

News in brief

Big battle

SAIGON (AP)—A Viet Cong regiment of some 2,500 men, backed by artillery and mortar fire, failed today to smash a big U.S. force pushing toward a vital Communist hideout in the jungles of South Vietnam near the Cambodian border.

The Communists left hundreds of their dead on the field as they fled before plane and cannon fire.

Would testify

TORONTO (CP)—Marcel Timm, described by other patients as a hero who saved 14 men in a fire at the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board Hospital early Friday, says he wants to testify at any investigation into the fire.

"The place was a firetrap," said Mr. Timm, 42, of Hamilton, in an interview Friday. It's hard to believe there could be conditions like this in a hospital where men were handicapped and crippled."

Seek two

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—District Attorney Jim Garrison has asked Canadian and Texas authorities to arrest two men charged in an incident which Garrison's office says "may or may not be related" to his investigation of the Kennedy assassination.

Garrison telegraphed arrest warrants Friday to Montreal for Gordon Novel and to Dallas, Tex., for Sergio Areacha Smith, based on charges of conspiring to burglarize a munitions bunker in 1961.

More shipping

OTTAWA (CP)—Winter ship traffic in the upper St. Lawrence River appears to be leveling off and informants say it is leading to new pressure on the government to implement a still-secret plan that would give it fresh momentum.

Transport department officials are reluctant to be quoted about the subject because of the delicate political situation involved. Atlantic ports are fighting to stem the loss of winter business to Montreal.

Demonstrate

VANCOUVER (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson planned a quiet day today, following an active round of events Friday that was capped by another gauntlet-running of anti-Vietnam war demonstrators.

Police had to use force to clear a path through about 100 demonstrators when the prime minister and Mrs. Pearson arrived for a Liberal party fundraising dinner at the Hotel Vancouver.

OTTAWA (CP)—The government starts a new fiscal year today with a big budgetary deficit for 1968-69 and prospects of sharply higher spending in 1967-68.

On the basis of treasury accounts made public Friday night and the year-end accounting transfers that usually take place, the old fiscal year probably ended with a deficit of $470,000,000.

Strike vote

WASHINGTON (AP)—The giant Teamsters Union starts taking a strike vote today in its first countryside showdown with the U.S. trucking industry.

A major segment of the industry threatened to lock out some 200,000 workers if the Teamsters carry out their strategy of striking a few companies at a time.

Few children

MONTREAL (CP)—The sins of habitual criminals are seldom visited on their sons because such men are unlikely to become fathers, a Montreal conference on crime and delinquency was told Friday.

Lydia Keilner of the McGill University clinic in forensic psychiatry said that in her studies of persistent offenders—men who make a living by crime—she found 72 per cent of marriageable age were single and the rest produced very few children.

Quebec entry into space research urged

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec government was urged Friday to enter the space race by helping to sponsor McGill University's Space Research Institute.

Eric Kierans, Liberal member for the Montreal riding of Notre Dame de Grace, noted that the federal government is terminating its agreement to help finance the institute as of July 1, 1967.

Prime project of the institute is a high-altitude research project to explore the earth's atmosphere by firing projectiles from a space tube or space gun which was formerly a 16-inch naval cannon.

Mr. Kierans told the legislature: "I wonder if a government with imagination and initiative might not consider the idea of taking over the space research institute of McGill University and creating a space research institute of Quebec."

URGES EXTENSION

Mr. Kierans suggested that the project be extended to other Quebec universities in Sherbrooke, Quebec City and Montreal and be administered by Quebec-Hydro, which now is charged with sponsoring large research projects.

The federal government and the United States Army now are joint sponsors of the project, each chipping in about $1,500,000 a year under terms of a three-year agreement which expires in July.

Dr. Gerald V. Bull, director of the institute, says the U.S. Army will continue its funding at probably the same amount, forcing the institute to cut back on programs which included firing a projectile into orbit.

However, the possibility remained that the institute might find funds elsewhere to help finance its installations at Highwater, in Quebec's Eastern Townships, and a firing range in Barbados.

Premier Johnson said he is not too familiar with the project and would be interested in having more information.

WEATHER

Mainly cloudy today with a chance of showers in the afternoon and evening. Cloudy Sunday with sunny periods. Mild. Winds southwest 15 during the day. High today and low tonight at Sherbrooke 55 and 40.

Quebec viewpoint changes with government

Budget 'progressive' but restrictive, too

By JACQUES ROLLAND

Jacques Rolland is a Montreal economist and businessman, and was financial editor of the French language business magazine, Les Affaires.

MONTREAL — At a time when statistics indicated an economic slowdown in the offing, Quebecers are handed an austerity budget. The first budget of the new Union Nationale government has been described as being both conservative and revolutionary.

The budget was set up with two objectives in mind: Social justice and education. The emphasis on these two objectives makes the budget a progressive one.

The spirit of the "quiet revolution" was noted for its radical educational reforms which, surprisingly enough, seem destined to survive under Mr. Johnson's government.

But the budget is also one of restrictions. Quebec has decided not to live above its means. Instead of asking the generations of tomorrow to pay for the expenses of today, the Johnson Administration wants to live within the means at its disposal.

This is an important change of view, compared with the policies pursued by the former government. For members of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, the new budget is not the work of a true minister of finance, but of an accountant who is unable to associate a budget with the needs arising from economic conditions.

But Quebec really did not have any choice. The province had to slow down on borrowings.

In 1960, Quebec's debt stood at $1,067 million or about 37 per cent of Ontario's debt at the time. The debt is now close to $4 billion or more than 90 per cent of Ontario's direct and guaranteed debt.

Quebec is still going to borrow $450 million in the next fiscal year instead of the $525 million it borrowed this year.

Increases granted to teachers and hospital employees will cost the government an extra $177 million. Taxes had to increase and Mr. Dozois, Quebec's Finance Minister has picked the sales tax which has been increased from six per cent to eight per cent, the highest percentage in Canada.

Expenditures for education are going to increase by 45 per cent. Education will cost more than $1 billion, of which $736 million will be assumed by the provincial government and the remainder of the local school boards through municipal taxes.

The government is extending free education to the vocational schools leading to university or skilled trades. The government also intends to build 131 schools next year, while the Federal Government will share 75 per cent of the cost incurred.

Operating grants to universities have been increased from last year's $44 million to $67 million. The injustice done to McGill University by the Lesage Government is being repaired and McGill, which protested against the discrimination of which it was the victim, will receive $15,191,000, a whopping increase against last year's $7,156,000 grant.

BABY BONUS

The most revolutionary aspect of the budget is certainly the baby bonus. For the first time in Canadian history a provincial government is going to distribute a baby bonus and, moreover, this baby bonus will be adjusted to the number of children a family has.

In addition to the family allowances paid by Ottawa, the Quebec Government will give $20 a year for the first child, $35 for the second, $40 for the third, $50 for the fourth, $60 for the fifth and $70 for the sixth and each additional child.

An additional $10 will be paid for each child between 12 and 16, the age at which the family allowances are withdrawn. However, Quebec has abolished the income tax exemption of $300 a year per child.

Families with dependent children above 16 will receive a school allowance of $10 for each child in this category and will still be able to claim an exemption of $550 for each. The baby bonuses will cost $88 million to the Government and by dropping the $300 exemption the Government will save $32 million. This plan will help 650,000 of the 800,000 families in the Province of Quebec.

TAX RELIEF

Another major aspect of the budget is the tax relief accorded to low wage earners. Bachelors earning less than $2,000 and married persons earning less than $4,000 will be free of income tax. Furthermore they will receive a reimbursement of half of their contributions to the Quebec pension plan.

A married man earning $4,010 used to pay $118.70 in income taxes. This man will now be paying only $10. However a married man who earns $4,200 will still pay $133.50 in income taxes.

HIGH PRICE

This situation is rather strange if you consider the price a man who is earning $4,000 has to pay the Government if he wants to earn $200 more a year by working overtime. In his case it is preferable to remain poor rather than be forced to work overtime.

The political history of Sherbrooke 1867-1967

At the time of Confederation it was taken for granted that Sherbrooke would be represented by English speaking Conservatives, both in Ottawa and at Quebec City, says Dr. Gordon A. Rothney in a special centennial year feature series to be published starting Monday in the Sherbrooke Daily Record.

Dr. Rothney is the Dean of Arts at Lakehead University in Port Arthur. He is a graduate of Sherbrooke High School and of Bishop's University.

In his six part series, Dr. Rothney traces the orderly transition of an isolated, English speaking, community into an integrated part of the larger provincial community of Quebec, politically dominated by the French speaking majority.

Read "The Political History of Sherbrooke." It offers an insight into our community as it is today and how it grew to be what it is.

Britain gambles on new reactor and will only dominate the market for a decade or two.

By CARL MOLLINS

"The full potential of the vast energy content of fission energy will become accessible when the fast reactor breeder system is introduced into the electricity generating systems."

The Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, which groups 21 industrial nations, forecasts fast reactors will supplant all other types by about 1990. Britain which has been operating "conventional" nuclear electricity stations longer than any other country, is set to get a head start on the OECD forecast with a target to introduce commercial fast reactors by 1960.

An experimental fast reactor that produces electricity for two Scottish towns has been operating for eight years — at full power for four years — at Dounreay in northern Scotland. About 2,500 scientists, technicians and workers have been building a bigger prototype for a year with scheduled completion by 1971. Penney says commercial stations based on the $90,000,000 prototype could be in service in Britain by 1978, or 1980 at the latest.

Only the Soviet Union, with a test reactor on the Caspian Sea, is believed to be as far advanced as Britain at this stage in the fast reactor field. The United States, which produced electricity from a small experimental power breeder 15 years ago at Arco, Idaho, suffered a setback last year when an accident melted the big Enrico Fermi fast-breeder furnace in Virginia. But the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission has decided to give priority to its breeder program with a target for operational power plants in the mid-1980s.

Space-age traffic controls

By DAVE MACDONALD

MONTREAL (CP)—Electronic wizardry and airborne cops will get you into the heart of Montreal, park your car and then help to whisk you to the site of the world's fair this year.

Your cooperation will of course be needed but the province's top traffic brains have got together to make your trip as painless as possible.

