

WHY JAPANESE SOUGHT PEACE

The Fear of a Financial Breakdown Supplied
the Motive.

CROPS PROVED A FAILURE

Rice Yield Was Nearly Twenty Per Cent. Below the Average—War Meant Very Hard Times.

Tokyo, Sept. 30.—Notwithstanding the silence of the Government, the real fact is disclosed that Japan made peace at Portsmouth in fear of a financial breakdown. The war proved more costly than had been calculated and the rice and cereal crops seemed doomed to failure. Instead of sunlight and warmth during the month of August, when the crops ripen, there was continuous rain and exceedingly cold weather. While some improvement may still be in store, it is certain that the rice crop promises to be from fifteen to twenty per cent. below the average and far below last year's crop, when it was marvellously large. Six months more of war would have meant very hard times for the masses of the people as very poor and rice is their bread and meat.

EXPERT TO ADVISE ON ICEBREAKERS

Hon. Raymond Prefontaine
Makes This Important
Announcement.

Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 30.—(Special)—Hon. Raymond Prefontaine, who returned to the city yesterday informed your correspondent that an expert was on his way from London, Eng. to confer with the minister and the department in regard to the construction of an ice breaker to aid in maintaining continuous communication between Prince Edward Island and the mainland. The expert comes here to see what is wanted.

The Minister says that dog fish reduction works at Canso, N. S., which have a capacity of 100 tons a day, are now handling eighty tons per day.

SIX MILLION BUSHELS FORM A NEW RECORD

Up to Date C.P.R. Report Indicates Gigantic Crop of the North-West.

The increase in the amount of grain marketed to the different stations of the C. P. R. in the North West still goes on and from present indications it would seem as if last year's figures would be trebled.

The latest report received at the head offices of the C. P. R. gives the total up to Wednesday evening Sept. 27. Up to that time there had been 5,750,000 bushels of grain brought to the different stations from the harvest fields. These figures form a new record in the history of wheat-raising in the North West and they also indicate with what promptness and despatch the golden harvest is being carried off and brought to market. This report indicates clearly that last year's figures are dwarfed into insignificance by it, as during this same period in 1904 the number of bushels marketed numbered only 2,000,000, almost 4,000,000 bushels less than this year.

The receipts of grain at the C. P. R. elevator at Fort William also show a phenomenal increase. Up to Thursday, the 25th inst., no less than 1,612,000 bushels of grain had been received, as compared with 42,000 bushels received during the same period of 1904.

RUMOR CURRENT THAT HAULTAIN WILL RETIRE

Regina, Sask., Sept. 30.—(Special)—There is a strong rumor current here emanating from Weyburn, in South Qu'Appelle, Haultain is to retire from that constituency, and that Mr. H. Haultain, of Weyburn Herald, or some other gentleman, will take up the task of carrying on the provincial rights banner.

Toronto, September 30.—Much frankness characterized the speeches delivered at the banquet to the American Importers Association at the Hotel Edward Hotel last night.

Mr. W. K. George, chairman, told the visitors that for the present at least, reciprocity was not for Canadians.

Mr. Byron E. Walker, in discussing commercial relations, said there "was a time when Canadians were terrorized at the thought of losing the United States market, but that feeling had passed away, and they had found markets somewhere else for their products. He assured them that Canada could wait for twenty years if necessary."

A cable has been received from the Colonial Office stating that Lord Lansdowne had asked the British minister at St. Petersburg to lay the matter before the Russian Government with a view of having the parties released.

HERE THEY ARE AGAIN!

THE HARBOR BOARD A LAUGHING STOCK

President Mackay Calls the Commissioners Down for Dilatory Conduct

Once again yesterday afternoon Hon. Robert Mackay, president of the Harbor Board, severely scored that body for its dilatory and ineffectual method of doing business. He has frequently criticized their methods before, but never with quite so much frankness as yesterday, partly owing to the fact that Mr. Doran engaged in rather a sharp discussion with him on the subject.

This outburst of plain speaking was the result of a renewed discussion on the progress estimates of Messrs. Peter Lyall & Son, in connection with their work on the permanent shops, in which no formal contract has been made as well as work on the original contract. This whole matter has been discussed and re-discussed at every meeting of the Board for a long time past, and a good deal of irritation was manifested by some of the commissioners. The argument in fact was merely a resumption of a heated discussion at last meeting, when an estimate of $3,366 was left over for further light. Nor were the contractors paid yesterday.

For over an hour the commissioners talked over how it had all happened, and why work should be going on without a contract, and who was responsible for such a state of affairs, until the president lost his patience.

"These long discussions are not doing any good for the work of this Board," he remarked. "You come here to meeting after meeting and argue and wrangle, so that instead of getting ahead with the business of the Board it is getting more and more delayed."

Mr. Doran, who had been taking a prominent part in the previous discussion, took this remark to himself.

"Oh, you're making a resumption of the newspapers," he replied.

The president retorted that he was doing nothing of the kind, but that he was certainly entitled to express his opinion occasionally, even though Mr. Doran did make frequent speeches.

Mr. Doran—"If you would conduct the business of this Board, and not allow matters to get down at last meeting to be brought up again, there would be less delay."

The president—"There will be delay wherever you are."

At this point the president rose to his feet and tried to urge the Board to take a decision on the subject of doing business.

"The business of this Board," he said, "can never be properly conducted as we have been going. It is time that we decided to do more and talk less. Our conduct up here as Harbor Commissioners is becoming simply a farce. I am positive that one good man with an expert knowledge of the harbor's requirements, could make better headway than the eleven members here. I have said this before, and I say it again."

Yes, and you think you're that man," interposed Mr. Doran.

"I do nothing of the sort," replied the chairman. "I had hoped to have been relieved of this office long ago, and if you care to know it, I asked to be relieved of the presidency. You must think I am very fond of this office, but I can assure you I never undertook anything which I since regretted so much. We are simply becoming a laughing stock for the community."

HAULTAIN DEFINES CAMPAIGN ISSUES

The Electoral Battle to Be Fought on Provincial Rights.

Portage la Prairie, September 30.—Hon. F. W. G. Haultain, leader of the Opposition in Saskatchewan, was in town yesterday, en route to Saltcoats and Yorkton, where conventions are being held to select supporters for his party. Interviewed on Western issues, the ex-premier said the campaign was progressing satisfactorily so far as he was concerned. He emphatically stated that his was the "Provincial Rights" party, and that Conservatives, as a party were not in the fight. He maintained he had many Liberals supporting him. The main issues, he said, were "Provincial Rights" and the school question. As to the result of the fight would be close, but Mr. Haultain expected to win out. He had ten or twelve supporters in the field now. He thought the elections would be over by November 15. He and his party maintained the rights of the province had been invaded in the Autonomy bills, and if elected he would make a test case of the points at issue in the highest courts. Mr. Haultain had no comment to make on the calling of Hon. Walter Scott to the Premiership. Touching Kewatin he expressed the belief that there would never be separate schools there.

BENNETT WILL HANG FOR MURDER OF BETSY JACOBS

Brandon, Ont., Sept. 30.—The Bennett murder case occupied the court all yesterday. The afternoon was taken up with addresses to the jury by counsel for the Crown and defence, and the judge's charge to the jury, which was against the prisoner, Bennett. The jury retired at 6.30 and returned at 11.30 with a verdict of guilty.

On July 1st, last, with her head badly bruised and the marks of a murderer's fingers on her throat, Betsy Jacobs, an Indian woman, about fifty years of age, living at one of the Oshkewen reserves, was found in her lonely cottage. She was a cripple and unmarried. Joe Bennett, a husky Indian, was at once suspected, a letter which he had received from the post office only the night before having been found beside the dead woman's body.

Bennett skipped out, and after a thrilling chase, lasting several days, was captured in a bush about fifty miles from the scene of the tragedy. There were no valuables in the Jacobs' house and Bennett's motive for committing the crime remains unexplained. He had a bad record previously.

WITNESS BEAUVAIS COULDN'T BE FOUND

Evidence was continued this morning in the Court of King's Bench in connection with the charge of murder preferred against Charles Kernick, when there was again a considerable attendance of the public.

When Mrs. Kernick concluded her testimony yesterday afternoon the Crown representatives stated that the missing witness Beauvais had been located and was expected to be present to take the stand to-day. Before the court rose yesterday, however, the deposition of Beauvais was read to the court by stenographer Tanner, and was to the effect that hearing screams from Ile Ronde on the forenoon of August 3, he rowed there from Perrot Island, a short distance away, and found Mrs. Kernick and her husband who told him of the drowning of Mitchell, and asked to be taken across to Pointe Claire. Witness rowed Mrs. Kernick to Bay View only, as he did not care to go all the way. Kernick himself was drunk at the time and remained to look after the cooking utensils.

NEW STEAMER FOR THE QUEBEC ROUTE

R. & O. Company Decide Upon Important Additions to Fleet.

Consequent upon the encouragement of an exceptionally successful season the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Company has decided upon the construction of another steamer for the Quebec route equal in magnitude to the Montreal, and also two steamers suitable to run the rapid route to Tadoussac and the Manoir Richelieu, will be enlarged and improved.

The expenditure involved may run into a million dollars, but Mr. Forget, M.P., the president, and his co-directors, believe the time is ripe for a considerable extension and improvement of the well known R. & O. service.

SIR THOS. SHAUGHNESSY IS BACK FROM THE COAST

SENATOR CLORAN A CANDIDATE

Will Present Himself as the Irish Catholic
Champion.

MANY URGED HIM TO RUN

Senator Says He Has Promise of Support From All Classes, as Good as Races.

Senator H. J. Cloran will be a candidate for the mayoralty, as a champion of the Irish Catholics, whose turn it is for the office, he claims.

Discussing the position yesterday the senator said that he had been approached by many French-Canadians as well as English-speaking Protestants and people of his own race, and urged to become a candidate. While he did not admit having given a definite consent, Senator Cloran let it be pretty clearly understood that he intended to enter the field. He said he had no special mission to announce himself for so important a position, but that he would be more than proud to hold so honorable an office.

"But you have been asked to offer your services," was asked.

"Certainly I have, but I would not take any action until Mayor Laporte announced whether or not he would accept a second term."

Mayor Laporte so emphatically announced that he would not run for the office again I felt bound to seriously consider the matter. I may say that representatives of the various classes as well as the masses of all creeds and races have urged me to prepare to enter the coming contest. Our French-Canadian fellow citizens have made it quite plain that they intend to leave the field open for an English-speaking Catholic, as this element of the population has not been represented for years in the Mayor's chair."

