PRATTE NORDHEIMER GLENDON Patti to Steinway. "During my artistic career in the art center of the world I have used the pianos of nearly all celebrated manufacturers, but none of them can be compared to yours, none possess such a marvellous degree of sympathetic, poetic and singing tone quality which distinguishes the Steinway as peerless among them."

PRATTE, NORDHEIMER & GLENDON, 2461 St. Catherine St. (Above Drummond St.) who thus refer to it, and Mr. Gagey. After the Globe interview was published Mr. Gagey was asked by R. Thorburn whether he was not carrying out what had been advocated through the country in his campaign, and he answered yes, he was taking an independent stand, that he would support the Government in power in bringing forward good instruments in connection with the Island and New Ontario.

CHAMBERLAIN IN ACCORD. Dr. Chamberlain is in accord with this version of the conversation of the 13th January, and his evidence may be thus abstracted: 13th January, 1903, Dr. Chamberlain saw Mr. Gagey at the Provincial Secretary's office.

PROTEST AND PATRONAGE. The Commissioners now proceed to consider in the light of the evidence already summarized and of other evidence, the question of the protest and of this enquiry, that is, as to the protest and the patronage, and both are to be treated together.

ANOTHER DIFFERENCE. Mr. Gagey gives a very different version of what occurred on the 13th January. He admits that his conduct as to North Perth election, and license board appointments, was discussed, and that Dr. Chamberlain was called in, and that he promised to come down some time later on.

TOKEN OF GOOD FAITH. The letter of the 10th September was suggested by Mr. Aylesworth to the sign of Mr. Gagey. If Mr. Gagey was really, as he stated, a supporter of the Government, he would not have signed the letter of the 10th September, which was a correct expression of his sentiments in writing, in accord with his many early utterances on the same line.

Every Sign of Rain, But No Rain Comes

The indications for weeks have been favorable for rain, but no rain came. The rain may fall in torrents any day, and that is probably the way it will come. We offer the following

REPORT OF GAMEY COMMISSION

There is nothing in the evidence to lead to the belief that Mr. Grant acted in these elections in a manner more than Mr. Bristol, whose conduct has not been impugned.

GRANT'S ACTION.

There is nothing in the evidence to lead to the belief that Mr. Grant acted in these elections in a manner more than Mr. Bristol, whose conduct has not been impugned.

Proceeding now to deal with the matter of patronage though it is mentioned in the statement set forth in no emphatic manner, as compared with the alleged money payments, but to appreciate the value of what is mentioned in the statement.

There is abundant trustworthy testimony thus pointing clearly to the conclusion that before Mr. Gamey became a candidate he had resolved, if elected, to support any Government in power in the avowed interests of Manitoulin and New Ontario.

GAMEY'S GREAT POINT.

The great point with Mr. Gamey was to avoid resigning, and also to avoid the prospect of remaining a member by professing adherence to the Ross Government, even by going so far as to put a declaration to that effect in writing.

Mr. Gamey's plan, adopted after conference with Mr. McGregor, secretary of the Manitoulin Conservative Association at Gore Bay, is thus expressed in his own words in the statement:

"We decided that I would have to give the Government evidence that I really believed in them, and only by fully convincing them could we hope to get any evidence or attack any of the Cabinet; so far, we had no evidence against any of the members."

It is well-known to all that bad blood is the direct cause of all skin diseases and it is necessary for the blood to be cleansed before the eruptions will disappear. For this purpose there is nothing so equal as Burdock Blood Bitters as the thousands of testimonials we have on hand will testify.

Mr. Willard Thompson, McNeill's Mills, F.E.I., writes us as follows: "I wish to state to you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Some time ago my blood got out of order and many boils appeared on my neck, legs and arms. They were so painful that I could not sleep at night. After having tried many different remedies without any success, I finally decided, on the advice of a friend, to use Burdock Blood Bitters. Before I had quite used two bottles the boils had completely disappeared, and I was able to sleep at night. I think Burdock Blood Bitters is the best blood purifier on the market today."

