Valleyfield Exhibition
August 18th to 21st

The twenty-second exhibition at Valleyfield, Que., will open on Tuesday, Aug. 18th for four days and nights. It promises to be one of the best agricultural events of the Province of Quebec.

There will be two live-stock parades on Wednesday and Thursday, Aug. 19th and 20th. These are the main events of the exhibition.

The official programme this year is as follows: Tuesday, Aug. 18th, Children's day. The children are admitted free. Wednesday, Aug. 19th, Valleyfield day (civic holiday). Thursday, Aug. 20th, Visitors' day, and Friday, Aug. 21st, Race fans' day. The best and fastest horse races are on the programme for the last day.

The evening programme to be given in front of the grandstand, shall draw a large crowd, every night. It will consist of a good horse-show (more than one hundred horses will compete), of free acts, attractions of all kinds, and fireworks.

The exhibitors should remember that the entries for this exhibition will be closed on Thursday, Aug. 13th.

The officers of the Valleyfield Exhibition are: Dr. S. W. Laroche, president; J. W. Laberge, vice-president; L. P. Godbout, J. D. S. Sauvé and N. A. Ostiguy, directors; and Jacques Malouin, secretary-treasurer.

CHAUTAUQUA CONCLUDED ON MONDAY

Five Days Programmes All of Very High Order—Greatly Enjoyed

Plays, Lectures, and Music

Dr. Vilhjalmur Stefansson Very Interesting in Lecture on "Abolishing the Arctic"

The Canadian Chautauqua programmes opened in Huntingdon on Wednesday with a remarkably good attendance at the first presentation "Turn to the Right."

It was a heart warming story of a boy who was sent to prison falsely, who gets out and determines to "Turn to the Right" and fights against great odds, not only to clear himself of the stain, but to save his dear old mother from heartbreak, and to win for himself the girl he had always loved. The keynote of the play is a mother's unending trust, confidence, and the radiance of her character which reaches out and is attributable for the reform of her son's prison pal. There is generous comedy in it, but the humanness of the play is what captivated the audience. The cast of characters was excellent.

On the day of the opening of Chautauqua a truck with "baner and device" toured the town advertising the Chautauqua.

Monday afternoon Miss Deyell organized a parade for the children. Prizes were given for the best costumes in different classes. The prize-winners were as follows: Prize boys' float—1. Cyril McWhinnie; 2. Jean-Paul Caza; prize girls' float—1. Alberta Braithwaite and Ruthie Miller; 2. Myrna Wheeler. Boy's costume—1. Edgar Lefebvre; 2. Dennis Lefebvre; 3. Emile Senecal. Girl's costume—1. Jean McCallum; 2. Helen McGill; 3. Thora McWhinnie. Jolliest boy—Marc Lefebvre. Jolliest girl—Janet Small.

Miss McCallum won the contest for the most words from "Canadian Chautauquas". She having secured 236 words.

Julius Caesar Nayphe
Those in attendance at the Canadian Chautauqua programme on Thursday afternoon were high in praise of Julius Caesar Nayphe in his lecture-entertainment, "The Seal of the Holy Land." Pleasing gestures and abundant wit were some of the strong points in the discourse. His style of oratory was something new to our citizens and appealed to them strongly.

In his interpretations of many passages from Scripture, Nayphe made clear many expressions which heretofore were not understood by the people here, nor by the majority of people in general. His lecture on the (Continued on page 3)

Godmanchester Council
Met on Monday, August 3rd, Present: Mayor W. J. Sherry, Councillors Ernest Watterson, James Ruddock, John J. Tannahill, Wm. Graham and M. J. Rankin.

The following resolutions were adopted:—

That W. L. Carr, special officer over the Keogh discharge be notified to have the Keogh discharge cleaned out whenever necessary with the least possible delay.

Walter J. Walsh, rural inspector was instructed to divide the line fence and the line ditch between the properties of Joseph St. Onge and Azarie Charlebois.

Councillor Watterson gave notice of motion that a By-law be prepared and submitted at the next regular meeting of this council, laying a rate of assessment to cover expenses of Municipal administration for the current year. The council adjourned for one hour to inspect the work now being done, re-building the concrete culvert and graveling on the Carr Highway road.

The secretary was instructed to advertise and sell by public sale, the work of cutting the brush on the Connaught Road, New Erin road, Ridge road, the Carr and the Smellie sideroads.

The following bills were ordered paid: Jos. A. Daoust, $1,925; Jos. Laframboise, $20; Jos. Deschamps, $20; Thos. L. Murphy, $7.70; Fred Bonenfant, $17.88; Geo. Feeny, $125; Pat O'Neill, $3.13; Huntingdon Gleaner, $8.30.

A letter from Mr. M. B. Fisher, M. L.A., and also a letter from the Minister of Roads, Mr. Fisher, were read, which explained that the request of the petitioners for a permanent pavement, on the Ridge road, could not be granted as the budget placed at their disposal could not allow it.

The Council adjourned to Wednesday evening, August 5th next, 1931, at seven thirty o'clock (7:30).

Tres St. Sacrement Council
Met on Monday, Councillors Hope, Thibault, Grier and Bernier, under the presidency of Mayor Alex. MacGregor, when the following resolutions were adopted:

Councillor Hope gives notice that at the next general meeting of this council, Tuesday Sept. 8th, he will present the adoption of a By-law to provide for the payment of the vacancy rate interest on good roads and sufficient monies to pay current expenses.

Infantile Paralysis How Can We Be Prepared?

From the fact that a few cases of infantile paralysis have broken out in the vicinity of Howick, it is judged apropos to list a few of the symptoms of the disease. In the case of this much dreaded disease parents cannot be too careful.

1. The child is usually not very well for a time before there is any sign of infantile paralysis. It may be a day, 4 or 5 days or two weeks.

2. He has a head-ache. His appetite is poor. He is tired. He seems bilious. He may complain of feeling sick or may vomit. Diarrhoea may occur at first. Sometimes he complains of pain, sometimes of a sore throat. He may be constipated and may not pass as much water as usual. Usually he is thirsty, and flushed and feverish. Perhaps he is cross, peevish and irritable. His eyes may look full. His neck or his back may be stiff and painful. Sweating may be noticed, especially around the mouth. Sleep may be disturbed by twitching. His hand may shake a little.

3. A child who has any of the above symptoms is sick, and needs rest, quiet and good nursing. The other members of the family will be protected if the child is in bed. Dishes and clothes used in the sick room should be scalded with boiling water.

4. Send for the doctor. NOW is the only chance you have to protect your child from the danger of paralysis. You have heard that there are cases of paralysis about. Your child is not very well. Perhaps to-morrow or even tonight he may show a little weakness of one of his arms or legs. Then it will be too late to prevent paralysis. NOW is the only time. Doctors say the world would have been trying for years to find something to prevent this paralysis and they have found it. Send for your own Family Doctor or Medical Officer of Health.

BAD ACCIDENT ON HIGHWAY

Five Injured, One Seriously, in Collision Near Gilbert McMillan's Last Night

A serious accident occurred on the highway 4 miles west of town about 7 o'clock last night when a Graham-Paige driven by William Feely of 7540 Champlain, Montreal, proceeding from Malone to Montreal collided at short curve near a culvert at Gilbert McMillan's, with an Auburn phaeton driven by Jos. Dubois of 5062 2nd St. E. Ohio, who was driving between the centre and the left side of the road.

As the Canadian car approached towards Dubois he swerved to the right side of the road striking Feely's car, causing it to turn turtle. Wm. Feely, driver of the car suffered head injuries. Mrs. Feely was also injured about the head and arms. Mrs. C. Thomas suffered internal injuries, contusions about the head, arms and legs, with a possible fracture of the skull; Dorothy Thomas had a broken collar bone and internal injuries; Mrs. F. LaDore, injured internally, a five-year-old son of Mrs. J. LaDore was badly shaken up; the other children in the car suffered from fright and shock. Dr. J. R. McEwen rendered first medical aid whereafter the victims were transported to the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal in the Lloyd Kelly ambulance.

Jos. Dubois, the only occupant of the Auburn car, was uninjured. He is being held pending a charge of reckless driving. His custom permit had expired yesterday.

The accident was investigated by Mr. Hector Cochrane, of the Provincial Motor Traffic Police.

DOCTORS MEET IN HUNTINGDON

District of Beauharnois Medical Society Hears Three Good Lecturers

Thirty Doctors Attend

Dr. O. E. Caza Host to Banquet Following Afternoon Meeting

What was judged as the most successful meeting of the district of Beauharnois Medical Society was held in the Huntingdon Chateau on Friday afternoon with a very good attendance.

Dr. Alberic Marin of the Notre Dame Hospital gave a lecture on venereal diseases; Dr. Hector Sanché, of the Misericordia Hospital, a lecture on eclampsia in general practice; Dr. A. Bellerose of Notre Dame Hospital gave a practical demonstration on the treatment of fractures, especially those of the arms and legs. All lectures were of a very high order and keenly appreciated by the doctors present.

Following the meeting Dr. O. E. Caza was host to a delicious banquet served in the banquet hall and attended by about 30 physicians and dentists. A very enjoyable programme of vocal numbers, readings, duets, piano numbers, were given by Drs. Gilles, R. Amiot, J. B. Prigent, Alberic Marin and B. Bibaud, with witty remarks interspersed by Dr. A. Brassard who acted as chairman.

Brief remarks on the success of the meeting were given by Dr. Ostiguy, the dean, and Dr. Marin. Dr. Brassard tendered a vote of thanks to the speakers and to Dr. O. E. Caza for his reception. Dr. W. S. Laroche, Dr. J. E. Caza, Dr. W. G. McCabe in a few congratulatory remarks to the Medical Society, especially paid tribute to the president of the district of Beauharnois Society, Dr. A. Brassard, who is governor of this district, and to Dr. O. E. Caza, surgeon of the Valleyfield hospital. In his closing remarks, Dr. Brassard announced the annual "bouillotte" to be held in August and paid tribute to Dr. Caza for his success in so many serious and dangerous operations at the Valleyfield Hospital since he has been surgeon there.

