Representative West Bengal Government Visiting Here

Is Making Study of Textile Mills Here and Throughout Canada

Huntingdon has had many distinguished persons visit it and at this time is receiving a visit from Mr. A. T. Das, an official of the West Bengal Government of India. Mr. Das is a Hindu and native of India, working with the government of India in a study of the various textile industries of Canada, United States and England. He expects to be in Huntingdon about one month, during which time he will visit the various plants in this vicinity and study the methods used in each of them.

Mr. Das left his native India in July, 1948, by plane for England, and left for Canada within a few hours, by liner, for this country. He is travelling in Canada under the direction of Mr. G. D. Mallory, Director of the Industrial Development Division of the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa. He has been sent by his own government to study all the methods used in the textile mills, Laboratories and Research Institutions of the three countries mentioned. Mr. Das reports that the textile industry is considered to be in the main in these three countries.

Before coming to Huntingdon, Mr. Das has already spent three months visiting the various textile plants in Ontario. Previous to that he had spent about five and a half months in the United States. There he visited the Dupont plant, different textile mills and textile machinery manufacturers. He also visited several research laboratories and institutes there. When his visit in Canada has been concluded, he will visit the United States for further studies there. On his return visit to the States he expects to put much time in at New Orleans for study of the methods of growing cotton and other productive activities used there.

While in Canada last year, Mr. Das had the good fortune to attend the first Canadian Textile Convention at Queen's University, in Kingston, held in September, 1948. He was much impressed by this method of getting together in a particular business together, and discussing their problems in a mutual way. He thought this idea was very good indeed in ironing out many problems that are confronted in the industry. He has had many discussions of different subjects of interest to the various branches of the textile business and found all very helpful to him.

At the present time he is at Model Day Works, Garden City, Huntingdon, studying the methods used in this plant. Mr. Tapiz, who is presently employed at Model Day Works, was in India when he had occasion to visit that country and stayed for a two year period a few years ago. Mr. Das had many complimentary remarks to make of Mr. Tapiz's visit to India. Later, Mr. Das will visit each of the other plants and study the methods used in each of them.

The object of the study is to find out how the workpeople here do their work, their conditions of work, the machinery they work with and what each individual is able to produce and the wages paid to each. It is also studying the standard of living enjoyed by the workers and also any improved or new methods in the textile industry. This knowledge will be used in India to better the standard of living of all the workers in the textile industry in India and for the purpose of comparing conditions in that country with those in the countries visited. The new Indian government is very anxious to improve conditions for the working people of India and to raise the standard of living to an equal of that enjoyed by the people of other countries.

Mr. Das is very much impressed with Huntingdon and also with industries in Huntingdon. He says that there are very nice industries in Huntingdon and he finds the people working in them enjoying a very good standard of living. He was also impressed by the fact that methods used in this country compare so closely with those used in the United States. The friendliness of the people and the apparent rush and bustle in the larger centres also made an impression. He said that in New York City it seemed to him that there were more cars than people and that he found difficulty in walking along the streets on account of the large numbers of people there. He also marvelled at the ease of travel between the two countries and the fact that they both appeared to be on such friendly terms.

Conditions in India are changing rapidly and there appear to be greater chances of peace between the various factions in the country. The present Socialist Congress government is anxious to have all differences settled in a peaceable manner and many of the differences between it and the Pakistan government have been ironed out. He was very much impressed by the devotion of the Hindu and Moslem people who were aroused to burning, plundering and killing. It was for reason of this that this famous man lost his life, when he was trying to establish peace for the country and above the various factions of the Hindu and Moslem people, at the hand of an extremist Hindu, Nathuram Godse, at the time of his prayer. He refused protection from the Indian government when it offered to him, as the government feared that it might eventually take the life of this well loved man. Mr. Ghandi said that if it was to be that someone would want to take his life he would rather it be given in the cause of peace for his country and the people. Mr. Das said he died as he would want to die. Every evening Ghandi would pray and read his religious books and afterwards he would address the people on world affairs and tell them of the various problems that existed. He was always against killing and plundering and tried to turn the people against such tactics. He told them that such things would not get them what they desired and it was against God to do these things. All India was in a state of mourning. Mr. Ghandi lost his life, but they are happy now that independence has been gained and peace has been established. They are also happy that India has decided to remain in the Commonwealth of Nations although it took great courage to make this decision on the part of the government. The Indian government realizes that there is still a need for a tie with Great Britain.

Mr. Das is responsible for all the disturbances that have occurred in the world over the past several years. The people of Europe he says, do not know how to live in peace for any great length of time. Before the war India had plenty of food and clothing, but since the war and like in other countries there has been a great shortage of these commodities. It is only now that suffering is being evidenced as to these things. He said, you do not appear to be suffering here in that way, you have plenty to eat and lot of things in your stores to buy and you can buy whatever you want.

Education is receiving much attention in India under the new government and a law has been passed making it compulsory for parents to send their children to primary school where free education is given. The caste system is being leveled off and the law is being passed forbidding the mention of untouchables. The people who were known in India as untouchables are now permitted to attend the temples and places of worship along with other people. Mr. Ghandi was always pressing for the abolishment of untouchability and he would invariably be found to live among the so-called untouchables. Mr. Das visions conditions in India as being greatly changed for the better during the next few years and he believes that such changes will make for a great peace era in the life of this country.

Following the completion of Mr. Das' visit to Canada and the United States, which he believes will be about September, he will go to England to study conditions there, before returning to his native country to compile his report.

Britain to Buy More in Canada

On his return from a visit to the British Industries Fair in London and Birmingham and discussions with United Kingdom trade officials, Mr. H. C. Howe, Minister of Trade and Commerce, has announced that Britain has agreed to buy certain Canadian products this year over and above prevailing contracts. The sales which the Minister and Mr. M. W. Mackenzie, Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce, negotiated while in Britain are as follows:

Between 300,000 and 400,000 cases of canned salmon will be purchased by the United Kingdom before the end of 1949. A representative of the United Kingdom Ministry of Food will come to Canada to negotiate the purchase.

Britain will buy some 400,000 tons of flour from Canada during the 1949-50 crop year. This is 100,000 tons above the minimum amount stipulated in the Canada-United States Agreement.

Some $10,000,000 worth of timber will be purchased from Canada and the United States, and contracts will be awarded on the basis of commercial considerations. This amount is over and above the 1949 West Coast contract placed by Britain.

Britain will make a token purchase of Canadian apples, and will also buy a small quantity of fruit pulp now held by the Canadian government.

"Despite serious dollar difficulties, Britain is planning additional purchases, provided agreement can be reached on prices. I have informed the United Kingdom authorities that there need be no doubt of the ability of Canadian suppliers to meet competition from any part of the world," Mr. Howe stated.

Man Who Stole Bus Still at Large

BEAUHARNOIS—The Beauharnois police still seek a man who stole a bus from the Provincial Transport terminus there early Saturday morning.

The man took the bus from among 10 similar vehicles at the terminus and started driving towards Montreal. A mile from Beauharnois the vehicle crashed into the back of a car driven by Willie Lafond, of Beauharnois. Both vehicles left the road but the thief continued for another mile before abandoning the bus, which was recovered by police and returned to the owners.

Valleyfield Legion Second Annual Track Meet A Huge Success

Mr. Eric Brown, Huntingdon, is Winner of 1949 Ford Car

The results of untold hours of work and planning by the Valleyfield Legion and Ladies' Auxiliary were gratifying as one of the best organized and executed Track Meets was witnessed here Saturday.

President Butt and Vice President Leblanc, chairman of Sports Committee, Herbert Stewart and Comrade Eddie Burgess left no stone unturned to provide a full program for young and old. School, Industrial, Legion and open events proved much more competitive than last year.

The Track Meet opened at 1 p.m. with "O Canada" and immediately races were held by Ormstown, Huntingdon and Gault Schools competed for the School Trophy which was won for the second year by the Gault, and Huntingdon winning the runners-up, beating Ormstown by 5 points.

