St. Lawrence Seaway Viewed As Common Sense Project

Bank of Nova Scotia Review Prepared in Layman's Language

On June 30, 1952, the Governments of Canada and the United States applied to the International Joint Commission for the approval of works to develop power in the International Rapids section of the St. Lawrence River. In its application the Canadian Government affirmed its intention of carrying out concurrently, and alone, the remaining works necessary to provide deep-draft navigation between Lake Erie and the port of Montreal. Before the double project can be carried out, it remains for the International Joint Commission, a body set up under the Boundary Waters Treaty of 1909 for the purpose of passing upon projects affecting the level or flow of waters common to both countries, to approve the power project, for the United States to appoint an authority to co-operate with the Province of Ontario in carrying it out, and for that authority to obtain a license from the U.S. Federal Power Commission.

The quick and easy transit of these remaining steps is by no means a foregone conclusion. Hearings before both the International Joint Commission and the Federal Power Commission may be protracted. There is the possibility, mentioned by the Prime Minister of Canada in the House of Commons, of the interests in the United States that have opposed the Seaway in the past attempting to challenge the validity of the proceedings in the courts. There is also the more remote possibility of action by the U.S. Congress to prevent existing bodies from exercising the jurisdiction they have under the present laws. Yet in spite of these uncertainties, it now seems that this almost legendary project, after a troubled history spanning several decades, has a good chance of becoming a reality.

The construction of a deep-draft waterway linking the Great Lakes with the Atlantic Ocean has interested the Governments of both the United States and Canada since 1895. Over that period, several commissions and boards of engineers have reported favourably on its economic and engineering feasibility and for more than thirty years the combined navigation and power project has been the subject of negotiation between the two countries. Every U.S. Administration since that of President Woodrow Wilson has favoured immediate construction of the Seaway and since 1928 every Canadian Government has given the plan active support. In 1932 a Treaty was negotiated by the two countries providing for the joint development of the seaway and power project, but after extended hearings in the U.S. Senate it failed to obtain the two-thirds majority necessary for ratification. Further negotiations beginning in 1938 resulted in the drawing-up of the Great Lakes—St. Lawrence Basin Agreement in 1941, but repeated efforts, the latest of them made this year, have failed to obtain favourable consideration by the U.S. Congress.

In 1948 the Governments of the State of New York and the Province of Ontario, plagued by power shortages, tried to get permission to proceed with the power development only, but the U.S. authorities, fearful that separate construction of the power facilities would mean indefinite postponement of the seaway, refused. Canada's decision to proceed alone with the navigation part of the project, and the concession made by the United States in submitting the power proposal to the International Joint Commission, both stem from the reluctant conclusion that there is little hope of obtaining Congressional approval for joint U.S.—Canadian participation in the St. Lawrence Seaway and Power Project. Nevertheless, the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, as it was established by Act of Parliament on December 12, 1951, is empowered to construct and maintain the seaway either as an all-Canadian undertaking or jointly with the United States, and the door will be left open to U.S. participation as long as is feasible.

President Truman, when he again submitted the St. Lawrence project to Congress last January, thus expressed the point of view of his Administration: "The question before the Congress . . . no longer is whether the St. Lawrence Seaway should be built. The question before the Congress now is whether the United States shall participate in its construction, and thus maintain joint operation and control over this development which is so important to our security and our economic progress . . . The project is to be built, whether or not we take part in the construction of the Seaway." It is not, however, the purpose of this Review to examine the merits of U.S. participation. The fact is that the joint project has been turned down. From Canada's point of view there are both advantages and disadvantages to independent action. The cost to the Federal government of carrying out the navigation works single-handed will be very much greater than Canada's share of a joint venture, more particularly since, under the joint scheme, Canada was to have received credit for her substantial outlays on the Welland Ship Canal. On the other hand, the project is planned to be self-liquidating and, as the Minister of Transport has said, "If the costs not borne by power are covered by tolls on shipping, it is of much less consequence who makes the initial expenditures, and Canada can do any necessary financing." Moreover, if the new navigation facilities belong entirely to Canada, the toll revenues will also be entirely hers; such matters as the setting of toll rates will be entirely in her hands; and the complicated business of apportioning toll revenues between the two countries will be avoided.

The Present Review describes briefly the navigation and power aspects of the proposed St. Lawrence project, and attempts to bring them into perspective against the development of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Basin over a period of some two centuries. It mentions some of the reasons for the new urgency which the project has assumed in Canadian eyes during the past few years, discusses the estimated costs and how they are to be met, and finally says a few words about the probable impact of the Seaway, both favourable and unfavourable, on particular industries and areas.

The Seaway in Perspective

The twenty-year stalemate over the Seaway and some of the very large estimates of cost made by its opponents have created in the public mind the impression of a new and untried project of enormous size, difficulty and costliness. In actual fact, the present project is the final link in an almost completed chain. Deep-draft navigation is already an accomplished fact through most of the great waterway that stretches from the Strait of Belle Isle to the heart of the continent at Duluth. The St. Lawrence Ship Channel provides a minimum depth of 32½ feet for 1,000 miles from the mouth of the Gulf of St. Lawrence to Montreal. Above Prescott, through the Thousand Islands and the entire chain of the Great Lakes there is a channel depth of at least 25 feet downbound and 21 feet upbound. And this is capable of being increased to 27 feet mainly by dredging, since the locks in the Welland Canal and the MacArthur Lock at Sault Ste. Marie have a depth of 30 feet. To provide 27-foot navigation through the entire waterway, what remains to be done in addition to the deepening of existing channels is to construct about forty miles of canals with seven locks and eight movable bridges in the 115-mile bottleneck between Prescott and Montreal, where the existing canals have a limiting depth of 14 feet.

Efforts to improve navigation on this greatest of all inland waterways go back to the days of the fur traders. History relates that an 18-inch waterway to by-pass the turbulent rapids of the St. Lawrence at Lachine was undertaken as early as 1700 but never completed; by 1783 four short canals with

TWO INJURED AS TRUCK HITS BRIDGE

Romeo Breton and Jean Montour, both of Huntingdon and a small boy who is unidentified were riding in a truck owned by Rosario Taillefer, Huntingdon, on Monday night at approximately 8.30 as it crashed into the bridge on Paul's sideroad about 4 miles west of Huntingdon. Breton was driving the truck and reported that the truck skidded on small stones as it rounded a curve in the road leading to the bridge. The truck was travelling north west and, the driver losing control, smashed into the bridge spanning the Trout River. The two men, Breton and Montour were taken to the Huntingdon County Hospital, Huntingdon, where they were treated by Dr. Lefebvre. Breton suffered a broken nose, cut lip, and the loss of several teeth. Montour was bruised on the forehead. The little boy was supposedly not injured and was not attended by Dr. Lefebvre.

The amount of damage to the truck was estimated at $600 and there is considerable damage done to the bridge. It was the general opinion that, had the truck been loaded with gravel or had the bridge not been propped for traffic of heavy road machinery, the truck would have gone into the river, causing much more serious damage.

The work is being done by the Henry Morgan Company of Montreal and is expected to take approximately four weeks. The planning has been done by Messrs. Bell and Garroway of the Morgan firm working with the Board of Managers and the congregation, while Mr. Marchant is in charge of the actual operations. Bank National Robbed at Ste. Martine

$5,000 Stolen. Seventh Bank Robbery in August in Montreal And Surroundings

Shortly after 11 a.m., on Thursday two gun-men entered the Ste-Martine branch of the Canadian National Bank.

They forced the manager, Mr. Huard, and four other employees to lie on the floor while they raided the teller's cage. A customer who came in during the robbery was made to lie down.

The bandits made their exit with something like $5,000. Provincial detectives have been put on the job, but at the time of going to press nothing new has been revealed as to this Ste-Martine robbery. This is the second bank hold-up that has transpired in the Chateauguay Valley.

The Ste-Martine bank hold-up was the seventh to take place in Montreal and surroundings during the month of August.

Surely it is now high time for all banks be made to exert themselves toward making an effort to protect the money entrusted to their care. It is all very well to say the bank carries insurance to cover such losses and that the employees are not going to leave themselves open to being fired upon by gunmen. There are surely ways of trapping such gun-men and when the bank start catching the thugs, the robbing of banks will soon cease. When this takes place it will mean a saving to the Province in that it will not then be necessary to have such a large police force to follow up this type of out-law. Eventually the insurance rates for banks to obtain insurance against robbery will become so high that the general public will be called upon to pay even higher bank charges in order to pay the insurance premiums. The public surely has a moral interest in this guarding of their funds as well as the banks. The banks do not appear to be doing too good a job in the way of actually protecting the funds, but rely pretty heavily on the insurance companies that carry the risk.

Traffic Laws Now Enforced

28 Fines Imposed Over Week-end

Huntingdon's Police Chief, J. L'Heureux, and his assistant have been making a traffic regulation clean up and will continue to do so until there is more respect shown by those driving vehicles in the Town of Huntingdon. Over the past week-end 28 traffic fines were imposed upon drivers and it is expected that unless drivers obey traffic laws that even a greater number will be ordered to pay such fines. Included in the 28 were 4 fines given for defective lights, 7 for incorrecting parking of vehicles, 12 for violating stop signs, and 5 drivers were fined for speeding.

Unless the traffic is conducted in a much more orderly manner in this town serious injury and perhaps even loss of life will result. Make this a safer place to live by obeying traffic regulations.

Firefighters Save Village Chateaugay

Three Hour Blaze Subdued Before Fire Spreads to Chateaugay Hotel

Stubborn flames that gutted two second-floor apartments in Chateaugay and ruined merchandise in Lambert's News Shop threatened to engulf the adjoining Hotel Chateaugay before firemen brought the blaze under control early Thursday morning.