FROM LAST TO FIRST

People used to take plain cod liver oil for coughs, colds, throat and lung troubles after other remedies had failed. Scott's Emulsion is the modern idea of cod liver oil—the first instead of the last resort when such ailments appear.

The taste of the oil is not apparent and the oil itself is partly digested—makes it easy for the stomach. Scott's Emulsion is a quick, reliable help at all ages.

THE GAMEY FINDING.

The finding of the judges in the Gamey investigation is so sweeping as, at first sight, to occasion some surprise. The people who read newspapers, that is to say everybody, have formed opinions from day to day, and without reasoning much upon the evidence have been rather disquieted, by the nature of much of the testimony adduced. They probably expected, without thinking much about it, that something of this would be mirrored in the finding of the commissioners. Out of the evidence given, for example, there has already arisen a scandal in one of the committees of the Legislature, and an important official has been dismissed for complicity in selling for $500 a timber limit which was afterwards appraised at $5,000. On the other hand, however, it is readily recognized that the impression made upon the public by casual incidents could have no place in the finding of the judges, whose duty was to decide as between the accused minister and his accuser. When this is the issue, there is nothing for it but to concur in the opinion of the judges that Mr. Gamey failed to make good his accusations against Mr. Stratton, and that, on the contrary, he himself is shown in a very bad light. Everybody has felt, since the day Mr. Gamey went to Buffalo, that his case had broken down, and that he could not establish his charges against the minister. The trial was really over when it became known that leaves had been torn out of the Crossin cash book, and that a deposit slip had been made away with. Evidence which might have shown where Gamey really did get the money was removed or destroyed, Gamey disappeared, and only returned after his action had spread consternation amongst those acting with him, and after Mr. Blake had expressed his desire to withdraw from the post of chief counsel for the prosecution. This was the salient feature of the trial, and it is not surprising that two eminent judges, whose training and duty it is to sift the wheat from the chaff in interpreting evidence, have laid stress upon it. For the rest, whatever the political prejudices of opponents of the Ross Government might make them over-willing to believe, and however much the unpleasant details of election trials might prepare the general public for substantiation of charges of bribery when made by a member from his place in the Legislature, the bare fact is that the prosecution wholly failed to make good the accusation against Mr. Stratton, wholly failed to establish by sworn evidence the charges so confidently preferred against him and against his colleagues. The Gamey investigation has not produced a spectacle of which Canada should be proud. But the commission was named with the intention of getting at the truth, however unpleasant it might be, and that commission, composed of two of the ablest judges on the bench, one a Conservative before his appointment, and the other a Liberal, as able and impartial a tribunal as was ever formed in Canada, has decided that the evidence exonerates Mr. Stratton, the accused, and compromises Mr. Gamey, the accuser. And any fair-minded man, even without going minutely into the evidence, must admit that probably, had he been in the judges' place, he would have arrived at the same conclusion.

CANADA'S PART IN THE NEW BRITISH CONTROVERSY.

As the days go by it becomes more and more evident that the British political waters are deeply stirred by Mr. Chamberlain's action in attacking free trade. It has long been assumed that by some magical process the mind of the Englishman had been rendered immune to the protectionist germ, but the events of the past year have indicated clearly enough that, even after fifty years, something of a once dominant protectionist sentiment remains. When Mr. Balfour explained to a deputation of land owners the other day the reasons that moved the Government to repeal the corn tax, he was driven by their protests to remind them that they were the natural successors to the protectionist party of corn law days, and that in their case, as in the case of the working classes afraid of dear bread, the old political passions had been revived. From the subsequent discussions it has become fairly clear that still other questions are raised, and other lines of political cleavage revealed. The corn law days were also the days of what was called the colonial system, under which the trade of the colonies was held to be rightly subject to regulation by and in the interest of the mother country, and under which the colonies were taxed as the British Parliament thought they should be, and for such purposes as to the British Parliament seemed expedient in the interest of the Empire. The colonial system and the corn laws disappeared together, Sir Robert Peel resting his case upon the dual principle that it was best for Great Britain to import freely that her manufacturers might undersell their competitors, and that the good-will of the colonies could best be secured by leaving them free to work out their own destinies, and relying upon those ties of affection which he expected would be the stronger for being relieved of all strain. There were always in England those who disputed both premises, and since Mr. Chamberlain's views have found expression, he is supported by those who believe in the policy of dividing the energy of the colonies from Great Britain and for the benefit of Great Britain. On the other hand, as the protectionist reaction, support from these quarters naturally excites the opposition of men who are convinced that the superiority of the British Empire over all other nations is due to the political systems in use, and the departure made by her statesmen when they arranged for the utmost possible freedom of individual action in trade, and for the removal of restraints upon the political action of colonies peopled by men imbued with the principles of British law and working under British forms of government.

