trols of her country's state machinery as a result of the recent victorious war with Pakistan that saw the creation of the state of Bangladesh.

Little changed after 22 months Marketing legislation law

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal farm marketing legislation became law Wednesday, essentially unchanged despite a sometimes-fierce parliamentary fight over 22 months.

It permits nationally-co-ordinated marketing agencies to control the production, marketing, price and promotion of classes of farm commodities where farmers desire such an arrangement.

As amended before receiving the final formality of royal assent Wednesday, the legislation now covers farmers previously unaffected by collective marketing policies.

A majority of farmers producing a specific commodity or class of commodities must approve the agency by vote before the federal cabinet is empowered to establish it.

Egg, chicken and turkey producers have been the only class to voice any interest in such controls and therefore they are the only farmers specifically mentioned in the legislation.

Grain and dairy farmers are excluded because they now have marketing agencies. The Canadian wheat board long has been the marketing agency for Western producers of grains including wheat, oats and barley.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson says the act is simply enabling legislation which farmers can use if they wish. It does little more than provide co-ordinated marketing possibilities for the bulk of Canadian farmers, says his deputy, Syd Williams.

ALLOWS QUOTAS

It permits marketing agencies, working with provincial authorities to license farmers, set quotas and invoke other marketing restrictions felt necessary to co-ordinate the marketing of a particular commodity.

Farmers refusing to conform to such rules could have their licences revoked, be fined or sent to prison.

Opponents criticize the act's failure to restrict imports of a commodity controlled domestically by a marketing agency. They say similar products can undermine sales of the domestically-controlled commodity.

Critics also say the proposed agencies would fragment Canadian farm trade. Agencies in different parts of the country would work at cross purposes with each other.

These differences have been the crux of battles fought in forums ranging from the Supreme Court of Canada and Parliament to the community level.

Since the bill was introduced March 17, 1970, it has weathered two parliamentary sessions, 19 days of Commons debate, two all-night sittings — one in the agriculture committee, the other in the Commons itself — a Supreme Court battle, bitter federal-provincial negotiations, 49 lengthy committee sessions and cross-country hearings.

It was first debated by the Commons 10 days, then referred to the agriculture committee. That group first met on the bill in September, 1970, shortly after a federal-provincial conference in Ottawa agreed the legislation could solve a marketing war in the chicken-and-egg industry.

The so-called war began when Quebec, facing a glut of poultry products, set up a marketing board to control the movement of eggs, chickens and turkeys from other provinces. Other provinces followed.

Since then, the main disputants — Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba — have agreed to regulate the supply and price of poultry products. The marketing bill simply fits a course of action the provincial poultry producers began working on last year.

Before the poultry war was resolved, however, the legality of provincial marketing agencies was tested in the Supreme Court by Manitoba. The court ruled in June that interprovincial restrictions on trade are illegal under the British North America Act.

Parliamentary opponents to the marketing bill had hoped the Supreme Court hearing would lead to a ban on the type of agencies outlined in the bill. National marketing agencies, however, would not necessarily impose interprovincial restrictions and the high court decision did nothing to alter the legislation.

Tabs police corruption

MONTREAL (CP) — Le Devoir says Montreal Police Chief Jacques Saulnier of Montreal accepted a $700 color television set from a local owner in 1966 while he was commanding officer of the police morality squad.

The newspaper says that infraction of the police code of discipline and other irregularities in the squad were made known to Jean-Paul Gilbert, former police chief, and Mayor Jean Drapeau well before Mr. Saulnier was named Montreal police chief.

It says circumstances on the TV gift were related in a special report given to Mr. Gilbert Feb. 14, 1967, by Leslie Hobbs, then assistant police chief and now chief of Montreal port police.

Le Devoir quotes the report as saying the TV set, valued at $709, was given to Capt. Jacques Saulnier of the morality squad in December, 1966, by Israel Kugiel, owner of the LaSalle Hotel.

Wants projects explanation

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal anti-poverty group wants Manpower Minister Otto Lang to explain at a public meeting within the next week why citizens' groups are allegedly being denied projects under the federal government's local incentives program.

In a statement issued Wednesday following a meeting of the Greater Montreal Anti-poverty Co-ordinating Committee, committee chairman Helen Bastien said the manpower department has been accepting or refusing projects primarily for political reasons.

The committee, which represents 22 Montreal area citizens' organizations, said it also wants the meeting with the minister to press for an extension of the program's deadlines and the appointment of an appeal board to review applications.

Air technicians walk out

MONTREAL (CP) — Radar, navigational aids and communications technicians at Montreal International and nearby St. Hubert airports walked off their jobs at 1 a.m. today in a 24-hour study session protesting a conciliation board report on contract negotiations.

A spokesman for the air traffic control at Montreal International Airport said the walkout could result in delays if any of the equipment maintained by the technicians broke down.

Says salary demands high

QUEBEC (CP) — A claim for a $100-a-week minimum salary in the Quebec civil service cannot be met and cannot be defended by the unions which made it, says Jean-Paul L'Allier, civil service minister.

"I am no more capable of promising all employees of the state of Quebec and its partners a minimum salary of $100 a week than the union common front can defend it all the way," Mr. L'Allier said.

The civil service minister was speaking in an exclusive interview with The Canadian Press in which he was questioned about progress in negotiations with 250,000 civil servants and employees of provincially-owned enterprises.

Calls quota "deplorable"

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec's deputy minister of municipal affairs says a decision by suburban Lachine to establish a linguistic quota system in the hiring of all future city employees is a "highly deplorable practice."

Richard Beaulieu said in an interview that, to the best of his knowledge, it marks the first time that a municipality has officially and openly adopted such a policy.

Less than 10 per cent of Lachine's current city employees are English-speaking. The quota system will raise the figure to 40 per cent.

Mayor Jean-Guy Chartier said there had been several cases of discrimination in Lachine in the past. He said that 95 per cent of the city's employees are French-speaking, but only 60 per cent of the citizens in the municipality speak French.

Henceforth, Mr. Chartier said, of every 10 new employees hired, six should be French and four English.

The mayor added, however, that French would remain the working language in the suburb, and English-speaking persons hired would have to have a sufficient knowledge of French to comply with the practice.

Trudeau hits the Sutton slopes

SUTTON (JD) — Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau finally emerged on the Ski East scene this week, during almost ideal spring skiing conditions.

Mr. Trudeau, his wife Margaret, son Justin-Pierre and a doting grandmother, Mrs. James Sinclair, have taken up residence in a private chalet near Mont Sutton.

The Prime Minister is taking skiing lessons from Sutton's pro, Jean Lessard. Mr. Lessard described the Prime Minister as being "a willing pupil."

The Trudeau and Mrs. Sinclair left the streets of Knowlton ward, Town of Brome Lake, bare Tuesday night as citizens rushed to l'Auberge du Relais to catch a glimpse of Canada's first couple. They were dinner guests of Mr. Lessard.

There seems to be a strong predilection for ski areas in the Trudeaus' short period of marriage. They spent their honeymoon at Whistler Mountain, B.C., and have made frequent trips to Laurentian ski areas.

This is believed to be Mrs. Trudeau's first outing in the Eastern Townships, in what was once Graffley country.

Well informed sources have the family departing the area before the weekend avalanche of skiers takes place.

Maurice Proteau, owner of l'Auberge du Relais, said "My wife thought the baby, Justin-Pierre, was a doll."

Stoned skyjacker surrenders after six hours

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A young hijacker who said he had been smoking marijuana seized a jetliner over Texas Wednesday and held seven crew members hostage for six hours before surrendering without a fight.

The hijacker, identified as Billy Eugene Hurst, 22, of Mesquite, Tex., was captured when police and FBI agents jointly rushed into the parked jet at Love Field in Dallas after the hostages had been released. No one was injured.

The FBI said Hurst would be charged with air piracy and interfering with a flight crew.

