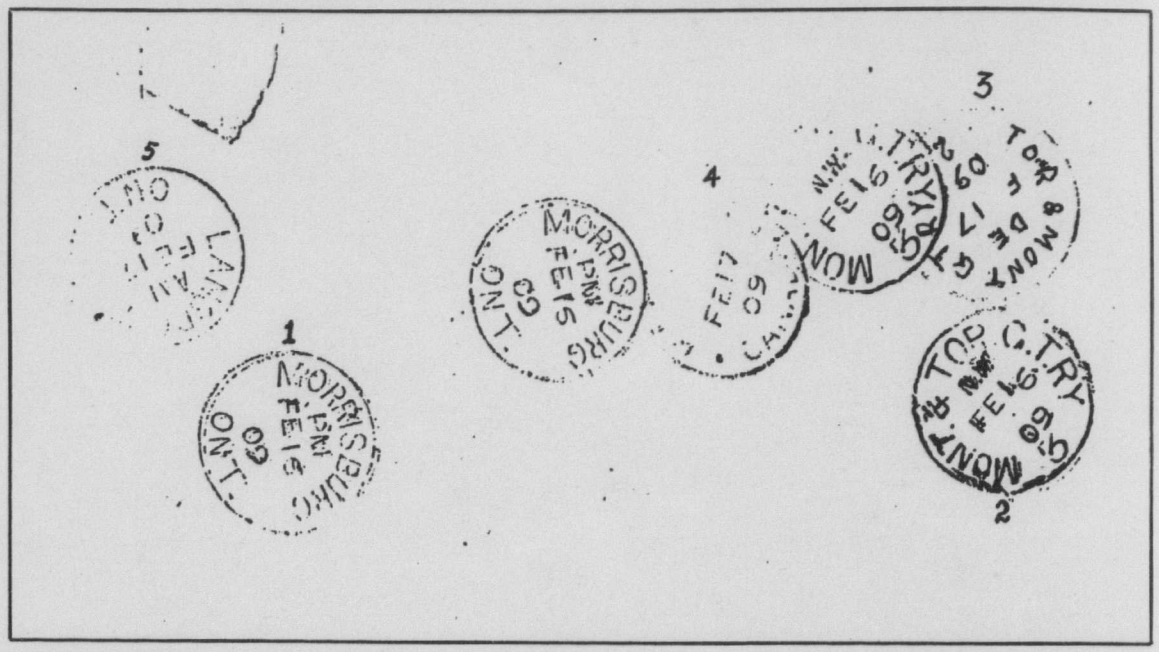

However, probably because the Kingston Post Office did not handle the Lansdowne mail from the night train, or maybe the postal clerks were to busy to have sorted that batch of mail in time, the letter ended up going through to Toronto, arriving there about 7:30 in the morning of February 17. As indicated by cancellation number three, the letter was put on the day train east to Montreal, leaving Toronto about nine in the morning and arriving in Kingston about noon as per cancellation number four.

Cancellation number five indicates the letter arrived in Lansdowne on February 17. The distance between Morrisburg and Lansdowne is about 90 miles. Although the letter travelled about 400 miles, it still arrived in the customers hands within 24 hours. For 1909, that was rather good service I would say.

Because of our communication system, people don't use the mails to the extent they did back in 1909. Therefore, I'm sure the volume is not all that much greater today than it was back then. Yet, with all the high tech improvements such as automatic sorting and cancelling, the use of air over rail, improved trucks and roads, the best we can expect is two days delivery that is now four. I'm not quite as staunch a supporter of the postal system as I once was.

Remember CAPEX 87 is not far off. The last show of this calibre to be held in Canada was in 1978. It may be some time before you have an opportunity to attend another like it. The event takes place in Toronto from June 13 to the 21.

Your comments and questions are always welcome and may be sent to P.O. Box 688, Richmond, Que., J0B 2H0.

Cancellations on the back of this envelope, mailed in 1909, show that it only took 24 hours to travel 400 miles and into the hands of the addressee.

Speaking of the Canadian identity crisis, what is it?

Who's who

By TADEUSZ LETARTE

Well, good old Doctor Ruth is at it again. The four-foot-seven Munchkin of Make-out, America's reigning sex guru, was in Toronto this week entertaining the 57th annual conference of the International Newspaper Marketing Association. Westheimer told the audience that Canada's "famous identity crisis" didn't extend to the bedroom and that Canadians can rest assured that their sexual hangups, fixations and perversions are just like everyone else's. Phew! What a relief! And here I thought the bit with the cream cheese and olives was weird.

Speaking of the "Canadian identity crisis", I have never understood what it was. It seems to me that the only people who aren't too sure what it means to be a Canadian are the scholars, academics and nationalists who all make a healthy living on government research grants trying to discover our 'essence'. But just for The Record, here's the 10 things it takes to be a Canadian.

1. A firm belief that Pierre Berton is a historian.

2. The acceptance of a rodent with a flat tail as a national symbol.

3. An unassailable conviction that the region you live in is getting less than its fair share from Ottawa.

4. Actually living in a region that is getting less than its fair share from Ottawa.

5. Believing that a 'prime time' line-up should include Front Page Challenge, The Tommy Hunter Show, The Beachcombers, and a CBC special called The Best of Knowlton Nash.

6. A strong feeling that Canada's native people should get a better break — anywhere but in your own province.

7. A membership in The Canadian Legion.

8. Having a summer cottage and an uncontrollable urge to go south in February.

9. Driving an Audi to your job at Ford so you can afford a Sony television set upon which you watch a news special decrying foreign ownership of Canadian industry.

10. Hating Toronto.

Last but not least, I don't want to point any fingers, but I feel someone should mention that the island nation of Fiji was getting along just splendidly until Record Editor, Charles 'I Never Left the Beach' Bury's recent visit. Chuck swears that he had nothing to do with the recent revolt and that his removal from the island by immigration agents wasn't an indication of things to come. Then again, France denied sinking the Rainbow Warrior.

Reality of Spain intrudes on director Spielberg's fantasies

By Richard Lorant

JEREZ DE LA FRONTERA, Spain (AP) — Steven Spielberg turns childhood fantasies into box-office smashes.

But the soft-spoken creator of E.T. and Raiders of the Lost Ark must make occasional concessions to reality.

The 39-year-old director came to Spain to shoot his latest movie, Empire of the Sun, because of the long, sunny days in the marshy delta of the Guadalquiver River. However, in Jerez de la Frontera, a town famous for its horses and sherry, he found his project enmeshed in a series of misunderstandings far removed from the fantasies of childhood.

The movie concerns a young English victim of the Japanese occupation of Shanghai.

The Spanish press was denied access to the elaborate sets that include an Olympic-sized stadium, a Second World War Japanese prison camp and an airstrip complete with mockups of vintage Japanese fighter planes. And so the press relied on scattered information for stories about alleged labor disputes and Spielberg's private life.

CALLED INSULT

Spanish National Radio called the production company's hiring practices "third-worldish" and its treatment of the Spanish press insulting.

Ten days into the shoot, Spielberg called a news conference. He told about 100 Spanish journalists at his headquarters that he and his crew were "not a bunch of Howard Hugheses hiding behind drawn drapes," although he did confess to closing the curtains of his rented bungalow to discourage persistent photographers.

"I still believe that movies are magic," he said. "A good magician wouldn't invite you backstage to see where the rabbits and birds are hidden before they fly out of the hat."

Empire of the Sun, based on the J.G. Ballard novel about a small English boy trapped by the Japanese invasion of his native Shanghai during the Second World War, is being filmed on location in China, Spain and England.

SPEND IN TOWN

Warner Bros. was spending an estimated one-third of its $30-million budget on the six-week shooting in the small town of Trebujena, 15 kilometres northwest of Jerez de la Frontera, whose 6,000 inhabitants are nearly all agricultural day laborers.

Half of the town's population is seasonally unemployed, working only during the grape, beet and cotton harvests, said local farm union official Miguel Ruiz. Two-thirds of working age residents survive on $160-a-month in unemployment benefits, he said.

Early-morning crowds hovered around the film company's temporary offices in Trebujena, hoping to get hired as extras and gofers. About 600 people found unskilled work on the film.

"It's worth it, but a little humiliating," said one youth in the town's main square, who has worked several days on the shoot.

RAISE PAY

Although the union had threatened to file a technical complaint against the film's production company for hiring only "the lame, one-eyed and blonds," it dropped the idea after Warner Bros. raised the day rate by 20 per cent to $40.

Spielberg has called Empire of the Sun an anti-war movie.

