HOUSES and STORES To Let will be advertised in the "STAR" for one-half cent per word.

It is proposed to build a railway to connect Ottawa with Toronto; joining the Canada Central at Carleton Place.

There must be no folding of arms amongst members of the Board of Health. Unless sanitary measures are most stringently enforced, the mortality returns will tell a fearful tale.

In England, after thirty years' trial, the broad gauge has had to give way; all railways thus laid are to be at once changed to the four feet eight and a half gauge. We believe the gauge of the future will be much narrower.

The N. Y. Times says:—

"Since the Fall of 1870 twenty-two new mill enterprises have been started at Fall River, Mass."

How many have been started, not at a particular spot, but in the Province of Quebec, during the same period? We believe not one, and yet we possess the finest water power in the world, cheap labor, and boundless natural resources. But the States are being "ruined by protection."

It is alleged against the printers now under arrest at Toronto that they notified deserters from their cause that after the strike was over their names would be printed on a black list. This terrible threat goes to build up the charge of "conspiracy." An impartial observer cannot help remembering how Mr. George Brown has scores of times not merely threatened to black-letter those who dared to differ from him politically, but how he has thus shown his wish to bring odium upon the name of many a man whose little finger contained more honesty than Brown's whole body. The printers' list would be a news list, pure and simple, but the Globe's typographical displays are always surrounded with heaps of the vilest and most abusive epithets. The one characteristic of the Globe's style is the attempt to intimidate. If the printers are guilty of any offence, the managing editor of the Globe stands convicted of years of criminality.

The school system of Ontario is justly famed throughout the world, and the name of Dr. Ryerson is always associated with its development from inferiority to its present efficiency. Notwithstanding this, the Globe has for years persistently abused both the system and the Superintendent until, at last, the venerable Doctor—he is past the three score years and ten—has felt it his duty, before leaving this world, to reply to the Globe's slanders. This he has done in a masterly style, leaving his traducer utterly discomfited and exposed in all his ugliness. Among other things, the Doctor tells us that in 1849 Mr. Brown tried to induce him to connive at getting his—Mr. Brown's—property at Bow Park exempted from a small rate levied for the purpose of erecting a school-house for the district. Dr. Ryerson had, of course, but one answer, and the Browns,—Gordon and George—the Grit purists, and "friends of popular education," denounced the rate as a "downright robbery," and told the Doctor that they would "pitch into him," i.e., abuse him in the columns of the Globe. They faithfully carried out their threat, and will, probably, unless arrested for conspiracy to defame, hound the poor old man to his grave.

We have prepared an alphabet for members of Parliament which, we hope, will enable them to spell out Fair Play to Canadian Industry one of these days. We shall not give them hard lessons, confining ourselves to one letter per day. The first letter of the alphabet is

The manufacture of Agricultural implements might be thought a staple Canadian industry, but by reference to the Government Blue Book we find that last year Canada purchased of foreigners such goods to the amount of $144,153, of which Brother Jonathan; who, we are told, is being "ruined by protection," took $83,208. A portion of these are admitted duty free; upon the rest, 15 per cent. is levied.

Anchors and other ship's furnishing, the manufacture of which ought to form a lucrative Canadian industry, were purchased abroad to the amount of $193,273. No duty is levied on these.

Articles imported for the use of the Governor-General, the Government of the Dominion, Foreign Consols, and "the army and navy," amounted in value to $354,478. Without doubt Canada could have furnished almost all, if not all, the articles embraced in this sum had there been a duty sufficient to dispel the lingering prejudice some persons have against Canadian made articles. As it was, not a cent of duty was paid.

The three foregoing items will suffice for one lesson. Summed up, they tell of $691,904 sent out of the country which should have been utilized in our midst, giving employment to emigrants, who, in turn, would have put money into the pockets of the builder, the landlord, the farmer, and the innumerable tradesmen whose wares or pursuits are indispensable to nineteenth century civilization.

THE CHURCHES.

Knox Church.

With reference to a number of deaths which have during the past year taken place in the congregation of Knox Church, and in particular to ones which recently occurred, Rev. Dr. Thornton preached yesterday morning, taking for his text the 13th verse of the 14th chapter of Revelations:—"And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me: Write—Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth. Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." The best of Christians, on looking back over their lives, are vividly reminded of many shortcomings, and put not confidence in any works they have done, but cling to the righteousness of God. It would not be in accordance with the virtues of the departed to make flattering allusion to their labors, and this has been the reason why we have refrained from anything more than general reference to those Providence has taken from amongst us during the brief term of our ministry. There are times, however, when, whether we will or not, we are forced to think of death. Such a time is the present, when the death roll of the congregation for the past year exhibits more names of church members than the five years preceding. One of the oldest and one of the youngest of our members were taken away the week after our induction into the pastorate, and we cannot therefore speak particularly of the life they lived or the death they died. We are assured their end was peaceful and happy.