These are the issues raised, and it would be unwise to predict too readily on which side the preponderance of influence will be found to be. Once the controversy has been started in, that old land, with its old world traditions, and with the interests of forty millions of people immediately involved, it were futile to expect that the controversy might be limited to that detail of its which Canadians chance to be interested in, and that Canadian action has furnished the immediate occasion for dispute. Still, it is as well to be clear about what part Canada plays in the controversy.

There is no reason to suppose that Mr. Chamberlain is under any misapprehension on this point. He thought in 1897 that an arrangement might be made for free trade within the Empire. He still thought so last year. But at the London conference he conceded his mistake. He was assured by the Canadian Ministers that Canada was obliged to have regard for the safety of industries established under a protective system, and was not prepared to reduce below the present standard the duties on British goods entering into competition with Canadian-made goods. Mr. Chamberlain was obliged to accept that, and did accept it. He knows, whatever his supporters may hope for, that this is the basis on which Canadian opinion rests. When he decided to go on he knew of this reservation.

The Canadian position, in fact, is set out in the report of the conference. Mr. Chamberlain took the ground that while Englishmen were greatly pleased with Canada's preferential treatment of British goods, it had not, in his opinion, been of so much advantage to British trade as Canadians were disposed to claim. He added that if England were to reciprocate for the preference Canada would be expected to make much more substantial concessions to British trade than had been accorded by her voluntary preference.

To this the Canadian Ministers replied that, if Great Britain were willing to do something for Canadian trade, Canada would be prepared to supplement her present legislation in any or all of three ways. First, duties might be reduced on some lines of British produce. This we take to mean that such reductions would apply to goods that may now be taxed for revenue purposes, and which do not meet with Canadian competition. Second, that where British goods entered into competition with the goods of other countries, Canada would be prepared to raise her tariff against the other countries, thus increasing the British advantage. The German surtax, excepted though it be, may doubtless be taken as an indication of the line to be followed. Finally, in the case of goods now on the free list, and which experience shows might be purchased both in Great Britain and elsewhere, a tariff charge might be made upon such materials when imported from elsewhere than Great Britain.

This is what Canada has offered, and this the most Mr. Chamberlain can claim. He has the right to offer the British people as an inducement for changing their free trade system: He may hope that more may come as the years pass, and he may induce others to share his hopes, but that is what he has now to go upon. It is interesting to note that the Australians are adopting the Canadian position. They say they will maintain their tariff against British goods where there is a Australian competition, and will raise their tariff against other countries. It is for the people of Great Britain to decide whether it is consistent with their interests to make, in return for these concessions, such sacrifice of other trade as might be involved. They are evidently approaching the subject with a determination to examine all its bearings, and to make up their minds only after full deliberation. Nowhere else in the world has the art of government by discussion been so highly developed as in Great Britain, and for that reason, whatever the decision arrived at, and whatever the effect of that decision upon the future of Canada may be, the standard of controversy is bound to be so high that all the world is apt to be the better for the working of this, its most effective intellectual leaven.

MAYOR COCHRANE INSISTS UPON FORFEIT PAYMENT

His Worship Declares the Warren Company Cannot Carry Out Contract With City.

The Mayor delivered himself yesterday in the Board Committee of the ideas that have been agitated by His Worship's mind ever since the opening of the season when street repairs should have been made, and were not.

When he entered the meeting he shot an enquiry at the chairman as to when Dorchester Street was going to be paved. Ald. Vallieres could make no definite reply, but he explained that the delay had been due to strikes and the failure of the asphalt plant contracted for by the city, to put in an appearance.