The fire was first discovered about 3.45 a.m. near the rear of the apartment occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Heydu. Summoned by Mr. Heydu's call, Chateaugay's Volunteer fire department responded immediately with all of its equipment and set to work quelling the blaze that raged through the two apartments and posed a serious threat to the adjoining hotel and Johnson's Barber Shop.

Malone Callfiremen arrived on the scene about 4.30 a.m. with their pumper and rendered invaluable assistance. The Callmen and the Chateaugay department aid each other in such emergencies under the Mutual Aid setup.

Only magnificent work by the Chateaugay firemen, assisted by the quick-arriving Malone firefighters, checked the blaze. At the onset, with leaping flames lighting the night sky and smoke billowing from the burning apartments, the hotel and barber shop appeared seriously threatened.

Hose had to be laid from three hydrants, the nearest one 200 feet from the fire. The Malone Callmen had over 600 feet of hose strung from a hydrant on River St. It was not needed, however, and served as a protector line for the Main St. side of the hotel.

By 7 o'clock, more than three hours after blaze broke out, Chateaugay-firefighters were still pouring water into crevices between the room and room ceilings where the fire still persisted. They also were cutting holes in the roof of Johnson's Barber Shop to douse smoldering flames that had spread there.

The storeroom at the rear of Lambert's News Shop was gutted. Fire did not damage the interior of the store, but smoke and water damage to the merchandise was heavy. Furniture in the two second floor dwellings was apparently a total loss.

The second floor apartment next is Heydu's is unoccupied at present. So is the business place, formerly the law office of County Judge E. N. Lawrence, which is

New Telephone Directories Been Issued

1,950 Telephones in Huntingdon, 17,870 In Entire Region

The new who's who of the telephone world is out this week.

It's the 1952 directory, fresh off the presses and bound in a green cover which distinguishes it from last year's buff-colored edition.

M. R. Gregoire, Bell Telephone manager for this region, points out that the book contains 7,342 new and changed listings. Owing to this, he urges subscribers to check any personal lists of telephone numbers against the numbers listed in the new book and to make any necessary alterations.

Looking up the desired number before calling helps to avoid the possibility of getting wrong numbers and saves time for both the calling and called parties.

Other suggestions to help subscribers obtain the best possible service from their telephones are included in the directory. In addition, there is a list of typical long distance rates on the inside of the front cover.

Besides Huntingdon, the book also contains listings for subscribers in Valleyfield, Beauharnois, Chateauguay, Ormstown, St. Remi, St. Chrysostome, Ste. Martine, Hemmingford, Howick and Franklin Centre.

An indication of the growth of this region is the fact that it was necessary to print 17,870 copies of the directory this year, compared with 17,283 in 1951. For Huntingdon alone, the number required this year was 1,950 compared with 1,900 a year ago.

The local directory is one of 51 the company is publishing this year to supply subscribers throughout its Ontario-Quebec territory. These books are issued on a year-round basis at the rate of about one a week. This means that production—order taking, compiling, printing, proofreading, binding and delivery goes on continuously.

In all, more than 2,700,000 individual copies are required to supply all of the company's subscribers. These books contain a total of more than 2,000,000,000 pages which are manufactured from about 2,700 tons of paper.

In the year ending March 31, 1951, Ottawa paid out in unemployment insurance $90,000,000; in the same year salaries and wages paid out to administrators of the unemployment insurance funds was $17,000,000,—Quick Canadian Facts.

Havelock Fair to Be Held September 17th

Red and White Day, Horse Drawing Contest To Be Feature Attractions

The 81st Annual Havelock Fair will be held this year on Wednesday, September 17th, and several new items have been added to the programme to make it even more interesting. Entertainment for young and old is to be provided by the Lacolle Curling Club, and a dance is to be held in the evening.

More new cattle stalls are to be built this year as a Red and White Day will be held under the auspices of the Howick-Huntingdon Ayrshire Club in conjunction with the Fair Board. It is expected there will be about 150 head of Ayrshire cattle for this showing and a total of $383.00 will be divided as prize money among the winners. This prize money has been subscribed to in the following way: Fair Board, $208.00; Howick-Huntingdon Ayrshire Club, $125.00; and the Ayrshire Association, $50.00 to make the total of $383.00. Three trophies will also be offered to the winners in the following groups: Champion Male; Champion Female and Winner of Get-of-Sire. The trophies will be held for one year by each of the winners.

The Chateauguay Valley Jersey Club are also holding their Jersey Day and expect about 100 head. Together with Holsteins and beef breeds they expect 400 head of cattle.

The Horse Drawing Contest which proved such an interesting part of last year's programme will again be a feature at this year's Fair. It is expected that this will be even more interesting than last year as this was the first time it had been featured. Teams in the neighborhood will be trained for this event and the whole thing will be better organized on account of the previous experience gained.

There will be a special class for men drivers 70 years of age and over and the prizes are to be ribbons.

There will be the regular features that always make this Fair outstanding to Fair patrons and with the Red and White Day being held, it is expected that a far greater patronage will result. Other breeds will also be represented in the usual way, and the horse classes which are always a feature of Havelock Fair will be well filled.

Hot dinners are to be made possible by the Ladies of Zion United Church, Covey Hill.

You are invited to plan to spend a pleasant day at Havelock Fair. Come early in the morning and have your dinner at the Dining Hall, where a good meal is assured. Visit with your friends while you enjoy the programme that has been arranged for your enjoyment. It is probably the last big outdoor event of the season and right in the heart of the apple country.

Anyone wishing to have a prize list contact Mr. A. B. Hadley, Sec-Treas.

Rotary - A Community Benefactor

THE many thousands of Rotary Clubs throughout the democratic countries of the world endeavour to adhere to its four objectives: which, when put to the test, must be able to answer to the following four queries in the affirmative:

"Is it the truth?

"Is it fair to all concerned?

"Will it build good will and better friendships?

"Will it be beneficial to all concerned?"

Valleyfield Rotary Club has likewise accomplished a tremendous amount of good work for the general welfare of that City.

The Malone Rotary Club promoted the Memorial Park scheme which has proved to be the greatest asset for Malone Youths, as well as adults, that Village has ever had.

Huntingdon Rotary Club has raised many thousands of dollars over the years which in turn has been spent on projects worthy of commendation.

In Huntingdon the Rotarians have done a considerable amount of good for the youths of the Town, but its crowning work of achievement has been that of according aid toward the Huntingdon County Hospital. In the opening years of Rotary, it raised almost $4,000 which was used to buy the Hospital X-Ray machine. Shortly after that it proceeded to raise more funds which were in turn used for supplying the Hospital with other equipment. Such deeds of aid toward the Hospital have been extended continuously. The necessity of having qualified nurses of high standing on the Hospital staff is not always easy to fill. To help overcome this predicament the Rotary Club in 1951 hit upon the idea of extending aid to the girl who would enter a hospital and train to become a Registered Nurse and, in due turn, become a member of Huntingdon County Nursing Staff for a period of at least two years duration. One young woman started to train last year and another young woman is to enter for training this September. The Rotary Club aids the girls right from the start and each month sees to it that they receive financial assistance and pin money.

The Huntingdon Rotary Club also pledged itself to the extent of $3,000 toward the Huntingdon County War Memorial Fund.

To keep on accomplishing such magnificent benevolent work for the general welfare of all, the Club must raise funds in addition to that given by the Rotarians. This week a scheme for the raising of $400. is to be put into action. The idea is that every household uses a broom, consequently every household should be a potential customer to buy one or more brooms. The Rotary Club has received a large quantity of brooms that have been made by blind people; therefore when you buy a broom you are indirectly extending aid to some blind person, aiding the Rotary Club in its community welfare projects, and, at the same time, you will receive a good five cord broom at no additional cost to what you would pay for a broom of its equivalent at a retail store. The brooms will be sold for $2.35 each and the 30 members of the Huntingdon Rotary Club will be selling them without personal remuneration. Will you do your little part through buying some brooms from a Rotarian when canvassed, or better still, give a Rotarian a phone call stating how many brooms you are prepared to purchase.

Your co-operative assistance through buying will be appreciated by the blind; the beneficiaries who will in turn receive the net financial returns; and you will have a good broom at no extra cost.

We All Do Foolish Things

SOMETIMES, when we see a youngster do something that we know is wrong, we do not always correct the actions of the youngster but just let it slip, saying to ourselves youngsters do such things and in time they will correct themselves. In a great many cases such is quite correct and it is neither good for the child or parent to be incessantly correcting a child for some apparent little misdemeanor. We are not writing this item for the sake of correcting children's habits, but the careless habits of grown up boys and girls, better say adult men and women, and when we say women we really mean women.

It is a case of broken beer or whisky bottles that we all see all too often on roadways facing our respective properties. It is quite in order for one to say the Town men will sweep up the broken bottle, but why not exert a little community pride in yourself and see to it that any such broken bottles, sharp objects or even unsightly papers are picked up as soon as seen. A great deal of this refuse that we see on streets is thrown away by adults. In the case of beer bottles or whisky bottles, we quite believe as many are heaved out of passing automobiles by care free hilarious women that may be 18 up to three score years and ten of age as by the male populace.

The Corporation men of Huntingdon endeavour to do a commendable job of keeping our streets clean, but we can all lend a helping hand through making sure things are kept tidy along the streets facing our respective properties. If such is done it is quite possible the tire of your family auto will not be cut, thereby making it possible for you to enjoy an hour of pleasure driving in the evening.

Blind Force and Brainless Will

THE Ford Motor Company has lost a a contract for the production of airplane wings for trainer planes which would have given employment to nearly 1,000 workers.

The Company had worked hard to get this contract; and as soon as it was assured of getting it, it secured a building and proceeded to buy equipment for the job.

At the same time it opened negotiations with the Auto workers union, which is the bargaining agency for its automobile plant.

The union insisted on a seniority plan that would give the auto workers the right, in case of a shut-down in their work, to bump the specially trained workers out of their jobs in the new plant.

