

Three Tremendous Struggles Are Waging From None of Lines Comes Report of Decisive Result

Germans Reported Demoralized Allies Capture Many Prisoners Ammunition Column of Enemy Taken

THREE TREMENDOUS STRUGGLES WAGING.

London, Sept. 12.—(Special)—Three tremendous struggles are waging along as many battle lines, and from none of them comes a report of a decisive result. The mystery of the western operations is complicated by news from Berlin which ignores General Von Kluck's efforts on the German right, while indicating that the German attack on Verdun is proceeding successfully.

The situation along the Russian borders is becoming as obscure as the western.

STORIES CONFLICT.

Berlin reports that the victory of General Von Hindenburg clears East Prussia of Russia, but experts at Petrograd declare that it is incredible that the Russians should give up the investment of Koenigsburg without suffering a far greater disaster than that which has been reported.

OUT OFF LARGE FORCE OF ENEMY.

London, Sept. 12.—(Special)—A despatch to the Daily News from Paris says: "A motor car brings news from the front that the first and second divisions of the British army, with the French cavalry and artillery, cut off and defeated a large force of the enemy sixty miles north-east of Paris, taking 6,000 prisoners and 15 guns. The Germans are reported as demoralized."

LOSSES WERE HEAVY.

"The half-starved prisoners ravenously devoured beef and biscuits supplied by the British troops. During the fighting fifty British cyclists from the cover of a small wood wiped out 150 of the enemy's cavalry. The Allies' losses were severe, but they are nothing in comparison with those of the enemy, who is retreating north of the Marne and west of the Ourcq."

GERMAN CENTRE MUST GIVE WAY.

London, Sept. 12.—(Special)—The Daily Telegraph says: Correspondents at Nanteuil, department of Oise, in a despatch dated Thursday, dealing with the turn of the tide in favor of the allies, gives the impressions derived in conversation with many wounded French officers from the fighting line. From these they learn that the German army, meeting for the first time troops almost equal in numbers, has been rolled up and sorely troubled, and the right of the army, composed of some of the finest German forces, has retired so far that the centre must give way or risk the line of communication.

CAPTURED LARGE AMMUNITION COLUMN.

General Pau scored a tremendous advantage by capturing an enormous ammunition column seven kilometres (4.1-4 miles) long. This he destroyed, leaving the Germans very short of ammunition. The correspondent adds: "The effects of the long, barren march must have an enormous influence on the army. Huge losses in killed and wounded, the paralyzing spectacle of pyramidal funeral pyres on the battlefield each night, and the procession of long trains of grievously wounded, must give the educated Germans food for thought."

DESCRIBES CAPTURE OF AMMUNITION.

The correspondent then describes the capture of the German ammunition column while the Germans were feeling their way towards Paris. The seven kilometre column was winding its way along through Crepy en Valois, when General Pau sent cavalry and artillery to intercept it. The column was weakly guarded to cope with the attack, and so was captured and destroyed. This engagement had an important bearing on the subsequent fighting.

FRENCH CAPTURE GERMAN ARTILLERY.

London, Sept. 12, 2.28 p.m.—(Special)—According to official announcement made here, the third French army has captured all the artillery of one German army corps.

The artillery of a German Army corps consists of two regiments of field pieces (eighteen batteries of field guns and six batteries of field howitzers, a total of 72 pieces), one or two batteries of heavy artillery and a machine gun group.

RETREAT IS RAPID.

London, Sept. 12.—(Special)—It is officially announced: "Our aeroplanes report that the enemy's retreat is very rapid."

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS POISONED.

Petrograd, Sept. 12.—(Special)—Via London.—How a large squad of Russian cavalrymen met their death drinking poisoned water, given to them by a German peasant on the road to Koenigsburg, Eastern Prussia, is described by the Moscow correspondent of the Rjetsch. The cavalry was riding from Insterburg over rough roads and in intense heat, says the correspondent. The thirsty troopers stopped at a small village and asked a peasant for a drink. He brought out two pails of water. Shortly after drinking it nearly 100 men were attacked with spasms indicating poisoning.