Woodland Players Give Two Comedies on McGill Campus

On the green sward of McGill campus with the maple and ash forming leafy bowers and the birds trilling notes of accompaniment to the exquisite music, Ben Greets company, which is touring the continent under the auspices of the Charles Frohman combination, gave performances in the open air yesterday afternoon and evening of Shakespeare's comedies "As You Like It" and "The Comedy of Errors," that will linger long in the memories of those who witnessed them.

The quality of the company had been amply demonstrated before Montreal audiences in the recent production of the old morality play "Everyman," and the echoes of the successes of the open air performances in the grounds of the leading "amateur" universities had stimulated the imagination and created high expectations of what was to come, but it cannot be gainsaid that the pleasure derived from the delightful phantasmagoria of the lovers of the Forest of Arden, was greater than the anticipations formed, glowing as they may have been.

Nothing could have better served the purpose of a natural stage than the corner of the campus, with its arborial surroundings, fenced by bushes and foliage, and there could have been no better carpet than the rich green sward. The large audience consisting of many of the students and the college professors, with their wives and daughters, and a charming auditorium in front of the stage.

No play is better adapted than "As You Like It" for production in the open, breathing as it does the very atmosphere of the forest. The court scene that made up the first act was omitted in the representation, it is assumed that the audience is familiar with the banishment of the duke and that his daughter Rosalind has been driven through a labyrinth into exile by the usurper Frederick.

With her cousin Celia and the court fool Touchstone, Rosalind sets out to seek the banished duke in the Forest of Arden, she herself being disguised as a page, and Celia, who has fallen under the usurper's displeasure, finds a refuge, and the meeting between Rosalind and Orlando is the central scene of the play.

The performance opens with the famous lines spoken by the Duke, who, with his attendant lords, appear in the attire of the forest.

"Are not the woods More free from peril than the envious court?" Here feel we the penalty of Adam. The seasons' difference, the leaf-fall, and the chirping of the winter's wind. Which, when it bites and blows upon my body, Ever till I shrink with cold, I smile and say— This is no flattery: there are counsellors That falsely persuade me 'twas I am— Very swiftly the morn'g and the twilight of forest life develop, and the audience is entertained in the sparkling dialogue to the most delicious love phantasmagoria that has been conceived by the pen of man. No finer character has been produced by the great master than Rosalind, who, masquerading as a page, undertakes to cure Orlando of his love mainly by her own wit and charm. She had already experienced the keenest delight from the verses, singing Rosalind's praises, which dripped from the trees as it were, and she had confessed the authorship. It is unnecessary to follow the development of this delightful comedy, so well-known to all, but one may note with what subtle penetration the great poet makes his diagnosis of love—a diagnosis which is fully confirmed by the new psychology of the day that treats love as a mental disease to be speedily cured if one would be fit for rational work.

"Love," says Rosalind who, with her strong affection for Orlando preserves throughout a most wholesome sanity, "is merely madness, and I do not see how he can be cured of it, but I will serve as well a dark house and a whip as madmen do, and the reason why they are not so punished and cured is that the lunacy is so ordinary that the whippers are in love with it. Yet, I profess curing it by counsel."

"Did you ever cure any so?" Innocently asks Orlando?

"Yes, once the fair Rosalind replies, "and in this manner. He was to imagine me his love, his mistress, and I set him every day to woo me; at which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing and liking; proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of tears, full of self-love, for every petty cause; and for no passion truly any thing, as boys and women are for the most part cattle of this color, would I have him, then forsake him; now weep for him, then spit at him; that I drove my auditor from his mad humor of love to a livelier brain, that he might, which was to forsake the full stream of the world and to live in a nook merely monastic. And thus I cured one which should be discussed before a full House.

MR. POPE'S QUESTION. Hon. Mr. Tarte asked if it would not be better to purchase these supplies by tender. He expressed the opinion that it would.

Hon. Mr. Fielding said the system of obtaining supplies was the same which had been followed by the last Government, and this for many years. Hon. Mr. Tarte said he had tried both systems, and he recommended tenders.

THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION SAID THAT THE CIRCULAR SYSTEM WAS USED BY THE FORMER ADMINISTRATION, BUT HE THOUGHT THAT THE SYSTEM OF TENDERS SUPPLIES BY TENDER SHOULD BE ADOPTED UNDER THIS GOVERNMENT.

Mr. F. D. Monk said the report of the Auditor-General showed the adoption of the system of tenders supplies by tender would save the country from 30 per cent. to 50 per cent. Hon. Mr. Fielding said that the prices of the goods had to be certified to by a responsible agent, an official of the Government. They had to state that the prices were fair and reasonable.

Mr. Tarte said he found it necessary to have the prices of these agents checked pretty closely. Mr. Fielding said Mr. Tarte assumed that the Public Works Department was the only one that checked its accounts. The Marine Department also checked its accounts.

After five and a half hours talk without a dollar being gained, the vote for the harbor and river service was passed, amounting to the sum of $120,500. The Opposition wanted to quit at this just as it was a quarter to two. The Government wanted a little more money for hydrographic surveys, $50,000 for marine hospitals and $21,500 for steam boat inspection were voted.

Mr. Frank Oliver asked if the Canadian Pacific Railway lands in the Northwest were now subject to school rates as a result of the recent legal decisions by the Manitoba courts. Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick said the Government understood this was the case.

THE CUSTOMS ACT. The bill of Hon. Mr. Paterson to amend the customs act, was given a third reading after two hours discussion. The bill provides for the appointment of a deputy commissioner and the interpretation of the word "goods."

Mr. Monk objected to the continued employment of members of the customs staff on a temporary basis. In amendment to the bill he moved that temporary employees be engaged in the customs service for more than six months, without qualifying under the civil service test.

Mr. W. F. Maclean wanted to know if the Government had any information in regard to Germany's attitude toward the surtax.

THE FINANCE MINISTER REPLIED THERE HAD BEEN NOTHING OFFICIAL. THE GOVERNMENT WAS INTERESTED IN STATEMENTS APPEARING IN THE PRESS ON THE MATTER.

YESTERDAY IN THE SENATE. Before the meeting of the Senate to-day the Senators in town attended the Committee of Privileges and Elections report of the clerk, dated 18th March last, that Hon. L. Masson had not attended for two sessions.

On the motion of Hon. Mr. Scott it was resolved that Mr. Masson be requested by the Clerk to state whether he had any reason to advance why he should be considered as having vacated the office and the committee adjourned till the eleventh instant.

The following bills were read a third time and passed: To incorporate the Quebec, Saguenay and Gulf of St. Lawrence Railway Company, to incorporate the Coast Yukon Railway Company, to incorporate the Kootenay, Cariboo and Pacific Railway Company, to incorporate the Joliette & Lake Manuan Colonization Railway Company, respecting the Great Northern Central Railway Company, whose contract calls for a four years' guarantee of repairs, object to making repairs that are not due to ordinary wear and tear. They offered to do the repairs if reimbursed by the city, who had permitted the Street Railway Company to tear up the pavement, thereby destroying the grade of the street and raising the level of the rails.

The Sicily Asphalt Company has come in for so much abuse, and considers itself so unjustly treated, that it did not tender on the new contracts.

Ald. Gallery urged that the street should not be left in its present condition because of the extension of the C.P.R. yards at Dalhousie station. It will be remembered that when proprietors protested against the plan, and some refused to sell to the railway, the Road Committee decided to obtain an official valuation and to add 20 per cent. to this to arrive at a fair price of sale.

The streets in question are Commissioners Street, east of St. Timothee to Panet and the southern end of Wolfe, Montcalm, Beaudry, Barclay and Brock Street ramp. Mr. Balfour did not consider that the closing of Montcalm and Beaudry Streets would hurt proprietors, as it could not affect access to the wharf. These streets are so steep that heavy loads can scarcely negotiate them.

MISS FAIRMAN A BRIDE.