The Regional Committee of Road Transportation for Expo 67 consists of provincial experts from the roads, tourism, industry and commerce and municipal affairs departments. Expo executives, Montreal city hall men and the directors of the provincial and Montreal city police forces.

They say their master plan will result in as smooth a traffic flow as is possible and that visitors should have no parking problems.

Work on guiding visitors to Montreal starts at the border where booklets will be handed out containing a map of the route to Expo and a brief explanation of the sign system, routes through the city and parking areas.

ARROWS POINT WAY

Normal highway signs will be augmented by big blue signs with a large Expo symbol in the top half and the words Expo 67 in the lower half.

On expressways, workmen already are putting up 200 of the composite signs, measuring four feet wide by eight feet high.

Another 200 measuring 30 inches by 63 inches will line ordinary highways, and 500 measuring 18 inches by 38 inches will be erected along Montreal streets.

The signs have directional arrows to guide motorists. Once you get within 20 miles of Montreal you will move into a traffic control network employing information from three sources.

These are detectors on roads and parking areas, provincial and municipal police, patrol cars and motorcycles, and a helicopter air patrol service.

This information will be fed into a computer at the downtown McGill Street headquarters of the Quebec Provincial Police where a space-age console decked with switches and flashing lights will let controllers organize a smooth traffic flow.

SIGNAL SAYS LOT FULL

The system includes 17 detectors installed on approach roads which will indicate the volume and average speed of traffic, and other detectors at the entry and exit of large parking areas.

Parking lot detectors will flash a signal to a simple adding device in the computer which will show the number of vehicles in one lot. When a parking area is 95 per cent full a light will blink on the traffic signal control panel and an alarm will go off.

One of the controllers then will activate automatic signals set up at various strategic points in the city to guide you to parking areas. These signals can be used by the controller to point motorists to other parking areas which still have room.

The committee expects an extra 2,300,000 cars to enter the city during the six-month run of Expo. This is based on forecast figures of 35,000,000 entrances to the fair.

VIOLATORS WARNED

Accordingly, they have provided parking for 40,500 cars at any one time and at rates controlled by law. This does not include commercial lots and hotel or motel parking.

Literary magazine dedicated to poet

This year's second and final edition of the student literary magazine from Bishop's University is to appear next week.

It is dedicated to the university's first poet-in-residence Ralph Gustafson.

Mr. Gustafson, a distinguished Canadian poet for some years and a popular teacher at Bishop's for the past four, was appointed resident poet in 1965.

During his time at Bishop's he has amongst other things, contributed critical assistance to the time-honored but still struggling literary magazine.

The idea of honoring him in this edition of it was conceived by The Mitre's present editor, Jana Veverka.

"We hope it will be received as one of the best Mitres up to this time," she said.

"It has some really good contributions from both inside and outside the university."

The latter group is headed by the outstanding poet and anthologist A. J. M. Smith.

He has contributed an ode written to salute his friend Prof. Gustafson on the appointment as poet-in-residence, which will be printed along with Prof. Gustafson's poetic reply.

"Besides that, there is a second poem from Prof. Smith," said Miss Veverka, "a longer work written especially for this edition of our magazine."

Other contributors from outside the university include Michael Ondaatje, David Lobdell, and Eve Norton, who have each offered poems, and June Foote, who has designed the magazine's cover.

In addition, the current most recently published collection, Sift in an Hourglass.

"It concludes," said Miss Veverka, "that Sift in an Hourglass is a gift of pure gold."

And third, the editors have contributed an interview with Mr. Gustafson on the state of Canadian poetry today.

The editors say that while he is critical of a relative lack of creativity and significance in Canadian writing, he concludes with optimism that Canada has as much potential as any other country to produce an Eliot or an Ezra Pound.

Ralph Gustafson, the man honored in this edition, is the author of eight books of poetry and a number of short stories, and editor of four anthologies.

His published books of poems include The Golden Chalice (1935), Alfred the Great (1937), Epithalamium in Time of War (1940), Lyrics Unromantic (1941), Flight into Darkness (1944), Rivers among Rocks (1960), Rocky Mountain Poems (1965), and Sift in an Hourglass (1966).

As an anthologist, he is probably best known for his Penguin books of Canadian verse.

As a critic, he has contributed to the CBC's Musical Diary for several years.

An assistant professor of English at Bishop's, he lectures for the most part on modern literature — especially poetry and especially Canadian.

As the university's first poet-in-residence, he has given readings and talks at Bishop's and elsewhere, has written verse for special occasions, and has advised students trying to write.

His creative and editorial work is continuing. Besides Ixion's Wheel, he has been revising his Penguin anthology to include the most recent Canadian verse, and collecting a book of his short stories from the past decade.

A man and a poet of considerable vitality, he believes that:

Poetry should never be a thing dead in books, but alive in personalities."

Minor business items were attended to March 23, including a motion to spend $250 to help pay transportation of children to the Mt. Orford ski centre last winter, and a vote to spend $3,960.10 to exchange two police patrol cars.

Conclusion of March's business was last Tuesday, when a $709,000 bond issue was approved. Among more important items tabled, was a decision to buy electrical cable from the Northern Electric Company Limited at a price of $4,488.48.

Other electrical materials are to be purchased from Northern Electric for the amount of $8,440.17.

Tenders for another truck were received from Smith and Freres Limitee ($19,869.56) and Truck Engineering Limited ($18,752.58). The matter was held aside for study.

Zoning problems face Magog again, and constituted discussion last Tuesday. The city has decided to purchase property, some falling under the expropriation ruling. The amount committed for four properties is $14,100, and three others have to be negotiated.

The purchase of policemen's shirts cost $595.08, and 130 grey and 15 white shirts will be delivered from the firm of J. P. Gaudreau Eng., for this amount. Others bidding were R. Beaudry Eng., who asked $860.30, and Pete Lavoie Confection, whose price was $631.31.

Magog's next official council meeting is scheduled for next Thursday.

MAGOG — (Special — City council considered tenders on an electrical department truck, and accepted one from Memphremagog Automobile for $7,102, tax included. Cost of the vehicle is to be written off at the rate of 1/5 the value per year.

Another purchase order of $2,053.75 for 25 police uniforms went to J. P. Gaudreau Eng., lowest bidder in another tender issue.

In another transaction, the city of Magog will purchase photographic equipment valued at $944 from Armand Bergeron for its police department for $500.

Approval for payment of $1,294.05 to the Sherbrooke Daily Record commercial printing department was approved, covering costs of a full color multi-fold tourist brochure was adapted.

Another major item of city business concluded at the regular March meeting was approval of a contract with Ronald Pomerleau to act as service mechanic for the fire department, for which the annual pay will be $2,200.

Sentences suspended for youths and impaired driver is fined

A Sherbrooke man was given a suspended sentence yesterday in Sherbrooke's Court of Sessions in connection with obtaining money under false pretenses on two separate occasions.

Richard Francis, 21, of 314 14th Avenue in Sherbrooke was ordered to post a $500 bond to guarantee to keep the peace for a year.

Francis pleaded guilty to having obtained $60 and $74.20.

Francis told the court that he had no record.

Crown prosecutor Andre

Langlais told the court that the victims had been re-imbursed.

A Sherbrooke man was fined $50 and had his drivers licence revoked for three months for having driven an automobile while being impaired.

John Gauthier of 135 London Street pleaded guilty in Court of Sessions with Judge Benoit Turmel presiding.

Defence lawyer Laurent Dube told the court that Gauthier earns a living as a landscaper and truck driver. Mr.

Dube stated that the accused has three children.

Two Bromptonville youths were given suspended sentences on condition that they post a peace bond of $500 each for the period of one year, in connection with a charge of attempted theft.

Real Bedard and Roger Sicotte both pleaded guilty to having attempted to steal two car batteries valued at $40 and $27 each.

The pair were ordered to reimburse their victims because both batteries fell and broke.

Sweeping of chimneys to start Monday

Percy Donahue, Director, of the Sherbrooke Fire Department has announced that chimney sweeping will begin Monday.

The chimney sweepers, licensed by the city, will start with the chimneys on Wellington Street North and then on Wellington Street South.

Should the weather be unfavorable, the chimney sweeping operation will be postponed until the following Monday and run through October.

Director Donahue asks all citizens to cooperate with the chimney sweepers by seeing that the chimney clean out door is accessible.

Bylaw 624 specifies that each chimney must be cleaned at least once a year.

If the owner cleans the chimneys of his properties, he must report it to the Fire Department.

The Fire Prevention Bureau will then inspect the chimneys and issue an Inspection Certificate to the owner, if the work is judged satisfactory.

Father took child; acquitted

A 37-year-old Martinville man was acquitted yesterday of charges of breaking and entering with the intention of committing a crime by Sessions Judge Benoit Turmel.

Fernand Raymond appeared for trial yesterday at the Sherbrooke Court of Sessions.

Raymond and Aime Pouliot had entered the home on August 24, 1966 of a St. Isidore farmer, Fernand Ruel to reclaim a two-year-old child, the daughter of Pouliot.

The father had been awarded custody of the child after a legal separation from his wife. When Pouliot asked for the child Ruel refused to give her to him.

Pouliot went to see a lawyer who advised him to get a statement from the St. Isidore farm and demanded the child. He showed the document but Mr. and Mrs. Ruel did not believe it.

On August 24, 1966, Pouliot returned to the St. Isidore farm and demanded the child. He showed the document but Mr. and Mrs. Ruel did not believe it.

Defence lawyer Jean Cormier at this point stated that there was no breaking and entering because the accused and Pouliot did not break anything, did not steal anything, but walked in through the front door.

When the two men came to get the child, said Mrs. Ruel, Pouliot seemed in a bad mood. This terminology was suggested

The camera records exactly what it sees

"The camera never lies". How many times have you heard that one?

The real truth of the statement is to be found in the fact that the camera records exactly what it sees.

Of course what you see and produce a more interesting, more glamorous, more beautiful effect. Or could distort the picture completely.

When used by an expert a truly great photo can bring tears to the eyes of the man of iron, provoke laughter to all beholders, cause happiness.

In its own humble way the camera has equalled the paintbrush as an interpretive instrument. It may never replace it but it should be recognized for its worth.

Ultimately the worth of the creation is determined by the man holding the easel or the camera.

