Hunting accident takes youth's life

TOWNSHIP OF HATLEY (BS) — Seventeen-year-old Lynn Chute of North Hatley died last night at the CHU following a hunting accident in which he was shot Tuesday night.

Lynn Chute, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Chute of North Hatley, was shot Tuesday at 4:45 p.m. while hunting with three companions, Scott Caunter and Steven Piercy, both of North Hatley, and Larry Corriveau of Sherbrooke.

The teenager was shot by a 51-year-old Sherbrooke man who was hunting with two companions, unconfirmed reports said. Coaticook Quebec Provincial Police could not make the accident report available to the press at newstime.

Quick action on the part of Dr. Bruce Fletcher was credited with preventing the boy from bleeding to death at the accident scene. Dr. Fletcher lives within a few miles of the accident.

North Hatley Police Chief Stan Meigs was first summoned to the scene by Larry Corriveau. Chief Meigs stayed at the accident site detaining the man involved in the accident while awaiting Quebec Provincial Police under whose jurisdiction the area is in. An ambulance and Dr. Fletcher were also on their way.

The accident occurred about 30 yards north of the turnoff to the Woodland Bay Road, situated about three miles south of North Hatley on the east side of Lake Massawippi.

"It was a wonderful thing how fast the doctor came," Chief Meigs commented yesterday.

Dr. Fletcher said that he found the boy bleeding heavily and lying in the middle of a field that was totally clear 100 yards in both directions.

His wound was in the left groin and the doctor administered first aid, packing his wound.

Yesterday, calls were put out for blood for Lynn whose blood type, A Negative, is rare. Only 15 per cent of the population have this type. Pleas for this blood type were announced at Alexander Galt Regional High School where Lynn was a senior student. The Red Cross, currently holding their blood donor clinic, responded with blood supplies.

WORKING HARD FOR UNICEF — This group of industrious grade two children put a lot of effort into making collection boxes for UNICEF on Halloween night. A total of 450 United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund boxes were distributed at the Lennoxville Elementary School this week and those youngsters will be on the streets from 3-8 p.m. tomorrow to help raise money in the annual drive for the worthwhile campaign. Last year, $1,080 was raised in Lennoxville, and organizers are hopeful this amount will be surpassed on Friday night. (Record photo by Bruce Porter)

Quebec farmers point out worsening beef situation

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec farmers are threatening a repeat of last year's public slaughter and burial of calves to draw attention to dwindling demand for beef, officials of the Quebec Beef Producers and the Agriculture Producers' Union (APU) said Wednesday.

Spokesmen said at a news conference the situation is worse than last year and subsidies promised by the Quebec government last June have not been forthcoming.

"A solution can't be delayed any longer," said one spokesman. "35,000 animals have been sent back to farms because no one would buy them and farmers don't have enough food to feed them."

The producers have asked the government for a subsidy of 40 cents a pound of veal to cover production costs.

The producers said their request is the first of several aimed at gaining a total of about $30 million in subsidies to cushion farmers against abnormal losses. The government gave $27 million last year.

Death penalty

Prison guards may walk off jobs tonight in protest

COWANSVILLE (JM) — Penitentiary guards across Canada may walk off the job at midnight tonight. Gerald Portelance, president of the Cowansville chapter of the Canadian Union of Public Employees Solicitor General's sector, said their strike plans were still in effect during taping of a "l'heure de Cowansville" which will be aired on CHES Radio, Granby at 1 p.m. today.

Mr. Portelance said the strike would go as planned unless it was cancelled by the national leadership. All police, prison and penitentiary guards across the country were due to hold a four-hour protest strike beginning at midnight tonight if the cabinet commuted the death sentence in the case of Rene Vaillancourt. Vaillancourt had been found guilty of capital murder, punishable by death, in the slaying of a Toronto policeman and had been scheduled to hang.

The Cabinet issued a stay of execution and his case will be reconsidered next summer.

Guy Magnan, president of the 4,200-member Quebec Provincial Police Association, said his membership would delay strike action until the cabinet comes to a decision concerning Vaillancourt's fate.

The panel, hosted by regular moderator J. Noel Parenteau, a Cowansville publisher, then discussed three issues: Capital punishment, tickets of leave and the right to strike in the public service, specifically among the police, penitentiary and prison guards.

The panelists included: Guy Lemire, director of the Cowansville institution; Claude Leveille, Batonnier of the Bedford Bar; Gilles Poussard, head of legal aid in the District of Bedford; Gerald Barsalou, secretary CUPE, Cowansville; Gaston Lacroix, president of the Cowansville Police Fraternity; and Gilles Dube, vice-president of the Quebec Provincial Police Association, Mr. Magnan and Mr. Portelance.

Mr. Leveille said he was in favor of capital punishment in all cases of premeditated murder. However, he believed, a certain amount of reflection should be done in "crimes of passion." He believes in the system of tickets of leave (currently referred to as parole) and said he was against strikes in the public sector.

Mr. Magnan described the leave system under the National Parole Board as "the worst organized department in Canada." He said even very dangerous criminals are allowed leave while more than 51 per cent of the population are against such leave. "Our association is for capital punishment in all cases of premeditated murder."

"The reason we sanctioned the walkout (study session) in Vaillancourt's case was we felt such action would force the government to realize the lack of responsibility on the part of elected officials, especially the Solicitor General, in the application of the laws of the land."

Mr. Lemire said he did not feel capital punishment was an effective deterrent and cited the recent execution of five Basques by the Spanish Government and the subsequent murder of nine Spanish policemen.

He suggested remedial steps could be taken by the National Parole Board concerning leaves and added the final decisions were taken in Ottawa far from the people who are living and working with the inmates.

"Strikes are not permitted by members of the Solicitor General's service," he said.

Mr. Portelance then dropped the bombshell concerning the possibility of tonight's walkout. He then said members of the guard's alliance are in favor of capital punishment in all cases of premeditated murder as well as in cases of sexual assault on children. "The rotten branches of society must be removed and the government must apply the laws of the land."

Postal talks edge forward

OTTAWA (CP) — Negotiators for the post office and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) adjourned their contract negotiations early this morning following a session that started early Wednesday afternoon.

Indications were that some minor monetary and non-monetary issues had been settled, leaving the most contentious monetary matters still to be negotiated when talks resume today.

Jean-Claude Parrot, chief of a union negotiator, said following the adjournment that "I'm still optimistic a settlement can be reached."

Mr. Parrot said one non-monetary issue still to be resolved is the use of casual labor, although both parties have reviewed their original proposals.

Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey left the talks earlier Wednesday evening and there were no post office spokesmen available for comment.

The strike by the 22,000 inside postal workers now is in its 10th day.

Also still outstanding is the matter of pay differentials for night shifts and weekends.

AGREES WITH PRINCIPLE

But Mr. Mackasey has said he agrees with the principle of pay differentials for weekends and night shifts, although not with the amounts proposed in a conciliation report by Judge Jean Moisan of Quebec Superior Court.

These were a four-cent-an-hour increase in night differentials—now 18 cents an hour—a Saturday premium of 60 cents an hour and a Sunday premium of 75 cents an hour.

The postal workers last were asking for a 51-per-cent increase on their average $4.56-an-hour wage in a 27-month contract.

Mr. Mackasey said earlier this week the CUPW may have to settle for less than the original post office offer of a $1.70-an-hour increase in a 30-month contract if negotiators asked for more in other areas.

Negotiations broke down 11 days ago when each side disagreed on which issues should be settled first.

Union negotiators wanted first to reach settlements on contract clauses dealing with non-monetary issues, while post office negotiators insisted on settling the wage clause first.

London hit by a second bomb

LONDON (AP) — London's fashionable West End was hit by its second bombing in a week Wednesday when an explosion in the doorway of a Mayfair restaurant injured 18 persons, four of them visitors from the United States.

All the injured suffered cuts, bruises or shock. Seven of them were kept in the hospital overnight.

The restaurant, the Trattoria Fiori located about 200 yards from the U.S. Embassy, was wrecked.

"As I rushed up to the restaurant, people were shouting and screaming," said photographer Maurice Marucci. "Six or seven people collapsed on the sidewalk. There was blood all over them and all over the road."

Enrico Sidoli, the restaurant's chef, said about 20 people were in the building at the time.

Scotland Yard's bomb squad said the explosion was caused by "a small bomb—seven to 10 pounds of explosive." But bomb squad chief Ernest Bond told reporters the effect on the building was "devastating."

DESCRIBES DAMAGE

"The restaurant is shattered and there is damage to the pavement and the cellar underneath," he said.

The World in focus

Lebanon ceasefire

BEIRUT (Reuters) — Sources say that Lebanon's warring factions reached another ceasefire agreement Wednesday night, the tenth in six weeks.

They say the ceasefire was agreed at a meeting chaired by Premier Rashid Karami and attended by Palestinian commando leader Yasser Arafat, other Palestinian officials, internal security force and army officers and some top Lebanese politicians.

The sources say it was agreed to wait for 48 hours—until midnight Friday night—to judge whether the latest agreement is implemented any more successfully than its predecessors.

In a reference to past ceasefire agreements, the premier told reporters that "what matters is not the arrangements themselves, but their results. From experience I have decided not to announce anything, but to let the facts speak for themselves."

Franco clings to life

MADRID (CP) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco continued to cling to life today as Premier Carlos Arias Navarro called his cabinet into session amid reports that Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon has agreed to become chief of state temporarily.

Sources say the 37-year-old prince, who has previously refused to step in on a temporary basis, gave in to intense pressure from the government.

Franco's doctors said early today that the 82-year-old dictator had a peaceful night although his condition remains extremely grave.

The doctors said there was no change in the clinical condition reported Wednesday night. At that time, the medical team said intestinal paralysis that nearly caused death Tuesday had eased, but cardiac insufficiency continued and a new complication with the heart had appeared.

Juan Carlos, designated by Franco to be his political heir and Spain's first king since 1931, stood in for him in July, 1974, when the generalissimo nearly died with phlebitis.

But Franco returned to office after 40 days, and the prince was said to have vowed that the next time it would be all or nothing.

At that time, it was Franco himself who appointed the prince temporary chief of state. Now, with Franco apparently conscious for brief periods only, the replacement process must be initiated by the cabinet.

Unemployment Insurance act amendments under attack

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposed amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act show the government accepts an unemployment rate of more than seven per cent, a New Democrat MP said Wednesday.

David Orlikow (Winnipeg North) was speaking in the Commons during second-reading debate on amendments to the act. They would increase premiums and introduce new restrictions on benefits.

Debate resumes next week on the amendments, which have been attacked as harsh and unfair by many opposition MPs.

The Commons today debates a Progressive Conservative motion calling on the government to explain what it is doing to put a stop to waste and extravagance in its spending.

During Wednesday's debate, Mr. Orlikow said Manpower Minister Robert Andras foresees "a long-term, persistent high rate of unemployment" in his proposals.

Proposed changes to the act would raise the four-per-cent unemployment level at which the program now ceases to be self-financing.

Premiums from employers and employees now finance benefits up to four per cent unemployment. Above that figure, the government picks up the cost.

CHANGES BASE

The new proposals would base the self-financing level, and also the premiums, on a shifting eight-year unemployment average.

Since 1971, when the act was last changed, unemployment has only been under five per cent in one month, Mr. Orlikow said. The level now is more than seven per cent, the highest rate since 1961.

Mr. Orlikow also joined other MPs in attacking proposals that would cut people aged 65 and over from eligibility for jobless benefits.

James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) said provisions to cut off the aged and reduce benefits to the poor are "unjust, unfair and cruel."

Mr. Andras said at the opening of the debate Monday that increases in old-age pensions reduced the need of people 65 and over for unemployment benefits.

Prisoners released

BANGKOK (AP) — Nine United States citizens captured by Communist forces in South Vietnam in March, two Canadians and three other foreigners were flown from Hanoi to Vientiane today en route to Thailand.

United Nations officials said all were fit and well. They were expected in Bangkok late today.

The group included five U.S. missionaries and a dependent, one U.S. student, two U.S. government officials, two Canadian missionaries, two Filipinos and one Australian.

IRA attacks rivals

BELFAST (Reuters) — One man was killed and 13 other people were wounded Wednesday night when the Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army turned its guns on members of a rival IRA faction.

The bloodiest incident in the spate of attacks was at a bar near the centre of the city. Gunmen sprayed it with bullets, leaving one man dead and three injured. In a separate raid, a man was shot in the legs as he lay in bed.

All the attacks were aimed at members of the Republican Clubs, a political organization for the Official wing of the IRA.

Claiming responsibility for the raids, the Provisional wing of the outlawed movement said the Republican Clubs had been involved in "a campaign of murder, arson, gangsterism and intimidation" against working-class Roman Catholics.

Robber holds women

CLEVELAND (AP) — An armed bandit, who said he was carrying explosives, seized four or five women hostages and held off police at a West Side bank Wednesday after his robbery attempt failed.

Police said the man was holding the hostages in a vault area at the rear of a branch of Society National Bank. He had released two other women.

Police and FBI agents were in the bank negotiating with the bandit, who had demanded a van to take him and the hostages away.

A van was brought in and parked near the bank in a corner of a shopping centre. Squad cars, fire engines and ambulances lined the street.

A patrolman who negotiated with the robber said authorities would meet the demands if necessary.

The patrolman said the crewcut robber carried what looked like a .357-magnum pistol.

Police said they were told by a witness that the bandit carried a package that appeared to be wired.

New working capital at Come By Chance helps financial troubles

NEW YORK (CP) — Industrialist John Shaheen announced Tuesday that substantial new working capital has been arranged to rescue the financially-troubled refinery at Come By Chance, Nfld., one of Canada's largest.

