An 87-year-old woman, Miss Elda Fee, 400 Lansdowne avenue, was killed instantly when she was struck by a car as she crossed Sherbrooke street from south to north at Arlington just before seven o'clock Saturday evening.

Miss Fee was the victim of Westmount's second fatal pedestrian accident of the year. The other was Feb. 16 when Charles Herzberg, 76, of 250 Clarke avenue, was killed in a hit-and-run incident as he crossed de Maisonneuve boulevard at Clarke avenue. Westmount Police are still seeking a red Camaro which they believe hit Mr. Herzberg.

Miss Fee was struck by a 1970 Chevelle driven by Stanley Dmuchalsky, 50, of Ste. Dorothee in Laval. Mr. Dmuchalsky said he saw Miss Fee standing on the street just off the curb as he proceeded west on Sherbrooke.

Walked into car path

As he approached, she walked out into the street and was struck by the front of the car. She was thrown onto the hood of the vehicle before falling to the street.

Two doctors were in the area of the accident and they pronounced her dead at the scene.

Miss Fee first came to Westmount in 1928 and until 1940 she lived at 314 Roslyn avenue. She then moved to N.D.G. but returned to Westmount over two years ago and lived at 4557 Sherbrooke street before moving to 400 Lansdowne in April of this year.

Although she lived in N.D.G. for many years she kept up her Westmount acquaintances and since 1928 was a member of Westmount Park United Church.

With Travellers' Aid

She worked for many years with the Travellers' Aid of the YMCA and was involved with many auxiliaries including those of the Montreal Association for the Blind and the Catherine Booth Hospital.

The fatal accident on the first day of July brought to an end a month of almost serious-incident-free traffic operations in Westmount. During June only 11 people were injured in seven accidents.

Council slaps attackers

Westmount City Council struck back Tuesday evening at those who in recent months have used council meetings to attack and debate various causes and personalities.

Ald. Douglas Robertson was most vehement in his criticism of persons who come to the meetings and use their right to speak in the wrong way. "Those who speak here should not personally attack other citizens or aldermen," he said. "Personalities should be left out."

Ald. Robertson's comments came as a result of several recent meetings where various groups have attacked each other and city council from the floor of the city hall chambers.

They were touched off Tuesday following a presentation to city council by Victor M. Schreider, 63 Prospect street, a representative of the commercial interests in the urban renewal zone protesting the proposed changes in the

Neighbor spots burglar Boy, 16, admits 14 jobs

A phone call by an alert, civic-minded resident and an all-night investigation by Sgt. Detective Gerald McKenna of the Westmount Police led to the arrest Sunday evening of a 16-year-old boy who admitted to committing a total of 14 burglaries and attempting another.

Ten of the incidents had occurred in Westmount during the last month, including four last weekend. The other four burglaries were in Montreal.

At 9:45 pm Sunday evening a woman in the house next door noticed a man climbing through a window in the house at 310 Elm avenue. She called Westmount Police and the 16-year-old was arrested on the premises.

Mayor Ouimet announced at the end of Tuesday's meeting of Westmount City Council that a meeting would be held today by Dr. Antoine Valois, medical officer of health; some members of city council and the directors of the 4424 Inc. youth clinic to determine the fate of the centre until the city completes its thorough study of all aspects of municipal involvement in social services.

Dozer dozes tree

A driver who fell asleep at the wheel early Saturday morning was injured and the front of his car demolished when it hit a small tree and the fence surrounding it on Sherbrooke street just west of Victoria avenue.

Vincent Dobson, 26, of Montreal, was driving west on Sherbrooke at 5:35 am. When he woke up he had hit the tree and fence and taken them both completely out of the ground.

He suffered lacerations to the mouth and was taken to the Queen Elizabeth Hospital by patrol car. He was released after treatment.

July 7 to 15

Drizzle in the mountains, morning mists in the plains and river valleys are our normal fare to commence this pleasant week. Although changeable, conditions will become mainly sunny with cool nights and very little precipitation or wind.

The sizzling hot days in southern counties come to an end Tuesday since the thermometer is likely to drop to 45 degrees F. that night.

Morning heat fogs and sultry afternoons probable to the end of the week.

Temperature range: Ottawa, Montreal and Townships, 90 to 95 degrees F. days and 45 to 50 nights. Northern and Gulf counties, 40 and 80.

