Theatre veteran helps save Piggery

By Jake Brennan
SPECIAL TO THE RECORD
NORTH HATLEY

"I had intended to have a nice quiet summer doing sweet F.A.," jokes Douglas Campbell, veteran star of the Canadian and international stage. "And here I find myself doing far more than I've done for quite a long time."

Here is North Hatley's Piggery Theatre, the curling club turned playhouse now in its 38th summer season. It barely made it to this anniversary, however.

But upon hearing of its serious financial constraints after several recent disappointing seasons, Campbell thought he might lend his experience by proffering a few ideas.

"Well, if you're going to make suggestions, you'd better take the place on and do more than suggest things," he says, his directorial control and perfectionism that have served him so well in his 60-year theatre career shining through. "So when they asked me to do it, I couldn't very well say no, could I?"

And so, spurred by his own gumption, Campbell took the helm this spring as the Piggery's Artistic Director.

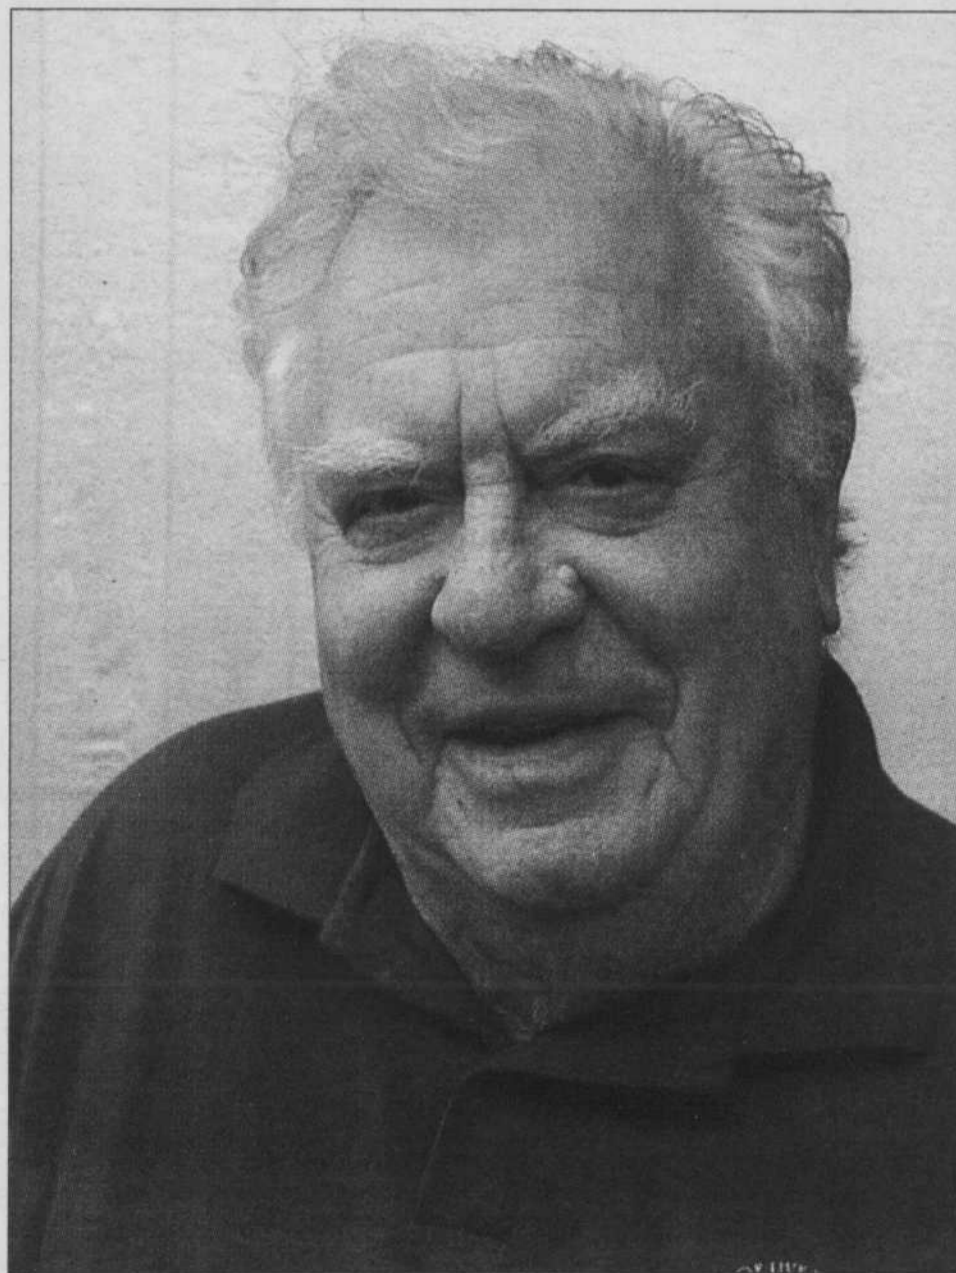

And he's decided to make it a family affair, in more ways than one.

Sharing his duties is his wife, Moira Wylie, whose American ancestors have been summering in North Hatley for about a century. Their daughter, Beatrice, one of Canada's top stage managers, has also been "dragooned into service," says Campbell with charismatic irony.

To make the Piggery a financially viable enterprise, Campbell knows two things: the productions must be taken more seriously than the "summer camp kind of theatre" of the past several seasons, and its offerings must better reflect its community.

That means adding two productions and other special evenings in French to the season's lineup, as well as a series of daytime performance classes for children and teens led by Wylie, who had a wonderful time making Shakespeare come alive for kids in Vancouver's Bard on the Beach Young Shakespeareans program.

"We're trying to broaden the concept of this place," explains Campbell. "It's not just a summer theatre for American visitors and the hoy polloy and the rich and famous who live here, but for ordinary people — and that's going to take a bit of time to get across."

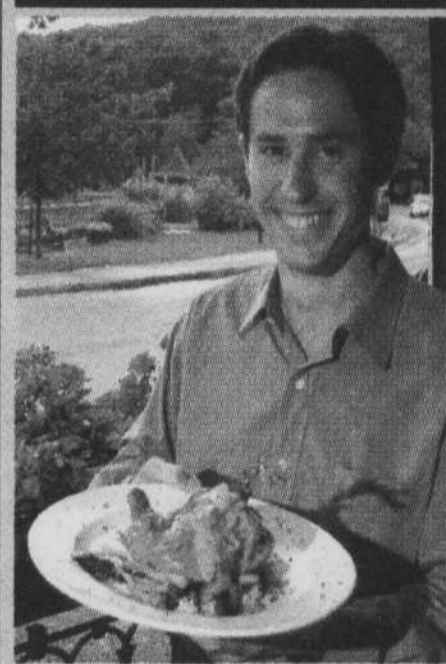

In his youth, Campbell had the basic training of an artist: acting, singing, dancing, painting.