The hijacker used a .22-calibre pistol to commandeer the jet after it left Houston en route to Dallas. He said he had seven sticks of dynamite in his attache case to blow up the craft if his demand for $1 million in ransom was not met. And he said he planned to parachute into the South American jungle.

After his arrest, his attache case was found to contain only personal belongings and some .22-calibre shells.

The 94 passengers aboard the plane were allowed to get off after landing in Dallas. The hijacker kept four hostesses and three members of the flight crew captive inside the parked jet at a remote part of the airport.

In addition to ransom money, he demanded parachutes and jungle survival equipment.

He told crew members he had been taking drugs with a girl in Houston, and later talked about smoking marijuana.

The hijacker had ordered the jet to take off by 6:40 p.m. EST, but airline officials told him a fuel leak in an engine needed to be repaired before takeoff.

At 10 p.m., the seven hostages came out of the plane. The hijacker was seized 30 minutes later and taken to Dallas County jail.

Tension inside the cabin grew as the hours passed with the plane sitting on a remote ramp at the airport.

"Please hurry up and get something out here," a crew member radioed. "This guy is getting jumpy. We've been sitting here for two hours trying to get him calmed down."

Later a man identified only as a doctor advised one of the stewardesses to "put the mother act on him."

"That won't work," replied Pat Hampton, a stewardess. "He can't stand women. He's made it clear that he wouldn't hesitate killing us."

SEIZED QUICKLY

The Braniff International flight took off in early afternoon from Houston with stops scheduled in Dallas, Kansas City and Minneapolis. The man seized it shortly after it left Houston, saying he had a bomb, authorities said.

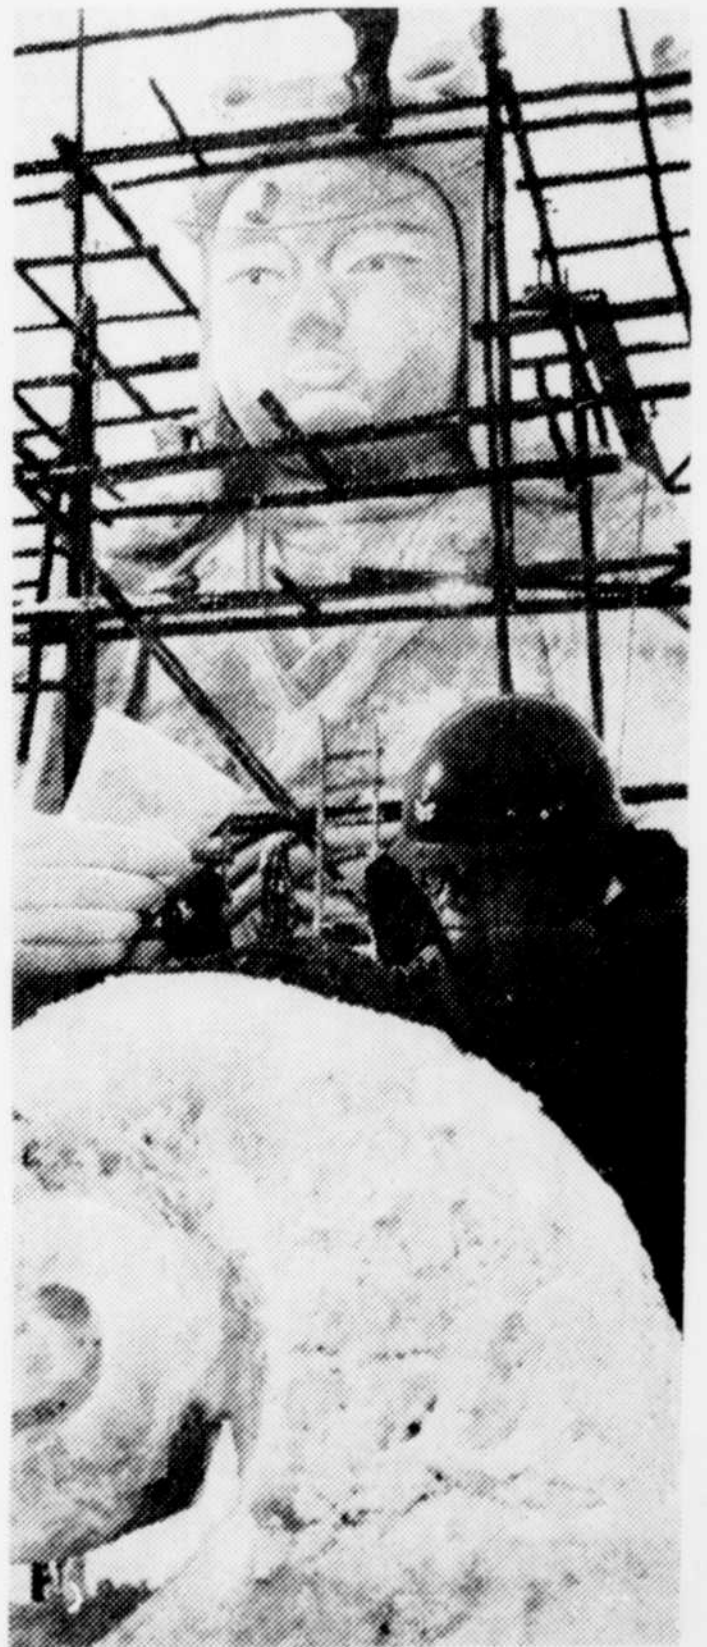

One of the crew members reported by radio that the hijacker, described as white and about 22 years old, said he had received an undesirable discharge from military service.

He is reported to have sat grinning, with his feet propped up, and holding a pistol on one of the stewardesses while the plane was on the ground in Dallas.

Food, cigarettes and a jungle survival kit were delivered to the plane, with a hostess going outside to bring them into the craft, a police spokesman reported.

The man was told that Braniff officials were trying to get the $1 million from Dallas banks, which closed about the time the plane landed.

LADY AND THE SOLDIER — A Japanese soldier takes part in traditional winter festival at Sapporo, site of the 1972 Winter Olympic Games, as a replica of an ancient address surveys the scene. The Olympics run from Feb. 3-13.

Maverick member in PC fold

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Frank Moores, Newfoundland Progressive Conservative leader, patched up his differences with Tom Burgess, New Labrador Party leader, early today and said he understood Mr. Burgess was not a member of the Liberal party.

Mr. Moores' announcement here came after he spoke with Mr. Burgess in Happy Valley, Nfld., by telephone, a conversation arranged by reporter Gerry Korbei of radio station VQCM here.

The agreement between Mr. Moores and Mr. Burgess restored the Conservatives to top place in the confused Newfoundland political situation.

If Mr. Burgess had joined the Liberals and sought the Liberal leadership to be vacated by Premier Joseph Smallwood in early February, as he was accused of doing by Mr. Moores Wednesday night, the 42-seat legislature would have been split 21-21.

Earlier Mr. Burgess said he would support the Conservatives, giving them a clear majority in the provincial legislature. The Conservatives won 21 seats in the Oct. 28 general election, the Liberals 20 and Mr. Burgess was the lone NLP member elected.

The announcement by Mr. Moores came on the eve of a scheduled cabinet meeting at which Premier Joseph Smallwood was expected to give notice of his government's resignation or its plans to stay in office.

Ghana army grabs power

LAGOS, Nigeria (Reuter) — Army officers have seized power in Ghana and Prime Minister Kofi Busia has been dismissed from office, Ghana radio announced today.

The announcement was made by an army colonel.

He told Ghanaians to remain calm and said the situation was under complete control.

There was no immediate word on the whereabouts of Busia, the 58-year-old scholar who leads the governing Progress party.

The radio said the government would be placed in the hands of a national liberation group composed of civic groups and army representatives.