The Bingo Table was a great success, adding much pleasure to the day and also proved a resting place for the weary. Hot dogs and ham-burgers as well as ice cream and soft drinks were sold by the ladies of the Auxiliary, which also helped to brace up the athletes and give aid to the hungry.

The drawing for the lucky number on the programme took place, the number being 129 and to date the lucky winner has not been located. It could be anyone who checked your programme. Your number is on the middle page.

The presentation of prizes took place at the Chalet in the evening and dancing was enjoyed until midnight.

Highlight of the evening was the drawing for the 1949 Ford Car which took place shortly before the dance.

A special word of thanks to Comrade Jack Wray and his co-workers for their efforts in organizing the sale and distributing of tickets for the drawing of the car, which was won by Mr. Eric Brown of Huntingdon, who was not present but came quickly after being contacted by telephone. Large crowds had assembled to witness the drawing and purchase their last-minute tickets.

The Valleyfield Legion played host to a number of Veterans from the St. Anne Military Hospital, who enjoyed the Field Day tremendously.

The Legionnaires are grateful for the wonderful co-operation received from each and everyone and especially to those who worked so hard throughout the day to make this Field Day a success. The proceeds are very gratifying and are to be used for the building of the Memorial Hall.

Farm leaders from five continents are touring Quebec which started May 24 and continues today, en route to the conference of the International Federation of Agricultural Producers at Guelph. Countries represented include Great Britain, France, Belgium, Holland, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Germany, India, Southern Rhodesia, South Africa, Kenya, New Zealand, and United States.

While in Quebec the visitors were the guests of the Co-operative Federer de Quebec, l'Union des Cultivateurs Catholiques, the Farm Forums of Quebec and the Quebec Department of Agriculture.

The international farm leaders, numbering about 60, arrived in Quebec City about noon on May 24. In the afternoon they made a sight-seeing tour of the historic city and the Island of Orleans, and in the evening were guests of the Quebec Department of Agriculture at a banquet.

On May 25 they left Quebec on a 250-mile trip which took them to the leading co-operative plant at Flessville, Princeville and Victoriaville. After a noon banquet at Granby they inspected the huge Granby co-operative plant, then left for St. Hyacinthe, where they saw the Provincial Dairy School, Veterinary College and Artificial Insemination Centre.

The tour will arrive at the Provincial Beet Sugar Refinery at St. Jean de la Riviere, where they will be on to Montreal, and the visitors will entrain for Ottawa, where they will be the guests of the Dominion Department of Agriculture before going on to Guelph.

FAO Studies World Use of Milk

In a recent publication of the Food and Agriculture Organization it is pointed out that a considerable part of the world's milk is not fully used for human consumption. In view of the present inadequate world supply of milk, and the difficulty of increasing production in a short time it is essential that existing supplies be used in the most effective way, the report concludes.

The problems of effective utilization, says the report, are mainly those of processing and preserving so perishable a product. In many countries, where dairy-farming is not advanced, substantial quantities of milk could be saved by efficient handling under sanitary conditions. Improvement for the most part will be a national problem, but some countries will need outside help and guidance.

The Co-operative organization is recommended in the report, for regions where individual initiative alone is unable to cope effectively with local problems.

The possibilities of increasing the use of dairy by-products, such as skim milk and whey, for human consumption, are reviewed. It is pointed out that in countries where dairying is advanced, and cheese and butter production high, these by-products are fed to animals in great quantities and are lost to direct human consumption.

British Labour Party Expels Two Members of Parliament

Five Parliamentary Secretaries Are Also Relieved of Their Posts

by Craig Armstrong view of all their activities and speeches."

The British Labour party has cleaned house, expelling two members of Parliament from party ranks and removing five others from their jobs as parliamentary secretaries.

The two expelled M.P.'s are Konni Zilliacus and Leslie Solley, both left wingers who have consistently heckled the government's policy toward Russia.

The five parliamentary secretaries were relieved of their posts because they voted against the government in opposing the controversial Ireland Bill which passed the House of Commons last week. During one sitting in committee stage plain-clothed police were on duty in the public galleries.

They ignored a "three-line whip"—the strongest order the party can give its members to follow its leadership—and voted against the bill which clarified Britain's relations with the new Republic of Ireland and with the government of Northern Ireland.

Zilliacus, an ardent critic of Foreign Minister Bevin's policy and a former member of the League of Nations Secretariat, was one of six members who voted against the motion approving the North Atlantic Security Pact. Solley criticized the pact but was not in the Commons when the vote was taken.

The five secretaries who voted against the Ireland Bill are expected to remain within the party. They are Robert Mellish, admiral; Frank Beswick, air; W. R. Blyton, civil aviation; John Mallahey, food; and G. H. R. Rogers, supply. Secretaries are not paid but the position is considered grooming for higher appointments.

Political observers interpret the punitive action as a reflection of a high-level decision to tighten party discipline for the 1950 general election.

Labour has generally taken a sharp rebuke from voters who have swung to the right in recent municipal elections. This is considered to have stiffened the high-command's attitude toward the "rebel" group of Labour back-benchers who often vote against the government's measures and criticize its actions.

Solley said his expulsion may be connected with the fact that there is "considerable unhappiness" in the parliamentary Labour party over the government policy.

"It may well be that to prevent a further rebellion, I may have been chosen as an example," he said. "If so, I am honored."

Zilliacus said he "looked forward sometimes to coming back into the Labour Party without having to sacrifice my principles—I am a socialist and I believe in fighting for peace."

But hope of Zilliacus being accepted into the party's fold again is dim. The Labour party's announcement said they were expelled "in view of their activities and speeches."

The strike on the Communist-controlled railway shut off rail shipments to western Berlin and stalled passenger traffic through the city. Hundreds were injured in the fighting and an elevated passenger train was set afire.

The strike began early Saturday by the rail workers to enforce their demands that they be paid in west marks instead of dollars. The strike is worth only one-quarter of the currency circulated in the western sectors of Berlin. Fighting began when the Communist-controlled railway management sent squads of young Communists into the western sectors of the city to "recapture" the strike-bound stations.

Western allied officials kept out of the dispute, but a British official said the strike "can't be allowed to go on too long."

Raymond, from the Montreal area, the draft horse entry is the largest in a long number of years with entries from such distant points as the Wilson Lumber Company of Cannington, Ont., and Campbell and Young, Bristol, Que. There are four entries in "six draft horse" teams and six entries in "four draft horse" teams.

A great many of the single horse classes number in excess of ten entries.

Last spring a new horse barn with 40 box stalls was erected, another one the same size has been erected this spring. The plan was to demolish two old stables that had been in use since the inception of the exhibition nearly forty years ago.

Due to the extremely large entry these stables are being given a face lifting and an internal sprucing up to serve another year.

The Textile Industry is Worried

RECENTLY one of our ministers was in England on a mission to bolster trade between this country and Great Britain. Several trade agreements were falling short for various reasons, mostly shortage of dollars. At the same time there was disagreement as to the type of goods that were being sent to this country from Great Britain. The minister urged that goods sent to Canada in return for goods bought by Great Britain, should be less of the luxury type and those that would not harm goods made in Canada. An amicable agreement was we believe reached and more attention will be paid to this in the future.

It is these trade agreements that are bothering the textile trade in Canada. Great Britain is exporting more textile goods to this country at prices that are competitive to those sold here. The textile industry in Canada had largely been built up by British textile men emigrating to this country over more than a hundred years. Nearly a third of the $284 million British exports to Canada in 1948 were textiles and more than half of them woollen and worsted goods. The textile men are afraid that more concentrated effort to build up the textile market will be made and thus their own businesses will suffer. Even though much higher wages are now paid to British textile workers, the Canadian worker gets 68 percent more. While British textile goods are selling at much higher prices, the Canadian goods must also be sold higher and yet cannot meet this competition all along the line.

The textile men are quite willing to help Great Britain get on its feet by allowing more trade and so more dollars, but they do not feel that they go so far as to jeopardize their own domestic trade. With an election coming on and the fact that the trade agreements did not get a discussion at the last sitting of parliament, it is felt that the imports may gain much headway before satisfactory agreements and protective provisions can be made. Canadian production of woollen and worsted cloth during 1948 decreased over 100,000 yards as against 1947, while imports of the same goods increased 1,700,000 yards in the same period. Employment in the woollen and worsted industry is definitely on the decline and a good many of the mills are running on short time with some closing down periodically from lack of business.