"The only thing I couldn't do very well is write," he laments for a moment. Then, brightening quickly, he adds, "but I can speak reams."

Based on young Douglas' oral ability and her own love of theatre, his mother suggested that Campbell try his hand at drama.

Pilsen perfects pub plates

By Sunil Mahtani

SPECIAL TO THE RECORD

The Pilsen Restaurant & Pub is housed in an attractive black-and-white three-story building overlooking Lake Massawippi from the front and Massawippi River on the side.

A stream of boats float by as patrons happily consume their micro-brewed beers while munching on calamari on the terrace or enjoy a selection of three-course table d'hôte in the dining room of this North Hatley establishment. Lining the landscape are quaint homes painted in green and blue and pink and yellow.

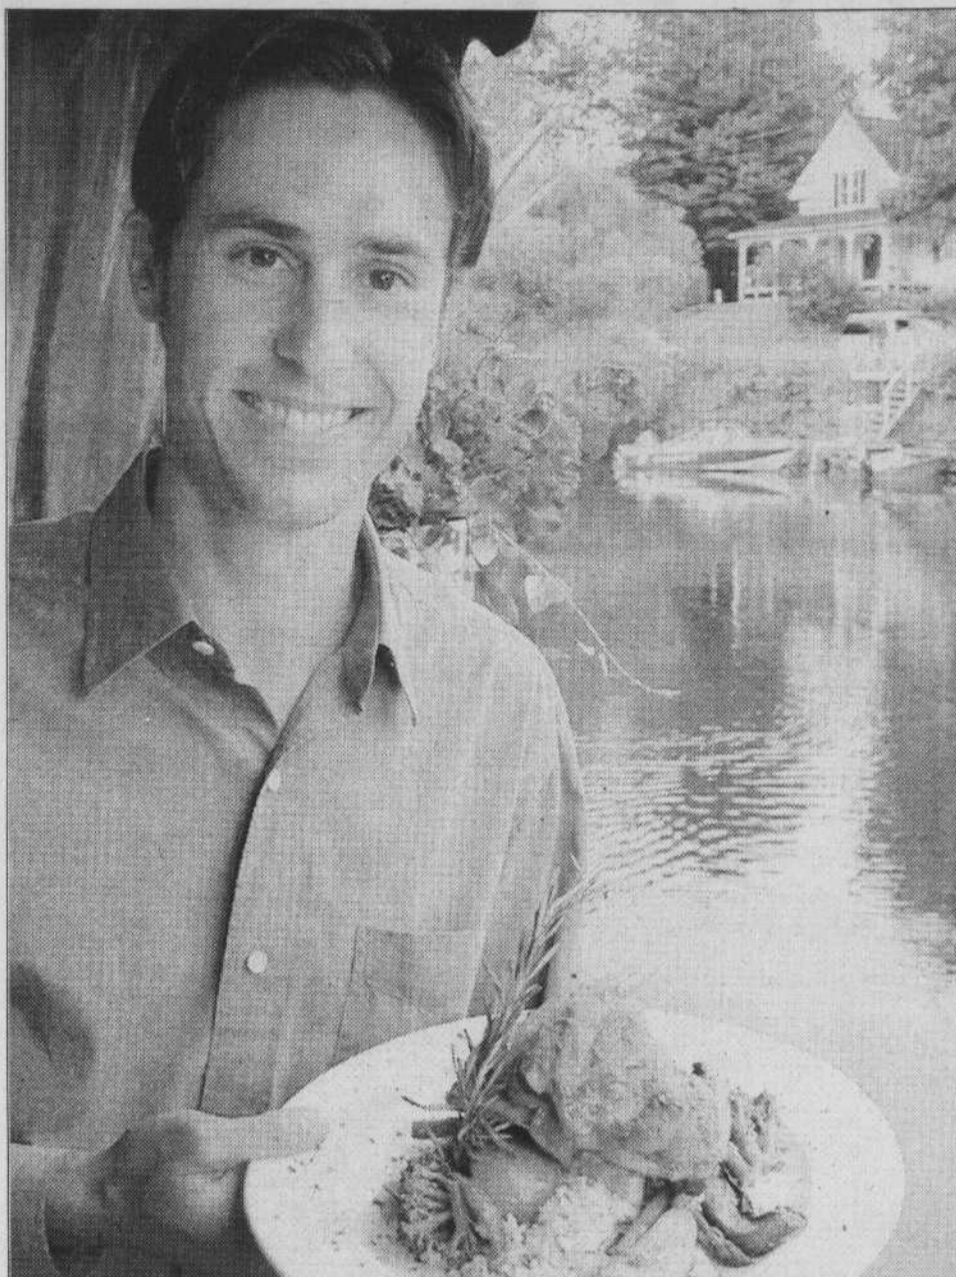

The scene seems to be straight out of one of the folk art paintings found in the unique naïf art gallery close by.

All right, the setting is no surprise. North Hatley is one of the pearls of the Townships. However, what is a glorious surprise is the cuisine. General manager Marc Peloquin, who took over the running of the restaurant from his father Gilles a year-and-a-half ago, and chef Steve Beauchemin, have designed a menu that surpasses most pub-style eateries.

They've creatively incorporated international flavours, particularly of Southeast Asia, into their cuisine to create a unique bistro experience in the Townships.