The army officer charged Busia with malpractices and economic mismanagement which, he said, had characterized the regime of former Ghana leader Kwame Nkrumah.

He said the prime minister also had been carrying out arbitrary arrests.

IRA terrorists kill cop

BELFAST (AP) — A Protestant reservist policeman was shot dead in a Roman Catholic area of Belfast late Wednesday night, raising to 210 the death toll in Northern Ireland's 29 months of violence.

The part-time police officer, electrician Raymond Denham, 43, was killed at work in a printer's shop by two men believed by police to belong to an Irish Republican Army execution squad.

He was the second man shot dead in Belfast in two days.

In other action, men of the two feuding wings of the outlawed IRA joined in a sharp gun battle with British troops in Londonderry, a joint operation that boded more trouble in Northern Ireland.

Spokesman for the two IRA factions said two British troops were hit in the half-hour engagement near the Roman Catholic Bogside district of the city.

The army said none of its men was injured and said four IRA gunmen were seen to fall and were dragged away.

JOINT EFFORT

Authorities said it was the first time the IRA "official" and militant "provisional" wings have gotten together for a joint operation in recent years.

Both factions are dedicated to ousting the British from Northern Ireland and uniting the predominantly-Protestant North with the predominantly-Roman Catholic Irish Republic.

The fight began soon after an army helicopter was fired on and the pilot called in two patrols of Coldstream Guards.

An army spokesman said the gunmen were flushed out into an open area near the Londonderry cemetery.

Some parents bringing their children home from school threw themselves flat to avoid the fusillade from both sides.

More gunfire broke out around an army post in Bligh's Road. The post was stoned by a fast-gathering crowd of nearly 100. Troops fired tear-gas grenades.

The Dick and Mao Show Trip televised

WASHINGTON (AP) — Part of President Nixon's journey to Peking next month will be televised live in the United States and probably will be followed by a springtime visit here by Chinese table tennis players, the White House said Wednesday.

Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told reporters that the Chinese will hire an American firm to set up a portable ground station at the Peking Airport which will be capable of transmitting full press coverage—voice, print and pictures—to the U.S.

FESTIVE AIR — Allan J. Ryan will be among the star performers who feature this weekend's Festival

Council approves bond issue

COWANSVILLE (JD) — Council approved two bond issues at the regular meeting here Monday night — one of $143,000, the other of $198,000, both payable over a 20-year term at 8½ per cent.

The bonds, redeemable through the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, will issued in $100 units. The issues are to cover projected expropriation and winter works projects.

A notice of motion for another bond issue in the amount of $490,000, tabled Dec. 6, 1971, was approved. That issue is to cover accumulated water works projects.

Council was informed that building permits issued in December totaled $37,700, for a cumulative 1971 of $2,812,879.

Council approved a by-law establishing a minimum annual water tax of $56 for the majority of the population. Council will study the demand metre situation prevalent among heavy industry where the present minimum is $28.

The Quebec municipal commission has approved three of five winter works projects submitted by Cowansville. Two others are awaiting federal approval.

Included in local winter works projects are the construction of four foot-bridges over the Yamaska River, a promenade along the Yamaska, cleaning up the island in the artificial Lake, and construction of four small control dams on the Yamaska.

Council approved an increase in taxi fares. The drop remains at 50 cents. However, riders will now be charged five cents per tenth of a mile instead of a nickel per seventh of a mile. Waiting time has been increased from $3 to $4 per hour.

Councillor Rosaire Raymond suggested the town should ask

Bell Telephone to include Yellow Page advertising from all municipalities served in the Granby area directory included in the next issue. "We know all the merchants in Cowansville and we should be able to go after it if we cannot find what we want at home," Mr. Raymond said.

The meeting was chaired by pro-mayor Dr. Gilles Bisson.

The imposable tax roll for 1972 was deposited in the amount of $39,589,500. Non-imposable evaluation was placed at $11,092,880 for a total of $50,682,380.

Wants tax bill clarification

SHERBROOKE (LH) — "It's too bad Edgar Benson isn't here. There's a rumor going around that the new tax legislation is so confusing even he doesn't understand it!" Chamber of Commerce delegate Lewis Rosenbloom said last night.

He went on to thank the Chamber's two guest speakers, Gilles Coulombe, a lawyer, and Leo Provencher, a chartered accountant, for explaining the "confusing" legislation to the delegates.

Mr. Provencher explained several of the major changes under federal Bill C-259, now the new tax law. He cited the eventual reduction of the import tax on companies, the eventual abolition of estate and gift taxes and the implementation of a "semi-tax" on capital gains as some of the major changes resulting from the bill.

"The new tax law," he said, "culminates almost 10 years of discussion and hopefully will help in the development of Canada's fiscal prosperity."

His colleague, Leo Provencher, explained the need for estate planning under the new law. Though the estate tax on goods such as a car or house passed on after death from one member of a family to another will be abolished, goods received as a beneficiary to a will can now be taxed under the new capital gains tax.

This, he explained, creates the need for estate planning. It is better for a parent to give his property to his children, while still "maintaining control" of it, in order to minimize the effects of taxation.

Five types of taxation affect estates, he said. When planning an estate, "one must bear in mind inheritance rights in Quebec, federal death taxes, provincial income tax, federal income tax and gift money."

Gifts given to immediate relatives before death, and the sale of "negative" insurance, are the best ways to minimize taxation. Negative insurance, he explained, ultimately benefits "the government, not the inheritors."

Apple cider was served with the dinner, immediately preceding the guest speakers.

"Cider is a new product, and it's made right in this area. Why shouldn't we help popularize it?" Henri J. M. Beaudot, manager of the Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce, said last night.

Hold benefit

BULWER (LH) — "People can give what they feel. We aren't charging admission," Sidney Prescott of Bulwer said yesterday.

Mr. Prescott, a "life-long friend" of Donald Langworth, will be one of the entertainers at a benefit dance being held for the Langworth's tomorrow.

The dance is being held at the Country Inn on the Stanstead highway near Earlstown, between 9 p.m. and 1 a.m. Friday evening and Saturday morning. Doug and Diana McNab, owners of the Inn, have donated it for the evening.

Jerry and JoAnne and the Cajun Country Gentleman will provide the dance music at the benefit. Sidney Prescott will play the fiddle, and Charles Robinson of Bulwer will call the square dances.

The benefit dance is being sponsored by the Lennoxville Optimist Club. No admission will be charged, but a member of the Optimist Club will be on hand at the door to accept donations for the benefit fund. The entertainers are donating their services.

The fund has been set up so that Mr. Langworth can buy new farm equipment. Mr. Langworth's four children perished in a blaze at the Langworth farm in Johnville Tuesday, Dec. 28.

RWC studies year's priorities

SHERBROOKE (LH) — The Sherbrooke county Regional Welfare Council with offices at 1144 King Street West in Sherbrooke, last week formulated its short-term priorities for the coming year.

The five priorities will be studied by various committees of the RWC and regular reports will be made to the RWC.

Reports will be made on the absence of welfare resources for psychotic children, Sherbrooke county has no facilities at present for psychotic children.

Sherbrooke as well has no youth detention centre. This service is provided in Montreal, which will soon be unable to cope with this task. Efforts will be made to coordinate "institutionalized social services."

The RWC will specifically concern itself with a children's referral service.

The RWC will study the feasibility of improving welfare services for children by forming a "regional admissions committee for child placement services." The committee, it is hoped, will make better use of manpower and other regional resources to place needy children in the proper institution or in other ways provide a service for them.

The last priority of the RWC is the evaluation of a formula which has been used for the past six months to place needy children in the correct social institution. The RWC will attempt to have the formula applied on a province-wide basis if the evaluation of the formula shows it has been successful.

The Eastern Townships Regional Planning Committee, working under the auspices of the RWC, will study the question of "exceptional children and their specific needs and problems" in the coming year. The ETRPC also will work towards the coordination of health and welfare services in the fifth provincial administrative region, which includes Sherbrooke county.