Local mills have reported a decrease in the quantity of goods ordered, but so far no decrease has been reported in employment. But if this state is allowed to continue, there is no doubt it will be felt here as in other places. In the United States the disturbance is being felt more than in Canada and the textile men there are calling on their government to do something about it. The men of the textile industry feel that they are willing to do everything in their power to help Great Britain to export goods to Canada so that she can pay for the things she buys from Canada. But they do not feel, nor do they think that Britain expects, that these exports should supplant their own goods to the detriment of their business in this country. The standard of living has advanced in Canada, but the tariff rates are still lower than when the standard of living was by no means as high as present. Thus it is felt that protection in the way of higher tariffs on woollen and other textile goods should be imposed by the Canadian government. Such action would help Canadian business to maintain a fair share of its own market and keep people employed at a fair standard of living. It would help to prevent the closing down of many mills and the consequent unemployment of numbers of the workers. Great Britain has announced a campaign to increase its exports to Canada in order to make a bid for extra dollars, this is perhaps quite all right, but what effect will this have if no protective measures are taken?

We draw this matter to the attention of our members of parliament because Huntingdon and vicinity is now vitally interested in the textile business. Huntingdon is enjoying a period of prosperity that it has never known before and the people here want to continue to enjoy it if at all possible. If Canadian made goods do not receive the amount of protection to which they are entitled, then it is the worker who will ultimately suffer. As stated, in Huntingdon, this pressure has not been felt, but if it continues there is no doubt that it soon will be. There is no wish to cause panic thinking, for it may be months before the full effect is felt. We can only speak of the expressions being voiced and that already a decline has started.

Of course we all know from general observation that the textile mills have been making big profits in past years, else they would not have been able to expand and modernize their plants. Perhaps it is not so much a case of increased tariff protection that is essential as a bit less profit per yard of goods and thereby help reduce the cost of clothes and increase plant production. More production usually means more profits.

Just Two Weeks to Big Show

YOU maybe have heard the barker at the fair shouting to the crowds—"Come on in and see the greatest little show on the face of this earth". We are urging the people of this district to ready themselves to see the biggest exhibition in the greatest little town in Quebec. By this we mean Ormstown Exhibition. For one week the little village of Ormstown will have a great increase in its population and people from miles around will flock there to see the exhibition that has won fame for itself from coast to coast. Not only will human population increase but so also will the animal population. There will be some of the finest horses, cattle, sheep and swine on exhibition at this show that you will ever see.

Already there is a housing shortage in this village, yet more will be crowded in and overflow into surrounding districts. What is true of humans will be true of the animal kingdom. More and more stable room has been built for the Ormstown Exhibition, but still more is required. It was the intention as new barns were built, to demolish the older ones, but because of the larger number of horses being entered this year, this is found to be impossible. The old barns must remain for at least another year. More land was acquired last year, but still space is at a premium and something will have to be done in the years to come to take care of the industrial exhibits which bid for space in the Industrial Building and have to be content to set up in tents outside. More and more the patrons want to see the industrial exhibits as much as they wish to see any other part of this great little show. Even the time is not sufficient to show all that has to be shown, so this year an extra evening has been added to the period. No one can say that interest in agricultural fairs has diminished. More and more people are wanting to see the exhibits of cattle, products, and so forth, that is crowded into this exhibition for the five nights and four days it is on.

Good weather is needed to make the real success for the exhibition, but even if it does rain, patrons can see most of this show under cover and need not get wet. The horse show each evening in the arena provides much of interest for horse lovers and with the extra evening this year there will be more time to enjoy a trip through the midway. Model shows will have twenty carloads of thrilling rides, shows and games all set up for your entertainment. There will be free acts in front of the grandstand each afternoon and evening. Horse races each afternoon will provide many a thrill and an exciting neck and neck finish. Many new exhibitors will provide different stock for the farmer to compare with his own. Make your plans now, invite your friends and have them as your guests at the Ormstown Exhibition, enjoy the two-fold visit—your friends and exhibition.

FOUNDERS OF OGILVIE FLOUR MILLS ONCE LIVED AT HOWICK, QUE

IN the annals of Canadian industry the name of The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited has always appeared prominently. This great Company has been established in Montreal for nearly one hundred and fifty years, and during this long period has remained entirely Canadian.

Towards the end of the eighteenth century, a middle-aged gentleman farmer in Scotland, Alexander Ogilvie by name, came to the momentous decision to seek his fortune in Canada.

So, in 1800, with his wife and three young sons, he landed in Quebec after a voyage of thirteen weeks. After looking over various parts of the Province he purchased a large tract of land near Howick on the Chateauguay River and settled down to the life of a pioneer farmer in his adopted country.

One of his sons, Alexander Ogilvie, Jr., wished for more than an agricultural life and searching about him for another field of endeavour, decided, in 1801 to build a small flour mill at Jacques Cartier, Quebec. So it was that the vast organization that is today The Ogilvie Flour Mills came into being. It is interesting to remember as an historic fact that from this first mill of Alexander Ogilvie, the first shipment of flour milled under British rule in Canada was exported to Europe.

The little mill at Jacques Cartier which had been built by Alexander Ogilvie was soon accompanied and augmented by a larger mill which he or one of his brothers established nearer Montreal a few years later.

Small as these beginnings were, the milling industry of that distant day, so founded, quickly became through need and necessity a factor vital to the life of Montreal and to the other communities which bordered the river-sides.

An epidemic of ship-fever, which broke out in Quebec in 1807, was succeeded by a condition of famine in town and settlement alike. Supplies of grain, which were then almost entirely imported from Europe, were for a time, cut off, and the struggling little town on the Island of Mont Royal was forced to depend upon the meagre stocks of grain grown within the farming lands that bordered the St. Lawrence.

These early days in the history of The Ogilvie Flour Mills were as troubled in Montreal as they were in the first few decades in the parent countries of its people, England and France.

The small businesses that started out at the beginning of the nineteenth century encountered many a difficulty and even danger in their struggle towards success.

In Montreal, which was then, as now, the commercial heart of Canada, the merchants and the traders knew all the anxiety and heartbreak that come with lean and troubled years.

The merchant adventurers of Upper and Lower Canada had none of the advantages and adjuncts that modern business today counts as commonplace. Famine, epidemic, credit troubles and restricted resources, even the threat of invasion, were all problems which the Ogilvie family had to face—and overcome—in those early days.

The war of 1812-13 endangered the life and property of every settler in Upper and Lower Canada alike. An enemy force, under the command of General Wilkinson, marched upon Montreal. To aid in meeting this new danger, the Royal Montreal Cavalry—a troop of light horse equipped at the sole expense of its officers and men—was promptly organized.

Among the patriots who left home and business to serve therein are found the names of Alexander, Archibald and James Ogilvie, brothers and millers of Upper Canada.

Later, in 1837, the accession of Queen Victoria to the throne was marked by an outbreak of armed insurrection in Canada. The rebellion of that year again imperilled the safety of every person and his business in Upper and Lower Canada, and threatened the political and commercial future of the struggling Provinces.

In Montreal the people again acted swiftly to cope with their dangerous problems. Among other measures, the Lachine troop of Cavalry was organized, with Archibald Ogilvie as captain, Alexander Ogilvie as cornet, and Archibald Ogilvie, Jr., as sergeant.

It is recorded that this troop was largely responsible for the restoration of order in Montreal, and that for two subsequent years it was assigned the duty of guarding the frontier from the danger of invasion, pending the arrival of adequate forces from England.

It is interesting to note that in this year of 1837, the total number of ships docking at Montreal was 91, with a total tonnage of 22,668—an indication of the importance of the city at that time.

The growing of grain in the now settled parts of Upper Canada had been stimulated by the passing of the Canada Corn Act in the British Parliament. Under this measure the duty on Canadian wheat and flour was reduced to one shilling per quarter, on condition that Canada imposed a duty of three shillings on wheat from the United States.