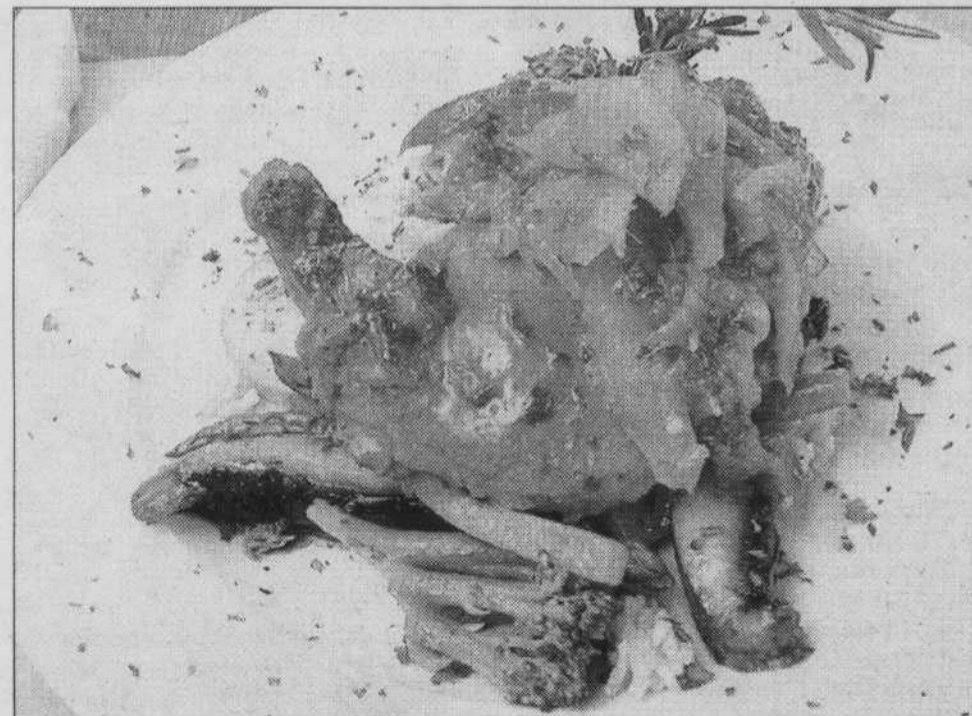

The dinner menu, in particular, is a revelation. A series of table d'hôte are offered for a set price of $25. On the evening my companion and I visited, the appetizers were a choice of Bruschetta, House Salad, Thai Mussels or Chinese Dumplings.

The main courses were Bouillabaisse, a combination of fish and seafood with tomatoes, served with vegetables and wild rice; Tandoori Chicken, a classic Indian recipe; Pork Chops au Calvados, grilled with an apple demi-glacé and mashed sweet potatoes with green onions; and Salmon Filet in Rice Paper.

For dessert - Mud Pie, Apple Pie, New York Cheesecake or Crème Brûlée. All the main dishes are also offered à la carte for between $16 and $18.

The appetizers were a no-brainer. We had the Thai Mussels and Chinese Dumplings. The mussels were a heaping bowl full of juicy steamed mussels in a subtle, tasty broth of yellow curry, green onion, lemongrass and coriander. There were also lots of portobello mushrooms and thyme spears.

A delicious, attractively presented dish with a nice variation on the usual wine broth served with mussels.

A generous portion of the dumplings was also served. Six beef and pork dumplings were served with both a peanut sauce and a red chili sauce. This is one of the Pilsen's most popular appetizers and one of the only ones they don't actually make on the premises. The dumplings hail from Montreal's Chinatown and it's easy to get hooked on them.

We were sold with the appetizers. Little did we know the real gastronomical treats were yet to come.

For fun, I thought I'd try the dish from my native India, to see what they came up with. The Tandoori Chicken was a work of art. The tender chicken breast was a fiery red colour due to its marinade of Indian spices and yogurt, served with a homemade mango chutney featuring whole mango slices, assorted vegetables and basmati rice.

Attractively arranged, it was ephemeral art - 20 minutes later, it was no longer there.

The salmon was also prepared with gusto. The dish was a salmon filet in a bold Thai curry sauce served in rice paper, a thin casing that retains the flavour of the salmon. Salmon is not usually served with such a brash sauce, but this was a perfect marriage of flavours. It was also served with vegetables and basmati rice.

After such main dishes, if dessert had been anything less than exquisite, we would have been disappointed. We weren't. The Crème Brûlée was perfectly charred on top and was composed of a soft, creamy maple-flavoured custard, a touch runny but very good nonetheless.

The Mud Pie was cappuccino ice-cream smothered in chocolate sauce and topped with whipped cream. After consuming these sinful treats, I felt as though I had committed a crime!

This luscious dinner for two, not including alcohol or gratuity, was $58.

The less adventurous shouldn't underestimate the versatility of the chef and his staff, however. They also do very good traditional pub fare with more modest prices, including hearty burgers, chicken wings, sausages with house sauerkraut and grilled vegetable foccaccia sandwiches.

The service provided by the wait staff, who were nicely attired in wine-coloured shirts, black pants and long black aprons, was also excellent. Water glasses were always full and the bread basket was never empty. The staff were there when we wanted them, yet were never intrusive.

Now in their 15th year, the Peloquin family has created quite a gastronomical dining experience at the Pilsen. It stands tall as one of the finest pubs in the Townships. Don't miss out.

Season's swan song far from strange at TLB

'I've made it into a play within a play within a play by making the characters actors on a radio program'

DIRECTOR GREG KRAMER ON THEATRE LAC BROME'S FINAL PRESENTATION OF THE SEASON

Evelyn Strange, the fourth and final presentation of the repertory season at Theatre Lac Brome, opens this weekend. Written by Canadian playwright Stewart Lemoine, it has been reworked by director Greg Kramer to heighten its impact and style.

"I've made it into a play within a play within a play by making the characters actors on a radio program," explains Kramer. "Originally they were just characters who were not actors, and the play took place at all these famous locations in New York City in the 50s. It was the kind of thing where you had to do all these locations really well or not at all."

Kramer indicated that due to money restraints, an adaptation had to be made.

"Since we did not have that kind of budget, I made it into a radio play, therefore we just have this basic set and we all use our imaginations," he said.

"Now, we have used some visual elements as well, so the audience will realize it is not all just radio — we are using elements of film noir. The script was already so stylized — the writing is poking fun at that hard-boiled style, but it is also a tribute to it. It is Raymond Chandler to the hilt. A radio drama, like film noir, has a lot which we don't actually see, and so we are forced to use our imaginations."

Stephanie McNamara, who plays Evelyn Strange, is delighted with the modifications.

"This is a very stylish production," she says. "Greg is the perfect director for it because he loves style. It has a very good flavour of the period."

"It is all about voice, about delivery, a Bette Davis kind of vocal delivery. By putting it in a radio studio

Stephanie McNamara, Jesse Todd, Mary Harvey, Lauren Piech and Karl Graboshas pay homage to 'film noir' mysteries in Evelyn Strange. The play opens this weekend at Theatre Lac Brome.

Greg allows us to create the world of this play as a heightened reality. The actors may have performed this play before, we don't really know, but something different happens on that particular day."

That 'something' occurs when Evelyn Strange has lost her memory and finds a gun in her trench coat pocket.

"We're not sure what is going on with Evelyn. We don't know what is real and what is a play," adds McNamara. "There are elements of (Alfred) Hitchcock here — the cast watched a lot of Hitchcock movies to prep for this. And like his movie 'Marnie,' where a childhood event affected the heroine, something that happened in Evelyn's childhood is affecting her now. Actually the play is inspired by Hitchcock's Vertigo."

Kramer agrees.

"It really is a tribute to film noir — I mean there are plot problems you could drive a truck through," he says.