He also said provision has been made for new technical assistance and reduction of costs at the refinery.

"The plant will continue full operation," he said. "The ownership remains the same."

Mr. Shaheen, owner of the companies, Newfoundland Refining Co. Ltd. and Provincial Refining Ltd., which operate the refinery, was commenting on an announcement in St. John's, Nfld. by Newfoundland Premier Frank Moores.

Mr. Moores said the refinery was in financial trouble but that negotiations between Mr. Shaheen and the First National Bank of Chicago appeared to have resulted in a formula to ensure continued operation of the plant, 100 miles west of St. John's.

Mr. Shaheen said the premier was "absolutely correct."

GAVE SECURITY
"Agreement has been reached for substantial additional working capital for Newfoundland Refining Co. Ltd. and Provincial Refining Co. Ltd., and we gave adequate security to the lenders," the New York owner said.

Mr. Shaheen did not indicate the amount of new working capital negotiated but informed financial sources here placed the figure at $60 million.

Mr. Moores said negotiations had been going on between Mr. Shaheen and major unsecured creditors. One of the largest unsecured creditors was the Chicago bank which had loaned $20 million to Mr. Shaheen for oil inventories at the 100,000-barrel-a-day refinery.

Newfoundland holds the second mortgage of $30 million which now carries accrued interest of $11,340,784. Mr. Moores said the total $41,340,784 is the only taxpayers' money involved.

The first mortgage of $110 million is held by Britain's Export Credits Guarantee Department, a Crown agency that guarantees loans by United Kingdom merchant bankers for overseas projects.

He said the mortgages were well secured by the refinery's physical assets which have a replacement value of about $400 million.

"The government's position during these delicate negotiations was and is that the government's security as a second mortgage should not be impaired," Mr. Moores said. The premier's statement was distributed as his office in St. John's called reporters to a hurriedly-assembled news conference.

DECLINES DETAILS
Mr. Moores said a prime objective, from the government's point of view, was that the refinery remain in operation.

The refinery employs 400. The premier said financial troubles started when Newfoundland Refining Co. Ltd. lost money during the third quarter of 1975.

He said the losses could be blamed on a variety of reasons.

The refinery went into production at the beginning of 1974. In the fall of 1973, the Newfoundland government and Mr. Shaheen renegotiated a previous deal under which the company owning the refinery was a Crown corporation.

Elimination of the Crown corporation converted the refinery to a purely private venture.

Mr. Moores said the move turned out to be a good one for Newfoundland. If a provincial Crown corporation still owned the refinery the province now would be required to pay debts which led to the current problems.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market, which has been declining steadily since the federal government announced its selective wage and price controls, recorded another sharp decline Wednesday carrying prices close to their lowest levels this year.

The industrial index, a leading market indicator, fell 1.13 to 167.01, its lowest close since Jan. 9, western oils 87 to 189.65 and base metals 27 to 71.08, lowest in more than six months.

Volume of 1.14 million shares was the smallest in 15 sessions and down from 1.36 million Tuesday. Value dropped to $11.37 million from $13.98 million.

What stocks did:

	Wed. Tues.

Blocks included 15,000 Dometar at $19 1/2 a share, 9,000 Cadillac Fairview at $9 3/4, 8,400 Interprovincial Pipe Line at $12 1/4 and 6,000 Algoma Central Railway at $14 3/4.

Among industrials, the largest losses were posted by communication, construction and steel issues. Of the 16 industrial subgroups, only trust and loan and general manufacturing shares advanced.

PLANS TAKEOVER BID
Trading was halted for the entire session in White Pass and Yukon Corp. Ltd. common and series A preferred shares pending announcement that Federal Industries Ltd., which owns about 50.2 per cent of White Pass common shares, plans to offer $9.50 a share for those it does not own. Federal said the offer will be subject to at least 90-per-cent acceptance. White Pass common shares last traded at $8 3/4 and series A preferred at $15. Federal Industries A lost 1/4 to $5 1/4.

The trading halt in Queenswear (Canada) Ltd. continued for the third session at the request of the company pending a decision by Quegroup Investments Ltd. on whether it will accept fewer than the required 350,000 shares of Queenswear deposited under its $3.50-a-share offer. Quegroup said it will buy all the shares tendered and will extend its offer, which was to expire Wednesday, until Nov. 28. Queenswear last traded at $3.05.

Algoma Steel Corp., which reported third-quarter net earnings of 18 cents a share compared with $1.22 for the same period last year, fell 1 1/4 to 24 1/4.

Southam Press A fell 1 1/4 to $21 1/2. Andres Wines 1 to $8. Royal Bank 3/4 to $28 3/4 and Shell Canada 3/4 to $14 3/4.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, continuing to mirror the financial crisis of New York City, fell off sharply Wednesday to all but erase its spirited upswing in the previous session.

The closing Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks stood at 838.63, a drop of 12.83 points. On Tuesday, with speculation that President Ford might have decided to help the city avert default, the Dow had risen 12.98.

Volume on the NYSE shrank to 16.1 million shares from 17.06 million Tuesday.

What stocks did:

	Wed. Tues.	Wed. Tues.
Advances	347	882
Declines	1,078	534

Unchanged 403 425
Total 1,828 1,841

Stocks were generally down in opening trades and the Dow's slide acelerated more than seven points by noon when Ford announced his plan to write a new bankruptcy law to help New York City cope with default. But he repeated his position against federal help to avoid default.

State and city officials said Ford's speech made avoiding default all but impossible.

Analysts have linked the market's recent short-term price fluctuations to changes in the outlook for New York City's ability to avoid non-payment of its obligations. The stocks of several New York City bank holding companies fell off Wednesday. The banks are major holders of the city's bonds.

J.P. Morgan, parent firm of Morgan Guaranty Bank, was down 1 3/4 at $49, Chase Manhattan 1 1/4 at $25 3/4 and Citicorp, parent company of First National City Bank, 1 1/4 at $27 3/4.

The NYSE composite index closed at 47.26, down 0.63, and Standard and Poor's 500-stock index lost 1.12 to 89.39.

Bethlehem Steel, which had lower third-quarter earnings, was off 3/4 at $34 1/2 and U.S. Steel, which jumped up 2 3/4 Tuesday, was down 1 3/4 to $64.

Bankers experiencing greatly increased business from farmers
TORONTO (CP) — Canadian banks are experiencing greatly increased business from farmers, says W. G. Fulton, chief agricultural officer of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Mr. Fulton, chairman of a two-day agricultural credit conference which ended Tuesday, said the total value of outstanding loans to farmers by chartered banks has more than doubled since 1967.

Gordon Hill, president of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, earlier told the conference that banks have a reputation among farmers as being aloof and uninterested in the farming business.

However, Mr. Fulton said in an interview the number of agricultural specialists employed by the banks have more than doubled in the last year and a half and bank managers in farming areas are being trained in agricultural finance.

He also said a number of managers are getting out of the office to see the farmer's operation firsthand. President J. Allan Boyle of the Canadian Bankers' Association, which sponsored the conference, said the banks' increased efforts to serve the farm community had shown concrete results.

He told the conference that in 1960, for every $100 of credit that the farming community required in its operations, about $40 was supplied by the banks.

In 1970, the banks supplied

$55 of every $100 required and this year they will supply nearly $65 of every $100, Mr. Boyle said.

Influx of U.S. workers at Petrosar site worries reps

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Tradesmen from the United States are helping to build the world-scale petrochemical refinery of Petrosar Ltd., an influx that may reach 2,000 before the project is completed in 1977.

It worries company and trade union officials who anticipate they will be able to maintain labor requirements, although not solely from the Canadian work force.

"A big concern is labor supply, both in quantity and mix," John Sheehan, Petrosar vice-president, said during a recent tour of the 800-acre plant site, four miles south of here.

"There are workers from the U.S. coming in now and there will be more."

While the current work force at Petrosar is about 2,000, both company and union officials are vague on the number of Americans involved.

Bruce Blackwell, president of the Sarnia Trade and Labor Council, estimates the Americans, all skilled tradesmen, at about 150.

COUNCIL WIELDS POWER

His council, working with Canada Manpower, approves all workers for the construction, domestic and foreign.

"We have permission to bring in 1,100 U.S. tradesmen if there is a shortfall of workers," Mr. Blackwell said.

"But no American workmen will be brought in until we've exhausted the Canadian supply."

His office has been under severe pressure from workers in adjoining Michigan State, which has a serious unemployment problem.

"We've been bombarded with requests from the other side (Michigan). You just wouldn't believe it."

"If we're going to have any problems at all, it will be next summer," Mr. Blackwell said, referring to the peak construction period of June, July and August.

NEED 7,000 WORKERS

Estimates are that a work force of 7,000 will be required to complete all industrial projects in the "chemical valley." Others include the $150-million polyethylene plant of Union Carbide of Canada Ltd., a $165-million extension of the Shell Canada Ltd. aromatic plant, and the $25-million expansion program of Du Pont of Canada Ltd.

All these plants will obtain their feed stock from Petrosar which will have invested more than $450 million when the refinery is in operation in two years. Both Du Pont and Union Carbide each has a 20-per-cent interest in Petrosar, which will produce one billion pounds of ethylene a year, plus other petrochemicals and fuels.

Petrochemicals are the basic stocks for thousands of consumer products, including paints, plastics, nylons, pantyhose, toys, carpet fibres, chewing gum, inner tubes and detergents.

Meanwhile, Mr. Sheehan said 15 per cent of the construction of the Petrosar refinery has been completed and $150 million spent so far, which includes financing of 92 per cent of purchases for the project.

"We expect to be fully on stream by May of 1977."

Canadian business roundup

Last month, Bricklin Canada Ltd., of Saint John, N.B., makers of the controversial gullwinged sports car, was placed in receivership. So far, negotiations to revive it have not been successful.

And in Dartmouth, N.S., Acadian Wholesalers was placed into receivership Tuesday while its financial structure is rearranged.

In other economic developments Tuesday: —Metropolitan Trust Co. announced a new type of residential mortgage for a two-year term, with an interest rate of 11.5 per cent, compared with 12 per cent for five-years, now common.

—Bell Canada President A. Jean de Grandpre told the Canadian Transport Commission that the company will seek further increases as soon as possible even if the commission approves all of the $102 million a year in higher rates now being sought.

—A National Energy Board hearing in Ottawa on applications for a northern pipeline adjourned for one more day to give more time to check on the objections to Marshall Crowe taking part in the hearings.

—The royal commission into the concentration of corporate power postponed until next year a hearing in Halifax scheduled for Nov. 7 because no briefs from interested parties had been filed from the Maritimes.

—Premier Allan Blakeney said Saskatchewan is planning a change in its uranium resource taxation. Government and industry spokesmen said the legislation would be similar to the contentious potash reserve tax.

—Essex International of Canada Ltd. of Ingersoll, Ont., which produces wire assembly for Ford Pintos, is closing Dec. 19, putting 150 employees out of work. In Chatham, Ont., International Harvester Co. announced another 120 workers may be laid off soon, to go with 300 released earlier.

GM earnings up, Chrysler down

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors' earnings of $243 million in the third quarter were nearly 15 times higher than disastrous year-ago levels, marking one of the most impressive financial turnarounds in the auto giant's history.

At the same time, a still-struggling Chrysler Corp., in part a victim like the other U.S. auto-makers to GM's renewed strength in the market, announced Tuesday a record third-quarter loss of $79 million. It was the fifth consecutive loss period for the No. 3 United States car company and pushed its losses since the summer of 1974 to a record $313 million.

Ford Motor Co. releases its third-quarter results on Thursday.

GM, the world's largest automaker, also reported Tuesday it had record sales of $8.3 billion in the July-September period, up 20 per cent from the same 1974 period.

A year ago, GM—hardest hit of the U.S. auto-makers by the industry-wide sales slump—turned a meagre profit of $16.7 million, or five cents a share, its worst return for a non-strike year since 1940.

GM's latest earnings of 84 cents a share were the fourth highest for the period since the Second World War and approached GM's third-quarter record of $267 million set in 1973.

Analysts credited the firm's rapid recovery to an efficient cost-cutting program, including the layoff of thousands of workers, and greater strength in the small-car market due to an unprecedented shift away from big-car production.

Sweetsburg Court

SWEETSBURG WARD (JM) — Three young Vermont men were given three days in jail to ponder the results of a qualified robbery on the Eastern Townships Autoroute, April 25, 1975.

Nelson Mayhew and Donald Bonneau, both of North Troy, and Gerry Simon, Jay, earlier pleaded guilty to charges of robbery with violence on the person of Gerald Lamothe when his wallet, credit cards and watch were stolen.

Donald Bissonnette, who representing the young men, said they were drunk when the crime was committed and they had not, in fact, employed real violence. He told Judge Bernard Legare they had behaved since they were freed on $700 cash bond, had obtained employment, and suggested they be given a suspended sentence and placed on probation.

Crown prosecutor Claude Noiseux told the bench he had met with their parents and had been assured their behaviour had been without reproach since the event. He told the court probation would be useless, however, suggested they be released with the condition they be forbidden to enter Canada for a period of five years.

"The fact they are here today speaks in their favor," Mr. Noiseux said.

Judge Legare told the young men they were charged with a crime punishable by life imprisonment. "You were in a foreign country and possibly thought you could create more fuss than if you were at home. I delayed your sentences to study your behavior."

However, I wonder what you would face if you were charged with a similar crime in your country. You will be detained until after lunch to allow me to talk with your parents."