Among the members of the profession in attendance were: Drs. A. Brassard, J. Ostiguy, Emile St-Onge, W. S. Laroche, B. Bibaud, Claude St-Onge, A. Leduc, and Dr. DeGrandpre of Valleyfield; Drs. J. E. Caza, Dr. J. Limou of Beauharnois; Dr. A. Thoun of Ste. Martine; Dr. Edgar Patenaude of Howick; Dr. A. Dégue of St. Christy; Dr. J. R. McEwen and O. E. Caza of Huntingdon; Dr. E. Brousseau of St. Stanislas; Dr. L. A. Paré of St. Louis; Dr. J. L. Houlet of Coteau Station; Dr. O. J. Boulet, of Ste. Justine; Dr. D. A. Bellemare of Val-de-Fleur; Dr. A. Lortie of St. Polycarpe; Dr. Hector Sanché, Dr. A. Bellerose and Dr. Alberic Marin of Montreal; Dr. J. E. Caza, Huntingdon, W. G. McCabe, Aberdeen, G. P. Amiot, R. Dionne, J. Frappier, J. P. A. Prigent, and D. Perron, of Valleyfield.

N. Y. Governor to Inspect Beauharnois Power Development

Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt fortified himself with additional information on power development, preliminary to his departure next week on a trip which will carry him through the Beauharnois Power Development.

Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the board of trustees of the N. Y. State Waterpower Authority and other officials are to meet the Governor at Ogdensburg, N. Y., on August 7 and proceed to the vicinity of Barnhart Island. The Governor has invited the board to remain with him during the next two weeks while a visit is paid to the Beauharnois, Que. power development, upstream from Montreal.

The revised schedule for the Executive's Canadian trip, as announced, follows:

August 8—Leave Waddington, calling on at Beauharnois, staying there for the night.

August 9—Inspect Beauharnois development and leave for Montreal, staying for the night.

Gov. Roosevelt will proceed from Montreal to St. John where he will remain overnight continuing the next morning to Plattsburg, N. Y.

Drug Trafficking Halted by Arrests at Beauharnois

With the arrest and conviction of Joseph Louis Superior of Beauharnois on a charge of having heroin in his possession, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police narcotic division believe they have curbed the trafficking of drugs which threatened to assume serious proportions among the workmen in the employ of the Beauharnois Construction Company. Superior was sentenced to a year in jail and fined $200 by Judge Marchand in the Arraignment Court Thursday morning when he pleaded guilty to a charge of having heroin in his possession.

The arrest of Superior was made Wednesday by Constables Styran and Raymond of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, following an investigation made at the instigation of persons whose names are being withheld by police. Superior was arrested Wednesday afternoon at Beauharnois by the two officers who found a half an ounce of heroin in his possession.

Mr. John Blair of Montreal, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Jamieson over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Rennie and family of Guelph, Ont., are visiting their friends in this vicinity and at present are guests of Mr. Rennie's mother, Mrs. W. E. Rennie.

LIBERAL RANKS IN COUNTY ARE AGAIN UNITED

Conservative Assn. Does Not Contemplate Holding Convention to Select Candidate

Liberal Convention and Banquet Thursday

Petitions Being Circulated to Stand as Conservative Candidate

The Liberal ranks in Huntingdon county have been quite dispirited since the untimely death of the late Andrew Phillips. The election which is to take place on August 24 will find the local organization and supporters united and working harmoniously for the one Liberal candidate. This is the feeling to be found upon surveys made throughout the county.

Who the Liberal candidate will be, the Gleaner cannot state today, for the convention is only to be held tomorrow afternoon in the Huntingdon County Building. It is quite evident no deadlock will prevail and that whoever the candidate will be he will get generous support from the men who at one time were open to accept the candidature.

Thursday, August 6 is to be a red letter day for the Huntingdon Liberal Association, for not only is the County Convention to be held that day but in the Chateau at 7 p.m. a banquet is to be held. The Liberal banquet is being arranged by the County Liberal Association. Mr. Barrett, the secretary, informs the Gleaner that the speakers will be the Hon. J. H. Dillon, Hon. Honoré Mercier and Jules Desmarais, the Chief Liberal of the Province.

The Huntingdon Chateau is preparing for a large attendance at the banquet, after which a social dance is to take place. Everybody is welcome to the banquet irrespective of party feelings or affiliation.

Such in brief is the political news from the Liberal camp, but things are also doing in that of the Opposition. The reports of the County Conservative Association are to the effect that they are not going to hold a convention to choose a candidate, but petitioning the Provincial Legislature.

Petitions have already been circulated in Huntingdon and have been well endorsed, so it is quite natural to believe Mr. Fisher will be the Conservative candidate.

Ormsdown Village

The local baseball nine have bucked up and are playing ball in splendid form. They have annexed another victory to their credit, when they journeyed to Hinchinbrooke on Saturday afternoon and defeated them by a score of 19 to 0. It was a spirited game, but a real battle is expected on Saturday when the Huntingdon boys play on the local diamond.

Doc. Brace and his company of fun makers gave the youngsters and grown-ups of Ormsdown a treat in the line of a free open air concert every night for over a week at the same time running a contest for the most popular young lady, which was won by Miss Loretta Murphy, who was awarded a wrist watch and second, Miss Lucy Cartier, a china tea set.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Reeder, Gen. N. Y. and Mrs. M. A. Reeder, of New York City, visited at the home of Mrs. Wm. Sadler on Friday, stopping over for a day on their way to Quebec City.

Miss Doris Payne is spending a few days with Miss Marian Bradley at Waterloo, Que.

Beauharnois Power Aspect

The Beauharnois probe proceedings have been watched by the people in this district with acute interest. The people here are quite familiar with the project and appreciate its magnitude, as perhaps many others in Canada, who are reading the probe in a skeptical manner cannot size the work up when told of it through reading the papers.

That money has been spent, and profits made that appear most undue is true, but where has there ever been such a gigantic enterprise floated that several people did not become millionaires, or so much the better off for such. It is useless to cite cases, but they prevail, and we do not have to travel 40 miles beyond Beauharnois to find them aplenty. Whilst Beauharnois officials have come under the grilling hammer of the probe commission, these officials are not all to be blamed, but perhaps somewhat pitied. It is safe to say Sweezy did not pay out the money to the politicians and others, without cause and reason. Perhaps bad buys were also made; but at any rate mistakes are made in the best of regulated households.

Owing to the size of the Beauharnois Corporation it dealt in large sums, and spoke of millions and hundreds of thousands the same as other fair sized corporations would treat of thousands and hundreds of dollars; therefore, the probe attracted more attention. The total sum to Beauharnois is perhaps no greater for that corporation, for it is really just so many times larger than the other companies that would pay out smaller amounts. Were probes made into the financing of many smaller institutions, it is just probable that equally as great, or perhaps even a higher percentage of graft money has been handed out in just such an unscrupulous manner.

Premier Bennett appreciates the worth of R. O. Sweezy and his enterprise, or he would not have spoken as he did about Beauharnois. Here is what Premier Bennett has said in a very brief form: "The Beauharnois Power Corporation is a creature of the Province of Quebec, and the Province of Quebec has complete and absolute power to create the company, and the Dominion Parliament could not destroy it, nor take from the individuals who have put their money into the project the shares which they own."

The Prime Minister added, that the Dominion Government by every means in its power will endeavor to do the following: (A) Secure continuance of the enterprise; (B) Secure the rights of those who bona-fide have put their money in that enterprise; (C) Secure proper control and management; (D) Take such other steps as may be necessary when terms and conditions are fixed as will ensure the greatest possible benefit to the Dominion as a whole by reason of the undertaking now being declared to be a work for the general advantage of Canada.

Premier Bennett has spoken sanely and wisely when he said he would "secure a continuance of the enterprise." He knows well that if the enterprise ever got into the hands of the government it would be a football of corruption to rival the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Mackenzie & Mann contractors. In place of a few millions being spent, as has been done, it would become a multiple, and of course the detraction of the present government in power would follow.

The present bond holders of the company are now better secured than ever before. The Government is going to protect itself by saying how much water will be diverted from the Lake St. Francis into the power canal. The Government has taken onto itself the obligation of protecting the bond-holders, therefore if it is necessary that more water be diverted through the canal for their protection, it is a safe gamble the water will be forthcoming through the will of the Government.

That some of the principals in the Beauharnois Power Corporation probe will have to go, as far as the public is concerned, is quite probable; but it is highly probable they will continue retaining their present financial interest in the company. These men of course have many monied friends, and perhaps the Beauharnois Power Development will have more capital invested by them in Beauharnois when it is concluded than perhaps some of us will be willing to concede or realize. If vacancies on the Beauharnois Power Corporation board of management and directorate are created, and replaced by staunch Conservatives, will the Liberals not be just as critical of the Beauharnois Company as has been the case of the present Conservative Government.

The principle of "you fight me, and I fight you" will continue as long as there is time. Now that the Beauharnois Development has made so much progress, and the money spent corruptible, that is usually expected to be spent on such gigantic works, it now seems reasonable to believe that the work will progress with peace and harmony in behalf of the Power Corporation, the Governments and the shareholders.

Aiming and Attaining

During the past week a stranger was in town who comes from a small community down by the sea in Nova Scotia. He happens to be the secretary of the Board of Trade in that town, so naturally comparisons were mentally made with the Board of Trade in Huntingdon. We must admit Huntingdon lags behind, and that is not as it should be, for we generally look upon Nova Scotia as being a backward province, and not Quebec.