"But we don't care, it is not really about plot devices. It is style that is important. It is kind of surreal. I think making it a radio play does enhance the play."

"I also had to add a foley artist, a person who makes sound effects for radio. We get to watch her do the sounds, which is fun. Some things are not obvious — we are having a lot of trouble with a creaking door. You can't just use a creaking door to make the sound of a creaking door! I think it will be a great experience for the audience, because we all have that memory of those films and that era."

Boyhood dream comes true for local comic

By Arash Madani

From the time he was a young boy, Will Davis, the sixth of eight kids growing up in a loud Sherbrooke home during the 70s, knew what he wanted to do for a living. Make people laugh.

"When you're a kid, some dream about being in the Stanley Cup, but I've always wanted to be a comic," said Davis, who lived in the Townships until 1998 when he moved to Vancouver.

Tonight in Montreal, the 33-year-old will host a panel on CBC and Newsworld with some of the best comedians in the country. Then, on Saturday night at Club Soda, the man who only took up the profession three years ago, will get his chance to perform in the Just For Laughs festival beginning at 7 p.m.

"This is just like the Stanley Cup for me. It's my Stanley Cup moment," he admitted. "This is the big time. I am totally stoked for the opportunity. I know what I have to do, and what I'm doing and I have a set, I'm ready for it."

To those who knew Davis, who holds a day job as the head writer and producer with CBC's innovative late night television program ZeD, the arrival of the man known for impersonations, improv and creating ongoing laughs onto the Canadian comedy scene is not a surprise.

"I was always the clown," he said.

Davis knew deep down that his passion was comedy, but he wasn't sure how to crack the industry. As a youth in the area, he flocked to Lennoxville on a regular basis, before deciding to enroll at Champlain College.

While he was studying theatre, his focus was not always in the classroom.

"Oh, they know me at the (Golden) Lion (Pub) pretty well," said Davis, who has performed there — as recently as last summer.

COURTESY JAMES MATHESON

Will Davis will live his Stanley Cup moment when he performs Saturday at Just For Laughs.

"And I was always playing basketball. I probably played more basketball and drank more beer than I did theatre, but I knew that theatre could be my ticket."

Upon graduating from the CEGEP, he hooked on working with young people, while acting as the President of the Maison des Jeunes de Quebec for seven years. While Davis said he enjoyed the job, he wasn't getting any closer to his dream — and the Stanley Cup of laughter — until a break came his way.

"We had the possibility of doing a show for kids on local cable, and we did, and I loved it. I was the host, and then I knew I wanted to do that as well and I knew I could combine comedy and TV," he recalled, in an interview Wednesday.

So he stuck around the region a little longer, hosted a radio show on Bishop's University's CJMQ 88.9 FM and finally, a half-decade ago, decided to "go away from home as far as possible."

The place: Vancouver.

When he got into the comedy circuit three years ago, not even Davis could envision that he would be a headliner at comedy festivals, corporate gigs and clubs throughout the nation.

He has a busy schedule, that has included recently being the featured act at the Stanley Theatre in Vancouver. There, during 'Comedy Night in Canada', Davis, who went on a cross-country tour last summer, performed stand-up and portrayed Ron MacLean to Peter Kelamis' impression of Don Cherry.

The show was such a hit that it aired across the country on CBC Radio in May, and will be on the television network in October. But through it all, the gracious, well-mannered comic has never forgotten his roots, and always likes to make it back home whenever he can.

"Even this time in Montreal, I'll have to come back to see my mom," he said.

He is also trying to work out an arrangement to perform in Lennoxville, at the Lion in the fall.

"Yeah, I'd love to be able to get back, maybe in September around Labour Day," said Davis.

He's not alone.

"Having Will here is always a great thing," Lion Pub co-owner Stan Groves has said in the past. "It's always great to see a hometown boy do well and to come back."

This weekend, David finally gets his biggest showcase to make people laugh, live out that boyhood dream and gain an opportunity to grip what he calls 'a comic's Stanley Cup' on the Just For Laughs stage that has propelled many in the field to renowned status.

"A lot of times I wondered if something like this would happen, and now it all has," said Davis, almost incredulously. "I've been waiting for this moment for a long time and now it's here. It's going to be something special."

Local youths find home away from home

By Tricia Davidson

RECORD CORRESPONDENT

Hardcore music, art exhibits, conferences and many other events for young people have all found their home at 114 Wellington S. in Sherbrooke.

While it looks like an ordinary address from the outside, a trip up the carpeted stairs reveals many facets of the venue located next to the Salvation Army in downtown Sherbrooke.

Champlain Regional College students held the first ever student organized art exhibition there several months ago. Every aspect of the exhibit was taken care of by students to ensure a greater visibility and accessibility for the general public.

Benoit Pépin is one of the original members of the Administrative Council of this locale, which started up with a government grant and the dedicated ambition of a group of youth.

"When we started we were seven people. It was a Quebec government project. The program is called Jeunes Volontaires (Young Volunteers)," explained Pépin.

"From the beginning of the project, we were supported by La Coalition sherbrookoise pour le travail de rue (the Sherbrooke coalition for street work)."

The government grant and local support enabled the group of young individuals to create a space for their ideas and those of other local youth to be expressed.

A definite structure was in place to ensure that the youth were able to continue their activities at the venue.

"We had meetings once a week to discuss the activities, the improvements that need to be done, the money left in the bank and other details," Pépin said.

"Our first show happened last year on Aug. 14. There were five touring bands from the U.S. and a local band playing their first show."

There is yet another punk concert slated to take place on Sunday, July 28, this time featuring I Farm and The Control from New York. Also, Montreal-based Runt and possibly another group will appear.

Despite the government grant for the project having run its course, the council is still hard at work booking concerts, renting the space for bands to practice in and renting it out for other functions as well.

"We had a good quantity of shows, art exhibits, political debates, cheap vegan dinners, and we rented the place for tons of other stuff," Pépin continued. "It's officially over since July 1, but we still have activities coming and I have a bunch of shows coming until the end of September."

ON SATURDAY, JULY 27 AND SUNDAY JULY 28, THERE WILL BE TWO DIFFERENT PUNK ROCK CONCERTS HAPPENING AT 8 P.M. AND ADMISSION IS $6.

Get set to Tango with Eastern Europe satire

Tango, the last of a trilogy of plays, opens at the Piggery Theatre this Friday, July 19. Written by Slawomir Mrozek in 1956, it is a satire on life in Poland under the Russians.

Although obscure in Canada, Mrozek is one of the better known playwrights in his native Poland.

"Tango is completely different from our other plays, it is an absurdist satire," explains director Douglas Campbell. "It is a political piece, but not at all limited to the Russian occupation. Essentially it deals with any revolutionary force, and how you really cannot change the political nature of man."