"Just look at the figures," proceeded the senator. "During the seventy-two years Montreal has been a city, we have had thirty-one mayors. Of these there were eleven Protestants, seventeen French and three English-speaking Catholics, the latter being Sir William Hingston, Hon. James Moir and Mr. Cassidy. Such figures as these need no comment."

As to qualification, Senator Cloran declared that the average polls gave him ample for the office, which demands an assessment of $10,000 clear over all encumbrances full six months before the election. He said he was a native-born Canadian, and that there should be no politics in an election for the mayoralty.

TWENTY-FIVE MILLION IN LAND AND BUILDINGS

Col. Bates, the International Auditor-General, Tells of Salvation Army Activities—A Social Force That is Achieving Results in Many Fields.

A social organization with capital investments in building and land amounting to $25,000,000, is a considerable social force in the world, even in these days of colossal fortunes and multi-millionaires.

And that is the amount of the property assets of the once despised Salvation Army. The authority for the statement is beyond question—the man who knows better than any other—Col. Bates, the international auditor-general, the officer who audits the accounts of the Army in every country. He arrived here from Toronto and Ottawa with Commissioner Coombs, and called this morning for England by the steamer Ottawa.

Col. Bates is a tall, handsome man, like most of the executive staff at the international headquarters, which shows that the General has a predilection for men who stand well physically as well as mentally.

He could tell much about the Army's internal affairs, but one thing he did not seem to know, and that was the total revenue that the Army drew in from all sources. Not even with the international balance sheet before him could he have told that, he said, for the accounts were not made up in such a way as to reveal the information and to get at there would have to be a revolution in the system of bookkeeping. Each country, each Army headquarters, each corps is made, as far as possible, self-supporting, he informed a Herald representative just before sailing. That is what is aimed at and what is looked for, but the anticipation is not always realized. Roughly speaking though, the Army establishments are self-sustaining in all Protestant countries. In Latin countries—such as Spain, Italy and the South American Republics—they are only partially self-supporting. Still every country does something, and with subsidies from the international headquarters the work is kept going.

It is in India that the poorest financial results are obtained. The amount raised there is only fifty-three per cent. of the cost to the Army and that, despite the fact that the officers there—native officers that is—are the poorest paid in the world, receiving only $2 per week—a sum which is considered ample for their requirements.

In round figures the Army has 15,000 paid officers. The salaries vary in different countries according to the standard of living, for the principle adopted is to give each man sufficient to live upon and no more. Beyond that they must look for their treasure in heaven. But even with the moderate scale of remuneration paid to the officers the salary list represents a very considerable total.

It is not always easy for the Salvationists to retain their most brilliant and successful officers on account of the low salaries. Other organizations observing their success are eager to procure their services, but the losses from this cause are comparatively few, for the officers are generally induced to reject the bids made for their services, when they feel that no other else can they get the opportunities for influencing the masses that are offered through the medium of the Army.

A few pictures of the Army's work in different spheres will be of interest. Take for instance the raising of funds. This is not always an easy matter, but yet in a single day on the London Stock Exchange—it was the day before Christmas—$6,000 was raised at one collection. It was a definite business proposition that was put before these shrewd men of business to defray the cost of the early morning breakfasts in Blackfriars, and the Strand for the absolutely destitute and homeless. The money is always spent by the Salvation authorities in the object for which it is raised, and its patrons know that. The poor, shivering mortals who are glad to avail themselves of the food that is offered between three and five o'clock on the cold winter mornings in London, can hardly reach lower depths of wretchedness, and their case evoked the pity of the members of the Stock Exchange, who are not as a rule the most tender-hearted.

One may glance briefly at another branch of the Army's work as described by Col. Bates. This is the estate in England, where an agricultural colony is planted. The estate consists of 3,000 acres. This land is not sold to the colonists, but they are employed there. Men are sent from the cities to learn habits of industry and to be kept away from vice. Some of them are habitual loafers who have been prevailed upon to shake off their habits of idleness. Some are confirmed drunkards—possibly the largest proportion, and some are simply men who are "down on their luck," as they say, and cannot find employment. "We tide these men over until better times come and wish them God speed," said Col. Bates. "Some stay with us only six months and some two or three years."

So far as Canada is concerned, Col. Bates claims that a great work is being done by the Army in finding employment for discharged prisoners. The authorities are sufficiently enlightened to allow the Army officers facilities for entering the jails some time before a prisoner's sentence expires, and these officers are able to procure positions for persons whose conduct has been sufficiently good to justify a hope of satisfactory behavior. Out of 800 cases where help of this character was given 750 were reclaimed.

The Army expect to bring over to Canada next year from England at least 7,000 new settlers. Practically every vessel sailing from the Old "country" to the Dominion will bring some, and three special steamers have already been chartered to bring over 1,000 each. Arrangements have been made for distributing these where they are required or where they have a prospect of doing well.

MAKER OF BANK NOTES.

The death was announced recently of Sir Wyndham Spencer Portal, at his residence, Malehanger, near Basingstoke. The late baronet was born on July 23, 1822, at Laverstock, where his family since the year 1724 have enjoyed the privilege of making bank-note paper for the Bank of England. An interesting romance is connected with the establishment of the firm. The founder was Henri Portal, a descendant of some French Huguenots, who were naturalized at Winchester in 1711.

Henri Portal, seeking a means of existence, built a paper mill on the River Test, at Laverstock. Owing partly to the process of manufacture and partly to the peculiarity of the water of the Test, paper of so fine a quality was turned out that the Bank of England granted to Henri Portal the privilege of making its bank-notes.

When his descendant, John Portal, was lying seriously ill in the late forties his two sons, Melville and Wyndham, were given their choice of his property. Melville took the paper mill, and Wyndham took the bank-note privilege. Sir Wyndham was a keen man of business, and for seven years—from 1892 to 1899—was chairman of the London and South-Western Railway Company, of which he had been a director since 1861.

In 1899 he celebrated his golden wedding, and in that year he severed his connection with the railway company. On that occasion he received a gift from Queen Victoria, "in grateful recognition of the personal care and attention which he had devoted to Her Majesty's comfort." He also received a service of plates from the directors and shareholders of the company.

The new baronet is Sir Wyndham's son, William Wyndham Portal, who was born in 1850. He is a director of the railway company with which his father was so long associated.

Families Famous in English History

THE STARK FAMILY.

Stark is an old Saxon word meaning brave, stout, strong, unyielding. In French, stark is translated fort, val, franc. Variations of the name are Starkie, Starck, Starke, Starkie, Starkey, Starky, Starkman, Stacman, Starkeman.

The family has been seated at Lancaster, England, and Kermont, Scotland, for several centuries. In Surrey, at the present time, the family flourishes. Mariana Starkie, writer of plays, best remembered by her "Letters From Italy," was born there in the eighteenth century. One of her contemporaries, James Stark, artist, was a Scotman. He removed to London, where he lived at Mornington Place, Hampstead Road. Some of his pictures may be seen at the National Gallery. His son, Arthur, was also a painter. Another Scotman of the name was Adam, an antiquary of note. A noted English physician was William, who left many valuable books which he had written. The family has been prominent from early days in the professions, particularly in that of medicine.

The Starks were attracted to Virginia in the early days of the Old Dominion. There the name is invariably spelled with the final "e"—Starkie. The nomenclature of the family makes an interesting study—Frudence, Tabitha, Sukey, Silence, Rose, Tomat, Menethien, Zurviah and Sydney Brown Butten. The last named rather caps the climax.

The arms reproduced is azure, a chevron between three lions' heads, erased, or crest, out of a ducal coronet, or a stag's head guardant gules, armed of the first. Motto—Fortiorum Fortia Facta. The lion is always a bearing of great honor. The stag is the symbol of peace and harmony. A coronet denotes authority.

THE PREVALENCE OF JONES.

The prevalence of Jones as a Welsh patronymic has its drawbacks, which are accentuated by the habit of adding John as a Christian name.

Forty John Joneses are employed by the Cardiff Corporation on their tramway system, but one of the chief of officials assured the Express representative yesterday that there is no confusion. He can identify them with the ease with which a shepherd identifies his sheep.

It is different, however, with the female Joneses. They appear to be less easily distinguishable, and a rule obtained in drapery establishments that the senior Miss Jones retains her name. The others have to adopt some other appellation.

Another way of getting out of the difficulty is usual in factories. It is inconvenient if, when a foreman calls "Jones!" forty or fifty men come running to him, so the hands are known by their birthplaces.

This explains the astonishment frequently felt by a visitor when a call for "Merthyr," "Swansea," or "Wrexham" brings a man from his work.

But even this method has its drawbacks when men come from Llanfairpwllgwyngogoch, or Machynlleth-fairfach, or some other place just as easily pronounced.

Worms exterminate the whole system. Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator eradicates worms and gives rest to the sufferer. It only costs 25 cents to try it and be convinced.

OLDEST DOCUMENT OF HUMAN PROGRESS

Two Thousand Years B.C.
These Written Laws Were Issued in Babylon

The display in the Assyrian Room of the British Museum of a cast of the black basalt stele of Hammurabi, King of Babylon, who, says the late Professor Jules Oppert, was probably identical with Amraphel, the contemporary of Abraham mentioned in Genesis xiv., has given an extraordinary impetus to the general interest in the great law-giver of Babylonia, whose code was influentially formative of the legal systems of other nations.

Hammurabi, the son and successor of Sin-Maballit, was the sixth king in the first dynasty of Babylon, and was the founder, by conquest and incorporation of the united Babylonian Empire, the period of whose rule, B. C. 2287-2233 was regarded by later Babylonians as the golden age of their country.

After successful warfare, Hammurabi, set himself to improve the economic conditions of his dominions, the fertility of which he enhanced by the construction and renovation of canals, and built or restored some of the most important sanctuaries of the land; continuing the work already begun by his predecessors in the Kingdoms of Larsa and Sumar-Accad, whom he conquered, on the temple of Ishtar at Zariab in Southern Babylonia, "making right" the city of Ur, the home of Abraham, rebuilding the sun-temples at Larsa and Lippur, and beautifying and enlarging the temples of Babylon, E-Sagila, Borsippa, E-Zidna.

Hammurabi died after an unusually long reign, and left his newly-founded Empire, firmly established and united to his son Samsu-Iluna, B. C. 2200-2180, whose policy, like that of his successors on the throne, seems to have been continued in accordance with the precedents set by their illustrious predecessor. The most significant of all the Hammurabi inscriptions is without doubt found at Susa, or Shushan, the palace, covered with the inscription, was brought to light on the Acropolis of Susa by J. de Morgan, at the head of a French archaeological expedition, as the result of excavations carried out in December and January, 1901-2.