In this small town in Nova Scotia the Board of Trade has a membership of 150 strong. The annual fee is $3, and along with a few donations they have approximately $1,000 per year to spend. For the past three years they have attained remarkable accomplishments, although their Board of Trade for several years previous was what most people would term a defunct corporation. Today the men are ever attentive to the Board of Trade work. They have sixteen men on the Council and they meet weekly, and at times more often. The monthly meeting is attended by at least 60 members. During the past three years they purchased an old hotel for $15,000 and spent $60,000 on remodeling it, and now they administer it. Later, they held a fish exhibition for one day, the second year it was a two day show, and this year it is to be a four day event.

The Board of Trade is evidently a live organization in that small town, why not so in Huntingdon? Last year this Nova Scotia Board of Trade was instrumental in securing legislation for the protection of the fishermen's fleet. This year they are ambitious enough to tackle the raising of funds for the purchasing of a property to be converted into a community hospital to be self-sustained by the community. One might wonder how they have the nerve to tackle such a problem as this, but we are informed they expect to get at least two $10,000 subscriptions, several $5,000 subscriptions and lesser amounts in the four figures.

From such a brief skit of what that Board of Trade is accomplishing puts Huntingdon to shame. Huntingdon men should voluntarily come forward and give support to the Board of Trade, then Huntingdon can hope to attain something really worth while. We can only hope to get out of life what we put into it, therefore if we do not exercise our powers to put life into Huntingdon, how can we hope to extract it. It's up to every man to work for the welfare of Huntingdon, and at the same time be willing to invest his dollars in its welfare. The tight-wads and critics will always be with us, so plod on aiming for a higher goal and eventually we will attain as great a success in our Board of Trade as is being done in even that little town in Nova Scotia.

Huntingdon needs industrials to give employment to men and women.

Huntingdon desires a greater population for the benefit of its retail outlets.

Huntingdon would have more congenial social activities had we a larger population.

Huntingdon's sporting clubs would benefit had we a larger population.

Huntingdon could easily be made a summer resort if we would capitalize upon our scenery along the Chateauguay river, and have a suitable park and recreation ground so located.

Huntingdon should have a proper bathing place for young and old alike.

We could go on almost without end pointing out the things Huntingdon could have if our Board of Trade had unanimous support from the townsmen, and they in turn put their time and energy into such an association. This could be attained through securing industrials with sufficient capital to give employment to many hands. Have you ever done anything towards securing an industrial for Huntingdon. It is not too late to start, and the proper channel to start in is to be an active member of the Huntingdon Board of Trade.

Five Hundred Universities

There are at least 500 universities in the world today, whereas there were only 77 in thirteenth century Europe. In America one out of every 125 of the population attend a university, in Germany one out of 650, in France one out of 700, in England one out of 1,000. But it seems that England need not envy America. The intellectual foundations of a university, says an educationalist, are laid in the primary and secondary schools. He says the nation with the best primary schools is likely to have the best vigorous intellectual life.

Woman, 34, Grandmother

Mrs. Faye Dutton, 34, of Denver, claimed to be the youngest grandmother in Colorado after the birth of a son to her daughter, Mrs. Marie Coulter, 16. Mrs. Dutton, who married at the age of 16, has two other children, Homer, 18, and Lee, 14.

Man Had Longest Hair

Startled promoters of a competition for 18-year-old residents of Iowa to find the longest hair, were amazed when Joseph Kametz, of Albia, captured first honors with a luxurious growth of "crowning glory" that none of the many girls entered in the contest could match. Joseph's hair fell below his elbows and was thick and silken. He has never had a haircut and says he never intends to. He is not, as might be assumed, an effeminate person, but is a sturdy specimen of young manhood.

Fire-Eaters Burn Building

Members of the Kansas City fire department, employed to put out blazes, touched a match to a hospital building recently and watched it burn to the ground. The action did not indicate any pyromaniacal tendencies on the part of the firemen. The building destroyed was the abandoned isolation ward of the old Negro City Hospital. It was burned as a health measure. The hospital had housed patients suffering from tuberculosis, small-pox and other dangerous diseases, and it was feared that bacteria still retained in the building would endanger the lives of workmen employed to wreck it. The blaze was begun at 8:30 o'clock in the morning and lasted for an hour. The woodwork and floors had been soaked with inflammable liquids.

Weds His Own Wife

James Joyce, author of "Ulysses," and Nora Joseph Barnacle, were quietly married at the Kensington registry office. Who's Who shows that Joyce and Miss Barnacle were married in 1904 and are parents of two children. His attorney said the new ceremony was held for testamentary reasons. He is 49 years old and she is 47.

Owl Wanted Car Ride

An unusual occurrence in Ottawa district took place when Gordon Cole, 40 Garage avenue, who was driving in front of the Civic Hospital in company with Mrs. Cole, captured an owl which suddenly flew into his automobile and perched itself on the rear seat. Mr. Cole threw a rug over the grey bird and drove back to his home, where it is now resting in a beautiful cage. The owl is about the size of a small pigeon.

A Surprise For Boys

Arthur Engers and his friend, Andrew Keys, each 15 years old, of Chicago, figured that the best way to keep someone from stealing their automobile while they attended a theatre was to take it apart and hide the pieces. Hence when they parked the machine near the show house they removed the steering wheel, took out the coils and cut off the gas at the tank. Then they hid the parts in the rumble seat and attended the show. Some ambitious thief, however, reassembled the parts and drove away.

$50. For Every Strike

Complaint was made in a suit for divorce by Mrs. Margaret Row Gordon, daughter of R. K. Row, an Evanston, Ill., publisher, that her husband, Roland, didn't live up to his promise. He signed an agreement with her she testified, to pay her $50 every time he struck her, and then violated it four months later by hitting her with a golf ball during a foursome at Eagle Rock, Wis. The divorce was granted.

Wheat Used For Money

In this period of 25-cent wheat, Oscar Fishburn, Reno County farmer, Kansas, has found a bushel will pay his admittance to a baseball park there. The man at the gate the other day, not to be outdone, gave him half a bushel of oats in change.

Lays Eggs in Kitchen

Emil Wendling Jr., of Manchester, Ia., has trained a white Leghorn hen to come into the kitchen to lay her eggs. She knocks on the door by flapping her wings vigorously, struts to an old coat in a corner, placed there as a nest, lays an egg and departs. In two months the hen has laid fifty eggs in the coat.

Where Ganders Replace Dogs

The gander is replacing the watchdog as the guardian of poultry farms in Alton, Hampshire, England. "Ganders are able to give warning quicker than watchdogs," says L. G. Richards, well known poultry breeder, "and they have been known to break a man's leg with their wings."

110 Weds Maiden 72

Robert Stevens, aged 110, married a social visitor at the old folks' home, where he was an inmate. She is 72. After the ceremony the happy couple left the institution and started life in a cozy little apartment in the heart of the city where they reside, Melbourne, Australia.

Gasoline Pump For Brewing

And now a bootlegger has brought modern distributing methods into the "racket." Police confiscated a gasoline pump at Pittsburgh which had been converted into a still. The gallons of whisky also were seized but the operator escaped.

Pilot Repairs Plane in Air

Climbing out on the lower wing of his speeding airplane, hanging to it with his legs while he worked head downward, high above the Los Angeles Airport, Floyd H. Ririe, 26-year-old pilot, wired fast a dangling landing strut and set himself and his ship down in safety. An ambulance, a fire engine and scores of horrified spectators awaited the ship's crash, possibly in flames. But the courage and skill of Ririe were so great that not a bit of damage was done. Ririe was flying a biplane, teaching Theodore Mark, a student. As they took off, the right landing strut tore loose and the wheel fell off. The fliers did not notice the mishap. The Ririe ship, with Mark at the controls, had circled the field and was headed down for a landing when Hulbert, by signs, advised the men of their plight. Ririe made his student take the ship up a couple of thousand feet. Then, with wire and pliers, he got out under the wing and did his job. He wired the strut fast into place, climbed back into the cockpit and took the controls. He made a stunt landing on the single wheel, so balancing his ship that it ran evenly on that wheel until its headway was almost gone. Then Ririe tilted over his wings and let the repaired strut take part of the burden.

No Truants at This School

There is at least one school in the world where none of the pupils ever want to play truant! This is in Germany, a country in which education has always been of a very high order indeed. The school has just been erected, and is claimed to be one of the most modern educational establishments yet devised. There are no dust-laden brick walls separating the classrooms from the corridors. Instead, glass cabinets for books, pupils, work, and so on have been built. Even the outer walls contain no bricks. These also are of glass, thus giving to the school every possible atom of light and sunshine. There is a splendidly equipped canteen for the scholars, while a wash-basin is provided in every classroom. What also pleases the pupils is the fact that each desk in the physics laboratory has its own water, gas and electric connections. There is a greenhouse in which plants may be raised throughout the year; and one room is fitted with an apparatus so that the stars may be studied at any time of the day.

Executioner to Give up Job

M. Dibler, the French public executioner, wants to retire and settle at his country house to devote himself to gardening. During the fifty-one years he served the republic he beheaded 242 men. As French tradition has kept the post of executioner in the same family for many years, future assassins have to look to M. Dibler's son-in-law for services. He has served a long apprenticeship as assistant and is quite qualified for the post. The business requires a firm and steady hand and a quick eye.

Wanted to be Locked up

Asking the police to lock him up, Sam Chong, a Chinese grocery peddler of El Paso, Texas, explained that he was 75 cents ahead in his accounts and feared he had short-changed some of his customers. Police told him perhaps he was mistaken in the amount of money he had when he started out, but Chong couldn't be convinced. "I'll look around some more," he said, "then come back."

Snake Shared His Bed

A. M. Kerinen passed a hard day preparing a camp site for a sheep run near Fruitdale, S.D. Tired, he bedded down on the ground for the night. When he awoke he found that a small rattlesnake had crawled in between his blankets to share their warmth.