The boy was arraigned

Tuesday in Social Welfare Court where he pleaded guilty.

Beside the burglary on Elm, he had been busy earlier Sunday evening at three other Westmount homes. At 57 Rosemount crescent and at 4151 de Maisonneuve boulevard entry had been gained by small windows on the first floor.

At 19 Rosemount avenue he had entered by forcing open the French doors on the ground floor. He was discovered in the building by the owner but escaped unharmed by jumping from a second-floor window.

Little of value taken

In these incidents, and in the others, nothing of great value had been taken, the popular items being cash and credit cards. Most of the stolen goods were recovered following the arrest.

Westmount Police are attributing their success in this case to the woman who called when she saw the boy climb through her neighbor's window.

The police ask all citizens to report suspicious behaviours of any kind.

Delay changes

He said that the changes should be delayed until the effects of the Trans-Canada Highway and Metro extension on the district are known.

He concluded his argument by attacking city officials who planned the changes as "a group of professional people losing their sense of reality and trying to impose their ideas without due democratic process."

Mayor Paul Ouimet assured Mr. Schreider that the changes were still only in the proposal stage and that no definite changes will be made without further consultation with the urban renewal advisory committee, the architectural and planning commission and the public.

It was at this stage that Ald. Robertson lashed out at the type of attacks that had been made at recent meetings. Mayor Ouimet added that council had been "bending over backwards to be diplomatic" in these cases and did not want to be victimized.

Dirkman questions

Arthur Dirkman, 127 Irvine avenue, then questioned the validity of the representatives of the urban renewal advisory committee that Mr. Schreider represented. He was advised by the aldermen to arrange within the area for the choosing of new representatives if dissatisfied with the present ones.

Ald. Leeds Nelson added that council should not get involved in the internal affairs of groups such as the advisory committee and this point was made very clear by another man in the audience who reminded the aldermen that their responsibility was not to various groups who came to press their cases at council meetings but rather to the electorate as a whole.

Aspler subs

Alderman Charles Aspler was named by Westmount City Council Tuesday evening to represent Mayor Ouimet at a meeting of the Montreal Urban Community to be held last night. Mayor Ouimet was unable to attend as he was in Toronto on business.

Irving Backler dies at age 64; alderman here

Irving S. Backler, who served the people of Westmount for three full terms as alderman, died suddenly yesterday while golfing.

The 64-year-old native of Manchester, England, who was brought up and educated here, graduated from McGill University in 1932 as an engineer and was one of the most prominent members of his profession among the citizens of Westmount.

He was a leading authority on structural design and he had been consultant on many well-known buildings here and elsewhere.

Ald. Charles Aspler, an architect who frequently was associated with Mr. Backler, said he was consulting with Mr. Backler as late as 11:30 am yesterday concerning work for a client. Mr. Aspler paid tribute to his colleague saying that in a long association he had never heard a harsh word from Mr. Backler, who took a deep interest in his community, his synagogue—Shaar Hashomayim Congregation—and his generous philanthropies.

Prior to joining city council, Mr. Backler had been a member of the executive of the Westmount Municipal Association and had been its vice-president. In addition to his membership in professional bodies, he was a life governor and the Jewish General Hospital and had been a governor of the YM-YWHA.

Council lauds Dawe's service over 25 years

A birthday cake and a congratulatory resolution from Westmount City Council Tuesday evening marked General Manager Norman T. Dawe's 25th year on the city staff.

In presenting the resolution, Mayor Paul Ouimet praised Mr. Dawe for the excellent work he has done for the city, particularly during his 12 years as general manager, and for his, "judgment and dutiful stewardship" of city affairs.

Before the meeting, the aldermen and city officials had celebrated the occasion with a birthday cake.

Mr. Dawe is a native Mont-trealer, married with three sons. He joined the Westmount staff as a personnel officer in 1947 and after serving as supervisor of welfare, administrative officer of the civil defence and as assistant general manager he was named to his present post in April 1960 to succeed retiring general manager Thomas J. ## We Say

Council agonizes

MAYOR Ouimet and his council are agonizing over the extent of the City of Westmount's responsibility in problems of a social nature.

Well they might agonize. Not inconsiderable pressure is being applied in successive waves for this project and that, embracing people of most every age group and circumstance.

Well they might agonize. Westmount is the exemplar of good local government; other municipalities are watching to profit by our experience, perhaps follow our lead.