Following the luncheon break Crown prosecutor Noiseux told the judge he had had time to study the depositions of the young men, the arresting officer and the victim. "Quite frankly it's a borderline case between common assault and assault with violence. I leave any sentence to the discretion of the court."

Mr. Bissonnette said they were victims of their own inexperience and suggested they be sentenced to time served.

Judge Legare said: "I have weighed the importance of the facts in a case where maximum punishment is life imprisonment. I must react to the protection of law and order. Fortunately you have no prior records and I must add your parents were your most eloquent attorneys. I would have imposed a much heavier sentence if I had not heard them."

"Had you been Canadian citizens it would have been much easier. I cannot impose probation conditions as my mandate ends at the international boundary. You are all working, and considering time spent prior to obtaining bond, you are sentenced to three days."

Judge Legare then placed Violet Townsend on one year's probation. Miss Townsend, formerly of Stanbridge East, had pleaded guilty to two counts of attempted fraud on the Bedford and Frelighsburg branches of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Don Bissonnette, who acted for the accused, told Judge Legare his client had returned to her parents in Ontario where she was awaiting birth of a child.

Judge Legare noted the crown had originally wanted her to return home then handed down the suspended sentence considering she had no prior record.

Trial in the case of Gilbert Rondeau was adjourned, for the form, to November 10. Judge Legare told the crown and defence he had heard the preliminary hearing when Mr. Rondeau was charged with assault on a peace officer in the performance of his duties.

He then noted Judge Guy Genest had researched the plaintiff's case thus would not be able to hear the case. Crown prosecutor Noiseux then said he had been informed Judge Normandin would not hear the case. "I guess we'll have to get an outside judge," Mr. Noiseux said.

Mr. Rondeau is the Creditiste MP for Shefford.

+++ Preliminary hearing in the case of Maurice Seguin was fixed to November 5 at 2 p.m. Mr. Seguin is charged with non-capital murder on the person of Mrs. Mireille Fortin. Mrs. Fortin was shot in the neck at close range by a small calibre pistol at her home in the Township of Granby, July 31, 1975.

Mrs. Fortin died at the Sherbrooke University Medical Centre earlier this month. Mr. Seguin is being detained under guard at the St. Vincent de Paul Hospital, Sherbrooke.

+++ Gaston Duchaine and Richard Robitaille, both of Waterloo, changed their options and pleaded guilty to counts of violation of a parole order.

Crown prosecutor Noiseux reminded Judge Legare they had been released following arraignment on a charge of qualified robbery and one of the conditions imposed was they be at their domiciles between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.

"One was seen on the streets at 2:30 a.m. and the other at 4 a.m. If they don't respect conditions imposed by the court why should they be allowed their freedom?"

Gilles Poussard, Legal Aid Office, told the court it was hard on young men to go to bed at such an early hour. "If they had been found in possession of weapons it would have indicated they were about to commit a criminal act. They told me they met with friends and the hours just slipped by."

Mr. Poussard then suggested new conditions imposed by Judge Legare be continued pending their trial, which is fixed, pro forma, to January 12, 1976, be continued. They have both found employment since they were arraigned before Judge Normandin on breach of parole," Mr. Poussard concluded.

Judge Legare remarked there was intent when they violated the parole conditions. He then sentenced them to 10 days in jail to be served from Saturdays at 6 p.m. until Sunday at 4 p.m.

+++ Jean Guy Veilleux pleaded guilty to a charge of having been illegally at large from the Cowansville Institution. Crown prosecutor Noiseux said the accused had been granted a pass August 12 and was eventually apprehended in Megantic after the car he was driving struck a child.

Jean Riou, Legal Aid Office, told the bench the charges in Megantic were unrelated to the accusation his client had pleaded guilty to. "He is serving four and a half years for armed robbery and he stands to lose 14 months statutory remand as a result of this lapse," Mr. Riou said.

Judge Legare sentenced Veilleux to 15 days additional to any term he may currently be serving.

+++ Edouard Casavant, Cowansville, pleaded guilty to a charge of possession of 340 grams of cannabis resin, in Cowansville, September 30, 1970. Special prosecutor Robert Brisebois told the court he was proceeding by virtue of summary conviction, and asked for the minimum fine of $50 and costs.

Jean Riou told the bench his client had not used "funny weeds" for five years and suggested he be granted an unconditional release by virtue of article 662-1 of the criminal code.

Judge Legare concurred with the suggestion of the defence.

+++ Colette Jalbert, Granby, who earlier pleaded guilty to two counts of breaking and entering dwellings and to four counts of fraud, saw her sentence adjourned to October 11, 1976.

Woman seeking Stanstead council seat

By IVY HATCH
(Record Correspondent)

STANSTEAD — At the Stanstead Municipal nominations held Sunday there were two candidates for Seat Two, when it was announced that Roger Goodsell did not wish to seek reelection.

This being Women's Lib year, many Stanstead people felt this was the year to nominate a woman to sit on council, and the nomination papers for Miss Claire Cournoyer were presented. It was noted that her papers carried the signatures of several men as well as women.

Other Stanstead people brought in the name of Mr. Maxime Doyon. Results will come election day, Sunday, Nov. 2. Voters of the municipality will decide which one will be on the council at the regular meeting the evening of Nov. 3.

Miss Cournoyer began her life on a farm in Georgeville, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Antoine Cournoyer. When about 13 years of age she came with her parents to a farm in Stanstead East and later to the Village of Stanstead to reside. She graduated from the Ursuline Convent, Stanstead, and is perfectly bilingual in French and English.

Following graduation she was employed for 24 years as secretary for the late James Downing in the Stanstead County Registry Office in Stanstead. Following his death, Miss Cournoyer, so familiar with the work carried on the office duties, was appointed in 1971 as registrar to replace the late Mr. Downing.

As the county continues to grow in these areas Miss Cournoyer approached the Stanstead County Council to have the registry office expanded. They, and the government department recognizing the need, complied with her request and today it is a very modern and up-to-date office. Miss Cournoyer has two employees under her in the office.

Miss Cournoyer has travelled in Canada, the United States and five countries in Europe. She is an active member of the Stanstead Historical Society, a member of the Ursuline convent Alumnae and of the Stanstead Branch of the Cercle de fermiers.

An efficient business woman, she and many of her friends feel this Women's Lib year is the time to choose to enter politics at the municipal level.

Mr. Doyon is a native of Stanstead. He was educated at Sacred Heart School in Stanstead and graduated from St. Francois School in Sherbrooke. For a few months he was employed at the Banque Canadienne Nationale in Sherbrooke. Then with an opening for a postal clerk at the Rock Island Post office, he applied and was given the job. In 1968 he was promoted to Past Master.

Mr. Doyon was co-founder of the Chamber of Commerce here at the Border and served four years as secretary. Interested in sports, he is the president of the sports complex project. "I am interested in politics," he said, "and this is why I gave permission for my name to stand as a nominee for Seat No. 2 on the Stanstead Council. I plan to give Miss Cournoyer a good fight."

All echo the old saying, "May the best one win" and this will be made known by the vote of the public on Nov. 2 when the poll closes at 6 p.m. in the Sacred Heart School.

There will be two polls there and voting starts at 8 a.m. Mrs. Therese Winter is election president. She will be assisted by Mrs. Florence Dubois, Mrs. Irene Theberge and Mrs. Muriel Curtis as secretaries.

This is not the first time a woman has sought a seat on the Stanstead Council. January 11, 1956 Miss Catherine MacKenzie was elected by a majority election vote. She served as chairman for the welfare committee and was assistant to Jean Beasse on finance.

IN THE RUNNING — Miss Claire Cournoyer is running for Seat two in Stanstead against Maxime Doyon.

Quebec Young Farmers to hold annual meeting

LENNOXVILLE (BP) — The Quebec Young Farmers Association will hold their annual provincial meeting this weekend at the elementary school here.

Registration will take place at 9 a.m. Saturday at L.E.S., followed by a morning assembly. A guest speaker will address the gathering and reports will be read during the afternoon. A 6 p.m. banquet will follow and a dance will be held in the evening. Sunday morning, elections for the new executive will take place and the weekend's program will close Sunday noon.

Approximately 60 youths from the Chateaugay Valley region, Montreal and the Eastern Townships are expected to attend.

City aided by media during postal strike

SHERBROOKE — Without disturbing the whole municipal administration, the postal strike has actually modified the administrative procedure little in regards to adoption of municipal by-laws.

In effect, the City of Sherbrooke, following the Towns and Cities Act, should officially announce by the means of newspapers to all the citizens of a zone to be affected by the adoption of a new by-law.

Being presently impossible to send written notices by mail and with the citizens being already used to such a fashion, the city fears that the residents will neglect to consult their newspapers for the public notices that it is putting in the newspapers to this effect.

Therefore, in the coming days there will be three notices placed informing the population of any meetings being held for the approval of proprietors concerning certain by-laws that the city desires to put into force.

UCW meeting

NORTH HATLEY — The United Church Women met for the October meeting at the Community Hall, with twelve members and one guest present.

The U.C.W. Purpose and Family Creed were repeated in unison; Mrs. R. Olson presided.

A Thanksgiving worship service, taken from Happenings was conducted by Mrs. R. Allworth, Scripture lesson, Luke 19, 11-27. The service closed with prayer, followed by a thank-offering.

For the programme, Mrs. C. Smith read an article written by Leonard Swialer, editor of Journal of Ecumenical Studies, the topic being, Jesus was a Feminist. It proved interesting and timely, and caused quite a discussion.

Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved and Mrs. C.

Powers gave the financial report.

Miss E. Morissette had sent a parcel to Angola and it was moved that the bill for postage be paid; no more parcels will be sent until further notice from those concerned.

Mrs. Laird reported that several cards had been sent during July and August and also read two thank-you notes, one from our forgotten patient, Miss Blanche.

Mrs. W. Caunter, who sends church bulletins to shut-ins or those unable to attend, reported 186 were sent since April. The group feels that this is a worthy cause and provided more money for stamps.

Mrs. Olson read a statement of expenses, etc., from the Community Club, giving an idea of what it costs to carry on. The question as to whether the Antique Show should be continued was discussed and the group hopes that it will, and offered to help as usual.

Eight more bread baskets will be bought for the Hall. Mrs. Allworth gave a report on the In Memoriam Fund.

Mrs. Smith will remember

Miss Blanche this month. Mrs. M. Percy and Mrs. Allworth will be hostesses at the Connaught Home.

The meeting adjourned, and tea was served by the hostess, Miss Ruth Stoddard. Stoddard.

City advises on paying bills

SHERBROOKE — During the current postal strike, the City of Sherbrooke is asking taxpayers to pay their bills directly to the city hall between 9:30 a.m. and 4 p.m., or at any bank or caisse populaire in the city.

The city also calls upon the users of Hydro Sherbrooke to follow this rule when their accounts are due. It has been concluded that the postal strike is not a valid reason for avoiding to pay due bills to the city and the population must pay their bills on time to continue receiving these services.

Committee proposes St. Elie candidates

ST. ELIE (BP) — Four of seven positions on the St. Elie municipal council go up for grabs this Sunday, Nov. 2, and a nominating group has proposed candidates who they hope can make the unsatisfied people satisfied if they are elected.

First, though, the rundown on who is running for the positions. For mayor, Gerald Dion is trying for another term against present alderman Andre Roy. Seat 1, left open by Mr. Roy, has Andre Beaudry and Jean-Marie Bergeron opposing each other. In seat 4, current alderman Jean-Claude Sevigny is being challenged by Jean-Yves Paquin. Fred Richardson, incumbent for Seat 6, has Paulette Alberts battling him. Seats 2, 3 and 5 don't come up for election until next year.

The foursome put to the population of St. Elie by the nominating committee are incumbents Gerald Dion and Jean-Claude Sevigny while Andre Beaudry and Paulette Alberts are running for the first time.

The committee states that the former council made taxpayers unsatisfied "by the way the decisions were made, by the way the grave failures of some of the councillors were harmful for the municipality."

The committee proposes the candidacy of four persons, with four different personalities, free, without any attachment; they will not have to hold all kinds of promises right after the election. And of course, their competence and qualifications would help them administer the municipality in a realistic and honest way.

Gerald Dion is a democratic man and a democratic mayor. He always listened to his fellow citizens and gave a lot of time and work to bring home many grants to help in the development of the town, which in turn helped to keep tax bills as low as possible.

Paulette Alberts will provide the support and ideas of the feminine population. She has worked on the school committee for many years and was president of it for two years. She has proved her innate understanding for the practical side of community concerns and knows the population's rights and is able to fight for them.

Jean-Claude Sevigny is an administrator who has proved his ability. His competence has been an important, almost indispensable part of the council and as the municipality grows, he is the man able to plan its expansion and provide the municipality with a balanced budget.

Andre Beaudry is a dynamic young man, being a lawyer and teacher in law and economics. He would be a great help in all legal questions of municipality life, especially if the town has to face the thorny problem of annexation with Sherbrooke, either of services or properties.

A vote on Nov. 2 for these four candidates, is a vote for the population, the press release concluded.

Police investigate school theft

LENNOXVILLE (GA) — Thieves netted some estimated $7,000 worth of electronic office equipment after breaking into the Eastern Township Regional School Board offices on Queen St., here over the weekend, according to Clarence D. Kendall, director of educational services.

According to Mr. Kendall, the thieves gained access to the building after forcing a catch on one of the windows. Taken were desk calculators, dictaphones, a color TV set, a video tape recorder and some pocket dictaphone recorders. Although nothing was reported missing a cabinet door and desk drawer were broken during the break-in which was discovered Monday morning.

The incident is being investigated by the Lennoxville Police department.