RUNNING SHORT OF GASOLINE.

London, Sept. 12.—(Special)—A despatch from Bordeaux to Reuters says that the Temps repeats the report that the stock of gasoline in Germany is becoming exhausted, and adds that, as the German army depends largely on its motor transportation for supplies of all sorts, this greatly aggravates the situation.

The newspaper published by George Clemenceau, the former premier, has appeared in Bordeaux.

FORMER SECRETARY OF WAR NOW A CORPORAL.

London, Sept. 12.—(Special)—A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Bordeaux says that Arthur Maginot, who was under-secretary of war in the cabinet of Louis Barthou, and who was one of the promoters of the three years' military service law, has been promoted to be a corporal for bravery in action. He has been serving in the army as a private. During a recent engagement in a French village, the despatch says, Maginot, at the head of several soldiers, rushed in and put to flight a detachment of Germans. He was promoted in front of his troops and complimented by his colonel, who kissed him on both cheeks. Maginot is one of the best swordsmen in France.

IN RAPID PURSUIT OF ENEMY.

London, Sept. 12, 2.25 p.m.—(Special)—Our troops have crossed the River Ourcq and are now moving this (Saturday) morning in rapid pursuit of the enemy, is an announcement given out to-day by the official press bureau. Two hundred prisoners were captured. The cavalry of the Allies was between Soissons and (name deleted by censors) last night. The enemy are retreating north of Vitry-le-Francois.

AUSTRIAN COMMANDER HAD PLANS.

Petrograd, Sept. 12, via London, 2.26 p.m.—(Special)—A detailed plan of the proposed march of the Austro-German armies through Russia to Perm, on the extreme eastern border of European Russia, and about 700 miles east of Petrograd, has been found on the body of a commander of Austrian cavalry who was killed at Grodek, in Galicia.

COSSACKS OVERWHELM HUNGARIANS.

In this fight three regiments of Cossacks completely overwhelmed nine Hungarian regiments of cavalry. Two of these Hungarian organizations were virtually wiped out, only thirty men surviving.

GERMANS SOUTHERN RETIREMENT.

Washington, Sept. 12.—(Special)—The following despatch from Bordeaux, dated yesterday, was received to-day at the French Embassy: "The French General Staff made known to-day that the first German army continues its retirement. Three of its army corps were repulsed last night between Villers, Colletets and Soissons. We have in four days gained from sixty to seventy-five kilometres."

BRITISH FLEET IN PACIFIC.

London, Sept. 12.—(Special)—The Admiralty announced this afternoon that the British Pacific fleet has occupied Herbertshohe, on Blanche Bay, the seat of Government of the German Bismarck Archipelago and the Solomon Islands.

AUSTRO-GERMAN PEACE BOND.

Copenhagen, Sept. 12, via London.—The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin, declares that previous to the outbreak of the war Germany and Austria-Hungary agreed, as now have the parties of the Triple Entente, not to make peace separately.

VALUABLE NITRATE CARGO CAPTURED.

Plymouth, Sept. 12.—The German bark Urania, bound from Tocopilla, Chile, for Hamburg, with a cargo of nitrate valued at $175,000 has been captured by a British warship.

BRITISH WARSHIP OF SCOTLAND LIGHT.

New York, Sept. 12.—The steamer Vitalia, which arrived yesterday from Puerto Mexico, reported having seen a British war vessel off Scotland Lightship.

BRITISH CRUISER OFF JERSEY COAST.