Fell Into Flower Bed

Crowds milled about the bed of Mrs. Elsie Leary, 20, of Los Angeles. In terror, the woman got up and ran in an effort to escape. She fled down a hallway, opened a window and jumped out, falling five stories to earth. It all happened in a dream, and when she awoke she was in a hospital with a broken leg and bruises. Physicians said she lived because she landed in the soft earth of a flower bed.

Sun Kills Snake

Los Angeles County Foresters have discovered a new way of killing rattlesnakes. All you have to do to the snake is to expose him to some good, every day sunlight for eight, nine or ten minutes. Just how powerful sunlight is in snake killing properties was demonstrated by J. J. Davis, assistant county fire warden. Davis placed an eighteen-inch rattlesnake, with seven rattles, in a wire enclosure, where it would get full advantage of the sunlight at 11:40 a.m. The temperature was 76 degrees Fahrenheit. Eight minutes later the snake was twitching convulsively and at the end of ten minutes was dead.

The Woman of Coqueras

Great interest is displayed in the curious case of woman in Coqueras, State of Minas Geraes, Brazil, whose reputed miraculous feats in curing the sick and crippled is attracting thousands of pilgrims to the lonely little interior town. Having spent many years in caring for the poor and sick, the woman returned home to die in a shack, refusing food and drink. After several weeks she is still alive and sick people visiting her claim remarkable cures. Crowds numbering 10,000 daily enter the grounds surrounding her shack.

Vacation Catching Snakes

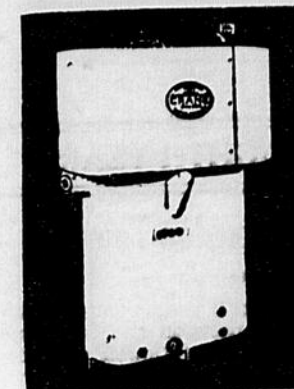

Golfing, camping, fishing, boating and loafing are common enough forms of vacation enjoyment, but Paul J. Martin, Seattle, Washington, insurance man, has a way of his own for relaxing and resting each year. He spends his vacations in the rattlesnake country out west, capturing specimens. Martin is an honorary member of the National Anti-Venine Society, and is one of the Northwest's authorities on snakes. Almost every summer he spends much of his vacation capturing rattlers and supplying zoological collections with Washington's specimens of poisonous reptiles.

Brushed Off Load of Hay

Charles Allen, 45, of Watkin's Glen, N. Y., who was swept from a load of hay when telephone wires caught him under the chin, died from a fractured skull. He was an Odessa farmhand.

Automatic Soft Water

The Crane-Wario electro-matic water softener is an automatic electrically operated softener. It is cast in one grey iron corrosion resisting piece. It uses an improved chemically prepared softening mineral, Doucil. It requires absolutely no attention or watching of valves during regeneration. All that is necessary is to pour in salt occasionally. A signal flag rises to warn you when this is needed.

CHAUTAUQUA CONCLUDED ON MONDAY

customs of the people of the Holy Land and his enthusiasm in portraying it was undoubtedly a revelation to his audience. Nayphe showed the audience a number of beautiful pieces of tapestry. Living habits of his people and treatment of the guests was especially interesting. The be-throthal wherein the prospective mother-in-law plays the major role was made amusing as well as interesting, though he reminded his hearers that the mother-in-law was the "whole cheese" in "Evelyn's" life. The tour was assisted by Mrs. Morris J. Hunter, and the Misses Ruth and Isobel McEwen, Ruth Warden, Eleanor Miller and Ethel Kelly, to whom Nayphe paid a great tribute for their ready help in his programme.

One story of profound interest was that of the task which was given to the orphan when she had reached the age of fifteen years to weave a tapestry which would portray her life. This, the noble Damascus nobleman contends, accounts for the beautiful characters of so many women of the Holy Land. "Each color represents a sentiment and the picture to be portrayed is left entirely to the worker," said Nayphe. "In the four years work which it takes the girl to complete this tapestry she keeps her thoughts and ideals on the highest plane, for the work when completed will reveal to her people, her own character." Nayphe was certainly one of the high lights of the Chautauqua programme.

Myths of the Arctic
Dr. Vilhjalmur Stefansson, noted Canadian explorer, leader of four Arctic expeditions, holder of degrees from seven universities and of gold medals from eight geographical societies, a native of Arnes, Manitoba, who has been publicly thanked by the Canadian Government for his services in adding thousands of square miles to the territory of Canada, claims to be an explorer only "by accident," for he was once a teacher and taught the very things which he is now disproving.

"My own teachings were not only wrong, but absurd," said Dr. Stefansson in the course of his lecture at Chautauqua on Thursday night. "I used to teach that the North Pole was the coldest place on earth—the last word in chilliness. I thought that no trees nor vegetation grew there. I thought that the Eskimos lived in snow houses. I thought that they drank oil. And I went further—I even believed that they liked it."

"The North Pole is a place as small as my finger-tip. The ice there is about five feet thick and is continually being broken up by the sea. There are pieces of ice there as big as a table, some as big as Prince Edward Island, and some, but not many, as big as Nova Scotia. The water is all the time moving. If it were really very cold that water would be frozen and the ice would be very much more than five feet thick. I don't believe that it has ever been colder at the North Pole than 55 degrees below zero."

"Going south for 300 miles inland, leaving that great radiator, the sea, behind us, we find a temperature of 79 below zero which obtains for 600 miles more, down to the Peace River district. So here in parts of Canada it is about 27 degrees colder than on the north coast, and about 25 degrees colder than at the North Pole. It is often colder in Montana and in the Rocky Mountain states than it is on the north coast of Canada."

Returning to the eskimos of the "frozen north," the speaker declared that it was by no means an unusual sight in summer to see them fanning themselves with bandana handkerchiefs in a temperature of 80 degrees in the shade. The lecturer stated that there were 760 varieties of flowering plants north of the Arctic circle.

"The school books also tell us that the Eskimos live in snow houses," the speaker continued. "Of the 15,000 Eskimos in Greenland, 14,700 have never seen a snow house. And more than half of the Eskimos in the world have never heard of a snow house unless they have been to school."

Dr. Stefansson had only once seen an Eskimo drink oil, and then it was at the request of a tourist, who paid a dollar for the privilege of seeing the "custom" exemplified by a boy with an eye to business.

Lindbergh's Fog Bound Route
"It is a bad time of the year to be making the flight Lindbergh has announced," said the explorer. "The route announced indicates that the flyer will follow James Bay to the Hudson Bay shore, cut across to the Arctic and so down to the Behring Straits which separate America from Asia."

"He will have 3,000 miles to fly and these miles will very likely be fog bound and poor in emergency landing places," he continued. "Climatic conditions just now will make his peril great, because while the land areas in the north are at present warm, the seas are like ice water. The result is that a breeze from the sea onto the land will produce heavy fog over the land, while a land wind will produce fog over the sea. Either is bad for Lindbergh, because he intends to follow the sea coast."

"It is possible of course that Lindbergh will have good luck and find calm weather," Dr. Stefansson conceded. "He is in any event a very skillful flyer and navigator. But it does seem to me that he is running unnecessary risks."

The better route, according to the explorer, would have led Lindbergh to Asia by way of Cochrane, or Sioux Lookout in Northern Ontario, westward to Slave Lake, down the Mackenzie River and from it to the Yukon River basin, finally bringing him to the Behring Straits.

"This route would have a dual advantage," Dr. Stefansson said. "It would be at least 100 miles from the sea coast all the way, and so the risk of fog would be much diminished, and secondly it would provide Lindbergh with many more emergency landing places, since most of the route is dotted all over with little lakes. I should say he would never be more than 10 miles from such a lake in the course of a flight over this route. Lastly it is somewhat shorter than the one upon which the flyer has decided."

Says Nautilus Too Old
In discussing the perils of the submarine exploration of the Arctic fields, Dr. Stefansson declared his firm belief in the practicability of what Sir Hubert Wilkins is attempting.

"But," he said, "the submarine he now has is old. It is not fit for the work. He already has had one serious engine breakdown while crossing from the United States to England. And the summer is now so far advanced that I believe it impossible for him to reach the North Pole this year."

"What I think will happen," he continued, "is that Sir Hubert will take his submarine perhaps a hundred miles further into the Arctic ice than the great Russian ice breakers Malignin or Krassin can go. That will be enough. It will prove that the submarine is suited for Arctic exploration, and then he can come back and perhaps have some philanthropist give him enough money to have a proper submarine built."

With Dr. Stefansson was Mr. Anderson, a member of the crew on his third expedition who operated the film machine, showing a number of very interesting and beautiful actual photographs of life beyond the Arctic circle.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. H. R. Clouston.

Lecture on Australia

Friday afternoon, after a brilliant prelude of music by the Petries, Miss Constance Neville-Johns gave a very interesting lecture on her native land—"Australia"—the Land of the Kangaroo. In her opening remarks talking of Australia she called it Topsy-Turvy land, "the youngest and oldest of the continents; where the warm winds blow from the north, rivers flow inland, stones float, trees shed their bark instead of their leaves, birds lay eggs yet suckle their young, the seeds grow on the outside of the fruit, and where Christmas day comes in midsummer!"

Miss Johns, a native of Melbourne, Australia, has returned from a visit to her homeland a year ago when she collected a number of weapons and tools of the aborigines which she showed to her audience and very kindly explained further to a number of boys and grown-ups after her lecture. The lecturer possessed the rare ability of grasping the children's attention during the most serious part of her lecture, many of which asked her questions concerning her statements after. Miss Johns has travelled with the Swarthmore and Redpath Chautauquas in the United States, and resigned from a position with a Chicago broadcasting station to join the Canadian Chautauqua.