One character, Arthur, wants to see a major change around his home. He is the son of hippy-type parents, who wants to control the disorder in this artistic household. He wants to create order in his house, a conservative order, which tends to set up a Fascist condition, said Campbell.

"And naturally people fight against being ordered," he continues. "All philosophical concepts want to find an order for society, but one that will satisfy us without our harming one another. To let us live without using force or killing one another. In Tango these ideas are being dealt with in an absurdist manner. It is cynical in that the Brute takes over in the end, as he has always done. One certainly hopes he will not at some point.

Campbell adds that he thinks Mrozek has a lot to say without it being a lecture.

"You are allowed to draw your own conclusions from the play — you are not being told what to think," he says. "It is a satire, it is funny, poking fun at our ideas and attitudes. It is kind of an extension by absurdism to a Shavian play.

"But I think the most important thing about producing this play is that we have ten actors in three big shows. You get to see these actors deal with three entirely different plays — entirely different characters. That alone is exciting!"

Actor Eric Davis, who plays Eddie, agrees that this role is completely separate from his other two.

"I like a challenge, and Eddie is definitely that," he says. "I like to dive in head first with a character like him. There is an element of camp to the other characters I play in the Fantasticks and Twelfth Night (he is Bellomy and Sir Andrew Aguecheek) — but not Eddie.

David admits Eddie is difficult to describe, while everyone else has an idea of what he represents — the masses, the working class, whatever.

"He is an opportunist. He infiltrates

Arthur's family by having an affair with Eleanor, his mother, and she becomes a kind of sugar momma to him," continues David. "And bit by bit, as Arthur takes control and starts playing politics, Eddie jumps up and takes his opportunities.

"Eddie becomes Arthur's muscle, his thug. Then Arthur loses his fiancée because Eddie sleeps with her, and he just crumbles. Eddie sees his weakness and takes control by brute force."

The identity of the character also comes out a little more.

"I think of Eddie as the child of propaganda — he hears all these theories and takes a little of what he likes from everything to form his own world view," says Davis. "He is not an intellectual, but he is very street smart. I am playing him with some ambiguity. The audience will have to draw their own conclusions about what makes Eddie tick."

Davis goes on to say Tango is a kind of dark play, in which you cannot tell whether his character is good or bad. He admits, however, there are parallels like to George W. Bush.

"You know, how did he ever get into power? This is an absurdist farce as well as a social commentary."

Stage general has charmed audiences world-wide

CAMPBELL:

His hands were in effect his original foot in the door — his truck driving skills and his burly, thick-boned Scottish frame, which made him a champion scenery hauler. His dramatic presence was soon noticed, though, and he first stepped behind the footlights with London's Old Vic Company in 1942.

He is known for his superb timing, especially in comedies — his ability to quickly lure the audience into his pocket and take them wherever he's going for several hours.

"There's nothing more exciting than when you've really got an audience on your side, so they're following every nuance of thought that you give them, and you feel them go with you," says Campbell. "It doesn't happen often, but when it does, it's the most intoxicating thing you can possibly imagine."

Campbell's ability to exude that intoxication has charmed audiences not just in Britain and Canada, where he was one of the founding members of Ontario's Stratford Festival, but also for various stints in the U.S., South Africa, and Continental Europe.

He recalls playing King Lear three times, Othello a few more than that, Macbeth "God knows how many times," and Falstaff "forever." He identifies with the latter most out of the 150 different roles he estimates having played, which by now have "all kind of rolled into one."

Although his acting credits are considerable, Campbell has also been successful at running a company before.

In 1954, just one year after the Stratford Festival opened, he founded the Canadian Players, who were responsible for the birth of much of this country's theatre. After a few years he wanted the company to travel from coast to coast, "proselytizing the troops all over."

But when chair of the board Lady Eaton disagreed, he quit after five years.

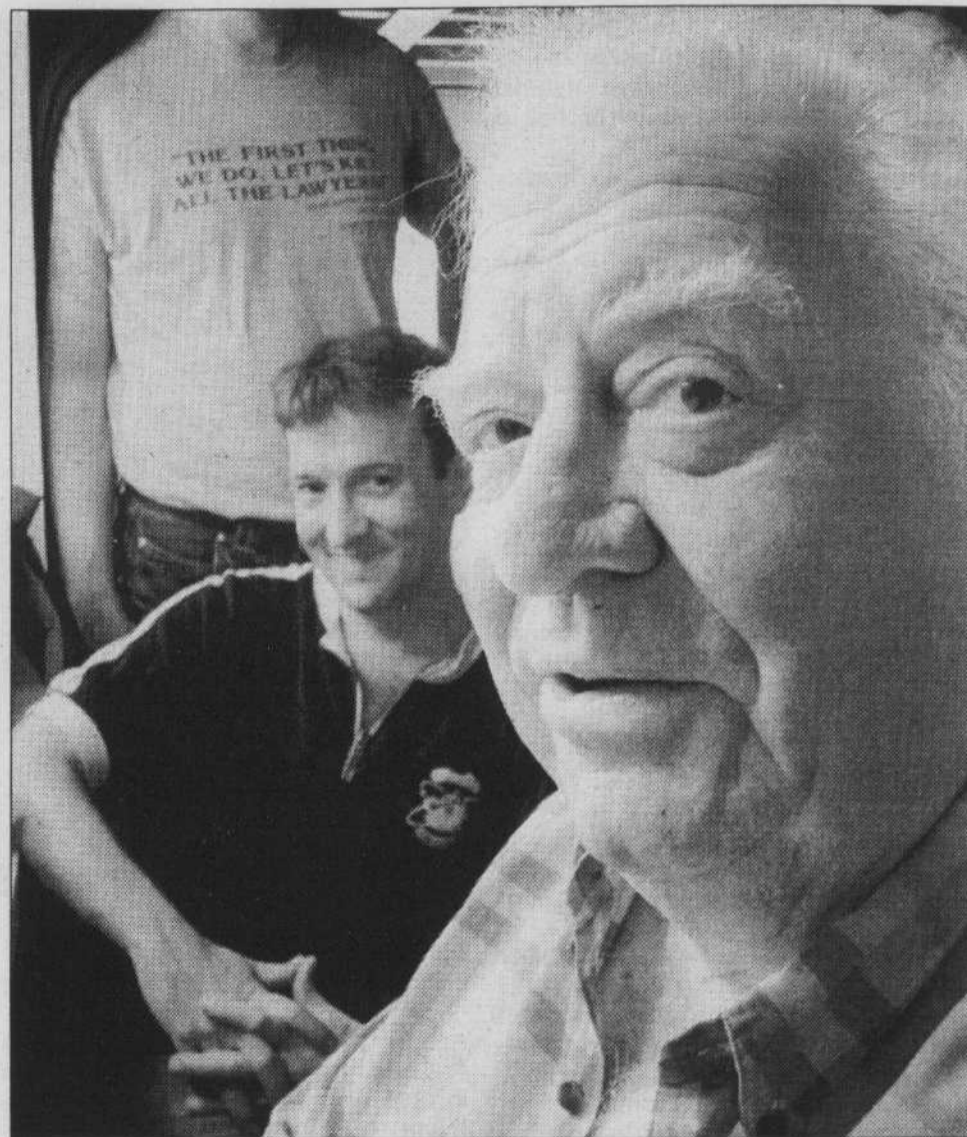

According to some advice he later received from friend and colleague, Tyrone Guthrie of Minneapolis' Guthrie theatre, his exit from the Canadian Players was characteristically well timed.