The inclusion of Canadian flour in this Act is an indication of the growth of the milling industry around the city of Montreal which had now become a centre of distribution. In itself, this is a tribute to the work of those pioneers of the industry—the Ogilvie family.

Unfortunately these benefits were to be short-lived. Sir Robert Peel's bill, introduced in 1846, drew the whole of Canadian business' produce down the New York channels of commerce, destroying the future of the mill-owners and merchants.

This reverse, coupled with a terrible outbreak of ship fever in Montreal in 1847, led, in the following year, to a business depression that threatened almost all Canadian commerce.

Rioting broke out in Montreal, recurring with greater intensity in 1849, and it was not until the early fifties that a sense of security and hope again filled the hearts of men.

Throughout this period of stress and turmoil, the "St. Gabriel" mill, owned by the husband of Helen Ogilvie, one James Goudie, was maintained in full operation. This mill stood on the bank of the Lachine Canal.

In 1852, Alexander Walker Ogilvie, then a young man of twenty-three, became the active partner of his uncle in the now-flourishing mill at St. Gabriel Locks on the canal.

The junior partner entered upon his new work with all the intense enthusiasm and energy that he had inherited from his father, the man who had built the first Ogilvie mill in Canada fifty-one years before.

In 1855, the uncle, satisfied with the ability and business acumen of his nephew, retired from business, and a new partnership was formed between Alexander Walker Ogilvie and his younger brother John, under the name of A. W. Ogilvie and Company.

It was not long before the courage of the two brothers, and their confidence in themselves and in the future of their business, was put to a severe test.

The year 1857 witnessed the greatest business panic in the history of the country. Ruin threatened the entire commercial structure as it then existed. Many large enterprises tottered and fell, whilst the smaller business undertakings disappeared.

Three years later another financial crisis shook the young country, and only the supporting action of the Bank of Montreal saved the commerce of Montreal from disaster. The action of the young Ogilvie brothers at this time in building the new and more commodious "Glenora" mills in Montreal shows their courage and their faith in the business they owned.

In 1860 the Ogilvie brothers admitted their youngest brother, William Watson Ogilvie into the business. The tense experiences of their first five years, plus an administrative ability and broadness of vision, had equipped the Ogilvie brothers to build the greatest organization of its kind in Canada.

Such places as Montreal, Quebec, Toronto and Kingston were now emerging from mere trading posts into sizeable towns, and the Ogilvie brothers realized that the grain grown in Upper and Lower Canada was not sufficient to meet the needs of the farmers and the little communities which sprinkled the settled areas.

As the population grew, so, of necessity, did the demand for wheat grow. The Ogilvie brothers turned their eyes westward and it was John Ogilvie who was the true forerunner of the wheat producer of the west.

In the late sixties he journeyed to Winnipeg and saw for himself the mighty potentialities of the prairies. In 1876, therefore, there was brought to Montreal, via the Red River and Duluth, the first shipment of wheat from the west—five hundred bushels of Manitoba wheat. What that first shipment has meant to Montreal and Canada, and even to the world, is seen in the mighty progress which we as a nation have made as food providers for our own people and those of other countries.

Because the Ogilvie mills had taken full advantage of the opening up of the rich and fertile territory beyond the Great Lakes, it was now possible for the senior partner and elder brother, Alexander Walker Ogilvie to retire in 1874, later to become a senator of Canada.

In 1888, John Ogilvie died, and William Watson Ogilvie, the only active survivor of the three brothers, became the head of the greatest flour milling company in Canada. In which capacity he carried on until his death in 1900.

By this time the firm had acquired the City Mills in Montreal, and had built other mills at Senarath and Goderich in Ontario, as well as the Royal Mills at Montreal.

The Winnipeg mill had long been in operation, and now elevators were being erected at strategic points throughout the west to feed the terminal elevator of the Company at Fort William. Long before the twentieth century dawned, the Ogilvie Company had become known throughout the world.

In addition to its mills and elevators at Montreal, Fort William, Winnipeg, Medicine Hat and Edmonton, capable of caring for the flour requirements of Canada from coast-to-coast, the Company owns and operates nine terminal and over one hundred and fifty interior elevators scattered at strategic points throughout the west.

The new Royal Mill at Montreal, just completed after nearly six years of construction, is the latest achievement of this great Canadian organization. With a total floor space in excess of 241,000 square feet, the main building houses two complete flour milling units, each with a capacity of 5,000 bags per day.

The present company, The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company Limited, which is responsible for this imposing addition to Montreal's industrial growth, came into being two years after the death of William Watson Ogilvie. The great traditions of the house of Ogilvie remain unchanged, and their faith in the future is as unshakable and sure as was that of the truly fine men who were its founders.

Correct Coloring Benefits Industry

That color and color schemes have a definite effect in relation to health or otherwise, on some people is revealed in an article "Industrial Color" by David S. Catton in Industrial Health, monthly publication of the Health League of Canada. Mr. Catton is with the Canadian Paint Varnish and Lacquer Association.

He says the business of applying color to industrial plants is no longer a haphazard, hit-or-miss process but is worked out on a scientific basis with established principles and formulae. Industry which once applied color in free and easy manner because management or staff members were particularly fond of certain colors, is now relying upon science to select the right colors for the specific job.

Science has documented the problem to the point where there can be no question that color is a vital factor in the health, welfare and performance of the industrial worker. The reaction to color is usually a subconscious one and people have been found who are allergic to colors, that is, in the presence of the color to which they are peculiarly sensitive they become violently ill.

The writer instances the experiences of air lines which have found that air-sickness is induced by a predominance of browns and yellows in the plane interiors. This same condition can be overcome by the use of greens and blues.

Mr. Catton tells of an 80 per cent increase in output being achieved by one manufacturer merely by changing the color of the assembly tables on which girl workers assembled tiny, hard-to-see parts. In another case substitution of green shipping boxes for black brought about satisfactory results in the shipping department of one firm. To the workers, the green boxes seemed lighter and caused less muscle strain and less fatigue—although they weighed as much as the original black ones.

Annual Visit Made To St. Anne's Military Hospital

HOWICK—At a recent meeting of the Ladies Aid of the Georgetown Presbyterian Church, it was the unanimous desire of the group that another visit be made to the Military Hospital again this year. Thus, on Thursday afternoon a "bee" was held at the home of Mrs. C. J. Fletcher where home-made candy and cookies were packed in individual packets, to be distributed to the patients. The congregational response to the plea for donations for this worthy cause was extremely gratifying. Nearly two hundred individual packets were made up.

On Friday, May 16th, several ladies and four gentlemen made the trip to Ste. Anne's. This group was warmly welcomed on arrival and the 170 patients visited were very appreciative of our endeavours. Before leaving for home a very enjoyable refreshment was served in the lovely Red Cross Canteen and Lounge. A tour of the spacious Recreational Halls, Library and Wards brought a worthwhile afternoon to a close.

Slugs Can Soon Spoil the Garden

Slugs are the grey, snail-like creatures which eat the leaves of tender vegetables, leaving a slimy trail on the foliage and on the soil beneath the plants. They do not restrict their activities to vegetables, as anyone with a rockery in the garden will know.

They shun daylight and thrive only where there is plenty of moisture. They are most troublesome in rainy seasons, and in low-lying areas of heavy land or where there is a mass of foliage growing close to the ground.

Plants in infested soil may be protected by a thin film of hydrated lime dusted over the foliage and on the ground after the sun has gone down and feeding has commenced. Hydrated lime is effective only when dry, and for this reason a few dustings every three or four days is more effective than one heavy one. Bordeaux mixture is also repellent to slugs and plants kept covered with the spray will be protected in some measure from attack.

For small gardens, where cost is not as important as under field conditions, baits of metaldehyde and bran are satisfactory. They can be bought ready mixed at most seed stores, and should be used according to the manufacturers' directions.

CANADIAN GARDEN SERVICE

By Gordon Lindsay Smith
Common Mistake—Too soon, too thick and too soon are perhaps the commonest mistakes made in gardening when it comes to sowing seed. Time and effort are wasted when any of these mistakes are made.