Rather interesting is the fact that Miss Johns will join a tour to the Antarctic this winter, and her desire is to be the first white woman to lay foot in these vast spaces. A very interesting lecture will undoubtedly be the result.

Petrie Company Programme

At the evening programme of the Petrie Company, Miss Johns, a coloratura soprano, was especially appreciated in "Lo! Here the Gentle Lark" and "The Laughing Song" from "Histoires de Manon." Other numbers on her part of the programme were "Annie Laurie," "Carmenia," "Cielito Lindo," "The Song of Love," and "By the Waters of Minnetonka."

Some of the numbers were given in costume which made them doubly interesting.

Mr. Herbert Petrie and his company presented a musical programme of unusual variety and charm on Friday evening. This novelty orchestra company presented quartettes in brass, saxophone, and voice, also featuring solos on many instruments, interspersed with comedy numbers.

Herbert Petrie, who heads this interesting organization is an excellent musician, a one-time member of John Philip Sousa's band. The programme was a great success and the hearty applause which greeted every number was ample testimony of the audience's appreciation. Classical numbers, semi-classical, and popular rhythmic melodies were equally well put over. The instruments used were two triumphal trumpets, two trombones, melophone, two alto saxophones, soprano saxophone, clarinet, bassoon, violin, banjo, and piano, all instruments of a very high value. The programme executed by the Petrie company included "At Dawning," "Long, Long Ago," "March of the Three Musketeers," "Marcheta," "Stars in a Velvet Sky," and "The Holy City." Members of the company were Messrs. Petrie, Greenup, Morris, and Ritzenthaler.

Sue Hastings' Marionettes
Saturday afternoon was certainly "red letter" day for the children at Chautauqua with the appearance of Sue Hastings' Marionettes. "The Story of Peter Rabbit," "Peter Rabbit at the Washing Well," "Faithful Sambo," and a few novelty numbers were very much appreciated by the children as well as the grown-ups present.

The puppets were beautifully costumed and moved with such human agility that it was hard to realize they were not actual living creatures. The stories of each act were entertaining, and in "Sambo" the children received many a thrill in that character's encounter with the tigers, and his ultimate success in clearing the way to the market.

Popular Comedy "Skidding"

While Saturday afternoon was "red letter" day for the children, Saturday evening was a combination for adults and children of one of the most enjoyable programmes on Chautauqua.

"Skidding," packed with rich comedy and wholesome humor was a peppy out-of-the-ordinary comedy. Its natural sequences kept the audience in constant mirth. The cast of characters was excellent and Winifred Parker, as Marion Hardy, captivated the audience from her first appearance on the stage. The Peerless players undoubtedly deserve great credit for the staging of this play.

The story is of an American family, headed by Judge Hardy, a prominent figure in local politics and a candidate for re-election. Marion, the youngest daughter, upon her return from college, reveals that she, too, has been dabbling in politics, and when the revelation comes that the Judge's speaker has deserted him, Marion takes his place and delivers a fine oration for her father's nomination. In doing this, she wins a nomination for the State Legislature for herself, and the Judge is elected to the Supreme Court instead of the District. Marion's real problem, however, is Wayne Trent, who objects to politics for women, but who finally concedes his desires in return for the youngest daughter's hand.

The difficulties seemingly encountered by one of the daughters in her married life, and the mother's handling of the situation was very interesting. Young Andy, the irresistible, falls in love; as a youth his problems are misunderstood by the rest of the family, to whom he each does a good turn.

Lucille Elmore Revue
Monday, the concluding afternoon of the Chautauqua patrons had the pleasure of seeing and hearing Lucille Elmore and her two associates, Joseph Serpico, talented violinist and Clare Foster, pianist.

Miss Elmore's numbers on the afternoon programme were "Rain or Shine," "On Way to Land of Make Believe," "Grandmothers of Yesterday and Today," "Doll Shop Effect," "Children's Sketch," with the little blackie, Ventriquoist act, "Got to get a Girl," "Holland, China, Ireland, Spain," and "General of the Canadian Army." Especially amusing was Miss Elmore's ventriquoist act.

Numbers by the violinist during the afternoon were "Liebesfreud" from Kreisler; "Snake Dance" from Bureleigh; "Caprice Viennoise" from Kreisler; a group of Victor Hebert's compositions "Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life, Kiss me Again, and Gypsy Love Song." Clare Foster played a delightful number from Cyril Scott. With Serpico he sang the popular number, "Ho Hum" and "Just Whistle." Two bass solos by Serpico were greatly enjoyed "Asleep in the Deep" and "The Trumpeter."

Lucille Elmore is a niece of Fred Stone, the famous comedian, and herself a prominent member of the original cast of "Stepping Stones," one of Broadway's greatest revues. Miss Elmore was a very entertaining lady and in her impersonation of the deacon, the talented young lady excelled. Her evening numbers were "I'm a Little Girl," "Cinderella," "Mechanical Doll," "Hat with a Silver Lining"—an impersonation of Ted Lewis, "The Deacon," and "131 and 1931 Flappers." Clare Foster scored a popular success in "Turkey in the Straw." Two violin numbers by Serpico were much enjoyed "Concerto in D Minor" from Vietuennip; as an encore Mr. Serpico played "Mighty Like a Rose" from Nevins.

John Bockewitz
As the programme read, "Nothing is dry but the Chalk," in the unusual programme of animated cartoons, and dazzling novelties of John Bockewitz. It was an excellent serio-comic entertainment sparkling with humor, wit and originality. Mr. Bockewitz possessed the unusual ability of capturing the fancy from the first moment he appeared on the platform. He accompanied the drawing of his pictures with a running fire of amusing comment and the artistic rendition of poetry and bits of prose.

In announcing this programme on Saturday night Miss Deyell, the Chautauqua organizer said, "When you see Bockewitz on Monday night you will say that it is just like Chautauqua 'to keep the best to the last.'" We quite agree with Miss Deyell, that Mr. Bockewitz's programme was one of the best.

The Chautauqua representatives in charge of arrangements in Huntingdon during the past week were Miss Edith Deyell of Queen's University, Kingston, Mr. Buff Simmons of the Engineering School, Kingston, and Mr. Jack McDermid of University College, Toronto.

Eaton's Wanted Another Alpha Churn

Pasteurizing Room in Eaton's Montreal Dairy

Churn Room in Eaton's Montreal Dairy

Eaton's Dairy, situated practically in the heart of Canada's busiest shopping district in Montreal, in order to fill the constantly growing demand for its well known brands of butter, was recently obliged to install a second large churn. Needless to say, it was another Alpha Mogul. This Creamery, one of the finest in the Dominion, is turning out tens of thousands of pounds of butter each week. From soup to nuts it is De Laval equipped. Some of the larger pieces are four motor driven 400 gallons Alpha C Pasteurizers, an Alpha Hydraulic Butter Printer and two Alpha Mogul Churns, to say nothing of De Laval Pumps, Sanitary Fittings and smaller equipment. Their latest purchase was the second Alpha Mogul Churn, installed recently by the side of the first which has been in operation since the Creamery was first started, about three years ago. The rapidly increasing business made the installation of a second large Churn a necessity, and of course it was another Alpha.

Marked Contrasts In Femine Types Ottawa Exhibition

Ubangi Women With Distorted Faces, Petite Japanese, and Beautiful Show Girls Will be Seen

From the four corners of the earth will come men and women of striking contrasts, animals, fish, birds, fruits and products of all kinds for the entertainment and education of visitors to the Ottawa exhibition. The most striking contrast of all will be that of the Ubangi women from the African wilds with the fascinating and dainty Japanese performers, the pulchritudinous water nymphs or the Broadway beauties of the music and dance revue.

When beset by the Arabian slavers, the Ubangi women made themselves hideous and thereby lessened their chances of being drafted into slavery by extending their lower lips to enormous size. It is claimed that the coal-black females of the Ubangi can stretch their lips to the circumference of a large dinner plate.

A number of the Ubangi women are to be on exhibition at the midway shows of the Ottawa exhibition, and will form only one of the many new features to be seen in the pathways of the big days, August 24 to 29, inclusive.

Ottawa's midway this year will be provided by the William Glick Great-er Shows, and will include 28 separate side-shows and rides, in addition to any new features which may be conceived by the showmen up to the time of the exhibition.

Many premier acts will supplement the grand stand revue in such a way as to make it the greatest outdoor show of its kind in Eastern Canada. The Kikua Japs, a group of marvelously clever tumblers and head balancers and the sensation of New York, have been engaged to appear and the fact that they have been booked up for two and one-half years at a stretch indicates how much in demand they are and how unique and enjoyable their act is. Beautiful girls comprise the personnel of the Billy Ritchie Water Show, a performance of skill and daring in aquatic evolutions, featured by the sensational high dive of Captain Sol Solomon. Max Gruber will be on the bill with his jungle oddities, including an elephant, Zebra and a Great Dane, who go through all sorts of clever tricks. Mr. Gruber is noted as the first man to "gentle" a Zebra.

Bee Starr, the personality of another fine act, is a winsome girl, who is one of the wonders of the scientific world for her great feats of acrobatic strength. One of the thrills of the program is promised to the thousands who will see her performing at a dizzy height over the great stage, seemingly obvious of the danger, going through a gruelling exhibition of human endurance.

The Leach LaQuinlan Trio is another stellar attraction, the principals giving a wonderful exhibition of skill and strength on a thin wire stretched across the stage, while for laughs the management have been fortunate in securing the White Brothers, a splendid team of world-wide fame, whose irresistibly funny antics have scored hits wherever they have appeared. The Frisco Seals, performing clever stunts of rolling, balancing objects on their noses and playing musical instruments is but another of the splendid acts of the grand stand performance.

Anyone wishing information about the exhibition or about the city, with particulars which will help to plan a visit to the Capital, will hear promptly if communications are addressed to the manager and secretary, Herbert H. McElroy, Ottawa.