"You really should not run a theatre for more than five years," Campbell recalls his friend saying. "Get out, because by that time they've found out all your tricks, and you've found out theirs."

When one is not running the show, though, one's tenure can be significantly longer.

In what would have been Campbell's 50th season at Stratford, he was insulted not to be offered anything off the top, and so he has decided he's done with an organization he no longer feels connected to.

"It's such a big concern now, such a great corporate structure," he says. "The prices are ridiculous. If the show is anything less than astounding, which they often are these days, much of the audience feels cheated. The rest are more interested in being seen at intermission with a glass of white wine in their hand than in the show they ostensibly came to see.

Campbell's ability to exude that intoxication has charmed audiences not just in Britain and Canada, where he was one of the founding members of Ontario's Stratford Festival, but also for various stints in the U.S., South Africa, and Continental Europe.

"There's a lot of that feeling about it, and I'm not interested in that anymore."

And so he's going back to the beginning with the Piggery, something he says he always enjoys doing. He estimates that it will take at least three years to build up its reputation to something where people say "we've got to go to the Piggery. Their shows are quite good."

And now, happily based in Montreal's Plateau district and North Hatley, Campbell says he is prepared to put in that time, in his usual hands-on manner.

"I think it's the job of someone who runs a theatre to be around, not to be hidden," he says, admitting that he's not always the easiest person to get along with. "I'm genuinely committed to making the best theatre I can, and I'm not prepared to make sacrifices."

He has the experience and vision a good director needs, and says that whether it's acting, directing, or his first artistic love, painting, "you know there is something that you want to say which is bigger than your capacity. And that, I think, is what art is about. You use art to try and fulfill this sense of scale that you have."

At 80, Campbell's hobbling with a cane belies his mental agility and youthfulness.

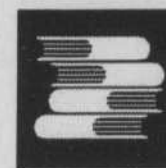

"I have no idea what it's supposed to feel like," he says. "When I see people who are 80, I think, 'do I look like that? I hope not.'"

But, no stranger to adaptation, Campbell says he's enjoying simply playing the part of an 80 year-old the best he can.

Would the real Robert Ludlum please stand up

It's clear from the outset of The Paris Option, spy novelist Lynds is flying solo

Would the real Robert Ludlum please report back to Covert-One While imitation may well be the truest form of flattery, some imitators sort of stick in your throat.

Take Gayle E. Lynds, who ghost-wrote Robert Ludlum's share of the latest in the legendary writer's Covert-One spy series. Lynds collaborated with Ludlum to produce the first leg of the thrillers — The Hades Factor — and now carries the ball for the dead author in The Paris Option (St. Martin's Griffin; $22.95).

Ludlum set the standard for modern-day spy thrillers for more than 30 years before dying a year ago last spring, just before the second in his series, The Cassandra Compact, came out.

But while it is generally accepted that Ludlum had drawn outlines for 11 upcoming novels before his death, quality control had clearly fallen off the table by the time the galleys for either of the first two Covert adventures arrived. On his death bed, it is doubtful he had much of a notion what direction The Paris Option would take.

From the outset, it is plain to see, at least by any Ludlumite, that spy novelist Lynds was flying solo here, and with little obvious direction from the grave.

Memo to Lynds:

Let's try one on a molecular computer. Leave it to you to fill in details. The best.

Robert

Had Ludlum authored such a memo, it would be fair to say he would have asked Lynds to check her melodrama at the door as she constructed a new plot for the U.S. president's personal, super-secret agency and Covert-One agent Lt.-Col. Jon Smith. But trying to imitate Robert Ludlum's style — his knack for drama, the pacing, the intricate plotting, the richness of characters — is no small task, even for the talented Lynds (Masquerade, Mosaic and Mesmerized).

Lynds dispatches Jon Smith to the City of Light to investigate the bombing of a computer lab on the brink of winning the global race to create a molecular DNA computer. The revolutionary computer and its creator are seemingly lost in the explosion, along with the scientist's schematics for the prototype.

Of course, evil forces have their hands on this mother of all computers and soon are threatening international data systems, interrupting worldwide communications and crashing computers around the globe. The ultimate threat here, though, is a nuclear holocaust.

Agent Smith and company hopscotching across Europe in pursuit of perps (and bad dialogue?) has its moments but by the time the first ICBM wings its way toward Omaha, some may be excused for wishing it would instead bean the honey-tongued Smith. But that would be cruel.

But who could forget such classic lines from the secret agent and his cohorts:

"Stop that man, he's got a gun;" "Be careful out there;" "Talk? There's always talk;" "You've got to get better soon, Marty dear. You're my favourite person to eat Oreo cookies with."

OTHER NEW RELEASES

Just the covers alone are worth the price of admission to Diane Mott Davidson's wacky culinary whodunits.

The Colorado author who discovered a raging appetite for her souffle suspense and quickly hammered out 10 bestsellers, including last year's Sticks and Scones, is back on the shelves with Chopping Spree (Bantam/Random House; $35.95).

Her tales about Colorado caterer Goldy Schultz have earned Mott Davidson sumptuous praise from most major newspapers and magazines where she has been labelled both the "Julia Childs of mystery" and a "cross between Mary Higgins Clark and Betty Crocker."