GIVEN BY THE SUN GOD.

The stele, which is between seven and eight feet high by about two feet wide, and exhibits the most valuable known document of Babylonian culture, and the oldest document of the kind in the history of human progress, was originally set up in the temple of E-Sagila, in Babylon; and was afterwards, B. C. 1100, carried away by the Elamite conqueror Shutruk-Nahhunte to Susa, where four or five columns of the lower part of the text were erased, probably to make room for the inscription of the king who removed it. About one-third of the block, and occupying its upper portion, is devoted to a bas-relief, in which the king is represented, standing in a devout attitude before the sun-god, Shamash, and receiving the laws from him. The deity, from whose shoulders flames of fire ascend, is seated, clothed with the horned head-dress symbolic of divine power, upon a mystic throne, and his feet are upon the mountains, while in his right hand he holds a staff and in his left hand a circular object, emblematical of sovereignty and dominion. The lower portion of the stele is covered with some 30 or 40 lines of text, which after an introduction in which Hammurabi enumerates the benefits he has conferred upon the people, and states that he has given the laws to his subjects, he gives the code of laws or collection of decrees, over 280 in number, by which the Babylonians were enjoined to regulate their affairs, both public and private, and their social relationships. The code is introduced with a blessing on the man who kept these laws, and a series of curses upon any king or governor who should modify, or abrogate any of them.

Hammurabi's attitude with reference to religion is manifested chiefly in the circumstance that he opposed the use of spells and enchantments—an antagonism in which he had been to some extent anticipated by King Gudea, a much-battered and dilapidated statue of whom with the cast of another in somewhat better preservation, is preserved in the immediate neighborhood of the stele of Hammurabi in the same apartment of the Museum.

SOME DISTINGUISHING TRAITS OF THE ARMOURS.

That Jonathan Ogden Armour is in no way a man of his father's type is abundantly shown by the fact that the world recognizes him first as the father of little Miss Lolita Armour, and second as the chief of all the best of whom with the cast of another in somewhat better preservation, is preserved in the immediate neighborhood of the stele of Hammurabi in the same apartment of the Museum.

It would take some time to enumerate the points of difference between the founder of the Armour family and his present head, Philip Danforth Armour was big of frame, "sandy" of complexion and hair, not to say red-headed, and often talkative, not to say loquacious. J. Ogden Armour is much slighter, dark haired and has himself very well in hand so far as his speech goes.

Philip D. Armour liked to work in the midst of his swarming office force and had his desk on the great executive floor of his Chicago office, where his clerks could see him, where he could see them and where he was accessible to courtesy and everybody. Even the reporters, who wished to talk with him, his son once got the old gentleman to have a little "private office" partitioned off for his personal use, and he tried to use it for a little while. But he couldn't stand it, and soon spent most of his time, as before, on the floor, where he could see and hear and be seen and be heard. The son has his own private office and keeps to it mostly; he rarely sees reporters.

The father was a born speculator, as he showed early by his remarkable coup in pork in 1864, whereby he cleared up a million. For nearly forty years the world has been likely to be startled any day by some gigantic and audacious stroke in the provision market that had been engineered by "Phil" Armour, as he was known from ocean to ocean.

He played the game in the provision market as the big operators on Wall Street play the stock market, game, wheat and corn, as well as meats.

being subject to his operations. His battles with the elements to "deliver the goods" as contracted were sometimes highly dramatic. Late in the season one year he had to charter all the steamers and all the cars in sight and get them loaded and through to Chicago by a certain date in spite of furious storms, deep snows on land and vast fields of floating ice on the water, in order to keep his agreements with young Joe Miller when that gentleman was learning the lesson that it isn't possible to carry a corner in wheat through to a successful termination in this country.

"Phil" Armour's building elevators within thirty days to hold 3,000,000 bushels of wheat which he had bought in 1895 and 1896 when all the elevators were full, while his department heads, all the architects, and all the builders told him it couldn't be done, was another example of the way he carried on his business.

J. Ogden Armour never has done and never will do things in that way. What the father won by audacity and force the son will win by "cool calculation, diplomacy and finesse."

Yet the son is a fit successor to the father. Philip D. Armour used to get up at five o'clock in the morning regularly and be at the office an hour or two ahead of the clerks. Once when he had a new secretary the young man reported the first day at nine. Armour being ahead of him, he reported half an hour earlier next day, and so on, till on the fourth or fifth morning he was at his desk at seven. Armour was still ahead of him. The secretary said never a word; his face must have spoken for him, though, for Armour asked:

"Young man, how do you spend your forenoon?" but his eyes twinkled.

After J. Ogden Armour became head of the business an old workman who had been with the house many years expressed some concern for his future, and announced to his fellows that he should personally watch the young man's comings and goings. He did so religiously for a while, he told a friend that it was all right.

"He's been driving into the yards at half-past seven on the tick of the watch every morning for six weeks," he said, "and by that token I know that the same as the old man did when he was running the whole works from the little corner room in the big office down town."

"She—'Why did that young widower marry a dressmaker?' He—'For her money.' She made all his first wife's clothes."

Sprained Her Ankle.

"I slipped on an icy step and sprained my left ankle very badly," writes Miss Minnie Burgoyne, of Glenwood. "It swelled to a tremendous size and caused intense pain. I applied Polson's Nerviline and got prompt relief; the swelling was reduced, and before long I was able to use my foot." For sprains, swellings and muscular pains Nerviline is the one sure remedy. Strong, penetrating, swift to destroy pain—that's Polson's Nerviline. Fifty years in use.

High-class Novelties in Ladies' Ready-to-wear Garments.

AUTUMN, 1905.

Mantles, Costumes, Blouses, Skirts, Etc., Etc.

Our Mantle Department—one of the best assorted in the city—is well known for its First-class Articles at the Lowest Prices Possible.
Many ladies have this week visited both our Mantle and Millinery Departments, and acknowledged that never before had they seen a more complete assortment, even at big centres of fashion. All the garments which are offered in our Mantle Department were made with great care—the same as if they had been made to order—and the prices, as usual, are the lowest in town.

THAT SILK SALE.

To be continued three days longer.

It is the Genuine
"HRC" T.A.P.E.T.A.

Our ability to do this will give you some idea of the extent of our purchase.

Former unbroken retail price,
75 cents.THE SAME PRICE 35 CENTS MONDAY
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY,
35c.

Why the manufacturer sought to sell out the whole of his Canadian stock at one dash, we don't know. Sufficient to say he did it and the thousands upon thousands of yards that he had in Canada, were divided between one or two of the biggest wholesale houses and ourselves. The manufacturer guarantees that every piece and every yard is perfect in every respect. He has perforated the word "Herca" on every yard to identify it. We have over fifty colors to choose from—Samples free on application.

Our purchasing power has enabled you to save on every yard the difference between the regular retail price of 75c and the sale price on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of 35c.

TALKING OF COATS—LADIES' COATS.

There is no doubt about it—up to the present the Empire style is having all its own way. There has not been a coat come to us from Germany, so far, that has not been more or less affected by it. Not always in the extreme of course, but in tendency.

Here's a safe coat, $16.50

You can wear it with any skirt of any color. It is Empire enough to be in line with general style. The belt across the back gives it a semi-fitting effect so that while it looks loose enough, yet it does not hang baggy. The style of the sleeve however, is distinctly different from anything we have seen before. It looks as though it had been buttoned on at the shoulders and has overlapping edges there that are more Vandyked than scalloped. It has the strapped trimming piped with brown. It is double breasted and nicely lined throughout, very comfortable and very striking, being made of heavy snowflaked tweed. It is a pretty coat and will look well anywhere, the price is only $16.50.

"THE COUNTESS"

THE SHOE FOR LADIES

35c to 50c F.M.L.L. FABRIC GLOVES,
25 CENTS.

Why shouldn't the store that does best for you in dry goods, do equally well in shoes? Nothing that we can say will so thoroughly convince you of the intrinsic merit of "The Countess" like buying a pair and wearing them. We want the utmost satisfaction with ladies' shoes just as we have it with millinery and costumes. We are not going to let expense stand in the way of getting the best shoes and the best trade. Money back in every case where goods are not as you want them. We sell "The Countess" at $35.00—we should get more for it.

$1.00 AND $1.25 ALL WOOL VESTS
79 CENTS.

Ladies' all wool ribbed vests, perfect and correct in weight for this season of the year; in natural and white, closed fronts, long and short sleeves, perfect fitting, very elastic and good quality, to be sold on Monday at 79c instead of their regular prices of $1.00 and $1.25.

DANGERS OF DECEIT.

Henry Clews, the New York banker, is dilating on the dangers of deceit. By way of illustration he told a society woman who saw in a jeweler's window a collar of pearls that she wanted. She enquired the price and was told $6,000. She gave her cheque for $3,000, saying that she would send her husband to see the pearls, but the jeweler was to tell him they cost only $3,000. The storekeeper was familiar with that sort of game and agreed. The husband came to see the pearls, and that evening told his wife he had bought them. His wife delightfully asked if he had brought home the collar, whereupon he replied: "No, dear, I had to see it to my mother. You know it is her birthday to-morrow."—Exchange.

A MATCHLESS BIRD.

A beautiful bird, almost wholly unknown even to the natives, was among the most interesting discoveries made in the Island of Hawaii by one of Mr. Walter Rothschild's collectors. It is found only in a dense forest, which extends for a few miles on either side of the Waialeale river, at an elevation of 3,000 feet.

You might watch for this matchless bird in vain, unless you first learned its plaintive call note, by using which the collector contrived to lure a specimen from the green depths. Its long bill resembles that of the oriole, and, like this species, it lives on insects, which it gathers from the leaves of the ohia tree, a refreshing native mountain apple.

A bright olive green above, with yellow-green underparts and brown wings feathers edged with gold, the green so little is by far the most striking feature of these rocky haunts.

The Rabbit—"I had a narrow escape from being killed by an amateur sportsman to-day." The Grouse—"Was he such a good shot?" The Rabbit—"No; but when the gun kicked it knocked him over and he nearly ate on me."

Be Done With Catarrh Why allow this filthy disease to poison your system? It drains your strength, ruins digestion, pollutes the breath, makes you repulsive. The only certain cure is "Catarrh-Ex." It cures because it destroys the cause of the disease, cures thoroughly because it goes wherever the catarrh is, cures every case because its vapor destroys the catarrh germ instantly. STRONG-ROBINSON.