"It is unlike any of my other films in that it is a picture certainly without science-fiction overtones, and it's a motion picture which is not a relentless adventure," he said.

Although he enjoys his present film involvement with adult subjects, Spielberg said he had plans for sequels to Back to the Future and the Indiana Jones adventure series.

"Unless I have a complete personality switch, I think I'll never get entirely away from films about fantasy and science-fiction and films about imagination."

Salvadoran artist finds beauty in Canadian wildlife

By Laurel Sherrer

SHERBROOKE — If you're ever wandering around the Johnville bog admiring the various species of flora and fauna, don't be let Victor Hellebuyck startle you.

He may look like he's ready for combat, but he's only on an excursion to sketch the birds and animals and maybe catch some butterflies.

Armed with sketch pads, pencils, butterfly net and various other paraphernalia, Hellebuyck often visits the bog to see the subjects of his artwork in their natural habitat. "That's my favorite place," he says.

Some of that work, mostly watercolors of birds, is on display starting tomorrow at the Homestead gallery near Lennoxville.

It's Hellebuyck's first solo exhibition, but observing and drawing wildlife started early in his life. In his native El Salvador, his father had a farm, which enabled him to see plenty of nature close up.

MORE SOMBRE

But it wasn't the same as the nature he's been painting here in Canada for the past few years. Whereas in the tropics there are large flowers and insects and lots of bright colors, Canada's wildlife has a more sombre hue.

"In the tropical areas there's more reds and yellows and blues — bright colors, metallic colors," he says.

The paintings on display at the Homestead consist mostly of familiar Canadian birds: goldfinches, robins, meadowlarks and such. They're all browns, beiges and yellows, but Hellebuyck says he loves these colors just the same.

Hellebuyck uses watercolors mainly because he's allergic to acrylics and oils, he says. He uses sketches and sometimes photographs for the general impression of the animal, but to make the details true to life he goes to field guides and stuffed specimens.

"Working from a picture or a photograph is not the same," he says. "You need the real thing."

Hellebuyck also draws on his background in natural history to make his paintings come alive.

As a youth he studied entomology at the University of Georgia, after the Salvadoran government closed the national university of that country. At the age of 22 he was offered a job establishing and managing the Natural History Museum of El Salvador, a job which he held for six years.

PAINTED BACKGROUNDS

Hellebuyck worked with architects from the beginning, transforming a coffee plantation farmhouse into a museum. That's where he first started "playing with paint," he says, as he and another fellow painted backgrounds for many of the displays.

The museum prospered for a few years, but its progress was halted as the civil war escalated and the government didn't have time or money for the museum.

"The last year we couldn't do anything; we didn't have money even for a letter," he says. "The museum wasn't a priority."

At one point Hellebuyck visited Canada on a cultural exchange, spending eight weeks learning museum techniques at the Royal Ontario museum. It was on that exchange that he met his wife Nicole, a Sherbrooke woman, and they returned to El Salvador together.

As the war worsened, the couple finally decided to get out of the country, and came to the Townships in 1980. Victor enrolled in biology at Bishop's University for awhile, but then changed to fine arts, which he could take as a part-time student. He's still in the fine arts program.

USED FOR STAMPS

For awhile he continued to paint and draw birds and insects from his native country, and in 1980 convinced the El Salvador postal service to turn six of his paintings of rare birds into a series of stamps. In 1984 he did the same with six paintings of dragonflies.

The painting of insects is related to another of Hellebuyck's passions: collecting butterflies and dragonflies.

Mounted on pins and smelling of mothballs, 2000 butterflies and moths are carefully preserved in wooden display boxes in Hellebuyck's studio. An equally impressive collection of dragonflies are attached to cards and filed in an index box with all the pertinent data about their genus and species, and when and where they were caught. Unlike the butterflies, dragonflies lose their color once they're dead, turning a uniform brown.

The butterfly collection has everything from the tiny, common bog copper and the monarch, to the metallic blue morpho didius from Peru, and the angel-winged morpho catenaria from Brazil.

Like drawing wildlife, collecting butterflies started as a childhood hobby.

"I was always interested in them," he says. "I used to collect them and put them in books. Then when I went to university I learned the proper methods to preserve them."

Hellebuyck says as far as his painting is concerned, he's still experimenting with different styles and will use his exhibition at the Homestead as a means of finding out how people respond to different paintings.

Starting tomorrow, his show of watercolors at the Homestead is open to the public from 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Monday to Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday until May 31.

RECORD/PERRY BEATON

RECORD/PERRY BEATON

Victor Hellebuyck may be having his first solo art exhibition now, but he's had plenty of exposure in his native El Salvador through a series of postage stamps featuring his work.

Story of eccentric menage a quatre thoroughly engrossing

Kaleidoscope

By RICHARD LONEY

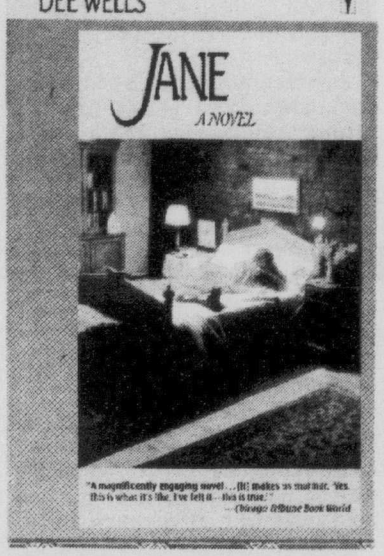

Jane by Dee Wells (FITZHENRY & WHITESIDE): $11.95, 258 pp.

Another in the series of cheaper paperback reprints of contemporary fiction has been released by Harper & Row in their Perennial Fiction Library, bringing a book first published in 1973 into a wider readership.

Dee Wells's hilarious Jane is at once a fine social satire of the British mores and customs as seen by a liberated American lady, and a soap-opera style of modern day romance, with a young woman of generous sexual appetites becoming the focus.

The young woman of the title is a 34-year-old American film critic living in London, who by day toils as a writer specializing in the cinema, and by night worries about which one of her small stable of suitors is scheduled to visit her.

Jane's squires include a young Adonis named Tom who has literally fallen into her life through the skylight of her apartment when he was casing the building as part of his usual vocation of cat burglar.

Then there's Anthony, a link with the British nobility, whose family affords Jane and the reader with much of the acerbic social commentary and deliciously perfect dialogue. Finally, and certainly not the least of the three, is a black American named Franklin, who plays tennis, attends law school, and is contemplating moving back to middle America with Jane on his arm as an entree into suburbia.

The scheduling conflicts, cross-references and delightful absurdities of Jane's attempts to keep these three unaware of each other's mere existence places Dee Wells's novel in the company of some of the most entertaining of French bedroom farces.

As with much classical comedy there is a sense in the development of the plot, as Jane grapples with everyday life complicated by three lovers, that the humor might at any moment bubble perilously close to tragedy if all does not go smoothly. The fly in the ointment in Jane is the unexpected news that she is pregnant, and the way in which the heroine must cope with the distinct possibility that the baby will be born black. What to tell either of her white escorts if that indeed is the case?

Jane must choose between the burglar, about whom she knows absolutely nothing, not even his last name; the charming and snobby Anthony, whose family members appear to be escapees from some Evelyn Waugh novel; and the hapless Franklin, whose attitude is admirable in that he feels that he and Jane will just carry on as planned. Wells carries the story of this eccentric, funny menage a quatre off with an easy style that is thoroughly engrossing and such deft character studies that each new entrant into the novel's pages is awaited with eager expectations.

Through the entire course of the novel there is nothing even remotely sluttish about Jane as there might have been with this plot in the hands of a Danielle Steele. Dee Wells tells an interesting and memorable story of a young career woman caught up in a world of her own making, but one which she steadfastly refuses to change, no matter what the moral consequences or the social repercussions. If the book reflects the social conscience of the seventies, published as it originally was in 1973, it is no less interesting today for its evocation of lives that appear to have been very much lived at maximum intensity.

RECORD REVIEWS

Mark Korven ORDINARY MAN (MCA-DUKE)

The lyrics to this album recorded for the most part at Goede Studios in Edmonton, Alberta reflect the strange blend of the mundane and the observation of universal problems that shows up in a liner note list of singer/songwriter Mark Korven's "Things to do today" — "have breakfast, open mail, fix blender, end world hunger, feed cat."