But these auto workers have had no training or experience in the making of wings for planes, and would require special training before they could qualify for that work.

As the contract called for regular delivery of wings commencing December 1952, the Company realized that the proposed seniority plan would not be possible.

But the union refused to budge. It would have all its demands or nothing. Negotiations went on for months — but without results.

At last the Canadair Company, for whom the wings were to be built, got alarmed about delivery. It asked the Ford Company for a guarantee that the wings would be delivered on schedule as the contract called for.

Because of the union's attitude the Ford Company was not able to give them any such guarantee.

Canadair then cancelled the contract and decided to build the wings itself in Montreal.

This is not the first time that an industry has refused to locate in Windsor because of the hostile attitude of labor in that city.

The right to hire the workers he wants, to do the work he wants done, is a basic right of every employer. Deprive him of that right and you deprive him of the control of his business.

The fact the unions have been able to wrest this right from so many employers is one more indication of how powerful these unions have become and the extent to which industry and the public have been brought under their control.

The St. Lawrence Deep Water Seaway

A great many newspaper editors are asked time and again what their opinion is on the St. Lawrence Deep Water Seaway? This has always been such a big undertaking, it is literally speaking beyond the grasp of anyone who is not an hydraulic engineer or one we might regard as a wizard in big financial deals. The people in the District of Beauharnois have more than a passing interest in this contemplated project; for we have in our midst the great Beauharnois Power Canal that is to be used as a link of the St. Lawrence Deep Water Seaway. Furthermore surveyors have on several occasions been seen traversing much of our low lands near the shores of Lake St. Francis from Dundee to the Beauharnois Canal.

The Bank of Nova Scotia recently published a Review of the St. Lawrence Seaway, written in a layman's language, that we commend our readers to peruse. The Review will be found on another page of this issue of the Gleaner.

Weekly Review

The Morass Of Modernism

By LEWIS MILLIGAN

"The Modernist Movement is Dead." So says Stephen Spender, the English poet, in the New York Times Book Review. Coming from a writer who was himself in his younger days an admirer of modernism in art, literature and especially in politics, this announcement of the demise of the cult may be taken as authentic. It seems the movement was born in France in the latter part of the Nineteenth Century with the French poet, Rimbaud, who as general of an army of writers, artists and composers, gave the order of the day to them to be "ruthlessly modern." The army obeyed the injunction and proceeded to abandon all conventions and standards in art, literature and music, and produce pictures, poems and agglomerations of sounds that were without form and void.

The movement was revolutionary and its unspoken slogan was, "Back to Chaos!" It set out to shatter everything orderly and beautiful to bits and remould it into—they knew not what. Neither did anyone else. "Poetry" was written without rhyme, rhythm or reason, and the worst example of modernist prose was that of Gertrude Stein, whose writings were like "tales told by an idiot; full of sound and fury, signifying nothing." Paintings were just paint and nothing more, like the daubs and dabbings of pigments on an artist's palette. Where there was an attempt at depicting living form, the product was freakish, and still-life pictures seemed to be astigmatized studies of the contents of garbage cans. As for modern music, it is neither modern nor musical, but is a reversion to the tom-tom or the wild war-whoop of savages; and some of it sounds like the discordant janglings of a worn-out barrel-organ.

The modernist movement in the arts quite logically extended to morals and politics. Social conventions and moral standards were discarded as old-fashioned and effete, and it was a natural movement from free verse to free love, and from chaotic painting and discordant music to mental and spiritual derangement. Literature and art can no more cut itself off from the past than a tree can be cut off from its roots and continue to live and grow. All life is organic. New organisms are born out of the old and must conform to the laws of nature which produced them and renders them productive. The modernist movement never produced anything but freaks of nature which were fortunately sterile and could not perpetuate their monstrous species.

Now we are told that the modernist movement is dead. It never really was alive so far as the public in general were concerned. It was a cult confined to neurotic cliques and young and old exhibitionists who, lacking in creative ability, thought they could substitute eccentricity for originality. The people who patronized the modernists and pretended to like their products did so to appear up-to-date and high-brow. The best that can be said of the modernists' paintings is that they provided amusement for normal people, but their "music" with its babel of noises was auricular torture, and their "poetry" the babblings of delirium.

Mr. Spender does not say these things about the modernists, for he was intimately associated with them. He says that modernism had two impulses. One was to "develop within the arts a sensibility to contemporary phenomena like machinery, the industrial city, and neurotic behavior. Eliot is being a modernist when he observes in an early essay that the noise of the petroleum engine has modified the aural sensibility of contemporary poets." The other aim of modernism, says Mr. Spender, "was a hostile attitude to society and all its institutions . . The early Russian revolutionary films have a natural affinity to modernism . . . Being 'absolutely modern' means accepting or anticipating the complete decay of all traditional values."

But the modernists could not destroy the traditional values of civilized society or the deeply-based standards of art and literature. Many hair-brained young students who hated to be "old-fashioned" were lured into the morass of modernism, but the old-fashioned Bible and the works of the old masters of literature and art still remain the firm foundation for the cultural development of mankind.

Valleyfield Golfer Finds Nest of Balls

VALLEYFIELD — The Sadie Hawkins golf tournament took place at the Valleyfield Golf Club on Saturday, August 9th. The game was played in the afternoon with a party in the evening at the clubhouse to wind up the affair and there was a very good attendance. The low gross was won by Mrs. Ray Plante and Mr. Tony L'Heureux. The low net was won by Mrs. Geo. Grant and Mr. W. Davidson.

When Mr. Davidson went to look for a lost ball in the woods nearby, he came across a nest of 32 golf balls, which was quite a find. There is a possibility that Mr. Squirrel was figuring on having his larder well filled for the winter.

Visitors from Sumatra

Mrs. James Roman and son Taylor, of Sumatra, have arrived in Valleyfield and are the guests of Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Roman. It must have been an interesting but tiring trip. They motored to Palembang, Sumatra, taking a plane there for Malay and then on to Singapore, where they stayed four days. They then flew across the Pacific to Manilla, Honolulu, San Francisco, Seattle and Vancouver, where they stayed five days. Boarding a plane in Vancouver, they flew to Buffalo, taking a bus from there to Toronto and finally, a plane to Montreal.

Twenty-month-old Taylor must feel in strange surroundings as he only understands the Malayan language.

Mrs. Clifford Foley and little daughter have returned from Toronto, where they have been visiting for a month.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Aird and family are spending a vacation at Portneuf, Que.

The Week At Ottawa...

Specially Written for The Gleaner

By ALAN DONNELLY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Aug. 27, (CP) — The biggest news out of Ottawa last week concerned agriculture—and it was both good and bad.

Good news was the long-awaited announcement that Canada is free from the foot-and-mouth disease that has cost the livestock industry untold thousands of dollars since it broke out last winter in South Saskatchewan.

Not so pleasant was the news that huge stores of grain from last year's crop are still on hand, crowding elevator and transport facilities on the eve of a wheat harvest forecast as the greatest the country has ever had.

The all-clear signal to the livestock industry meant the lifting of the last of the restrictions on the free movement of meat and livestock in Canada. Quarantines in 59 Saskatchewan municipalities clamped on after the foot-and-mouth disease outbreak was announced last February, were lifted and farmers now can begin restocking.

But it did not mean the end of the six-month United States embargo on Canadian animals and meat which has cut off a $130,000,000-a-year export market. The U.S. embargo is responsible for the largest part of the economic loss from the disease outbreak, which officials estimate may total between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000.

The Canadian government informed U.S. authorities that Canada is free of the disease, but Ottawa informants said they don't expect immediate action.

U.S. Caution

A news story from Washington quoted the acting chief of the U.S. Bureau of Animal Husbandry that no immediate action will be forthcoming. "We want to make sure that all danger of infecting our livestock industry is over," an official in Washington said.

Ottawa officials seemed to think the American fear was that the foot-and-mouth virus may still be lurking in some Canadian food locker. Another view was that the U.S. embargo won't come off until after the U.S. presidential election in November.

Meanwhile, federal price support for the beef industry will continue as long as the U.S. market is closed, the government promises. The basic 25-cent-a-pound on beef will be maintained until Sept. 30 and if it is to be changed after that, the government will make an announcement before that date.

There had been no sign of the disease in Canada since May 4. Veterinarians even checked packing plants at some Ontario and Quebec points before announcing the end of the disease, mainly to assure the U.S., and a top official said that if the disease should break out again it won't be from last winter's virus but from a reintroduction of the disease into the country.

A Premium on Storage

As the first of the combines warmed up on the prairies, farmers intensified their hunt for a place to store grain.

Their situation can best be explained by figures announced in Ottawa—an estimated record crop of 656,000,000 bushels of wheat on top of a carryover of 213,000,000 bushels from last year's harvest.

Large carryovers and large predicted harvests in other grain crops added to the problems of storage and handling.

Facilities at Fort Willian last week were still trying to cope with a rust of last year's grain. During the U.S. steel strike ore boats were diverted to help handle the rush but with the strike's end they went back to carrying ore and elevator stores began to grow higher.

Some western farmers were reported building expanded storage facilities on their farms to hold grain in case elevators can't take it. There were indications that extra temporary shelter may have to be built at inland elevator and lake points.

Transport officials said that if the new grain is harvested in good condition—and with co-operation from all concerned—the crops will be moved and stored without serious loss.

But it appeared likely that organized farmers may repeat requests made last year—without success then—for federal government payments to farmers for farm grain storage.

The government may revive the plan it adopted last year—to guarantee 25 percent of bank loans to farmers with stored grain as security.

Western Tour

Prime Minister St. Laurent, rested from a summer-long holiday, this week heads into his biggest meet-the-people tour since his 1949 election campaign.

Originally intended as a trip to Vancouver to attend the annual convention of the Canadian Bar Association, of which Mr. St. Laurent is a past president and honorary life member, the tour has greatly expanded.