All's well in Cowansville

COWANSVILLE (JD) — policemen and members of the Volunteer Fire Brigade were out for a regular practice when and Fire Hall Monday night. The cleanlines became the order of the day-oops, evening.

Squad car No. 2 was shined-unmarked but shined-till it glistened in its pristine purple beauty. God help the unfortunate who took it out that night.

Hoses and fittings were checked, the fire engines rendered spotless.

Highlight of the evening was the camaraderie of the men — professional and volunteer alike. Assistant police chief Arthur Jacques and his counterpart Richard Charbonneau, Co-Fire Chief, directed the operations. One got the impression equipment must be spanking clean before a fire can be fought.

Roller bearings in the vehicle doors were lubricated. Everything pointed to a Tuesday inspection. Mr. Jacques replied with only an unobtrusive wink.

The degree of cooperation between the men bodes well for Cowansville citizens.

Lives in hideout house

MONTREAL (CP) — The new owner of the St. Luc, Que. farmhouse used as a hideout by the Rose brothers and Francis Simard in 1970 says he has no plans to capitalize on its notoriety.

year-old McGill University librarian, bought the St. Luc farm last August after some weeks of house hunting and moved his family of three into the backroad homestead 30 miles southeast of Montreal.

"Some people have jokingly suggested we should turn it into a museum," he said in an interview Wednesday. "Nothing could be further from my mind."

Mr. Veldhuizen said the house required extensive repairs because of looting. Doors, light fixtures and even the toilet seats were stolen after the house was abandoned following the arrest of the fugitives Dec. 28, 1970.

He has completely blocked off the tunnel and underground bunker used by the trio as a hideout after the kidnap-slaying of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte in October.

Tragedy

The tragedy of the war in Northern Ireland is that the seeds of war have been there for 50 years, but next to nothing was done while there was time.

Just as nothing, or virtually nothing, was done in the decades given us all to work on the deep problems between West and East Pakistan, between Pakistan and India and between the Israeli, the Arab lands and the displaced Palestinians, until war erupted.

The Vietnam war did not appear overnight.

These are the "it might have beens" which stand out when one runs through a dozen new research reports on the origins of today's wars prepared by scholars at 11 colleges and universities.

What we all do — almost all countries with the technical capabilities — is wait until war comes, emotions are high and the policies of the warring groups have become rigid. Then someone steps in, often at very high cost in money, in dissension and lives.

Studies on the Middle East which go back to the founding of Israel note that reports were made more than 20 years ago pinpointing clearly the frictions which have been root causes of Israeli-Arab wars.

Studies on Southeast Asia made quite clear, even as the Second World War was ending, the political instability endemic in that region whether the French returned or whether they abandoned the area. But the belief persisted that if the French could just be gotten out, somehow stability would develop out of the chaos.

Scholars, in the long years since the partition of the Indian subcontinent and the creation of Pakistan, have dwelt on the racial problems of East Bengal and West Pakistan and the Hindu-Moslem conflicts which plague the whole of central South Asia. These problems were allowed to fester. Then there was war. Despite the creation of Bangladesh. Continuing guerrilla underground war, on again and off again, is almost a certainty.

The research that has been done on these problems gives the lie to the argument that nothing could have been done — or that nothing can be done in other trouble spots that have not yet erupted in war.

Certainly there are some very real limitations on what can be done by outside countries and outside official organizations dealing with sovereign governments. But there are actions that can be taken.

One piece of recent research suggests, for example, that an increase in foreign investment, bringing more industry and jobs to Northern Ireland, would most certainly have relieved some of the Protestant-Catholic pressures.

The world organizations could certainly have put more pressure on India and Pakistan for early water settlements helpful to East Bengal.

Perhaps there needs to be some organizational method of providing governments with information on how other governments in similar situations have successfully solved critical cleavages within their populations. This information might be accepted and studied if presented by some powerless unofficial body, offered in such a way that there is no suggestion of interference.

Where does a drug lover go?

By Korky Koroluk

Where does a teen-ager go when he has a problem with alcohol or drugs? Must his parents and police find out? Some provinces offer treatment only in hospitals; others have special centres or foundations where help is available. But a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows there is a good deal of legal and moral doubt about whether parents and police must or should be informed when a minor has a drug problem.

Only in Quebec has the government directed hospitals to treat minors for alcoholism or drug addiction without informing parents or police. No such directive exists elsewhere. Generally, no notification is made, but there are exceptions and doubts from coast to coast. In Newfoundland, a health department spokesman said it is left to the discretion of the attending physician whether or not to report to parents. The government's medical advisers encourage doctors not to report cases to police.

IT DEPENDS

In British Columbia, whether treatment is kept confidential or not often depends upon circumstances. A person of 17 or 18, although a minor, will probably be handled without parental consultation if he is known to be married or self-supporting. Duncan Bradford, executive director of the B.C. Hospitals Association, says there is "a good deal of uncertainty among hospitals and the medical profession" about where they stand legally in providing treatment and anonymity to minors.

Ray Maitland, deputy chief of police in Victoria, thinks police should know of all cases so they know who is abusing the law.

"I can't see why (minors) should have immunity," he said. In Alberta, Dr. John Read, medical administrator of the University Hospital in Edmonton, said his hospital two years ago was the first in Canada to publicly state that it would treat minors "without necessarily informing the parents."

"The board felt it was most important they got these kids in for treatment."

WORK ON PATIENTS

Once the crisis is over, the hospital tries to convince the patient to tell his parents, but if the patient insists on anonymity, the matter isn't pressed.

The situation, province by province: Newfoundland—There are no special regulations covering treatment of minors. Whether or not parents are informed is left up to the attending physician, who is encouraged not to inform police. Physicians have been told by government medical advisers that they are under no obligation to do so.

The general practice is that hospitals and doctors encourage the patient to go to his parents of his own accord. In especially hazardous or prolonged cases, the doctor would probably report to parents, especially if he thought the patient would benefit.

There are no special centres outside regular hospitals for treatment of drug or alcohol cases.

Prince Edward Island—No special regulations concerning treatment of minors have been issued. Informing parents and police is left to the discretion of the doctor.

The province has an alcoholism treatment centre and a youth services centre to help in drug cases. There, too, it is left for the doctor to decide whether parents and police should be informed.

Nova Scotia—The province has no special regulations concerning treatment of minors. A spokesman said he knows of no legal requirement under which hospitals or doctors must inform parents, but a police spokesman said that in almost all cases, parental consent is sought before medication is given. Thus, most parents are told.

The province has no special treatment centres other than regular hospitals.

New Brunswick—There are no special regulations covering treatment of minors. Doctors and hospitals are not obliged to inform parents, but a health department official said it is a generally accepted guideline that doctors don't treat minors without parental consent except in emergencies. Then, parents are notified later.

There are no treatment centres outside hospitals, but there are several drop-in places where someone will help a youngster on a bad trip.

Quebec—The social affairs department earlier this week directed hospitals to treat minors for alcoholism or drug addiction without informing parents or police, and to keep files on such patients confidential. The department said the move is part of a new policy to give young addicts the best possible treatment under the most advantageous conditions.

Besides hospitals, there are clinics run by the Organization for the Prevention and Treatment of Alcoholism and other Toxicomania, which are now, or soon will be, attached to hospitals to provide more complete and better care. There is also the Drug Aid program, implemented in several centres under the Opportunities for Youth plan. These, too, must protect the anonymity of patients.

Ontario—There are no special regulations covering treatment of minors. Doctors and hospitals are not obliged to report to parents or police. Whether parents actually are informed or not varies widely from hospital to hospital.