There are a few things like extra big seed, but more often bulbs, that require a fairly good covering of soil. Tulips, gladioli and dahlias bulbs or corms, for instance, can be planted anywhere from 4 to 12 inches deep. With the vast majority of seeds, however, deep planting is inadvisable. The general rule is three times the diameter. This means an inch deep for things like beans, peas, corn and nasturtiums, but mere pressing in for tiny seed like that of lettuce, petunias, carrots, etc. With the very fine seed such as alyssum or poppy, all that is necessary is to spread and press in gently.

The larger seed mentioned, that is peas, beans, etc., should be spaced at least three inches apart. This is not very difficult as it is easy to keep each individual seed separated. With the smaller carrots, lettuce or beet seed, or flower seed of more difficult there are little gadgets on the market which will help spread out the sowing, or one can let a dribble trickle between thumb and finger. Even then, however, it is best to thin, as soon as the plants are up, to at least an inch apart.

This will give room for development, which all plants must have if they are to grow well. To spread out the very fine seed, stuff that is only about the size of a pinhead or smaller, it is a good plan before sowing to mix with a little fine sand or earth and sow the whole mixture.

Not Too Early
Too early sowing, especially in the colder parts of Canada, is definitely not recommended. It is all very well to sow a few short rows of vegetables a week or two before the regular time but the main sowings should wait until the time recommended by the seed catalogue or the local experts. For plants that are tender nothing is gained in planting in cold soil and before the weather has definitely turned warm. Of course, where extra protection in the form of special paper caps or something similar is provided one can get started earlier, but otherwise it is better to wait.

Even if tender plants do survive a late frost they are quite likely to be so retarded that later and normal plantings will overtake them.

In the vegetable garden, of course, FRENCH ART SHOW

MONTREAL (CP)—Montrealers will have a chance in June to see an exhibit of 50 works of modern French artists, ranging from Monet to Matisse, in the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts. Included in the show are paintings by Picasso, Gauguin, Cezanne, Van Gogh and Renoir.

one should never sow all seed at once. The experts urge spreading sowings over several weeks so that the harvest will likewise be spread out. In most parts of Canada one can go on planting beans, beets, carrots, lettuce and such things every ten days or so from the time of earliest possible planting right up to July.

Easily Grown Flowers
A really imposing showing can be made with a few annual flowers and with a minimum of effort. Cosmos, giant marigolds, zinnias, petunias, portulaca, nicotine, calandula, alyssum, nasturtiums, etc., are easily grown almost anywhere in Canada. Some of the larger flowers can actually be used in the place of shrubs. Cosmos, gladioli, dahlias, giant marigolds and zinnias should have about two feet each way — petunias need about a foot of room.

Oil in the driving gears

BANK CREDIT oils the driving gears of production, industry and commerce. It helps to produce the goods and provide the services and jobs which mark the Canadian way of life.

"Money in the bank" is the foundation of credit. You and some seven million other depositors have nearly seven billion dollars in the chartered banks.

To pay for work done, goods produced, bought and sold, Canadians issue—every month—upwards of six billion dollars in cheques.

Cashing these cheques, making loans, discounting notes—in many different ways your bank keeps money and credit moving through all the channels of trade and opportunity... like oil in the machinery.

This whole vast, private, competitive, efficient process is made possible by your "money in the bank"—and by the experience and skill and integrity of the men and women on Canadian bank staffs.

Going to your bank is not like having to deal with a state bureau—but that's how it would be under state monopoly.

Gets Arm In Wringer

Little David Heggie, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Heggie, Prince Street, met with an accident on Sunday afternoon, when he was playing with the wringer on an electric washing machine in his home. The little boy who was playing with a friend in the basement of his home, got the machine started and they were putting pieces of paper through the wringer. Soon his hand got caught in the rolls and was drawn in up to the elbow. With the assistance of some nearby neighbors the wringer was stopped by releasing the automatic release and his arm taken out. The arm was very badly bruised and he was taken to Dr. H. R. Clouston immediately. An X-ray was taken and while the arm swelled quite badly, it is thought that it will be all right. The arm was in the wringer for some few minutes before it was released. If people would think to release the automatic mechanism, much danger from this type of accident could be avoided.

Covey Hill

COVEY HILL — Mrs. May Lamontagne and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Berne Lamontagne, spent a month's vacation on a trip to England. Travelling by plane, they proved good fliers, and found all arrangements, including meals, planned for the acme of enjoyment. Altogether the journey was a delightful experience. The Isle of Wight on the warm south coast was a paradise of blooming roses and other flowers. From a relative's home at Weymouth, about six miles out of London, they took excursions to the metropolis to Bournemouth, Portsmouth, Southampton and the New Forest, several trips being made to London and the attractive seaside resort of Bournemouth. Everywhere, even on the Isle of Wight, marks of bombing destruction were to be seen. The New Forest held a special interest for Mrs. M. Lamontagne, for it was the scene of a historical event in which one of her ancestors bore a part. In the year 1100 — 849 years ago — William II, King of England, was fatally shot while hunting in the New Forest. Collier's British History says: "His train gradually left him in the heat of the chase, and at sunset they found him lying dead." A cart bore the corpse to Winchester, where it was buried. The owner and driver of the cart was a man named Purkis. For this courtesy to his King he was granted a coat-of-arms which passed down to Mrs. Lamontagne's family through her grandmother, the late Mrs. Wm. Barrett, nee Purkis. The site in the New Forest is marked by a statue which, as always happens, was so chipped away by souvenir hunters, that it was protected by a bronze casing. Walter Tyrrel was blamed for the King's death, though some said his arrow, aimed at a stag, glanced from a tree and pierced the King's breast, while "dark whistling of the time pointed to his brother Henry as the murderer."

Persons — Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Remillard have moved away from the Corners to a new home not far from St. Antoine Abbe and near the old Martiana Post Office. Mr. and Mrs. F. Wilson have been recent guests of the Misses Christie. Miss John Lowden is spending a couple of months with her parents.

BANKING BY MAIL HABIT PAYS OFF HANDSOMELY

Of all the practices you can follow in your everyday business if you live out of town, banking by mail is among the most advantageous. Many of the Bank of Montreal's 1,700,000 depositors send in their savings by post when they find it impossible to visit their B of M branch.

Letter-box banking also relieves them of the worry of keeping large amounts of money at home. And it helps them save small sums that might otherwise be spent casually. Passbooks sent in with savings are brought up-to-date and promptly returned.

Banking by mail offers you many other conveniences. You can use a B of M account to pay your bills by post. You save time and protect yourself this way, for your cancelled cheque becomes a receipt. The B of M also sells money orders and drafts by mail, looks after investments and supplies helpful business information when you need it.

If you live out of town, or find it inconvenient to call at the bank during regular hours, start using the postman's feet instead of your own. Drop a line today to Kenneth Pope, B of M manager at Huntingdon, asking for further details. (Adv't.)

At The Movies

"Take Me Out to the Ball Game", O'Connor Theatre, May 29th and 30th

The great American game of Swat provides the basis for a tip-top, first-class musical so good that it is impossible to imagine the audience that won't find it grand, and even glorious, fun.

Take Me Out To The Ball Game is based on a story by Gene Kelly and Stanley Dohen and has a top-drawer cast comprised of Gene Kelly, Frank Sinatra, Ester Williams and Betty Garrett and Jules Munshin, Edward Arnold, and Richard Lane.

The fact is this show seems to have been endowed with that thing often described as labor of love. For not only did Kelly and Dohen write the story, they also staged the ten musical numbers. On the story side is a situation which finds the ball team passing to the control of Miss Williams, who must have been a nice boss to take orders from. Kelly is the wise guy, Sinatra the muscle-less one, Munshin the comedy end of the pennant-winning nine.

The theme song from which the film draws its title is the piece of Americana written years ago and familiar to everyone. It occurs and re-occurs throughout the film but always with a happy faculty of being longed, probably because it is not overplayed.

At this point, the general impression ought to be that Take Me Out To The Ball Game is quite a show. Impression is correct. It's a bearcat of a show with its period dress, its afterresence and its all-around expertness. Technicolor is a decided asset. It is a Must show.

