

Unveiling of Strathcona Monument on Dominion Square Witnessed by a Crowd of 20,000 People

THE UNVEILING OF THE STRATHCONA AND SOLDIERS' MEMORIAL—The scene on Dominion Square, Montreal, just after His Excellency, the Administrator, had pulled the cord releasing the flags covering the statue. In the foreground are the Victoria Rifles, the South African Veterans (in uniform), and the Fenian Raid Veterans. On the right are the massed bands, the Heavy Artillery and the Fusiliers; on the left, the firing party, the Royal Highlanders and the Highland Cadets; in the rear, the 65th Regiment, the massed bugle corps, the Mount St. Louis Cadets and the guns of the Heavy Artillery. The illustration shows the veil, which had enveloped the statue, falling to the ground. (Photograph by Rice, St. Catherine street.)

THE UNVEILING OF THE SOUTH AFRICAN MEMORIAL—The first of the above trio of illustrations shows the firing party standing "easy"; the second, the South African Veterans who were present at the unveiling; and the third, the massed bands, under the leadership of Brigade Bandmaster Anthony, playing the "Dead March" in "Saul." Behind the bands will be noticed the Heavy Artillery and the Fusiliers. The top and bottom illustrations also show the dense crowds which witnessed the unveiling. Upwards of 20,000 people were present.

TROUT FISHING HAS COMMENCED—A famous trout brook in Western Ontario, where many of the speckled beauties are annually hooked.

FISHING IN LAKE NIPISSING.
Lake Nipissing is one of the grandest of the many matchless sporting resorts to be found in the richly endowed Province of Ontario. From its very nearness to civilization it is comparatively overlooked by the lover of fish and game. They imagine it is too near settlements to give them all the solitude they wish. With its five hundred miles of coast line, its deep bays and projecting points, shallow and stony reefs, innumerable islands, and unsurpassed scenery, there is nowhere within the confines of the Dominion a better combination of unlimited scope for sport, with convenience of access for the business or professional man who must keep in touch with civilization even upon his vacation.
In the west arm alone of this beautiful lake a canoeist might spend a couple of pleasant weeks amid the WIERD CAPUCHIN CATACOMBS AND THEIR GRUESOME OCCUPANTS—The remains of Sicilian Capuchin monks, habited in frocks and cowls, in their catacombs at Palermo. Formerly the bodies of notable Sicilians were buried in these catacombs, but for many years now the place has been solely given over to the Capuchins for the interment of deceased members of the Order.

SPECTRES THAT ONCE WERE MEN—The strange arrangement of dead Capuchin monks in the Catacombs at Palermo, Sicily. This remarkable place was recently visited by the King and Queen of Great Britain.

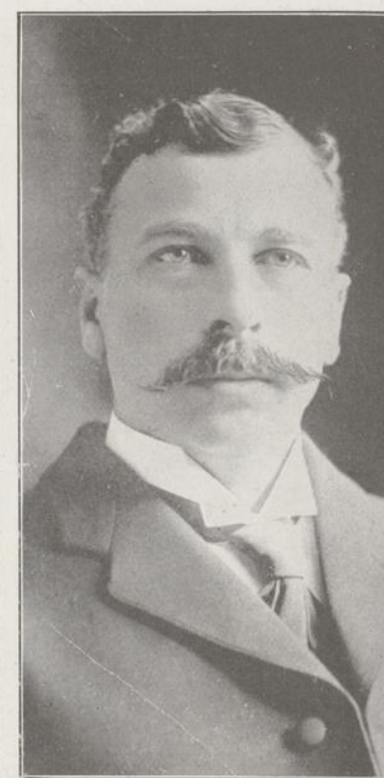

Some curious captures are reported by fishermen in Canada, but it remained for a British fisherman to hook a torpedo instead of a fish. Mr. C. Monger, agent at Portland for the British Angling Association, while out after bass, caught a torpedo which had been lost from one of the vessels of the Channel Fleet.

There is the best of fishing in these bays, and last year Mrs. E. A. Jacques, of Auburn, N.Y., landed a "lunge" weighing forty-six pounds. There is also good duck shooting to be had in season, and along the finely wooded shores partridge shooting can be obtained, and indulgence had in deer hunting.

The Standard's Beauty Quest for the Most Beautiful Canadian Girl is Proving Very Popular

A Westmount Girl in The Standard's Competition.

The Standard's Beauty Quest.

3 N to-day's issue of The Standard are reproduced some more of the photographs which have been sent to The Standard office in connection with the Beauty Quest inaugurated by this Journal.

From all parts of Canada the response has been most hearty, and practically every province is now represented in the search for the most beautiful Canadian girl.

It was only natural that a very large percentage of the pictures should come from the Province of Quebec, which large district is already famous for the many beautiful women who reside within its confines.