Well they might agonize. Despite its reputation, Westmount is not inexhaustibly wealthy; local taxation is at or near its limits, is faced with the more immediate costs of the MUC.

The city is in an unenviable position: it will be damned if it does and damned if it doesn't.

Regardless of all the study now launched—much of it of the precedents in other cities—the final crunch is going to come from a determination of which side would damn council the most: proponents of social undertakings or property owners, sympathetic to these undertakings or not who feel they can pay no more.

Someone has suggested a plebiscite. Others have suggested a plebiscite would kill any such adventures.

If that is a valid determination, it should be kept uppermost in council's mind. Council represents the taxpaying electorate first and foremost, before any other group in the community.

Which does not, of course, wipe away the validity of any or all of these projects.

The question seems, more properly, one of jurisdiction. Main thrust of the city's study well might pursue this line. Indeed, council should ask itself if by going into "social" projects it is not in fact preempting quite clearly the role assumed, with recently mounting vehemence, by the provincial government.

Many government functions are best directed locally, which goes for most traditional municipal services. Others require broader bases—health services, for example, which do not easily conform to municipal boundaries. Surely the 4424 Clinic belongs more properly in some modified slot of Quebec's hospitalization and medicare system that it does in a new extension of city services.

There is going to be no quick or easy solution. Emotions are brought into play, understandably by those genuinely concerned. But the course council now charts is too fundamental for that kind of influence. Practicalities must prevail.

Bad legislation

The motives of Justice Minister Jerome Choquette are admirable—to wipe out any organized crime in the province.

But his proposed methods are alarming. An investigative body empowered to search and seize on its own warrants, without being required to justify its intended action before a member of the independent judiciary, must be eyed askance.

Crime, organized or otherwise, should be balked at every possible turn to protect society. But time-tested safeguards to protect society from abusive authority are just as vital to the citizen's well-being.

As we read Mr. Choquette's proposed legislation, there is nothing to prevent over-zealous, mis-informed or malicious investigators invading our offices or home or your offices or home, combing through them at will and taking away what they wish, to the detriment, discomfort, dislocation and damage of any citizen, good or bad, criminal or law-abiding.

That is bad legislation.

Many happy returns

CITY Council should eat more birthday cakes before its meetings.

They spoke a lot of sense Tuesday night. And they elicited some good advice.

Clearly enunciated was the oft-sublimated principle that they are elected to do the city's business according to their best judgment, that they should command respect in return for lending sympathetic and understanding ears, and that the council chamber should be subject to the same rules of decorum which govern other legislatures.

Former Mayor Peter McEntyre will be remembered for appealing to citizens to show their interest in the work of council by coming out to its meetings, listening intelligently to the proceedings and contributing wisdom and guidance to deliberations.

He really didn't succeed. The city is too well run. Perhaps citizens have more abiding concerns.

Mayor Paul Ouimet has been more successful in attracting people to his meetings. Unfortunately, many of these says...

The fallacy of the surtax

I am still receiving queries about why the federal government chose to prolong the surtax beyond Jan. 1, 1973, and why the minister of finance, Mr. Turner, chose not to mention this in his budget of May 8.

In point of fact, the change due to occur at the end of the year is being confused with a surtax that applied between 1968 and mid-1971. Unfortunately, the opposition and some newspapers have referred to the change as a "tax increase," and so I think it is worth taking this opportunity to clarify the situation.

In 1968, 3 per cent surtaxes were introduced to parliament on personal as well as corporation income taxes as part of the federal government's anti-inflationary fiscal measures. Although they were to apply only to the end of 1969, they were extended twice, on the first occasion to the end of 1970, and later to the end of 1971.

Surtaxes were ended

However, in June 1971 the then minister of finance, Mr. Benson, announced in his budget that both surtaxes would terminate on July 1, 1971. This announcement went into effect on that date, and there have been no surtaxes on the income of either Canadian individuals or corporations since the middle of 1971—over a year ago.

So much for the surtax.

On Oct. 14, 1971, Mr Benson announced temporary tax cuts of 3 per cent for individuals and 7 per cent for corporations. In each case, they were to last for an 18 month period which was due to expire at the end of 1972. These measures were finally given legislative approval by parliament in March this year.