On Wednesday evening at St. Peter's Church, Cookshire, the marriage took place of Miss Fannie L. Robinson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Robinson, to Dr. Norman W. Strong. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. I. Strong, brother of the groom, and rector of Ormstown, assisted by Rural Dean Robinson, rector of Cookshire. The bride was becomingly gowned in white satin with pearl trimmings, and carried white roses, her sister, Miss Elizabeth Robinson, acted as maid of honor and the other attendants were Miss Ethel Pope and the Misses Edith and Ethel Toole. The bridegroom was supported by Dr. Laurie, of Montreal, while Messrs. J. A. Cook of Sherbrooke, W. W. Robinson, of Granby, and Dr. A. T. Mackay, of Cookshire, were in evidence as ushers. Mr. J. Henry Robinson, uncle of the bride and organist of St. Paul's Church, Montreal, played the wedding march. A reception and a supper was held at the home of the bride's parents, after which Dr. and Mrs. Strong left on an extended wedding trip.

GRIFFIN-HODGE.

Miss Janet M. Hodge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Hodge, of Bridgeport, Conn., formerly of Cornwall, was married recently to Mr. Henry Washburn Griffin, of Brookfield Centre, Conn. Rev. Burke of Toronto. Rev. S. Gower Poole officiating. The bride, who was gowned in white with orange blossoms, carried a shower bouquet of white roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Nance Weagant, who also wore white. The groom was attended by Dr. E. E. Weagant, of Potomac, N.C., and Miss Virginia Stuart, daughter of Dr. Robert Stuart, Warren, Penn., and a cousin of the bride, was the flower girl. After a reception luncheon the young couple left for the "International Limited" on a short wedding trip to Quebec. After which they will take up their residence in Toronto.

TO CHOOSE A SITE FOR A NEW SCHOOL

Church Wardens of St. Michael's Parish Will Meet To-Morrow

A meeting of the church wardens of St. Michael's Parish will be held to-morrow afternoon at eight o'clock for the purpose of choosing a site for a parochial school. Rev. Father Kiernan is confident that with the support given him by the English-speaking Catholics of the parish, that the parishoners of St. Michael's could erect a suitable school building. The total number of school children is two hundred and thirty. The temporary school opened two weeks ago has so increased in numbers that a third teacher had to be engaged. Owing to the want of accommodation in the present school, nearly one hundred children of the parish are attending different schools of the city.

NOMADS CLUB.

The opening meeting of the Nomads Club takes place at the club rooms, No. 30 University street, on Wednesday, October 4th, at 8 p.m. After the president's inaugural address, the meeting will dissolve into a social meeting. A syllabus has been prepared by the Executive for the coming season, in which appear the names of many prominent gentlemen.

CHARIVARI INQUEST ADJOURNS.

Tavistock, Ont., September 30.—An inquest was called by Coroner Dr. Hobson, of Innisburg, to enquire into the death of John Hauch, who was shot at a charivari on Tuesday night at the home of Wm. Wagester, 17th concession of East Zorra. Three important witnesses were wanted, but nothing new was brought out, and the coroner adjourned the hearing until next Thursday at 2 p.m., at Cassel, Ont.

IT'S IN THE BLOOD

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Drive Out Rheumatic Poison.

Rheumatism is rooted in the blood—any doctor will tell you that. Nothing can cure it that does not reach the blood. It is a foolish waste of time and money to try to cure rheumatism with liniments, poultices or anything else that only goes skin deep. Rubbing lotions into the skin only helps the painful swellings, circulates more freely. The one cure, and the only cure for rheumatism is to drive the uric acids out of your blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new blood, and the new blood sweeps out the poisonous acids, loosens the stiffened, aching joints, cures the rheumatism and makes the sufferer better in many other ways. Mrs. Jos. Serron, Las Eboulements, Que., says: "I suffered from rheumatism in a chronic form for nearly twenty years. I spent much money in liniments and medicines, but without avail until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Some times I was so stiff I could hardly move. The trouble seemed to be growing worse, and finally seemed to affect my heart, as I used to have pains in the region of the heart, and sometimes a smothering sensation. I grew so weak and suffered so much that I began to consider my case hopeless, and then one day a little pamphlet, telling of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, fell into my hands, and I learned that they could cure rheumatism. I sent for a supply, and in about three weeks found that they were helping me. The trouble disappeared, and gradually the pains left me and I could go about with more freedom than I had done for years. I still take the pills occasionally, as I now know it is wise to keep my blood in good condition. It is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood that they cure such troubles as rheumatism, anaemia, indigestion, kidney troubles, backaches, headaches and sideaches, neuritis, erysipelas, and the special ailments that burden the lives of so many women and growing girls. But only the genuine pills can do this, these always have the full name Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People on every box because its vapor destroys the catarrh germ instantly. To get well and stay free from catarrh get Catarrh-Ex and use it. Satisfaction guaranteed."

EARLY DAYS OF SOAP. The use of soap as a cleanser is not of great antiquity. It was at first merely a cosmetic for smoothing the hair and brightening the complexion. When once its value as a cleansing power was appreciated, its use for such purposes spread rapidly. Manufactures sprang up in Italy, notably in the little seaport town of Savona, and Genoa, whence came Savon, the French name for soap.

HE WAS TOO PRECISE. He carefully prepared the small garden plot, which his wife, deeply interested in his labor, stood watching him. After he had put in the seeds and smoothed over the bed, his wife took his arm to accompany him to the house, and they went to the garden. "When will the seeds come up, John?" He was one of those men who take pleasure in saving a smart thing when

THE PEDAGOGICAL CONFERENCE DATE

Catholic Teachers Will Meet at Commercial Academy October 26 and 27

The annual pedagogical conference for the Catholic teachers of Montreal, will take place on Thursday and Friday, October 26 and 27th, at the Commercial Academy, 1999 St. Catherine Street. A number of well known educationalists will deliver addresses. An indemnity is allowed by the Government per diem, to all the teachers who attend. Inspector J. W. McGowan, has notified the different teachers to be present. Last year the Commercial School Board allowed only one day for the conference, but this year the regular two days will be granted by the Board.

Gave Them Vacant Cathedral and Furnished it Comfortably

Advices just received from Tokyo, dated August 20th, report that the Japanese military authorities at Port Arthur, have assigned the Russian-Greek Cathedral to the Y.M.C.A. for their headquarters for the Y.M.C.A. work at that place. The cathedral is well located and splendidly adapted for the Association's purpose. The authorities furnished the materials for repairing the cannon holes and other damage which the building has suffered during the siege. The commandant also offered to completely furnish the rooms. Upholstered parlor furniture, rattan chairs, settees and even a piano were brought from the former homes of Russian officers much to the comfort and pleasure of the Japanese soldiers and sailors who enjoy the privileges of the Association. In Japan, if the endorsement of the high officials can be had for any enterprise its success is assured. The Difference Between Expert and Unskilful Tea Blending

THE qualities of different teas prove that there is a distinct difference between expert Red Rose blending methods and the usual methods.

Several kinds of teas may be blended, but if unskilfully selected they will not combine to make a perfect blend; they will retain their original individual characteristics with their roughness and harshness emphasized.

Such tea is bitter, poorly flavored in the cup (and there is much of it in bulk and package form on the market). It emphasizes the result of inexperience, lack of knowledge of combining qualities of different teas, imperfect blending, poor selection, and the hundred and one other causes of poor tea.

But my expert Red Rose blenders select the right grades of strong, rich Indian teas and delicate fragrant Ceylon teas, and produce Red Rose Tea with entirely new characteristics—a tea with that "rich fruity flavor"—a tea so exquisitely different and better than any brand of Ceylon alone, that no one who once tries it ever goes back to Ceylon again.

A WONDERFUL TAPESTRY.

The celebrated tapestry, called Bayeux, from the place where it is preserved, is a record on canvas, more minute in some particulars than written his-try, of the Conquest of England by the Normans in 1066.

According to the tradition it was the work of Matilda, wife of William the Conqueror, and the ladies of her court. It is a web of linen cloth 214 feet long by twenty inches wide, and is worked in wool of varied colors.

We have it from the latest authority that on this canvas, besides the figures of 505 animals and birds, there are 623 men, 202 horses, 55 dogs, 37 buildings, 41 ships and boats, and 49 trees. It is divided into 72 compartments, each representing some particular occurrence. The Bayeux tapestry would have been destroyed during the French Revolution had not a priest succeeded in concealing it from the mob.

THE QUIET HOUR.

Destiny.
(L. C. Gilmore.)
The love that represents to them
Destiny.
How beautiful is destiny! That subtle force
That draws two souls far from their chosen course
O'er waste of waters over hill and dreary plain.
Heedless of tropic sun, of cloud, or beating rain.
No light breaks on their lonely road
so they may see Unfolding step by step, the march of
destiny.
Yet on some fateful morn their lone paths meet.
And these twin souls at length each other greet.
They learn, in one swift look, the fact foreknown.
"It is not good for man to be alone";
And in each other's eyes, with joy
divine, they see
The Tests of Drunkenness.

Pray to the Father.
Prayer must be addressed to the Father.
As soon as we utter that sacred name, divine nature responds, and, to put it vividly, is on the alert to hear what we desire. A little child cannot utter a sigh, however slight, a sob, however smothered, without awakening the quick attention of its mother, and at the first whisper of our Father's name, He is at hand to hear and bless.

Alas! we have too often grieved His Holy Spirit by a string of selfish petitions, or a number of formal pattitudes! To the wonderment of angels, we thus fritter away the most precious and sacred opportunities. Be still, then, before you pray, to consider what to ask; order your prayers for presentations; and be sure to begin the blessed interior with words of sincere and loving appreciation and devotion.

Rider Haggard's Christian Work.
Rider Haggard, who remarked at the Canadian Club last winter that he found it hard to live down his reputation as a writer of fiction, has submitted his report on the Salvation Army settlements. The problem is to get people from the congested town and city districts to the land. He has formulated a plan involving loans by the Imperial Government, a per capita contribution by Poor Law authorities,
the appointment of a Government official to administer the scheme and the selection of the Salvation Army
and other well established organizations as the parties to whose care the colonies shall be entrusted.

How Humor Helps.
Humor is so excellent an attribute of human nature, we distrust the man or woman who is destitute of it. It lubricates the joints of our daily experiences that otherwise would get rusty and creak. It helps to lift many a load out of the rut of life, and to salve many a galled back worn by heavy burdens. It is the flowery wreath at the feast, the high glow on the wine, the bluish and glow and sparkle on human intercourse.

Spiritual Privileges.
We may pray for anything not wrong
in itself with perfect freedom if we do not pray selfishly. But the answer to the prayer may be as it was to Paul,

not the removal of the thorn, but instead a growing insight into its meaning and value.—James Freeman Clarke.