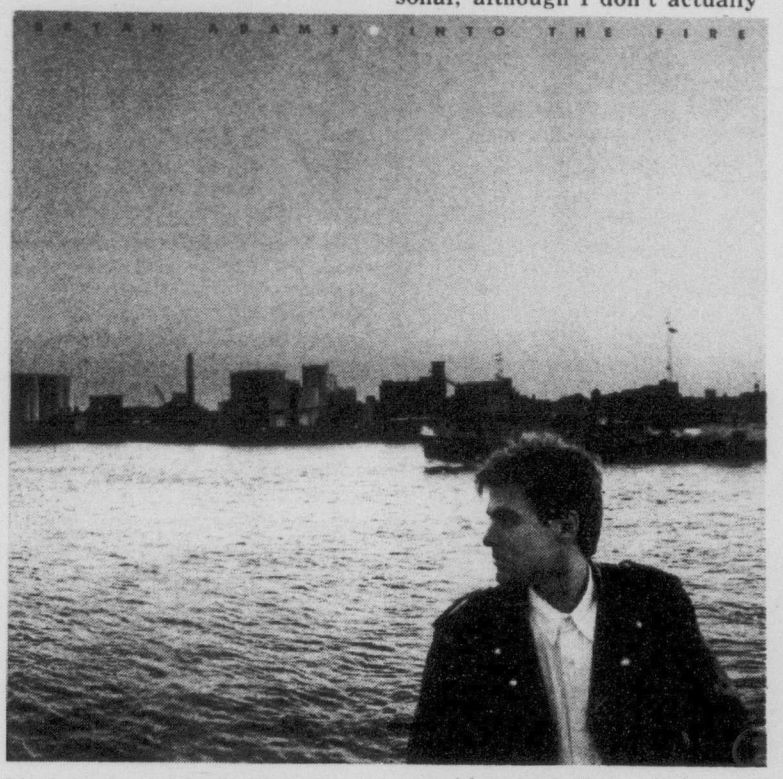

Korven's songs range from "Man On A Swing", a hip, bopping rock number that sees love and marriage and their subsequent breakdown as a "bad merger", to the title track, in which the singer exclaims, "I am what I am, not into S&M/ I don't want holes in my ears/ Am I being true to me, an ordinary man."

Korven has an introspective nature as well, as revealed on "The Open Window", which like many of the haunting songs here, has a very catchy hook, and aggressive rock bedtracks from some fine, if unknown, musicians (Lisa Dalbello does a cameo guest vocal spot on "Man On A Swing").

Some of Mark Korven's arrangements on this impressive debut album recall the kind of whimsical, tuneful trickery that Harpers Bizarre brought to rock in the much more innocent days of this now quite serious business.

Bryan Adams INTO THE FIRE (A&M)

hit the scene with all of the furor usually accorded a promising middleweight boxer, creating quite a stir with his raw, powerful voice and big power pop songs co-authored with Jim Vallance.

With the release of his latest album INTO THE FIRE Adams reveals that he is refining his fight game, learning how to add a few new punches to his repertoire and some deft footwork. The record sees Adams bringing new dimensions to his songs, again authorially shared with Vallance, such as the predominance of the piano and keyboard parts that were not factors in the early, guitar-oriented songs. The result is songs which are growing in maturity just as the singer is, fresh from his duets with Tina Turner and with American acceptance still ringing in his ears.

On side one "Heat of the Night" reflects Bryan Adams's maturity in that the song is based on his impressions of the film "The Third Man", about what he calls a man at the crossroads of his life, being chased and not knowing how to get out of a situation. Filled with imagery, the song is a driving, more personal statement from Adams, with a strong hook and very singable chorus.

"Into The Fire" continues the idea of the artist being forced to go into the crucible to see what he's really made of, while a slower track, "Victim Of Love" features the keyboard work of Dave Pickell adding to the heavy bottom end feel to this arrangement. "Another Day" is a fast shuffle ditty about the prospects of another cold and damp day in the city when the unemployment cheque's all spent. "Native Son" was apparently inspired by Indian leader Chief Joseph of the Nez Pierce Tribe in the 1800's.

Side two kicks off with "Only The Strong Survive", a tune that keeps drummer Mickey Curry hopping with its frantic tempo, followed by "Rebel", which Bryan says "is about growing up and is really personal, although I don't actually consider myself a rebel", and which was previously recorded by Who alumnus Roger Daltrey. "Remembrance Day" finds the writers paying heed to something that youth is reputed to not have much interest in; it is "about a time of thanks. A lot of men went out and fought for our freedom, and a lot of them died for it. Even if war is foolish, you have to respect that our fathers defended our right to be free".

Heavy thoughts from a supposedly frivolous member of the rock and rollers union. But Adams is only following the universal, pattern of rock, that sees high-spirited, mindless rock screamers having to give way to something more intellectually stimulating as an artist matures and expands his musical horizons. Bryan Adams, on the strength of his fifth album INTO THE FIRE, is indeed maturing as a rocker right before our eyes.

VIDEO SCREENINGS

ABOUT LAST NIGHT (CBS-FOX)

Based on a play titled "Sexual Perversity in Chicago", this film may well be what a lot of the John Hughes teen films grow up to become. The high school trauma of the movies such as "The Breakfast Club", "Sweet Sixteen" and others of that ilk is replaced by the cavortings of two pairs of young Chicagoans going through the pangs of dating, mating and toying with the idea of marriage.

Either the script is very familiar or the plot of the movie is something that many people have lived through, because a lot of the action in the film follows a predictable pattern. Rob Lowe ("Youngblood") plays the idealistic young food wholesaler, and his sidekick is the type-cast James Belushi, once again easily acting the loudmouth, crude and offensive buddy, who somehow seems to always remind the viewer that he is indeed John's kid brother.

This inseparable duo of ultra-cool bachelor types has the run of the Chicago bars and they follow the Cubbies with a passion, working their way through more girls than Guccione on a slow day. They finally hit upon a lovely couple of young moderns in Debbie and Joan, played by Demi Moore and Elizabeth Perkins, respectively.

Debbie is swept off her feet by Lowe's character, while Joan maintains a snarky aloofness and develops a hostility against Belushi's character Bernie. The film develops into a study of the trauma of young unmarrieds moving in together and setting up joint housekeeping and the complications that ensue. Guy loses bosom buddy; girl loses cherished room-mate. The cast-offs do their damndest to scuttle the new relationship and hard feelings develop all around.

Director Edward Zwick makes the most of the meagre plot, but even the usual pulsating rock soundtrack doesn't quite pull this one all together. Lowe, Moore and Belushi have probably developed a solid enough following to ensure that this film does as much business in video as it did at the big screen venues. 3rd International Steam Meet this weekend

Heritage group brings steam age back to Stanstead

ROCK ISLAND — The world's first internal combustion car was a Benz. Canada's first engine-powered road vehicle was built in the 1860s by Henry Seth Taylor, a Stanstead watchmaker.

More than a century later, the community group Heritage Technologies brings the steam age back to the Stanstead area. The 3rd International Steam meet and Antique Machinery Show will take place in the border towns of Rock Island and Stanstead, Que. and Derby Line, Vt.

May 23 and 24 the area will be transformed as elegant antique and sleek modern steam cars swoosh silently by; steamboats toot their steam whistles on beautiful Lake Memphremagog; and clouds of steam hover above the stationary equipment displays.

Sunday is the day for steamcars at the 3rd International Steam Meet, when steamers will compete to see who can go the slowest and climb hills best.

People will be coming from as far away as California and from as near as just down the road.

This event is unique in North America on two counts — it is the only meet which welcomes all steam disciplines (car, boat and stationary) and the only international one.

ON THE WATER

Lake Memphremagog is an international lake, stretching 27 miles from Magog to Newport, Vt. Spectators may take a cruise the length of the lake and back on Saturday, May 23. The Aventure II leaves Magog at 8 a.m. and it will join the steamboats and classic wooden boats which will be sailing from the Cedarville Whart in Canada to Newport. Boat tickets are $15.

During the layover in Newport, passengers may want to go to The Landing restaurant for their steam brunch at $13. They will also enjoy catching a glimpse of the Memphremagog Yacht Club's opening regatta on their cruise home.

Meanwhile, back in Rock Island, more than 10,000 people are expected to view the colorful and festive stationary exhibits, whick will include lots of steam and whistles and engines of all kinds. A gigantic sale of arts, crafts, food, coins and stamps, antiques and everything imaginable — even jewellery steam cleaning — will also be going on both Saturday and Sunday. Barbecue chicken and beef, fresh corn, beer and wine will be available all weekend. The cost to see all this is $1.