No mention was made of this expiry in Mr. Turner's recent budget speech for a number of very good reasons. First, the enabling legislation which authorized its termination had been debated in the house only seven weeks earlier, and was assumed therefore to be fairly common knowledge. Second, no mention was made of other tax changes which were due to come into effect as a result of previous legislation, such as the reduced rate on the first $500 of personal taxable income, the increase in the basic personal exemption, and the complete elimination of income taxes for one million Canadians and a reduction for 4.7 million others.

Discussed with press

Thirdly, this issue was discussed thoroughly at press briefings on budget day and Mr. Turner in his post-budget news conference. The reason of course is that the revenues needed to achieve other priorities, such as assisting those living on are there for reasons not suggested by anyone at city hall.

Many of the visitors these days are, not to put too fine a point on it, grinders of axes and riders of hobby-horses. Their various causes are genuine enough—but it is these particular causes, not good municipal government, which brings them out.

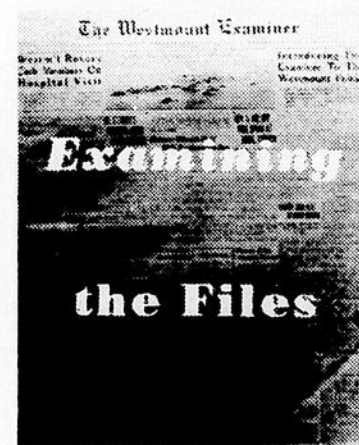

Some aldermen finally reacted Tuesday night. Ald. Douglas Robertson suggested that some remarks were in contempt of council. Personalities should be left out, he asserted. Ald. Charles Aspler advised that persons who were not satisfied with those who represent them should turn them out and find new representatives. Ald. Leeds Nelson declared council the only local elected body and it was up to other groups in the city to find their own means of forming groups—not come complaining to council.

Mayor Ouimet said it was a very good council, as had been those before it.

fixed incomes and stimulating the economy without provoking inflation, could not be realized if these lower tax rates were maintained.

There was certainly no attempt to pull the wool over anyone's eyes, nor to becloud what is in fact a very clear situation. Taxation measures are normally one of the most complicated issues with which governments and parliament grapple, but this was a relatively easy one to comprehend. It's unfortunate that greater effort was not made at the time to discover the facts before insinuating that the government was trying to cover up.

Thirty-five Years Ago
July 9, 1937

"It was most impressive the way the huge crowds were handled in London during the Coronation festivities," declared Mayor John Jenkins in addressing the Westmount Rotary Club Wednesday. "Perfect order was preserved among the vast multitudes that thronged the streets; in fact the bobbies themselves were hardly necessary. The streets were alive twenty-four hours every day for fully two weeks previous to the actual crowning of the king."

Twenty-five Years Ago
July 4, 1947

"The construction activity which recently started on the north-west corner of St. Catherine street and Lansdowne avenue is the beginning of a new office building being erected by the Atlas Construction Company for its own use. The company's present office quarters, now situated at 679 Belmont street, will be taken over by the City of Montreal and destroyed in the City's new traffic thoroughfare project."

Fifteen Years Ago
July 5, 1957

"Members and adherents of Westmount Park-Emanuel Church to the number of 700 are reported behind a petition which has been forwarded to Mayor Sydney Bruneau, asking the city to reconsider the second site for the artificial rink at Lansdowne and de Maisonneuve. The churchgoers attended a meeting Sunday and at the time it was decided to send a petition to the council and to seek an audience with the mayor and aldermen."

Five Year Ago
July 6, 1967

"The main concert hall in Victoria Hall is receiving a face lifting these days and on the completion of the work it will be found more attractive than ever. Workmen have been busy painting and polishing the whole area as well as installing new lighting equipment with modern fixtures."

"Westmount Park is today one of the admired beauty spots on the Island of Montreal. Recent improvements of its 26 acres have made it a haven-of-rest."

We Say . . .

Council leaned over backward to be fair. Maybe, he added, formal public hearings on important issues should be held.

But it finally fell to one lone citizen, who had listened to the prior complaints from the audience and the comments of council, to deliver the wisest words of the evening:

Don't confer importance on any group which comes before council, he advised. "You are responsible only to the electorate."

With that there was little else anyone could say.

If this sort of performance can be brought out by partaking in a birthday cake to mark City Manager Norman Dawe's 25th year with the city, then we say: council should find a birthday to celebrate before every council meeting.