A large number of photographs have been sent from the far east, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick; while contributions have also arrived from Manitoba and the new western provinces. Toronto has also entered a large number of candidates.

A Large Array.

The judging of this array of candidates will be quite a formidable task, and will take some time. It will not be unduly hurried, and every endeavor will be made to see that a just decision is arrived at by the eminent and impartial judges who will pass judgment on the excellence of every photograph which is published from time to time in The Standard.

Much Correspondence.

A large amount of correspondence has arrived, asking as to the rules which govern this unique Beauty Quest. The competition is open to all friends of beautiful Canadian girls who think they have a candidate, or candidates, worthy of success.

All photographs are received except those of professional beauties, models and actresses. Photographs forwarded by Studios, as already announced, will be credited with the work of their Studio.

The Standard's Beauty Quest promises to continue one of the most interesting features yet attempted in the domain of journalism.

The number of letters received from friends of candidates all over the country would indicate the deep interest which has been taken by Canadians of both sexes in the competition. It will remain open until further notice. Photographs of competitors will be returned in good order.

Miss Rice is of Canadian descent, her parents having formerly resided near the beautiful Bras d'Or Lakes, in Cape Breton. The photograph which won the first prize among over 2000 entries, was the work of a Canadian, a resident of Montreal.

GRUMBLING IS FATAL.

Grumbling kills friends. The business man who is ever grumbling and growling about things makes a blue atmosphere about him.

There is no good in grumbling. Grumbling is an evidence that you are looking at the world through blue glasses; that you haven't the proper estimate of other people.

Grumbling is an advertisement to the world that you are not a success. Grumbling won't help things a bit. The more you indulge yourself in grumbling the quicker you form the habit, and it becomes so fixed upon you that later on you find it almost impossible to shake it off.

If you are starting on the grumbling path pull yourself up short.

Unveiling of Strathcona Monument Recalls Handsome Entertainment of Canadians in England

THE VISIT OF COLONIAL TROOPS TO DOVER, ENGLAND—July 11, 1900, was a civic holiday in Dover, the whole town turning out to welcome the Colonials who had been invalided from South Africa. A banquet was tendered them by the authorities, and everything possible was done to make their visit of lasting remembrance. In this illustration members of the different contingents are shown, as well as representatives of the different colonies. (Photo by W. H. Broad, Dover. By courtesy of Mr. Lucien C. Vallee.)

WHAT A MAN WANTS.

A man requires in a woman he makes his wife a companion, a friend, and a home-maker.

She can be no one of the three if she makes of herself a domestic drudge. A servant can do the work of the home as well, probably better, but no one can perform the duties of mistress but herself.

When a man's circumstances do not allow of his keeping a servant, and the wife, of necessity, must herself attend to the household duties, her work is harder, but her requirements are practically the same.

And even if she works hard she need not fall into the position of drudge, with no thought of other things.

Being a companion and friend does not imply that an intellectual equal is necessary. A man rather enjoys explaining things to his wife when the explanations do not have to come too often or too profusely, but a similarity of tastes and views on essential questions is imperative.

IN A GILDED CAGE.

Don't marry a rich man—that is, a man in a great deal higher position socially than yourself—if you value at all your future happiness.

As the wealthy man's wife, you will find yourself transported to a sphere altogether strange and foreign to that to which you have been accustomed. Hemmed in by conventionality which ever way you turn, you may well liken yourself to a "bird in a gilded cage."

And how often will you sigh in vain for a return of those careless, single days, when, even if they occasionally went hand-in-hand with something like poverty, were entirely yours, to do with just as you liked!

Then there is the question of your parents. Their visits to your home—so much grander than theirs—may not be altogether appreciated by your husband. Good as he may be, and anxious to make you feel perfectly happy and contented in your new life, he will scarcely be able to hide his fear lest your relations and some of his particular friends may one day meet, and make an introduction inevitable.

Therefore, grand as it may appear for a girl to marry a man whose position is so much the superior, she has seldom any real cause to be envied.

Far better off is she who contents herself with a husband in her own station of life. Hers will then at least be a position of equality with her husband, who will eagerly and sympathetically enter into all the joys of her existence.

and $35.00

These beautiful dresses embody everything that's dainty—everything that's artistic in the latest Parisian Lingerie Costumes that cost vastly more—even three to four times the prices we've fixed for the lovely designs shown in our Cloak and Suit section.

Our styles are strictly exclusive—one costume each—two in some cases. These different sizes, never more than two costumes in any of the elaborate models, all of which means exclusiveness, and, of course, adds materially to the value of the garment. At $20.00, $25.00 and $35.00, our offerings embrace styles, the like of which you'll not see elsewhere. Made in the finest of Sheer Mulls and Batistes, with hand embroidery and a profuseness of lace trimming. These costumes easily rank with models that sell for a half more and even twice as much in the leading New York shops.