A Report Ignored

The Economic Council of Canada made public on July 10 a report, based on three years of study, of a free trade strategy for Canada. This was dismissed, promptly and in splendidly cavalier fashion, by Alastair Gillespie, the minister responsible for charting Canadian trade policies. Mr. Gillespie did not offer a detailed criticism comparable to that voiced at weekend in Vancouver by his former colleague in cabinet, Herb Gray. That was scarcely to be expected since, as he admitted, he had not read the report which he rejected. But he did speak of the "practicalities of life" and wondered "if they've really looked at the reality of the existing world."

There is rather more reason to suspect that the Economic Council, in inviting public debate, gave inadequate recognition to the realities of Ottawa and to the practicalities as perceived by highly paid officials in a number of key departments. One of these realities is that the government now sees itself as the increasingly activist partner of business (when it is not directing or leading business). It spends countless millions on planning — countless more on subsidies to bring industries into existence or to assist them in expanding, modernizing and diversifying. It attaches great importance to regional development which is not only of social but also of high political significance. It is constantly assuming new powers, unknown to its predecessors, and developing ever more varied programs. Mr. Gillespie, for example, is not merely minister of trade and commerce — he is also the supreme patron of industry which acquired its own department in the 1960s.

In these circumstances it is perhaps not too surprising that the government has made no move to refer an obviously important report to any committee or study. If there is to be a debate, it will develop from citizen interest in the subject — not from ministerial prompting. The government, plainly, has no intention of being diverted by the council from its own ideas of orderly progress. For while it may be true, as Dr. Raynald and his colleagues maintain, that free trade would make us richer, it would also make us less controllable by a benefactor-government and, in the process, render obsolete a good many subsidy-dispensing government jobs. These, from an Ottawa standpoint, are among the realities, and the rubs.

Mr. Gillespie may have seemed overly impatient in his desire to consign the report to the nearest pigeon-hole, but that is its probable destination. In the result we may be a bit poorer than the council thinks necessary but at least we will have, and must somehow afford, protective, nursemaid government on the ever-increasing scale that is deemed good for us in Ottawa.

Beirut a leaderless patchwork of enclaves

BEIRUT (AP) — Seven months of civil war have turned Beirut into a leaderless patchwork of religious enclaves, divided by hatred and heavily-armed street gangs.

Premier Rashid Karami's government now exercises tenuous sovereignty over only a strip of seashore on the southern edge of the Lebanese capital and a European quarter called Hamra, where the safe zone is shrinking.

The sovereigns in most of this embattled city of 1.5 million — half Lebanon's population — are young men, Moslems and Christians with guns and grenades, directed by older men motivated by fear, hatred, revenge and a desire for power.

Lebanon's elected leaders move under armed guard from conference to discussion to conference, unable to do anything beyond forming committees.

A frequent participant in their parleys is a man who, although not elected to any Lebanese office, is one of the most powerful men in the country. He is Yasser Arafat, head of the Palestinian guerrilla movement that is the best-armed single force in Lebanon.

Arafat's presence underlines the non-Lebanese leaven that has fermented homegrown religious enmity and a class struggle into an irreconcilable confusion of causes.

The confusion also has been whipped up by competing foreign forces for whom Beirut has become a proxy battleground and a site for the next step in the "Arab revolution."

Beirut is full of reports that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi, the Baathists of Iraq or the Syrian Baathists are behind the clashes, that they are part of a master plan to spread socialist Arab rule.

But most informed diplomats and observers — and those who are usually best informed admit they are confused — believe the master-plan theory reflects the Arab penchant for intrigue.

The most acceptable explanation of why Lebanon exploded, they say, is that all the hate and competing causes were a tinderbox into which a spark flew. A pair of young Iraqi Moslems tried to pick up a Lebanese Christian girl, and a gang from the 6,000-man militia maintained by the Christian Phalangist Party beat them up. HATE ISRAEL.

Most of Lebanon's 1.8 million Moslems share the Palestinians' hatred of Israel and would like to see Lebanon identify more strongly with the Arab "confrontation" states.

The 1.2 million Christians — a majority 30 years ago but now only 40 per cent of the population — are fighting to retain the 1943 religious-political formula that gives them the presidency, a majority in parliament and command of the armed forces.

They want the Palestinian guerrillas shackled, fearing that their operations against Israel will end in a war between Israel and Lebanon. And they want to restore Lebanon's previous role as a European-oriented entrance to the Arab world, where business and money can move back and forth between the cities of Europe and the United States and the oil countries of the Persian Gulf.

The Christians, better educated and better entrenched in the upper classes, profited most from that traffic.

For the Moslems, the idea of "Arab revolution" or "Socialist revolution" sounds like an avenue to a bigger share of the country's wealth.

Israel watching events in Lebanon

TEL AVIV (AP) — Once again turmoil in the Arab world — this time in Lebanon — is drawing worried attention from neighboring Israel, which says its own security might hinge on the outcome.

"Lebanon is in a process of destruction before our very eyes," Defence Minister Shimon Peres said on an inspection tour this week of the Israeli-Lebanese border.

"Lebanon's fate now hangs in the balance, and its independence is becoming a matter of doubt. Israel is carefully following events in Lebanon, where every internal change may be of significance for us."

The Israeli government has threatened to send its own troops into Lebanon if other Arab countries, especially Syria, intervene. However, military sources say no special alert has been ordered on the Lebanese frontier.

Israel is concerned the scales of power in Lebanon might be tipped from the Christians to the Moslems, who might then lead their country into an active role in any new Arab-Israeli war. Although Lebanon is the largest base for Palestinian guerrilla operations, its Christian-led army has not fought in any of the four Arab-Israeli wars.

When King Hussein's army fought a civil war in 1970 to drive the guerrillas out of Jordan, Israeli tanks lined the border ready to save Hussein's regime if the guerrillas got the upper hand.

GAINED SOME PEACE

The expulsion of the guerrillas from Jordan provided nearly two years of relative quiet for Israel, until the guerrillas reorganized in Lebanon.

The guerrillas' preoccupation with the Lebanese crisis has halted their raids into Israel for the last two months.

Israeli leaders express shock at the refusal of Western governments to aid the Lebanese Christians. They compare this indifference with the Western world's failure to stop Hitler's extermination of European Jews.

Canada opposed in bid for summit spot

LONDON (CP) — Canadian diplomats are meeting stiff French opposition in their campaign for a place at a big-power economic summit meeting in France next month.

Canada has won public backing from U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger for participation at the conference, to which the United States, Britain, West Germany, Japan and Italy have also been invited by French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing.

While in Britain last week, Allan MacEachen, Canadian external affairs minister, said British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan supports the Canadian cause. He said West Germany is also sympathetic.

But the French government, host for the mid-November summit, is adamant.

"Canada is not invited," a French Embassy official here said Tuesday. And there was no sign Canada would be invited.

The heads-of-government meeting is to deal with such issues as trade, monetary affairs and East-West relations.

Diplomatic sources offer various reasons for the dispute over seating at the conference, originally suggested by Giscard d'Estaing as a way for the big Western industrial countries to plot their economic strategies together.

WANTS FIXED RATES

Some say France fears Canada will side with Washington in an argument over future international monetary policy.

France wants a return by the major trading nations to some form of fixed currency exchange rates. The U.S., along with Canada and others, prefers a system of flexible rates.

Sources also say France feels that an invitation to Canada might hurt relations within the nine-country European Economic Community (EEC).

Record Yesteryears
45 Years Ago

NEW YORK — Discovery of a new and effective treatment for infectious diseases, introduction into diseased persons of a parasite that literally eats the disease germs has been reported to the Academy of Medicine.

Discoverer of the new treatment is Dr. Felix D'Herelle, professor of bacteriology at Yale, who has been experimenting with the treatment for many years.

The germ-eaters are known as bacteriophage and are found in patients convalescent from disease.

He treated 10,000 cases of dysentery in Brazil and had only two failures, Dr. D'Herelle said. Four patients in Egypt suffering from bubonic plague were cured by injection of the bacteriophage into the swellings. In India, three years ago, he treated Asiatic cholera by method and despite adverse conditions had a mortality rate of only 8.1 per cent among his patients, while the general mortality rate from the disease was 629.

"It is a specific treatment par excellence," Dr. D'Herelle said.

Gas Shortage Is Hoax

WASHINGTON — The federal government is conspiring with the oil and gas interests to hit the American people with another shortage this winter. This time it will be a shortage of natural gas.

Enough natural gas is available, according to congressional experts, to heat homes and run factories. It simply isn't being delivered. The industry is holding out for higher prices, the experts charge.

The Federal Power Commission, which is supposed to protect the public from price gouging, allegedly is letting the oil and gas barons get away with it. A confidential memo, prepared by the staff of the House Energy Subcommittee, details how the conspiracy works to curtail the flow of gas to the consumers.

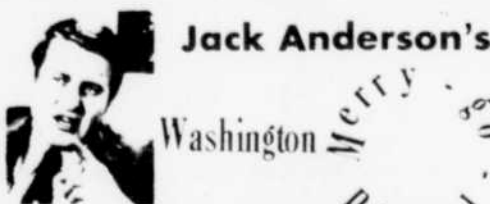

Stated simply, the producers contracted to deliver more gas to the pipelines than is coming through. The memo charges that a staggering 31 per cent of the gas promised to the pipelines under contract isn't being delivered.

The memo cites Transco, a major East Coast pipeline, as an example. "Only about one-third of the producers are delivering the minimum quantities," which the contracts call for. This has forced Transco, in turn, to curtail its supply to consumers.

Nationwide, the curtailments are similar. "There is little doubt that the failure to deliver under these contracts is the major cause for the shortage," the memo states.

The congressional experts reason that the producers would never have signed the contracts in the first place if the gas weren't available. At the time the contracts were executed, the producers knew how large their gas reserves were. They would never have agreed to deliver more gas than they could produce, the experts conclude.

In the opinion of its own lawyers, the Federal Power Commission has the legal authority to enforce the contracts and to make the gas producers deliver. Yet the reluctant regulators have taken no action.

The House investigators think they know why.

The oil and gas profiteers want to be free to raise prices. President Ford and the FPC are willing to let them have higher prices as an incentive to develop more gas.

"The objective of significantly higher prices through deregulation is probably the key factor why we have not had an active pursuit by the FPC with regard to these nonproductive, but dedicated, reserves," declares the memo.

The gas producers claim, of course, there are valid reasons why they aren't delivering on the contracts. But the memo points out that the amount of withheld gas has increased each year since deregulation became a possibility. The pattern suggests that the cutbacks have been arbitrary. The producers are holding out, the experts think, for deregulation and higher prices.

"It is clear that until speculative anticipations are removed," states the memo, "producers will withhold supplies." These "speculative anticipations," of course, are the higher prices that the producers expect deregulation to bring.

Congress is now considering lifting the price controls on interstate natural gas. This would cut the ropes on the gas balloon and cause the price of natural gas to shoot up 450 per cent, according to an estimate by the industry itself.

The impact on the consumers — and the economy as a whole — would be devastating. Most estimates place the cost of deregulation between $9 billion and $11 billion.

Crime Story: We have warned in the past that the Justice Department is jeopardizing its ability to crack organized crime cases by its cavalier treatment of informers.

We have cited Mafia figures who risked their lives to testify for the government. The Justice Department, after providing them with new identities, quickly tired of them and abandoned them.

The latest complaint came from underworld informer Ron Schoenneman who told us the Justice Department was about to break certain promises he claimed were made to him when he became a state witness three years ago.

His testimony led to 32 convictions of organized crime figures, including the notorious mobster Carmen Bastione. Schoenneman also helped the FBI recover $10 million worth of stolen stock certificates.

Yet despite this cooperation, he was told his wife and six children probably would be left without subsistence when he began serving his 30-month prison sentence this month.

He telephoned Gerald Shur, the attorney in charge of the Intelligence Unit, and complained that the Justice Department had a moral, if not a legal, "obligation not to let seven people be thrown out in the street."

"You hit a key word — legally," said Shur. "The Department of Justice cannot spend money it is not legally authorized to spend. I suppose," he added, "all this could have been avoided had you never committed the crime at all."

"But here is an individual who of his own volition decided to get out of organized crime, picked up the phone — wasn't caught — and gave the government approximately 30 to 32 convictions," pleaded the ex-mobster.

Over Shur's objections, the Schoenneman family finally was granted subsistence after repeated inquiries from our office.

Edmonton still counts bingo as a pretty big business

EDMONTON (CP) — Despite years of trying to live down a reputation as a town where bingo is the hottest form of action around, Edmonton still counts bingo as pretty big business.

A little too big, the Alberta government has decided.

Noting with concern a steady increase in the number of big-time, high-jackpot bingo operations around the city, the attorney-general's department announced in mid-September it plans to amend its licensing policy to restrict the game to the neighborhood level.

The announcement followed rejection of a license application by an organization made up of 20 community leagues that had proposed to stage nightly games in a renovated downtown warehouse with a seating capacity of 1,100.

John Lee, a Crown counsel with the attorney-general's department, said the new policy is not meant to reflect on the integrity of the organization behind that particular proposal, but a general and growing concern over the "commercial" aspects of the city's bingo scene.

CONCERN OVER DETAILS

He said the department is particularly concerned over details such as what proportion of the proceeds actually filters down to the sponsoring charity, and to what extent the big bingo halls draw players away from smaller service clubs and individual community leagues.

The department's feeling, said Mr. Lee, is that bingo "should be a neighborly and social activity, conducted for moderate prizes, where there is no need for commercial exploitation."

He said the operations of the city's five or six large bingo halls would be reviewed when their licences come up for renewal at the end of the year.