The 70-year-old prime minister will be gone 16 days and will make extensive visits in British Columbit with various stops in Ontario and Manitoba.

In the western province he will visit Cranbrook, Kimberley, Trail, Penticton, Kelowna, Vernon, Victoria and various other spots on Vancouver Island, Powell River, Prince Rupert, Smithers and Prince George.

Romans Visit From Sumatra

Young Taylor Roman Speaks Only Malay Language

Mrs. James Roman and son, Taylor of Sumatra are at present spending some time in Valleyfield, visiting friends and relatives. They are the guests of Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Roman. Taylor understands only the Malay language. V

Sumatra is a large island of the Malay Archipelago, lying west of Borneo and northwest of Java. Mrs. Roman was able to give us an outline of life in Sumatra. She says: The houses are mostly wood; there are a few stone and a great many pre-fabricated ones. They cost from $12,000 to $40,000 according to what they have had to pay for material to build them, all of which has to be imported. The windows are all screened in, very few having glass window panes.

Lemari is the term used for a cupboard and they are like our wardrobes and have electric or heating elements in them. All leather goods kept there such as shoes, leather belts, etc., become covered with mildew and so have to be attended to regularly. They have wood or tile floors and the roofs are aluminum.

The temperature is around 87 degrees with 90 percent humidity and when it rains even more than that. They have a very dry season with occasional rain and experience a real Sumatra (that is what they call their thunderstorms) and with it will come a terrific wind. These come up very quickly. As there are only split bamboo blinds on the windows their rooms are sometimes completed soaked after a deluge of this kind. Mostly everything is made of teak wood which very easily becomes infested with insects if not sprayed regularly. This is done once a month by a crew of men and the house is given a thorough spraying inside and out. They go up and down the roads once a week with D.D.T. which forms a fog or smoke. All the ditches, pools and streams are cleared and oiled continually to keep down Malaria which they are free from in Sumatra.

They are able to grow cosmos and marigolds and they have gardinia hedges. Baby orchids grow wild and of course hibiscus bougainvillea in all shades grow in profusion.

As the soil is solid clay they are not able to grow vegetables so green beans, carrots, cabbage, etc., have to be imported from Java or farther south. As the grass grows long and gets very dry it is burned therefore there is nothing for cattle to graze on, consequently meat is all imported from Bali or Australia and is very expensive — Rabbit from Australia is used a great deal.

The Sunday repast is rigstaffel (rice table) which is what the British call a twenty boy curry. They eat it buffet style and it consists of rice, sea food, meat, vegetables, etc. After having partaken of this heavy meal one retires feeling pretty well satisfied as far as food is concerned. The explanation of a twenty boy curry is a boy to serve each dish.

The fruits they nave are bananas, excellent pineapples, papaya, mango stine limes and avocades and are fairly reasonable.

All milk is powdered, butter in cans , ice cream powdered in cans. Flour becomes very moldy so has to be sunned every 2nd or 3rd day in order to keep it free of weevils—Even crackers in tins have to be watched.

There are 90% rubber trees but plenty of cocoanut palms and betel nut palms.

They are not allowed to import dogs or pets of any kind because they have never had rabies there. Cotton which is the material for wearing apparel there is all hand woven. The native costume is a sarong and badjie and it is customary to go bare footed.

Boys wear white uniforms with head cloths. A house boy waits on the table and does the house work; a laundress makes beds, does laundry and cleans bath rooms; nurse maid looks after children and has full charge of them. They have an excellent hospital with Dutch doctors and trained nurses. Natives who have passed grade 2 or 3 can train for a nurse.

For amusement they have a nine hole golf course, three swimming pools; one for babies, one for small children and the third for grown ups. These are flood lighted at night as are the tennis courts.

They have a social hall where movies, dances, bridge parties, receptions for visitors are held.

There are plenty of wild animals and occasionally some one is killed by a tiger — The elephants come through once or twice a year, but it is against the law to shoot them. Cobras and pythons some 28 ft. long are there. Mrs. Roman saw one 14 ft. long.

As you can see by Mrs. Roman's discription, it is a most interesting but also dangerous place to live.

Mayor Cappiello Voices Plug for Fair

The Huntingdon Fair opens tonight and continues until Friday evening. At the Rotary Club meeting on Monday, Mayor Leo Cappiello impressed upon the members the fact that the Fair Directorate has put forth considerable effort toward providing a real good programme of prefessional and amateur entertainment. The Agricultural Exhibit will be very commendable, whilst the many implement dealers intend to have industrial exhibits, all of which command a great deal of interest amongst farmers. The fact that Friday afternoon has been declared a civic holiday should mean a vastly increased attendance. A crowd attracts a crowd; so make an effort to be numbered amongst the many attending the Fair from this evening until Friday night.

Buildings, stalls and fences have all been given a coat of white-wash which makes them bright in appearance. The stalls were all cleaned last fall and have been disinfected in readiness for the livestock. Some of the amusements stands have already been erected, including the Merry-go-Round. Cattle were arriving on Tuesday afternoon. The grounds in general have been made very presentable.

A quantity of calcium chlorate is being spread about so as to eliminate an excessive amount of dust. Secretary-Manager, Lyell Graham reports all available space in the Industrial Building will be taken up before the Fair opens.

"Toddy Girl" is Gone

"Toddy Girl" is a name that has become almost as well known as one-time owner, our good old friend, Jack Ross. "Toddy Girl", now owned by Dave McCoy has hung up a very commendable racing record and was driven on many courses by her present owner. "Toddy Girl" to Jack Ross, was almost the most important thing on earth. She was well cared for at all times and if she were ever hungry we are quite sure Jack Ross would much prefer going without a meal, if such were necessary, in order to see to it that his beloved animal had everything and anything she required. When Mr. Ross sold her, he knew she would still receive the best of care from Mr. McCoy.

"Toddy Girl", entered in a $1000 stake, met with misfortune at the Richelieu Track over the week-end, broke her leg and had to be shot. The loss to David McCoy is considerable, and likewise to Mr. Ross. We will all miss seeing "Toddy Girl" being exercised as well as participating in races on the various courses.

a depth of 2½ feet intended for bateaux had been built at the Cascades; and the North West Company about 1797 constructed a primitive canal at Sault Ste. Marie "upwards of three thousand feet in length, with a lock which raises the water nine feet." By 1850, with the building of the old Welland Canal to carry navigation around Niagara Falls and the construction of a uniform series of canals from Montreal to Kingston, 9-foot navigation for steamers and sailing boats had been achieved as far as Saulte Ste. Marie. The following half century saw the construction of locks at the Sault, the further deepening of the Welland Canal, and the enlargement of the St. Lawrence canals to their present depth, so that early in this century there was 14-foot navigation from tidewater to the Head of the Lakes. By that time the dream of opening the lakes to large ocean ships had been born; and the latest half century in the history of the waterway has seen much progress towards its realization. The completion by Canada in 1932 of the Welland Ship Canal, one of the world's major engineering achievements, was an important step. Another was the construction of the MacArthur lock at Sault Ste. Marie by the United States during World War II. The St. Lawrence project as now proposed will clear away the final barrier.

Though it is true that a 27-foot waterway will still not accommodate the largest ocean-going vessels, ocean ships will no doubt enter the lakes in considerable numbers, especially tramp steamers at seasons of the year when lake shipping is over-burdened. But the greater part of the freight through the Seaway is likely to be carried in the efficient bulk freighters of the Great Lakes—the capacious box-shaped "upper lakers"—with trans-shipment of ocean cargoes at lower St. Lawrence ports. The Seaway as now planned will be able to accommodate enough vessels of this type to carry a very large volume of traffic, even though the navigation season is limited to between seven and eight months each year. And if at some future time further expansion in capacity should be required it would be practicable to duplicate the single locks in the Welland and St. Lawrence canals.

Viewed in perspective, the Seaway emerges as a further logical step in a long process. It is a practical engineering project. Nor, when costs are considered, does it appear to be outside the realm of practicality. The latest published estimate of the cost, at December 1950 prices, of a joint U.S.-Canadian power and navigation project is $704 millions. Allowing for the extra $34 millions involved in constructing an all-Canadian waterway in the International Rapids section, but subtracting approximately $90 millions for dredging the Upper Lakes Channels (an undertaking which the United States will presumably carry out in any case) the cost of the project is put at somewhat less than $650 millions. But of this cost some $400 millions, * according to these estimates, is chargeable to power and will be borne by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario and the corresponding U.S. authority in equal amounts. It has always been expected that the power development would be a paying proposition even if, as proposed by the Province of Ontario and the State of New York in 1948, it were built without the navigation part of the project and bore the full cost of the works required for a separate power project. To speed up the commencement of the project, the Canadian Government has agreed to lighten the burden chargeable to power in some measure, including a contribution of $15 millions towards costs which the power interests were prepared to pay. But allowing for this sum, for the increase in prices since 1950 and for interest charges during the period of construction, the cost of the navigation project to the Canadian Government is not expected to exceed $300 millions. This is a substantial but certainly not a staggering sum. Even if the estimates of cost should prove over-optimistic, as estimates on very large projects all too often do, proponents of the Seaway point out that the cost in real terms would be no greater than the $132 millions spent on the Welland Ship Canal twenty years ago and that the burden, in view of Canada's larger population and greatly increased national production, would be relatively lighter. And it must be remembered that no tolls have ever been charged on the Welland Canal, whereas the costs of construction and maintenance of the new canals are expected to be covered by charges against the traffic using them.

This includes, as well as the cost of dams and powerhouses, expropriation of land, rehabilitation of flooded communities, and necessary relocation of highways and railways.