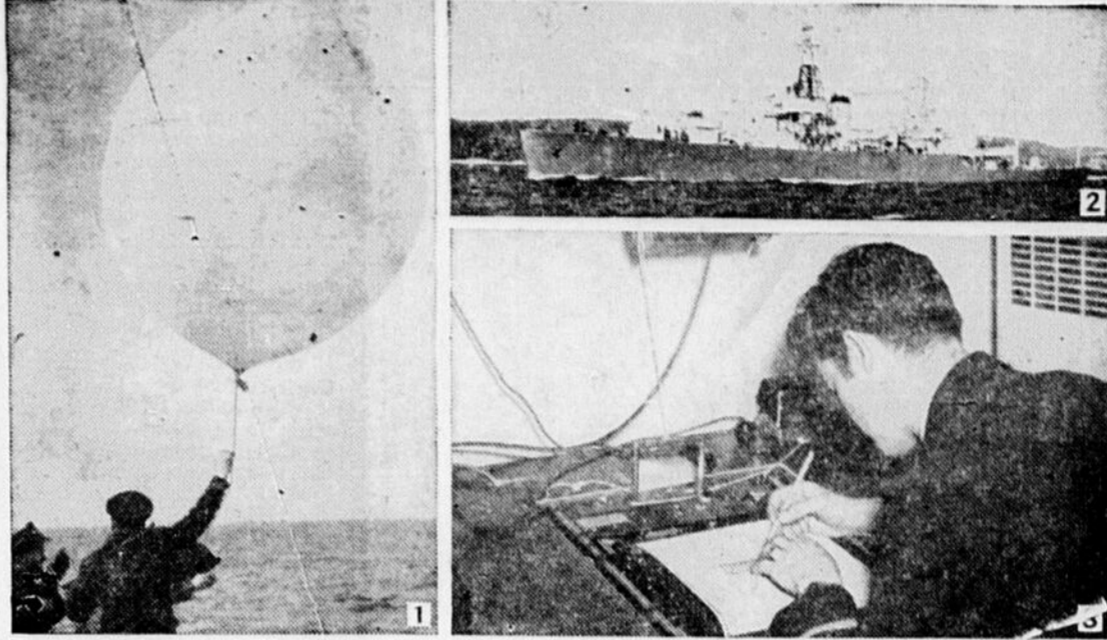

THE WEEK AT OTTAWA by the Canadian Press

By GEORGE FORSTER

Ottawa. (CP)—Ottawa dawdled through the political doldrums last week.

The city's big names were on the hustings, fighting it out in the campaign for the federal election. The eastern seaboard became the front line of the battle as leaders of the three biggest parties—Prime Minister St. Laurent, George Drew of the Progressive Conservatives and M. J. Coldwell of the C. paigned through the Maritimes. Cabinet ministers and party officials flitted in and out of the city, keeping a watchful eye on the campaign as it developed.

The capital was awakened into brief activity Monday when Rt. Hon. Harold Wilson, president of the United Kingdom Board of Trade, reached Ottawa on his tour of Canada to promote Anglo-Canadian trade. He spent a busy two days in the capital, conferring with government officials and speaking at a service club convention and a press conference.

He warned bluntly that Canada may lose the British market for its food products unless the United Kingdom can sell more to Canada. He added that Britain may not even be able to continue buying in Canada at the present rate when Marshall-plan aid to Europe expires in 1952.

He said the U. K. entered bilateral trade agreements with Iron-curtain countries because it had no alternative. Britain sold surplus products, for which there was no market in dollar areas, for Russian timber to keep its home-building program going and for other needed goods.

Must Earn Dollars Marshall-plan aid already is decreasing, he said, and unless Britain can boost its dollar earnings faster than the aid drops "we shall not even be able to maintain the present rate" of purchases in Canada.

"It is this plain fact and not any other which is responsible for our present inability to buy from Canada all that Canada would wish to sell and we, for our part, would wish to buy."

The alternative to the trade agreements with Russian satellites would have been "a Britain living on an impossibly-low standard of food consumption, with the housing program completely held up for lack of timber, since she was already buying all the timber available in Canada and the U. S."

It was reliably reported in Ottawa that Mr. Wilson will suggest an "air-lift" to his government to speed spare parts for Britain products to Canada. Ottawa trade sources said many Canadians were shying away from British tractors, cars and machinery because they were not sure of being able to obtain spare parts. A daily air service would help overcome this.

From Ottawa, Mr. Wilson moved on to Toronto and western Canada. He plans to spend the rest of the month in the Dominion.

Brysonville

BRYSOINVILLE—Mr. J. D. Lang, Brysonville, vice-president of Quebec Farm Forums will be in Granby on Wednesday to meet with these delegates, before going on to the National Farm Radio Forum Annual Conference, being held this year at Macdonald College on May 26, 27, 28.

Lime Will Correct Soil Acidity

The importance of liming to correct soil acidity has long been recognized as good soil management. Soil acidity is a major problem in Newfoundland, the Maritimes and Quebec, and a lesser problem in Ontario, the Prairie Provinces and British Columbia. It is not generally known, but in some areas even the virgin soils require liming. Where lime is required, it should be applied regularly as it plays an important part to productive soils, says G. W. Michael, Associate Chief (Fertilizers Plant) Products Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

An application of 1,000 to 2,000 pounds of ground limestone every four years in the rotation will maintain a satisfactory level in most soils. It is applied by broadcasting and working it into the top soil. Before lime is applied, the soil should be tested to determine if it is required. High alkaline soils may be as harmful to some crops as acid soils are to others. A P. H. of 7.0 is considered neutral.

Canada uses about 450,000 tons of agricultural lime annually but much more should be used to maintain a satisfactory P. H. level. The Dominion and Provincial Departments of Agriculture have a joint lime subsidy policy so that lime can be delivered very cheaply on the farm.

The Provincial Governments operate the policy through their agriculture extension staff. Farmers interested in purchasing agricultural lime should contact their local agricultural representative regarding the lime subsidy policy.

Nitro

Editor's Note—The following item has been received from a correspondent at Nitro and gives some data that was not known to the Gleaner when the article referred to was published in the last issue.

NITRO—In the last issue of this paper, a splendid account was given of the opening and dedication of the new church with the inference that it was the first of its kind—the first separate building—readily granted, but not the first "organization" of its kind.

In 1942 when the D.I.L. plant was in full swing, morning service was held in the Community Hall for some months, but later, a large room over the lounge room, was fitted as a chapel and services were continued there, as in the Hall—led by the three ministers from Valleyfield. Also, a choir of trained voices was formed, led by Mr. Len Sibley, with Mrs. S. St. Onge as organist.

A successful Sunday School had been organized by Mrs. St. Onge, ably assisted by Mrs. A. Trott, Mrs. E. R. Richardson, accompanied by her niece, Miss Rhoda E. Davidson of Senneville, is sailing on May 27 by the Empress of Canada for a visit to England and Scotland. Mrs. Charles Pingel has returned from Pte. Claire, where she was the guest of Mrs. Harold Smith.

Mr. Stewart Craik of Montreal, was the guest during the week of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Craik.

OLDSTER ON JAUNT VANCOUVER, (CP)—There's still a lot of life in Alvarez Haabsburg, who at 114 claims to be Canada's oldest resident. He is home now after a mysterious jaunt that took him to Chilliwack and back. He says a stranger drove him there, but won't say how he got back to Vancouver.

NEW COLLEGE COURSES SACKVILLE, N.B. (CP)—Several new courses have been added to the curriculum of the Mount Allison University summer school. Canadian history, labor problems, political science, fine arts and public music are among the new classes at the school, which begins July 5.