Ormsvorn Village Council

Memorial to Lloyd True Unveiled

On Sunday, Aug. 2nd, a very interesting but uncommon event took place at Henrysburg United Church when two memorial windows were unveiled.

The windows were dedicated to the memory of Mr. and Mrs. Hewson Payne, five sons and six daughters, and to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cockburn and family.

The impressive sermon was given by Rev. S. J. Pike of Mountain Street United Church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Williams and Rev. Mr. Meredith of Lacolle.

Mr. Meredith read a history of both families stating they had always been great church supporters.

Mr. Pike drew the congregations attention to the tablet in memory of Lloyd True, who died for his country in the Great War.

The Lacolle organist and singers assisted with the singing. Mrs. Robertson of Montreal accompanied on the piano by Mr. Robertson, sang "By Still Waters."

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Smith and daughter Doris, Mr. Sam Smith and John Braithwaite were visitors in Henrysburg on Sunday.

Mr. James Smith of Roxham, called on Mr. H. E. Barrington on Sunday morning.

Several from here attended camp meeting service in Moores', N. Y.

Miss Mabel Keddy of Hemmingford, spent several days the past week with her aunt, Miss L. M. True.

On a previous issue an item appeared that a party had been given in honour of Mrs. Vernon Ellerton's birthday, the proceeds from this was used for a casserole and linen table cloth which have since been presented to Mrs. Ellerton.

Masters Lynwood and Kenneth Cookman spent a couple of days in Odelltown and Lacolle.

Mr. and Mrs. Sweet and son of Milwaukee, Wis., Mrs. Maria Denison of Plattsburg, N. Y. and Mrs. Chas. Collings of Hemmingford, called on Mrs. John Cookman on Friday afternoon.

Sunday guests of Hemmingford, at the home of Mrs. Seller were Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Payne, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Seller and family.

Among those that visited at Elm-dale Farm on Sunday, were Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Cameron and Marilyn of Dundee, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Derick and family of Clarenceville, Mr. A. B. Clarkson, Messrs. L. Clarkson and D. Stuart and Rev. E. E. Dawson of Lacolle, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Cookman of Odelltown and Mrs. John McClelland.

Brooklet

The Brooklet W. C. T. U. were entertained at the home of Mrs. E. R. Erskine on Thursday afternoon, July 26th. Eleven members responded to roll call. The president, Mrs. J. O. Levers presided. Eleven sick calls, two bouquets, three cards and on spray were reported. The resolutions of World's W. C. T. U. was read by Mrs. H. E. Wilson, who also read several items of current events. Mrs. Massey gave a splendid paper on Women's Suffrage in Quebec. Mrs. Erskine gave a demonstration on favourite summer drinks, the orange-ade was certainly enjoyed and appreciated by the ladies. It was decided that our union should entertain the other unions for Rally Day this autumn. Mrs. J. E. Reenie and Mrs. M. Rosevear were re-appointed sick visiting committee for the coming month. The hostess served a delicious lunch at the close of the meeting.

Stoned by Monkeys

According to a report from Paris, a Frenchman was killed in Algeria by a stone thrown by a monkey. Large monkeys in northern Africa, it is said, are sometimes extremely dangerous. They travel in large bands and often different bands engage in battles, using stones as missiles. The Frenchman in question was killed when a band of monkeys bombarded the taxi in which he was riding.

Sliced That's the Test

Through waxed paper all bread looks much alike. The real test of freshness is slicing. If you use Purity bread you know that crush as it may under the knife—it always returns to its perfect shape—only absolutely fresh bread will do that.

Try our rolls and pastry—not by the knife test—but by the taste test. Fresh daily deliveries.

Careless Pedestrians

In Nuremberg they seem to have hit upon a plan which secures some lasting results. Any person who drops a paper or an empty cigarette box in the street is liable to a fine of one mark. A watchful policeman steps up, names the offense, collects the quarter and hands over an official receipt for it. The streets of Nuremberg are astonishingly free from litter.

Mentally Sound Persons Not in Mental Hospitals

No Foundation For Common Belief That Mental Hospitals Contain Many Persons Committed For Utter Purposes

A resolution was recently adopted by the Army and Navy Veterans Association in Vancouver asking for the appointment of a "lunacy commission" to investigate the charge that mentally sound returned soldiers are being committed to mental hospitals "on insufficient evidence."

This is in line with the very common belief of persons unfamiliar with mental hospitals that these institutions contain large numbers of sane persons put there for various ulterior purposes.

During the past five years I have visited practically every mental hospital in Canada at least once a year and some often more than that, and I can state conclusively that very few, if any, of those in Canadian mental hospitals are not in need of treatment of some sort.

It is true that most mental hospitals contain many who should be cared for in some other type of institution, or in the community. Especially in the east, they contain large numbers of elderly persons whose mental disabilities, while not serious, are such that they require some care and attention for their own sakes, and in the best interests of the hospitals, they should be cared for elsewhere, but many of them have no relatives, or else have relatives unable to support them. So, in lieu of a better place, they eventually arrive at the mental hospital, and there they stay.

A smaller group, composed of chronic alcoholics and drug addicts, have also no proper place in a mental hospital. Since, however, in the great majority of cases, they are unable to get along in the community without trouble to themselves or others, they, too, frequently find their way to the mental hospital. One of the great needs at present is for the establishment of suitable institutions for the scientific study of alcoholism and drug addiction and for the care and treatment of persons so afflicted.

Although Canadian mental hospitals compare favorably with those in other countries, many improvements still remain to be made, but there is no ground for the common belief that they are used to deprive any one improperly of his liberty.

Information on any point not covered here will be given in later issues if you will address your questions to "Mental Health," 111 St. George St., Toronto, Ontario.)

Cash Paid "FOR SALE" Advertisements

Cost very little

Recently the Gleaner adopted the system of granting a reduced rate for advertising "For Sale" and "Want" advertisements, when paid in advance. The result has been gratifying. People who pay cash get advertising at the rate of 2 cents a word, those who ask credit pay 3 cents a word. Numbers count as words, and when box numbers are to be printed at foot of advertisement, add 10 cents. Advertisements which are inserted for more than one week will be inserted for half price after the first week. Minimum charge per week to be 25 cents.

For Sale and Want advertisements in the Gleaner always bring satisfactory results. To verify this statement ask your friends who have used these columns for that purpose.

The Huntingdon Gleaner Inc.

Phone 40

P.S.—Phone advertisements will be received, but not at the 2 cent rate unless you come in and pay for same before the Gleaner is printed. The extra charge is required to take care of the book-keeping and collection charges.

Last week, Officers of the Preventive Service, Robert and Laberge, from Franklin Centre, seized a Hupmobile 1930 Rochester car loaded with 16 gallons of contraband alcohol and also apprehended the occupants of the said car.

Mr. Neil O'Meara and two daughters Loretta and Rose and son Robert from Chubbuck, N. Y., were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Mehan.

HOW IS THEIR EYESIGHT?

How did your children finish in their final examinations at school this year? Perhaps you were disappointed in the measure of success some of them attained. And yet, you may have been responsible. If they ever complained of tired eyes perhaps you passed it off without serious consideration while your child was being held back mentally as well as physically.

Parents quite often think their children wear glasses for fun. The only safe way is to have the child's eyes examined and the truth determined.

MALONE FAIR

ADMISSION HAS BEEN REDUCED

First and Last Days to be Free to Children Under Fifteen, Adults Admitted Twenty-five Cents Lower

Not the least of the many attractive new features of the 80th annual Franklin County Fair to be held in Malone August 25th to August 28th is the fact that the fair management has lowered the cost of admission on the opening day, Tuesday, August 25th and again on Friday, the closing day at the fair.

On these days the general admission charge for adults will be fifty cents instead of seventy-five, as in former years, with free admission to all children under fifteen years of age. This should insure an unusually large attendance on the opening and closing days. During the other days of the fair the prices will remain the same as in the past.

The 1931 exhibition is rapidly taking shape as one of the really great fairs of Malone fair history. $14,400 in prize purses with an entry list of horses that would do justice to the Grand Circuit, insures a card of the best race in many years. Over 200 of the finest trotters and pacers have been entered.

Hundreds of cattle, horses, sheep, swine and poultry will be numbered in the stock exhibits, and the 4H Club will add many fine animals to this big feature of the fair. The Fish & Game Club building is being redecorated and enlarged, and the annual official dog show will bring upwards of 250 dogs to Malone. Many entries of high class canine aristocrats from several states have already been listed in this all breed show.

The vaudeville and fireworks have been selected with great care, and the scores of midway attractions appear to be among the best ever shown in Malone. The horse show will bring many beautiful jumpers, hunters, hacks and ponies here, and keen competition in each of the many classes is indicated by the quality of the entries in this feature.

Summed up, the 1931 fair appears to have all the features that make for the biggest, best and most interesting exhibition ever attempted in the entire eighty years of Malone fair history.

Compliments

Mrs. Clancy lived in an apartment house, just over the rooms of her friend, Mrs. Murphy. For a long time they were the best of friends, but at last they quarrelled.