Lighting, tone control, contrast, angle, all are tools of the medium.

Varying any of these might change the result.

Conflicting evidence leads to acquittal in still possession

A Montreal man was found not guilty yesterday, in Sherbrooke Court of Sessions, of being in possession of a still in a farm house in St. Jacques Le Majeur.

Roland Proulx of 4585 Rosemount Boulevard, was arrested March 9. He was judged yesterday.

The Crown attempted to prove that the accused had rented a shack where a still was found, saying police had found the accused's fingerprints on the boiler equipment.

Sessions Judge Benoit Turmel said he gave the benefit of a doubt to the accused because of contradictory evidence by witnesses.

Raymond Gaudreau told the court that he had rented a shack to the accused while a witness, Lucien Gosselin who pleaded guilty when the still was raided, said that he had rented the shack, at first at a fee of $20 a month and then at the price of $100 per week, causing the judge to ask whether this was a shack at Expo 67.

The judge ruled that fingerprints did not establish the possession of the still, and pointed out that there was no alternate charge of conspiracy laid.

Rehearse romantic comedy

"Time Remembered" is a ruefully amusing romantic comedy by the French playwright, Jean Anouilh, and the story is as refreshing as springtime itself. There is something of the unashamed Cinderella fable in the narrative.

A dashing young French nobleman has been brooding morosely over his late sweetheart, whom he loved for only three days before she died, and his devoted aunt, a charming and somewhat scatterbrained old lady, brings to him an innocent little milliner who more or less resembles the lost dream girl, hoping to make him forget his rather elaborate sadness.

That the little milliner eventually disperses the Prince's ghost-sweetheart and wins the elegant young man for herself is not supposed to surprise the audience, for this is the true tradition of fairytales. But that this Cinderella captures her Prince is only an incidental point of this light, gay and fragile comedy.

Its main element is its gently mocking comment on manners, wealth and social position. Anouilh has many observations to make and does so with playful irony.

The Lennoxville Players are in full rehearsal for this play now on stage at Bishop's College School and the stage sets and costumes are proceeding rapidly.

The play begins to live as the world of fantasy is created on stage. The play is sponsored by the Lennoxville Wing of the Sherbrooke Hospital Auxiliary and the ladies are busy now with ticket sales for the performances on April 20, 21 and 22.

Curbing tongue of civil servants

Premier Johnson is perturbed over the growing tendency of provincial civil servants to talk out of turn by making announcements on government policy that should properly come from the minister in charge of the department.

Unquestionably he is right in his concern, as in too many cases it has turned out that statements made by supposedly responsible civil servants to the effect the government had decided to follow a certain course of action were to say the least premature.

Very often events have shown that the declarations represented more what the official in question hoped would occur rather than any definite decision on the part of the administration.

In some cases these announcements may be considered as something of a power play by the civil servant making the statement. He hopes so much public pressure may be generated for his proposal that the government will be forced to accede to his idea.

But justified as Mr. Johnson's concern may be it is doubtful if the parliamentary inquiry he suggests is needed to correct the situation.

If the cabinet is really administering the province, the ministers should be able to advise their underlings in no uncertain terms that they should hold their tongues.

This advice need not be in the form of an official directive — it could be done in a private conversation.

Hayden S. Pearson's COUNTRY FLAVOR:

Many things make April and spring

Man cannot say that April has one element. As the days work along into the month, the magic of spring is fused in a test tube. For some, spring arrives with the first robin; others look for green threads woven into the brown carpets of fields and meadows. Pussy willows' gray noses are a certain sign; the swelling buds on the lilac by the kitchen door tell us a winter has passed.

But spring is not a simple thing. When the glowing tips of peonies lift above dark soil one feels the turn has come; but the shining color that foretells beautiful flowers is still in bud form; it is just one part of the compound. There are days of mellow warmth, blue skies, and cossetting south winds. There are dark days with sudden showers and gusty winds. Frosty nights crust garden soil and thin ice covers the barnyard trough.

Part of April's magic compound is the music of the new season. It was written long ago that when the flowers appear on earth, the time of the singing of birds has come and the voice of the turtle dove is heard in the land. Redwings whistle in the lowlands; crows call from the elms in the meadows; cock pheasants challenge from the woodland edge.

We cannot understand the miracle of life. Man keeps searching the unknown. But we know that the great forces that govern life are on schedule and that the miracle has come true again. April is many things and when the peepers' haunting cries sound in warm evening darkness, we know the fourth month is an assurance of life's basic principle.

Other papers say:

Ugly men and beautiful machines

In an increasingly automated age, man finds himself becoming more and more the slave of the machine he once mastered, and ever more subservient to the mindless commands of the robots which dominate his everyday life. He has learned to curb his impatience to accord with the impersonal precision of the traffic light; to entrust his life, without a single misgiving, to the mechanized mysteries of the automatic elevator whisking him aloft to dizzying heights, and to dutifully recite his name and business to the recorded robot which answers so many telephones after office hours. He accepts the findings of the computer, the new god of a new age, with an unquestioning faith never accorded the Delphic oracle, and displays a reverence toward a piece of perforated paper tape that would not be unworthy of Moses' tablets of stone. In short, he has come increasingly to regard himself as a quivering mass of fallible flesh to be abased before the unfailing precision of gears and cams and microcircuits.

But a curious sidelight to man's increasing deference to machine is the resultant change in the appearance of both. For with each passing year, machines grow in size, in majesty, in beauty of line and color, while man becomes ever more featureless, more insignificant, more ugly. One has become accustomed, of course, to equate the most magnificent symbol of status in civilized society, with the paunchy little man in the elevator shoes and the big cigar, but there is an even greater paradox than this amusing affinity of ugly little men for big beautiful cars.

To appreciate it at its fullest one should visit any large and busy airport at night. With the whistling scream and the trailing flames of a shooting star, a great aircraft drops from the heavens, alighting with a gleaming metal, and rolls to a stop. As it turns and thunders up to the airport, towering high above its diminutive attendant, both men and machines, it seems the very epitome of mechanical perfection, its breath-taking beauty more in keeping with the glittering stars of its natural element than the mundane commonplaces of the earth about it. As it wheels to a stop, one unconsciously awaits the opening of its door and the appearance of its passengers with bated breath. What will they be like, these godlike people who have descended to our sordid city in so splendid a fashion from the boundless corridors of the sky? What soaring souls could create so beautiful a machine —

And then, out they tumble, the tumbled passengers of the Miami flight, rubbing the sleep from their eyes and the cramp from their joints with bun hats on their heads and bottles of liquor under their arms. Here they come, grumbling and gross in girdle and gabardine, festooned with cameras, horn rims and hearing aids; can this ghastly crew be all we can look for from the starry heavens?

Alas, even so, the beauty is in the machine, not its use. The tiny satellite star that man first made and then, godlike, hung far in the shrieking void of outer space, is used to bounce the Beatles' Bonanza to the far side of the world. The wonder and beauty man captures in his machine all too often evade him in its use.

Rum, tourism and poverty

Puerto Rico to choose future

WASHINGTON (CP) — Puerto Rico, a Caribbean island in the sun noted for rum, tourism and poverty, votes July 23 on its political future.

The options for the 2,668,000 Puerto Ricans: becoming an independent republic or the 51st U.S. state, or retaining a special half-and-half status as a U.S. commonwealth which may offer the best of both worlds. The last choice seems heavily favored.

The plebiscite will be the first opportunity Puerto Rico has had to indicate its desired political status since it was ceded to the U.S. in 1898 after the Spanish-American war.

By comparison, Newfoundland faced a simpler choice in 1919 when it chose to become the 10th Canadian province rather than remain Britain's oldest colony.

Puerto Ricans now are U.S. citizens. Several hundred thousand, in fact, live in the U.S., primarily in New York City. Its exports find ready access to the U.S. and it draws federal U.S. financial assistance.

But Puerto Rico pays no federal taxes. It has self-government, can not vote for a U.S. president and has a non-voting representative in the U.S. Congress. Puerto Ricans are subject to the U.S. military draft.

Further, while the labor force of more than 700,000 is afflicted by a jobless rate of perhaps 12 per cent, by Latin American American standards Puerto Ricans are comparatively wealthy, and increasingly so.

Its ties with the U.S. have produced significant economic expansion during the last 20 years. Net income per capita runs around $900 annually, low by North American standards but perhaps the highest in the remainder of the Western Hemisphere.

Aside from traditional sugar, rum and tobacco production, industry has been moving in, especially petroleum and chemical plants.

Against this background, the forces behind independence or statehood are small. Some Communist influence is seen in pressures for independence. But, while Cuba is a close neighbor, the impact seems minimal.

One reason for anticipating a substantial victory for continued commonwealth status is the record of the Popular Democratic party. This party, supporting extension of the status quo, has controlled Puerto Rican politics for 20 years and seems just about as strong as ever.

The PRAYER FOR TODAY
The Upper Room

I can do all things in him who strengthens me. (Philippians 4:13, RSV).

PRAYER: Lord of life, giver of strength of grace to the souls of Thy people, we pray that we may "be strong in the Lord and in the strength of his might." Enable us, Christ Jesus our Lord, to be faithful servants, and to do Thy holy will. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

Adventures with God

The Great Physician prescribes no tranquilizer or stimulant

Preoccupation with, and use of mind stimulating and mind tranquilizing drugs has become a Centennial Year status symbol in Canada. Anyone who does not have a psychologist, psychiatrist or a prescription for one of the mind-affecting drugs is just not "with it" in these psychedelic days. And anyone who still believes that The Great Physician, Jesus Christ, has provided us with the greatest mind releaser ever invented or created is squarer than square.

Said Jesus: "But when the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, is come, He shall teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." John 14:25-26. After the disciples were told that Jesus was alive they remembered the words which He had spoken before His death and were able to record them for our edification. When the Spirit touches the memory of men and women today, they not only remember the words spoken by Jesus, but they remember the sins which are open and naked in the eyes of God.

And they may be filled with remorse, if not with sincere regret. But the Holy Spirit not only brings to mind the unpleasant experiences of the past, but it prompts the mind of the believer in secular as well as spiritual things, giving us the power to recall dates, data, scenes, and sermons which have been long forgotten. And this is without the use of drugs or human unpleasant side effects from scribe oral drugs or injections. His is strictly a mental influence of God's Holy Spirit on one's natural organs.