Today we Live in a Greater Canada. New Names in the NORTH. MARATHON and Red Rock, Terrace and Heron Bay—new names in Ontario's bushland north of Lake Superior all tell the same story: New towns have arisen, old ones expanded. Only five years ago on the site of Marathon, for example, there was nothing but bush; today a new community beside a new pulp mill is contributing millions to Canada's export trade. Burnt Creek and Knob Lake, Goodwood and Eclipse—new names in "New Quebec" tell of the development of one of the richest, purest deposits of iron ore the world has ever known. Such spectacular advances in the north are matched by continuing industrial expansion in the older established communities. Throughout Canada today ever-widening avenues of opportunity await the enterprise of young Canadians. "Canada is a land of opportunity... There is a field for almost anything one can think of, and anyone with a willingness for hard work has a good chance to achieve success", says Donald J. Smith, President of Hornet Industries Limited, Guelph, Ontario. One of a series presented by Molson's to promote a fuller realization by Canadians of Canada's present greatness.

Shun Poison Ivy—Enjoy the Picnic

It's time for a reminder about poison ivy. Many a day's outing has been spoiled by coming in contact with this plant. The best preventative measure is to learn to recognize poison ivy and not to picnic or sit near it. Although it generally grows as a trailing vine, or as a number of separate plants forming patches of varying thickness and size, it may climb a tree or telegraph pole for a considerable height. Its leaves are arranged alternately on the woody stem with each leaf bearing three leaflets, which may vary in size, shape, colour or outline, but will always be in threes. Clusters of greenish-yellow fruits about the size of peas develop on poison ivy in some locations and these fruits generally turn white. Poison ivy is the only common plant in Canada having trifoliate leaves and white fruit. The rash which can prove so distressing to many people is caused by coming into contact with the non-volatile, sticky substance which is on the plant. This substance may remain active on gloves, tools, shoes and picnic baskets for months. Dogs, cats, or even smoke from burning ivy can transmit the substance.

Valleyfield Golden Wedding

Nancy Beardwood — Walter Walsh 1889 — 1949

VALLEYFIELD — On May 18th, 1889, within the walls of the Primitive Methodist Church in Oxford Street at Blackburn, Lancashire, England, Nancy Beardwood was married to Walter Walsh by Rev. J. Whittle. Fifty years later, three thousand miles away, the jubilee of that wedding was celebrated at Valleyfield, Que. in the home of their only child, W. A. Walsh. This rare and happy event was marked by a gathering of family, old friends and neighbours, who joined in expressing their congratulations and good wishes to a couple so blessed by good fortune. As a tangible memento of this May 18th, 1949, Mr. and Mrs. Walsh were presented with a purse by Mr. A. V. Gurnham, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Stinson and Miss Opal Stacy. The guests were framed the felicitations and hopes of the guests. In phrases suggested by recollection, appreciation and association, Mr. C. W. Gurnham and Dr. C. L. Roman added to the remarks of presentation. Speaking for Mrs. Walsh and himself, the golden bridegroom gave moving evidence of their gratitude of this surprise token of affection and esteem. "The little boy" of the house of Walsh and his wife to come to her home, in order to get her mother and grandmother interested in Mission School, so that they would allow her to go to hear the stories of Jesus. After the fifth visit they finally decided to let her go the next day, which made her very happy. So another family in India learned about Jesus and His love. The meeting closed with a prayer by Pamela Turner.

Brown, of Ormstown. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Keogh of Lacolle were Thursday guests at this home. Miss Norma Wheatley of Port William, Ont., is also spending two weeks at this home.

Timely Hints

Q. How can I clean leather upholstery and restore the gloss?
A. Rub the dirt from leather upholstery with warm water and soap. Wipe with a cloth wrung from clear water. Dry thoroughly and then rub gently with a cloth wrung from a little warm milk, to restore the gloss to the surface of the leather.

Q. How can I keep bruises from swelling?
A. By applying immediately a cloth about five folds in thickness, dipped in cold water. When the cloth becomes warm, renew the wetting.

Q. How can I hasten the cooking of string beans?
A. It is claimed by some housewives that string beans will cook in one-half the usual time if they are cut lengthwise, instead of broken in the customary manner.

Q. How can I kill moths in carpets?
A. Rock ammonia, dissolved in boiling water, is excellent for removing moths from carpets. Use from the corners of the room to every quart of water. Apply with a flannel, then go over the material with a very hot iron.

Q. How can I avoid having to polish shoes so frequently?
A. If the shoes are rubbed with a soft cloth, lightly smeared with vaseline jelly every day, they will wear much longer, and will not require so much polishing.

A. By dampening it with hot water, then covering with a damp cloth and placing it in the oven until it is hot.

Q. How can I catch all the dripping when painting?
A. Try putting a cardboard picnic plate under the paint can before beginning the next job. It will catch all the drippings, and is also convenient for placing the brush when necessary to move from one place to another.

Q. How can I preserve leather book bindings?
A. By periodic treatments with an equal mixture of castor oil and paraffin.

Q. How can I set the colour in handkerchiefs?

Lacolle Tennis Club Opens For the Season

LACOLLE—Last Saturday afternoon, in a blaze of brilliant sunshine, the Lacolle Tennis Club opened the 1949 season. Hours before however, the executive was kept busy on the telephones answering the queries, "How soon can we play?" from the local tennis enthusiasts.

Players and spectators alike were frank in their appreciation of the perfect condition of the court and the enclosures. The Club colours of green and white on the newly painted stands and entrances showed up to advantage in the afternoon sunshine, and all combined to present a colourful scene. In the first set to be played, W. Richard and Miss O. McCarthy won by a narrow margin from R. Delisle and Miss P. Dauphin. Later, Miss J. Brosseau and A. DesRoses won an easy victory over A. Cumming and R. Delisle. In this match, Miss Brosseau, who was last year's junior champion, showed that she was going to be a strong contender for the senior ladies' title this season.

Athelstan

ATHELSTAN — The May meeting of the United Church Woman's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. Reese on Friday afternoon and opened with the usual worship service. The theme of the day's study programme was "Newcomers to Canada", and was conducted by Mrs. George Boyce, community friendship secretary, assisted by other members. The first subject discussed was "Must These Die Too?" and concerned "that great caravan of homeless, despairing and hopeless people, wandering throughout Europe — with no possessions, no passports, no citizenship, no legal rights even to a grave". Secondly, "The Immigration of Displaced Persons — some of whom have suffered tortures like martyrs; who have survived their frightful experiences; whose only hope is immigration", and lastly, "The Lady in Blue" which dealt with the work of Immigration at Halifax, one of the outstanding workers there being Miss Emily Feltham, whose sympathetic understanding and keen interest has done much to help these newcomers to Canada, as she is on hand to meet them when they arrive, she gives us a vision of what is being done and what can be done in the future to give them the true sense of Canadian citizenship by our "neighborly" approach to the communities where they finally reside. A great responsibility is ours. The usual monthly items on Christian Stewardship and Temperance were given. It was decided to have the bale of clothing for Overseas Relief ready for shipment in July. The hostess served refreshments at the close of the meeting.

guests at the Towers. Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Gregoire, of Toronto, spent the week-end with Mrs. Rose Elder.

This community was saddened on hearing Tuesday morning that Mrs. Cooke had passed away during the night at the Barrie Memorial Hospital.

The funeral service was conducted in the Rennie Church and by the former pastor, Rev. T. P. Duncan, now of Bedford.

This Week In Quebec

By Richard Daignault QUEBEC, (CP)—Negotiations between Gerard Picard, President of the Canadian Catholic Confederation of Labor, and Labor Minister Antonio Barrette to settle the Asbestos strike in the Eastern Townships were carried on unofficially last week and were expected to continue without announcement this week.

The move, made without any word from either government or union officials, gave rise to hopes that the strike, started Feb. 13 and tying up the world's largest asbestos production centre, may end soon.

The first meeting took place Wednesday and lasted two hours. The talks continued the following day and were then postponed till Monday when they would presumably continue.

The president of the C.C.C.L. spoke for the Federation of Asbestos Workers which is affiliated with the Catholic labor group.

It was understood that the talks were preliminary and sought to find a point of juncture on which all parties could agree before re-opening official negotiations.

Meanwhile, asbestos production was reported by the Quebec Department of Mines to have dropped to 11,700 tons in March compared with 62,524 in March last year.

Earlier last week on Tuesday, Premier Duplessis left the capital city of Quebec for a 10-day rest. It was not known where the premier would spend his holiday but it followed recent illness which kept him away from his office for more than a month.