The new policy would also effect Edmonton's Kin-Games Bingo, a weekly television bingo sponsored by the local Kinsmen organization in support of the 1978 Commonwealth Games.

"We'll have to go into the commercial question," said Mr. Lee, who said that would likely involve seeing how much of the proceeds go toward paying for air time.

LEAGUES DISAPPOINTED

Arlene Meldrum, president of the Federation of Community Leagues, said the leagues that had put forward the warehouse proposal were "extremely disappointed and disheartened" by the government's decision.

Under that particular proposal, she said, 68 per cent of the proceeds would have gone toward prizes, 12 per cent toward overhead and the remainder to the sponsoring organizations.

Rather than feeling big bingos detract from individual operations, most community leagues feel the only way they can profit is by banding together to make their operations more competitive, said Mrs. Meldrum.

"Right now, there is an unfairness that exists because some of the leagues can have the huge set-ups and others can't," she said. "Either they should all be closed down or some guidelines established which they should have to meet."

BLAMES PLAYERS

"It's the people who make the prizes big, not us," said Doug Robbins, president of the New Rainbow Bingo Association, a group of 10 community leagues and service clubs that rent a 700-seat ballroom for three nights of bingo a week.

"When you see the newspaper and all the bingo ads, I can see it's getting out of hand," said Mr. Robbins, who added he would have no objection to government guidelines on the operation of bingo halls.

At the Rainbow, he said, 68 per cent of the take goes toward prizes—which range as high as $3,000—with about 10 per cent to cover the $325 nightly rental and services of four salaried employees and about 20 per cent left for the sponsoring association.

The prospect of limiting large bingo operations also raises the dander of the Rainbow's patrons, many nightly regulars and most senior citizens who say bingo is one of the few forms of recreation they can afford.

"Why don't they clamp down on horseracing before they do things to bingo halls?" asked Josephine Tomashabsky, a regular player since 1950.

"If they took bingo away, there'd be nothing left for me to do," said Earl Shook, a regular player since the Depression. He spends about $30 a day on bingo—encouraged by a $10,000 jackpot win a few months back.

"I don't know what I'd do if I didn't play bingo," agreed Victoria Weiguz. "I don't drink after all, and I certainly would never go to Las Vegas. "The old ladies will strike for sure if they shut down the Rainbow."

Student exchanges make bilingualism and biculturalism fun

OTTAWA (CP) — Ever since the days of Wolfe and Montcalm Canadians have skirmished with one another over language and culture. Some people, however, have found that bilingualism and biculturalism can be fun.

Last summer 200 students from the Ottawa area, aged 13 to 18, were "twinning" with 200 students from Quebec City to learn what a second culture is all about. Each spent two weeks as a member of his "twin's" family trying to speak the second language and to cope with the other culture.

The exchange program was begun last January by a bilingual exchange secretariat, organized by five Ottawa-area school boards and the National Capital Commission.

The executive secretary, Sandy MacKay, said he feels they have created "the ideal second-language learning program." The idea was to create a peer learning situation. Since each student was an expert in his own language, he was the best teacher.

TWIN TEACHERS

French teachers from Ontario and English teachers from Quebec, who were also twinned, each took charge of one group of six pairs of "twins." Before each day's activities the students studied vocabulary and grammar in the second language. Then they practised what they learned on their "twins."

Such activities as bicycle rallies, camping trips, tours and ordinary home life were conducted in the second language.

One teacher said there is no comparison between the exchange program and the classroom. "It's 24 hours a day. They have to communicate all the time. They learn more in one month than in the whole school year."

A student observed: "I never spoke a word of French in French class. There were 40 kids in the class and the teacher never got around to the back of the room."

Mr. MacKay said many cultural attitudes changed.

UNLEARN MUCH

One participant wrote back to say: "I did much unlearning."

"My French twin's family did not have 10 kids. They were not deeply religious. His father was not a lumberjack... and there were no more red-hot lovers among the French than there were among the English."

A Quebec student wrote: "The English aren't as stupid as they're made out to be... 'Les frogs' and 'les blocs' can get along well together."

"I just couldn't believe that you could select at random such compatible children," one mother said. "I have absolutely no suggestions for change, and that's unusual."

Of a total cost of $300 a student, the students themselves had to pay only $70 each. The rest came from the secretariat.

The Bilingual Exchange Secretariat also co-ordinates winter programs for school-age children. The younger Ottawa children exchange with school groups in Hull across the Ottawa River. The older ones have individual programs in cities further afield.

Twelve hundred students took part in the 1975 winter program between January and June.

The Great Escape named as one of Canada's best restaurants by magazine

EDMONTON (CP) — Two Edmonton chefs and a partner trained in the cooking arts in France have taken over operation of The Great Escape, a restaurant described by Cosmopolitan magazine as one of the 10 best in Canada.

Claude Buzon, Ron Kinnick and George Batt stepped in to prevent the five-year-old restaurant from being converted into a fast-food or specialty operation by other prospective buyers.

The $100,000 purchase price included the land and building, with its impressive collection of antiques and paintings, and the unique recipes of the two men who launched the enterprise—Peter Priestly and Alan Buzon.

All three of the new owners are capable of taking over in the kitchen, but it is the German-born Batt who usually shops for food and prepares it in the restaurant's four microwave ovens.

Kinnick, born in Winnipeg of Polish parents, and Buzon, born in France and trained in food preparation there, wait on the dozen or so tables that accommodate a maximum 40 diners.

CONTINUE TRADITION

The new partners are determined to continue a Great Escape tradition of serving seven or eight fresh vegetables with each main course.

Diners are given a choice of three dishes which are changed weekly and may include beef stroganoff made from filet mignon, fresh baked trout, roast duck or pheasant. A special favorite of regulars is stuffed Bavarian pork ribs.

Under Priestly and Blue The Great Escape charged a flat $18 a plate for 2½ hours of dining and called patrons a day or two prior to their evening out to confirm the reservation.

Cosmopolitan magazine, in its September issue, urged its readers to "make reservations at one of Canada's 10 best restaurants, the small but superb Great Escape."

Young-at-Heart meet

WATERLOO — The Oct. meeting of the Young at Heart Group met on Mon., Oct. 20 at the Legion Hall with twenty-two being present.

Mrs. M. Bowering presided for a short business meeting.

No financial report was given due to the absence of Sec. Treas. George Hogan. It was decided to remember Mrs. Alberta Sanborn, a former member who is now at Hillside Hospital, with birthday cards for her 89th birthday on Oct. 22nd.

It was also decided to change the day of the meeting to the second Monday instead of the third, also to have lunch at 12:30 p.m. instead of late afternoon.

Cards were played at four tables with small prizes being given.

Mr. D. Martin received gentleman's prize while ladies first was a tie between Mrs. N. Daigle and Miss A. Ashton, this was cut for and won by the latter.

Consolation was a tie between Mrs. M. Rhicard and Mrs. A. Lace with Mrs. Rhicard receiving it.

Thanks go to Mrs. M. Hilliker and Miss M. Swett for these.

Members are asked to be at the Hall on Nov. 10th, when the door will be unlocked at 12 noon.

The family

MR. and MRS. RONALD GORDON NESBITT

Nesbitt-Bishop

The marriage of Dorothy Judith, daughter of Mr. Bruce A. Bishop, and Mrs. Beatrice Bishop of North Hatley, to Mr. Ronald Gordon Nesbitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Nesbitt of Pointe Claire, took place recently in St. Barnabas Church, North Hatley, Rev. W. Keith Perry, G. Gore officiating. Mr. Morris Austin played the organ, and during the signing of the register, John Denby's "My Sweet Lady" was sung. The church was decorated with white gladioli and shasta daisies and the guest pews marked by white satin bows.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was in a gown of white pleated cotton with inserts of guipure lace at the elbows, wrists and hem. The bodice was highnecked and the sleeves were bell shaped. She wore a picture hat of mohair straw and carried a bouquet of white sweetheart roses and baby's breath.

Mrs. Julio Filgueria, sister of the bride, as matron-of-honor, wore an A-line dress, with decollete neckline and matching bolero of organza in a flowered print of blue and green on a white background. She carried white shasta daisies with blue baby's breath. The attendants, Miss Ann Bishop, sister of the bride, and Miss Jane Fullerton, of Montreal, wore dresses of similar design as the matron of honour in green and yellow print and carried yellow shasta daisies.

Mr. Paul Marchand acted as best man for Mr. Nesbitt, and the ushers were Mr. Tom Nesbitt, brother of the groom, and Mr. John Darby.

Mrs. Beatrice Bishop, mother of the bride, wore a gown of yellow chiffon with a matching floor length coat. She carried white shasta daisies pinned to her purse.

Mrs. Nesbitt, mother of the groom, wore a varicolored turquoise and blue leaf gown with matching elbow length cape. She carried blue tinted baby carnations with baby's breath pinned to her purse.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's father, where white gladioli and yellow-eyed daisies were used to decorate. The wedding cake was topped by a tiny bouquet of white sweetheart roses and the silver candelabra were decorated with rosettes of white satin ribbon.

The couple left for Cloudy Lake, Ontario, the bride travelling in a brown and white polka-dotted pleated skirt, with matching blouse top and wearing white accessories. They will take up residence in Montreal.

Attends Christening

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Rand of Lennoxville spent the weekend in Ste. Anne de Bellevue, and on Sunday, Oct. 26, attended the christening of their grand-daughter, Pamela Dale, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Forgrave, which took place at the United Church there.

There were accompanied by Mrs. Leamon Lowd of Bulwer, great-grandmother and Mrs. Grant Forgrave of Foster, paternal grandmother of the baby.

Pamela wore an heirloom dress, which was worn by her maternal grandfather, uncles and cousins, at their christening, also a hairpin lace shawl, made by her great-aunt, Mrs. Earl Thompson of Orleans, Vt.

A bountiful dinner was served by Lynn and Carol, at their home, after the service. A special cake, trimmed with pink frosting booties and sugar blocks with Pamela's name and birthdate printed on it was served as part of the dessert.

Other guests were Miss Lana Gauvin of Foster and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Doyle, Darrell and Debbie, of St. Hubert.

Bury

Friends of Mrs. Wright Goodenough will be sorry to hear that she is a patient in the Sherbrooke Hospital.

Miss Dorothy Shattuck, Mrs. Allan Hall and Mrs. George Rowley, East Angus and Miss Shattuck's cousin called on Mrs. Lila Wilson and other residents at St. Paul's Home.

Mrs. Flossie Barter spent a week visiting Mrs. Lord and Mrs. Harry Carr in Sherbrooke, Mrs. Gladys Raycraft, Lennoxville, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Kerr, Suffield and Mr. and Mrs. Murray Ward, Bulwer.

Mr. Doug Clark, Lake Megantic, called on Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rowell and Mrs. Marjory Dougherty.

Mrs. Clifford Anderson has returned home from Richmond after visiting her niece and nephews, Mr. and Mrs. M.J. Shea, Stephen and Jimmie.

A last word in fashion with a Spanish accent

Leather

By Helen Hennessy
NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Leather gains in popularity each fashion season. And there is nothing lovelier than the leathers and suedes that come from Spain.

Every fashion favorite is made today in leather from pants to dresses to coats and jackets. Spanish leather has such softness, such glowing colors and some is even washable.

So join the leather parade, and be right in step with fashion's leaders.

Growing Older

Life dull? Try rut-breakers

By Lou Cottin

Being young wasn't always fun and frolic. During our working years, we who are now old occasionally found ourselves suffering from a misery known as "getting into a rut." Day after dull day, we moved like zombies through dull, boring routines.

Same: the harsh clang of the alarm clock. Same: the hurried breakfast, the trip to the job. Same: the arguments with boss or foreman. Same: the return home, the noisy squabbling kids, the worry about money, the unexpected bills. We found ourselves muttering, "What the hell am I doing here on this miserable treadmill?"

But when we were young, something would always happen, or we could make something happen, that would rekindle our interest in life. The "rut-breaker" might be a private matter, like the delightful excitement of "making up." It might be an outside force like a raise, or a strike call, or a new friendship. No matter. No matter. The operative word in pulling ourselves out of the rut was "change." We had a choice of avenues of escape.

But what choices do we have now to ring in changes in our lives? Here we are today, aging, tired and retired. Our way of life is set. The ruts we fall into are deeper. Boredom is continuous. We know that events that pulled us out of our doldrums in earlier years are unlikely to happen to us now.

It's a challenge! To lead a more interesting life we must become more interesting people. We must break out of boredom by our own conscious effort. Nobody can do it for us. It's no use bemoaning the fact that few people (including our own children) pay attention to us or listen to what we say. The question is, "What do we have to say that's worth listening to?"

Let's face it. Not many of us are ever again going to be the kind of characters who light up a room just by walking into it. But we can, if we work at it, reassert our individuality so that we may maintain our own self-respect and deserve the respect of others. The problem is: how do we pull out of the senior-age rut by our own bootstraps?

What my wife, Nikka, and I did to solve the problem may not suit others. But since it worked for us pretty well, we decided to issue a report.

Like other retirees, we found ourselves going through our days like automatons and we didn't like it. We even reached a point where each of us knew what the other was going to say before he or she said it. We decided to make some changes.

At first it was a game. We made a list of the little "habit" things we did without thinking. Which shoe do you put on first in the morning? Do you pick fresh underwear from the top or bottom of the pile in the drawer? This was fun — but we decided it was also silly. What we were looking for were changes in the pattern of our days, changes that would refresh us and spark new ideas or help us to make new acquaintances.

Nikka, for example, hikes a mile into town each day to buy the newspaper, walking through the same streets. She decided to take a different route each day. I, who turn in at 2 a.m. (or later) and get up at 9 a.m. (or later) decided to go to bed before midnight and get up at 7 a.m.