Many months passed by. Then was removed a model mother and patient wife—a quiet and consistent Christian, whose sphere of usefulness was rather at home than in the world rich or world. She hath done what she friends and acquaintances. A short time elapsed, and another was taken—a teacher in the Sabbath School. Again were the same words made use of. In a few months one who had long been conscious that at any moment the call might come, was taken. She wished well to Zion, but want of health forbade attendance at God's house. Her field was her family, and her chosen sphere her home. Once more may it be truly said—she hath done what she could. Ner is the list completed. Death again made ravages in our ranks—six little children were re- deprived of a mother's care; are now when we think of her whom we have so lately lost, how appropriate too may it be said—one too hath done what she could. Consecrated to God, in her youth, for 50 years did she witness for Christ. Blessed with health and strength and endowed with a good judgement and kindly sympathy, she was an invaluable member of the church and society, and in all works of benevolence, as the Dorcas Society, St. Andrew's Home, and other charitable institutions, bore an active part, and best of all, all was done heartily as to the Lord and not to men. Her domestic virtues as many can testify were more conspicuous than those which met the public eye, and her children will rise up and call her blessed. We might speak of her patience in tribulation during a long and painful illness, and also of her consistent Christian life, and dwelt at length upon her triumphant death, though not with her consent for she was clothed with humility. We could hardly say less. Her own works praise her in the gate. Nor were death's ravages confined to the congregation one of our young men gave himself to God, and would have united with the church had not his fast-failing strength prevented it. We hear another has been taken home; but are they not better in His bosom than ours? Are they not free from sickness and sorrow, long to have fallen to their lot—had they been permitted to live, and do not their voices from another world say to some of you, Come this way? With a death roll of thirteen names extending over as many months, are we not summoned to turn aside and gather up lessons of instruction? In the case of every one of those just mentioned, who had come to years of responsibility, there was a characteristic common to all—they all died in the Lord. They all fell asleep in Jesus. The great general truth made known in the text, is, blessed are the righteous dead. This is not the estimate men form. It is very difficult to associate happiness with death. We shrink from it, and speak of it as the dark valley, the last enemy, and its very name awakens within us solemn reflections. It cannot be otherwise than identified with sorrowful partings, cold and icy forms. Yet the voice of Heaven John heard said, "blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." Why we do not hear this voice, or, hearing, do not heed it, is because as we step into the darkened chamber, and gaze for the last time upon that form, all motionless and pale, our own lost hearts more largely in ourselves than their gain. We look too much on the earth-ward side, and do not realize that they are freed from this vile body and this present vile world, with its temptations, or the fullness of joy to which they have attained, then our hearts should echo back, "blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

Happy in the Lord denotes union to Him in bonds of living faith. It is most intimate, vital and spiritual, set forth by many types, yet imperfect analogies in Scripture, as the vine and its branches—head and members of the body. There can be no condemnation to those in Christ Jesus; death itself is robbed of its sting, and eternal salvation made sure. Forasmuch, then, such great blessings appertaid to them in the life to come, we may be sure that we belong to that happy number Union with Christ, in plain English, means conversion. If you die unconverted you will be cast into outer darkness, where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. It is too customary to look upon all taken away as gone to the abodes of the blessed. On this point the records give no uncertain sound. Of the multitudes who die there are many who enter in at the wide gate, which leadeth to destruction; while the straight gate is approached by few. A burial service so beautiful and appropriate for the blessed dead, is painfully out of place when pronounced over the body of one whose life was notoriously profligate and wicked. In spite of all that is done, and in spite of all that is said it is the funeral of a hell-doomed soul. There is yet a ray of comfort for the castdown; it is not said "Blessed are the dead who have lived in the Lord"—a statement, however, true in the present instance. A man may have lived in sin, and at death repent and be saved eternally. As with the physical, so with the spiritual, while there is life there is hope. This is one reason why we ought to be very charitable in our opinions of those whose manner of death is unknown to us. Some will exclaim is not this a dangerous doctrine, calculated to cause lovers of pleasure to continue in their soul-destroying courses, trusting to a death bed repentance? It may be so, but none would be so unwise as to fail to point out the supreme folly of such conduct. The Bible does not encourage such delay; its voice says, Now is the accepted time, make all diligence to make thy calling and election sure. Another perversion of the text is that believers are not happy till they die. Their highest happiness begins undoubtedly at death, but it is an unwarranted statement to say they are unhappy now. On the contrary we are warranted in saying "blessed are the living who live in the Lord." Many testimonies confirmatory f this from Scripture go to show that even in this world the Christian has the best of it. Does not David sing of the blessedness of the man whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sin is covered? Without decoding as to the literal truth, which is variously interpreted, we prefer that body of faith which the Romish Church manifestly teach. "From henceforth" from now, it may be rendered, from the moment of death, the righteous dead are blessed. Is it not glorious, that nothing intervenes; but that the moment we are freed from the present house of clay, a chariot of fire stands ready? It is but an instant from death to an eternity of glory; it is in a moment; in the twinkling of an eye, as St. Paul says, absent from the body, present with the Lord. How cherished an assurance to those who after long hours of suffering and pain, are about to be released. Those who have just been taken away, derived great comfort from this truth. It is this which helps to make them so patient, and that strengthens them to endure with Christian resignation the heavy chastenings of the Lord.