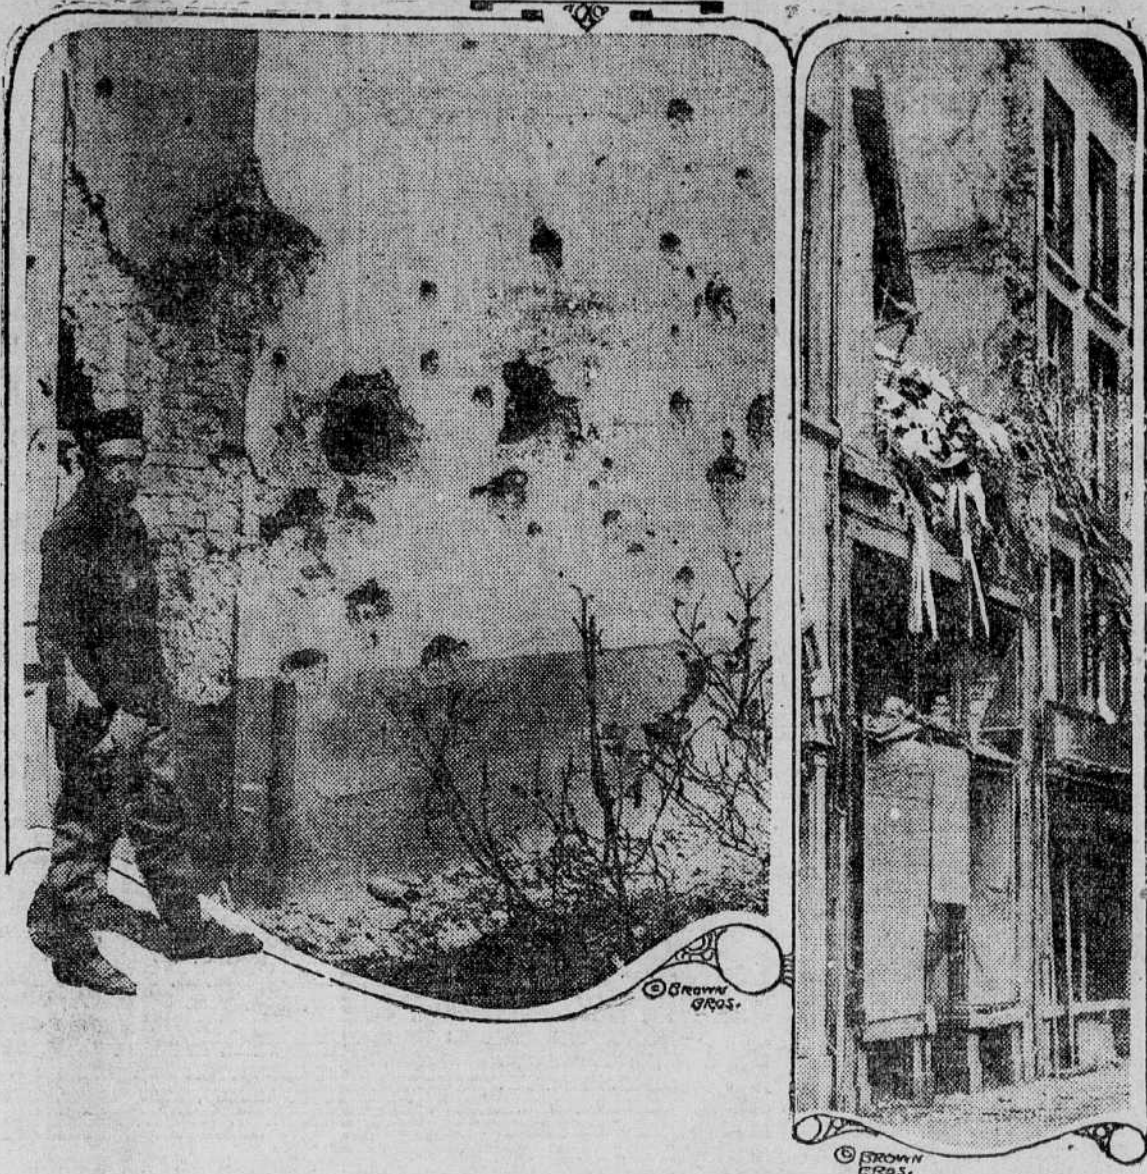

New York, Sept. 12.—The British cruiser Glory appeared off the New Jersey coast yesterday morning, steaming past Long Branch parallel with the shore in the direction of New York.