ENTERTAINMENT

The steam meet opens tonight with a reception given by local mayors from 5 to 7 p.m. by invitation in the bigtop, followed by a retro dance with all the old 50s and 60s favorites at $2.50 per person.

Saturday night there will be a variety show in the Haskell Opera House ($5, $10 per family). The Haskell, an Edwardian building modelled on a former Boston opera house, is built right on the border. The audience sits in the United States, while the performers are in Canada.

Also on Saturday night there will be a bonfire for the young in years and in heart.

The Rainbow Cloggers, a very popular clog-dancing group of adults and children, will entertain Sunday at noon and again at 3:30.

STEAM EVENTS

Sunday is the day for steamcars. A parade of steam cars, antique cars and horses will form in Derby Line, Vt. at noon, to be led by a firetruck across the border into Canada.

Then steamcars will compete to see how slowly they can go. The winner of the slo-race is the loser, in a manner of speaking. Steamers can go slower than regular internal combustion cars and like to show off.

They also like to show off their pickup in the hill climb, where speed is of the essence. While the steamers do make excellent time, the most amazing thing is the lack of sound as they swoosh gracefully up the hill.

The Steam Meet is sponsored by Heritage Technologies, a community non-profit group devoted to the preservation of old-style small industry.

Information on the Steam Meet and tickets are available from Heritage Technologies, 33 Main St. in Rock Island, or by calling (819) 876-2080.

Arts and crafts sale doubles in size

ROCK ISLAND — They're calling a giant arts and crafts sale, and they're not kidding.

Last year the sale, going on as part of the Steam Meet events this weekend, consisted of 75 tables of arts, crafts and other items, and attracted about 7,500 people. This year it has grown too large for the Sunnyside school's gymnsium.

This year the sale boasts 150 tables which will not only fill the gymnasium and the basement of the school, but also line the halls and spread out into the yard under a large auction tent.

"It certainly has picked up," says Allen Nourse, co-ordinator of the show. "We're expecting 10,000 people this year."

Last year, says Nourse, 2500 people visited the show on the Saturday, when many other events of the weekend were rained out.

The goal of the organizers, he says, was to get as wide a variety as possible of craftspeople, antique dealers, businesses, cultural organizations and others to display their wares.

The result is exhibitors from 45 different communities showing such crafts as woodworking, doll furniture, hanging flower baskets, beadwork, leather, quilts and other fancy work, granite sculptures and jewellery, ceramics, pressed flowers, wooden toys, Cabbage Patch Doll's clothes and liquid embroidery.

Eight antique dealers from various part of the Townships will also be exhibiting, as well as people who do furniture upholstering and gold and silver jewellery cleaning.

Several local painters are scheduled to show their work at the show, as well.

There will be people there selling Watkins and Raleigh products, as well as office supplies, chain saws, lawn mowers and circular saws.

Other tables will hand out information on such organizations as the Piggery Theatre, the Townshippers' Association, the Townships Sun newspaper, the Three Villages tourism committee and the Society for the Protection of Animals.

It would not be wise to visit the show on an empty stomach either, because of a tempting array of baked goods, candy and snacks on sale.

A barbecue of beef and chicken will go on throughout the two days on the school grounds.

"It certainly will be one of the largest sales in the area," says Nourse.

The Giant Sale goes on from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. There's a $1 admission charge which also permits access to the display of stationary steam equipment and flee market tables on the grounds.

The school is at 100 Main St. in Rock Island.

WHAT'S ON

Music

By Laurel Sherrer

Summertime means music will soon fill the air once again at the Orford Arts Centre. The people who run the summer arts camp and concert series threw a big party last week to announce the season's attractions and there's an article telling all about it on page 7.

Shari Saunders, a young soprano who has performed with the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra, the Vancouver CBC Orchestra and the St. John Symphony orchestra, comes to Sutton this weekend for a concert. Saturday at 8 p.m and Sunday at 3 p.m. Saunders is accompanied on piano by Shirley Carlson Fischlin in concerts featuring works by Poulenc, Brahms, Ives, Barber, Lehar and Gounod among others. Tickets are $10 and you can call (514) 538-2781 for information.

The St-Michel Cathedral in Sherbrooke has a chance to show of its newly restored organ this Sunday when Thérèse Laflamme puts on a concert featuring works by Bach, Cornet, DuMage, Franck, Reger and Schlee. The young Sherbrooke resident has a master's degree in organ music from the Hoschule for Musik in Vienna, and has performed in England, Denmark, Austria, France and Germany as well as Canada. The concert is at 8 p.m. Sunday and will be recorded for broadcast on Radio-Canada.

There'll be on more pair of concerts in the Mendelssohn series, but I'll have the details about that next week.

Faculty artists at Bishop's University and friends join in Vienna at Twilight, an evening celebrating Veinna's "golden musical twilight", next Friday at 8:30 p.m. at Centennial Theatre in Lennoxville. Among the works featured are Brahms' Foolish Serenade and May Night, which will be performed by soprano Sarah Hoblyn and pianist Tom Gordon. The duo will perform Wagner's Wesendonk Lieder together as well, and Gordon will play Schoenberg's Six Little Piano Pieces, Op. 9 as a solo. Gordon and France Dupuis will join in a selection of Hungarian Dances for piano duet by Brahms in the second half of the concert, and then Hoblyn returns to perform Strauss's Mein Herr Marquis, the famous "laughing aria" from Die Fledermaus. The concert closes with Strauss's Rosen aus dem Suden, a medley of memorable waltz tunes performed by Annie Piérard-Ledoux and Jacques Joubert on violin, Danielle Dion on viola and Zophie Wierzbicka on cello with Dupuis and Gordon on piano and harmonium. That concert's next Friday, the 29th, and you can call the box office at (819) 563-4966 to reserve.

Pianist Renée Gilbert will perform works by Haydn, Glazunov, Debussy and Prokofieff this Sunday at 7:30 p.m. to raise money for the Centre récréatif communautaire. This takes place at 400 Galt W. in Sherbrooke and you can find out more about it by calling Yves at (819) 564-7485 or Lucie at 821-5787.

A "good old family show" is what organizers Pat Hurley and Dave Donnachie are calling the Variety Show scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Saturday as part of the Steam Meet events in the Stanstead area. This takes place in the Haskell Opera House and will feature, among other things, tap, jazz and ballet numbers by Janann Pagé and her dancers from Magog, ethnic and modern dancing by Rozita and Vargo Mestry, Scottish and Irish jigs and reels by Robyn Huff and Sheila Buck to the bagpipe music of Ron Sutherland and Roy MacLaren, and old favorites by Janice Graham and her ragtime piano. Rod Bray and the Countrymen play for a benefit dance this Saturday, and this time it's to raise money for the Sherbrooke Ploughman's Association. As usual, this is open to everyone and there will be door prizes.

Theatre

The Alexander Galt High School production of Curtain Going Up! continues tonight and tomorrow in the school auditorium. This play by Gregory Johnston presents the trials and tribulations of a group of high school students trying to put on a play about the deep South while coping with a host of problems involving relationships. It's a play written in the 50s, but the Galt students have brought it up to date a bit by getting rid of some of the 50s language and updating the costumes. It should be lots of fun for the audience because you'll feel like you're listening in on a rehearsal rather than watching the finished product. Showtime is 8 p.m. and tickets are $4. Proceeds are going to the school's football team.

Tonight and Saturday night the Théâtre de la Poursuite is doing its last two performances of Coeur de maitresse at the Pigeonnier Theatre in Sherbrooke. This tells the story of a woman in her 40s who's in love with a married man. It's a play full of hope, nostalgia and poetic imagery and should "address anyone who has ever tasted of the forbidden fruit", says the theatre's press release. The curtain goes up at 8:30. You can reserve seats by calling (819) 564-2060.

Tonight and Saturday as well there's a production of Maryse Pelletier's *A qui le p'tit coeur après neuf heures et demie at the University of Sherbrooke's Cultural Centre. First performed in 1980, this play takes a look at how Quebec social mores have evolved in regards to happiness, love, health and success in life. The Exagon *theatre troupe is in charge of this production at 8:30 each evening, and you can call the box office at (819) 821-7744 to reserve tickets.