Nikka who went in heavily for knitting, switched to quilting, and from reading novels to biographies. I, who wallowed in murder mysteries, started reading more serious books. Additionally, we changed our furniture around, had the kitchen repapered, phoned friends we hadn't seen for a long time, put on records of symphonies, forsaking our diet of chamber music.

You get the idea. We were actually giving thought to the things we did habitually or by rote, and we decided to make changes. This all wound up, after a few weeks, in a game we called, "Devil's Advocate." The rules of "Devil's Advocate" are simple. But they have the effect of blowing your mind.

The way it goes is this: players defend ideas or positions opposite to what they really believe. Imagine Nikka talking against women's liberation or me defending Richard Nixon! A couple could get divorced!

All I can tell you is that the system worked. Naturally, we're developing a brand new set of ruts that will eventually bore us. Ah well, we can always put the furniture back in the old places and go back to chamber music with a contented sigh.

Ann Landers says:

These are symptoms of a much deeper problem

Dear Ann Landers: We are having terrible problems with our 16-year-old daughter. She respects your judgment and might listen to you. Here's the situation:

Within the last six months we received several phone calls. Here are some examples.

From the school principal: "Please come and get your daughter. She has been drinking and I have her here in my office."

From the mother of a boy in her class: "I found some filthy notes to my son written by your daughter. It is obvious that they have been having sexual relations. I thought you ought to know so you can speak to her."

From a department store manager: "Your daughter has been picked up for shoplifting. Please come down and let's have a talk. I don't want to call the police."

Each time we did a great deal of talking and there were promises to "do better." We feel the girl should have counseling but she is against the idea. She says nobody can tell her anything she doesn't already know.

I just can't see sitting around waiting for another phone call. It would probably be the police. Please advise us. — Mom

Dear Mom: You say your daughter might listen to me. I hope so. The following remarks are for her.

Dear Friend: Each of the three incidents cited by your mother are symptoms of deeper problems. There are specific reasons for the behavior that resulted in those phone calls.

Although you are against counseling on grounds that nobody can tell you anything you don't already know, please trust me when I say you need to TALK to somebody — not just listen. I urge you at least to give counseling a try. You're on a collision course of self-destruction and only you can save yourself.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 11 years old and I read your column all the time. I notice sometimes you print letters from people who aren't asking for advice — they just want to tell you how they feel about something. So here is another one of those letters. Like I said, it's not really a problem but I hate it.

When you watch TV, all of a sudden you see a commercial that says if you put a certain kind of baby powder on a baby's behind he will love you. Then, a few minutes later another commercial says if you add a certain something to the gravy your husband will love you. The worst one is that commercial for chicken soup: "If you buy brand X your children will love you."

Why doesn't somebody tell the fools who write those things that there's more to love than talcum powder, gravy and chicken soup? Sign me — Had My Say

Dear Had: I guess a great many TV commercials are geared to the mentality of eight-year-olds because you, at 11, aren't going for it.

Thanks for writing. I hope somebody on Madison Avenue takes the hint.

Smoking dangerous during pregnancy, research shows

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pregnant women who smoke may be depriving fetuses of oxygen critical to proper growth and development, say researchers at Johns Hopkins University.

Scientists have known that women who smoke cigarettes tend to give birth to undersized and sometimes dangerously delicate babies, but the cause has remained a mystery.

But Drs. Gail Gurtner and Barry Burns say research with sheep is altering an old theory about how fetuses get oxygen and may establish that carbon monoxide from cigarette smoke disrupts this process.

Classically, doctors have thought that oxygen from the mother's bloodstream travelled through the placenta and into the fetus by a simple process of diffusion.

The researchers report, however, that the placenta

Trick in ironing plastic tablecloth

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I would like some suggestions for getting wrinkles out of flannel-backed plastic tablecloths. When I take a new one out of the wrappings I find many deep wrinkles. I had some success using a cool iron on paper towels until the iron accidentally slipped off the towels. Do you have a better idea? — ROSE

DEAR ROSE — I have some flannel backed place mats that I have pressed by putting a wet pressing cloth over the top and then ironing with a hot iron. Do be careful not to let the iron touch the plastic. Let cloth get dry and cool before folding as the heat softens the plastic. How do you other readers do this? — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the pattern companies for making patterns so thin. After a pattern is used two or three times it is in pretty bad shape. I wish they were made of stronger paper. I always put cellophane tape on a pattern where it is traced to make it last as long as possible but this is a nuisance. — BRANDA

DEAR POLLY — I am answering Mrs. E.A.L. who had a Pet Peeve concerning men's neckties. She had watched her husband during 34 years of marriage "patiently undo and redo a tie until he gets the ends even." My husband solved this by not untangling a tie each time he wears it but loosens it as far as he dares and then slips it over his head. The next time he wants to wear that tie he slips it over his head and very quickly has it in place with no fuss and bother. — MRS. R.J.B.

DEAR POLLY — Instead of using one 9x13-inch pan for a regular cake mix I use two pans. This makes the cake thinner. But if other children are like mine their main concern is the frosting not the "high rise" of the cake. Another plus, they get more in them than on them. — LAURUE

DEAR POLLY — Those who carry cameras, additional film, bulbs, etc., should try using a baby's insulated formula bag. The insulation aids in keeping the film in better condition and there is room for supplies including a small litter bag that is essential when using cameras that develop instantly. The compartment is a good place to keep the pictures, note pads and pens. Such a bag is easily and quickly opened and I find it most convenient for an amateur photographer, news reporter and traveler. — EVELYN

DEAR POLLY — Place felt weather stripping on the undersides of rockers to prevent rocking chairs from damaging the floor. — MRS. L. L.

Meeting held by Nurses' Alumnae

The Sherbrooke Hospital Nurses' Alumnae Association held its last meeting of the year on Tuesday evening, Oct. 21, at the Norton Annex. Mrs. Frost, president, presided over the meeting, there being nine members in attendance.

Mrs. Frost expressed her pleasure on the success of the recently held fall supper which was held at the Lennoxville Army, Navy Hut.

Discussions arose as to how the alumnae could become more active and useful. Some interesting ideas were put forth and it was agreed to invite Mrs. Linholm, director of Volunteer Services at the Sherbrooke Hospital, to attend the January meeting and help by telling where services might be most useful. Members wishing to help in volunteer work are urged to attend this meeting.

It was agreed to arrange a Carol Service to present the patients of the Sherbrooke Hospital again this year. Details are being arranged by Mrs. Frost. Times for the practices will be announced later.

Being no further business, the meeting was moved to be adjourned by Mrs. Watson. Delicious refreshments were then served by the hostesses, Miss Beverly Harrison and Mrs. Charles Smith. The doorprize was won by Mrs. Watson.

Architect will explore limits of human ingenuity

OTTAWA (CP)—Other architects have called him a maverick, a trouble-maker and a prophet, but they have never called Jack Diamond dull.

Now the man who first told Canadians they didn't need high-rises to put a lot of people in a small area is about to mould 200 acres in the core of Ottawa into a community that Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson says "will explore just how far human ingenuity can go."

When he talks about developing LeBreton Flats, a prime riverfront tract bought by the federal government 13 years ago and cleared of buildings, a light comes into Jack Diamond's eyes.

"It's a new theme in my career, the next thrust of my efforts. I want to show that the city core can be a choice place to live."

Teaching people that old homes in a city's core can and should be recycled was a big accomplishment, said Mr. Diamond. But now that the public has accepted the idea it's time to move on.

"I'm not ready to repeat old prototypes. I'm going to use a kind of probing technique. I'll expose people to innovative forms of housing based on their own preferences."

The way to do this, said the Toronto-based consultant architect, is to ask people what they like about the houses and neighborhoods they know and build these general concepts into his designs.

Working with Mr. Diamond on the project are five consulting firms, three levels of government—the National Capital Commission, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. and the city of Ottawa—and various citizens groups.

"Think about the Victorian era," he said. "The city was the only place to be then. It was the centre of culture and society, the place where the action was. There was nothing more fashionable than an elegant row house in the city centre."

Mr. Diamond says he wants to recapture this excitement in LeBreton Flats.

Mr. Diamond's mandate as co-ordinating consultant for the project is to design a community capable of accommodating people from all economic levels; a community acceptable to people living both in and around it and a community of sufficiently high density to offset the high cost of the land.

Some people would feel they have bitten off more than they can chew, but Mr. Diamond seems unfazed.

No concrete plans for the houses are developed yet, but Mr. Diamond said high-rise apartments are definitely not contemplated.

High-rise life, he says, is geared to the young, and to the unattached—a small segment of the population.

"There is a better way, a more common-sense way," he insisted. "The trouble is common sense just isn't very common."

Mr. Diamond admitted that his idea that it is better to work with existing buildings than tear them down for high-rises has hurt the poor in the city core.

The idea, he says, caught on with the middle class who bought and renovated old homes, putting them out of the financial reach of the poor people who traditionally live in a city's core.

"Some people say those are the dynamics of the market, but I'm not sure that's something I can live with."

He believes the real solution to the shortage of low-income housing has to come, not from designers like himself, but from municipal governments, supported by both provincial and federal governments.

Manufactured components make rapid house-building possible

VANCOUVER (CP)—How many times has a couple wished they could build a two-bedroom, 1,000-square-foot home within a week or two?

Community planner Bruce Fairbairn and architect Charles Haynes say it's possible—and for only about $15,000.

They say the key is to use manufactured components, held together with bolts and other fasteners. It's similar to a giant Meccano set and Mr. Fairbairn says the builder can arrange components as he wants, add or subtract components at a later date or even dismantle the building and move it to a different site.

"Technology today is perfectly adequate to allow people to build their own houses," says Mr. Fairbairn. "What is needed is a demystification of the building system."

That's what he told a British Columbia federal Liberal caucus meeting as part of a bid to get a $50,000 grant from the federal urban affairs department to build some demonstration houses for the international Habitat conference here next year.

The University of British Columbia board of governors has given support to the idea and Dr. Peter Oberlander, UBC community planning professor, said the self-help idea may be a possible solution to current housing problems.

Dr. Oberlander said the federal government's typical response to the housing shortage has been to provide funds in the form of direct loans or guarantees, but housing needs have outstripped the best efforts of supply.

"My conviction is that we will never have enough resources to meet the social demands for housing, or the rising expectations of everyone who needs shelter," said Dr. Oberlander. "The answer is that we've got to turn to resources other than money."

Mr. Fairbairn and Mr. Haynes said the self-help idea has worked in other cultures and all that modern technological man needs are some contemporary building blocks and some advice on how to put them together.

That is where the government comes in.

Mr. Fairbairn suggested a "build-it-yourself" television show, as well as storefront offices where homebuilders could go for help.

The building process itself begins with design and construction of a model.

Mr. Fairbairn said the building components are then prepared—posts and beams are cut to length, drilled and treated; panels are arranged and service components are assembled.

That's followed by "an old-time house-raising"—a party event with friends, food and drink.

FDA denies consumers' petition

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has denied a Ralph Nader group's petition to ban a drug commonly prescribed for women although the agency agreed it causes cancer in laboratory mice.

In an exchange of correspondence released Tuesday, FDA Commissioner Alexander Schmidt said the drug Flagyl should remain available but with new labor warnings.

More than two million Flagyl prescriptions are written annually, most of them for treatment of an uncomfortable genital parasitic invasion called trichomonas vaginitis.

Nader's Health Research Group had petitioned the FDA in March, 1973, to ban that use of metronidazole, marketed as Flagyl by G. D. Searle and Co., but keep it available for treatment of a potentially life-threatening intestinal disease called amebiasis.

Schmidt's letter denying the petition concurred that Flagyl causes cancer in mice and is "strongly suggestive" of causing cancer in rats.

SEES NO PARALLEL. "It is not possible, however, to apply the results of such animal testing directly to humans," the commissioner said.

"We conclude that, although metronidazole is a carcinogen in the mouse, the risk of human carcinogenicity from a short-term exposure of humans to the dose used in the treatment of trichomonas vaginitis is very low."

The female disorder is not fatal but can be extremely uncomfortable, Schmidt said, and the benefits from treatment with Flagyl outweigh the risks.

Anita Johnson, lawyer for the Health Research Group, charged that the FDA had "exaggerated the importance of the disease, and minimized the importance of the animal studies."

She expressed alarm at the FDA's related decision to permit human testing to begin with a second drug for the same purpose, tinidazole, which she said also causes cancer in test mice.

Indian's 14th wife-to-be cancels marriage

BOMBAY (CP)—Bini Jaipoo, 56, was to have married a 19-year-old girl. And the young bride would have become his 14th wife.

"This is an insult," Jaipoo said, soon after the wedding was called off. "I'm going to sue the girl's parents for damaging my reputation."

Jaipoo added: "No woman has rejected me in this manner. All the 13 women I have married in the last 37 years considered it an honor to them and their families."

BACKWARD AREA But things are changing even in Arunachal Pradesh, one of India's most backward areas where until a decade ago men hunted with bows and arrows.

The Arunachal Pradesh Youth League has started a campaign against polygamy, the ancient custom which allows a man to have as many wives as he wants.

Tasang Hija, a village elder, says, "We have been accustomed to regard women as toys. I know a man who had married 27 times. But there is an awakening among women even in remote areas."

When India became free in 1947, there were only four schools and 80 students in Arunachal Pradesh, a lush mountain region adjacent to Communist China. Today, there are more than 600 schools with a total of 40,000 students. Many of them are girls.

Dozens of roads have opened up the frontier state. Interestingly, this is helping women to fight polygamy and campaign for the one-man-one-wife cause.