Spiritual Notes.
Christianity, a wise man has said,
is "for use, or it is nothing." It means the deepening life of goodness
in the heart.—Alexander Gordon.

We dig and toil, we worry and fret
and all the while close over us bends the infinite wonder and beauty of Nature, saying: "Look up, my child, Feel my smile, and be glad!"—G. S.
Merriam.

The Spot Beautiful

Gretchen stood and looked upon the scene, with her beauty-loving soul and orderly spirit sinking with every passing moment. She folded her plump little hands under her neat gingham
apron, and sighed and sighed.
It was not a pretty spot upon which she gazed. It was a back yard, surrounded by tall, ugly tenements. The place was strewn with papers and old tin cans. Still the sun flooded in through a gap between two high buildings, and seemed to say: "Cheer up, Gretchen; where you and I can enter,
there is hope."

But the poor little German maid was depressed to hear the message just then. She had come but the day before from the sweet, pure country when her father had been coachman on a fine estate. It was hard, there was no denying that.

It had not taken the little maid long to clean the rooms and set in order the scant furniture. When that was done,
she was free to seek other pastures;
and the dismal back yard was the nearest, a prospect to a pasture that she could find.

Slowly the tears rolled down the round, shiny cheeks. The prospect was dark indeed. Then the inner Gretchen spoke up. The outer Gretchen recognized her at once, dried her tears, and listened.

"Now, see here, my dear, it is not half as bad as you think. There might be a yard worse than any. I have heard of such things."
Gretchen never had, and she shuddered.

"And you live on the ground floor of the house," she went on.

"Just think! practically, you have control of this yard. No one uses it but cats, and you like cats."

That was true. Gretchen caught sight of one just then, hiding behind some rubbish, and bent to smooth the thin surprised back.

"Now, it's quite out of the question for you to carry all these papers and cans out, but you can sweep them in one corner; and when people see you

starch out of your fresh apron by crying on it."
Gretchen smiled broadly. That inner voice always gave such good advice! The sun fairly sparkled at the turn things were taking; and the forlorn cat came from behind the rubbish heap, and rubbed against Gretchen in the friendliest way.

The little girl set to work at once.
Her father would not return until night, there was a long day before her. All the morning, with shovel and broom, she worked with a will; and by noon that back yard, except for the huge heap in the corner, was as tidy
as a kitchen floor.

Of course, some children from upper windows had called names and hurled articles down at her, but at length they decided that she was deaf and dumb; and the patience with which she picked up the things they cast out seemed so dull that they at last gave up the teasing, and betook themselves
to livelier sport in the street gutters.

At twelve o'clock Mrs. Murphy, who lived just above Gretchen, opened her window to throw out a can. "Whatever are you doing?" she asked in amazement.

"Cleaning up," Gretchen called up,
with a bright smile.

"Well, I never!" ejaculated Mrs.
Murphy. And she certainly never had.
But she did not throw out the can.

"You look ready to drop, child. Just go in, and fix yourself a bite. That back yard ain't a-go-in' ter run away."

The idea was so sensible that Gretchen acted upon it at once. Tired as she was, she prepared a little "bite,"
and enjoyed it hugely, as she sat alone
by the spotless table.

That afternoon Mrs. Murphy put a shawl over her head and went out on a round of calls; and a great many people in the square heard of the queer little German girl who "cleaned up" a back yard.

The next day Gretchen arose inspired. In some way she must cover up that ugly place in the far corner; but how? She went out, sorrowfully picked up some things that had been thrown out in the night, then looked up, and saw many faces peering out
at her from the windows.

"Good morning!" she called up sweetly. "Please will you stop throwing things out in this yard? I'm going to try—by her own audacity stunned her.
"I am going to try to make this spot beautiful."

A shout of laughter greeted this; but the child went on her upraised face shining in the sunlight which was just coming through the gap to see how things were getting on. "And, when it is beautiful, we can all enjoy it, you know."

Another shout was imminent, but Mrs. Murphy seized her opportunity.
"It's against the health rules, anyway," she called out, "and you all
know it. If you don't quit throwin', I'll write a line meself to headquarters."

This threat had a marvellous effect.
The listeners knew the health board of old, and they would do almost anything rather than attract its attention to themselves.

"An' you, there!"—Mrs. Murphy nodded to Gretchen.—"my Patsy is goin' to cart a load of sod to-day. He'll just take that load of rubbish along with it. Another shout was imminent, but Mrs. Murphy seized her opportunity.
"It's against the health rules, any-
way," she called out, "and you all
know it. If you don't quit throwin',
I'll write a line meself to headquarters."

"Now, you see what comes of trying!" Oh, what busy days followed! The hard-working father was delighted at

so tidy, maybe they will help by not throwing out any more. If you are the sort of girl you ought to be, you will do what you can, and not take the way
the little girl took the change. He had expected to see her droop and fade, but instead she was as merry as a cricket and sang about her work.
She kept her secret about the back yard. That was to be a great surprise.

All the neighbors "took" to Gretchen at once, at least all the grown up. The children could not place her. Joyous and sunny-tempered as she was, she never played with them or sat gossiping on the curb of the gutter. They were half afraid of her, and after a week gave up teasing, finding it but poor sport to call names at a little girl who apparently grew stone deaf at the first rude word.

The older folk fairly yearned over Gretchen. She called forth all their hidden tenderness and respect.

Schoolboys on the top floor actually came down and joined the child in the yard one day, and the two had an excited confab in German. That was a sight which the parents had never seen speaking to one before. The onlookers could not hear what she said;
but they said of her that she was
"in the end kiss him!"

The whole square heard of that before an hour had passed. Then another astonishing thing occurred.

One day, on his way from his own work, and dug up the back yard in the deepest and most approved way;
and in the afternoon Patsy Murphy
brought a load of fertilizer in his cart,
and he and Gretchen, after Mr.
Schoonhoven went, raked and hoed all the afternoon.

The sun grew hot with excitement,
and day by day tarried later and later, fearing to lose some of the sport that was going on. Then Dicky Martin came to the fore.

He was a boy of his own age, and which his mother had drawn to the window. She, poor soul, took in washing, and the small porch could not see his mother, and that was why he loved to gaze up at the bit of sky above the tall roofs and wonder how high it lay. He had seen more stars than there was room for in the small open space. Since Gretchen came, Dicky's eyes had fallen from the sky
and he had been looking at her.

He was very shy; but when he saw the spot below raked and hoed and Dicky grew courageous. Raising himself on his elbow, he peered over the window ledge, and piped out:

"Say, there, girl!" Gretchen looked up. "I've got a geranium up here. A andy went to see it, and he said it was a real one. It's a real one, it is.
I'll plant it in your yard."

This long speech made Dicky weak,
and he fell back among the pillows.
But up the long flights of stairs ran Gretchen, and to the surprise of Dicky and his mother, she carried into the room, exclaiming:

"Well, it's your yard too, little boy!
Of course, I'll plant your flower. And oh, you just wait!" Dicky gave her the sickly-looking geranium, and, with a merry nod, Gretchen was gone.

"Well," said the sun, as it looked down at the plant after it was freed from the pot, "do catch your roots."
Look less peaked. There is nothing to turn pale about down here. This is a regular land of promise!

"Dicky Martin has given his friendly-visitor flower to the Dutch girl!"
whispered Ida Bridget Murphy to a cluster of cronies. "An' my mother said it would be a real fun if we all could see what she does with it."

Six hoodlums rose to the occasion, and ruined themselves financially at the tail of a travelling florist's cart. The offerings they sheepishly presented to Gretchen were an outrage upon nature; but the good old mother understood, and took them to her warm breast and forgave them. One by one they responded to her and Gretchen,
and raised their thankful hearts in a psalm of bloom and fragrance.

Then came the crowning stroke of all. Dicky's mother called; and when she heard and saw, she surprised Dicky by promptly bursting into tears,
when he thought she would be so pleased!

"The little dear," said the friendly visitor, leaning out of the window.
"She has made the ugly yard a spot beautiful! It's a miracle, and nothing less." Then she turned to Dicky.
"But this dry spell may ruin all. O Dicky, I have such a plan! I will send you a hose to fasten on your faucet here, and you can play a stream right in the yard. What do you think of that?"

What did he think of it? Why, it was sublime! He could be a shower and a fireman all at once. Was ever a boy so blessed?

But the landlord heard of the scheme
and he came in from his country home to put a stop to all such tomfolery. He was not going to have his water tax raised. No, not he! But, when he saw and heard, and when he remembered the children in the street, country, and then looked upon the dreary tenements frowning down upon the spot beautiful, he acted just as the friendly visitor had done. He did not really cry, but he looked as if he wanted to.

"Water away!" he commanded Dicky in thundering tones. "If Nature does not know enough to protect that spot,
give her a hint, Dicky—a good damp
hint."

He almost frightened Gretchen out of her senses, by saying:

"And as for you, my girl, I ought to raise your rent; but instead I'm going to paper and paint your rooms and send you in a box of vines and plants
from the country. You're a witch, that's what you are; and I'm going to keep on the good side of you!"

The vines and plants came and they took to their new surroundings wonderfully. They covered the grimy fences with a screen of tender green;
and they burst into bloom almost at once, so glad were they to teach their lesson.

Many were the weary, work-worn eyes that looked forward to the day's end and the "spot beautiful." The men and women were better because of it, and the children were gentler as they looked at the blossoms in Gretchen's garden.

"Now, what do you think of this?"
asked the sun over and over again.
And Gretchen? Why, she, dear little girl, is the godmother of the flowers,
and the sweetest thing of all in "The Spot Beautiful."—Harrie L. Comstock

Redd—"Did you ever go over a fence when you got horseback riding?" Greene—"Oh, yes." "How did you get the horse to go over?" "You must have misunderstood. The horse did not go over."

Dribbling is being practiced and it is a gaining play.
Our intermediate team will this year be stronger than ever for there has seldom been so much material to choose from. Several exhibition matches are being spoken of.

OUTRENT JUNIORS.

Outrent will have two junior teams in the field to-day, the independents playing St. Stephens at Lachine, and the G.R.F.U. playing M.A.A.A. Outrent players for the former game are requested to take the 2 o'clock car for Lachine, meeting at the corner of McGill and Notre Dame streets.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL SEMI-FINALS TO-DAY

The association football season has not quite finished. Point St. Charles will be at home to the C. P. R. to-day, and will try to avenge the defeat the railwaymen gave them two weeks ago. This game will be the semi-final for the Freedman Challenge Cup, and both teams will be strongly represented. Westmount meet the winners in the final.