A very pretty wedding took place yesterday afternoon at St. James Methodist Church, when Miss Frieda Fairman, youngest daughter of Mrs. Frederick Fairman, Westmount, was married to Dr. Arthur Seymour Burgess, of this city. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Wilson Fairman, and wore a charming gown of white liberty gown with trimmings of accordion pleated chiffon and lace insertion, tulle veil and orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and white roses. Her groom, Miss Muriel Fairman, who was maid of honor, wore a sun-pleated gown of white crepe de chine with white tulle veil and bouquet of pink roses. Mr. F. Darling, St. Paul, was best man, and the ushers were the Messrs. Norman and Bruce Stewart, Mr. Henry Christmas and Mr. Arthur Lee. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Flanders, of Stanstead, cousin of the bride. The church was beautifully decorated with palms and flowers. In the centre aisle, which were reserved for the guests, two large arches of smilax and snowballs were erected, roped off with white ribbon. About 125 invitations were issued to the wedding and to the reception which followed at the residence of the bride's mother, 107 Côte St. Antoine Road. Dr. and Mrs. Burgess left by the evening train for New York, Washington and Boston, and on their return will reside at 28 Durocher Street. The bride's going-away gown was of blue and white tulle with heavy face lace, and continental hat of blue and green straw. The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond ring set with diamonds and pearls, and to the bridesmaid a pearl brooch.

M'AULAY-FERGUSON. A pretty wedding took place Tuesday night at the residence of Mr. D. Ferguson, corner of Cottages, No. 2, Ottawa Street, St. Thomas, Ont., when his second daughter, Miss Mary L. Ferguson, was united in marriage to Mr. Robert H. McLaughlin, of the Grand Mere Co., Montreal. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. R. Drummond, Miss Kathleen McAulay, acted as bridesmaid, and Hector Ferguson as groomsmen. Mr. and Mrs. McAulay left for their future home in Montreal, taking the trip down the St. Lawrence.

EVANS-SMYTH. In St. Phillip's Church, Toronto, Tuesday afternoon, Miss Charlotte M. Smyth, daughter of Mr. H. Larry Smyth, became the wife of Mr. F. Percival Evans, of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Dean Evans of this city, assisted by Canon Sweny, rector of St. Phillip's. The bride wore a gown of white satin and also the bridegroom's gift, a diamond and emerald brooch. A long bridal veil fell in soft folds over the beautiful plain skirt. A Dunlop bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley was carried by the bride. The bride was attended by Miss Macdonald of Cobourg as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Kathleen McAulay, Miss Mary L. Ferguson, Miss Hestha Smyth, of Montreal, while Mr. Evan Lewis, brother of the bridegroom performed the duties of best man. The gifts of the bridegroom and Gulton, of Cobourg, were the ushers. Jenny Lind

In passing an almshouse, talked with an old woman there, who confided to her that she longed to hear Jenny Lind sing before she died,—but of course that is impossible for me," she said.

"Don't be so sure of that," said the strange lady—"sit down and listen!" And the poor old woman, still weeping over the wonderful music, was told that Jenny Lind herself had just been singing to her alone.

GREAT ALTERATION SALE

Beginning To-morrow and Ending 30th June.

AS we contemplate making extensive alterations to our premises, which will in a measure interrupt our business for a considerable time, we have decided to give the public an opportunity of laying in a stock of goods at

PRICES HITHERTO UNHEARD OF.

The Discounts on Regular Prices will vary from 10 to 50 per cent.

And a special feature of this sale will be that instead of allowing 5 per cent. extra for cash as is our usual custom, we will offer the liberal inducement of 10 per cent. Extra for Cash.

We offer this big discount for cash, because our experience during regular January sales is, that the amount of goods charged is fully as much as the office staff can handle, and as we anticipate a greater rush now, there would be no chance of the clerks getting holidays in July unless the pressure were relieved by having more of the goods paid for over the counter.

N.B.—It is distinctly understood that only goods paid for at the counter, or where sent C. O. D. will be entitled to the 10 per cent. cash discount; everything charged in the books will come under our regular terms, viz: 4 per cent. in 15 days, or 3 per cent. in 30 days.

MAIL ORDERS as usual will receive Special Attention, but Out-of-town Customers would do well to order promptly, as lots will be sold out quickly.