Exhibitions/Events

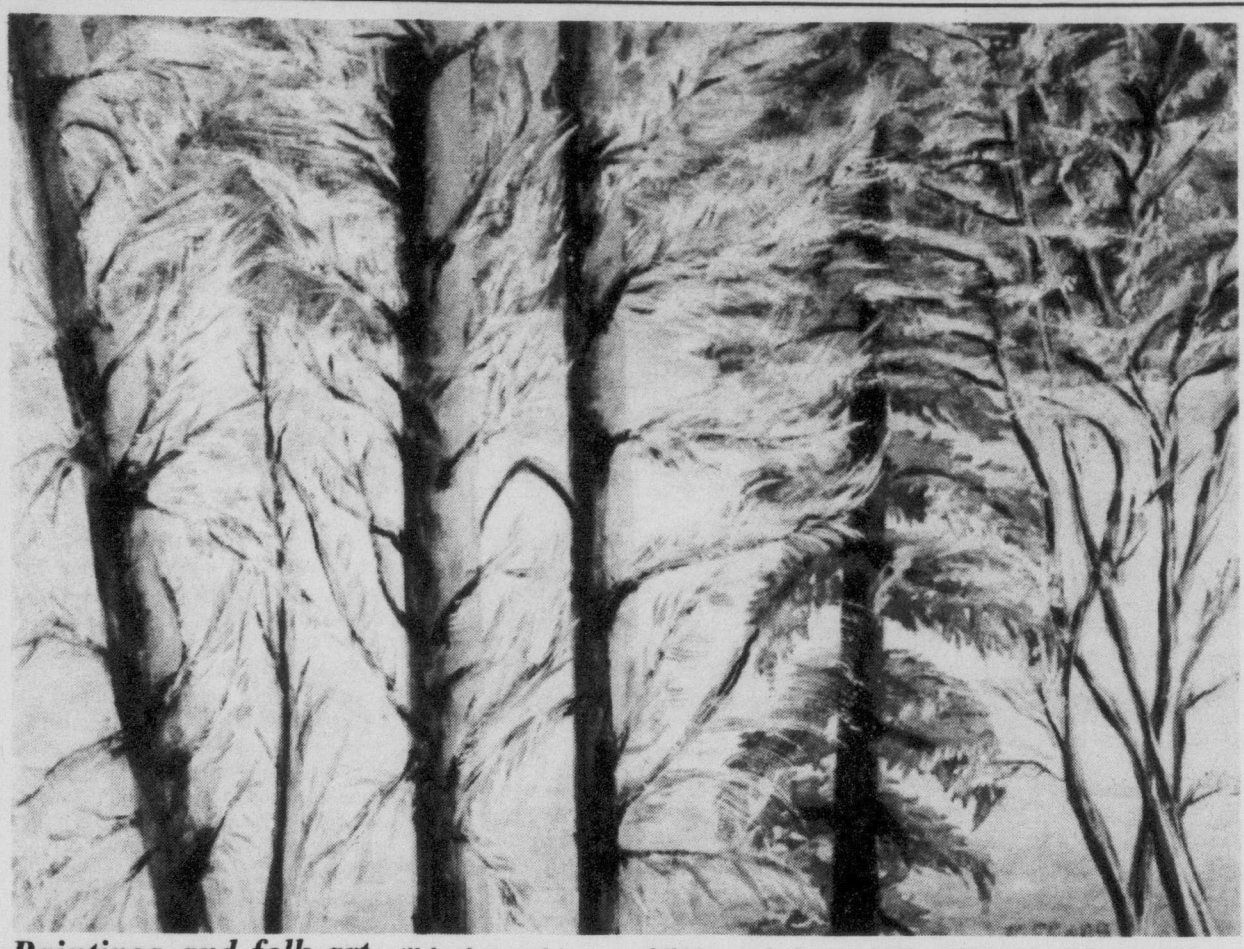

Piles of activities related to steam power are going on this weekend at the 3rd International Steam Meet in Rock Island. You only have to flip back to page 6 to find out the details about this event. Take note of the article about the arts and crafts sale. It looks like a doozey (doosie? dewzie? doozie? whatever.)

An impressive selection of valuable artwork is displayed at the former Bruck Social Club in Cowansville until Sunday. The Cowansville Art Center assembled this collection which includes works by A.Y.Jackson, Sarah Robertson, Prudence Heward, Anne Savage and George Clausen among others. All month long you can stop by the Horace Gallery in Sherbrooke to see the work of about 30 artists, all making some sort of comment on ecology. Evénement art et écologie is an imaginative show in which the artists either comment on environmental hazards such as pollution and nuclear fall-out, or illustrate the impact of technology on the ecology and humankind, or say something about living in harmony with nature. There are also a couple of examples of environmental sculptures in the Jacques Cartier Park as part of this exhibition.

The Canadian Museum of Contemporary Photography has lent a collection of black and white photographs to the University of Sherbrooke's Cultural Centre for the month of May, and you'll find these in the little art gallery connected to the main hall. The Power of Make-Believe is the title of an exhibition of sculptures by Diane and Nolan de Larochellière starting Sunday at the Beaulne Museum in Coaticook. This is a series that tells a story all about dreams and castles and secrets. Sounds like fun. The museum is open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day.

Carole Lafontaine opens a show of her warm and sentimental watercolors at the Galerie Cassandre in Orford Township this Sunday. This exhibit will go on all month.

The Service d'aide aux néo-Canadiens (SANC) is promising a gastronomic adventure this Saturday night when it presents its International Buffet starting at 7 p.m. SANC is a non-profit organization which welcomes new arrivals to our region and helps them to integrate into Canadian society. It also aims to help Townshippers appreciate the economic and cultural richness newcomers bring. The buffet is in its 16th year and features dishes from all over the world. The event happens at the Centre de l'activité physique at the CEGEP de Sherbrooke on Park Street and tickets are on sale at the SANC office at 172 Short St. For further info, call (819) 566-5373.

On Sunday the Regroupement Bois Becket is organizing a hike through the woods with a guide to identify and talk about the various plants and flowers there. If you're interested in taking part, you just have to show up at 1:30 p.m. at the reception area, which is close to the municipal reservoir on Becket Street, one kilometre from Jacques Cartier N. on the left.

Next week is apparently some kind of national fitness week, and the Sherbrooke Library is marking the occasion with a talk and audio-visual presentation about the benefits of physical activity next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the library.

Movies

Family Ties star Michael J. Fox plays a Kansas farm boy trying to make it big as an executive in New York City in The Secret of My Success playing for another week at the Cinéma Capitol in Sherbrooke. Times for this movie are the same this week: 6:45 and 9 p.m.

Beverly Hills Cop II continues the story of a Chicago policeman who heads for the sophisticated streets of Beverly Hills to wrap up a case. It stars Eddy Murphy and they tell me it's funny. It plays at 7:15 and 9:30 every night at the Cinémas du Carrefour in Sherbrooke as well as 12:30, 2:45, 5, 7:15 and 9:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Beverly Hills Cop II is also featured at the Merrill's Showplace Cinemas in Newport, Vt. this week, along with Creepshow II and Blind Date. Beverly Hills Cop II is at 7 and 9 p.m. and at 1:45 Saturday, Sunday and Monday (it's a holiday south of the border). Stephen King's Creepshow II shows at 7:10 and 9:15 Saturday, Sunday and Monday, Tuesday to Thursday at 7:10 and 9:10, and there are matinee showings Saturday through Monday at 2 p.m. Blind Date stars Bruce Willis of TV's Moonlighting as a businessman who goes to an important business dinner with a beautiful blind date (Kim Basinger) who turns out to be hyper-sensitive to alcohol. Her jealous boyfriend hovering around complicates the situation. The times for Blind Date are Friday to Monday at 7:05 and 9:10 p.m. and Tuesday to Thursday at 7:05 and 9:05 with matinees Saturday, Sunday and Monday at 1:55.

Cowansville's Cinema Princess has an ultra-violent film about a Vietnam vet who takes the law into his own hands when a former Vietnamese general-turned-mobster murder's a cop's family. Steele Justice stars Martin Kove, of TV's Cagney and Lacey, and it shows at 7:15 nightly. It's followed, at 8:55, by the comedy Hot Pursuit, starring John Cusack. This is about a teen-age boy who stumbles across a bunch of yacht hijackers while looking for his girlfriend on a Caribbean island.

Le déclin de l'empire américain, last year's Canadian cinematic triumph, is showing at 9:15 tonight and Saturday night at the University of Sherbrooke's Cultural Centre. It lets us eavesdrop on the conversations of a bunch of intellectuals, mostly concerning sex. The men make lewd food jokes as they prepare a gourmet meal at their cottage (this sequence filmed in Georgeville) while the women work out in a gymnasium while discussing their sexual preferences. A well-made film, reminiscent of The Big Chill in style, but the endless, one-track conversation becomes a tad boring. Directed by Denys Arcand, this stars Dominique Michel, Dorothée Berryman, Rémy Girard and Pierre Curzi.