Growing Pressures for the St. Lawrence Project

Behind the increasing Canadian pressure for the St. Lawrence power and navigation project lie two important economic facts — the acute postwar shortage of power in Ontario and the opening-up of the Quebec-Labrador iron-ore deposits. The St. Lawrence project was once regarded chiefly in terms of cheaper freight rates for outbound Prairie wheat. But important as this consideration still is, the project's potentialities as a source of power for the growing industrial needs of central Canada and as a means of getting the new supply of high-grade ore cheaply to interior steel furnaces now tend to overshadow it. Indeed, the downbound movement of grain once visualized as the main item of traffic through the Seaway is now expected to be exceeded by the big upbound movement of iron ore originating at Seven Islands, Quebec.

The Great Lakes-St. Lawrence System, with its drop of over 600 feet, is one of the major power sources of the continent. It is capable of developing economically perhaps 9 million horse-power, two-thirds of it Canadian, one-third American. The harnessing of Niagara's potential 3½ million h.p. is now well advanced, but in the St. Lawrence River only a fraction of the available 5½ million h.p. has so far been put to use. At Beauharnois in the Soulanges section of the River the basic installations for an eventual development of more than 2 million h.p. were constructed twenty years ago and work is now proceeding which will bring actual generating capacity above 1½ million h.p. The Seaway as now proposed would permit the development of 1.2 million h.p. at Lachine, but the Quebec Government, with other sources of power available including the remaining part of Beauharnois, has not yet indicated whether it will co-operate in joint power and navigation project or let the Federal Government carry through the navigation project alone and postpone the power development until it is needed. No such uncertainty attaches to construction of the proposed 2.2 million h.p. of capacity at Barnhart Island, half on the New York side of the River, half on the Ontario side, for which both New York State and the Province of Ontario have been pressing for several years.

The demand for power in Ontario has been increasing by leaps and bounds. In the winters of 1947-48 and 1948-49 restrictions on power use had to be imposed and, despite an active hydro-electric expansion program that has increased the province's generating capacity by over 50% since the end of the war, resort to higher- cost steam power has been necessary. Even with the completion of the giant generating station now under construction at Niagara, the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission expects by 1957 to fall short of the 10% reserve of power considered necessary in a large power system. Small wonder that the Commission is one of the most ardent proponents of the Seaway, for the International Rapids is the last great undeveloped water-power site in the southern part of the province and in addition to its substantial size has the great advantage of unusual dependability of flow.

An even newer consideration is that the Seaway will greatly enlarge the market for the vast reserves of iron ore now known to exist in Quebec-Labrador. Reserves in the Lake Superior region of the United States, which for years has been supplying four-fifths of U.S. iron-ore needs, were heavily drawn upon during World War II. Remaining reserves, though extensive, are becoming less easy to mine and more costly. The participation of six U.S. steel and ore companies in the Quebec-Labrador undertaking, the development of Venezuelan and Liberian deposits by U.S interests, the expansion of iron-mining and the widening search for new deposits in Ontario, the substantial sums that have been spent to find a commercial process for making the low-grade taconites of the Superior region suitable for use in steel furnaces, all testify to the increasing seriousness of the iron-ore situation. The National Security Resources Board of the United States estimated in 1950 that in ten years a minimum annual import of 25 million tons of iron ore would be required to operate the U.S. steel industry at capacity, and that in twenty years the figure would rise to 48 million tons or more.

When the 360-mile railway from the Quebec-Labrador deposits to Seven Islands, is completed in 1954, Canadian ore, moved down the coast by ocean freighter to such U.S. ports as Baltimore for use by Atlantic Coast steel mills or rail shipment inland, will be in a position to compete with other foreign ores, and two large freighters for this movement are now being built for the interests controlling the iron-ore deposits. There are limitations to this market, however, both because of competition from Venezuelan ore and because of the length of the rail-haul inland. On the other hand, to reach the great ore-consuming areas around the Great Lakes under present transportation conditions would involve trans-shipment from ore-carriers at Montreal, and either a long rail-haul inland or by-passing the rapids of the St. Lawrence by rail or canaller and another trans-shipment to large lake freighters for the rest of the journey to Great Lakes ports. The recently issued Report of the Materials Policy Commission to the President of the United States on the U.S. outlook for domestic supplies and imports of vital raw materials states, "Construction of the proposed St. Lawrence Seaway is necessary if ore is to move in quantity from Labrador to mills in the Midwest. The seaway, with its 27-foot channel, would make it possible to transport ore in large carriers directly from Seven Islands to lower lake ports. It would reduce the cost of the all-water route by more than 25%, permit a four-fold expansion of these shipments, and exercise pressure on rail rates from Montreal and Baltimore to Pittsburgh and points west."

While there is some difference of opinion about the value of the Seaway from a defence point of view, its advocates stress the advantages of increased supplies of power, easy access to ample and readily expanded supplies of high-grade iron ore, an alternative transportation route to relieve pressure on the railroads, and the fact that it would permit large ships to be built in the comparative safety of inland waters. On the other side it has been pointed out that the new power and navigation works would be vulnerable to air attack.

The Economics of the Seaway

In the past, the savings in transportation costs anticipated from the Seaway were seen largely in terms of getting grain to seaboard at the lowest posible cost. The savings that would result from an uninterrupted movement of grain in large bulk carriers from the Head of the Lakes to lower St. Lawrence ports have been estimated by the U.S. Department of Commerce at from 5c to 7c a bushel—even allowing for a considerable upbound movement of ships in ballast. The heavy upbound movement of iron ore now envisaged, which might in time reach as much as 20 million tons a year, suggests a possible more efficient use of shipping. Returning ore-carriers would likely be able to offer favourable rates on downbound cargoes of coal from lower lake ports, and they might well find it feasible also to proceed to the Lakehead, cleaning ship en route, and carry grain on the down trip.

These three major bulk cargoes have been mentioned in particular, since they would likely make up the major part of the traffic moving through the Seaway. Current estimates suggest a yearly volume of traffic for the new waterway, available soon after its completion, of 40 million tons or more, consisting in round figures of up to 20 million tons of iron ore, up to 10 million tons of grain and grain products, perhaps 4 million tons of coal, 1½ million tons of paper, pulpwood and wood-pulp, and possibly 8 milion tons of miscellaneous cargo. Substantial transportation savings would result from the avoidance of costly trans-shipment and from continuous carriage through the Seaway in the large bulk carriers which provide one of the cheapest methods of transportation in the world. The saving on the volume of traffic mentioned above has been officially estimated at $45 millions to $50 millions a year. The net saving depends, of course, on the level of tolls. It is provided in the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority Act that these shall be sufficient to cover the cost of maintaining and operating the Seaway, of paying interest at current rates on the funds borrowed, and of amortizing the investment over a period of fifty years, which has been estimated at a total of around $20 millions a year.

Since there is thus a considerable margin between estimated transportation savings and estimated annual charges, it would appear to be practicable to make the navigation works self-liquidating. But of course the complicated problem of setting toll schedules has still to be worked out. The St. Lawrence Seaway Authority Act stipulates that the tolls shall be "fair and reasonable". The general principles advanced by the United States, which it is reasonable to suppose will still apply, were that tolls should be such as to encourage the use of the Seaway, that they should favour agricultural and industrial raw materials, and that in no case should they exceed $1.25 a ton. All of this suggests low rates for bulk commodities like ore, grain and coal, and higher rates for manufactured goods. It seems fairly obvious that the volume of traffic attracted to the Seaway will depend to a considerable degree on whether the size of the transportation saving after payment of tolls is sufficient to induce shippers to break customary shipping connections. And of course competitive rate reductions by established carriers are to be expected.

The Impact of the Seaway

Certain interests—notably some of the east coast ports, the railroads, the lake carriers and the coal industry—have traditionally opposed the Seaway because of the injury they feared from it. It is worth noting, however, that some of this opposition has tended to die down in recent years. The port of Montreal is now less concerned over possible loss of traffic; and in some quarters, indeed, it is believed that the Seaway will mean a greater volume of business for the port. Nor are some of the lake carriers as strongly opposed as they once were; the large freighters are very efficient carriers and a considerably bigger fleet will likely be required to take care of the expected volume of traffic.

It would, of course, be idle to deny that some injury may result to particular groups. Any major new development inevitably causes temporary dislocations and renders certain facilities obsolete. The Cape Breton coal industry will be faced with increased competition from U.S. coal in its present Quebec market. Similarly, the inland shipyards will be subject to competition from coastal yards and perhaps also from overseas yards, though they may get an increased volume of maintenance and repair work. Again, it is clear that the canallers will be up against most unequal competition once large freighters can pass freely up and down the St. Lawrence. "Generally speaking, however, fears of injury from the Seaway have probably been exaggerated. The U.S. coal industry, which opposed the Tennessee Valley Authority as it now opposes St. Lawrence power, found that, far from being decreased, consumption of coal was enlarged in the area served by TVA because of the industrial stimulus provided by cheap water-power. As for the railroads, it is perhaps not inappropriate to recall that the fears of the U.S. railroads that they would be ruined by diversion of traffic through the Panama Canal proved groundless. In the case of the Seaway, the Canadian railroads will undoubtedly lose a considerable amount of bulk traffic, but the general stimulus to industrialization resulting from the power and navigation project may be before long bring a compensating increase in other types of freight. The President of the Canadian National Railways was taking this broader view when he said, speaking of the Seaway, "Whatever tends to open Canada up and help it grow is good for this railroad."

The maximum carrying capacity of the dry-cargo canallers, built for the 14-foot canals, is 3,000 tons, whereas that of the largest "upper lakers" exceeds 20,000 tons.

BUICK CUSTOM 4-DOOR TOURBACK SEDAN

It makes each drop of gas say uncle

ACCORDING to combustion experts, there's as much energy locked in a drop of gasoline as there is in a drop of nitroglycerine.

But the problem is to put that energy to work.

So Buick engineers aren't content just to mix that drop with air and touch it off. They've designed an engine that brings it catapulting into a cylinder head where it strikes a turbo-top piston—gets whipped into a churning, swirling ball of tight-packed energy.