As a government official put it: "In the old days, a girl was forced to marry within her own village. Lack of communications made husband-seeking very dif-icult. Now, a girl can travel to any part of the state in search of a husband."

Young men and women of the state are campaigning for a strict law against polygamy and have appealed to Governor Kaa Raja, a renowned authority on India's tribal problems, not to give government jobs to anyone who has more than one wife.

South looked over dummy and applied to the C of ARCH. He counted his winners and saw that, while there were 12 in theory, he ought to be satisfied with 11.

Eight trumps and three diamonds would come to 11 and he decided the way to go about this would be to attempt a sort of dummy reversal.

He rose with dummy's ace of diamonds, ruffed a heart, entered dummy with the queen of trumps, ruffed another heart, entered dummy by ruf-ing a spade, used his last trump to ruff a third heart, got back to dummy by ruffing another spade, cashed dummy's last two trumps and the last two diamonds while conceding his last two hearts as losers.

The hand is worthy of considerable study. Note that if declarer goes after 12 tricks, he will have to lead a second diamond early. It will be ruffed by East, whereupon a trump lead will reduce South's winners from 12 to 10.

Ask the Jacobys

A letter from Alaska asks what dealer should do with 11 clubs headed by the jack and the ace-queen of spades.

This is one of the oldest joke problems in bridge. As far as we know it was first devised by the late Joseph B. Lee of Brooklyn as an auction bridge question. The catch is that they ask, "What should dealer do?" The answer is, "Get a new pack of cards." In order to have 11 clubs headed by the jack you have to have two that are the same.

17 and ambitious? buy a book store

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — What do you do when you are 17, ambitious, but unmotivated by school?

If you are Marc Emery, 17, you quit school and buy a used bookstore.

Marc, who worked as a paper boy and a mail-order dealer in the lucrative field of comic books, bought the London Used Book Mart last April.

Though his father helped him out by co-signing a bank loan, Marc is the store's sole owner and employee and often puts in 70 hours of work each week.

The young entrepreneur said business is booming and he has been able to pay off his loans more quickly than he expected. He said sales have been up a consistent 33 per cent since he took over and he is even thinking he would like to open another store next year, selling another kind of merchandise. "It was greed that lured me into the business world," he said.

His store, the largest used book mart in this city, contains 61,000 volumes and another 10,000 are in storage in the basement.

Marc buys about 2,000 books a week and sells an average of 1,000. His stock includes everything from collectors' items to skin magazines.

NOT SENTIMENTAL

Though he is interested in books, Marc's attitude toward them is "completely business." He keeps nothing for sentimental reasons and "nothing's so rare that I won't come across it again."

Marc obtains his stock from customers who visit the store and from auctions disposing of estates. He pays an average of 10 to 12 cents for paperback novels and 10 cents for hard covers.

He then sells the paper-backs for half their original retail price or less. A hardcover that originally sold at $11.50 may be priced as low as $1.25.

But running his own business leaves little time for other activities. When he is not giving advice to customers or ringing up sales from an antique barber's chair—he inherited it from the former owner—Marc buys, sorts, prices and locates books on the shelves.

"Sometimes it's disappointing to look back over what you've done for the last six months and discover you've just been working," he said.

"I had worked every weekend for months, and recently found I had a Sunday off. I just didn't know what to do with myself and ended up going into the store anyway, because there's always something to be done."

Instant town, just add coal

GRANDE CACHE, Alta. (CP) — This community of 4,000 on the edge of the Rocky Mountains 225 miles west of Edmonton has something most towns lack. It's all new.

There are no old buildings, old streets or old anything else here. It was an instant town—just open a coal mine, add people and services and stir.

McIntyre Porcupine Mines Ltd. wanted to extract coal in the area, so in 1966 the Alberta government created the town on paper. Ken Berge, 61, who has been in municipal administration since 1959, came up in 1969 when there was nothing here but forest, mountains and a dirt track.

It now has a large, covered shopping mall, paved residential areas and 300 mobile homes.

Housing in town is scarce at present. Mr. Berge said it would be a lot scarcer if the town could convince the province to build a highway from Grande Cache to Grande Prairie, about 100 miles north.

DEPENDS ON MINE

The town is dependent upon the mine for its life. When the mine laid off about 250 workers in 1973, the town faced an actual population drop of about 800, throwing it into financial straits that the province had to help sort out. The crisis hammered home the need for the community to widen its economic base.

"We've tried to impress upon the government that this would make a wonderful vacation area," Mr. Berge said. "We have pressed the government to complete the highway from Grande Cache to Grande Prairie. It's a natural."

"All the people in the Peace River block would come down through Grande Cache to Highway 16—the east-west Yellowhead Route linking Edmonton with Jasper National Park and northern British Columbia.

"I'm sure that the minute the government made an announcement that the highway is to be completed, private capital would be in looking around at golf courses, ski hills and so on. These are things we can't afford to build."

FUTURE IS BRIGHT

With coal returning to the forefront of the mining industry and numerous other minerals in the area, the future looks bright, provided the conflict between mining and recreational use in the foothills and eastern slopes of the Rockies can be resolved.

"There's billions of tons of coal at our feet. It's just a matter of the government of Alberta and the environmentalists giving the nod to the next company that wants to come in, and we're away."

Alcoholism, a treatable condition

EDMONTON (CP) — The treatment of alcoholism has achieved a "real breakthrough" in recent years by drawing problem drinkers at a much younger age, says an official with the Alberta Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission (AADAC).

"Ten years ago, the average age of a person seeking treatment for alcoholism was 40 to 60," Eleanor Clark, counselling supervisor at the provincial AADAC outpatient clinic here, said in an interview.

"Today, the average age of persons seeking help is between 20 and 40 years," she said, attributing education to the fact that people "are recognizing alcoholism as a treatable condition."

The clinic, part of the commission's network of treatment facilities, treats about 350 persons with drug-related problems each month.

TREATMENT FREE

Treatment, provided free of charge, usually takes three to six months and is administered confidentially by the clinic's team of 10 professional counsellors, two nurses, and one recreation adviser.

"We deal with people who still are functional in the community," Mrs. Clark said. There is no set technique for counselling, done by sociologists, social workers, nurses and a psychologist.

"We tend to tailor treatment according to individual needs, and counsellors are chosen for their ability to relate to other people."

"We don't diagnose alcoholism; we just talk about what it is. It is up to the individual to decide where he fits in."

Once a person has decided he needs help to deal with alcohol or other drug problems, counsellors will give guidance in re-establishing the individual in society.

"People who drink tend to alienate themselves. When they quit, they have a lot of time on their hands. It's a matter of reorganizing their lives."

An important aspect of the clinic's service involves group sessions, with an attendance of about 1,000 persons a month. Some of the groups are aimed at alcoholics, others at their wives and children—but all are designed to provide basic information about alcoholism and its treatment.

BRING IN SPOUSES

"We want to see the spouses as well," Mrs. Clark said. "Alcoholism is a family illness."

One of the problems in dealing with alcoholism is that it is a difficult condition to recognize, even for professionals, she said. And the web of myths surrounding alcoholism contributes to that difficulty.

These myths include the belief that drinking alone or in the morning is an automatic indication of alcoholism, and that most alcoholics are on skid road, Mrs. Clark said.

"Skid road can be in anyone's home. About 95 per cent of the alcoholic population are ordinary, working people, who differ from others only in their ability to handle alcohol."

HARD TO DEFINE

Although Alberta is recognized as a leader in alcoholism treatment, Mrs. Clark said it is difficult to follow up cases or even define the clinic's "success." Some individuals may be completely cured, while others may have relapses.

The outpatient clinic is one part of AADAC's treatment program for persons with drug-related problems. AADAC, which started as the Alcoholism Foundation of Alberta in 1953 and became established as a commission in 1970, also runs an intoxication recovery centre, a methadone clinic and various other programs. Its budget in 1975 totalled $5.7 million.

"This is the oldest established clinic in the province," Mrs. Clark said. "We have gained credibility here."

HENRY J. PARKER
of Suffield

Henry Joachim Parker, a lifelong resident of Suffield, died at his home September 27, 1975, in his 74th year. He spent his entire life on the farm where he was born, although for the past four years he had been hospitalized several times at the CHU in Sherbrooke. At home he was cared for by his wife, the former Margaret Beryl Bean.

He is also survived by his three children and their families: Thelma and Douglas Pitman, Neil and Karen, Sterling and Gwen Parker, Susan and Michael, Warren and Faye Parker, Craig and Andrea; also by his sister, Gladys and her husband Will Bean, several nieces and nephews, sisters-in-law, cousins, and by many good friends.

Rev. Douglas Warren conducted the funeral service from Webster-Cass Funeral Home in Lennoxville.

The bearers were neighbors, all sons or grandsons of old friends: Clifford Dean, Donald Johnson, Samuel Jardine, Maurice Mongeau, Raymond Dube and Lorne Ross.

Interment was in the Reedsville Cemetery, North Hatley.

Besides the beautiful floral arrangements, donations in his memory were made to the Heart Foundation and to memorial funds in Lennoxville and Ottawa.

MRS. JESSIE HALL of East Angus

The death of Mrs. Jessie Hall occurred at the Sherbrooke Hospital on October 15, 1975, after a brief illness.

The former Jessie Duncan was born on August 5, 1895 in Aberdeen, Scotland, daughter of the late John Duncan and his wife Jessie Aitken.

She came to Canada with her family in 1912 and settled in Scotstown, later moving to East Angus, Que., where most of the remainder of her life was spent.

Mrs. Hall was a member of Emmanuel United Church in East Angus.

Her greatest interest was in her home and family, taking pride in her flowers and handicrafts, in which she excelled.

Left to mourn the loss of a kind and loving mother and grandmother are Mr. and Mrs. Elwin Hall, Kingston, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. John Hall, Weston, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Russell Beattie (Pearl), Miss Audrey Hall, East Angus, Que., Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hall, Cincinnati, Ohio, her eleven grandchildren Mr. Robert and Miss Cathy Hall, Kingston, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell (Susan), Weston, Ont., Mr. John Hall Jr., Norway House, Manitoba, Miss Linda Beattie, Ottawa, Ont., Mr.

Choir members were from both the Anglican and United Churches with Mrs. Roy Cillis presiding at the organ. A favorite hymn of the deceased "He Leadeth Me" was rendered.

The bearers were Messrs Allen Jamieson, Lawrence Kinneer, Chester Damon, Leslie Wilkin, Harold Muniktrick and Albert Beleaveu, all friends of the deceased.

Interment was in Cookshire Cemetery.

Relatives and friends from out of town who attended the funeral were from Cincinnati, Ohio, Weston, Kingston and Ottawa, Ont., St. Lambert, Katevale, Sherbrooke, Lennoxville, Que., and surrounding districts.

Thanksgiving Sunday was observed at the regular Sunday morning service at the Bulwer United Church. Rev. Carl Gustafson delivered the Thanksgiving message.

The church was very beautifully decorated with jams, jellies, pickles, fruits and vegetables, also three bouquets of flowers that had escaped the frosts and a beautiful rose — truly the "last rose of summer."

The beautiful crops of the season were reflected by the abundance brought to the church in Thanksgiving, to be shared by others.

On Saturday evening the Community Centre saw action for the third night in a row, when a good crowd gathered to dance and enjoy the music of the Nugent Orchestra.

The hall was very nicely decorated by Mrs. A. Sylvester in the Thanksgiving theme, with colored leaves and apples in the windows and a huge cornucopia filled with the fruits of the harvest; with cornstalks making a fitting background.

A picnic lunch was served buffet style with the Q.F.A. supplying the beverage and the ice cream.

LEN'S CORNER

BY LEN O'DONNELL

WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO THE BEAVERS? This question, which is the $64 one, will be answered today or tomorrow according to the reports from Paul Dumont, Director-General of the QMJHL, in Quebec.

IT WAS VERY INTERESTING to read the answers put to President Raymond Lagace and Paul Dumont by our confrere Jean-Paul Ricard of La Tribune regarding the suspension of Georges Guilbault and the fine assessed to the Beavers of $25,000. JP had some good questions but quite a few of the answers didn't seem to coincide with the questions.

PRESIDENT LAGACE STATED that the only person who had the right to cancel the game, at that time, was the Shawinigan Chief of Police. I wonder where the Chief of Police obtained this authority all of a sudden? Maybe President Lagace could answer that one. Of all my years in hockey I have never heard of such a thing.

PRESIDENT LAGACE CLAIMS that several clubs have complained about the Beavers' style of play but it seems no one else has ever heard about it. If this was the case then why didn't the President notify the Beavers that their style would have to change. As I have stated previously I never heard Ghislain Delage at any time tell his players to get this fellow or another. His policy has been "good-hard-hockey", which is the game, and that is the way the Beavers play it.

IF PRESIDENT LAGACE FIGURES the style of hockey in the QMJHL is too rough then why doesn't the league act, regarding certain players. Every club in the loop has what is called a policeman, why I don't know, but if he figures they are too tough then he has the powers to suspend them accordingly.

I THINK THAT THE PREXY forgets that a coach can do only so much. He can tell a player to cut down on his rough-work but once he gets on the ice, and in the heat of the game, he goes all out and forgets what the coach told him.

THE TWO OFFICIALS CLAIM they have nothing against the Beavers, Ghislain Delage or Georges Guilbault, and they figure their decision was the right one. It looks to me that they were out to cut the Beavers down to the level of the other clubs in the loop hence the reason for the $25,000 fine.

UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES I think the locals did the right thing and they knew it was going to cost them some money but on the other hand they had to take in consideration the feelings of the boys' parents. Five refused to let their boys go to Shawinigan and I don't blame them. Why run after trouble when it can be averted by using a little common sense.

WHEN ANYBODY TELLS me that 60 policemen can keep a crowd of 3,000 excited hockey fans under control that is hard to believe. I would say he doesn't know much about the game. Many a time, in the past years, I have seen things happen and there wasn't sufficient police in the city to handle matters. So Mr. Lagace why try to kid everybody, you know better than that.

AFTER LISTENING TO ALL the pros and cons regarding this matter I am of the opinion there is what we call, "A BIRD IN THE WOOD PILE." I honestly believe the league executive has the "axe" out for the Beavers and they intend to chop them off their perch. Sherbrooke has one of the best junior organizations in Canada and instead of supporting them they try their best to run them down.

I KNOW THAT PRESIDENT LAGACE and Paul Dumont stated they have nothing against Sherbrooke but judging from their actions it is hard to believe. We have the best junior league in Canada so why not pull together to keep it that way. I didn't honestly believe that Delage should have been tacked with a $500 fine nor the club $25,000.

I KNOW THE LEAGUE has the right to do so but under the circumstances I figured they would get tagged with a $10,000 amount, and I told President Bureau and Georges Guilbault prior to the announcement. This I figured, taking all things into consideration, would be proper and within the guiding lines. No league in the world has ever assessed a club that amount so why should the QMJHL set a precedent?

SO NOW ALL WE CAN do is to sit and see what the discipline committee recommends to the Governors at their meeting. So, readers, that is my idea on the whole matter. A little common sense and all this would have been averted. So let's wait and see what comes out of the whole mess.

Rowdy soccer fans giving Ottawa officials trouble in finding new referees

OTTAWA (CP) — The rowdy reputation that soccer spectators have been gaining is about the only sign of growing pains besetting the thriving sport in the Ottawa area.

"We have trouble recruiting referees because they rapidly get cheesed off by the fans," said Emerson Mathurin, president of the Ottawa Soccer Referees Association.

"We can control the players but so many of the fans bring their Old Country prejudices to the games with them."

"It's an age of violence and it doesn't help when ethnic prejudices are brought to the soccer fields," said Mathurin, who also cited the sport's roots in foreign countries as a factor.

"We hear about the South American way of soccer, the British way, the German way, et cetera, so I ask: 'What's wrong with playing the game the Canadian way and developing a distinctive Canadian style?'"

But in Ottawa soccer is growing.

"In 1969 there were a few good senior teams, but the school teams were lousy," the referee recalled. "The next year, I was pleasantly surprised at the improvement in the calibre of the game at the school level."

"They had in one year mastered many of the elements of ball control and the discipline was excellent . . . and it's due to some dedicated teachers."

GREW FIVE-FOLD

Since 1971, the sport has swollen to 186 teams from 36 in the Ottawa area, said Bruce Henderson, secretary of the Ottawa and District Soccer Association. The number of players, including semi-professional, senior and minor, has jumped to more than 2,000 from 200 and 30 per cent are Canadian-born.

There are 38 senior teams in the area's three divisions, the top two being the Tigers and the Saints.

"Some of the seniors now sponsor their own minor teams and have a place to develop players," Henderson added.

The Ottawa and District Minor Soccer Association runs teams for players from age nine to 18, including house leagues designed for recreation rather than competition.

"We found that under the competitive system some teams were at a disadvantage because other areas were hotbeds," said Pat Mates, who leads a two-year-old league.

"We've had no trouble transmitting our no-pressure philosophy to the coaches, but some of the parents who come to the games would make you sick," said Mates.

"They yell and scream at the kids and that's what we're trying to stay away from."

ETTFL playoffs open Sunday in Danville

Windsor Mills emerged the winner 6-1 over Lennoxville in the best defensive game played this season.

The first scoring play of the game was a 40-yard punt by Larry Rosebush to give Lennoxville their only point of the game. Throughout most of the first half neither offensive unit could overcome the other's outstanding defensive plays.

Windsor's scoring play occurred late in the second quarter when quarterback J. Vigneaux tossed a 25-yard pass to J. Cote for a major.

In the second half Lennoxville's offensive unit was again led by the throwing of quarterback Johnny Daniel to receivers Doherty, Badger, and Butterfield. They couldn't manage to go all the way against a stubborn Windsor defensive unit led by Marcel Verronneau.

Craig Beliveau, and Allen Butler.

Equally effective was the Lennoxville defensive unit with players Rick Dupuis, Willie Mullin, and Randy Speck playing their best game of the year. Final Score Windsor Mills 6-1 Lennoxville 1.

The game between Danville and Richmond started off with Bob Gartshore intercepting a Charlie Doyle pass on the first play of the game and running the ball for 30 yards to give Danville their first 6 points.

Richmond didn't panic but instead played very well against a strong Danville unit. Play went back and forth until late in the first quarter, when quarterback Mike Williams threw a 25-yard pass to Jacques Boisvert deep in the Richmond end zone to give Danville a 12-0 lead.

Richmond tried very hard to come back as quarterback Doyle threw to players such as Barrington, Chabot, Copping, and Mike Doyle but the Richmond squad couldn't come up with the big play to get back in the game.

The final scoring play of the game occurred late in the fourth quarter as Jacques Boisvert scored his second major by intercepting a Richmond pass and running the ball 85 yards to complete the scoring.

Danville won 18-0 and finished with an unbeaten record this season as they finished with nine wins and no losses.

This Sunday in Danville the playoffs start with Danville playing Richmond and Lennoxville taking on Windsor Mills.

Giants' John Montefusco
named NL Rookie of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — John (The Count) Montefusco, who not only talked but also played a good game of baseball this year with San Francisco Giants, today was named the National League's Rookie of the Year.

Because the cocky hurler put his money arm where his mouth was, the Baseball Writers Association of America (BBWAA) accorded him top rookie honors ahead of outfielder-catcher Gary Carter of Montreal Expos.

"I really think this is great," said the 25-year-old pitcher after learning he had outscored Carter 12-9 in the voting. "It's the biggest thing that's happened to me in my whole life."

Three other players received one vote each from the 24-man BBWAA board, two from each of the National League cities.

They were Montreal third baseman Larry Parrish, second baseman Manny Trillo of Chicago Cubs and relief pitcher Rawly Eastwick of Cincinnati Reds.

HAD 15-9 RECORD
After winning 15 games in the minors in 1974, Montefusco joined the Giants late in the season and won three games for them. The hard-throwing right-hander established himself as a strikeout artist in spring training this year and went on to become San Francisco's bread-and-butter pitcher with a 15-9 record and 215 strikeouts.

His victories were the most ever by a Giant rookie and his strikeout total narrowly missed tying the first-year record for pitchers established by Grover Cleveland Alexander, who had 227 in 1911.

Montefusco had four shutouts, pitched 244 innings and wound up with a 2.88 earned-run average, seventh best in the league.

Delay granted

Beavers' demand approved by league heads

Sherbrooke Beavers' appeal which was slated to be heard this evening in Quebec City was extended to Nov. 12 or 13 at the request of the local club.

The Beavers, through their legal advisors Roch Fournier and Jacques O'Bready, asked the delay in order to prepare their case. Raymond Lagace, league president, granted their demand and set the date around Nov. 12 or 13, depending when both parties are prepared.

Mr. O'Bready has agreed to give a helping hand to Mr. Fournier in their battle against the league's decision. He is not there as the mayor of the city but just as another lawyer to help in the battle.

Mr. O'Bready stated, "There is more than just the fine of $25,000 involved in this affair. The reputations of two individuals are a big factor in the case and this shouldn't be treated lightly. I advised President Lagace that the club wasn't interested in going to court but if it's impossible to obtain justice from the league then we will be obliged to do so."

"We preferred to seek an extension instead of going to court for an injunction. This has been granted. The main reason is to permit myself, and Mr. Fournier, more time to study and prepare our case when it goes before the Appeal Board," further added Mr. O'Bready.

Proceeding in this manner it is better for both parties, the Beavers and the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, said Mr. O'Bready.

Ghislain Delage left a teaching career to become an instructor in hockey while Georges Guilbault earns his living dealing with hockey clubs all over the world and the league's decision could have a very important bearing on their careers, stated Mr. O'Bready.

"You can't openly run down a man's career, as in this case. This is a big factor as league officials stated so through various newspapers in the Province. They stated that Delage had no control over his players, hence the reason why so many fights and rough play. This will have to be proven and under the circumstances we will be in a position to prove otherwise," stated Mr. Fournier.

Robert "Shmoe" Simpson, on behalf of the players forwarded a letter to the league claiming they were the principal factors and outlined the reason why Georges Guilbault and the executive took the decision they did.

"Why the league took it out on Ghislain Delage and Georges Guilbault is hard to understand," stated Bob Simpson. "Our parents told us it wouldn't be safe if we went to Shawinigan under the conditions, existing at that time, and we discussed this matter with the club and they in turn made the decision," added Robert Simpson.

The players composed a letter, which was signed by all, to thank the board of directors for their decision in not trying to send them to Shawinigan. "We are not afraid to play any club, any place, but under the proper conditions and not with similar conditions hanging over our heads," further added Robert Simpson.

The club's lawyers are now studying the files to see just how similar cases have been reversed by the court in favor of the club. This is the main reason why they asked for an extension in the case.

Leafs upset Sabres, Hawks stop Habs

General manager Jim Gregory and coach Red Kelly of Toronto Maple Leafs must have enjoyed Wednesday night's game against Buffalo Sabres.

Only a day earlier, team president Harold Ballard had announced that Buffalo general manager Punch Imlach can come back to work for the Leafs anytime he wanted.

But Wednesday night the Leafs turned on Imlach and his Sabres, handing them their first defeat of the National Hockey League season by a 3-2 margin.

Ballard said Tuesday it was a shame Imlach was fired as coach and general manager in 1969 and added that his organization (with Gregory and Kelly in charge) worked hard but didn't seem to get anywhere.

In Wednesday's other games, New York Rangers downed St. Louis Blues 3-1, Detroit Red Wings dropped California Seals 6-4, Chicago Black Hawks edged Montreal Canadiens 2-1 and Minnesota North Stars blanked Kansas City Scouts 2-0.

At the other end of the scale from Buffalo were the floundering Wings, who became the last NHL team to win its first game of the season. Detroit had seven losses and three ties before Wednesday's game.

Mickey Redmond and Bill McKechnie scored twice each for the Wings. Rick Hampton scored two goals for California.

PULLED DRYDEN

Cliff Koroll broke a scoreless deadlock at Chicago midway in the final period and Dale Tallon added an insurance marker with just over a minute to go after Montreal pulled goalie Ken Dryden for a sixth attacker.

Minnesota goalie Pete LoPresti blocked 23 shots and goals by Bill Goldsworthy and Ernie Hicke enabled the North Stars to end a five-game losing streak.

"They (Kansas City) didn't get any shots from the slot," said the 21-year-old LoPresti, who turned in the second shutout of his NHL career. "From where they had to shoot, a goalie should stop them."

Tonight's schedule has Toronto at Philadelphia Flyers, Vancouver Canucks at Buffalo, St. Louis at Boston Bruins, Washington Capitals at Kansas City and Pittsburgh Penguins at Los Angeles Kings.

Remparts make deal with Sorel

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Remparts have concluded a Quebec Major Junior Hockey League trade with Sorel Black Hawks, acquiring 18-year-old right winger Michel Frechette.

The Hawks received left winger Denis Groulx, 18, and centre Jean-Francois Boutin, 17, who has been playing with Ste. Foy Couillards, the Remparts' development club in the Quebec Junior A Hockey League.

Hockey officials remain cool
over question on violence

The seed that Bobby Hull planted when he staged a one-game sitdown over hockey violence last weekend has blossomed into a debate between politicians and promoters.

The announced crackdown on violence by Ontario Attorney-General Roy McMurtry in professional hockey got political support in Ottawa but the reaction of hockey officials was, at best, cool.

In Ottawa, Justice Minister Ron Basford urged all provincial attorneys-general to follow Ontario's lead and enforce the law as it relates to violence in hockey.

Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said his league will conform with the attorney-general's wishes. But Ben Hatskin, chief executive officer of the World Hockey Association, contended Ontario was over-reacting.

FINED PLAYERS
Hatskin said players were assessed fines totalling $4,100 above the automatic fines in an effort to curb violence.

"Many people have made the inference that some of our owners actually promote violence in order to sell seats," Hatskin said. "This is not the case."

Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Players' Association, said cases of vicious assaults on the ice were dealt with adequately by the league and players and called hockey "everybody's whipping boy."

Hull, the veteran scoring star who plays for Winnipeg Jets of the WHA, announced last week he would sit out indefinitely in protest over increasing violence in the game.

He was especially upset by an incident during a game against Cincinnati in which team-mate Perry Miller was attacked by three Cincinnati players after scoring a goal.

LASTED ONE GAME
Hull's one-man protest lasted only one game. He was back in the Winnipeg lineup Sunday night.

McMurtry announced Tuesday that police and Crown Attorneys in Ontario have been instructed to lay more charges against professional hockey players who commit criminal offences on the ice.

The attorney-general said he gave the order to crack down on violence in the game because he is concerned that millions of television viewers—especially young children—see players commit acts which breach the Criminal Code of Canada.

He said the NHL and WHA were notified of the order by telegram.

Last year, McMurtry's brother, William, prepared a report on violence in amateur hockey for provincial government.

Chief Harold Adamson of Metropolitan Toronto police said he does not regard many of the incidents that occur in hockey games as sufficiently serious to warrant a criminal charge.