City should keep out of families' business

Sir: It's about time one of us "silent majority," middle-income, home-owning, tax-paying Westmounters spoke up in support of The Examiner's sensible tone regarding the so-called "social" issues in Westmount.

The reason we don't is the same reason I must ask you to use a pseudonym on this note—the all-too-noisy do-gooders of the community would be down our necks as "complacent" and "indifferent" and "apathetic"—terms used by one good woman in "You Say" only last week for a tiresomely unimpeachable time.

I for one am happy to pay my share of property tax to keep Westmount a happy, healthy place to raise my own children, the sort of community in which my wife and I choose to live and where, God willing, we may enjoy our old age.

My point is, we are quite prepared to provide for our selves and look after our own. But where did the creeping idea get a foothold that Westmount must, as a city, get into the cradle-to-grave family care business.

Quite literally, you recently have reported schemes for everyone from "pre-schoolers" to "senior citizens." Has family life eroded that far? And must we encourage its complete demise by the municipality taking over?

The city is studying its social responsibilities. First move should be to bar the federal government starting these things in our community, then dumping them in our laps. Second thing is to pass these "social" problems on to the broad shoulders of Mr. Castonguay in Quebec—he who is so anxious to have complete provincial control of social problems.

No way is this socialize-everything drive either a demand of or a charge against the local home-owner and property-taxpayer. Surely not all this and MUC too!

Hoppe clarifies role of metropolitan YMCA

Sir: As president of the Young Men's Christian Association of Montreal I have followed with particular interest the last two issues of The Examiner. Without wishing to engage in debate at this time on some of the issues that have been raised, I do feel it necessary and appropriate to clarify for you and your readers the basic structure of the YMCA.

We only have one legal entity which is "Young Men's Christian Association of Montreal." The management of the association is vested in the metropolitan board of directors, of which I have the honor of being president. There are eight branches of the association including the Westmount branch, which are administered by a board of management, generally made up of interested laymen in the community.

When one refers to "Downtown" or "Central" one is referring to the YMCA on Drummond street, which is merely another branch with the same responsibilities and authority as Westmount. The metropolitan offices happen to be located on the fifth floor of the Drummond street building as a matter of convenience and because we own the property.

The metropolitan offices have until recently administered most of the so-called "outreach" work of the association, while the branches have continued to administer their traditional branch program. However, it is now our policy to place as much supervision and responsibility for outreach programs in the branches where it appears appropriate and proper to do so. Accordingly the administrative responsibility for all programs involving the YMCA in the City of Westmount will, by the end of September, be entirely under the jurisdiction of the Westmount board of management

What an MP should be

The upcoming federal election is most critical for our constituency. It will tell the tale of the next decade for the elderly and the young; for the drug pusher in the streets and the young person at home; for the employer and the striker.

We have seen that the shrug of the shoulders yields no pensions; stops no rise in inflation; creates no new employment opportunities. Double talk produces neither responsive constituency representation nor anti-pollution proposals nor solutions to strikers.

Canada is riding on the crest of tomorrow's wave. The problems facing us today—those of unemployment and inflation; the environment; strikes and walkouts; day-care centers; equal opportunities and equal pay for women—these are the issues of today and of tomorrow that demand the personal attention of your MP. A contemporary member of Government must be able to comprehend and to deal with the many tomorrows in front of us.

Out with 'trained seals'

We also require a fundamental change of thought among the leaders of the political parties. MPs will have to be more independent instead of remaining as those trained seals.

Consider the case of Pierre DeBane, who represents Matane for that other party. He has charted an independent course in Parliament. He may not get named to committee chairmanships and he probably won't be named to the cabinet. Yet he is performing a masterful job of intelligently, independently and responsively representing his electorate in the manner they intended.

Canada needs more Pierre DeBane's, more MPs willing to fight for what they believe is right; more MPs willing to place the wishes of their constituents above the wishes of their party leaders.

With that the government will then become more responsive to all Canadians, rather than just to the unresponsive elite who now make decisions.

This column's space was provided free to Mr. Meighen to reply to a partisan political column by Westmount MP Hon. C. M. Drury on these pages two weeks ago. Mr. Keaton, the prospective NDP candidate, made his reply last week.

portunity and equal pay for women—these are the issues of today and of tomorrow that demand the personal attention of your MP. A contemporary member of Government must be able to comprehend and to deal with the many tomorrows in front of us.