Adolescent anxiety and conflict provide the drama in the Alexander Galt student play, Curtain Going Up!, being performed tonight and Saturday night. See Theatre column.*

Practical and picturesque exist together in Holland

By Ellen Steese

The Christian Science Monitor

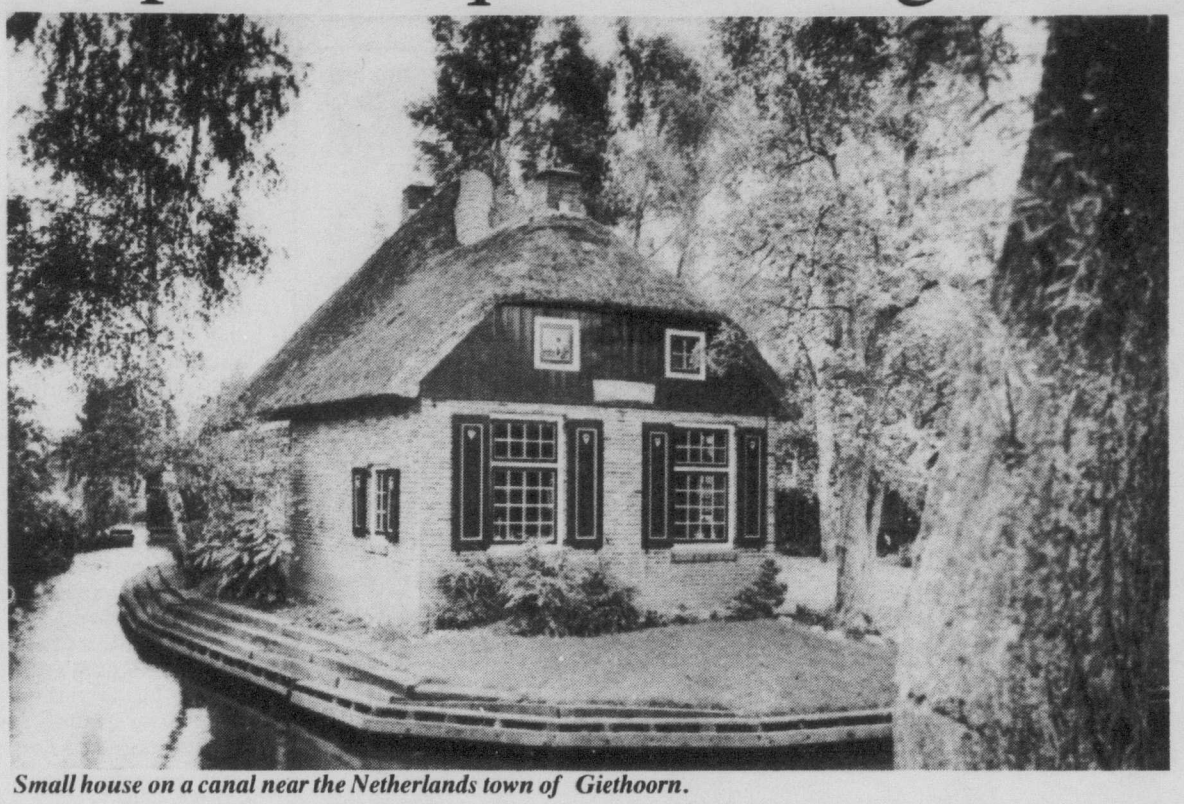

GIETHOORN, Netherlands — It's an otherworldly feeling to drive through green fields and realize that, by rights, you ought to be underwater.

Water — too much of it — is a constant theme wherever you go in the Netherlands. That's true whether you are excitedly hunting for signs of old Holland (windmills and canals) or passing through new Holland's polders (sea bottom transformed into fields or grazing cattle and planned cities).

I was on the lookout for quaintness, so my tour plan included the funny little towns of Giethoorn and Urk on the west side of this small country, and the Zuiderzeemuseum, where one goes to see exhibits on local architecture, a few hours north of Amsterdam.

But in the Netherlands, the practical and the picturesque exist together. New Holland keeps intruding. The ways, old and new, that the Dutch cope with their low country turned out to be a recurring motif in my journey.

Thus, the highlight of Giethoorn ("HEET-horn") is its canals. That's why you must stop at the tourist board (look for the sign that says VVV) as soon as you arrive, because you can't see much of Giethoorn from the road.

Small house on a canal near the Netherlands town of Giethoorn.

IN ANOTHER WORLD

If you park your car in the VVV lot, you can pick up a map and head across the street to a paved path leading through a soggy field. If you follow it, wondering where on earth you're going, you'll see a small bridge on your left. When you go over it, you are in another world.

A small canal of brownish water, some 12 feet wide, forms the main street of Giethoorn. All travel here is done by boat. Mail is delivered, cows go to and from pasture, harvests are brought in, and families go to church on the canal. Trees and wooden bridges arch over it. Only a footpath borders it on each side.

The houses are like those in "Alice in Wonderland" illustrations. They're brick, have a rounded sloping shape, and are neatly thatched.

Each is set back a few feet from the footpath, has dark green doors, and, of course — this being Holland — plants and tiers of white lace adorn their windows.

Also compulsory is an intensely colorful postage-stamp garden.

I walked along, sniffing aromas of apples and wood fires. There wasn't a car in sight; if there were any, they must have been tactfully concealed behind barns.

COWS POSED

It was a gray day, and some hefty white ducks were enjoying the canal and the weather. Goats and cows posed in the fields in the distance. Once in a while a flaxen-haired child would whiz by on a bicycle.

All other residents stayed in their snuggeries, except for a crew at work rethatching a roof, with additional thatch in bales piled on a boat moore alongside. Numerous long, narrow boats for showing visitors around in the summer were clustered in quiet side canals, indicating that tourists by the busload are not unknown here.

I recommend a chill, gray, autumn day, when the only sounds are rustling yellow leaves and an occasional sharp bell of a bike behind you. Then Giethoorn is a fairy-tale land you have almost to yourself.

After you leave Giethoorn for the old fishing village of Urk, you're in polder country. Towering watercolor-gray clouds press down on green fields. Substantial brown barns cozy into the landscape. The horizon is about the same, left and right, fore and aft.

The Dutch are sensitive to minuscule changes of altitude, emphasizing to the visitor variations that would pass unnoticed elsewhere. The reason is that a few feet here is the difference between being above water or below it.

SUSPENDED IN AIR

Now on a modest rise in the Noord Oost polder, Urk was originally an island in the Zuider Zee. It isn't a particularly pretty town. Its tiny brick row houses of fairly recent vintage give it a look of being suspended in air.

Tourists go to Urk because a few of its people still cling stubbornly to the quaint costumes of their former isolation as an island in the Zuider Zee. You see elderly women, and a few men, wearing peasant outfits.

The women's costume is a black dress, gathered at the wait, worn with a vest of shiny green or blue.

Most distinctive is the hat, a small black-and-white, close-fitting bonnet rimmed with lace. Underneath and showing through is a silver band with hair rolled around it; this ends in big silver prongs that press into the cheeks.

The men wear black pants that blouse around the hips and stop well above the ankles, a shirt with wide red and white stripes, and a pillbox hat worn jauntily on the side of the head.

You don't want to stare too obviously at these unwilling tourist attractions.

After an hour or two of assiduous snooping while trying to look inconspicuous — including checking out the Saturday morning market, surely a prime spot — I saw a total of tour men and 11 women dressed this way.

PIQUE CURIOSITY

Polders may not look very exciting, but they do pique your curiosity. On my way to Enkhuizen, I made an unscheduled stop at the Museum Nieuw Land in Lelystad.

Here the slide show "From Flevomeer to Flevoland" can be heard in English on request. It is a good wrap-up of the history of the polders. You learn that in the 19th century the steam engine replaced the windmill, and for the first time it became possible to take land back from the ocean. The Dutch put a dike across the old Zuider Zee (renamed the IJsselmeer in honor of its new status). Then they built other dikes along the edge and began draining. This not only created new land, but protected the old seashore from the disastrous floods that were a problem in places like Urk.

You can learn all sorts of things about polders at the museum: how to build a polder dike with layers of sand, boulders, clay, and brushwood mattresses; how to make the land usable after it has been drained, leaving flats of dead, soft, bluish, impassable mud. There's a bit about the objects they found after the land was drained: crashed World War II aircraft and the remains of 300 shipwrecks.