Then it's fired. And when that happens, a drop of gasoline certainly lets loose power.

This isn't something that happens in a "car of the future."

It happens in a Buick Fireball 8 Engine today. It's a high compression engine. It's a valve-in-head engine. But it's also a Fireball in performance as well as name.

And it puts extra power under the hood—and extra miles in the fuel back in the gas tank.

The Fireball Engine powers an automobile as sweet-handling, eager and willing as anything that ever made your pulse leap to a faster beat.

It's a car that seems to know what you want it to do—true and sure in its course on a straightaway—beautifully balanced on curves.

It's a car with Dynaflow Drive* to feed power with infinite smoothness and a road-hugging levelness of ride.

And it is, with all this, very reasonably priced. Why not come in soon, and see and drive a Buick ROADMASTER, SUPER or CUSTOM for yourself?

*Equipment, accessories, trim and models are subject to change without notice. Wheel crests standard on Roadmaster, optional at extra cost on other Series. * Standard on Roadmaster, optional at extra cost on other Series.*

Newspaper Anniversary Celebrated

Canadian Statesman, Bowmanville, Marks 75 Years of James Family Publishing

One of the finest weekly newspapers in Canada is the Canadian Statesman, Bowmanville, Ont. This fine weekly newspaper has been published for the past 75 years, of its 98 years of publication, by the James Family. The present editor is George James. George has a real flare for the writing of political editorials. At one time his editorials were of Liberal tinge, once a supporter of Agnes McPhail, but in more recent years have had staunch Conservative leanings. Editor James pulls his punches as he sees things. The Canadian Statesman, though its editorial column is quite Conservative in its view point, the newspaper is quite open minded as far as its new columns are concerned. Nephew John James, M.P., is a partner in the Canadian Statesman with Uncle George James the editor. During the Federal Election of 1948 Editor George James wrote virile editorials in support of the Conservative candidate, his feeling being that the Conservative Party was the better party to administer the affairs of Canada. Nephew John James, M. P., was elected the member for his native county, and was obliged to use the back pages of the Canadian Statesman for his political advertising and publicity. The fact that Nephew John won the election indicates that no matter what page of the Canadian Statesman news or advertising appears, it will be read.

The James Family are true newspaper men, they have demonstrated that over the past 75 years and it is quite reasonable to believe will so continue in that path of progress for years to come.

The Gleaner, like many other newspapers across Canada offers its congratulations to Editor George James, nephew John James, M.P., for their united efforts in carrying on the Canadian Statesmen upon the high principles set down by the late M. A. James. The Statesman is a weekly newspaper that has won many laurels for its excellence.

During the past week the Statesman had the members of the Council write the editorials so that these local people in public office might be able to personally express the objectives in their respective offices. The municipal officials carried out the task; but they must admit they did not quite measure up to the high standards set by their local scribe George James.

Ste. Agnes

WEDDING
McGIBBON-RIELLY

St. James United Church, Avonmore, Ontario, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, August 16th, when Frances Mae Rielly, daughter of Mrs. J. M. Rielly and the late Dr. Rielly of Avonmore, became the bride of Mr. John Gordon McGibbon, son of Mrs. Gregor Leslie of Ste. Agnes de Dundee and of the late Mr. W. A. McGibbon. The church was beautifully decorated with multicolored phlox and gladioli, adding to the joyousness of the occasion. The marriage was solemnized by the Rev. C. R. Rudd, minister of Knox United Church, Cornwall, Ont.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Marshall W. Rielly of Cornwall, Ont., was charmingly gowned in a floor length gown of white tulle over taffeta, with a long sleeved lace jacket fashioned with a deep yoke and peterpan collar. She wore a Juliet cap trimmed with stephanotis and her veil was of finger-tip length. The bride's bouquet was composed of pink roses and white mums.

The bride was attended by Miss Vivien Graham of Alexandria, Ont., and by her sister, Miss Ella Rielly. Miss Graham's floor length strapless gown was of blue tulle over taffeta with a lace jacket and mitts. She wore a matching headdress of blue tulle, with shoulder length veil, carried a bouquet of pink gladioli and stephanotis. Miss Rielly's gown was fashioned along the same lines as that of Miss Graham and she carried a bouquet of tangerine flowers.

The bride's gown and those of her attendants were designed and made by Miss Vivien Graham of Alexandria, Ont.

Mr. Stewart Ferguson of Dundee, Que., acted as best man for his cousin, while Mr. Charles Rielly of Avonmore, brother of the bride, and Mr. Robert McCullagh of Falconbridge, Ont., were ushers.

Preceding the wedding ceremony, Miss Queenie McRae, soloist, sang most expressively, "The Lord's Prayer," and during the signing of the register she sang, "Where'er You Walk." Miss Marjorie Wert of Avonmore was at the organ.

Mrs. Rielly, mother of the bride, wore navy triple sheer, with navy hat and white accessories, and a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother, Mrs. Leslie, chose a blue-grey dress with black accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses.

The wedding reception was held in the St. James' United Church hall which was prettily decorated with summer flowers. Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. McGibbon left on a wedding trip through the New England States. The bride chose for travelling, a blue and white checked strapless dress with blue marquisette redingote, a white and navy hat with matching shoes and bag.

Prior to her marriage, Mrs. McGibbon worked as an accountant in the Dominion Bank, Cornwall, Ont. Mr. McGibbon is a graduate of the School for Teachers, Macdonald College, Que., and he also served with the Royal Canadian Air Force during the last war.

On their return, the young couple will take up residence in Mansonville, Que., where Mr. McGibbon is principal of the Mansonville High School.

Those attending the wedding from Dundee were: Mr. and Mrs. Gregor Leslie, Mr. Stewart Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Currie, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McPherson, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Elder, Mr. Wm. C. McGibbon, Mrs. Wm. Smellie, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. J. Duncan McPherson were present from Valleyfield and Miss Margaret Leslie fom St. Anicet. Guests also attended from Toronto, Ottawa, Cornwall, Martintown, Winchester, Falconbridge, Woodlands and Alexandria.

The Gleaner has published this weekly photo quiz for the past number of weeks with the idea of increasing your knowledge of the district in which you live. This will be the last week of the quiz and it is the sincere hope of the Gleaner that we have succeeded in our attempt to better the education of our readers. The photos in last week's quiz would be very simple for some of our readers to identify correctly. The top photo was a view of the Roman Catholic Church at St. Timothee, Que. The lower photo showed one of the older and more prominent residences in Huntingdon. This was formerly the Dr. Cameron residence but is now the home of Dr. F. G. and Mrs. McCrimmon and the Doctor's mother, Mrs. Norman McCrimmon. It has been a landmark on the corner of Prince and Bouchette Streets opposite the Post Office. For many years its spacious and well kept grounds have been the setting for many garden parties and other events, as well as a property of distinction worthy of emulating.

Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Elder were Mr. and Mrs. George P. Elder of Huntingdon and Miss Christena Lawrence of Westmount, Que. Mrs. Duncan McPherson of Valleyfield was a Saturday guest at the same home.

Misses Elizabeth McNicol and Dawn Elder visited Malone Fair on Thursday afternoon.

Starts Forest In Back Garden

TORONTO, (CP)—A city policeman has started a forest of 12,000 trees in his backyard.

Sgt. A. R. Glover has raised his conifers from seeds to seedlings in a yard 100 feet by 45 feet and still found room for flowers and vegetable garden. He decided to start his own reforestation four years ago with seed imported from the United States.

There are Austrian, Scotch and Mugo Pine; Douglas, Japanese and Colorado Silver Fir; Norway and Colorado Blue Spruce, and Japanese larch.

Sgt. Glover did not start his private nursery as a commercial venture. But now the trees present a problem: what to do with them next?

They are rapidly outgrowing the space available. He can't take time to sell them, nor can he buy a farm and give the trees all his attention.

He hopes that, somewhere, they can be used to make a fine stand of timber.

TOOTH BRUSHING TECHNIQUE

Toothbrushing seems a simple matter but unless it is done properly, it may actually be harmful. Brushing across does not remove the food particles lodged between the teeth and may injure the gums. The other method of brushing strenuously up and down is also incorrect, since it tends to drive those same food particles up between tooth and gum. The best way of handling the toothbrush is to start the stroke at the gum line and brush outward to the biting edge of the tooth, thus sweeping out the acid-forming food deposits. Teeth should always be cleaned immediately after eating.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

High blood pressure is not exclusively an ailment of middle age—it may affect younger people. It is often caused by kidney diseases, overeating, glandular or emotional disturbances or high tension living. This high pressure throws an added burden on the heart. A special diet and plan for reduced tension as prescribed by the doctor may relieve and perhaps cure the condition. Regular medical checkups help the doctor to keep track of his patient's condition. In that way treatment can be undertaken at the earliest stages of high blood pressure.

JUDGE AT TRURO

Allister McArthur, junior partner of the firm of P. D. McArthur & Son, Cherry Bank Farms, Howick, will judge the Ayrshire classes at the Central Nova Scotia Live Stock Show at Truro, N.S., on August. 28th.

CENTRAL CANADA EXHIBITION

Allister McArthur also made a nice job of another heavy judging chore at Central Canada Exhibition, Ottawa, on Wednesday, August 20. That is of the Ayrshire classes there. In the individual Ayrshire classes there were 135 entries, probably one of the largest Ayrshire shows held at Ottawa in many years. The individual and group classes being completed all in the one day.

A considerable number of people from the Howick-Huntingdon Ayrshire Club Area were in attendance that day.

The first prize bull calf, Roseayre Briar's Burton, was also junior champion male for S. S. Rose & Son. The second prize bull calf was also reserve junior champion male for John Bompas & Sons. This calf, Pine View Treasurer, was sired by Auchenbrain Battle Flame (Imp.).