System must respond

Our parliamentary system must respond, not in the sense of reacting, rather in the sense of knowing what the pulse of the nations is and responding in such a manner that justifiably gives the voter confidence that his wishes are being listened to by the legislators.

We can no longer tolerate the MP as a trained seal barking forth applause or partisan criticisms on queue. The role of the backbencher must be expanded. At present the policy seems intent on gagging all backbenchers.

Unfortunately, too many members of Parliament do not have offices in their constituencies despite the obvious need for them to be "ombudsmen" to counter the mushrooming bureaucracy of government. Theirs is a "people" problem. People desperately need help in dealing with government and government agencies. People need to know how to get their unemployment cheque at the proper time. People need help in understanding the effect, on them, of other complex legislation.

If our legislative system was working effectively, each MP would have, as I will have, the staff and facilities to offer such assistance in a regular fashion. The meager facilities they can now utilize are not sufficient. We must marshal the

Turning on the heat

Apocryphal or not, the story exists that one steamy day in July the heating was turned on full in an effort to speed up the summer adjournment of the National Assembly!

At the moment of writing it would seem that such extreme measures shouldn't be necessary this year. A combination of new rules governing house procedure and relatively non-partisan committee work appear to indicate an early adjournment. This would allow time both for holidays and preparation for the next session in the fall.

Last week I had the pleasure of presiding at the opening of the annual congress of one of the original and youngest anti-pollution groups—the 4H Clubs. Among other achievements, it's members have planted over 15 million trees in Quebec alone! Having traditionally been a rural association, it is now aiming to involve city youngsters, too, and with the current interest in conservation it might just succeed.

Just a note of reminder for students wishing a loan or bursary from the Department of Education for the coming academic year. Applications should be made immediately, i.e. before July 15, if you wish to know the results before September. Further information on this can be obtained from my office (873-2104), the department of education, or most educational institutions.

LANES

The story of Westmount's

EXPORT "A"
CANADA'S FINEST CIGARETTE

Looking east from Elm

While discussion rages in Westmount about centres for young and the elderly another set of Westmount gathering and recreation areas go on being used as they have for years.

These are the lanes of Westmount, those narrow strips of pavement that run behind houses mostly in the south and east sections of the city.

For many generations of Westmounters the lane behind their home is where they met to play with their neighbors as children.

In recent weeks a party in the lane running between Elm and Wood avenue has shown that such place can be a common denominator for adults as well, to use to get to know their neighbors in an otherwise impersonal city.

The origin of most of Westmount's lanes goes back to the time the city was first divided into lots and the lanes were included to give people access to the rear of their properties.

right-of-way on the lane. Their real owners would be difficult to trace, thus the city keeps up their maintenance and removes snow from them.

In most cases, lanes exist where there are rows of terraced houses and the lanes provide the only access to the back. In the newer areas of Westmount in the west end and further up the mountain, the houses are mostly semi-detached or detached and driveways between the buildings serve the original purpose of lanes.

Dates from 1875

The lane between Wood and Elm avenues, where the recent party took place, dates back to the original development of the area around 1875 when lots of land on those streets were sold by public auction.

In the same way the lanes that run behind Holton avenue, DeCasson and Barat roads were laid out when the old priest's farm on that location was divided into lots.

An oddity in Westmount lanes is Arlington lane, which runs from Sherbrooke street to Cote St. Antoine road between Arlington and Lansdowne avenue. It is an oddity because it is the only in the area and is the longest unbroken stretch of lane in the city.

It got this way because it was once part of Belmont avenue, which now starts just north of the end of the lane. An atlas of Montreal dated 1891 shows the present lane as being a bit wider and being called Belmont avenue.

Matilda avenue?

In the same atlas, what is now Arlington avenue is called Matilda avenue. The obvious problem was that with the two streets so close together there was only room for one lot between them, meaning residents of the area

Ownership complex

As the lanes were never bought by those who bought the lots, their ownership is rather complex. Unlike the land for city streets, the city does not own very many lanes.

Those that are owned by the city are known as city lanes. But most are public lanes, meaning three or more parties have a

'Office' under local 'Y'

YMCA "outreach" activity in Westmount, which includes the city-funded Office for Community and Social Development on Greene avenue, is to be placed under the jurisdiction of the board of management and staff of the Westmount YMCA.