Complete with recipes for everything from Swedish meatballs to "Quiche me Quick" and her own "Chopping Spree Salad," Chopping

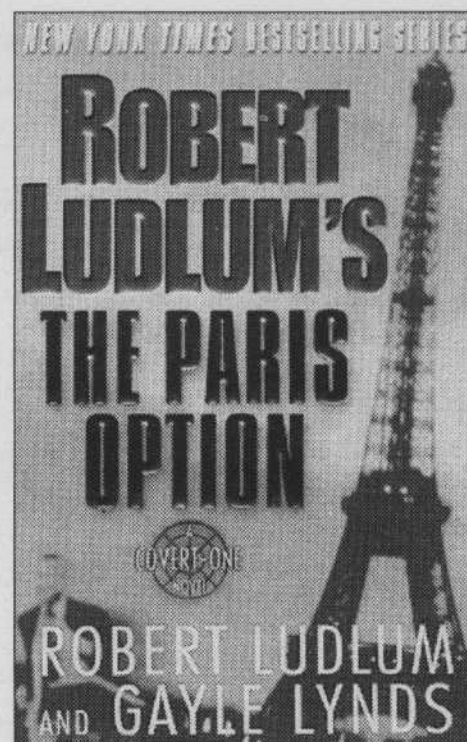

The Paris Option

Authors: Robert Ludlum and Gayle Lynds
Publisher: Griffen Trade (400 pp)
Published: June, 2002
Cost: $22.95 (hardcover)
ISBN: 0312289871

Spree finds Schultz busier than ever and trying to cater a jewel-encrusted affair for an elite shoppers club.

A marauding truck with a plan to paste her, reminds the sleuthing chef that success really can kill you. And just when she thinks nothing else can go wrong, an old friend winds up wearing one of her new knives, leaving her valued assistant as the main suspect. Mott Davidson can serve up mayhem-lite like no other mystery writer.

Our Lady Peace brought down to earth

Our Lady Peace
Gravity

(Columbia/Sony Canada)

Not that recent success has gone to the heads of Our Lady Peace members, but Gravity has brought the popular Canadian outfit down to earth. Without the regular national fan fare, it is ironic that the group has now produced their best album to date, and perhaps the most well-rounded rock disk in recent years. Band members have clearly done their collective homework with Gravity as the authenticity and ardour of the album's material speaks to both past and present. The solid guitar riffs, excellent acoustic guitar work and rough lyrics have not changed, but the disk features a more through-and-through rock melody characteristic of a Moist or Tragically Hip. Made up of singer Raine Maida, bassist Duncan Coutts, drummer Jeremy Taggart and guitarist Steve Mazur, Our Lady Peace's latest is very different from their alt/rock beginnings. Yet as listeners may or may not agree, that is not a bad thing.

Breaking Point
Coming of Age

(Epic/Sony Canada)
World Wrestling Entertainment

made them famous, but Breaking Point has since been unable to capitalize on their short trip to the spotlight. After recording 'One of a Kind' for WWE superstar Rob Van Dam in 2001, the Memphis quartet released Coming of Age, a chewed-up rock compilation that has received little fan fare. To the group's credit, the title track is a catchy through-and-through hard rock number. Also, 'One of a Kind' is a quality, hard-line alt/rock single. Yet, the rest of Coming of Age is flat, sounding too much like many metal/rock bands already out there. Although many songs on the album are true life stories, the reality is that Breaking Point, made up of Brett Erickson, Justin Rimer, Jody Abbott and Greg Edmondson, is a one-star band in a five-star music industry.

Mae Moore
It's a Funny World

(Paras/Fusion III)

It truly is a funny world for PEI resident Mae Moore. After releasing her third album on the Epic/Sony label, the singer/songwriter/visual artist began looking for the daughter she gave up for adoption at 19. After years of searching, Moore was finally reunited with Sara, and the two formed an instant connection. Now, following two more releases, including It's a Funny World, the pop artist is translating her recent experiences into music. Combining sultry vocals with distinctive songwriting and an arsenal of world instruments—including Djembe, Flat Earth Drum, Raku Pot, Dragonfly and Kootenay Forge Fire Poker—the album is a worldly-pop paradise. Although singing about life experiences is not new, Moore does it in a way that provides a tidy thread. Add that with the powerful acoustic guitar single 'Bohemia' and listeners have a disk that speaks as much about the singer's life as it does to her incredible talent.

Various Artists

The Radioactive Tribute to Kraftwerk

(New Mantra/Fusion III)

What strange bedfellows the songs of German electronic music pioneer and maven Kraftwerk and an assortment of Japanese tribute artists make. This journey is not for the faint of heart, should you fancy commercially popular music, pass go and pick up some more candy floss. This might be an addition for the collection of those who enjoyed the Jaymz Bee renditions of recent hip hop singles. Production can be traced to Thierry Wolf, a fellow from France responsible for a compilation called Gainsbourg Made in Japan, featuring re-interpretations of Serge Gainsbourg songs by Japanese groups. Kraftwerk's songs are redone with variations on the theme of electronic music, most being either Latin in flavour or suitable for a rave. 'Music Non Stop' is a techno ride contrasted starkly by the tranquil 'Radio Activity'. 'Señor Coconuts' provides Latin influenced versions of 'The Robots' and 'Showroom Dummies' sure to stay in your head.

The Tragically Hip

In Violet Light

The Tragically Hip
In Violet Light

(Universal)

"Your heart jumps to / And my heart jumps too." Let's say, with that wordplay, they've officially given up on making Ozzfest next year. Eighteen years in (!), the Hip name check Springsteen, along with other poets (Wally Stevens, Bob Lowell and Ray Carver). They cite their own history in the "beautiful lull" moment that opens 'It's A Good Life If You Don't Weaken', their country in 'The Dire Wolf' and 'The Dark Canuck', and, in 'All Tore Up', 'Leave' and 'A Beautiful Thing', they have the centrepiece of a new live show. Being unaffected by the whorls and eddies of rock trend can be both good and bad, but this band does it with vigour, elegance and something sounding frighteningly like maturity.

Papa Roach

(Dreamworks)

Out of the gate like a latchkey kid without his Ritalin, the Papa Roach follow-up races for the arena cheap seats. Surprised? Papa Roach were expected to play the mooch card and reach for a heavy Korn/Deftones presence; instead, "I'm strong and fearless / only 'cause I got rock'n'roll" is a 1980s arena pledge, and 'La Cucaracha' is scuttling for the overflow popcorn and beer from the days of the big riff. They used to be from broken homes, now they have broken hearts, applying their Cali anomie to love relationships in 'She Loves Me Not'. Lovehatetragedy trades in the crunch and choruses of a band with its eye on the prize, and despite flourishes of the old nu-school dysfunction ("I return to my shelter / and I crawl in a bottle" - Black Clouds), Daddy Roach would rather own the metal motel than merely check in.

Newman hasn't lost charm in twilight of career

By Jamie Portman
SOUTHAM NEWS

"I'm getting half deaf," Paul Newman confessed the other day, apologizing to a reporter for being unable to hear the question. Then, on being asked to identify his personal acting heroes, he started to reel off names — Marlon Brando, Lee J. Cobb — and then suddenly stopped because his memory was betraying him.