Let us who are well and strong carry home these words of consolation. Sorrow and suffering may not be very far from many amongst us, and let us be prepared to endure affliction, to meet death, and stand before the judgment seat of Christ. Here we suffer grief and pain; here there are so many temptations to endure, and so many losses and crosses, that the great wonder is that we enjoy as much happiness as we do. But at the time to which the text looks forward the cross is exchanged for a crown, this vale of tears for the realms of the blest—where all tears are wiped away. There, there shall be no darkness; here there is sickness, sorrow and death. A great voice out of heaven saith, There shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things have passed away. Who, indeed, can picture the joys of heaven? Let us, then, restrain our grief at our own loss, and constrain ourselves to believe that death to them is a great gain. It is sweet to die in the Lord—a returning from exile and going home to our Father's house. By the blessed memory of the dead, we solemnly charge you before God, to meet us all you have learnt to love their Saviour and serve their God. Strange as it may seem to be, you can add another drop to their overflowing cup—you can give your heart to Christ—and this will make them, if possible, yet happier still. It is it not written, there is joy in heaven over every sinner that repenteth. How delightful a reflection are their words of comfort, their restored health and strength. Remember us while away; and be assured that yourself, your teachings, and your example will never be forgotten by your grateful congregation.

In the course of his reply, Dr. Cordner referred to the unexpected pleasure which that evening afforded of meeting his friends again, before his departure from home. He spoke of the various theological questions which were agitating the public mind, and urged all present ever to stand for the right, at any sacrifice of personal ease or social position. In a few feeling words he referred to his own failing health as the reason for his departure for a time, and prayed that Our Heavenly Father would keep both pastor and people for a happy re-union and for return.

Each one present then shook hands with Dr. Cordner, bidding him God-speed.

THE TORONTO STRIKE.

Trial of the Thirteen Unionists.

From the Toronto Telegraph of Friday we obtain the following concerning the charge of conspiracy brought against members of the Typographical Union No 91.

Mr. Kenneth McKenzie, Q.C., and Mr. Falconbridge, appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. A. W. Lauder, M.P.P., Mr. C. McMichael, and Mr. Dixon for the defendants.

As the prisoners entered the court, there was a stamping of feet in the crowd of spectators, and the magistrate gave orders to have the court cleared, which was done.

Mr. Lauder requested, on behalf of the friends of the defendants, that the doors be opened.

The Magistrate said that when he had power in a case of this kind he would exercise it.

Mr. Lauder—Does your worship absolutely refuse to open the door?

The Magistrate—I do.

W. R. Parks was then sworn and in reply to Mr. McKenzie testified to the existence of Typographical Union No. 91, and said a strike took place on the 25th March last the stoppage of work took place because the Union, as a body, wanted a shortening of the hours of labor from ten hours a day to nine; this proposition was made through the Union this demand has been refused, except in one or two instances; I was in the strike myself, for eight days; I returned to work at Dudley & Burns' on the second Wednesday after the 25th.

The Magistrate said there had been a combination proved, and now he would hear what the members said.

Witness resumed—One Benjamin Loomans said I was a mean man for going back to work; he also insinuated to me that when the strike was over, I would have a hard time to get work; another named Moore also said that after the strike was over, there would be a black list published and my name would be published in it; I was appointed on a committee of three by the chairman of the replicance committee to go over to the office of the Daily Telegraph to ask the proprietor if he would receive a committee from the Union but he refused to receive anybody as representative of the Union, saying he would not have anything to do with the Union.

Cross-examined by Mr. Lauder: I have been a member of the Union for about sixteen years; this Union has been in existence since 1844; I believe the master printers have had a knowledge of the Union ever since I knew anything about it; the Union made a demand for nine hours, or ten hours labor in the usual way; the demand was refused, but they offered to raise the wages; the master printers have united to resist the demand; I struck at first, and received $5 from William Lovell for my support; I went back to work on the Wednesday after Easter Monday; I was to get 18 cents an hour, and work of nine hours, or as few, as I liked; as Copp, Clark & Co's men were at work for a week before me on those terms, I said I would go back; I am a member of the Union, as I have a receipt of membership paid up to the 1st of June; I have not been threatened by any members of the Union, nor have I seen any one else threatened.

C. W. Hawkins was examined, and corroborated the evidence of the first witness.

Ed. Doudlet was also called by the prosecution, and testified to the same effect.

The Magistrate said, as he remembered the evidence, the witness had already said that the object of the Union was to regulate the rate of wages and the time of ; that of itself was illegal. He could not, therefore, see any object in prolonging the examination.

In reply to Mr. Lauder, witness said the master printers did not object to the rates asked for in wages, and there was no dispute except to the nine hours.

Mr. Lauder—Do you know that the master printers of this city were once members of this society themselves.

Witness—I don't know.

The Magistrate—I don't want to hear that at all.

Mr. Lauder—Here are twenty men charged with an offence of which the master printers were once guilty themselves, and you won't let us tell it.

Ed. O'Neil, Ottawa, detective, testified to arresting several of the defendants at various railway stations; some of them were going to Chicago.

The Magistrate said the whole gist of the inquiry was to show that the formation of this society was illegal.

Mr. McKenzie said that this closed the case on his part, and he submitted that there had been made out, beyond a doubt, a conspiracy of the kind for which the defendants were indicted.

The case was then adjourned until the 6th day of May; and the defendants' bail was extended to that date.

McLEISH & CO'S. VIEWS.

The following tells its own story:

To the Editor of the Leader.

Sir,—At a meeting of the Master Printers' Association to-day, we learn that that society is responsible for the action taken yesterday in reference to the arrest of certain printers of Toronto for the alleged crime of conspiracy.

Our views of this subject are entirely different to those held by the above association. Our strong conviction is, that the employees have the same right to conspire, combine or unite as the employers, and indeed both have done so. Cases of intimidation may have occurred by individual members of the Typographical Society. That ought to be put an end to, but to arrest for combination and conspiracy we think is very wrong.