The Addiction Research Foundation is the main treatment centre outside regular hospitals, although there are several drop-in centres where youngsters may obtain help. The foundation keeps details of all patients—regardless of age or the nature of the problem—strictly confidential. This is a self-imposed and widely-advertised policy. Otherwise, said foundation director Dr. David Archibald, the foundation would not get the voluntary patients needed for its numerous studies in alcoholism and drug addiction.

Manitoba—The province has no special regulations concerning treatment of minors. There is no legal requirement to inform parents or police if a minor comes in with a drug problem. However, if treatment is necessary, the hospital is legally required to obtain parental consent. If the case can be handled on an out-patient basis, anonymity is often preserved by a slight bending of the regulations.

There are several drug-referral centres in operation where anonymity is usually preserved. Dr. R. H. Tavener, assistant deputy minister of health, said such problems should be handled on an individual basis.

He said the decision regarding anonymity usually rests finally with the doctor.

Saskatchewan—There are no special regulations covering treatment of minors. Dr. S. L. Skoll, deputy minister of health, said there is no official policy that minors be treated without informing parents. He said most such cases are handled on an out-patient basis. He said treatment can be kept confidential at the discretion of the doctor, and guessed that most doctors don't automatically inform police.

There are no special treatment centres outside regular hospitals.

Alberta—No special regulations covering treatment of minors have been issued. Anonymity is preserved at the University Hospital in Edmonton, but in Calgary, Dr. J. C. Johnston, executive director at General Hospital said the question "may be a moral one," which likely has to be resolved between the patient and doctor. Dr. Read said he thinks "the majority of these problems should be handled by the kids themselves," because a youngster is often more experienced in helping friends on bad trips.

There are several drop-in centres or "street agencies" where help may be obtained. Police like to encourage these agencies, so they don't pry for information about those being treated there.

British Columbia—There are no special regulations covering treatment of minors. There are no regulations requiring hospitals to disclose or keep confidential records of minors in such cases, and hospitals are advised by the government to consult their solicitors before making such decisions. Whether anonymity can be legally protected, Dr. Bradford said, is "a 50-50 question."

"One problem is that the kids won't come to hospitals and doctors for treatment if a requirement for treatment is parental consent."

The Alcoholism Foundation of B.C., the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of B.C. and a few youth-oriented organizations have clinics outside regular hospitals, and have policies of protecting anonymity while admitting they don't know if they are within the law to do so. E. D. McRae, executive director of the alcoholism foundation, said the foundation reserves the right to keep patients anonymous, and "that has been our stand for 17 years."

Dan Finney, executive director of the Vancouver Child Welfare Society, pinpointed one reason why the decision to tell parents or not is an agonizing one. He said treatment of minors presents "a very real problem due to the mobility of youth and the fact that many are alienated from their parents."

"Hospitals, doctors and organizations such as ours are constantly in conflict between the rights of parents and the rights of children."

"The whole question is complicated by the fact there are numerous regulations. There is a lot of legislation relating to consent of minors and what doctors, hospitals and others can or can't do. There is no question that changes are needed. Our laws in this area are out of date because of the changes taking place in society."

DISCUSSED RIGHTS

Robert Reid, legal counsel to the Addiction Research Foundation in Ontario, recently wrote an article in which he discussed the rights of parents and the rights of the child with respect to treatment. He concluded that the law in this area is uncertain.

He wrote: "It is a principle of the law that one person may not make a contract that binds another without his consent; that is, no one is invested with inherent authority to bind another. Parents of teen-agers are in no different position than other people in this respect. It would therefore be strange if a parent could release claims that his child would otherwise have."

Council's view

Dear Sir,
After several promises for the renovation of the dam here in Scotstown, there is nothing being done about same.
We, the Scotstown town council, hope that this project will be realized in 1972, which will give work to our many unemployed and will certainly improve the appearance of the town as far as tourists are concerned.
This project is strongly backed by the town council and by the population of Scotstown.

Mrs. Real Boulanger,
Secretary-treasurer,
Scotstown.

Clarification

Dear Sir,
I would like to draw your attention to a statement attributed to me which suggests that the competency of the Eastern Townships Regional School Board is the central point in question.

The aim of our committee is to show that the ETRSB budget was presented in a way that was difficult for delegates to understand. There are also some other errors in your article which I feel need some precise clarification.

Firstly, it is not a question of 33 cents per $100 valuation increase in taxes. The point at issue is that this amount is totally inadmissible. In addition, the options permitted under Bill 27 are as follows:

- 1 — The delegation of certain responsibilities by the Sector Board to the Regional Board. It is the possibility that this option may be taken, which greatly concerns our committee.
- 2 — An independent elementary Sector Board and an independent Secondary Regional Board, and.
- 3 — Two separate Sector Boards both responsible for both elementary and secondary education, and the abolition of the regional board.