The long list of fixtures in the Montreal and District League has just been got through, and the three top clubs are C. P. R., Point St. Charles and Westmount. These teams will have to play the McGill team for the final league championship honors, which C. P. R. previously claimed to have won.

The semi-finals in the intermediate league will be played to-day, when Westmount will be at home to meet Rosemont and Pointe-aux-Lacs. C. P. R. Westmount will select their team from the following players: kick-off Westmount 4.30 p.m. sharp—Smart, Wright, Childley, A. Payne, Keyser, McArthur, Boswell, Henshaw, Scott, Shortrede, MacDonald, Freedman, Riley, A. Freedman and Johnston all of whom are requested to be at Victoria Hall in time.

The following players will represent Rosemont—Johnson, Guthrie, Ashworth, Moody, Woodhouse, Lewis, Welch, Kenney, Rolleston, Williams, Mother, Referee, McChesney, Linemen, Messrs. Fraser and A. Westmount.
Westmount have received an invitation to go to Valleyfield, Quebec, on Thursday.
Westmount seniors are requested to turn up at the Gym. next week, in order to get fit for the final of the Freedman Cup.

FAMOUS ATHLETE IS AT MCGILL

Kemp, the Oxford Miller, Registered at Local University

Great jubilation now exists among the athletic circles of McGill. The reason is that where there has long been weakness in the track team there is now strength and no rivalry need be feared.
Kemp, the famous Oxford miler and half miler has registered at McGill and will wear the red and white in the intercollegiate competition.
Mr. Kemp is attending lectures in second year science. Kemp won his Oxford blue two years ago, when he won the mile in the Oxford games. Last year in the Inter-University games between Oxford-Cambridge, he ran a close third to two Cambridge men, who ran first and second. The time for this race was 4.17. Kemp's best time for the mile is 4.28. As a half miler he has few equals and has run the distance in 1.59.

GREAT LACROSSE MATCH WILL BE PLAYED OCT. 8

At a conference of the managers of the All-Point St. Charles and the All-Montreal lacrosse teams last night, it was decided to play the match for the Island championship, at the Shamrock grounds, Sunday, October 8.
It was the intention at first to play the match to-night but as a benefit to the National, the game was postponed. The Nationals will meet a picked team and the National grounds will be given to Marcellin.

Clocks repaired by yearly contract.

DRAW AT BALTIMORE.

Baltimore, Md., September 30.—Sam Langford, of Boston, and Young Peter Jackson, of California, met in a fifteen round bout last night. The former twice claimed foul, which Referee O'Hara did not see. Jackson depended almost entirely upon in-fighting, striking only three straight blows, and repeatedly holding and punching after being ordered to break. After Langford had pounded Jackson's left eye to pulp, and hammered him with straight hard blows almost at will throughout the fifteen rounds, the referee called it a draw.

VICTORIA CLUB DINNER.

The Victoria Golf Country Club will hold its regular monthly club dinner on Saturday evening at the club house, near St. Lambert. As it is intended to close the house partially at an early date, it is expected that this will be the last dinner of the season.

Remarkable Athlete in High School Who Does Not Eat Solids

He Won Two Firsts at Annual Sports Yesterday—Competitor Had an Arm Fractured—One Record Was Broken.

One feature of the annual sports of the Montreal High School, held at the M.A.A.A. grounds yesterday afternoon, was the showing of J.M. Seath, who won the 220 yards and the 440 yards easily outpacing his competitors. He had been forced to extend himself, he would probably have equalled or broken the school records.
Seath's performance will gratify the friends of the school. Ever since he was four years old, when the swallowing of acid scorched the organs of digestion, Seath has been unable to eat solid foods and has lived on liquids, principally milk.
Despite this light fare, he is one of the best athletes in the school, being unbeatable at 220 and 440 yards, and wrenched an ankle in the jumps yesterday, and had to drop out of the later events on the program. The Seath plays for the school football club, and is one of the most valuable members of the team.
An unfortunate feature of the afternoon was the accident which befel C. Hadley. After clearing the bar in the running high jump, he fell with his left hand under his hip, and fractured a bone in the wrist.
G. McNaughton won the individual championship of the school, and the Rector's Prize. He scored 19 points. His first were in the broad jump and running hop, step and jump.
Only one record was broken, S. Beatt hurling the 12-lb. shot 33 ft. 6 in. The record was 31 ft. 10 in.
The attendance of spectators was

in Thrilling Match—Good Preliminaries

The opening of the wrestling season at Sommer Park last night, with Apollo, the Irish Giant, and Emile Maupaus, at Gracoe-Roman as the chief attraction, augurs well for the "brawling" game this winter. Fully 3,000 people were on hand, and the bill of fare was in every respect entirely satisfactory.

As was expected, the Irishman won the bout in the straight fall, after about three minutes' work. The first fall came in forty-five seconds, just as the two men fell to the mat. The Giant rolled—and Maupaus could not get away. It was a lucky hold.
To see the big fellow alone was worth the price of admission, for he is certainly the greatest mountain of flesh that has drifted down the river since the time when the Good Old Book says "there were giants in those days." He is only six feet three inches in height, but he looks to be eight or nine feet tall, and one could not be blamed for thinking him about eleven feet twelve inches high if he became angry and insisted on satisfaction in a harsh manner. Then, too, he weighs 265 pounds in fighting trim, with hands as large as two or three hams. His back bears a striking resemblance to a barn door when the hired man has locked up the stable for the night. In fact, he is a regular moose from Mooseville, Ireland, and a "rassler" from Rassler City.

Perhaps he does not know as much as Hackenschmidt about the game, but then the Russian Lion is the best ever—and at that the Irish Apollo would beat the same Mr. Hack an awful lot for the coin. He is as light on his feet as a dancing master, and while our good friend Maupaus is no chicken to go up against, he looked about as big as a Conservative majority in Quebec as compared with the Shamrock Baby. Barring a little fat the Giant was in high fettle.

The first fall was "over before it began," to use an Irishism; it lasted less than a minute. They fell, and the whistle blew with the Giant on top.

After two spasms of six minutes each, in which the Irishman was very busy, and Maupaus busier still, dodging holds and snatching at the head, the Baby rolled again, and Dr. Gadbois had to call it all off. Once or twice it looked as though Mr. Maupaus would have to go down or lose a leg or an arm, yet he always bobbed up, and for more than half the time was the aggressor. He was not strong enough.

The falls were in forty-five seconds, three minutes and thirty minutes, with two bouts of six minutes each.
In the preliminaries, with "Billy" McEwen, of Ottawa, as referee, Aubert Cote beat Emile Myers two falls in about fourteen minutes each—catch-can; George Wicks took two falls from A. Collabou, of Paris, France, Gracoe-Roman, in 1½ and 2½ minutes, and F. Contant beat Jule Vigne one fall in half an hour at Gracoe-Roman. The first preliminary was a beauty and won much applause.

On Friday the beginning of the heavyweight world's championship tourney will hold the boards with half a dozen wrestlers from Europe and America.

GOLF TOURNAMENT AT THE DIXIE LINKS TO-DAY

A lively interest is being manifested in the invitation tournament to be held over the Dixie links this afternoon. Twenty golfers including four professionals will take part in the competition and some spectacular play is anticipated.
The "pros" will meet in one series and the amateurs in another and the winning amateur will be given a piece of silver.

The "pros" started play this morning and the amateurs will go over the course this afternoon.
At a meeting of the executive of the Royal Montreal Club last night the following draw was made for the amateur tournament, the first named player in every case being a member of the Royal Montreal Club:
Gordon W. MacDougall vs. Gerald Lees, Outrent.
K. R. McPherson vs. James Hill, Victoria.
R. E. MacDougall vs. James T. Morgan, Victoria.
C. A. Bogart vs. Thos. MacKarell, Ottawa.
W. S. Clouston vs. T. D. Reith, Victoria.
F. W. Ashe vs. Thos. Hutcherson, Victoria.
F. N. Southam vs. C. N. Finnis, Outrent.
Dr. Chas. F. Wyld vs. C. B. Grier, Westmount.

MONTREAL LADIES WON.

The ladies of the Royal Montreal Club defeated the ladies of the Quebec Club at Dixie yesterday morning by a score of eight to nothing. The visiting ladies were entertained at luncheon at the club house. The scores were:

By Edwin Lefevre.

Time was, and not so very long ago either, when London was the best market for American railroad stocks. The change in this respect in the past six years has been enormous. Foreign markets are still a very important factor in our trading, but they used to dominate it at one time. Nothing really shows the enormous progress made by this country in the past few years, say from the termination of the Spanish war, more than the way in which Europe has sold back to us our own securities. The foreign holders upon the whole have realized very fair prices, particularly those who refused to be shaken out in the last reorganization period round about 1893.

Foreign holders, however, do make some mistakes, and like the rest of the confiding public, are very apt to come in at the top of a bull movement only to find themselves left high and dry after the tide has receded. They were peculiarly unfortunate in the great movement of 1901, which carried Northern Pacific up to the miracle price of $100 a share. It is doubtful if many foreign holdings worth mentioning were left after the stock crossed eighty, on the first advance before the inauguration of President McKinley. In the same way London misread the extent of the boom at that time, taking the panic of May 8th, 1901, as the end of the upward movement, and the matter of fact did not culminate until late in September of the following year.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED.

It is certainly not more than ten years ago that London owned the controlling interest in Pennsylvania. How times have changed to be sure. The idea of anybody but one of a somewhat contracted ring of great railroad financiers holding the control of anything worth having seems almost inconceivable nowadays. And yet the purchases directed to securing the control of Ontario and Western were very largely made on the other side of the water not much more than a year ago. It is likely that the Dutch stockholders really do dictate the policy of Missouri, Kansas & Texas; and unless some very positive claims go for nothing, they are large holders of Denver common and possibly the largest single interest in Kansas City Southern.

Every exchange in Europe dealing in American stocks at all has its own method of doing so. It looked at one time as if a fair market might be created on the Bourse de Paris. That hope was nipped in the bud by some very well meant but ill-reasoned legislation. The virtuous idea was to check speculation. Consequently no one was allowed to sell anything without arranging for a banker to take it off the market immediately. The result was to destroy the market for stocks altogether. Business either concentrated in the hands of a limited number of bankers, who were no better off, because their active broker-customers were shunned, or business went away from Berlin altogether. It was a horrible example of what happens when people are governed too much.