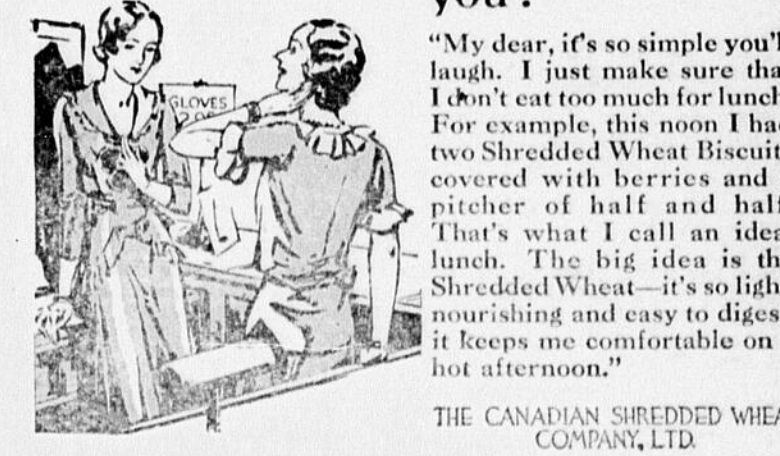

One day, as Mrs. Murphy was sitting by the window, Mrs. Clancy called down: "Faith now, and why can't yez get in out of the windy and your pet monkey sit there awhile? The neighbours would be after getting a rest from yer ugly old face."

"Well, now," retorted Mrs. Murphy, "it was only this mornin' that I did the same thing. A policeman came along, and when he saw the monkey he bowed and smiled, and said: 'Why, Mrs. Clancy, when did yez move downstairs?'"

"Why doesn't the heat bother you?"

"My dear, it's so simple you'll laugh. I just make sure that I don't eat too much for lunch. For example, this noon I had two Shredded Wheat Biscuits covered with berries and a pitcher of half and half. That's what I call an ideal lunch. The big idea is the Shredded Wheat—it's so light, nourishing and easy to digest, it keeps me comfortable on a hot afternoon."

"Big Business Girl"

By One of Them

CHAPTER XIII

She released herself but clung to his hand. "Come along."

She pulled him into the great living-room, its high ceilings and soft draperies giving a kind of false twilight in the middle of the afternoon. "Nobody is here this afternoon. Johnny, isn't that cozy?"

They both felt intimacy enveloping them with a delightful rush. They sat down together on the divan.

"Remember how we had to dodge people at school?" he asked. "Seemed like we never could be alone."

She nodded with a swift intake of breath.

On that mouse colored divan with the great velvet flowers, they sat with their arms tight about each other.

"Johnny," she repeated his name softly, like a caress. "My dear!"

"It's so good to see you."

"I've worked like a fool this summer."

"I know you have."

"Did you work hard?"

He laughed, so that his white teeth shone in his dark face. "Well, those Frenchmen never did want to quit dancing. I guess it was hard work—I don't know. We surely got grand tips."

"I'll bet you did."

"The manager gave the boys an extra bonus when we sailed, and he took care of me, too."

"How much did you save?"

He laughed again. "You would ask that. Not very much, Mac. I bought a lot of clothes in London. You know I never did have all the clothes I wanted—or the right kind."

"You should have been more saving."

"Oh, he cried, kissing her protests down. 'I love you so. Don't scold me, honey, when I've just come back. I love you so!'"

He whispered it over and over into her ear.

"And I love you so," she replied. "I'll never let you go so far away again."

There was the fullness of silence between them. They were both trembling a little.

"Love me, Johnny," she murmured. After a while she said softly, "How do you feel about going back to school?"

"I don't want to, at all."

"You don't?"

"No."

She was silent. One of the things they had continually disagreed over was this. Johnny should have graduated with her—if he had only buckled down to work.

"I really don't, Mac. I can't see another year of it."

"You promised," she reminded him, but she wasn't accusing.

"Sure, but I just can't honey."

"I know," she said heavily. "I know. I think you're making a mistake, though. It would do you a lot of good to do more things you didn't like to do. But if you feel that way about it—"

Her voice tapered off.

"I do," he thought he had won.

"So you're all fired up over your bang?"

"I think they're a great bunch of guys," he explained, "and I want to get across like nothing human out there at the Villa Carlotta tonight."

"But—"

"But I don't think I want to get a job in a hotel or night club, plunking away night after night. It gets you down, do you know it?"

"Why, Johnny, what do you want to do?"

He was afraid of her eyes.

"I sort of thought it might be a good idea to drop down to Los Angeles to see what the talkies have done to the place. If it looks right, I could get some men together and work in a picture or two."

"You must be crazy."

"I am crazy—to see L. A. again, and those cool old nights and the zip of the place."

"You shouldn't like it so."

"You've never been out there," he reminded her.

But she knew him. Knew that golf clubs, saddles and high powered cars were made for him. He was built for play, was Johnny. Just a glorious playmate. Somebody would do the worrying. Somebody would always have to do that. He was John Goodman, take him or leave him.

A clock near them chimed softly. She straightened up, examined her wrist-watch. "It's late, Mac. Terribly late. I've got to go. Where do I call for a cab?"

She came to life. "I hate to have you go this way."

"Blame yourself," he said bitterly. "Business again. That's all it ever is."

The sharpness of his tone annoyed her. "I'm going to get your cab," she said. "You mustn't be any later than you are now."

He followed her into the little telephone booth under the stairs. There was a slight confusion over the address. He stood with the door knob in his hands, a frown on his face, looking at the back of her neck and wondering what to say next.

She emerged after a moment. "I wish I were going out with you."

"Why don't you?" he said shortly. "Cut this dinner."

"I couldn't possibly do that."

"Yes, you could."

"No, it's business."

"Business!" he cried hoarsely. His voice absurdly like a villain's in a melodrama. "Don't say that word!"

She sat down, to steady herself. There was a dangerous pause.

"I don't want you ever to say that word to me again."

"Do," he said dryly.

"Everything's all right, isn't it?" she looked at him gravely. "Yes," she said, and they both knew it was a lie.

He touched her lips lightly. They were a thin line, unresponsive. "I'll call you tomorrow morning," he reminded her.

"Do," he was already down the steps. "And good luck for tonight."

With a wave he was gone.

She closed the door and sank down on the first step in the hall. She did not cry easily, but she wanted to cry now. Her emotions had worn her out.

Just a moment ago she had held the moon in her hands. Now that he was gone, she realized with a wave of misery, all that he had for her was a fascination which was a horrible burden upon her. When he put his arms about her she felt trapped. . . . but then she didn't ever want to get away from that trap.

She was strong now. She had her business career that would take her time and her interest and enthusiasm. She could afford to be hard. But what would it be without him, after a few years when life began to wear thin and accomplishment had lost its importance?

Perhaps it was that air of the perpetual undergraduate about him which she resented. And the fact that he was lazy, steeped in natural talent. She thought of his terrible facility as a curse.

She hated him for his power over her. One of them would have to give in—but it wasn't going to be Claire MacIntyre.

The only way to be free of him was to find another man.

He was not going to spoil it for her—not on her life! She would have fun. It seemed more important now than it had before.

She would flirt with every man she saw. She would get R. J. tonight. She would flirt, but she would not break the rules of flirting by falling in love.

CHAPTER XIII

Luke lived at his club in Evanston, so Mac had begged him not to come way into the city for her, especially after the events of the morning.

When she swept down the steps of the old house, everyone passing paid her the tribute of a long stare. She was a startling vision, fragile and beautiful in white with a creamy Italian shawl wrapped around her. She wanted to be Mac tonight, not "Miss MacIntyre," and she had even changed her coiffure to show Luke and R. J. that she could be lovely and intriguing as well as efficient. Etched crystal earrings swung from her ears. Tangerine opera pumps with large crystal buckles relieved the virginity of her costume. She knew that she looked alluring and stepped in to the cab with all the bouffante grace and femininity of her great grandmother stepping into a victoria.

The idea of a party didn't excite her very much, but when she measured what she could do socially with R. J. and what she had not been able to do in the office, she was immediately very keen to be there.

The house was on a curve of the drive and looked very substantial and large as they came toward it. It was of gray stone, a driveway on one side and a wide, uncovered veranda disappearing along the other which overlooked Lake Michigan.

Mac was let in by a maid and asked to go upstairs to the right to leave her wrap and tuck in the escaping wisps of her soft dark hair, if she wished. She sat down at a dressing table and dipped her fingers into the rouge that matched her slippers. She widened the curve of her upper lip to wipe away the office expression and she dropped her lashes a moment as she caught sight of a large photograph of a younger edition of R. J. framed in Venetian leather. This, then, must be Mrs. Clayton's room, not a guest room. But she must love him very much to have his picture on her dressing table! And they had been married, Mac knew fifteen years.

He was very handsome in an ugly way—eyes protruding like a frog's, but very black and humorous. His nose was quite large and curved. Mac couldn't make up her mind about his mouth—the lips were full but restrained, hovered about them. He held his teeth together when he laughed and had a deep dimple in one cheek. His skin was naturally dark in addition to the perpetual tanning it received on the links.

She could hear quite a lot of laughing downstairs and decided that she was probably the last one to arrive. Mac went down, then, conscious of being young and poised and smart. Hattie had been listening for her and met her at the foot of the stairs.

"Oh, Miss MacIntyre, I'm Mrs. Clayton. Mr. Clayton has spoken about you often and I'm so glad you could come. The others are all here and Luke has been telling us about your perfectly awful morning. Come right in. Hattie Clayton hadn't missed a detail of Mac's costume, and Mac decided it would be a pretty good pose to be shy.

"Well, it was pretty bad, Mrs. Clayton, and now I'm afraid we're in for a lot of adjustments." Stick to business with R. J.'s wife, she thought.

Luke was talking with a very theatrical blonde and raised his eyebrows at Mac. She smiled at him under her lashes. R. J. was conferring with the white-coated West Indian who had brought in a tray of silver cocktail cups and a plate of stuffed olives on toothpicks, wrapped in slivers of bacon. When he saw Mac, he crossed the room and took her hand. He did not act as though there was anything unusual about seeing her like this.

"Miss MacIntyre, Mrs. Elfriston and Mrs. John. Miss Jardka, Miss MacIntyre, Miss MacIntyre, Mr. Donovan and Mr. Walker."