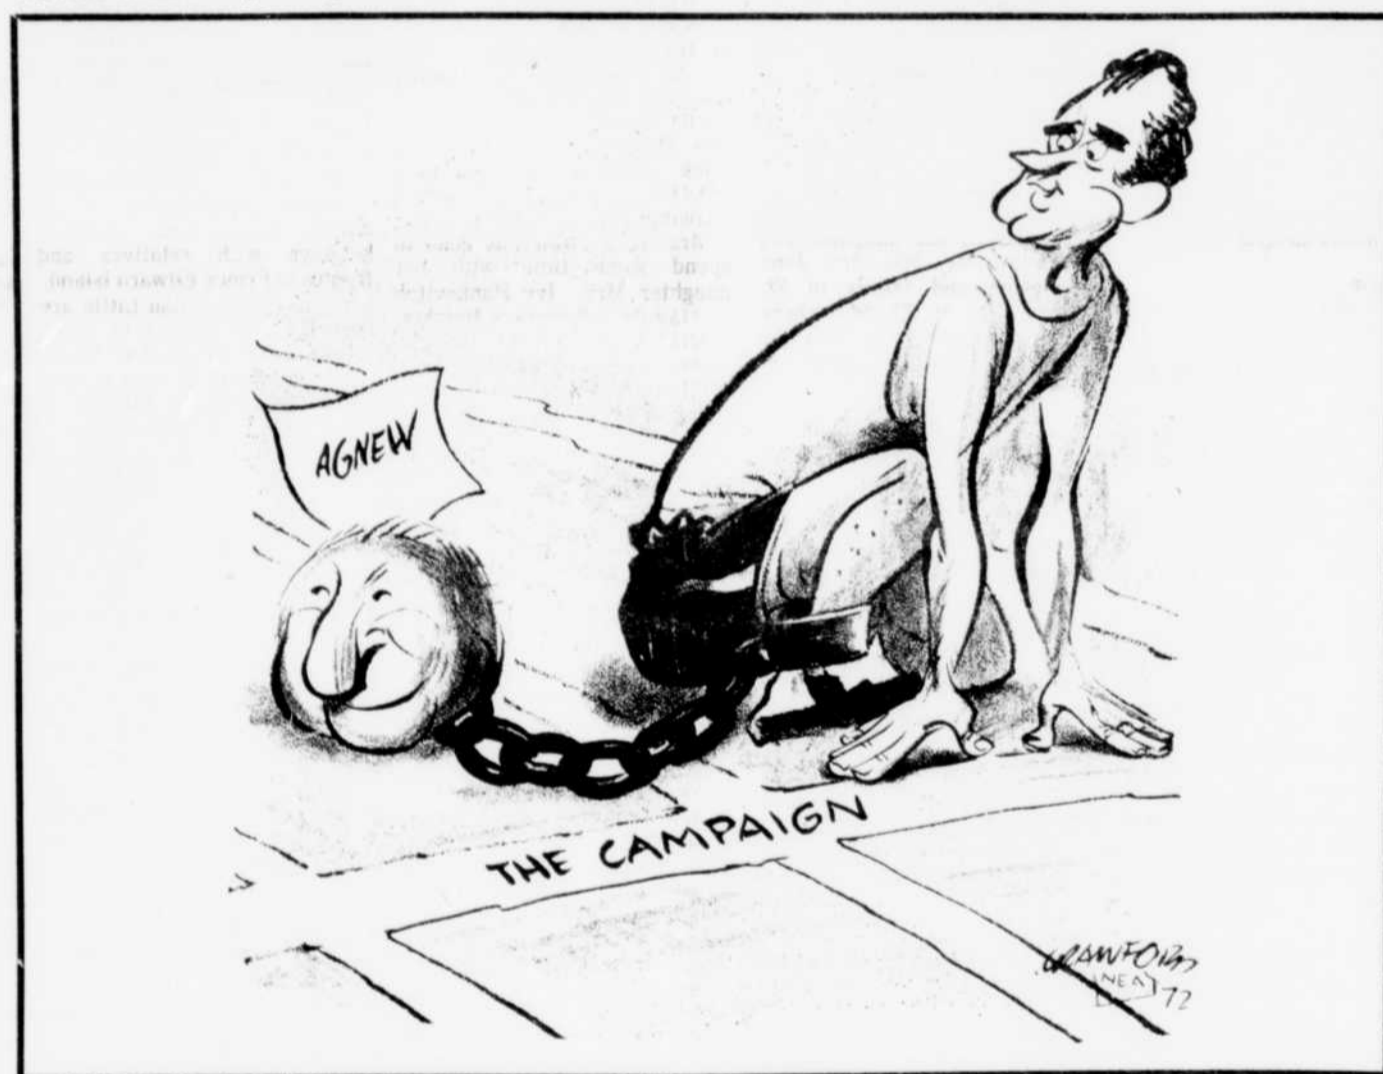

Sincerely,
Graham Cantieni,
North Hatley.

History today

Saar opts for Hitler

The population of the Saar, severed from Germany in post-war reconstruction, held its promised plebiscite 37 years ago today — in 1935 — and voted by 90 per cent to rejoin Germany, then Hitler's Third Reich. It was the dictator's first real indication from an unbiased source that he was giving the German people what they wanted. He announced the reintroduction of army conscription, at the same time reassuring France he did not want to retake Alsace and Lorraine, and began arranging for the reoccupation of the Rhineland, demilitarized under the Treaty of Versailles in 1919.

- 1953 — The U.S.S.R. announced a purge of Jewish doctors.
- 1949 — Prince Edward Island banned margarine.
- 1864 — Composer Stephen Foster died in New York City.
- 1813 — British ships blockaded Chesapeake Bay.
- 1419 — The English captured the French city of Rouen.

"You shouldn't break up a winning combination!"

The field is full

WASHINGTON (CP) — Democratic party officials, trying to keep track of the jostling brigade of candidates for their party's presidential nomination, can be forgiven if they also cast a worried eye at two men who haven't yet entered the battle.

George Wallace, Alabama's outspoken governor, is edging daily toward a declared candidacy that could play havoc among the Democrats before Wallace makes another bid for the presidency as an independent. And Senator Edward Kennedy is playing a cat-and-mouse game that continues to keep the party leaders on edge.

Apart from these two, the party's list of presidential candidates appeared to be completed when the garrulous Hubert H. Humphrey announced his formal entry Monday.

Humphrey, who lost the presidency by a hair to Richard Nixon in 1968, became the ninth person to set his sights on the Democratic nomination for next November's election.

By contrast, Nixon has only two competitors for the Republican nomination—a challenge on the left from Representative Paul McCloskey of California and a right-wing rebellion led by Representative John Ashbrook of Ohio. Neither is considered likely to cause the president great pain.

RACE CONFUSING

There is nothing so clear-cut about the Democratic race, thanks as much to the "spoiling" effect of several party figures as to the number of candidates.

Wallace, who captured five southern states in 1968 when he was American Independent party candidate for president, is still a nominal Democrat and thus eligible to enter the Democratic primaries.

A Wallace campaign in Florida, which seems inevitable, could drain away support from several other candidates and leave none with a clear margin. Among those who could be affected most are Humphrey, Senator Edmund Muskie and Senator Henry Jackson, although even left-wing candidates might lose supporters to Wallace's populist and racist appeals.

The Florida primary, to be held March 14, has been touted as the first with really national significance. The New Hampshire primary, one week earlier, has a smaller list of candidates and a less representative electorate.

Kennedy's role is more ambiguous.

WITHDRAWS NAME

He has denied that he is seeking the nomination and has withdrawn his name from the primaries. But his busy schedule of public appearances—and his carefully phrased appeals for public support—seem designed to keep him available in the event that no other candidate can rally enough convention votes.

The public has regularly placed his name high on the list among Democrats in public opinion polls.

One other Democrat has reserved a potential spoiler's role for himself.

Eugene McCarthy, former Minnesota senator whose grass-roots campaign for the Democratic nomination in 1968 shook up the party, has entered the race again.

Although his current campaign seems deliberately offhand, McCarthy has threatened that if he doesn't like the results of the party's convention he might run as a fourth-party candidate for the presidency.

McCarthy's support has wandered away while he taught poetry at a Maryland university, but observers believe he could still lure voters from among the young and the radicals, voters the Democratic party is hoping to hold for its eventual candidate.

With the primary elections still two months away, and the Democratic convention another four months after that, the possibility remains of a clear-cut victory for one candidate and a happily unified party.

There is no shortage, however, of opportunities for a savage scramble for the Democratic nomination and a disorganized campaign that would leave President Nixon without serious opposition.

Richmond welcomes in New Year

RICHMOND (JW) — On Sunday afternoon, Jan. 2, the St. Jean Baptiste Society sponsored a New Year's get together in the Royal Canadian Legion Memorial Hall. Mr. Emile Roberge, president of the Society, had invited a number of residents to a social event and cocktails at 4 p.m. He welcomed around 60 guests and shook hands with each as did everyone in extending best wishes for the new year and health and prosperity.

After the guests had arrived and were seated at the long tables Mr. Roberge welcomed everyone on behalf of the St. Jean Baptiste Society and expressed the hope that the good friendly relations and happy intermingling of all denominations which had been so noteworthy during the past will continue forever, as Richmond, he said, was a good place to live.

Seated at the head table were Mrs. Emile Roberge, Dr. Jean Smith, Pro-Mayor of Richmond in the absence of Mayor Roger Trudeau who is in the hospital, Mr. Emile Roberge, president of the St. Jean Baptiste Society, and Mrs. Jean Smith.

Dr. Smith expressed the best wishes for Mayor Trudeau and hoped he would be back soon, and extended best wishes for 1972. He said he thought it very commendable that all residents should get together once in a while and have friendly talks.

Rev. Father Cloutier of St. Bibiane Church wished everyone a very happy and prosperous new year, as did Rev. R.A. Cameron of the Richmond and Melbourn United Church, also Rev. J. VanderWal of the St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, Upper Melbourn, who thanked the society for the invitation to come. He said he thought possible his church was the best known church around, as his church picture was on the two dollar bill. He then extended best wishes to all for the year 1972.

Rev. Father Paul Authier of the Holy Family Church spoke in the absence of Father Robitaille and Father Hamel, and extended best wishes for 1972 to all residents of Richmond and the vicinity and hoped this community would become the pride of the Eastern Townships. Rev. W.E. Walker of St. Anne's Church extended best wishes from all at his church and hoped that the good will between all in Richmond and Melbourn would prevail. Rev. G. Doran of L'Esglise des Cantons de l'Est, the French Protestant Church in Melbourn extended best wishes from all at his church for a good and prosperous year.

Mr. M. O'Donnell spoke on behalf of the Richmond Catholic School Board and the Board of Trade. He referred to the changing in the administration of the Primary School in July 1972 and the new way of governmental administration of the education of the young generation and expressed hopes it would be for the best. He also stated that although two companies were soon to be closed in Richmond, one of which has already closed he hoped, that the ones being laid off will soon have a chance to find employment in some new industries that might come to Richmond. He concluded by wishing all a happy and prosperous new year.