This policy change was announced this week by Robert H. Hoppe, 449 Clarke avenue, who is president of the YMCA of Montreal, in a letter to The Examiner (see "You Say," page 5).

In view of recent comment at city hall and elsewhere concerning the Greene avenue "Office," which brought to light last week that it was under the control of the metropolitan "Y," Mr. Hoppe said that "it is now our policy to place as much supervision and responsibility for outreach programs in the branches where it appears appropriate and proper to do so."

Accordingly, he said that Westmount outreach programs would come under local jurisdiction by the end of September.

He added that financial control and policy would remain with the metropolitan office and board of the association.

had streets running outside both their front and rear doors.

The result was that the old Belmont avenue was narrowed and became a lane and those houses that faced it were altered so that front doors would face what is now Arlington avenue.

Lanes have been altered in more recent times as well. The city expropriated land and widened the lane behind the north side of Sherbrooke street between Grosvenor and Victoria avenues to help trucks delivering to stores on Sherbrooke street.

The expansion of Temple Emanu-El altered the course of a lane behind Sherbrooke street between Wood and Elm avenues. To gain extra land, the Temple bought a house on the other side of the lane, demolished it and moved the lane back.

Residents not agreed

An attempt to build a new lane from de Maisonneuve boulevard to Sherbrooke street between Grosvenor and Victoria avenues failed when the city could not get all residents to agree to cede nine feet of their back yards to make way for it.

Although the building of a lane was blocked in that case, they are very useful for the people whose homes back onto them. They are convenient for deliveries of oil and milk and for the pick-up of garbage. They also provide access to parking areas in the rear.

But the residents of Elm and Wood avenues have, this summer, found another, perhaps even better use for them: a place to gather, to have a good time and to get to know those who share a common strip of back yard.

Bike tag supply out

The surging interest in bicycles in Westmount this summer has made it necessary for the police department to order extra bike licenses. Their original supply of over 1,200 has been almost completely used.

Bike licenses are available any time at the police station, 21 Stanton street.

Adult pool rule stands

The question "What's an adult?" (see The Examiner June 22, p. 6) raised at the last meeting of Westmount City Council was answered by General Manager Norman Dawe at Tuesday's meeting of City Council.

The problem, raised at both meetings by Mrs. J. Faille, 247 Melville avenue, concerns the rule at the municipal swimming pool that requires children under six years of age to be accompanied by a adult.

Mrs. Faille said that this meant teenage helpers of working mothers could not take children to the pool and asked that the rule be changed.

General Manager Dawe ruled out any chance of a change Tuesday evening by saying that "the city have a grave responsibility at the pool and cannot share it. We can't take responsibility for baby-sitting."

The problem, he said, had been discussed in committee but it was decided the city could not take the risk of being held responsible for an accident involving a child unaccompanied by an adult. Also, he added, "It's not fair to place that sort of responsibility on a teenager."

Two hurt, refuse aid in crash

Two persons were slightly injured but refused medical treatment following an accident at the intersection of Sherbrooke street and Clarke avenue last Thursday afternoon.

John Preston, 64, of Chateauguay was going west on Sherbrooke street and when he went through a red light his 1968 Meteor collided with a 1970 Dodge going north on Clarke driven by Mrs. N. Greenberg, 21, 14 Aberdeen avenue.

Mrs. Greenberg and Mrs. Preston, who was a passenger in the Meteor, were slightly hurt. Each car suffered about $200 damage.

Letter stealing used to be punishable by death. The last hanging for that crime took place in 1832.

Montreal's suburban mayors have decided that integration of the island's police forces should be held up until the Montreal Urban Community sub-committee on public safety has had time to submit its report, Mayor Paul Ouimet reported to Westmount City Council Tuesday evening.

This position was taken at a conference of Montreal suburban mayors held recently. Westmount's director of public safety, Edward Harper, is chairman of the MUC public safety sub-committee, to whom Mayor Ouimet paid high tribute.

Mayor Ouimet said the suburban mayor's intention is to delay integration so it will go

Mayor Ouimet, also reported to Tuesday's meeting on other MUC activities, saying a new food bill for the MUC has been approved in principle but that a plan for the purchasing committee of Montreal to take over all MUC purchasing was defeated as the other island municipalities want a say in purchasing decisions.

'Scientific illiterates' scored by biochemist

There are a lot of hacks in scientific disciplines but, by the same token, there are too many "scientific illiterates" among historians, English scholars and other liberal arts people.