Mac knew Mr. Elfriston, the plant superintendent, and she had, of course, heard of Mrs. Harper Johns through the society columns. But Mrs. Jardka was something else, as was Morton Walker. She heard Mrs. Johns call him Morton and decided that he belonged, in some way, to this woman who was twenty years his senior. Luke stood beside Miss Jardka's chair and seemed unable to get away. Certainly Marsha Jardka was a fake of some sort.

"How you eet zees, Donny?" she appealed to Mr. Donovan. Her eyelashes were stiffly beaded around her baby blue eyes. Her hair was bleached almost white and she wore it in a long bob, brushing her shoulders.

Mac never have olives sticks. In Warsaw, Mac wondered if she could stand up. She must be a Polish motion picture actress.

"Miss Jardka," Luke pronounced it with a "y" and looked so innocent Mac knew he was up to something. "Is the famous Marsha Jardka who wears the jet costume everyone is talking about, in the Follies?"

Miss Jardka smiled sweetly. "Miss Jardka," resumed Luke, "was in the headline in Warsaw during the Revolution. She was, of course, only eight or nine years old, and at that time supported her mother and father by dancing in the streets."

Mac recognized the phrasing of a certain malicious dramatic critic who had appreciated Marsha only too well.

Miss Jardka stirred luxuriously at this attention. There had been no attempt to hide her light under a bushel. She seemed to be getting along all right now, Mac noted, because at least two of the six diamond and emerald bracelets on her left wrist were real.

There is a wonderful city, don't you think, Miss Jardka? Mac asked in such a genuine manner that Marsha never suspected her. "I was there for three or four days last summer and it fascinated me."

Mac decided that Marsha Jardka had never been beyond New York. She sipped her lemonade and liked it more for being in a silver chalice. She accepted a caviar cracker and heard Mrs. Harper Johns say to her: "I overheard you say you were in Europe last summer. Miss MacIntyre. Student tour, I suppose? Did you go to Deauville?"

"I wore Deauville sandals but I didn't get to Deauville," Mac laughed. "No, I went alone and spent most of my time in southern Italy." Mac retorted by smiling suggestively at Morton Walker. She despised him at once. He looked like a chorus man. He was tall and paper thin, with heavily lashed eyes and waving what colored hair. Effeminate, Mac stamped him. They went out to dinner on the porch overlooking the lake.

"Miss MacIntyre, will you sit there beside Mr. Clayton? Mrs. Johns on this side of him. Then Mr. Walker, Mrs. Elfriston, Mr. Winters on this side of me. Mr. Elfriston, Miss Jardka, Mr. Donovan."

That took care of all of them and placed Luke far enough away so that Mac needn't fear his interruption. Mr. Donovan, she knew, would be easy to handle and would be leaning faintly against Marsha Jardka.

Mac was laughing at everything anybody said in a "ho-ho-ho" fashion, ending his outbursts in a violent fit of asthmatic coughing. Mac saw that Hattie Clayton was watching her without seeming to and that she would have to be very careful. Their laughter and conversation insulated the restraint of the night. Mac could see the dew blanketing the grass in a cobwebby mist. She looked out over the water and strained her ears to his splashing until she became conscious of R. J. bending toward her in a new way.

"Claire," she heard him say, and it was the first time he had called her that, "I wish I could have spared you all that unpleasantness today. How do you honestly feel now?"

Mac decided to be facetious about the melodramatic morning behind her.

"I honestly haven't been thinking about racketeers. You know, Mr. Clayton, I park my business worries in the alley at six o'clock, and I am numb from the ears up for the rest of the night."

She lifted her chin so that the candle-light would find the curve of her cheek and make deep jewels of her eyes. She wanted to reveal to R. J. that there were no lines. She smiled a gamine smile at him out of the corner of her bright mouth. It was the first time she had flirted with him and the moment was almost ruined when she looked away and found Hattie narrowing her eyes at her.

Mrs. Elfriston had heard Mac say "racketeers" and was ready with her story which she had been preserving for just this moment. Mac thought she was a beautiful woman but a little ingenu for her age and her height.

"You know," she said, addressing E. J. and Mac, "the milkman who delivers my baby's milk at our apartment house was waylaid last week and slugged by two gangsters."

"Racketeers, dear," interrupted Mr. Elfriston who always corrected his wife with the air of a teacher addressing a backward pupil.

"These racketeers, then," she persisted, "waylaid this milkman because he had been warned that he must deliver milk any longer to me, and it seems that he had gone right on in spite of it." She let the story rest there, although she hadn't made her point.

The conversation was neither brilliant nor witty. Walker had lost his appetite entirely and was turning pale and paler. Hattie Clayton was trying to cover this up with a shrill and endless dialogue with which she was favoring Luke. She kept nodding to the West Indian to fill up the wine glasses, so that no one would suspect that the dinner was dull.

"In a few moments I am going to show you the garden, Claire—that is, if you are interested in gardens. Gardens are my hobby. I walk out there every morning before breakfast." He nodded toward the back of the house where Mac could see clusters of bushes and white arches picked out by the moonlight.

HISTORIC CRUSADES

The Crusades were wars undertaken for religious purposes, specifically those waged by the Christians for the recovery of the Holy Land. Toward the close of the Eleventh century the Byzantine empire was in great danger of becoming conquered by the Seljukian Turks, and the Emperor Alex. Comnenus appealed for help. At the council of Clermont, November 1095, Pope Urban II asked for aid to re-conquer Jerusalem. The first Crusade was from 1096-99; the second 1147-49; the third, 1189-91; and the fourth, 1201-04.

ANCIENT STOCKINGS

At Vienna, among the earliest collection robes of the emperor, are a fine pair of Thirteenth-century stockings which were made for William II of Sicily. They are made of red damask in two parts, the foot and leg being joined. The leg is embroidered and the foot portions are made of plain material.

The inventories of St. Paul's in London mention Thirteenth-century stockings embroidered with roses, eagles, lions, and in the upper part weave leaves. In museums in England, France, Germany, Italy and Hungary, many royal and pontifical stockings of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth centuries are exhibited.

Little-known Men Who Are Worthy of Honor

It is suggested that a statue be erected to the memory of the man who first introduced the orange to Great Britain. Japan already has a statue to its first orange bringer. France has put up a statue of Marie Harel, the inventor of Camembert cheese, and Offenburger, in Germany, boasts a statue to Sir Francis Drake for bringing the potato from the New world to the Old. But nobody knows who brought the oranges to Britain. They came from Spain about the year 1290, but beyond that there is no record. The first man to import oranges in quantity was Benjamin Bovill, a London fruit broker, the centenary of whose death recently occurred. The man who first brought bananas to Britain is just as worthy of a statue as anyone connected with oranges. Worthiest, perhaps, of any is Sir Richard Weston, who flourished in the reign of Charles I. Though very few people have heard of him, it was he who introduced turnips, clover and other sown grasses into Britain and so laid the foundation of modern agriculture.—London Mail.

INDIAN TRIBE IN WHICH WOMEN "RULE THE ROOST"

It's a masculine hand that rocks the cradle among the Tzapotec Indians on the isthmus of Tehuantepec in Mexico.

"You can go there today and find women sitting in the market place trading in vegetables and pottery while the men are at home minding the children and running errands," writes Grace Robinson in Liberty Magazine.

"If any clash arises between Mexican authorities and the tribe, the police go to the women, not the men for adjustment. Likewise the priest in spiritual matters carries on his business with the women."

"The women are tall, with regal carriage, due to the practice of carrying bundles on their heads, and their bodies are strong. The men are puny by comparison. The women are alert, the men stupid and slow."

"In many primitive societies, woman has been the dominant sex in all civil departments of life. Racial histories show that the dominant sex always delegated to the subordinate sex housewives and care of the children."

SAYS NEW BUILDINGS UNGODLY

"There is a saying that God made the country and the devil made the towns," said Sir Thomas Comyn-Platt in an address before the council for the Preservation of Rural England in London recently. "When I walk in London and see the buildings they are erecting I can quite believe they are not the work of the Almighty. England owes everything to the country."

HEALTH IN ECONOMY

In order to determine the effect of a special diet, nine young women students at the Washington Missionary college, lived four weeks on food costing 28 cents a day. At the end of the period physicians pronounced them fatter, fatter and fairer.

Obituary

Mrs. Zolique Montpetit

Mrs. Zolique Montpetit, née Rose Anna Laberge, died suddenly on the morning of August 2nd, at her residence in Howick, at the age of 59 years.

Mrs. Montpetit leaves to mourn her loss five daughters, Mrs. Descent Mrs. Joseph Desrosiers, the Misses Berthe and Lucienne Montpetit, of St. Louis de Gonzague and Miss Juliette Montpetit, of Howick, and four sons, Albert Montpetit, of Howick, Man, Messrs. Rosario, Leo and Jean de la Croix, of Howick, Que.

The funeral was held from her home this morning at 9:30 a.m. in the parish church at Howick, and was largely attended by relatives and friends.

ARTISTIC TREASURES IN CITIES OF SUNNY SPAIN

Exalting one of the many charms of any country above the others is always dangerous, but in the case of Spain few would question the right of its glorious and varied monuments of architecture to a pre-eminent position.

More fortunate in this respect than other Continental countries, its Gothic and Renaissance masterpieces of art are supplemented by the mosques and palaces left as a heritage to the nation by the Moorish occupation of southern Spain.

Romance and magic lie in the very mention of the Spanish place names and treasures of art—the storied Alhambra and the stately Alcazar of Granada, the Mosque of Cordoba, the Pillar of Zaragoza, the massive Cathedral of Burgos, with its lovely towers; Seville's magnificent cathedral, the University of Salamanca, the Roman aqueducts, the Arabesque treasures of Valencia (the city of the Cid), the royal palace of Madrid and the splendor of Toledo's cathedral. All these and many more are gems of art and symbols of a rich history. Their beauty is rivaled only by their surprising variety.—(Exchange.)