After the museum visit, it is interesting to traverse the dike that crosses the IJsselmeer from Lelystad to Enkhuizen. The water is gray and smooth on one side, rough and blue on other.

FISHING TOWNS

The open-air Zuiderzeemuseum in Enkhuizen was opened in 1983 to immortalize the little fishing towns that ringed the Zuider Zee before they became landlocked by polderization. Each section of this "museum village" consists of 130 buildings from 20 Zuider Zee towns.

You get to the museum by boat, which enables you to view Enkhuizen from the water — reminding one of a Dutch plate scene. You can also admire the sailboats on the bay, with their huge brown gaff-rigged sails and round, cloglike fronts.

The Zuiderzeemuseum is so delightful, you wish you could have toured Holland when it all looked like this.

Practical information:

Driving in Holland is easy. Even in the smallest towns the roads are excellent and clearly labeled. The Zuiderzeemuseum has a small indoor section, open all year except for January and the first half of February. Hours are 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. The outdoor museum is open April 15 to Oct. 15, seven days a week, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission price: adults $3.35, children $2.65.

Evangeline statue tells tragic tale of Acadian expulsion

GRAND PRE, Nova Scotia — The face of the statue of "Evangeline" in Nova Scotia's Grand Pre National Historic Park ages and changes before the visitor's eyes.

Whether by design or by chance, the heroine of Longfellow's famous poem about the Acadian lovers undergoes an unusual and remarkable facial transformation before the eyes of tens of thousands who annually visit this memorial to the Acadian people, in the heart of the province's beautiful Annapolis Valley.

As the visitor moves from one side of the bronze status to the other, the serene, youthful, smiling face ages and changes subtly but distinctly into a tragic picture of an older and tormented woman crying for a lost lover and a lost land.

More than anything else in this 14-acre park, the statue of Evangeline vividly recalls the Acadian settlement and their tragic expulsion from this historic area more than two and a quarter centuries ago.

Their story began with the arrival of Champlain at Port Royal where in 1604 he founded the first permanent European settlement in North America north of Florida.

They walked slowly back and forth in front of her, watching her youthful smile of happy life and memories change into an aged frown of lament for the loss of her land and her lover who was separated from her during the expulsion.

MOVED UP BAY

Many of the settlers of Port Royal moved up the Bay of Fundy to Chignecto in the 1670s and to Minas Basin in the 1680s. By the beginning of the 18th century, Minas was the most heavily populated area in the French colony, and the largest settlement was at Grand Pre.

Here, the community reclaimed extensive tidal marshlands by means of earthen dykes which they built to shut out the sea from the upper reaches of the salt meadows.

The reclaimed land produced abundant harvests of grain without fertilization, and surplusses were shipped legally down the Bay of Fundy to Port Royal and other French colonies, and illegally to New England Colonies.

But succeeding struggles between France and Britain for supremacy in this land — Acadia — placed Acadians in a precarious and awkward position between the opposing military forces.

In 1704, invading New England troops virtually destroyed the village of Grand Pre, and nine years later the whole of Acadia was ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Utrecht. Acadia became Nova Scotia, and Port Royal was renamed Annapolis Royal.

The new government required all Acadians to take an oath of allegiance to the British Crown, but in fact the requirement was never enforced until 1730 when they did so but only on the verbal assurance that they would not have to fight if England and France went to war.

ENTANGLED IN BATTLE

Before long, however, Britain and France were entangled in battle once again, and in 1747 a surprise French attack destroyed a New England force housed at Grand Pre.

By 1755, the size and uncertain loyalties of the Acadian presence became a deep concern to colonial officials and a decision was made to expel all Acadians refusing to swear an oath of unqualified allegiance to the British Crown.

The Acadians refused to comply, and between 1755 and 1763 some 7,000 to 10,000 were deported, including 2,200 residents of Minas, families were broken up and relatives and friends separated, some of them forever.

As a final indignity, the Minas settlement was put to the torch, leaving little trace of 75 years of settlement.

Some Acadians eluded deportation, and others managed to return, but not to their former lands at Minas.

Over the next century and a half, the site of the Acadian Saint-Charles Church at Grand Pre became quiet pastureland, until 1907 when poet and historian John Frederic Herbin bought the property for a park in memory of the Acadeians, his mother's people. He erected a stone cross to mark the old church cemetery, using stones from old Acadian foundations.

In 1917, the property was sold to the Dominion Atlantic Railway and the DAR landscaped the park and commissioned a statue of Evangeline from Canadian sculptors Philippe and Henri Hebert, which was unveiled in 1920.

BUILT CHURCH

The DAR deeded the church site to the Acadian "la Societe Nationale l'Assomption," and in 1922

descendants of deported Acadians across North America contributed to a fund to build a memorial church on the site, modelled on churches of the Norman style.

Two years later, Acadians erected an iron cross near the deportation site.

The federal government acquired the park in 1957 and declared it a national historic park in 1961.

One hundred thousand visitors came to Grand Pre National Historic Park in 1985, to wander its grounds, toss coins down the two and a quarter-century-old "Evangeline's Well," gaze at a bust of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, visit the memorial church, and stand in nostalgic silence before the bronze statue of Evangeline.

They walked slowly back and forth in front of her, watching her youthful smile of happy life and memories change into an aged frown of lament for the loss of her land and her lover who was separated from her during the expulsion.

The admission-free park grounds are open year-round, the buildings from mid-May to mid-October.

Compton's Festival du Sanglier to promote wild boar

By Laurel Sherrer

COMPTON — Feeling boared?

Want a chance to go hog-wild with fireworks, games and shows for young and old alike?

How 'bout a chance to pig out on an exotic type of meat produced right here in the Townships?

You'll have your chance to do all these things the weekend of July 10, 11 and 12 when the Festival du Sanglier (Wild Boar Festival) takes place at the Domaine St. Laurent in Compton.

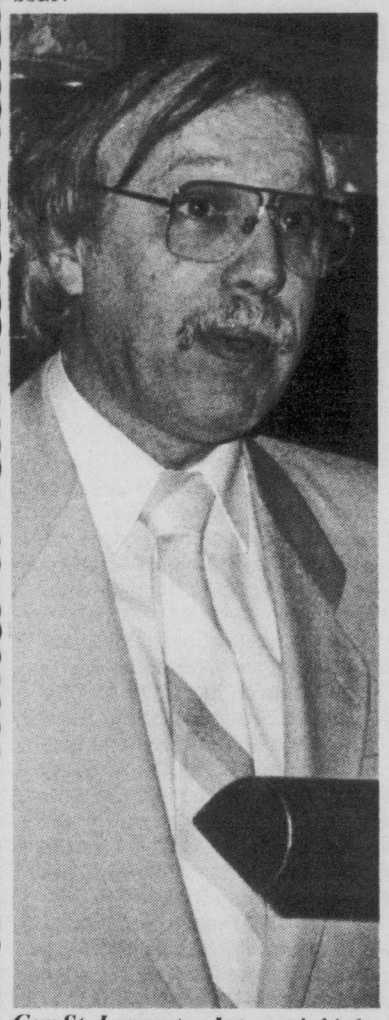

The festival is the brain-child of Normand Leblanc, a St-Edwidge farmer who has been raising wild boars for the past year and a half.

The idea was partly to have a festival that would bring people to the region, but would also promote wild boar meat, he says.

HAS UNIQUE FLAVOR

Many people have been told they were eating wild boar in restaurants, he says, only to be disappointed because the meat tastes just like pork. That's because what's often being served is the meat of a mixed breed of pig. Real wild boar, like the kind he's raising, has a unique flavor that people need to be taught to appreciate.

It makes him angry, he says, to have people fooled into thinking they're eating the real thing when it's not purebred wild boar. He hopes the festival will introduce a lot of people to high quality wild boar.

Guy St. Laurent... Interest is high.

Leblanc says he's the only person in the province to raise purebred wild boars. During the festival weekend people will be able to visit Leblanc's 115-acre farm and see how the 300 boars are raised. They will also have a chance to taste the meat of the wild boar cooked in a variety of ways, to find out what sets it apart from pork.

This is not the first year for the festival, but other years it has occurred on a smaller scale, and only in the town of St-Edwidge. This year it's designed to be a more regional event and organizers are hoping for a turnout of 10 to 15 thousand people.

WELL ACCEPTED

So far, the response to the event has been marvellous, says Leblanc. "It's been well accepted," he says.

The Domaine St. Laurent resort hotel decided to get involved in the festival because it could have important economic benefits for the region, says the hotel's public relations director, Guy St. Laurent.