We, therefore, very much regret that the Master Printers' Association should have been so ill-advised, for we do not believe they are true to themselves in taking such steps. We believe it to be unjust; and we think few intelligent men will venture to contradict us when we assert, that it is highly impolitic.

Indeed, unproper and unjust does the action seems to us, that we have given notice to the Masters' Association that not only will we discountenance such unprecedented and preposterous proceedings, but shall withdraw from a society which has adopted and determined to pursue as extreme and suicidal a course.

We are, &c.,

STRIKES AND TRADE UNIONS.

We are heartily glad to see that Sir John A. Macdonald gave notice yesterday of his intention to introduce a bill assimilating the law of Canada to that of England, in the matter of strikes and Trade Unions. The modifications to which the harsh old English law has been submitted at home, are even more necessary and suitable to the circumstances of Canada, where capital and labor are not separated by such impassable lines of tradition and the relics of feudalism. It is our delight to call ourselves a free country, and no country can be really free where a man is not at liberty to do the best he can with his labor where and when he likes. There is an element of bondage in the law as it stands here, and as soon as it attracted the notice of our Minister of Justice, with the promptness that characterizes all his efforts in the way of remedial legislation, he instantly set about abating the evil.—Toronto Mail, April 19.

THE QUESTION OF INDEPENDENCE.

The party press of the Province are not dealing with this question in anything like a spirit of wisdom. The Ministerial organs touch it in a gingerly half-hearted fashion, fearful, doubtless, of being betrayed into some phrase in which the Opposition might discover some disloyal speck; while those supporting the leaders of the Opposition are striving to make all the capital they can against the Government, out of the semi-official utterance of Mr. Howe. The curb of partizanship debars them from pursuing that most valuable mission of the journalist—preparation of the people for the discussion of possibilities, whose advent cannot be safely met without grave and unbiassed deliberation. During the next decade Canada will have pressing need for a free, unshackled press. Be our destiny ever so manifest, it rests with ourselves to rough-hew it; and servility in journalism is incompatible with the sovereign duty of fostering such a hearty Canadian patriotism as will tide us safely over whatever transmutation may be in store for us. It therefores behoves every journalist who is not sold body and bones to party, to rise superior to its lesser aspirations and meet this surpassing question without reference to the inferior issues of political controversy.

Until the papers in connection with the Washington Treaty are brought down, and the whole details of that important indenture fully discussed, we have no tangible bearings whereupon to ground a discussion of this coming theme; but, in the meantime, we must protest against the folly of depreciating the military stability of this country, as unpatriotically displayed by certain of our contemporaries, in regard as disputable the assumption that forty millions of people—enjoying the blessings of institutions kindred to our own, the genius of which is wholly opposed to any unfranchised alliance, and the majority of whom can point to a common ancestry with ourselves—are awaiting the first favorable opportunity to absorb, willingly or unwillingly, non-tenth their number in a sponge-like embrace, and we reprobate as barely un-Canadian the craven spirit which prompts the acceptance as an axiom of their power to do so.

We are not unmindful of the aggressive views held by prominent Americans, and it may be our duty to discuss how best we can be shielded, by international stipulations from any annoyances to be apprehended from such; but that four millions of people, with Home and Colonial traditions of thrilling lustre, with warlike blood coursing through their veins, would ever exhibit the white feather by a number of millions, be the contest as forlorn and hopeless as it is possible to picture it, we cannot believe. It is incumbent upon the Government to furnish the country with all the facts of the case as speedily as possible, when it will devolve upon the independent press of the country to confront the question fearlessly, while discussing it prudently. Whatever else may await us, let us apprehend it as quickly as is consistent with diplomatic reserve; and, meanwhile, let us manfully be prepared to accept and uphold with a courage worthy of Britons, any scheme of nationality which Imperial necessities may map out for us. By so doing, the less heady way will insidious annexationists make amongst us.—Toronto Telegraph.

CALISAYA CINCHONA, or PERUVIAN BARK, was introduced into Europe by the Countess of Cinchon, wife of the Viceroy of Peru, who had experienced remarkable benefit from its use. After its introduction it was distributed and sold by the Jesuits, who obtained for it the price of its weight in silver, and it long retained the name of Jesuits' Powder. Its secret was at length revealed, and it has become the most highly esteemed and universal remedy in existence. It is the chief reliance of physicians in Fever, Prostration and General Debility, and in all low febrile conditions of the system, where there is want of tone and vitality, and in Neuralgia and Rheumatism. It is combined with Nutritive tonics in the form of a delicious cordial in Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya, a preparation of extraordinary efficacy.

Sold by all Druggists, at $1. 93

AMERICAN.

MATAMORAS, April 19.

The Revolutionists fined the firm of Buck, Sabwield & Co., of Monterey, $35,000 for some irregularity in passing money out of the country. This, with the proceeds of the sale of 300 mules, placed the insurgents in funds, and will enable them to move an Matamoras in full force.

The 7th cavalry revolted at Cortina's headquarters yesterday, and attempted the life of the General, who was rescued by the 7th regiment coming to his defence. Several men were killed on both sides, and 70 men went over to the Revolutionists. Six men shot in Brownsville were shot by order of Cortina.

A Havana letter states that the vitality of the insurrection is far from being exhausted. There is a general demoralisation among the volunteers, and Valmaseda will probably soon retire from the Generalship.

NEW YORK, April 20.