Sister Gemma Roy, Supervisor of Mont St. Patrick, spoke a few words in connection with her work and extended best wishes to all, as did Mr. H.L. O'Connor who extended best wishes with happiness and joy to all. Mr. V. Ignatieff, President of St. Andrew's Society, in a few well chosen words, expressed his best wishes to all in 1972. All the presidents of the various societies and associations extended best wishes for a happy and prosperous year.

Keep your clothes on, Lady

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: A few years ago my husband and I were running a mail-order pornography business. At the time, I thought nothing of posing for nude pictures and acting in stag movies. These pictures and movies were sold to customers all over the United States.

We are no longer in the business and I am very much ashamed of my past. It's difficult now for me to understand how I could have been so foolish. The point is — I am worried sick that someone somewhere will recognize me. Every time we attend a social function or meet new friends, I'm a wreck. Is there any way I can rid myself of this terrible fear? — Miserable in Missouri

Dear M. in M.: Time is your greatest ally. Chances are that it has already covered your tracks. My advice is, change the color of your hair (if you haven't already done so) — and keep your clothes on, Lady.

Dear Ann: Last August you published an enthusiastic and grateful letter from a woman who learned about Al-Anon through your column. Within one month we received nearly 10,000 letters as a direct result of that one mention.

The timing was nothing less than miraculous. Had it occurred before our recent move, we'd have been paralyzed by the lack of space. As it is, there is scarcely a place which is not occupied by staff or volunteers sorting the letters by states.

Ecumenical service

RICHMOND (JW) — On Sunday morning January 16 a special service will be held in the Richmond and Melbourn United Church at 11 a.m. when the congregations from St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, Upper Melbourn, St. Anne's Anglican Church, Richmond, and L'Esglise des Cantons de l'Est, Melbourn will join in a service of worship with the Rev. Father Barry McGrory, Roman Catholic Chaplain at the Richmond Regional High School as the preacher. This service will replace the Week of Prayer Services which have been held in previous years, and it is hoped that a large number will attend this special service.

cities and towns, thanks to you. Volunteers have responded nobly. Without them, heaven knows how this beautiful crisis could have been met. There will be no way to get an exact count of how many new members will join Al-Anon as a result of that single letter in your column. There is little doubt that Al-Anon has no more effective and enthusiastic friend in all the world than Ann Landers. Long may she live and write her spirited columns! — The Staff

Dear Staff: Thanks for those kind words. Now, get ready for more mail.

For all you readers out there who are living with an alcoholic, I urge you to write to the National Headquarters of this splendid organization, Al-Anon. You might learn that you are an unwitting factor in the alcoholism of a husband or wife. You might also learn how to help him or her win the battle of the bottle. The address is Al-Anon Family Group Headquarters, Inc., Dept. B, P.O. Box 182, Madison Square Station, New York, New York 10010. Write for a free booklet. And please enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Postage can run into money. Take it from someone who knows.

Dear Ann Landers: Please settle a serious difference of opinion in our family. You don't need to go into any long scientific explanations, just a yes or a no will be sufficient. The questions are as follows:

- 1) Can two adults with straight hair produce a child with tight ringlets?
- 2) Can two adults with very light blonde hair produce a child whose hair is dark brown?

Everything I have read indicates that the answer to both these questions is NO. What do you say? — Facts Wanted

Dear F.W.: I don't know what you have been reading but the answer to both questions is yes.

Confidential to Finders Keepers: Sorry, I don't think much of your "logic." The rest of the saying is — "Losers Weepers." Do you want to be responsible for all those tears?

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

No cure known for senility

Dear Dr. Lamb—The increasing number of older people suffering senility is pitiful. Is there nothing yet available to relieve the blood vessels to the brain or whatever is the chief cause of this affliction?

I have an aunt, three cousins, and a sister who completely lost all mentality long before they died. Now, at 68, I fear the same.

Dear Reader—It certainly is depressing. A certain number of these problems are caused by changes in the arteries to the brain. Some are the result of little strokes. There is some evidence now that people who have high levels of blood pressure are more likely to have this problem. Other people develop senility because of basic changes in how the brain cells function. We still don't know much about that yet—or at least not enough to prevent senility or to treat it properly.

There is also some evidence that drinking appreciable amounts of alcohol leads to earlier changes in the brain and senility.

About the best that can be recommended at present to help prevent this problem is "good clean living" which means moderation or abstinence from alcohol, too much food, rich foods high in fats, cigarettes and getting proper exercise. The program advised to prevent heart disease is a good one to prevent senility and little strokes.

Individuals with even high normal blood pressure should do their best to decrease any body fat they might have, and stay as lean as possible. If the blood pressure is actually elevated and cannot be lowered by adequate weight reduction, then it might be well to take medicine to lower it.

Dear Dr. Lamb—What in layman's terms is "chronic cholecystitis"? Is there any effective treatment for it? And, if not, is there any danger of further complications arising out of its prolongation?

Dear Reader—Chronic means long-term, as opposed to acute which means short-term or sudden. This means inflammation. Chole is from a Greek word for bile. Cyst refers to a bladder. This chronic cholecystitis is long term inflammation of the gall (bile) bladder.

How serious it is depends on the individual case. It can cause minor symptoms of indigestion, or it can cause pain or release stones into the bile duct to cause even more trouble, which can involve the liver and even the pancreas. The latter happens when a stone lodges in the common drainage duct from the liver where the pancreas empties into the small intestine at the same spot.

Depending upon the health of the person involved and how severe the problem is, the gallbladder may be removed.

This gave South a chance to work out an elimination play. He won in dummy; led two rounds of trumps and when both opponents followed he could have spread his hand, but he played the hand out. If he had claimed he would have used up much more time explaining.

The play was simple. He ruffed his last heart and cashed dummy's remaining top diamonds. The suit didn't break but that made no difference since all he had to do was to ruff dummy's last diamond, lead the jack of clubs and pass it to East.

It didn't matter that East held both the king and queen of clubs. He had to lead a club back or give declarer a ruff and discard.

If West had shifted to a club at trick two, South would have had no way to go but down at his five spade contract. However, there was no reason to assume both club honors in the East hand. Put one or both over in West and five spades would make easily against any defense.

Step up in class

During his years as a basketball performer at Massey-Vanier Regional High School, the lanky frame of Stanley Blumenfeld was as much a marvel as the ability which earned him provincial all-star ranking.

At 6'8" the towering centre was in a class of his own compared to the normal bodies which compose a high school basketball squad. Blumenfeld dwarfed his competitors, ducked beneath doorways and could regularly be relied upon for a 25-point performance. He was also, naturally, a target for some good-natured ribbing from the many who were forced to look up to him.

It has been nearly two years since Blumenfeld basked in the spotlight of his high school heroics, and although he has managed to pursue his basketball endeavors, the results do not bear the same success. But then again, there is really no comparison between a Quebec high school basketball team and the one assembled at the University of Tulsa.

Why, one might immediately inquire, would a Cowansville product seek to further his education in such a distant, however renowned, institution? The answer to this small puzzle lies in the fact that Blumenfeld, upon graduation in the summer of 1970, was the recipient of an athletic scholarship to the aforementioned university.

This piece of good fortune was realized through the efforts of Kaye Vaughan, who at that particular time occupied the post of physical education director at MVRHS. As an alumnus of Tulsa, Vaughan was able to make the proper connections with the school's athletic director, Glenn Dobbs, and Blumenfeld headed for the American border in the fall.

The gentle giant took advantage of a recent break in the school semester to spend a few weeks in his home town, and immediately the conversation shifted to his basketball achievements.