"The interest is very, very high," he says. "It's going to be a great family festival where big, small, young and old can participate."

Besides events of a porcine nature, the festival will feature such attractions as fireworks, visits to the Coaticook gorge, a trout-fishing tournament, archery competitions, children's theatre and lots of kiosks to visit.

Fiddler Charlie Landry will put on a show the Friday night, and other musicians such as Maurice Proulx, Luc Paradis and Robert Huberdeau as well as a Bavarian orchestra will perform throughout the weekend.

The event will conclude with a presentation of the comedy Waiter! Sunday, July 12.

Charlie Landry will put on a show of traditional Quebec fiddling along with his characteristic highjinks the opening night of Compton's Wild Boar Festival.

Old rivals join forces in fifth Perry Mason movie

By Jerry Buck

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A generation ago Robert Stack of The Untouchables and Raymond Burr of Perry Mason frequently found themselves competing for ratings and Emmy awards.

In 1959 Burr won the Emmy as best actor in a dramatic series. Stack won the next year and in 1961 Burr won again.

Burr is still playing Perry Mason in a highly rated series of NBC movies and in the latest film he defends Stack on a murder charge. The movie, Perry Mason: The Case of the Sinister Spirit, will be broadcast Sunday.

It's the fifth in the series about the intrepid lawyer created by Erle Stanley Gardner. The first four movies finished in the Top 10.

"I play a publisher who is set up," said Stack. "I am used by some devilish chap and I go on trial for my life. Perry is an old friend and I call him late at night and wake him up.

"It's very complicated, very visual and has lots of twists. I don't think anybody can figure out who's doing what to whom until the end."

Stack, as publisher Jordan White, is accused of murdering a successful mystery novelist in a haunted hotel. The writer asks a group of people to join him at the old hotel where strange things happen during the night. In the morning the writer is thrown from the bell tower and White is caught at the scene.

LISTS CAST

The movie also stars David Ogden-Stiers as prosecutor Michael Reston, Dwight Schultz as the writer's secretary, Jack Bannon as a psychic, Leigh Taylor-Young as an actress and Matthew Faison as the writer.

Richard Lang directed from a screenplay by Anne Collins, which was based on a story by Dean Hargrove and Joel Steiger.

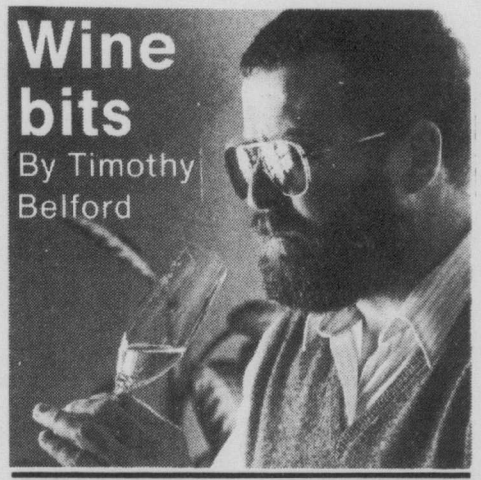

This past season Stack had a four-week recurring role on CBS' Falcon Crest.

"I played a real rotten guy, the meanest man in town," he said.

Stack starred in four series: The Untouchables, which ran from 1959-1963, Name of the Game, 1968-1971, Most Wanted, 1976-1977; and Strike Force, 1981-1982.

He made his movie debut in 1939. Most recently, he was in Airplane!, Uncommon Valor and such miniseries as Hollywood Wives and George Washington.

'Appellation' sometimes means improved quality

Random notes.

Over the last 10 years or so, many wines, particularly from France and Italy, have received 'appellation' status. In other words, the governing body in the respective country has decided that the wine in question has reached a level of quality and consistency to entitle it to bear either the Appellation d'Origin Controlée (AOC) or Denominazione di Origine Controlatta (DOC) label. This in turn guarantees the consumer that the wine so labelled will come only from that region and will share certain legally defined characteristics.

The advantages in attaining appellation status are numerous, not least of which is the luxury of charging significantly more for your product. In the best of all possible worlds, there is also the advantage to the consumer of having standards of production raised in a given region.

Unfortunately, the first half of the equation is not always completed by the second half. In other words, prices go up but quality remains the same.

One pleasant exception to this rule is Cottes du Ventoux. This particular region has been producing wines not far from Avignon (home of the better-known Chateuneuf-du-Pape) for hundreds if not thousands of years. Until relatively recently, however, the wines have been mostly unremarkable rosés and light reds.

Now, as a result, one presumes, of changes in vines, production methods etc., these 5,000 hectares of vineyards have been granted AOC status — a status well-deserved if the 1985 Caves Saint-Pierre is any example.

A bright, cherry red with a bouquet of ripe fruit and a nice full taste, this is no "classed growth" but at $6.70 a bottle it is full value for the price.

Chandon Brut, the superb Californian-produced sparkling wine made by the Moet Chandon Champagne company sells for less than $9 in the U.S. of A.

Speaking of the U.S., May 25 and May 26 have been designated by the Societe des Alcools as an American Wine Festival. The whole thing kicks off on Monday with a press conference and tasting in Montreal which will be attended by U.S. ambassador Tom Niles. I'm not too sure how the SAQ or anyone else can have a festival considering there are only about four American wines available in our little corner of the world and none of them particularly outstanding. Maybe this heralds a change in SAQ policy. Having access to the many outstanding American wines would definitely be a plus.

Cheers!

Howard Fast still writing — and angry — at age 72

Once blacklisted for communist associations, author has long list of bestsellers

By Karen Goldfarb

NEW YORK (Reuter) — At age 72, novelist Howard Fast is still angry but no longer in trouble.

The man once hauled before the congressional un-American activities committee to testify about his communist associations and blacklisted for a decade is now one of the world's best-read authors.

This spring he has yet another bestseller on the list, The Dinner Party.

The author of Citizen Tom Paine and more than 50 other works — including The Immigrants, Spartacus and Freedom Road — Fast creates popular novels infused by serious political concerns.

Citizen Tom Paine traces the life of Thomas Paine, the pamphleteer of the American Revolution whose writings like The Rights of Man laid a foundation for American democracy.

RETURN URGENT

Fast believes the United States urgently needs to become reacquainted with Paine and his principles which, he feels, the Reagan administration disregards.

"We have a president whom I consider a mindless thug," Fast said in an interview. "He with the mindless thugs around him are deliberately destroying the nature and substance of the country. He hasn't succeeded because he has been fought on many sides, but if ever there was a time to bring back the notion of how this country began, and what it is, it's today."

Fast's philosophical and political concerns reverberate through The Dinner Party, a work in which he seeks to explore the lack of integrity and decency in government, the plight of Central American refugees and the AIDS crisis.

"It is," he explains, "the story of one U.S. senator who saw unbelievable injustice and tried to do something about it."

REFERS TO TRIAL

The injustice to which Fast refers is last year's Sanctuary trial, in which the U.S. prosecuted a clergyman, his wife, and two Roman Catholic nuns who were active in the Sanctuary Movement in which churchmen provided an "underground railway" to aid Central American refugees.

The prosecution's case was largely based on information gathered by an El Salvadoran refugee who had been threatened with expulsion from the United States.

The novel's painful subtext focuses on the torment of a family facing an imminent and terrible loss. During the course of a long and arduous day, the senator learns that his homosexual son has been stricken with AIDS.

The soft-spoken and somewhat reserved Fast has weathered a good deal of controversy.

WENT TO JAIL

During the McCarthy era, when ordered to testify before the House of Representatives committee on un-American activities, Fast refused to co-operate. He was charged with contempt and served a three-month jail sentence.

He was blacklisted from 1950 to 1960 and during that time was unable to publish under his own name.

A member of the Communist party for 14 years, in 1950 he was elected to the honorary presidium of the Congress for Peace Committee in Romania, along with singer Paul Robeson and Soviet leader Josef Stalin.

In 1957, shocked by revelations about Stalin, and having become aware of anti-semitism in the Soviet Union, Fast left the party. Later, he was denounced by the Soviets as a deserter.

Aside from the 50 novels he has published under his own name, Fast published 20 others under the pseudonym C.V. Cunningham during his blacklist period.

He describes his novels as "entertaining mysteries with a point. There is always a political subtext."

He also wrote The Naked God, which recounts his break with the Communist party, nine plays, two books on Zen Buddhism, and The Ambassadors, a television screenplay for which he won an Emmy.

"The writer is lucky," observes Fast on his career. "A writer can put down his beliefs, his changes.

"Or maybe he is unlucky that way. I really don't know."