Sunny Dale Military Boy, a former grand champion at the C.N.E., and the Royal was here first prize bull, 3 years or over, senior and grand champion male for Glen-Stor-Dun Farm, Cornwall, Ont. Second in the same class, reserve senior and reserve grand champion was Auchenbrain Battle Flame (Imp.) for Miss Ellen Bompas.

John McLennan had the first prize senior yearling heifer, also the junior female championship on Sunny Dale Joyce 3rd. The reserve junior champion female was Sunnymead Fair Dolly, second prize senior yearling heifer for James Cotton & Sons.

The senior and grand champion female and the reserve to same were both previously shown together in the class for cows, 4 years and over, dry. Therefore the winner of the senior and grand championships was Bonnieshade Golden Wonder, by Springburn Golden Wonder, for S. Wyman MacKechnie & Sons. The second prize winner as also winner of the reserve senior and reserve grand championships was Sunny Mead Daisy 3rd for James Cotton & Sons.

HUNTINGDON JUDGES

The judge of the "Black & White" Holstein Show at Huntingdon Fair, on August 28 will be W. Ray Wilson, Kenmore, Ont. Mr. Wilson is a former president of the Holstein Friesian Association of Canada.

Similarly John McLennan, Martintown, Ont., is slated to judge the Ayrshire classes. An outstanding breeder he is also a director of Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association.

LOTTA MONEY!

There's a saying that the bull is half the herd. Another that the value of a good sire is unestimable. However, $100,000.00 for a half share of a bull is a lot of money. That amount being the reported price paid for a half share in the Aberdeen-Angus bull, Prince Sunbeam 249. The purchaser being Shadow Isle Farm, Red Bank, N.J., and the seller and owner of the other half share is Armand Hammer, San Antonio, Texas.

We are not aware of the pedigree of Prince Sunbeam but he was grand champion at the 1949 International Live Stock Show, Chicago.

He will be transported by plane to and from the M. & L. Ranch, Burnett, Texas and Shadow Isle Farm, New Jersey.

MALONE FAIR

While Central Canada Exhibition was staging its successful livestock show, so also was Franklin County, N.Y. That show had out the largest purebred cattle entry in recent years.

We are indebted to Malone Evening Telegram for an interesting report of the Fair in general and the livestock section in particular. In that report that publication says:

"There is no set international day at the fair anymore because the friends from across the border come every day to Malone for the exhibition. They know how welcome they are and the sound of the French tongue is heard frequently".

THE AYRSHIRES

A bull calf owned by Frederick J. Bova, Burke, N.Y., was first in his class and also junior and grand champion male of the Ayrshire section. Lannes Tuttle & Son won the 3 year old or over bull class, also the senior and reserve grand male championships.

James Dimond, Fort Covington, N.Y., won first in the 4 to 5 year old cow class also the reserve senior females championship, of the Ayrshire Section. The senior and grand champion female was owned by Frederick J. Bova. A senior yearling heifer owned by Marshall Cheeseman, Ellenburg Depot, N.Y., was junior champion female.

Other Ayrshire exhibitors included Cook Bros., Burke, N.Y.; R. Southworth, Irving Tuttle, Winford Cheeseman, Ellenburg Depot, N.Y., Clark Farms and Robert Sherman.

JERSEYS AND HOLSTEINS

A bull calf also annexed the junior and grand male championships in the Jersey section, as was the case with Ayrshires. The winner was shown by Edwin and William Collins. The senior and reserve grand male champion was shown by Floyd and Donald Pike, Brasher Falls.

F. Benware, Malone, showed both the junior and reserve grand female champion and the senior and grand female champion Jersey.

The Jersey cattle exhibitors also included: Bangor 4H Rangers; Arthur Raymond, Burke; James Egan, Bangor; Kenneth Dumas, Malone; Gordon Todd.

In the Holstein Section an entry of Donald Collins, Malone won the junior and reserve grand male championships. Another entry by the same owner won the junior and reserve grand female championships. Forkey Farms, Brushton, showed the senior and grand male champion. The senior and grand champion female was an entry of Ira Morgan, Waddington.

Other Holstein exhibitors included: Edgar King, Oscar King, James Johnston, Burke; James J. Rochell, Malone, Ira Morgan, Waddington; Lureston Bushey, Burke; Clarence and Robert Collins, George W. Gates, William McCabe, Gerald Langdon, all of Malone; Edwin Tarbell, North Bangor.

FREEDOM FROM FOOT AND MOUTH GIVES DAIRY CATTLE PRICES A LIFT

Says a report by the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada:

The official announcement that Canada is now free of foot and mouth disease made on August 19th had an immediately strengthening effect on dairy cattle prices. At the dispersal sale of the Eveermot Holstein herd of T. W. Reeve, Meadowvale, Ont., held that same evening, 35 head sold for $15,880, an average of $453. This average was realized despite the fact that the herd was not on official R.O.P. test although the type of the animals offered was good. A bred heifer brought $1125 and a heifer calf $1025. Seven added consignments brought the sale total for 42 head to $18,810, a general average of $447.

The sale was held at the Oakville Sales Arena and by contrast a consignment sale of purebred Holsteins held there on August 13 averaged $277.

J. M. Fraser, Streetsville, Ont., paid the top price of $1125 for Eveermot Early Sunday Morning while her twin sister, Eveermot Late Sunday Morning went to Amos Wilkinson, Wallenstein at $910.

Massey-Harris Farms, Milliken, Ont., secured an eight-months old daughter of the three times All-Canadian bull Spring Farm Fond Hope at $1,025.

Other good prices paid included: $675 for a three-year-old; $600 for a four-year-old; $585 for a six-year-old; $580 paid twice for a pair of bred heifers; $560 for a five-year-old; and $500 paid each for four different animals.

Fifteen milking females averaged $484; 9 bred heifers $571; 5 open yearlings $272; and 6 heifer calves $315.

TO LINDWOOD FARM

We have now learned that in addition to the 10 heifers that were sold by Burnside Farms to Col. S. C. Oland, Lindwood Farm, Bedford, N.S., two young cows were also purchased by Mr. Alex. Lamond for Col. Oland.

FROM OAKHURST

One of the cows was Oakhurst Foremost Lady, born October 1, 1947 and bred and owned by Gerald A. Roy, Oakburn Farm, Howick, Que. This young cow was sired by Burnside Foremost, son of the doubly approved (Canada and U.S.A.) sire Burnside Future Hope and of the cow Burnside Barr Kindness, classified "Very Good" and with a mature record of 11,886 lbs. M., 428 lbs. F., to her credit.

The dam of Oakburn Foremost Lady is Oakburn Future Lady by Burnside Future Victory and from Oakburn Barr Lady, classified "Excellent" and with several good records to her credit, all well over 4%. She is in calf to Bridlington Kenora, son of the well-known Rottenrow Remarkable (imp.).

FROM TERRACE BANK

The other cow was purchased from J. Earle Ness & Sons, Terrace Bank Farms, Howick. She is Terrace Bank Susan, born October 3, 1947. Her sire was Terrace Bank Masterpiece, son of Burnside Barr Masterpiece and of Burnside Royal Lily, classified "Very Good".

The dam of Terrace Bank Susan is Benvenue Susette by Thorncroft Leto's Captain. She is in calf to Burnside Emperor, son of the "Approved" sire Burnside Futuae Hone.

"Approved" sire Burnside Future Hope.

Recipes

IT'S PICKLING TIME

This is the time of year when you can walk down any street and know, just by sniffing the tantalizing spiciness that wafts through kitchen doors and windows, exactly what kind of pickle is being made in the Jones or Smith home! Recipes, like old legends, have been handed down from mother to daughter and the contents of the recipes guarded almost as closely as their lives.

Pickles may not add much as far as food value is concerned, but like icing on a cake, they add the finishing touch to a meal. This year make some special pickles for those all important occasions when the ladies' bridge club meets or Sis celebrates her sixteenth birthday. Gherkins enter this special class for they are attractive to serve and tasty to eat.

Gherkins have a pleasing flavour —a blend of the sour, the sweet, the salty and the spicy. The texture is crisp, crunchy and tender, not leathery, limp and tough. The home economists of the Consumer Section, Canada Department of Agriculture have some information about the requirements for a good gherkin. Firm, fresh cucumbers 2½ inches in length or less should be used for best results. It is important that these cucumbers be put in brine as soon after picking as possible — cucumbers held at room temperature for even a few hours often develop hollow centres.

The home economists recommend that you use blended vinegar which is a combination of different kinds of vinegar — usually equal portions of white and cider vinegar are used. Be careful not to use too much sugar in the pickling mixture for this causes shrivelling. Any combination of spices may be used in pickles to suit the taste, but use spice with caution — too much will result in a dark colour and a bitter flavour. Whole spices give better colour and flavour than ground spices.

When making pickles use enamel, aluminum or stainless steel utensils. Vinegar and salt react with iron, copper and brass causing discoloration.

Pickles, like Rome, cannot be made in a day. Quite often attempts to shorten the method results in an inferior quality pickle but in spite of the time taken they are quite easy to make. Here are two recipes from the home economists which they have tested and found very satisfactory.

GHERKINS
(Nine Day Pickles)

4 quarts small cucumbers
16 cups boiling water (3 quarts plus 1 cup)
2 cups salt
1 teaspoon alum
16 cups boiling water
8 cups blended vinegar
6 cups sugar
1 tablespoon celery seed
2 teaspoons whole cloves

Wash the cucumbers, scrub well, rinse, drain well and place in a crock. Cover with hot brine made by combining 16 cups boiling water with the salt. Let stand 3 days. Drain cucumbers from brine, bring brine to boiling point, pour over cucumbers and again let stand 3 days. Repeat this and again let stand 3 days. Drain cucumbers and place in crock. Add alum to remaining 16 cups boiling water and pour over cucumbers. Let stand 6 hours, then drain and rinse thoroughly. Pack pickles into sterilized jars. Prepare pickle mixture by combining the vinegar, sugar and spices. Boil mixture for 5 minutes. Strain through cheesecloth and pour over pickles. Seal and store. Yield: Approximately 4 quarts.