It had been known in Quebec for some time that fellow ministers in the provincial cabinet were urging him to take some time off.

He suffered a severe attack of influenza and it was after this that he suffered an illness the nature of which was not disclosed.

Since that time he attended one cabinet meeting but soon after his physicians ordered him to stay in his Quebec hotel rooms.

Prime Minister St. Laurent moved into the province last week after a

DEVOTES LONG LIFE TO INDIAN WELFARE

VANCOUVER, (CP)—A 90-year-old Victoria woman is one of British Columbia's ablest fighters for Indian rights.

She is white-haired Miss Alice Ravenhill, founder of the B.C. Indian Arts and Welfare Society, whose latest contribution to a life-long cause is a pledge won from Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent that "more will be done for the Indians." Confined to her room because of a hip injury Miss Ravenhill received a special visit from the prime minister during his Western tour.

Up to two decades ago we acted as though we thought they were headed for extinction. But there has been much done now that will result in increasing their numbers.

Miss Ravenhill presented Mr. St. Laurent with a brooch in the form of a popliteal fashioned from beads by children at the Nanaimo Tuberculosis Hospital for Indians. The prime minister kept it for his 15-year-old grand-daughter.

Miss Ravenhill will herself be

PUPILS SELECT TALENT COURSES

LONDON, (CP)—Every child has talent, says Headmaster Thomas Sevier of Dunraven secondary school who three years ago started an experiment giving children a wide choice of lessons.

With the exception of English, arithmetic and physical training, which are compulsory, boys and girls take only those for which they have talent.

Results show that technical drawing is a favorite with boys, while most girls choose weaving. Science and music are firm favorites with both boys and girls.

Handsome Don Francesco who will be one of the featured acts at the Ormsdown Exhibition on June 7 to 11, does his wire walking the hard way. He pretends to be not a

He walks jauntily over the wire, hands in pocket and his face wreathed in smiles when his legs become unsteady and he starts swaying.

One of the difficult feats he does on the wire is a split.

Efforts of some political speakers to make capital out of Canada's trade relations with the United Kingdom received an implied rebuke this week from Rt. Hon. Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade.

Speaking in Ottawa Mr. Wilson made it clear that Britain is not turning its back on Canada in trade, wants to buy more from Canada and also to sell more here. A couple of facts about Canadian-British trade, sometimes overlooked, were stressed by the British minister. These are that Britain is drawing a bigger proportion of her total imports from Canada than before the war and, to a greater extent than before the war, is paying for Canadian purchases, with exports to Canada.

Contrary to assurances given by Progressive-Conservative speakers that a Drew government would get more British business by making the pound and dollar convertible, and CCF spokesmen's promises to get markets by bilateral barter deals, Mr. Wilson said: "There is, in fact, no easy solution to this problem of trade between our two countries, no miraculous way of turning our sterling surplus with other countries into the dollars we need."

Rather than go in for more bilateral deals as the Canadian socialists propose, the British government aim is to get out of them— "British export trade is far too diverse and variegated to be capable of planning on bilateral lines."

External Affairs Minister L. B. Pearson put the crux of the trade position in a different way in a recent speech. He said the problem of making dollars convertible into pounds could only be solved by a three-party agreement between Canada, the United States and Great Britain. The Liberal government's record of co-operation with both Washington and London puts it in the best position of any possible group which might govern Canada to get that sort of agreement—not by telling other countries what they must do but by sitting down and seeing what can be done.

Prime Minister St. Laurent told a Nova Scotia audience this week that the Liberal government knows how to deal with Communism without putting drastic laws on the statute books that would threaten the liberties of every Canadian. Mr. St. Laurent knows what he is talking about because it was he who broke the Russian spy ring and put some of Canada's leading Communists in jail, using methods for which he was criticized by Progressive-Conservatives.

Out of every 100 factory workers in Canada 98 receive annual vacations with pay. This striking evidence of improvement in working conditions in Canadian manufacturing turned up in a recent survey made by the Labor department. Pol-

Canadian farmers are going to sow 3,000,000 more acres of wheat this year than last, increase prairie summer fallow by half a million acres. Prosperous conditions on the farms in the past few years plus the assurance of prices provided by the British wheat contract enable farmers to plan ahead with confidence.

The Liberals have so far nominated the most candidates for the June 27 election, it is revealed. The Party already has 208 candidates lined up, for the 262 seats.

THE RUSTLING OF PAPER

By LEWIS MILLIGAN

Listening to the newscast from the BBC in London the other evening, there was a pause, and I heard the rustling of paper. That is a common occurrence and not worth mentioning in view of the fact that we listen regularly to perfect reproductions of speeches, choir and orchestras on the radio. But the rustle of that piece of paper somehow struck me as a miraculous thing. I imagined myself back fifty years ago in the family circle (fading in):

"You may laugh, but I believe the time will come when even the rustle of a piece of paper will be heard around the world."

"Don't be silly, George."

"Ridiculous!"

"Impossible!"

"Tell that to the Marines!" (Fading out).

Seventy-three years ago Alexander Graham Bell, a young Scotsman, who had been fiddling with a gadget which he believed could transmit the human voice for some distance along a wire, succeeded in doing just that in an experiment on a farm at Brantford, Ontario. As school boys we used to do the same thing with a line of string, with pill-boxes at both ends for transmitters and receivers. Whether the pill-box telephone preceded Mr. Bell's invention I do not know; it may have prompted the young Scot's experiments.

Like many other notable inventions, the telephone was preceded by many attempts to produce it. The principle of voice transmission was discovered by different men at so nearly the same time that there are disputes as to who was the first. The best that could be achieved by earlier telephones, however, was the transmission of a musical pitch without any variation in tonal quality. It was not until Bell introduced the diaphragm which vibrated to sound waves, as in the tympanum of the human ear, that speech could be transmitted. The present microphone is really a telephone transmitter, and although Bell may not have fully realized it at the time, his invention was the forerunner of radio, for without his transmitter there could be no radio broadcasting.

Young people who were born within the last twenty-five years take the radio for granted, and they can hardly imagine a world without it. But to those of us who lived before motion pictures, radio, television, etc., when we pause to reflect on those inventions—realize that we are living in an age of miracles. Shakespeare was indulging in fantasy when he made Ariel declare that he would "put a girdle around the earth in forty minutes." We can do that now in a fraction of a second. The magic carpet of the Arabian Nights is out-dated by the airplane; and the figurative saying, "He born dead, yet speaketh," is now a literal and actual fact in the gramophone record.

How can we account for the performance of these miracles of modern science? Are men wiser and cleverer today than they were a hundred or two thousand years ago? Were Bell, Edison and Marconi more gifted or brainier than Aristotle, Bacon, Newton and Faraday? No; they inherited the wisdom and knowledge acquired and accumulated by all the great and lesser scientists of the past. But that does not detract from the credit due to Bell, Edison and Marconi for their marvelous achievements. They were not only men of penetrating intellect; they were men of intense purpose and unflinching industry—above all, they had indomitable faith in what they had set out to accomplish. While others were saying "Impossible!" they were quietly working to achieve the impossible.

Bell and Edison were poor and obscure men in their early days, but they did not complain about their lot in life and claim that the State owed them a living and social security. Their endeavours were beset with financial and technical difficulties and repeated disappointments, but these obstacles only served as a challenge to their talents and perseverance. There was no magic about the performance of the miracles of modern science. All the great inventions were the result of individual effort, and when you hear the rustle of a piece of paper from the other side of the world, remember how Alexander Graham Bell worked alone for long years to perform that miracle.

WANDERING INFANTS

EDMONTON, (CP)—A report that two infants, aged six and ten weeks, had wandered from home caused bewilderment among local police. The situation was clarified somewhat when they were told the babies were last seen in pasture. Constables promptly rounded up a pair of Holstein calves.

BALDUR, Man. (CP)—Eighteen bridges were either destroyed or damaged in spring floods, it was reported at a recent meeting of the council of nearby Argyle. Culverts were also swept away and bridge approaches washed out. Damage has been estimated at $20,000.