As I sorted my mail a letter written in a distinctive script turned up. "Where did I see that handwriting before?" I wondered. Memory supplied the answer. I reached for my 1947 scrapbook. Yes 20 years ago the writer had taken issue with me on a point dealing with mental health. Here he was again after a long silence, still pushing his claim that drugs are a menace; questioning the necessity, validity and honesty of Medicare, and advocating a return to the simple natural methods for hygiene and peace of mind.

It required some time to read through the literature he enclosed, but in the light of today's tragic events and the increase of mental illness I was glad to do so.

There is no doubt that humanity is swirling in a vicious circle. The side effects of drugs is a major problem.

JANE SCOTT

Some of the wonder drugs have already worked havoc. The scores of deformed babies and the drug addicts are examples of the side effects of prescribed drugs. But these are numerically insignificant when compared with the mentally and spiritually inadequate patients who fill our hospitals. It is the spiritually sick who need the touch of the Great Physician.

International Community?

UK's foreign students unready

LONDON (CP) — Foreign students who come to Britain for advanced studies and training are often not properly prepared for the experience and don't get enough help after they arrive, a privately-sponsored survey contends.

With an ironic question mark in the title, International Community? is a 95-page report on a study-in-depth of the overseas student at British universities and colleges. It was published jointly by two of its sponsors, the National Union of Students and the Scottish Union of Students.

Included are tips about the pitfalls awaiting any Canadian or other student planning to continue his studies in the United Kingdom. But since Canadians probably face fewer problems here than most foreign students, the study is more likely to make profitable reading for both educationists and stay-at-home students in Canada, now that Canadian universities are welcoming an increasing number of non-Canadians.

STUDIED CONDITIONS

More than 70,000 students from other countries were in Britain in the 1965-66 academic year, including about 1,000 from Canada. The report by B. S. Morris, a Scottish sociologist, is based on a study of the conditions faced by about 30,000 studying at colleges and universities. His report details 74 recommendations to help ease the problem — from better and more forthright briefings to the student before his departure for Britain to provision of suitable counselling services for the bewildered foreigner after his arrival. In addition to complex problems faced by any student moving into the atmosphere of a university, Morris finds the overseas student encounters other difficulties. He must make adjustments in his relations with authority and the community adapt to new morals and modes, find housing from sometimes hostile landlords,

COMMENT

Lubor J. Zink

OTTAWA — (TNS) — Judging by policy statements and comments emanating from the capitals of the Atlantic alliance, the quest for détente in Europe is regarded almost without exception, as the product of two factors: the Kremlin's alleged abandonment of the concept of world revolution and the joint Soviet-American worry about the dangers created by the militant madness of Mao Tse-tung's regime in China.

While the fear that Peking might play havoc with the cold war rules that have come to be tacitly observed by Moscow and Washington undoubtedly influences the search for rapprochement in Europe, there is not a shred of evidence that the Kremlin has abandoned its ultimate goal of Communist world conquest.

On the contrary: One only has to read the transcript of last year's tri-continental conference in Havana to realize how the Sino-Soviet split and rivalry over the leadership of international Communism have forced increased Soviet assistance to every so-called liberation movement throughout the underdeveloped world.

Remarkable moderation?

People who see rosy détente prospects argue that while the Kremlin has to talk tough when wrestling with the influence of Peking's crude militancy, it acts with remarkable moderation.

This has been partly true for some time in Europe and North America where Moscow has discovered that a soft line accomplishes far more than missile rattling, but it is disproved by policy statements for domestic consumption and by increased shipments of Soviet bloc arms to every trouble spot outside the old world.

Not long ago, Soviet party theoretician Professor Rozental wrote in Pravda: "When no other possibility exists to smash the obstacles which stand in the way of gathering forces of Socialist change (i.e. Communist grab of power) except by force of arms, a Marxist party will follow this path with all determination, boldly raising the banner of armed insurrection at the opportune moment."

In another article Pravda stated: "The various forms of direct aid by Socialist countries to revolutionary movements — that is to say, armed intervention — are by no means excluded."

In Latin America, Africa, the Middle East and the Far East, the Soviet Union and its satellites follow these precepts unflinchingly and live up to their emergence from the tri-continental conference as the principal architects of subversion and violence.

Apart from supplying practically all the heavy military equipment needed by the Communist forces in Vietnam, the emphasis now appears to be on feeding the flames of "revolution" in the Middle East where the Pan-Arab ambitions of Egypt's dictator Nasser serve as the vehicle of Soviet aims in the turbulent area.

These aims include control of the major source of western Europe's oil supplies; direct access to the Indian Ocean; neutralization of U.S. military forces in the Mediterranean area; and a firm base for Communist expansion in North and East Africa.

To achieve these aims, the Soviet bloc keeps Nasser's army (both in Egypt and Yemen) supplied with modern weapons.

If reports from Israel can be relied on, the recently installed Russian surface-to-air missiles in Egypt are seen to be supplemented by short and medium range surface-to-surface missiles capable of carrying nuclear warheads.

In other words, while pursuing a NATO-crippling political détente with Western Europe and North America under the guise of preoccupation with Mao's China, Moscow is hatching a flanking operation in the Middle East which, if successful, would put the Kremlin in the type of blackmailing position Khrushchev tried but failed to establish in Cuba.

This time the Soviet strategists may succeed, because America's attention if focused on the Far East a crises-free period in Europe has put public opinion on both sides of the Atlantic off guard, and the Middle East is geographically and politically sufficiently remote not to cause much concern.

It is doubtful that installation of Soviet missiles in Egypt would ring the alarm bell we all heard so clearly during the Caribbean confrontation.

The prospect of a realistic appraisal of Soviet double-faced strategy, which is finding eager response even in Washington and to which the Pope, de Gaulle, Paul Martin and a host of other public figures of the Western world have given a semblance of respectability, would be much better if it were generally realized that the so-called détente in Europe is not the result of some basic change in the Kremlin's policy, but the aftermath of the Khrushchev-Kennedy showdown.

Unfortunately, the starry-eyed euphoria over what some commentators call "the end of the cold war" suggests that this is not the case.

My forecast is that awakening to the fact that even in Europe any further lessening of tensions is not a safe and automatic process which can be taken for granted, will be quite painful.

Do we have mortgage money today? That's why we're advertising! But mortgage funds are still not as freely available as we would like, so there is a practical limit on the number of mortgages which your Royal Banker can negotiate at the present time. Moral: it may pay you to be an early bird.

A sod turning ceremony is planned for next Saturday with members of the Brome County Historical Society, and provincial and federal government representatives invited.

The Brome County Archives Building will act as a repository for valuable pioneer documents, as well as a study center for historians, particularly of the Eastern Townships. It will have modern machines for duplication, and classification of materials for historians. It will also feature an auditorium for small meetings.

This building will not replace the museum but it will serve as complement to the museum for the society. It will be dedicated to one hundred years of Confederation. It is also designed as a living memorial to all members of parliament and Members of the Legislative Assembly since Confederation. Plaques with the names will be placed on the building, and a detailed study on each member will be available for interested parties.

Tough-talking defence minister of Russia is dead

MOSCOW (CP)—Marshal Rodion Yakovlevich Malinovsky, who joined the army of the czar at 16 and rose through the ranks to become defence minister of the Soviet Union, died Friday. He was 68.

Malinovsky was reported to have clung to life for three weeks after doctors pronounced him on the brink of death—from cancer of the pancreas which had spread through his body. His death is expected to lead to a major military reshuffle not only in the Soviet Union, but also in the command of the East European Communist military alliance—the Warsaw pact.

Observers said Marshal Andrei Grechko, Malinovsky's deputy and commander of the Warsaw pact forces, is likely to succeed him as defence minister. They said another Soviet marshal is expected to replace Grechko as Warsaw pact commander as it is unlikely the Russians will relinquish the post to a general from one of the other six member countries.

News of the defence minister's death was announced in an overseas broadcast by Tass before the Soviet people were told. Defence minister and the top Soviet soldier since 1957, Malinovsky was noted for the sabre-rattling speeches he made each May Day and on anniversaries of the November Bolshevik Revolution from atop Lenin's Tomb in Red Square. His last public appearance was in the square Nov. 7, 1966.

As Soviet military might rolled through the square, he pipes.

He was sent to France with a Russian expeditionary corps in the First World War. Fighting alongside U.S., French and British troops, he became an admirer of the British soldier.

He once said: "I liked the way they shaved every morning and went into action smoking their pipes."

Malinovsky was born Nov. 23, 1898, in Odessa, the son of a Ukrainian laborer. He left school at 12 to work on a farm and four years later was in the czarist army.

His troops later drove the Germans from the Ukraine and swept Romania and Hungary. He commanded Soviet troops in the Far East in Russia's six-day campaign against Japan at the close of the war.

by Judge Turmel.

The judge asked how Mrs. Ruel happened to keep the child at her home if the father was given the right to the child.

She explained that Pouliot's wife was her niece. Mrs. Pouliot had left her husband and was living in the United States.

The Cookshire Provincial police officer, Claude Ethier told the court that he had been contacted by Pouliot to get the child back. Ethier advised a Social Welfare Court order.

Pouliot wanted the child because he was leaving Canada for the US that same morning at seven a.m.

Raymond's interest in the whole affair of getting the child was that he acted as a taxi driver to Pouliot and acted as a witness in case of any irregularity. A warrant for the arrest of Pouliot was out, according to the Crown prosecutor.

C of C is a voluntary association of community's leading citizens

Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce will join with their counterparts throughout Canada this week in celebrating "Chamber of Commerce Week" — April 2-8.

A voluntary association of the leading citizens of a city, the Chamber of Commerce is a group dedicated to the progress and development of the community.

And the Sherbrooke group, founded in 1889, is one of the oldest chambers of commerce in the province.

About 550 members make up its ranks and it is directed by a board of directors including the president Roy J. Scholes, two vice-presidents Gaston Audet and Bruce D. Allanson, a treasurer Yvan L. Bureau and a minimum of 10 directors as well as the president ex-officio.

The executive committee of president, two vice-presidents treasurer and secretary - manager Henri J. M. Baudot meets regularly every week on Friday noon. The board of directors meets every Monday morning at 8 a.m. to study and consider present day problems, not only on the local scene but also on the provincial and national scales.