The trial of Stokes will begin as soon as one of the Supreme Court Judges is able to hold a Court of Oyer and Terminer.

MADRID, April 21.

Newspaper organs of the Carlist party publish the manifesto of Don Carlos protesting against the late proclamation, signed by his secretary and countersigned by Castel, and declares that henceforth Don Carlos and his followers will protest only in the field. A general rising of Carlists in all parts of Spain is momentarily expected. Troops are prepared to meet it.

— Thousands of our citizens were attracted out yesterday by the fineness of the weather and the interest felt in the movements of the ice. At present the Harbor is clear to the Hochelaga wharves, but the ice remains intact on the opposite side of the river. Defendants were fined $5 and costs each and one month. The imprisonment, however, will not be enforced.

— On the 8th of September, 1868, a carpet bag containing $150 in bank notes, a cheque for $50 another sum of $30 and a promissory note for $400, was stolen from Mr. J. Dumesnil, while on his way to Montreal by the steamer Solaberry. M. Dumesnil was agreeably surprised a few days since on learning that the carpet bag, vased by papers it contained, was in the Portland Hotel, Commissioners street, of which F. A. Roy is proprietor. On examination, it was found to contain the $150 package and the $50 cheque, which had escaped the notice of the thief.

CONSTANT AND TRUE.

From the Norwich, Conn., Standard, April 15.

A lady of this city made the acquaintance of a young man living in a neighboring town, about twenty years ago. Fifteen years since he went to the Sandwich Islands in search of a fortune, and during these years a correspondence has, without a single interruption, been kept up between them until the friendship grew into a stronger tie and culminated in an engagement which will soon be developed in a matrimonial alliance. This morning, full of pluck and love, laden with the best wishes of a host of friends that witnessed her departure, she has started alone to make that journey which shall carry her overland to California, thence by water to the Islands, where she is to marry him whom she has not seen for fifteen years, but to whom she has ever been true.

REPRESENTATION OF THE WORKING CLASSES.

It has been suggested, speaking of the great need of reforming the working classes, that the non-workers need reforming more; and could they be made to earn their living, they would reform indeed. It is because the working bees have to support so many drones of various kinds, that life is so terribly hard for them. The number of real producing men is very small indeed, compared with the entire mass of mankind; and sometimes five hundred persons labor for a mere subsistence, in order that one family of five persons may wear purple and fine linen, and fare sumptuously every day. Let the work of reformation begin at the top, and come downward.

ROYAL MAIL LINE.

The steamers of the Canadian Navigation Company's Royal Mail Line, wintered here, the Spartan and Corinthian, are receiving the last "finishing touches" from the painters' brush, and will be ready to resume trips on the usual route as soon as the ice is clear of the harbor and the St. Lawrence. In the spring of 1871, the first clearance was made on the 22nd of April; it is doubtful if the ice-bridge will have collapsed the present season by that date.—Kingston News.

SIX O'CLOCK.

The news from England respecting the expected dissolution of the Government only corroborates an opinion generally entertained. It may, however, turn out, as suggested in the despatch, that the circulation of the rumor was intended to gather the Liberals for a strong fight over Mr. FAWCETT'S bill.

LATEST FROM LONDON.

The Gladstone Government to Dissolve —Is it a Ruse?

LONDON, April 22.

The Daily News to-day states that it is possible before the close of next week the present Gladstone Cabinet will be dissolved and be succeeded by a Conservative ministry, and that the general election for members of Parliament will be defeated in the House of Commons when a division occurs on Fawcett's bill relative to the University of Dublin, which has been made a cabinet question.

LONDON, April 22.

The two theories now advanced concerning political prediction in the News of this morning, one is that the ministry will really resign if defeated on Fawcett's Dublin university bill; the other, that this announcement has been given out for the purpose of filling the Liberal benches at Session to-night.

The announcement that the dissolution of the ministry was possible, has flattened the financial market.

The Latest Plea by Jonathan.

WASHINGTON, April 20th.

It is now very generally understood here that the Government insists upon maintaining its original position regarding the Alabama claims, for the sole purpose of securing the arbitration of the principle involved. The magnitude of the question and great gain to be attained by its decision has seemingly been overlooked in the discussion of the subject. A decision disallowing the claims would really be of more advantage to the Government for future emergencies than any award of damages for the purpose of having this principle arbitrated and settled for all time to come, so that it might be a precedent in future complications. There is no doubt but that this Government would consent to waive any payment of money for damages that might be awarded, in case of a possible decision adverse to England.

PUBLIC OPINION.

A Good Work.

To the Editor of THE STAR.

SIR,—In accordance with an invitation extended me, I went to Shaftesbury Hall, last evening, to witness the carrying out of the interesting programme, embracing singing by the children, recitation of passages of Scripture, proving certain important truths, &c., this, interwoven, at intervals, by brief speeches from several gentlemen. The whole was carried out in a way which elicited the admiration of the numerous audience, and clearly showed that an important Christian work is being done in this hitherto destitute region of our city. We hope that those interested in this "mission work" may continue to see the work of God prospering in their hands, and that eventually a church, dedicated to the Most High, may be erected as a memorial of their honest Christian labor.

A VISITOR.

Mr. Howley at Friday's Meeting.

To the Editor of THE STAR.