"I really should not have mentioned them, because one forgets. I'd have to go through all my books and it would take me five days to figure that out . . . There are just too many people I admire."

He sat on an elevated platform in a Ritz-Carlton hotel ballroom, thinking about other names he could cite, and finally came up with wife Joanne Woodward.

"Joanne's in there somewhere too, I've got to tell you." Then, his dramatic timing still impeccable, he paused for a moment before finishing: "I would have been killed if I didn't say that."

One of the most revolutionary and eerie aspects of the video and DVD phenomenon is that it's now possible for an actor's younger self to be always with us. We can see Butch Cassidy exercising his insolent charm on our TV screen, or still earlier a drunken and heartless Hud using his sexual charisma as the most lethal of weapons, or, going back even further, a scarcely articulate Rocky Graziano punching his way to ring fame in Somebody Up There Likes Me, Newman's 1956 breakthrough film.

The images of the past tend to intrude upon the present, as they did in Chicago when this man of 77 slowly mounted the platform, a plate of scrambled eggs in one hand, and inspected the battery of microphones on the table.

"It looks as though somebody's going to declare war!" The voice was softer, huskier, but the eyes peering out at the assembled reporters were still that unmistakable Paul Newman blue. "Have I just been elected to public office?" Then, after a final inspection of the mikes, one final quip: "None of these things are loaded are they?"

There was an old-fashioned courtly charm to the proceedings, leavened by these spontaneous bits of humour.

"My wife told me to sit up straight," Newman confided and then proceeded to sit up straight. As for the secret of his 44-year-old marriage: "I don't know what she puts in my food!" There was also a sense that in the twilight of a remarkable half-century career — as an award-winning actor, racing car driver, philanthropist (through his charity-raising line of Newman sauces and salad dressings) and prominent supporter of liberal causes, — Newman was still having trouble growing old. He was asked whether his new period movie — Road To Perdition, in which he delivers a superb performance as an Irish mobster — constituted his acting swan song, and he responded with a sigh of resignation.

"I keep trying to retire from everything, and discover that I have retired from absolutely nothing. I was going to get out of the racing business and I'm back in the racing business. I was going to let somebody else deal with the spaghetti sauce and I'm back with the spaghetti sauce. I just finished the first play I've done in 35 years (Our Town for Joanne Woodward's prestigious Westport Summer Playhouse) which is like sticking a rifle in your mouth. So I don't seem able to retire."

Film historian David Thomson, who admits to puzzlement over Newman's appeal, once wrote that the actor struck him as having "an uneasy, self-regarding personality, as if handsomeness had left him guilty."

A harsh pronouncement, but one wonders whether Newman would disagree with it that much. In Chicago, a reporter told Newman he had an "icon" status and the old actor cut him short.

"Who said I was an icon? My grandson does not think I'm an icon. He's three years old and came through the door the other day and said: 'I am obsessed by the Yellow Submarine!'" After the laughter subsided, Newman continued with the punch line: "What will he say when he's six?"

But what about this icon label? "I don't think anything about that stuff. What you achieve on the screen has nothing to do with you . . . I don't take much of it seriously. I really don't and — uh — that's all I have to say about it."

Paul Newman stars as an Irish mobster opposite Tom Hanks in Road To Perdition. Don't expect his latest role to be the actor's swan song, however, as Newman expects to continue a hectic schedule.

Actually he had more to say later when he reflected on his years with New York's Actors Studio, recalling his "long and detailed formal education in the theatre at Yale and Kenyon" and concluding that "almost everything" he learned about being an actor came later from the Actors Studio. Then came more self-revelation when he confessed unhappiness with his own work. "There's not a performance I can look at comfortably with any sense of satisfaction until after the late Seventies."

He was quick to make a couple of things clear when asked whether he considered it his responsibility as a celebrity to help people through good works. And only now did a note of anger surface.

"This is not a celebrity issue. This is a political issue. The concept that a person who has a lot holds his hand out to someone who has less or to someone who's hurting — that's simply a human trait that has nothing to do with celebrity, and I am confounded at the stinginess of some institutions and some people, and bewildered by it.

"You can only put away so much stuff in the closet. In 1987, the salary of the average CEO against that of someone who was working in his factory was 70 times higher. Now it's 410 times. Aristotle said the greatest government is the one that has the least number of people at each end, and that makes sense."

Then the windup: "So I don't think there's anything exceptional or noble in being philanthropic. It's the other attitude that confuses me."

A tribute to 'Saint'

...to the tune of Saint James
Infirmary Blues

By Ray 'True Blue' Tyler
SPECIAL TO THE RECORD

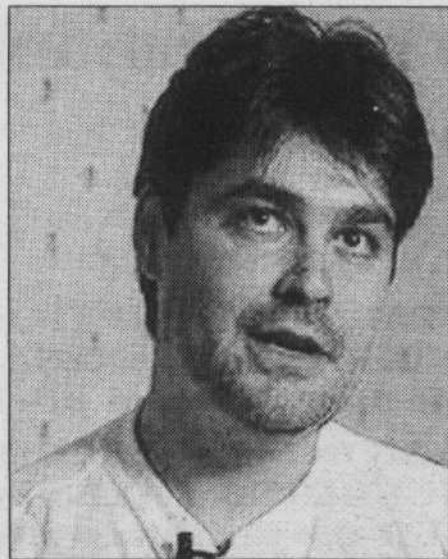

It was down at Michel's Bistro near the corner of King & Jacques Cartier. The drinks were served as usual, but this was indeed a special day. In the corner sang 'Mike Goudreau: Boppin' along with his Friends.'

The sweet sounds of timeless jazz graced us — breathing life back into legend: Thank you Louis for your inspiration and the legacy you left behind.

In what was truly a wonderful night this past Tuesday at Café Cafuccino, the launching of a tribute album to the 'Grand-dad of modern jazz' Louis Armstrong was as much a tribute to an era of great song-writing.

What is beyond question is that it firmly establishes Goudreau and his musicians in the oft elusive marketplace of jazz for everyone. No gimmicks, no pretense, just straight-shooting here.

Following the delightful début album 'Stardust Memories', which similarly was a celebration of the crooner's craft, Goudreau carves a secure future outside the often unfortunate strait-jacket of the Blues.

Not that the Boppin' Blues band is struggling— festival bookings such as Le Festival du Lait à Coaticook on Aug. 9, following their participation aux FrancoFolies in Montreal July 28 proves it is alive and well.

If you would like to hear this album, 'Thank you Louis!', as well as several selections from Goudreau and the gang discography please tune in this Sunday, July 21, from noon to 2 p.m. to the Blues 'n Views program on CJMQ Radio 88.9 FM.