The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce is affiliated with the Chambers of Commerce of the Province of Quebec, a federation that includes over 280 Chambers of Commerce in the province. It is also connected with the Canadian Chamber of Commerce which is the official spokesman of all Chambers of Commerce from coast to coast.

The Sherbrooke Chamber was initially incorporated as the Sherbrooke Board of Trade with 31 members more than 75 years ago. It became the Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce July 15, 1931 when the Governor General - in - Council by an Order - in - Council changed the name in accordance with a petition made at a general meeting of March of that year.

Andrew Paton was the first president of the Sherbrooke Board of Trade.

The name Chamber of Commerce dates back to an association of merchants at Marseilles, France in the 15th century, but a Chamber of Commerce in the true sense was not definitely organized until about 1850.

Most European Chambers operated under a measure of government control.

They initiated laws regarding factory plans and trade markets, registration and winding up of companies, customs, tariffs and transportation regulations.

The first Board of Trade or Chamber of Commerce organized and conducted independently of any government affiliation in Canada was the Halifax Board of Trade established in 1750.

In the United States a New York State Chamber of Commerce was organized in 1768. About the same time Chambers of Commerce in Great Britain were organized, the first being the Jersey Chamber of Commerce in 1769. From then on there was rapid expansion.

The London, England Chamber of Commerce still today continues to administer the watch import quotas on behalf of the Board of Trade and provides the only independent certified leather check measurement service in the United Kingdom.

In Canada the Board of Trade Act gives authority to a Board of Trade to license weighers at grain elevators.

The Chamber movement particularly throughout the British Commonwealth.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce was formed in 1925 with an initial membership of about 100 organizations. Today there are more than 850 Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce representing more than 130,000 businessmen operating in all kinds of enterprise throughout the country.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce is non-sectional, non-sectarian and politically non-partisan. Its objects are:

- To stimulate and maintain a vigorous Canadian national sentiment and to encourage commercial exchange among the provinces with other countries as well as to promote international amity.

- Promote cooperation among Canadian Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce increasing their efficiency and extending their usefulness in all the provinces. Secure uniformity in commercial usages, custom and laws and united action by the membership as well as to develop and present an informed public opinion and to secure effective action by the national legislature upon questions relating to the economic and public welfare.

- To support and develop the Canadian system of representative government and to preserve and improve further the operation of Canada's economic system based upon private initiative and individual enterprise as well as maintaining fair relations among labor, management and capital.

The Chamber of Commerce is not a pressure group. It does not plead for special favors for only one segment of business or section of the country. Its membership is national in scope — diversified in its individual activities — national in its outlook.

It presents carefully studied briefs and submissions to the federal government, maintains opposition to communism and socialism and is active in the promotion of foreign trade with effective international committees. It is a working association directed by business leaders.

This movement in Canada includes provincial chambers, under an intergovernmental plan, regional managers of the Canadian Chamber in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and the Maritimes act as managing secretaries of the provincial chambers — in the Maritimes the Maritimes Board of Trade and in Ontario the manager of the Ontario chamber is a staff member of the Canadian Chamber.

The Canadian chamber and several community boards and chambers are members of the Federation of Chambers of Commerce of the British Empire, the prime object of which is to provide a permanent link between the chambers of commerce and the boards of trade within the Commonwealth and Empire.

Chamber of Commerce Week was established to bring to all Canadians a concept of the role of the local Board of Trade or Chamber of Commerce.

The work of the Chamber of Commerce locally touches nearly every citizen. In most towns the Chamber of Commerce is responsible for tourist promotion. In many others it undertakes the work of an industrial commissioner, seeking new industry for the town and district. It takes a leading part in community affairs, improving relations between the farmers and businessmen, sparking community interest in education, running "get out and vote" campaigns at election time, taking a lead in fire prevention, health and safety work, sponsoring clean up and beautification weeks, organizing Santa Clause parades at Christmas and a host of similar projects.

Local C of C celebrates Chamber of Commerce Week

The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce looks back on the year's activities during the observance of Chamber of Commerce Week.

In January of 1966 after careful study of proposed amendments which the city was planning to submit to the Legislative Assembly to amend its city charter, the chamber directors supported this submission making their views known to city council, the Minister of Municipal Affairs and the Minister of Education with the following reservations or exceptions:

—That the collection of one per cent on school taxes be approved and authorized by the department of education.

—That the increase in salary for the mayor be tied in with another supplementary article which would also form part of the request for amendments to the city charter and would grant the city the power to set up an executive committee.

The directors also expressed their views on the proposed annexations considered by the city and which were also part of the subject amendments.

Chamber directors in February 1966 supported a statement issued by the Premier of Quebec that monetary advantages which could be granted to the educators should be in line with the economy of the province, as long as salaries compare favorably with those paid elsewhere for similar functions.

Directors did give some particular attention to the teachers' strike as well as their request for payment of the time spent on strike.

They underlined that education within the framework of the new legislation in Quebec falls into the category of public services and they expressed their opinion that the right to strike should not be granted to employees in public services unless for exceptional conditions.

The chamber expressed the wish that the provincial government study this problem and conceive a mechanism for negotiation of labor conditions for employees of public services which would recognize and protect the rights of the employees concerned without having to call on the right to strike. Sherbrooke Chamber directors stressed the serious repercussions which the strike could have on the school year of the students involved.

The chamber also supported the Eastern Townships Tourist Council in their project of publishing a tourist brochure for Expo year.

It took a stand regarding a brief prepared by the Chamber of Commerce of the Province of Quebec or submission to the provincial government dealing with health insurance.

President of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Maj. Gen. R. H. Keefler was a guest of the local chamber February 17 also in 1966.

In April 1966 directors of the chamber met with a representing a strike of railway workers and supported steps undertaken by the Calgary Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber also approached the Quebec Autoroute Authority to obtain more direct access roads to and from the Mount Orford provincial park.

And the chamber continues to grant its complete support to the Atlantic Autoroute project and its delegates on the Quebec section of the International Atlantic Autoroute Committee take part in all meetings of the international committee as well as those of the Quebec section.

In November of 1966 directors of the chamber played an important mediation role with a view to securing an agreement between the authorities concerned for a Confederation centenary project.

These efforts resulted in an offer from the city to the Welfare Agencies Council (the former federal building when it will be vacated by the municipal library) for the nominal sum of a dollar a year. It was then agreed that failing to find a better project, the amounts of federal and provincial grants available will be applied to the building of the Ski Chalet for the World Water Ski Championships, August, 1967.

Directors of the chamber also held a meeting with Raynald Fréchette, M.L.A. which resulted in interesting discussions about matters of provincial interest.

The 53rd. Regiment Chapter I.O.D.E. held the March meeting recently with the regent Mrs. C. Varney, presiding. The Standard was raised by Mrs. J. B. Lapointe, in the absence of Mrs. A. Fairbrother. A moment of silence was observed in tribute to Governor General George P. Vanier.

The following reports were given: Miss J. Irving, treasurer, reported that all current bills had been paid and that the bank balance was satisfactory. Education, the secretary was asked to send I.O.D.E. Calendars to two shut-ins.

Services at home and abroad reported six members had worked at the cancer clinic making 38 - 4x4 dressings; the hospital library cart had been taken around by Mrs. J. B. Lapointe and Mrs. R. Loughheed.

World Affairs, in the absence of Mrs. A. Fairbrother, Mrs. H. Richards, read an article taken from the Echoes magazine on the Commonwealth Prime Minister conference, held in London, England. An article was also read by the sec. Mrs. G. Robson, about the late Governor General.

Mrs. R. Loughheed was nominated as immigration and citizenship.

Language no barrier at CP-Cominco Pavilion

Language will be no barrier at the Canadian Pacific-Cominco Pavilion at Expo '67. Although the official Expo languages are French and English, hostesses at the CP-Cominco Pavilion will be able to converse in more than 12 tongues, almost as numerous as the countries served by the two sponsoring companies.

Visitors who speak Spanish, Italian, German, Russian, Hungarian, Serbian, Portuguese, Polish, Hebrew, Ukrainian, Japanese or Chinese will have attentive listeners. In fact, Chinese will be spoken in three of its dialects, Cantonese, Mandarin and Shanghaiese, just to make everybody feel at home.

The prime source for hostesses has been Canadian universities. Employment notices were sent to universities across the country and the response has been excellent.

"We have received more than 850 applications," said Mme. Therese Deschenes, supervisor personnel, at the pavilion.

"The competence of the girls who have applied is very high. Some speak as many as five languages. Others have the benefit of experience acquired through extensive travel."

Mme. Deschenes feels that the Canadian girls who have been engaged are truly representative of young ladies from across the country. They are enthusiastic and will help to convey the basic idea behind CP-Cominco's movie of Canadian youth and his world.

Former cabinet minister

Encourages middle-aged women to take up work in civil service

OTTAWA (CP) — Middle-aged women whose children have grown up should be encouraged to enter the civil service, a former British deputy cabinet minister said Thursday.

Lady Evelyn Sharp said the talents of these women now are largely wasted.

Although she had heard of Canada's royal commission on the status of women, Lady Sharp said in an interview she was not sure what such an inquiry could accomplish.

"It won't solve the problem of employers not hiring women simply because they are women," she said.

"The solution to that problem is for women to damn well go out and get the jobs."

Lady Sharp, who spent 40 years in the British civil service, is on a cross-country lecture tour sponsored by the Institute of Public Administration.

Lady Sharp said civil servants, traditionally negative and cautious, need to adopt a more aggressive approach to government.

"We need to try to develop senior civil servants who are more positive, creative and specialized."

White-haired Lady Sharp retired from the government service last year and was created a life peer. She now is a member of Britain's royal commission on local administration.

An expert on housing, she said the British government has set up a special corporation to subsidize housing for middle-income families. It builds houses and apartment blocks with capital loaned by the government. The buildings are rented at no profit.

Some individual apartments are sold to their occupants.

About one-third of the houses in Britain are publicly-owned. Private business no longer build houses for rent, she said.

Lady Sharp, who will be meeting government officials at the University of Ottawa, leaves the capital Sunday for Winnipeg.