SIR,—Owing, doubtless, to the necessity for condensation inseparable from the columns of all popular organs, where space is so valuable as to be measured line by line, I am set down as saying at the Labor League meeting: "Let them look at a number of others going to the Stock exchange, asking themselves how they could get hold of a million of the citizens' money, and how they would run a line, all meanwhile, to effect this contriving, plotting, and devising with a set of chemers."

The above has been understood as an indication on my part of opposition to Railways. On the contrary, I am altogether in favor of Railway, Canal, and River development, as the indispensable adjuncts of prosperous home industries.

My desire, in the remarks alluded to was to show that existing laws dealt unfairly with the mechanic, or, as usually termed, working classes, and that combinations of other (usually termed better) classes, however much decried, deservedly or undeservedly, by their opponents, were not under the ban of the criminal law, nor were the members of so-called Rings, so long as they were wealthy, of all the less arrest, fine, and imprisonment, in this youngest of nations.

I wanted as distinctly as I knew how to impress upon my hearers the necessity for having not only a Fair-play Tariff, but Fair-play Laws.

With your kind permission, I again repeat I am strongly in favor of railways, &c., &c., in short progress is my standard motto, but I am earnestly opposed to wealthy combinations, being allowed perfect immunity to do as they list, whilst—Shylock-like—law is meted out to those whose only capital is their labor.

Very truly yours,
JAMES HOWLEY.

ROUND TOWN.

— The bakeries of the Eastern Division were inspected on Saturday. All were found correct, save that kept by Pierre Lasalle, in which 25 small loaves were confiscated for light weight.

— No small-pox patients have been admitted into the General Hospital since Monday last, up to which time, however, two deaths had taken place—of a child and adult.

— Fire was this afternoon discovered in a shed in rear of the premises of Mr. Rousseau, butcher, Mountain street. The brigade succeeded in preventing the spread of the flames to the surrounding tenements, but the shed was destroyed. About noon the reels were called out to a blazing chimney.

— Our reporter was misinformed respecting the charge upon which Mr. Davis, the prosecutor in the case against Mrs Gowan, was committed. The charge was that Mr. Davis was about to leave the city while owing Mrs. Gowan a bill—not on a charge of perjury as reported. The case comes up on the 6th of May. Mr. Davis asserts that he owes Mrs. Gowan nothing.

Mr. Shiner, agent for the celebrated Barnabee Troupe of vocalists of Boston, is at the St. Lawrence Hall, making arrangements for their appearance at Mechanics' Hall Friday, May 3. Mr. Joseph Heine, the world renowned blind violinist, will appear, accompanied by Mme. Ada Heine, the distinguished pianist. Mr. Heine was violinist to Her Majesty the Queen and late Prince Consort, in 1863, when they played at several Court concerts, and their journey through Australia were extensively patronized by Lord Lisgar, who at that time was Governor of New South Wales.

CITY MORTALITY.

Last week there were 123 interments in the Roman Catholic cemetery, of which 58 were victims to the small-pox. Two of the deceased were aged 18 and 14 respectively, the rest being young children.

In the Protestant cemetery there were 22 interments; four from small-pox.

This total of forty-two deaths from small-pox shows how urgent is the need for the enforcement of sanitary measures.

A NEW ENTERPRISE.

We are glad to learn that a company is being formed to engage in utilizing the Canadian fisheries. The gentlemen interested are as follows:—Messrs. A. Gilmour, Ottawa; H. Parker & Co., Riviere du Loup (Ile Bas); F. Bond, H. Hogan, S. Waddell, J. H. Joseph, McCulloch Bros., A. M. Cohen, F. Hart, M. Cuvillier, J. Joseph, G. Scott, D. L. MacDougall, A. Clerk, and D. J. Bannatyne, Montreal; of whom the following have been elected directors:—D. L. MacDougall, F. Bond, J. Joseph, M. Cuvillier, and E. Clerk.

ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH.

Yesterday morning the Rev. Canon Bond preached from Genesis iv., part of the 10th verse: "The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto Me from the ground." The rev. gentleman remarked upon the awfulness of the crime of murder, and how still more terrible was the murder of the immortal soul. He then treated, in his usual practical and eloquent style, of the various ways in which soul murders were perpetrated by those who know the truth neglecting to disseminate it; by the rich, the educated, the eloquent neglecting the work of the Master; by apathy in Sunday-school work, in families, at home and abroad; by masters and mistresses enforcing selfish exactions from their servants on the Lord's day and thus depriving them of an opportunity to attend divine worship; by circulating sceptical and other contaminating literature; by immoral songs and conversation.

The reverend gentleman remarked upon the admiration expressed by the world when men and women by courageous self-denial rescued the bodies of their fellow creatures from any impending peril on the battle field, or in the hospital, and how much more to be esteemed were those who rescued souls from the peril of perdition. The preacher acknowledged his own shortcomings, and concluded with an earnest prayer that the Almighty would direct and overshadow pastor and flock.

SPECIAL COURT.

James Coleman was brought up before Judge Coursol this morning for sentence. His Honor in doing so, detailed the offences of which the prisoner had been guilty, and the convictions imposed in consequence by the magistrates; these were sixteen in number, commencing in the year 1866, and comprised eight arraignments for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, smashing windows, &c.; one for house-breaking and robbery, and resisting the police. For the latter of these which occurred on the 29th of September, 1871, Coleman was fined $40 or four months. His Honor remarked that the magistrates seemed to have given lighter sentences as the offences had grown more numerous. He felt bound to impose a sentence, which though less severe than would have been the case had the prisoner been tried before a higher Court, still he hoped its effect would be more durable than those previously received. He then condemned him to three years confinement in the Penitentiary.