PATRIOTIC ASSOCIATION

Flag Day Brought in About Seven Hundred Dollars to Fund

BALACLAVA CAPS BEING FORWARDED—MORE WANTED—FURTHER CONTRIBUTIONS ACKNOWLEDGED.

The regular Friday meeting of the Sherbrooke Patriotic Association was held yesterday afternoon in the D.O. E. Club Room, and was presided over by Mrs. C. H. Bowen.

The reports of the various committees were submitted and the work of the next week outlined. The number of Balacava caps already furnished by the members of the Work Committee and others interested, was stated to be 250, and these would be forwarded the following day to the camp at Valcartier, divided among the four branches of the militia from Sherbrooke, viz.: The 22nd Battery, the 33rd and 54th Regiments and the C.A.S.C.

In the meantime the work would go on till all were provided for. Samples of socks suitable for the soldiers' wear were shown, and the price at which they could be procured given. The question of beginning the working meetings was discussed, and it was decided to hold the 11th meeting Saturday morning at 11 o'clock, in the Club Room.

It was announced that a gift had been received from the "Y's" of the W.C.T.U. of "housewives," also $5 from the Graduate Nurses' Association, and $27 from the Sherbrooke Cricket Club.

These gifts were acknowledged with much appreciation as well as the sum of $42 given in by Miss Roe, of Capleton, the proceeds of a house to house collection.

Miss White stated that the result of the Flag Day at the Sherbrooke Exhibition was up to date, $663.63, with more boxes to come in. This sum will be placed at once to the credit of the Patriotic Fund.

The chairman then explained the disposition of the money raised in Sherbrooke, and also spoke of the National Patriotic Fund of which H.R. H. the Duke of Connaught is at the head, and very well known men on the executive committee. This fund was intended to supplement all and other funds and would be administered in the most systematic manner so that no soldier's family in need would be neglected or overlooked.

Mrs. Craig, the treasurer, read her report, which was most satisfactory, and Miss White reported in regard to the Red Cross work, that she had been in communication with Captain (Continued on Page 10)

To Cure Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness and head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected a complete cure after all else has failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear a watch tick have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrh, or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand to them and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmitin (Double Strength), about 75c. Weigh. Take this home and add to it a pint of hot water and 4 oz. of moist or granulated sugar, stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose promptly ends the most distressing head noises, dizziness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing rapidly returns as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison, and which are quickly overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent of all ear troubles are directly caused by catarrh; therefore, there are but few people whose hearing cannot be restored by this simple home treatment. Every person who is troubled with head noises, catarrhal deafness, or catarrh in any form should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.

IMPORTANT—In ordering Parmitin always specify that you want Double Strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c. to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, P.Q., who make a specialty of it.

Much credit is due to the Rev. Mr. D. Grouchy and his daughter, Mrs. Moore, for the splendid work accomplished in so short a time. Mrs. Moore, assisted by the many friends she has made during her short stay here has paid $108 towards the expenses besides having directed the work so that the parsonage has assumed a homelike and tasteful appearance. The total expenses on the interior amounted to $270.95, and a resolution was passed by the joint Aids that they would pay the balance. Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by the young ladies after which the bride-elect was given a trip around town in a gayly decorated jaunting car, drawn by two of her young friends, while the remainder formed a body-guard. The hostess of the occasion was also likewise remembered and was treated to a ride which was much more highly enjoyed by others than herself. Many useful articles were left behind as a pleasant reminder of the event for which kindness, Miss Webster fittingly expressed her appreciation.

BEEBE.