MUSIC ON RECORDS

By JOSEPH and SUSAN WEARING

MOZART — Die Entführung aus dem Serail; Erika Koeth, soprano; Lotte Schaele, soprano; Fritz Wunderlich, tenor; Friedrich Lenz, tenor; Kurt Boehme, bass; Choir and Orchestra of the Bavarian State Opera, Eugen Jochum, cond. Bastien und Bastienne; Adele Stolte, soprano; Peter Schreier, tenor; Theo Adam, bass; Berlin Chamber Orchestra, Helmut Koch, cond. (DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON Stereo 139213/15) — These two early operas of Mozart are given delightful performances in this recording. All of the singers are impressive, but I liked best Lotte Schaele and Friedrich Lenz for their sparkling singing as Blonde and Pedrillo in Entführung. Schaele has a delicate voice which is so appropriate in this happy opera. Kurt Boehme's two duets, as Osmin with Blonde and Pedrillo, are wonderfully comic. Bastien und Bastienne, a much shorter opera, was the remarkable creation of Mozart at twelve years of age. Not surprisingly it cannot compare with the opera which Mozart wrote thirteen years later.

WALTON — Symphony No. 1; London Symphony Orchestra, Andre Previn, cond. (RCA VICTOR Stereo LSC-2927) — Walton's symphony is a very fine work, which unfortunately had dropped out of the record catalogue. Previn's recording is a most welcome appearance because he has a sure touch in creating Walton's effects. The conducting is vital and very colourful — much more so than in the deleted recording by Sir Adrian Boult. The slow third movement is also more vivid and the music gains immeasurably in interest. Where the older recording excelled was in Boult's sense of humour, which is missing from Previn's histrionics.

BRAHMS — Symphony No. 3; Tragic Overture; Boston Symphony Orchestra, Erich Leinsdorf, cond. (RCA VICTOR Stereo LSC-2936) — The two middle movements of this symphony are very sensitively played and the various soloists give a good account of themselves. However I find Leinsdorf's Brahms essentially unimaginative. While giving a good, overall reading, he misses some of the many-sided personality of Brahms's music. A comparison of this recording of the Tragic Overture with Bruno Walter's is revealing. Walter gives interest to every bar of the music; whereas with Leinsdorf, there are times when one thinks that Brahms himself has missed the boat!

South Africa is one of nearly 150 countries that now has the decimal coinage. The change was made in 1961 at which time the profile of the founder of South Africa, Jan Van Riebeeck, replaced the British monarchs which appeared on previous coins. The reverse designs are typical of the country's unique plants and animals. An exception is the cent which features two birds on a branch and which was inspired by the Bible verse "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing . . ."

An unusual characteristic of the South African coins is that coins of each denomination are minted in equal quantities with Afrikaans and English lettering in accordance with the Republic's policy of bilingualism. South Africa is the only country with a dual coinage series although the Bank of Canada paper money of 1935 consisted of two separate issues, one in English and the other in French.

South Africa issues three types of proof sets each year: one of nine coins including two gold coins, a seven coin set without the gold coins, and a set of the two gold coins.

Two recent important numismatic events that I attended were the annual meeting of the Canadian Paper Money Society at the Chateau de Ramezay in Montreal and the Fifth Annual Numismatic Exposition of the St. Hyacinthe Numismatic Association at St. Hyacinthe, Quebec.

A feature of the Montreal meeting was an outstanding display of 400 old Canadian bank notes belonging to the Chateau de Ramezay and not normally on display for security reasons.

There was an attendance of approximately 2,000 for the one-day coin show at St. Hyacinthe, a city with a population of about 35,000 and membership in the local coin club exceeding 500. Included in the programme were displays of numismatic material by several of the banks and about two dozen collectors, a bourse of 20 dealers, auction sale and banquet. On display and attracting considerable attention was a collection which was assembled in six months of unusual items found on church collection plates. These included foreign coins, holed coins, transportation tokens, steel washers, metal discs and buttons, one of the latter enclosed in aluminum foil to more closely resemble a coin.

It's a fraud and more, but more of just what?

THE GREAT WALL OF CHINA by John Robert Colombo; Delta (Canada); 62 pages; $2.00.

"The Great Wall of China" is a fraud and a forgery but fun.

Composed of prose and verse, some written by John Robert Colombo, it purports to tell "more than you will ever want to know about the Great Wall of China".

In fact it tells very little about not much of anything but does it all so charmingly you don't really mind being deceived. It is a verbal picture book with myth and reality so cunningly intertwined, it is impossible to separate them and unprofitable to try.

Because, of course, Mr. Colombo has more on his mind and in his bag of tricks than the Great Wall of China.

His magician's bag includes the Great Wall of the Mind. It can be a great lark stomping up and down the ramparts of Separatism along the borders of Quebec. Or puffing across the prairies on the nation-welding but continent-dividing CPR.

The parallels are made so obvious, one feels struck from behind by one of the huge bricks from the Great Wall itself.

Faced with a desk load of accumulated contest announcements, this seems like a good time to share them with some potential contestants.

Most awards are annual but they bear repeating, if only because of occasional change in the amount of the prizes or in the rules. For example the Doubleday Award is now only $5,000 for a novel "by a Canadian, or by a non-Canadian on an essentially Canadian subject". Incidentally today is the opening date for this contest so you have exactly a year to produce that prize winner. Those who have won before include Thomas Raddall (THE GOVERNOR'S LADY), Arthur Hailey (IN HIGH PLACES) the late Ralph Allen (ASK THE NAME OF THE LION) and John Peter (ALONG THAT SHORE).

The Harper Prize Novel is still for $10,000 and its annual entry date is June 1st. Any novel written in English is eligible.

The Beta Sigma Phi Canadian First Novel Award of $1,000 goes annually to the best novel submitted by its publisher before April 15th of each year.

W.H. Smith and Son offers an annual award of 1,000 pounds for the best book by a citizen of the British Commonwealth.

William Blackwood and Sons offer annual prizes of 50 pounds and 20 pounds for the 2 best short stories submitted to Blackwoods Magazine.

The Dutton Animal Book Awards are a "double header". A prize of $7500 goes each year to the best adult animal book and a prize of $3500 to the best juvenile animal book. Contests open January 1st each year.

Another annual juvenile book prize is the $1,000 Little, Brown Children's Book Award. Former winners of this prize include Edith Lambert Sharp (NKKWALA), Jean Little (MINE FOR KEEPS) and Clifford Vernon Faulkner (THE WHITE CALF). Closing date for entries each year is January 31st.

Another "youth-oriented" contest, this one new to me - and which may not prove to be annual - is the Scholastic Magazines "Fiction for Young Adults" competition. Awards will amount to more than $10,000 and the closing date is August 31st. For further information contact Scholastic Fiction for Young Adults Award, 50 West 44th St., New York.

The Stephen Leacock Award for Humour contest carries no money but a lot of prestige. Published copies of the books entered must be received by Miss Grace Crooks, Orillia, before March 7th each year.

Deadline for entries in University of Western Ontario's competition for the President's Medals is March 12th. This year in addition to the medals, a prize of $100 will go to each of the 4 categories.

April 1st is the annual "launching date" for the Alberta Poetry Year Book competition, although entries may be received until September.

THE HUNTRESS by Mitchell Wilson; Doubleday; 395 pages; $6.95. This is a major novel of a famed woman scientist's quest for fulfillment. Julie, in her strength and beauty seems a reincarnation of Diana, the goddess of the hunt. Born in Boston, she studied at Radcliffe College then went on to Paris, the scene of the story, to continue her scientific studies.

Half-book gives les anglais points to ponder as Canadians

MY COUNTRY, CANADA OR QUEBEC? by Solange Chaput Rolland; Macmillan; 122 pages; $4.50.

"English Canada can never be my country because it refuses to accept and refuses to share with me Canada's future; Quebec therefore is ma patrie. But Quebec is not yet a country."

Madame Solange Chaput Rolland's conclusion has become famous, reaching far beyond the confines of her all too brief book.

The story behind her book is relevant because this is really half a book. The Centennial Commission asked Madame Rolland and Gwethalyn Graham to tour Canada together in search of its character and identity, and to write a diary revealing their findings. Gwethalyn Graham died before the tour began and Madame Rolland regretfully continued alone.

Madame Rolland establishes beyond question that the Commission and her publisher were correct in urging her to continue. This slight volume is worth many tomes of argument, conveying with insight and feeling the despair of being an alien in one's own country.

Madame Rolland is a sensitive, if sometimes abrasive, observer, making her points with short telling vignettes.

Fredericton's hotel staff had never heard of New Brunswick's one French language newspaper, although the provincial premier is himself Acadian and French speaking. Such examples proliferate.

This diary is accordingly distressing and disturbing both to French and English speaking Canadians. To a French speaking Canadian because she confirms his suspicion that other Canadians are unsympathetic or opposed to his values and aspirations.

While an English speaking Canadian's response is likely to run the spectrum from rage of wounded feelings and misunderstanding to sympathy concern and guilt.

A minor but nagging criticism is that Madame Rolland appears to see Quebec and its institutions as they are trying to re-shape themselves, and the rest of the country with all the existing and past faults and imperfections.

Madame Rolland is knowledgeable and responsive — a grating but relevant voice unafraid to tell the rest of Canada of its failings towards Quebec and of its failings even to approximate a vital democratic ideal — the protection by the majority of the rights and aspirations of minorities.

For the royalist at heart

From the Victorian age to the space age

FOR MY GRANDCHILDREN by HRH Princess Alice; Copp Clark; $9.90; 306 pages.

This is an intimate come-on-in-and-meet-the-family type of book.

The Countess of Athlone has had the unique experience of living in both the Victorian Age and the Space Age. She has been Chatelaine of Government House in Canada and in South Africa. She has travelled the world and has met — or is related to — virtually everyone in the world who is now, or has in the past half century been, in a position of power or played a role of importance. Her experiences have been so varied that the windows they open on history are completely fascinating and unusual.

For myself, I found especially interesting Princess Alice's experiences during the First World War, her trip through the interior of Africa and most of all of course, her years in Canada. Unfortunately, in such a long and full life, the time the Athlones spent in Canada consisted of only a small segment of the whole. But it was long enough for those of us in Canada to have pleasant memories of this charming lady.