GHERKINS

4 quarts small cucumbers
16 cups boiling water
1 cup salt
8 cups blended vinegar
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup salt
¼ cup mustard seed
½ cup mixed pickling spice
7 cups sugar

Wash the cucumbers, scrub well, rinse, drain well and place in a crock. Cover with hot brine made by combining boiling water and salt. Pour over cucumbers, cover and let stand overnight. Drain cucumbers thoroughly and place in clean, dry crock. Prepare pickle mixture by combining the cold vinegar, salt, the ¼ cup sugar, mustard seed and pickling spice. Pour over cucumbers. Each morning for the next 14 days, add ½ cup sugar, stirring well to dissolve the sugar. When last of sugar is added, remove spices and pour over pickles. Seal and store. Yield: Approximately 4 quarts.

TOURISTS STILL COME

Shrinkage in the U.S. dollar doesn't keep the tourists away.

Americans are heading north to dump their dollars into Canadian cash registers. While it's too early to say definitely what the reading on those registers will be at the end of the year, indications are for a lift on 1951.

Widespread fear that the discounted U.S. dollar would mean a smaller tourist take have been proven groundless. Few complaints are heard from visitors; general feeling is "turn about is fair play."

Though there is no accurate measure of the number of Canadians holidaying in their own country, most provinces feel there is a definite increase in interprovincial visiting.

A New Way to Control Ants

Chlordane Applied As A Spray or Dust to Ant Hills Will Eradicate These Pests

By Dr. George S. Langford, Specialist in Insect Control, University of Maryland

Because ants attend so many picnics, one wonders why they ever gained the reputation for hard work. They may be despised and considered lowly and insignificant by genteel and fastidious homemakers, but no cookie jar, sugar bowl, pantry, or kitchen is too aristocratic for a visitation.

They are a nuisance all summer long. They invade homes, dig up lawns and, in general, make life miserable for town and country folks alike.

There are several types of ants, and each type has its own peculiar feeding habits. Some kinds prefer sweets, while others like greasy foods best. In fact, the food of ants is even more varied than that of humans. These varied and unpredictable food habits have vexed and baffled many a homemaker in her attempt to control them with the use of poisoned baits often suggested for control.

Chlordane Does the Trick

There is now a new method for ant control which eliminates all the fuss and bother of trying to determine what kind of bait the ants will eat. The insecticide, chlordane, is the answer to the ant problem. It kills by direct contact, and thus eliminates the use of poison baits and the hazard which always accompanies their use; namely, that a child or pet may accidentally find and eat them.

Chlordane will kill any and all ants that walk or crawl on treated surfaces. Properly used, it can be depended upon to control them when and wherever they become a nuisance, such as in the home, on the lawn, the farm or the picnic grounds. Treatment is easy and simple.

The home and especially the kitchen is a place where ants seem to delight in making a nuisance of themselves. With chlordane the following simple procedure usually gives quick relief. Obtain a 2 per cent oil solution which has been manufactured for household use, apply it with a paint brush to baseboards, door jambs, walls and around the base of cupboards, cabinets, table legs and other objects over which the ants crawl in gaining entrance to the house, or places where they are foraging. When used around the kitchen or other places where food is stored take care to use it in such a way that food will not be contaminated or children can easily get it on their hands or into their mouths.

When Homes Are Over-Run

If the whole house is being overrun with ants and the points of entrance cannot be determined, follow this procedure: Prepare a 2 per cent chlordane water emulsion (mix 1 quart of 45 to 47 per cent chlordane emulsified concentrate in 6 gallons of water) and spray all outside portions of the building from the ground to the first floor window level, all window and door frames, steps, porch edges and sides, and all objects under the house, such as pillars and pipes, that may form a bridge from the ground to the house over which ants can crawl. This type of treatment has been found to keep homes, in the South, free of the pestiferous Argentine and other common household ants for an entire season.

Most ants which invade homes have their nests outside of the building. The line of marching ants can usually be followed back to the nests from which they come. If these nests and the hills they make can be found and "spot treated" with chlordane sprays or dusts, the ants in the house will disappear.

Lawns and picnic areas are often polluted with ants, and lawns on occasion may be seriously damaged. Chlordane is a top-notch insecticide for eliminating ants in such places. Foraging ants may be killed by dusting or spraying the areas. For each acre to be treated, use 30 pounds of a 5 per cent dust, or either 3 pounds of a 50 per cent wettable powder or 1½ quarts of an emulsified concentrate in 100 gallons of water. For smaller areas use proportionately smaller amounts. One pound of the dust or 1 ounce of the wettable powder in 2½ gallons of water is ample to treat 1,000 square feet of lawn.

Where there are many large ant hills in a lawn or picnic area it is desirable to seek them out and give them an extra dousing of spray. Often "spot treatment" of the ant hills is all that is necessary to eliminate ants from a field or lawn. This is accomplished by thoroughly wetting each individual ant hill along with an area of about 2 square feet surrounding it, with water containing 2 per cent chlordane.

In "spot treating" an ordinary sprinkling can may be used in making the treatments, if a sprayer is not available. A satisfactory solution (approximately 2 per cent) may be prepared by mixing 6 ounces of chlordane, either the 50 per cent wettable powder or the 45 to 47 per cent emulsified concentrate with 1 gallon of water.

Poison Baits for Ants

Important in ant control is the destruction of the queens which lay the eggs that produce the workers. Since the queens live a protected life in their nests, they must be destroyed there. Because worker ants will collect poison baits, and take them back to the nest for the queens to eat, poisoned baits have proved quite satisfactory for killing queens. For this reason, poisoned baits are useful in eliminating hard to find nests. The type of bait required will depend upon the food habits of the particular ant. As already stated, some ants prefer a sweet bait, while others prefer a greasy bait.

The two common poisons used in ant baits are sodium arsenate and thallium sulphate. Both of these chemicals are deadly poisonous and must be handled with great care and in a manner so that children and pets cannot reach them.

Ready-prepared baits containing these poisons either in a sweet or greasy base may be purchased at most store handling insecticides. Detailed directions for their use will be found on the container.

BLUEBERRY PICKER

MRS. EMMA O'CONNOR

is believed to be one of the more outstanding blueberry pickers in this district. At the age of 65 Mrs. O'Connor picked 226 pails of blueberries during the season this year, picking as many as 3 pails a day. Mrs. O'Connor walked to the blueberry field, on the Plank Road, from her residence in Huntingdon each day to get the berries and then walked home each night. She does not intend to do any picking next year.

Recalls Exciting Stampede Stunts Of Pioneer Days

Calgary (CP) — The Calgary Stampede this year provided its share of thrills and excitement but it was a far cry from the days when people landed planes on merry-go-rounds or bulldogged steers with their teeth.

But Stampede assistant manager W. L. Ross of Calgary can member when things like that actually happened, and even more.

Mr. Ross recalls the time when Slim Morehouse navigated a 36-horse-mule wagon team described as the longest team in the world.

Morehouse had to have a voice as powerful as the set up, too, for when the team turned a corner, half the team was on one street and the other half on another.

"Damndest looking outfit you ever saw", said Ross.

The Calgary Stampede once featured aviation events as main attractions. Included in the aggregation were stars like Miss Katherine Stinson, the "world's most famous girl aviator", fresh from flying in China and Japan.

Any Port in Storm

Aviation displays have been a thing of the past as far back as 1919, which was the year Capt. Fred R. McCall of Calgary, one of Canada's great fliers landed his machine on top of the merry-go-ground.

The plane developed engine trouble, tripped some telephone wires and landed smack on top of the ride.

Ross also remembers the 1922 winter carnival when a chinook melted all the snow on the ski jumps and car loads of it had to be imported from Banff.

Ross's story collection dates back to 1912 when he worked at the first stampede as an usher. He was captain of the Calgary Tigers of 1911, when they won the western football title.

Mr. Ross has collected hundreds of posters from fair and exhibitions as far back as the 1908 dominion exhibition.

He says he never expects to see a fellow so quick as the Spaniard who appeared to bulldog steers with his teeth.

He actually flipped them by grabbing the horns, of course, but at the same time he grabbed the animal's nose with his teeth, raised his arms, shook his head and gave the illusion he brought down an 800-pound animal with his teeth.

COSTLY EXTENSION

YORKTON, Sask., (CP)—Yorkton faces an expenditure conservatively estimated at $175,000 for extension to its disposal plant. Officials said the plant has been working beyond its capacity for at least two years.

African Basenjis A Barkless Breed

Montreal (CP) — Bammba's bark is worse than his bite—matter of fact, this type dog doesn't bark, he yodels.

Bammba is one of the barkless breed, the "Basenji of the Blue Nile". And while his vocal chords do not permit a bark, they do let him do what is described as "a chortling yodel".

Bammba and his brother, Brigadoon, are the only two Basenji in Montreal and they are owned by Spalding Black.

The Basenji's pedigree goes back no less than 6,000 years to the days when he was the favorite of the Pharoahs. His heritage from central Africa, where the breed is used for hunting, enables him to lick a dog twice his weight.

The Basenjis are also tree climbers. Built like a fox terrier, the Basenji has short hair varying from chestnut to tan and from black to white.

Flood Ends Farming For Alberta Victim

CALGARY, (CP) — To the parched cowboy in the old western song, cool water would have been a Godsend, but it was a bad blow to Edward Parsons, 62-year-old farmer near here.

More than 75 per cent of his farm was inundated in the spring floods when the flood waters threatened to wash away part of the Edmonton-Calgary highway.

Parsons did not plant a crop this year and recently sold his cattle at auction. Travel by boat was the only way he could get back and forth from his farm home.