This was the opinion of Dr. George Campbell, professor of biochemistry at Sir George Williams University, giving his classification talk as a recent new member of the Rotary Club of Westmount at the weekly luncheon meeting in Victoria Hall yesterday.

After a short, informal review of the present state of biochemistry and its newest challenging area, biochemical engineering, Dr. Campbell lit into some of the shortcomings of the educational side of his vocation.

He was critical of the principle of tenure for university people and of the security afforded teachers in schools. This "ensures ineptitude among the time-servers", he said.

The liberal arts people do not know the world, he asserted. Some get called upon to get into such issues as "the ecology angle" yet do not know how to evaluate data. Others have a tendency to isolate themselves from what's going on. Ideas, though their principal concern, are not their sole role.

Gerrald Stephens introduced Dr. Campbell and the new president, Cyril Dendy, thanked him—saying classification talks frequently, as this time, ranked high in quality. There were two visiting Rotarians.

Indecent assault; man held

A 24-year-old man from Napierville was arraigned in Court of Sessions yesterday charged with indecent assault on a woman on Olivier avenue Sunday evening.

The woman was not hurt but was thrown to the ground and had her clothing ripped by a man who jumped from his car on Olivier south of de Maisonneuve boulevard.

An alert witness noted the license number of the car and notified Westmount Police. Work by Sgt. Detectives J. B. Whiteford and W. Jones led to the arrest Tuesday.

Painter fires sprinkler head at the Library

Soggy government documents in the basement were the result of a minor flood yesterday morning at the Westmount Public Library.

The incident occurred just after 9 am when painters who were working in the front lobby pointed a blow torch they were using to remove paint at one of the library's sprinklers, setting it off.

Westmount firemen were called to mop up the water, some of which seeped into the basement onto the documents stored there. Damage was not very great.

One sidelight to the incident was that library patrons were forced to use a side entrance which, to the surprise of many using it for the first time, includes a ramp for invalids wishing to use the library. The ramp was built three years ago.

Decision on water welcomed

Lower taxes for water should be in store for Westmounters following negotiations in Quebec City this week that gave Westmount and other suburbs the right to negotiate a fair price for water from the City of Montreal.

Westmount city officials today said they were "very pleased" with the outcome of the talks and are optimistic that in the future Westmount citizens will pay only the cost of water in their water tax and not for other services provided in Montreal by the water tax revenue.

At present Westmount citizens are paying well over one million dollars in water tax and city experts are hopeful this should be lowered to below $300,000.

The agreement worked out this week calls for annual negotiations between Westmount and Montreal to set a fair price for water. If in any year the negotiations are not successful by March then the Quebec Water Board will step in to find a settlement.

In addition the water board will hold hearings in the near future to determine if Westmount should get a retroactive deduction in its water bill for the last two years. If this happens Westmount may receive a credit on its water bill from Montreal.

"This is exactly what we wanted," was the happy word from City Hall today.

Tougher parking

Westmount General Manager Norman Dawe Tuesday evening gave a firm "no" to a request from the floor at the meeting of Westmount City council for relaxed parking restrictions for office workers on Sherbrooke street.

The woman making the request suggested that office workers be given special identification for their cars that would allow them to be parked on the street for eight hours during the working day.

Mayor Ouimet asked Mr. Dawe to reply to the question and he stated firmly that with increased traffic and a decrease in available parking space, parking regulations could not be relaxed without greatly increasing the whole problem.

To the contrary, he added, traffic restrictions would be tightened as time went on.

One alderman urged the lady to walk to work.

You Say . . .

and staff. The only reason that this structure was not put into effect earlier is that many of the "outreach" programs were of an experimental nature and were a new experience for the YMCA, requiring the type of staff support that was not traditionally available in the branches.

We believe we have now reached a point where such work can be controlled more effectively within the community and it is for this reason that we are moving in this direction.

All of the foregoing is not to say that policy decisions and financial control will be decentralized and fractionated. These matters along with overall supervision will continue to be the responsibility of the metropolitan office and the board of directors of the association. All accounting functions are under the direction of the controller who is located in the metropolitan offices.

I hope that my remarks have not added to the confusion but have to some extent clarified the YMCA position. I believe we can make an important contribution to the City of Westmount and we look forward to the continued development of our relationship with the municipal authorities.