I might add that since the Athlones were in Canada during the war years — and since Princess Alice was particularly interested in the formation of the women's services — anyone who wore the CWAC, WD or Wren uniform was most likely to have a personal recollection of her. Certainly one of my favorite reminders of service life is a picture of myself in CWAC uniform doing an extremely inept curtsy to Princess Alice on one of her visits to Regina.

Whether you are a grandmother or not, you'll enjoy this book. If, in addition to being a grandmother, you happen to like the personal side of history and are a "royalist at heart," this book is a must.

Ageless theological questions posed by Miss Caldwell's devil

DIALOGUES WITH THE DEVIL by Taylor Caldwell; Doubleday; 198 pages; $5.95.

DIALOGUES WITH THE DEVIL is an exchange of imaginary letters between the Archangel Michael and the Devil known by the name of Lucifer.

The Devil has been called by different names, in various traditions, through the long range of human history. In every tradition he is known as the angel who fell from Heaven because of the sin of pride and disobedience and became the slave and master of men, tempting them to eternal death and perdition.

They address each other as brothers. Lucifer tells his brother Michael, all about his subtle and diabolical ways of corrupting and destroying mankind. In reply Michael writes to his brother in behalf of his Father, God, and shows the way by which God will use Satan's evil intentions to destroy Lucifer.

Lucifer does not confine his evil threats to our planet-Terra the Fair — but to planets yet unknown. Miss Caldwell finally concludes the contest staged between Michael and Lucifer with a personal confrontation on a new planet, innocent of all but the gentlest life.

Now Michael is supported by his other brothers, Ariel, Gabriel and Raphael. They try to get their brother Lucifer to repent. The dialogue which ensues is interesting. Many of the theological questions which have bothered the scholars in the past are raised by Lucifer. If God is omniscient, knowing time and eternity, the past, present and the future simultaneously why did he allow Lucifer to cause such evil and sin in the world?

Collecting

Townships

JUST ONE HUNDRED and eleven years ago, the world's greatest philatelic rarity was issued at the colonial post office in British Guiana. Not that anyone would have foreseen that the inconspicuous provisional issue of 1 cent stamps produced by Messrs. Baum and Dallas at the Royal Gazette printing office in Georgetown would ever attain world fame. The stamp is part of a series ordered to make up a lack of stock due to the delivery delays of the regular series (lithographed in London by Waterlow & Sons); accordingly its design of a ship with inscriptions was adapted from the normal stamps of the time which repeated the badge and motto "Damus Petimusque Vicissim" of the Colony.

The actual wood engraving of the ship was that used to head the shipping news column of the contemporary issues of the Official Gazette. Around it the local compositor set up the inscriptions and motto, country of issue and denominations in type. The whole was then printed in black on available local stocks of red and blue-surfaced paper, although later in 1856, a paper coloured blue throughout was employed for part of the printing of the 4 cent denomination.

The 1 cent rate was used to transmit newspapers, and consequently the relatively limited number of copies was destroyed at the same time as the newspapers to which they would have been affixed — the somewhat less uncommon 4 cent served for letters and survived with them in contemporary archives. Add to this the comparatively small postal use and the unfavourable climate, and it will be seen that almost all the provisional issues of British Guiana are in the world rarity class. For almost 20 years after its issue, the very existence of the 1 cent provisional issue of 1856 remained unknown.

The present sole surviving copy was first discovered in 1873 by L. Vernon Vaughan, a young collector who was searching old family papers in the hopes of augmenting his newly-formed stamp collection. Since he could not find a place for this stamp in his pre-printed album, he sold it to a neighbor, N. R. McKinnon, for 6 shillings. In 1878, the McKinnon collection was purchased by the Liverpool dealer Thomas Ridpath, and he in turn sold the unique stamp to Baron Philippe von Ferrari for the equivalent of $750.

Although bequeathed to the Berlin Postal Museum, Ferrari's collections were seized for reparations payments by the French government and subsequently sold by auction in 1922. The stamp attracted keen bidding and was knocked down to the American millionaire collector Arthur Hind for 300,000 francs. Hind kept the stamp and on his death, his widow sold it to Kinbar Kenny, acting on behalf of an unnamed owner, for $45,000. It has not changed ownership since, and is periodically exhibited by Mr. Kenny acting on behalf of the possessor of this unique treasure.

Philatelically, the stamp is a poor specimen with its corners cut off, but since it is unique, this can be safely disregarded. Each of the provisional stamps of that year were initiated by one of the post office clerks before issue as a safeguard against forgery; the 1-cent bears the initials E.D.W. (Wright); others are known as C.A.W. (Watson) and E.T.E.D. The Republic of Guyana, formerly British Guiana, has issued a commemorative set of two stamps which picture the rarest stamp in the world. This set is in large size and most attractive, printed in the newly developed "Delacery" method by De La Rue Ltd.

SEVERAL COLLECTORS have asked about stamps from packets which appear to be the same but as the packets were described as containing all different stamps they are wondering about these apparent duplicates. It is possible that the stamps they have are of the same design but have different perforations or watermarks. We do not find many stamps of the last few years, apart from some British colonials, that have different perforations or watermarks. For many years it was customary to use a regular series of stamps for many years, in some instances ten or fifteen years, and, during this long period, new perforating machines would be purchased and used, or the printers would have to use paper from another supplier.

In recent years this has happened with the British stamps as we find that they changed from one Royal watermark to another but left the designs the same. Some watermark varieties are scarce although they look exactly the same as common ones.

Every stamp collector should have access to a stamp catalog, a perforation gauge and a watermark detector. The gauge and detector are not expensive items and all good albums will contain instruction regarding their use.

EARLY CANADIAN STAMPS continue to advance in value and as stated a number of times in this column you would do well to fill in those spaces as soon as you are able. Good copies are difficult to find just now of many of the earlier stamps. There is nothing particularly wrong with adding a copy with heavy cancellation or small tear if you do not pay too much. There are also repaired copies available in some instances, and while the philatelic world frowns on these generally it is difficult to see why; old pictures, books and antiques are repaired. Should you obtain an inferior copy, or a repaired stamp you should make a notation in your album concerning the amount paid and what the stamp really has wrong with it.

A flavor of the past adds spice to adventure in historical reprint POOR MAN'S TAPESTRY by Oliver Onions; Hodder and Stoughton; 303 pages; $4.90.

Here is not a story to read if you have two small children in your care and an open stairwell in the room, for you are certain to become lost to the present as you go far back to the middle 1500's in England when scarlet-haired Hannah (Nan) Thirlow's father is brought to his once-prosperous home with his head bashed in and Will Midlemish, a journeying goldsmith who loves Nan, is considered the most likely to have committed the crime.

Nan loves but despises Will as she believes him little better than a thief and perhaps a cut-throat though her heart cannot accept that he killed her father. She turns for comfort to an ancient withered man who lives in her home. In the old woman's grief at Thirlow's death, she becomes incoherent and in her wanderings discloses to Nan that the black habit and the cloistered years shelter none other than Nan's own grandmother. Sitting at the bedside of her newly discovered grand-dam, Nan asks questions in the quiet and Ann Thomas, only half-conscious tells the story of her wild past and her relationship to Glyndwr, the notorious Welshman. . .

A primitive passion to know

THE HUNTRESS by Mitchell Wilson; Doubleday; 395 pages; $6.95.

This is a major novel of a famed woman scientist's quest for fulfillment. Julie, in her strength and beauty seems a reincarnation of Diana, the goddess of the hunt. Born in Boston, she studied at Radcliffe College then went on to Paris, the scene of the story, to continue her scientific studies.

Many men are willing to take the risk of coming between Julie and her total dedication to science. The first man in her life Asher Pease, was probably responsible for lighting the fire of her passion for research.

Next there was Monty Crocker a young reporter who wanted to share his life with Julie. When Marcel Raubard a fellow scientist and Julie's lover goes to America to teach, Julie marries Georges Claudet, the only man she says who never saw her as she really was. Raubard returns to Paris and they pick up their lover relationship where it left off resulting in a tragedy that was to haunt Julie the rest of her life.

The story spans the adult life of Julie, more than 50 years, and is reconstructed by Hal Prescott also a scientist who came into her life when she was already world famous and had won the Nobel Prize for research. The story goes back and forth as Hal who loved Julie, talks to many people who had known her, her cousin Priscilla, other men in her life and her daughter Suzanne.

Looking back, Prescott finds the answer he had been seeking for so many years. Julie had been no intellectual with occasional adventures in passion, rather she was a primitive who retained the drive of the hunter which is what had taken her into science in the first place.

It is a most absorbing story told by a physicist who has a keen comprehension of the workings of the emotions of human beings and especially into the emotions of scientists.

Plan monument for Danville I.O.O.F. plot

DANVILLE — Members of Maple Leaf Lodge held a busy session on March 21, when plans were made for a Centennial dance to be held in May and Past Noble Grand's Night in April, at which time invitations will be extended to the group's sister lodge in Richmond.

The charter was draped in memory of Sis. Laura Bradford, a Past President of the Rebekah Assembly.

Bro. Roy Monahan reported that the Golden Rule Lodge was very much in favor of having a monument placed on the I.O.O.F. plot in the Danville Protestant Cemetery. A donation from a former member will be used as a beginning of the fund and it is hoped that the summer will see the goal realized.

All were pleased to welcome back Sis. Mabel Smith, who has not attended Lodge for some time due to poor health.

At the close of the business meeting the members enjoyed a social hour with refreshments in the dining-hall, the hostesses being Sis. Shirley Smith and Joyce Knowles.

Prior to the meeting the Sisters gathered at the S. L. Lockwood Funeral Home, where a short service was held for Sis. Grace Titus, who had died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Mae Stevens.

Hunting and fishing in the

By NORM NICHOLL

DURING THE PAST FEW WEEKS there has been considerable talk and concern once again over the water pollution problem both in the Province and in this area. Some may say that this problem is being over emphasized, but knowing how long it takes for people and provincial authorities to get steamed up and to move to overcome problems we must continue to keep this problem in the fore front. Do we realize the present needs for pure water? Do we realize that our industry needs water? Do we as people know our need for water for domestic and recreation? Do we know what value must be set on our fish and wildlife which depend on the need of water? What value do we set on the beauty of land surrounding and following our waterways?