James Fisher and Thomas Bissett, arraigned for larcenies, pleaded guilty, and will receive sentences to-morrow morning.

POLICE COURT.

Before W. H. Scriver, P.M.

MONDAY, April 22.

At the Police Court this morning, Therese Skanmessare, a squaw, of Caughnawaga, was fined $3 and costs or two months for vagrancy.

James McConville, the "hopeful" who was mixed up in the Montreal Telegraph Company robbery case, for assaulting Manilla Horse, was fined $2 and costs or one month.

Four lads—named George Trafford, Jeremiah Scanlon, David Laird, and William Hannon—arraigned for stealing a number of iron weights from the premises of Maxwell & Co., coal dealers, Craig street, were fined $3 each or two months.

Edwards, father and son, keepers of a junk store on Bonaventure street, who have been before the Police Magistrate for some time on the charge of receiving stolen goods—the one in question being the weights stolen from Maxwell's yard. The father has been discharged, but the son, who is about 20, has had his trial fixed for the Quarter Sessions June 1st. He is at present out on bail.

NORA'S CRIME;

OR,

THE CAPTAIN'S REVENGE.

"Forgive me! forgive me!" she exclaimed. "It was to save you pain I did it; but come what will you shall know all; come what will, the mystery will end. Philip, yesterday I received a letter. You know how nervous and excitable I am. That letter nearly drove me mad—I could not rest. I fled from the house to weep out my despair alone, under the black night sky. I forgot the flight of time—forgot everything but my own misery, and—you found me, Philip."

"Have you that letter?" he asked.

"I have."

"Show it to me."

"Philip, pity me—forgive me! I have deceived you—deceived you from first to last; but my deception is at an end. Do with me in your anger as you will. Here is the fatal letter."

She drew a folded paper from her pocket. Philip Hatherly, very pale, took, opened, and read it. It was written in a man's hand—a big, slap-dash fist, on the coarsest paper.

LONDON, October 2, 18—.

DEAR BLANCHE,—You'll open your big black eyes a little, I dare say, when they light on this, for I'm about the last chap alive you expected to hear from. You'll be glad to hear that I am out of limbo once more, a-thawing up. Of course, the first thing I did on leaving the stone jug was to inquire about the family. Judge of my grief on hearing the governor was dead; judge of my delight on hearing you had found your rich husband, and were living in the tallest sort of clover down in Wales. Now, my dear sis, you've more money, I expect, than you know what to do with, and I haven't a rap—not a farthing to bless myself with—a very unfair division, as you must own. What I propose this; you send me a thousand pounds immediately upon receipt of this, and I'll quit an ungrateful country, and leave you in peace. You refuse, and, by all the gods and goddesses, I'll go down to Wales, and I'll blow the family secret far and wide, and disgrace you forever before your husband and his aristocratic relations. I'll be a drunkard, and a thief, and—in short I'll be as bad a scoundrel as I know how, and I leave you to guess what that means. Send me the money, or you'll be sorry. Don't send cheques—they're troublesome things. Send a pile of bank-notes to the following address, and show yourself a loving sister to your affectionate brother,

DICK JONES."

Colonel Hatherly read this insolent epistle with a face of blank amazement.

"For heaven's sake, Blanche," he said, "what does it all mean? Your affectionate brother! What is the scoundrel thinking of? You have no brother."

"I told you I had deceived you," sobbed his wife, covering her face. "I have a brother—a half-brother, at least."

I never told you before—I never would have told you, for he was the shame and disgrace of our family; he broke my poor mother's heart. I never expected to hear of him again in this world, and now he has come in the hour of my happiness to torment me and drive me wild."

She sobbed hysterically. Philip listened with a face of densest bewilderment, but yet of intense relief. What was this to the vague, frightful doubts that had been making his existence a misery?

"Blanche, be calm," he said; "tell me all about this. There is no need of all these tears—tell me about this brother."

"He was my mother's son by her first husband," Mrs. Hatherly sobbed; "she was married twice. From his very boyhood he was vicious, and reckless, and unprincipled—the worst boy I ever knew. As he grew up his vices grew with him; he was a liar, a thief, and a drunkard. Still my poor mother bore with him—still my kind father would not cast him off. Finally, a year or two before I met you, he committed a most daring burglary, was detected, tried, and sentenced to eleven years' penal servitude. I never spoke of him to you, Philip—I could not; and, besides, my father had forbidden me ever mentioning his degraded name. There is his story; how he ever came to discover mine heaven knows, but discovered it he has. Do you wonder that, receiving that horrible letter yesterday, I nearly went mad with shame and terror? Philip, I shall die if that wretch comes here."

She uttered the last words with a frantic cry. Colonel Hatherly soothed her as he might a child.

"Be content, my Blanche; he shall not come. Why, you foolish little woman, is this your terrible secret of guilt and despair—the fearful mystery you dare not tell me?"

He smiled brightly down upon her, unutterably relieved. She could not meet that frank, honest smile; she hid her guilty, false face for very shame.

"Is it not enough? Would he not disgrace me for life by coming here? Think of your mother's pride, think of the neighbour's gossip! Oh, it drives me deranged only to fancy it."

"Don't fancy it, then. We shall not let him come."

"But, Philip, the alternative—the insolent, presumptuous wretch! You know it is simply impossible."