Amsterdam has another way peculiar to itself. The American stock market is registered in the names of a very small number of large banks and financial houses, who issue their own certificates against their holdings. It is not a bad system for the bankers, as it makes them a power in the government of any American property. But the drawback is that their certificates are not worth anything outside of Holland. This market nevertheless is growing. It is credited by reports for the year ending March 31, 1905, with 400,000 Steel common, 270,000 M. K. & T. common, and 120,000 each of Erie and Northern Railway common could be traced. This is no small thing, considering the fact that American railroad bonds have been so successfully placed on the other side of the Atlantic.

LONDON IS THE BEST MARKET.

London is the best European market of all and in some ways better than ours. This sounds like a tall order, but an examination of the London Stock Exchange will show why there are times when the statement is strictly true. If a broker wishes to trade in the New York Stock Exchange, he goes to a recognized place on the floor and bids for the stock he wants or offers the stock he has to sell. The London broker does not do this. He stands some 200 "jobbers," members of the Stock Exchange, who deal with nobody but the brokers, and have no direct relations with the public. The broker does not tell the jobber what he wants to do. He states that he wishes to deal in so many hundred shares of stock and the jobber quotes him a price. The jobber says "the price is 74 1/4 to 74 1/2." This means that he will buy the broker's stock at the former figure or sell him an equal amount at the latter.

The broker does not deal so closely as we do, but even in panics the jobber, because of the competition in his business, will always make him some sort of a price. It may be a very wide price, but it often happens to a panic in our market that it is impossible to sell stock at any price whatsoever. In the panic of the 8th of May, 1901, a certain young broker, whose name it will be kind to suppress, had 200 shares of Jersey Central open for a customer and determined to sell it. There had been no transactions in that stock in the morning, and the quotation in the forenoon had been 100. The young broker, however, was badly rattled. He was only five-and-twenty, and he had never seen a panic before. He probably did the essential part of the panic. He stood at the Jersey Central post alone (for the activity was in other parts of the room), and offered the stock down from 100 to 108, without uttering the slightest notice. At his last offer one of the old members of the Exchange, accidentally strolling past him, heard the proposition, saw the misguided young man spelling his own market and took his stock from him at 108. The next sale was at 148. This is a very extreme case, of course, but the young man in question knows better now, and after all he learned his lesson at somebody else's expense, but brokers in the Exchange do not do things quite so foolish as a general rule. In the London market the young man would have found a "jobber" who would have quoted the price at 150 to 155, or something like that. He would have sold his stock at 150, or three points below the previous sale, but he would have saved his customer a matter of 47 points, which is quite a good deal if the customer is trading on a ten-point margin.

THE FIRST QUESTION OF DAY.

About the first question anybody puts to anybody else when he comes into Wall Street in the morning is "How's London?" London has been trading for something like four hours before our opening, as business actually begins there in earnest at 11 a.m. according to 6 a.m. here. It will be seen that London has had the chance of discounting events which have happened overnight. Some important dividend may have been declared, or the German Emperor may have a speech, or somebody may be dead of sufficient consequence to move the market. American stockholders estimate exactly what the market value of the news is. Our arbitrage houses start work very early in the morning, and the sending messages to the other side long before the market opens here. They are, therefore, closely watched in the first few minutes of trading, and often give an indication, as they buy or sell, of currents which have not yet had time to develop.

And yet it must not be supposed that Wall Street is not still the court of last resort where American stocks are concerned. That is the striking development of the past few years, of which I spoke at the beginning of these remarks. London, for instance, will often entirely misinterpret a piece of news so far as its market meaning is concerned. A prominent railroad, for instance, announces a new stock issue, with a large offering of bonds to the present stockholders which have a distinct market value. London may only consider the increased capitalization, and has generally something of a tendency to take that view. New York, on the other hand, may say that the "rights" are worth a good deal of money, and may therefore bid the stock up.

Our bankers are very well-informed, and with the increasing international importance of the American market,

We have several issues of attractive Corporation Bonds TO PAY 5 PER CENT. and in some cases slightly over this rate.

SEND FOR OUR CIRCULAR.

DOMINION SECURITIES CORPORATION, LIMITED.

are improving in this respect all the time. They, however, are by no means such accurate judges of the meaning of international incidents, like, for instance, the strained relations recently existing between Paris and Berlin over Morocco as the European bankers. On that occasion, we under-estimated the market effect, and paid the price to the shrewder judges abroad. Such great houses as the Rothschilds or the semi-political banks in Paris have excellent means for getting political information, and for getting it quickly. Their judgment of its influence on the money market is usually sound. Our market follows their lead as a rule, although the momentary speculation here may make the traders here a little rebellious at first.

This is why so much turns at present upon the European money markets. When the Bank of England rate is advanced at this time of the year, it means, sooner or later, tighter money here. It will be seen that we have often received information about our own market. It will be noticed, for instance, that announcements of new bond issues are few and far between at present. There is, in fact, not much loose money about to buy bonds with, and every bond issue of any size depends largely upon the foreign market. Foreign holdings of our stocks have enormously increased, but it is practically certain that our bonds are more largely held abroad than they ever were before.

Business in Full Swing

BRADSTREET'S TRADE REVIEW.

"Montreal reports to Bradstreet's say:—The fall business is now pretty well under way and the market is showing trade report increased activity. Winter drygoods are moving briskly and dress goods are in active demand. Hardware is firm and the demand for brick trade and the demand for goods continues active. Western shipments continue heavy. The demand for all staple lines of groceries is good. There is a good tone to the city retail trade and that of the country is improving. Remittances, too, are a little better although city collections are not so brisk. Large supplies of dairy produce are being shipped to Europe and there is still a good demand here although the prices are easier. Shipments of cattle have all off. Large consignments of grain are coming from the West and the shipping trade generally is busy. Values generally hold steady but there is a quiet, but not a heavy, firm. Butter and cheese have an easy tone and as also have hogs. Taken all together the outlook is bright for a continuation of the satisfactory trade conditions existing. The country has profited greatly by the big trade and the good prices for dairy produce, and behind this there has been an exceptionally good harvest throughout almost the whole country, the effect of which cannot be overestimated. Toronto reports to Bradstreet's say:—The volume of trade actually moving at present is exceedingly large. On all sides are seen proofs of the truth of the prophecies that have long promised a big fall and winter business. Orders to all lines of wholesale trade easily exceeds that of previous years. The autumn harvest has been fairly abundant and of good quality and the immense Western crops have done much towards imparting a hopeful look to trade by assuring payment of long-standing debts owed in Western Canada. Retailers throughout the country have been confident of a good fall business and stocks in their hands have been light in most lines, they have been sending liberal orders. Drygoods men report trade phenomenally active in all fall and winter lines. The hardware trade, too, is busy sending big shipments to the West, and supplying the heavy demand of the trade here. Groceries are moving well on all departments. Prices are generally steady. Values in copper and leather continue firm. Grain is about steady. Offerings of cattle are large but of poor quality and prices are lower. Hogs are easy and the market for produce also has an easy feeling. Receipts of all lines of country produce here are liberal. Collections and remittances are fairly good.

At Quebec—Trade as a rule, is reported more active than for several weeks past and orders from the country are coming in more freely. Collections are better and as the season advances the outlook becomes brighter. The harvest has been good throughout the eastern section of the province and no increased price in produce is anticipated. In the city building operations are quiet.

Winnipeg trade reports say:—Trade continues active in almost all lines. Wholesale houses report a brisk business during the past week. General lines of hardware are moving well and building supplies are particularly active. Heavy millinery and general drygoods orders are coming in and the grocers report a good trade. Retail trade is fairly brisk and collections, which have been poor, are improving. Country produce is coming forward well and prices are firm. The weather has favored threshing and the marketing of the wheat is well under way. The crop will eventually come up to the hundred million bushel mark.

Victoria and Vancouver reports to Bradstreet's say:—Trade conditions here continue exceedingly satisfactory. The demand for wholesale lines is active and for retail trade is also definitely. Collections are good as a result of plentiful money. The lumbering and mining industries continue busy. Values of commodities are generally firm. In all directions the outlook for the trade of the fall and winter season is very bright.

The week has developed no special new features in Montreal trade. Retail business is fairly active as usual in some lines as the usual seasonal, but the wholesale fall movement promises satisfactory results. Dry goods, groceries are sending in good orders, and some very few personal selections have been made by visiting buyers during the week. The distribution in groceries is well sustained, and in hardware, metals, drugs, etc., the demand is well up to the average.

Following the increased firmness noted in the pig iron market, there has been an advance in domestic bar iron, which is now held at $1.80, in an ordinary way, and some stiffening is looked for in boiler plate and other lines. All kinds of woollen including carpets, show a tendency to further advance. Hides continue in light supply, and the foreign demand, which is a real factor, is better posted. No. 1. The rate for call money remains at 4 to 4 1/2. District failures are comparatively few.

U.S. Steel Directorate

The term of Robert Bacon, who has resigned as a director of the United States Steel Corporation, expired this year. Among the other directors whose terms expired this year are: Daniel G. Reid, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., William E. Corey, Nathaniel Thayer, Clement A. Griscom, and John F. Dryden.

Of the board of twenty-four members, nine are well versed in the manufacture of iron and steel, while the remaining thirteen are better posted on finance than steel manufacturing. The finance committee is now made up as follows: George F. Perkins, chairman; Henry H. Rogers, William B. Ream, P. A. B. Widener, E. H. Gary, Henry C. Frick, George F. The active directors of the United States Steel Corporation are: William E. Corey, H. C. Frick, Charles Steele, Norman B. Ream, P. A. B. Widener, J. F. Morgan, H. H. Rogers, E. H. Gary, George W. Perkins, H. Phipps, James Gayley and Thomas Morrison.

THE WEEK IN WALL STREET.

New York, Sept. 29.—The market all of this week has been entirely dominated by the money situation. It was predicted as early as Saturday of last week that rates would advance to six per cent. before the end of the month. This prediction was made good today when money loaned as high as 6 1/2 per cent. These predictions caused a good deal of liquidation on Monday and Tuesday, but the market was generally throughout the entire list, the market showing a dull and sagging tendency all day long. By Tuesday, however, it was again better posted. The market was over and the market rallied fairly well. Since then it has been a dull and featureless affair, left almost entirely in the hands of professional traders.

Early this morning when money ran up so sharply above 6 per cent. the

The Growth of Fire Insurance in Canada

Canadian Government statistics issued by the Superintendent of Insurance show that during the past thirty-six years the business of fire insurance in this country has increased tenfold—the total amount of premiums collected in Canada in the year 1869 being $1,785,738, while that of 1904 was $13,749,819 for the same purpose. Of this premium income only $2,688,703 was paid to Canadian Companies, while $10,466,116 was paid to Foreign Companies. The total amount of fire insurance premiums collected in Canada during these thirty-six years amounted to the enormous sum of $201,580,555. Of this amount $156,608,789 was the amount of capital which left Canada in payment of premiums to Foreign Companies.