If we have interest in these questions then we must not be interested in living or passing along to our children any of the wonders of nature that our forefathers enjoyed more than us. If we are concerned over these problems we must be interested in what happens to our water and then in turn we must have an interest in water pollution.

DURING THIS SPRING THAW the need of strict law enforcement or enactment of further legislation can be seen in many areas. For instance one was at the covered bridge at Capleton where garbage was dumped on the ice, another in Cookshire at a garage on the edge of the river; along the banks of the river at Cowansville where garbage is strewn along the bank. Here in Sherbrooke the view from the Dufferin bridge is a good example where ashes, papers etc., line the bank. Some will say that these waterways are already polluted but if new technical methods which are being developed are to be of any use, we must stop all forms of dumping materials in the waterways. While most of us regard pollution from the visual point where we can see pollution, sewer pipes, drainage ditches, we also take into account the physical features of the land. While some cottages may have cesspools, septic tanks etc., if the soil conditions are not correct the seepage into the water is as potent as though it were drained direct. I for one was glad to note that in three meetings that we held in connection with the Molson Fishing Club that the need for water pollution interest has been taken up by this group. For they, like others, know that our sport fishing cannot continue without proper water. The first note of what is happening comes from a survey of the Montreal area where 500,000,000 gallons of sewage is being dumped in to the St. Lawrence. If the Provincial government would combine the forces of the Health Dept., Tourism, Fish & Game, Lands & Forest and Agriculture there would be enough manpower to move the program into high gear, start to reclaim our waterways. But, if an indication of the Lake of Two Mountains situation is the trend we must start NOW to press for legislation and speedy action to show our interest and determination.

THIS PAST WEEK the Molson Fishing Club presented prizes to the Lake Memphremagog and Stanstead County Fish & Game Clubs. In both instances full houses were recorded and happy anglers (winners) left with prize money for their efforts. The Stanstead Club received a total of $470 for their efforts along with the glory of winning the Tournament. Mr. Serve of the Molson Club represented Richmond Pelletier who was unable to attend the meetings. At these meetings films on fishing and hunting were shown and highly received by members attending.

YESTERDAY MARCH 31ST, closed out fishing through the ice for all species according to the summary except in rivers or until the ice leaves the lakes for perch. April 28th officially opens the season on other species ice or no ice.

SMELT FISHERMEN will have to travel this year to fish for smelt legally. There are only six areas open this year. Lake Megantic is the closest to us. The smelt season is closed this year at Massawippi.

Magog Comets belt Cowansville Vics 8-3 to take lead in loop finals, meet Sunday in Waterloo

WATERLOO — Gerry Menard and Rejean Dufour came up with hat-tricks to pace the Magog Comets to a convincing 8-3 win over the Cowansville Vics to move into the lead in the four-out-of-seven finals of the Eastern Townships Intermediate "C" Hockey League.

The game was played before a sell-out crowd, in fact the Arena officials were obliged to turn away some of the fans. The next tilt in the series is slated Sunday afternoon at the Waterloo Arena.

The Comets jumped into an early lead in the tilt with two goals in the opening frame and at no time were they in trouble. They added three more in the middle while holding Cowansville to two. In the final frame the Comets potted three more while Cowansville got their third tally.

Playing-Coach Gerry Menard put his club out in front with the first two goals. At the start of the middle session J. G. Masse registered the Vics' first marker but then R. Dufour stepped to the fore with his hat-trick to put the decision out of reach of the Vics.

In the final frame R. Doyon and R. Boucher came through with goals before C. Monty got his second goal of the game. Gerry Menard then finished off the scoring and registered his hat-trick.

Dick Doyon, Comets' captain, besides getting a goal, helped set up three others. Serge Longpre was a standout on the blue line for the Comets breaking up numerous rushes by the Vics while at the same time he handed out some jolting body checks.

The Vics will have to come up with a win Sunday if they wish to stay in the battle for league honors. It is a do-or-die game for them and they must go all out.

Valcourt took an early lead but Granby tied the game with less than three minutes to play in the third period. The winning goal was scored by N. Durand.

More than 800 fans attended the game, which was exciting throughout. At its conclusion team captain Larry Menard was presented with the trophy.

Thetford captured the best-of-five series 3-1 and will be host to the Halifax Canadiens Sunday evening at 7 p.m. and Monday evening at 8 p.m. in the first two games of the best-of-seven series. The series will then shift to Halifax for the next three games and back to Thetford if more are required.

Jean-Luc Duquette's second goal of the game at 13:13 of the third period snapped a 3-3 deadlock and gave Thetford the victory. Bill Murray and Marc Tardif accounted for the other Thetford goals. For the Leafs Jack Rathwell potted two with Reynald Comeau pitting the other.

Immediately following the game Maurice Parsons, District QAAA vice-president, presented to Jean-Luc Duquette, club captain, the Norman Daw Memorial Trophy, emblematic of the Provincial junior hockey championship. A crowd of 2,593 fans attended the game and watched the presentation.

The Canadiens dropped the first tilt of the best-of-five 5-2 in Verdun last Sunday but then came through with 5-2, 6-2 and 4-3 decisions to wrap up the series and earn the right to represent Quebec in the Memorial Cup playdowns.

The game was a change from the previous ones as both clubs went all out in an effort to cop the verdict. The Maple Leafs turned in their best performance and the Canadiens had to go all out to win.

The Leafs jumped out in front five minutes after the opening whistle when Jack Rathwell teamed up with Larocque and Breton. Marc Tardif evened the count but the Leafs fought right back and Rathwell potted his second goal to give his mates a 2-1 lead after the first period.

The middle session opened with the Canadiens forcing the play. Jean-Luc Duquette evened the count when the Leafs had a man advantage with Larocque in the cooler. This gave the Morrisseau team a lift and then Bill Murray staged a rush driving through the whole Verdun club to beat Mullet and give Thetford a 3-2 edge. Murray's goal was the nicest one of the evening when he split the defense to walk in on Mullet and he made no mistake.

Each club had the advantage later but failed to accomplish as the clubs were clearing well and held on until the final whistle of the frame. Rathwell's goal was the nicest one of the evening when he split the defense to walk in on Mullet and he made no mistake.

Pete Singleton, coach of the Verdun club, figures Thetford can beat the Halifax Canadiens. During the past season Halifax played exhibition games against various junior clubs from Quebec and Ontario and walked off with big scores but in the playoffs away from home may be a different story.

"Thetford is a well balanced club possessing plenty of speed and can hold their own when it comes to heavy checking," stated Coach Singleton. "These are the two main reasons why I think Thetford can win over Halifax and I wish them luck," further let from close range. From then added the Verdun coach.

Nobody wants to end up in 3rd in NHL chase, all clubs have two games left, Habs are in second

The big question going into the final weekend of this season's National Hockey League schedule is not which team will finish second, but which will get railroaded into third.

"That's the spot I wouldn't want," says Joe Primeau, centre with the famous Toronto Maple Leafs kid line of the 1930s.

Primeau, now the owner of a Toronto construction firm, says the team that finishes second has the easiest route in the semi-finals against the fourth-place club.

The third-place finisher goes against the toughest club in the league and even the fourth-place team has a better chance than that.

"But teams don't play it that way," Primeau said. "You go out there and try to win every game. I've never heard of a team purposely losing to gain a certain position in the final standings."

Will meet Chicago. This season's third-place finishers will meet the league champion Chicago Black Hawks. Montreal Canadiens are currently in second with 73 points, New York Rangers have 72 and Toronto Maple Leafs 71.

All three second-place contenders have two games remaining. The Leafs play New York in Toronto tonight and end the season against the Bruins in Boston Sunday. Meanwhile, the Canadiens play the Hawks in Montreal clubs will face in this weekend's tonight and wind up against Pittsburgh Red Wings Sunday.

New York plays Chicago in the final game of the season, of an injury to his left knee suffered earlier in the week.

The absence of Chicago scorever played in the Virgin Islands. Ellsworth, dealt to the Phillies in a winter trade for pitcher Ray Culp, tamed Cincinnati on only 103 pitches at Clearwater, Fla. He walked only one, struck out nine and was helped by three double plays.

PITCHES TWO-HITTER. Stottlemyre, who finished 12-20 as the Yankees tumbled to last place in 1986, struck out the Red Sox on two hits in his best start of the spring.

Singles by Elston Howard and Bill Robinson drove in two New York runs and Steve Whitaker accounted for the third with his sixth exhibition homer.

Cleveland's Sam McDowell fired seven shutout innings as the Indians trimmed the Cubs 6-3 at Scottsdale, Ariz. He gave up six hits and fanned five.

The Orioles exploded for seven runs with two out in the seventh and won 8-4 at Ponce, Puerto Rico. A double, two walks, four singles and Dave Johnson's triple did the damage.

DODGERS WALLOPED. Houston pummeled right-hander Don Sutton for seven runs in the second inning and went on to bury the Dodgers 13-1 in the Astrohome. Pitcher Don Wilson's bases-loaded triple featured the big inning and Bob Aspromonte had two doubles and a single for the Astros.

round by a 9-8 extra-end score.

FORCE PLAYOFF

The playoff was forced when New Brunswick scored three in the 10th end of Friday afternoon's final round to edge the Alex Lawrence rink from Winnipeg 6-5.

This, coupled with Northern Ontario's 10-7 win over Alberta, left the two finalists tied with 8-2 records. Bury led Northern Ontario 7-2 after six ends, but Sudbury's Arnold Chisnell counted two in the eighth, four in the ninth and another pair in the 10th for the upset. Chisnell wound up with a 5-5 record.

In Friday afternoon play, Vancouver's Avery moved his record to 7-3 with a 14-1 win over Jack McCarthy of St. John's, Nfld. The loss left the Newfoundlander with one win and nine losses.

Ontario's Carl Asmussen, from Kitchener, beat Hazen Pond's Prince Albert, Sask., four ends 9-8. Both rinks wound up with 6-4 records.

Stan Ferry of Montreal West dropped Dr. Wen MacDonald of Charlottetown 9-6. The win left both provinces joined with Manitoba with four wins and six losses.

Nova Scotia's Meb Armstrong had the afternoon bye and the Middleton rink finished at 2-8 for the week's play.