"What, to close a vile mouth with a bribe? Not in the impossible! I would give willingly, gladly, five thousand, ten thousand pounds, rather than suffer again what you have made me suffer since last night. We will send this black sheep the money he asks for, and then we will forget him. And, Blanche, my dear, foolish wife, you must promise never to have a secret from me again."

She flung her arms around him, and burst out into an hysterical storm of weeping. They were not false tears this time—she was wrought up to the highest pitch of hysterical emotion. The generosity of the man she loved and was so basely deluding touched her to the core of her heart.

"How good you are! how good you are!" she cried, hysterically; "and to such a false, wicked creature as I am! Oh, Philip, can I ever be worthy of such love as yours?"

"Hush, my darling! these are no words between us. Compose yourself: it troubles me more than I can say to see you in this wildly-excited state. There, be calm—try to sleep. I will leave you now. To-morrow morning I will place the money in your hands, and we will blot from our memory this unpleasant little episode, for the future. Philip Hatherly's wife must have no secrets."

He laid her among the pillows with a fond parting caress, and quited the room. And once again the crafty, conspiring woman was left alone with her maddening remorse.

Colonel Hatherly was prompt to keep his word. Next day at noon, as she sat alone at the piano, he brought her a package done up in brown paper with a smile.

"A gag for your tell-tale brother, Blanche. Send it off as soon as may be, and tell him your husband knows all, and that if he dares show himself here, we'll horse-whip him into the sea."

Without waiting to be thanked, save by one eloquent look, he was gone, and Mrs. Hatherly was triumphant. She held in her hand the price of one year's peace.

Early that morning the carriage was ordered, and Blanche Hatherly drove rapidly to the city. There with her own hands, she despatched her valuable parcel, but not directed to Mr. Richard Jones.

Captain Clopin received his thousand pounds, and laughed aloud in his triumph as he counted over the crisp bank-notes.

"You're a wonderful woman, my Nora," he said to himself, "a woman in ten thousand! Now, how did you manage to beg, borrow, or steal this, I wonder? My poor colonel!—my poor, confiding, gullible colonel, you are to be pitied! But I'll keep my promise; you shall have your handsome wife for the next eight years, supposing your handsome wife is a lady of her word. I daresay she has been passing her pretty head in vain many a time to discover the cause of the eight years' amnesty. Ah, my lads! you don't know the story of Amy Russell, of my pretty Foley, and how I tricked you there, or of our bright little Charles Selwyn. In eight years those children will be young ladies, and my sister little Charley a bright-eyed doctor, and marriageable. The blow that strikes you will be all the sharper for your eight years' peace. By the bye, I think I can afford to run down and see my protegee."

With the cool captain to decide was to act. A week later, and with all his affairs in London settled, he was on his way to Sunny Beach; and late one blustery October afternoon the train set him down at the lonely station, the only passenger for the stagnant little village.

Captain Clopin refreshed himself after his dusty journey by a luxurious bath and dinner at [illegible] arrived as he watched along lights twinkled already in the grey October gloaming from the cottage windows; the dead leaves, russet and red, whirled in drifts about him in the shrill autumn blast. No other sound, no other sights, broke the dead monotony of the place.

"'And I said, if there's peace to be found in the world, a heart that is humble might hope for it here,'" quoted the captain, internally, "and yet that pretty sentiment is only bosh after all. Don't we read every day of murders done in peaceful fields, under the waving trees; of all the horrors of the vilest city warfare perpetrated in rustic hamlets by the heartless dwellers therein? Yes, human nature is the same in green country lanes and reeking city alleys—vile, vile, vile!"

The pretty white cottage among the climbing roses and sweetbriar was sparkling with light as the captain opened the little gate. The roses were left dead now, and only bare, brown stalks rattled in the wind, but the cheery light of fire and lamp streamed ruddily out into the bleak gloaming.

The shop window was quite dazzling with its brave display of ribbons and roses, caps and bonnets, dolls and picture-books, and fancy ware generally.

Captain Clopin's knock was answered by a trim little maid, who ushered him in at once into the parlour where Mrs. Selwyn and her son sat at tea. Mother and son arose with a simultaneous cry of surprise and pleasure at sight of their visitor.

"Now, don't disturb yourselves," cried the captain, imploringly. "Go on with your supper; no, no, nothing for me. I dined half an hour ago at the hotel. You didn't expect me did you? Ah! I couldn't quit the country without running down to see my little doctor got on. Have you fully realized the change yet, Mrs. Selwyn?"

He shook hands heartily, forced them back to their seats at the table, and spread out his boots to the genial influence of the blaze. Very cosy looked the little parlour, with its bright fire, its clean lamp, its neat supper table so bountifully spread. Captain Clopin actually felt a glow of kindly pleasure as he glanced around and thought, "this is all my work."

"And how well you are both looking," he said; "positively you are over better than when I saw you last. I thought the country air and the new milk and fresh butter would work wonders. And how does the new little shop get on?"

The nice little shop did miraculously. The business had increased so greatly, even in the short time Mrs. Selwyn had been there, that she had been obliged to engage a servant to do the household work, and a little damsel to attend behind the counter. Her own time was fully occupied in making up the pretty caps, bonnets, collars, sleeves and so forth, of the Sunny Beach misses and matrons. Her dark eyes sparkled, and her color rose with such an enthusiastic flush, as she told him, that she looked ten years younger and prettier in a moment.