The Insurance Report shows that for the year 1904 there were but ten Canadian Companies licensed by the Dominion Government to transact the business of Fire Assurance in Canada, and but two of these had a paid-up capital for more than $225,000. With such facts and figures before them the incorporators of THE SOVEREIGN FIRE ASSURANCE COMPANY have been convinced of the necessity for a sound, substantial Insurance Corporation, and policyholders of which would be protected by a LARGE CASH CAPITAL PAID UP IN FULL, Government deposit in excess of the Statutory requirement, and a strong directorate of business men which would conserve these resources for the development of Canadian institutions.

PROFITS OF FIRE ASSURANCE COMPANIES.

The average dividend paid by thirty-two British Joint Stock Fire Assurance Companies for the current financial year, corrected down to September 1st, 1905, exceeded 30 per cent. per annum, and the average dividends for ten years ending December 31st, 1904, paid by 186 Joint Stock Fire Assurance Companies of the United States, as compiled from official reports, has exceeded 12 1/2 per cent. per annum. Statistics compiled by the Superintendent of Insurance covering a period of thirty years, from 1875 to 1904 inclusive, show that the dividends paid by Canadian Fire Assurance Companies amounted to $4,460,885.25, and when it is remembered that the rates for fire assurance are to-day practically 50 per cent. to 100 per cent. excess of the rates charged during the period covered by the Insurance Department, it will be readily seen that the business is now fixed upon a substantial basis and the profitability of the future is unquestionably assured.

THE SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR CAPITAL STOCK.

The capital stock of the Sovereign Fire Assurance Company of Canada is TWO MILLION DOLLARS, divided into 50,000 shares of $40.00 each, of which TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS is now offered to investors at a premium of 25 per cent. or FIFTY DOLLARS A SHARE.

HOME RUN HAGGERTY

Copyright by Geo. Wm. Daley and published in The Herald by special arrangement with the Canada Newspaper Syndicate.

I seen the other day a wall from a pitcher in the American League who said he had pitched eighteen games during the season, and had lost 'em all by one run, and the team behind him had averaged three hits a game in the eighteen. He pointed out that in games with other pitchers in the box they averaged seven and eight hits a game and made no errors. Then he struck a wonderful attitude and says:

"I am the champion hard-luck pitcher of the world. What can the hoodoo be?"

Now, this man's story may be true—I don't doubt it, for most ball players tell the truth—but he is only one of a big bunch. There are hard-luck pitchers, and then again there are others. And this all concerns one Babington Brooks of the old Cornrovers.

You couldn't very well say that Brooks belonged to any one club in that circuit. He'd been tried on 'em all, but one after another they had cast him adrift. He was one of the nicest looking fellows you ever saw, tall, broad-shouldered, graceful as an Indian and the fastest fielding pitcher that ever stepped on a diamond. Bab Brooks could steal any base at any time off any catcher in the circuit. When he came to bat the outfielders would back out to the fence and the infielders would hunt cover, for he was a slugger from the headwaters of Sluggers Branch. He had every curve in the directory, "speed to burn," as these baseball writers have it, and what he didn't know about a slow ball and a change of pace ain't found in any weekly baseball talks. In short, he was an A-1 topnotch pitcher, and he warmed up in front of a manager, he got a job right on the spot.

But the Jonah got in its good work in the year that I knew Bab Brooks in the Cornrovers. He had been played on all of the eight clubs of the circuit he never won a game. He never was battered hard, except maybe in the one thing that beat him; he didn't give away a base on balls, he hit very few men, and I never knew him to make a wild pitch; but something always happened so that he was lost. When he was pitched good ball the men behind could not bat, and when they struck a batting streak with him in the box they generally had an error streak with it. I could tell you a hundred cases of Bab Brooks' hard luck that lost his games just when he seemed to have 'em in his pocket. Twice his catcher had passed balls on third strikes that rolled through knotholes under the grandstand and let in enough runs to win. Three times with the score a tie in the last inning and two out he worked a batter into putting up an easy fly, only to see two of his fielders collide and the ball roll away while the winning run zipped over the plate. I'll just tell you one instance that I saw with my own eyes. There was two men on bases in the ninth inning, and the Meadowville team that he was playing with was a run to the good. There were two out, and Babington only needed to get one man to win the game. That man hit an easy grounder right past Bab and the second baseman who playing close, jumped for it. Just as it came near him he took an ugly wound off a pole and went under the bag. The man didn't see it, and ran around and around in a circle looking for the ball. It had gone, and by the time he got cut and picked it up the two runners had gone in, and the game was lost.

It was such things as this that gave Bab Brooks his Jonah name, and yet, as I said, his manager, when he saw his work, couldn't resist giving him a trial. So he swung around the circuit with one club two weeks and another one a month, until finally he struck the Cloverdale tallenders, whom to kind of brace him up. As they were swinging around a curve near the grounds the off horse of the team o' grays, that was drawn in the car, threw the shoe off his right hind foot. The driver saw it, stopped the team and asked Bab to get down and throw the shoe in the wagon. Bab climbed down, put it in his hind pocket so he could climb into the wagon again, and then forgot all about it. That game will always stand out in the annals of the Cornrovers' League as a corker. Reggie Van Rensselaer was in the box for us, and good as he was, he didn't have a thing on Babington Brooks at any stage of the contest. The young fellows on Josh's Cloverdale just came up to the plate and walked into Reggie's swift ones in a way that opened our eyes, and only for clever fielding by Pinch Hobbs and the rest of the infield we'd been smothered. We batted Bab pretty hard at times, but he had good support, too, and he pulled out of several ticklish places by clever strikeouts of some of our heavy hitters. Head, a little catcher named Strong, who was all over the field backing up first and fielding bunts and picking fouls off the grandstand like a veteran, and throwing to the bags like a king of a Bergen. When the ninth inning began the score was a tie, each side having three runs.

Their first two men went out driving to the infield, and then Strong, the young catcher, caught one of Reggie's swift cuts on the end of his club and tore around to third, and brought Bab up, and nobody said much, for he was a cracking good hitter, for a pitcher, as I've said, he walked into somebody that didn't know the history of his past life yelled:

"Come on, now, Brooks! Here's a chance to win your own game." Bab smiled a kind of tired smile to me as he came up to the plate. "Win nothing," he said. "It's only a chance to let you fellows make two runs in your half of one." You see, he didn't have any confidence or any hope that he had a chance, even at that stage of the proceedings; when most players would be hopping up and down the coachin' tree, he just took things as a matter of course. But, never, never, after two strikes had been called, he put a liner over Pinch's head, for a mighty and Strong raced in with the run that put them in the lead.

Pinch got a base on balls in one half, and then Bab raised the roof by striking out Brownie and Morris. That brought me up, and the bleachers got suddenly quiet. Bab Brooks had always been the easiest kind of meat for me, and I knew it only depended on how strong the force was whether they ever got the ball or not. In this case, however, it was a nice one, and I felt sure I could hit it with my might, and right there and then was where I made a fatal mistake. In putting much force I didn't raise it enough, and it went right back at Bab in a dead line, and hard enough to have made a hole through anything not armor-plated. And that it turned out, was the case with him exactly.

As that drive came sizzlin' at him, with me yellin' for first, and the crowd fairly crazy, Bab didn't want to emit an exclamation of horror and turn sideways for a jump out of the way. The ball hit him fair on the pistol pocket, and as I said, it struck him dead visions of the ambulance, a mangled pitcher off the grounds, with a sympathetic, though triumphant, crowd following.

But it never happened. Instead of bounding off and leaving Bab Brooks in a bleeding heap, the ball, after a dull thud, and a rippling sound, just stuck to him, while the crowd yelled and watched each other's eyes bulge out. Bab spun around a couple of times, but his little catcher kept his white about him and yelled for the ball. Bab picked it off his side and lammed it into him just in time to hit Pinch at the plate, though he made a good slide for it.

You've probably guessed how it happened. It was the worn and battered shoe from that gray stage horse's hind foot that a nail was sticking from it, and the ball caught on that, leaving it like a berry for Babington Brooks to pluck. And it was a luscious berry for him, for, of course, it won him his first game and put us out of the lead.

When Josh reached town that night Bab had that horseshoe, all decorated with ribbons, laced in his coat, and was buyin' champagne by the gallon, while he explained to all hands how he had broke his Jonah at last. And he went right on and pitched every game he pitched in that year, always with the gray horse's shoe in his back pocket, and though I didn't hear of it again, I'm pretty sure it certainly was the cause of his landing in the American League the next year. Now he's in the National, and getting big, and he's got the shoe on his back that he owes all his success to that horseshoe, and the nail that stuck in it.

BENGAL IS ANGRY AGAINST BRITISH

Fifty Thousand Have Sworn Not to Use British Goods

Calcutta, September 30.—Fifty thousand Bengalis assembled at the Temple of Kallighat, have sworn by the Goddess Kali to boycott British goods as a protest against the partition of the province of Bengal. The administrative work of the province, according to the views of the home and Indian Governments had grown to such unwieldy proportions as to necessitate a division of the labor, hence the partition of the province into two lieutenant-governorships. The Bengalis are intensely resentful at what they characterize as an attempt to split the population and impair the Bengalis' nationality. At scores of meetings throughout Bengal these people have pledged themselves to support the boycott, which has now received the sanction of the priests.

The scene at the Temple at Kallighat, the greatest in Bengal, was striking, when the immense assembly took the oath, in the holy presence of the Goddess Kali, "not to use foreign goods, buy articles in foreign shops when available in native shops, or employ foreigners on any work that can be done by our countrymen."

The High Priest then placed a mystic vermilion symbol on the forehead of each of those who took the oath. The foreign firms are already feeling seriously the effect of the boycott.

Cerebro-Spinal

Meningitis

(The Fatal Disease)

Has again broken out in the towns of Toronto, Hamilton, South March and North March, Ontario.

Professor Weichselbaum, of Vienna, the first authority on Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis, says:—

"The disease generally occurs owing to the sudden changes in the temperature."

"Symptoms: Mucous inflammation, the nasal conditions resembling those often seen in common catarrh."

"The disease spreads from the nose to the meninges (membranes of the brain)."

"In many cases death ensues after a few days, in others after three and even four weeks."

Prepare and strengthen your system to fight the excitant or germ of this horrible disease.