"Well, last year I played first string centre on the freshman squad and averaged about five points a game," he says. "This year I'm on the varsity squad, but I'm limited to practice sessions, because only 10 players are carried on the team. I'm not one of them," he admitted frankly.

Ranks in top 30

For those who are not familiar with the American college basketball scene, Tulsa is a member of the Missouri Valley Conference and is ranked among the top 30 squads in the nation. The lineup is restricted to the cream of the crop, which makes Blumenfeld's accomplishment, even as a third-string centre, a noteworthy one.

"Basketball is one of the major sports at the university," Blumenfeld reveals. "They have an intramural program, but members of the varsity team are not permitted to play. Our practices usually run about three hours a day, so we have plenty of basketball anyway."

"We get good support from the students," he continues. "There are usually about 5,000 at a game, but even this doesn't fill the arena."

The biggest adjustment which the gangling centre was forced to make at the American basketball level did not concern growing accustomed to huge crowds. Instead, it was adapting himself to competing against individuals who were his equal in height.

"I have to learn to play more aggressive ball, because down there most of the guys we play against are taller than me. I wasn't really prepared for the switch to college ball, which is much faster than that at the high-school level. I'll have to put on some weight, and develop my skills around the backboard," he offers as a self-analysis.

Despite the fact Blumenfeld is the lone Canadian on the club's roster, he has no complaints over the treatment which he has received from his teammates. "They welcomed me into the fold, and treated me well," he says. "They showed me what to do, and after watching them for a while, you learn easily."

One of his conferees came to the rescue the day Blumenfeld first arrived at Tulsa, when a cab driver refused to accept the Canadian money which was offered to pay the fare. Blumenfeld escaped from the predicament when a teammate gave the driver American currency.

In reply to a query as to the presence of pro scouts at Tulsa basketball encounters, Blumenfeld says, "I haven't been aware of any. I suppose they look at your statistics and all that, but everyone on our club is mostly concerned about winning. I know one thing — they haven't approached me yet," he grins.

Sees teaching

Regardless of such comments, it is evident that there are numerous bird-dogs observing every move which these athletics make. This statement can be backed up by examining the situation at Tulsa itself, where last season's regular centre, Dana Lewis, was snatched up as the No. 1 draft choice of the Philadelphia 76ers of the National Basketball Association.

As to the future status of Stanley Blumenfeld on the basketball court, he modestly replies, "I don't think there is any future in it for me. For one thing I don't have the ability, and I don't have enough confidence in myself. Even centres have to know how to dribble, and as far as shooting accuracy goes, 50 per cent is a lot of shooting. Not many do that."

For the moment, Blumenfeld is content to pursue his original plans, which are directed toward becoming a physical education instructor. "I'll definitely come back to Canada, but I don't exactly know where I'll go," he conceded.

What's the possibility of a teaching career at Massey-Vanier Regional, a turn of events which would be fitting, after his numerous contributions to the athletic achievements of the school?

After pondering the question for several seconds, he responds, "I might accept a position at Massey-Vanier if there was one available. I'd have to think it over, but I probably would, you know."

He smiles with the expression of one who has just realized the potential of a new idea.

With more than a year at the University of Tulsa under his belt, Blumenfeld has had ample time to weigh the merits and flaws of attending an American institution. "If you are planning to concentrate on athletics, and were good enough to make, I'd recommend the University. But unless you have a scholarship, it really isn't worth it."

Blumenfeld has already received his introduction to the varsity squad, even though he is not a regular member. A few days before heading home for the holidays, his nose was shattered by a teammate's elbow during a practice session. It proves, no doubt, they take athletics seriously at the University of Tulsa.

Talent triangle dominates East Stars

MONTREAL (CP) — Selectors didn't look beyond New York Rangers, Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins to pick the 12-man nucleus of the East Division team which will oppose the West Division squad in the National Hockey League's 25th annual all-star game, Jan. 25, at Bloomington, Minn.

The Rangers, division leaders at the half-way mark of the 78-game schedule, placed five members on the team, selected by a poll of East Division members of the Professional Hockey Writers Association and announced by the league today.

The Bruins, second to New York at the mid-way point, placed three men on the team, including the only unanimous choice—defenceman Bobby Orr—while the Canadiens, currently third, had four players selected.

Voting was based on five points for a first-place ballot, three for a second and on for a third. The team, with vote totals bracketed:

NOW SIDELINED

Two of the four Canadiens picked—goalie Dryden and Mahovlich—currently are out of action, but both are expected back by the all-star break. Dryden is recuperating from a back injury, while Mahovlich is battling the flu and tonsillitis.

Al MacNeil, general manager-coach of Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the American Hockey League, will select an additional seven players before he coaches the East squad. MacNeil earned the right to coach the East when he guided the Canadiens to the Stanley Cup last May. He will be opposed by Billy Reay of Chicago, whose Black Hawks lost to the Canadiens in the Cup final.

The only restriction placed on MacNeil and Reay in that their selections of additional seven players for each team is that each of the seven teams in the respective divisions must have at least one representative in the game.

Power and experience are the underlying strength in the East selections. The 10 defencemen and forwards chosen have accounted for 195 goals, 297 assists and 492 points. This compares to the total 116 goals, 162 assists and 278 points collected by the 10 defencemen and forwards of the West Division all-stars, announced Tuesday.

The only player on the East squad without previous all-star experience is Dryden, who is still considered a rookie and who won the Conn Smythe Trophy last spring as the outstanding player of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

BIG M IS VET

Mahovlich is the all-star game veteran, having appeared in 12 games. He is tied with Ted Lindsay, the former Detroit Red Wings' left winger, for second place in the all-time list of all-star game point leaders. Each had 10 points, Mahovlich scoring six goals.

Tremblay will be making his seventh all-star appearance. Gilbert has played in five previous games; Orr in four; Esposito three; Cournoyer, Ratelle and Park two each; Smith, Villemure and Hadfield one each.

Ironically, neither Esposito nor Orr have a point in all-star competition, despite their record feats in regular-season action. The defencemen and forwards named today have accounted for only 14 points in previous all-star games, and 10 of the 14 were by Mahovlich.

Cournoyer has one goal, while Smith, Gilbert and Tremblay each have one assist. The 10 West Division defencemen and forwards have a total of seven goals, eight assists and 15 points.

Coaches fit to be tied

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The usual hard knocks were evident in the National Hockey League Wednesday night but most of them came from coaches irate at what they considered poor calls by the referees.

The criticism no doubt was prompted by the stalemates in three of the four NHL games played.

Emile Francis, New York Ranger coach, criticized the work of referee Lloyd Gilmore and linesmen Neil Armstrong and Jim Christison after Chicago Black Hawks rallied to tie his team 5-5.

"They must have missed at least three offside calls against the Hawks," Francis said after the game. "Dennis Hull was at least five feet offside on his goal in the first period and both Jim Pappin and Pit Martin got in alone against (Ed) Giacomin in offside in the last period...."

Red Kelly, whose Pittsburgh Penguins tied Boston Bruins 2-2, stepped on the ice in the first period to protest what he considered a questionable call by referee Bob Sloan. He drew a bench penalty.

GLOVER BLAMES REF

And in Toronto, Fred Glover, whose Los Angeles Kings have been fighting all season to escape the NHL's West Division cellar, blamed a penalty call by referee Ron Wicks for the 1-1 tie Toronto Maple Leafs earned against the Kings.

"It was a cheap call by Wicks," Glover said.

In the other game, California Golden Seals upset Minnesota North Stars, shutting them out 2-0.

Francis was more concerned with the work of the game officials than with his team's poor defensive play. The Rangers had a 4-2 lead against the Black Hawks going into the third period, but Bobby Hull and brother Dennis scored within three minutes of each other early in the period to give Chicago a 4-4 tie.

Rod Gilbert scored his 28th goal of the season to put New York back in the lead but Jerry Korab scored from 70 feet out late in the period to give the Black Hawks the tie.