On Friday afternoon, Sept. 4th, the Beebe Camp Fire Girls held a "Bacon Bat" at their brookside resort near the village. The girls were pleased to have with them at their supper the friends who so kindly gave for their benefit the entertainment which took place later in the evening. As the shadows deepened the girls scattered to their several homes, soon to meet again at the Town Hall where an excellent concert was given by the Rev. R. and Mrs. Trill, Mr. H. Trill, of Cowansville; Miss Maud Robb, of Sweetburg and Miss Marjorie Tinkham, of Newport, assisted by the girls of the Camp. The programme was varied consisting of music, vocal and instrumental readings, etc., ending in a short play entitled "Automatic Ann," which was an excellent piece of acting, and furnished the audience with a great deal of amusement. Miss Robb was much appreciated both in her reading and singing, but especially was her audience charmed when she sang an encore, "Coming Through the Rye," a song that will never grow old. The piano selections rendered by Miss Tinkham were remarkably fine for so young a musician. The readings given by the Rev. R. Trill and his brother, Mr. H. Trill, were very entertaining. The song that particularly captivated the audience was an English melody entitled "The Keys of Heaven," given by Mr. and Mrs. Trill in the quaint costume of days gone by. The stage was tastefully decorated with green and yellow, which are the colors of Ishkodah Camp. There was a good number present, some from Newport, also a number of Camp Fire girls from Rock Island. Many were the expressions of pleasure overheard among those who had been fortunate enough to have had the privilege of enjoying this rare treat. The proceeds are to go as an offering from the Ishkodah Camp, to the Patriotic Fund of Canada. The girls, their guardian and friends all join in thanking their kind entertainers, whose helpful interest in their cause will long be remembered by the Camp Fire Girls of Beebe.

They Shall Not Want

THESE must be the days of BROTHERHOOD.

These are times of standing together, working, thinking, fighting together. The challenge of an enemy provokes quick response in every breast and proclaims the brotherhood of rich and poor.

You can hear the tread of armed men in the streets. To-day they prepare; to-morrow they depart; and another day—they fight! They are not merely your sons who go, or our neighbors' sons, but OUR sons! We who remain here, thousands of miles from the reek of gun-fire, have no less a part to play than those who go. We are not excused because we cannot fight. We must fill the places of those who go.

By buying your needs from us during the above mentioned dates, you will combine charity with savings. As, not only we will give a certain percentage of our sales towards the Relief Fund, but on this special occasion, we have prepared a quantity of bargains in every department of our store.—Our immense stocks are at your disposal.

GIVE! GIVE! GIVE!

Sherbrooke and the Eastern Townships must do their part in this great patriotic undertaking.

YOU have read the special appeal of the Sherbrooke Patriotic Association.

Our way of answering the above appeal is, that we have decided to open the doors of our store wide open for three days, and invite everybody to come and help us to swell this fund.

So Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, we will give a good percentage of our gross sales to the Sherbrooke Patriotic Association. It is up to us to help a good cause.

Buy your Boots, Shoes, Rubbers, Clothing, General Dress Goods, Furs, Gent's Furnishings, Etc., from us, and by doing so you will not only save some money, but you will help one of the most Patriotic causes.

Remember we will give a percentage of your purchases for the patriotic fund.

only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Jones, Richmond.

PREPARING FOR FAIR

Arrangements are proceeding for the Richmond Fair, which takes place next Thursday and Friday. One good attraction that will please the good people will be the merry-go-round. All that is required now for a successful fair is fine weather, and after all the rain for the past fortnight, prospects ought to be good.

RECEIPTS WERE GOOD

As a result of the Garden Fete recently given by Miss G. Mathias on her beautiful grounds at Melbourne, the St. Anne's Guild is enriched by $50.50, this amount having been handed to the Guild Secretary. Great credit is due Miss Mathias for the success of the fete. She had done untiring work for it and the proceeds must be gratifying to her and certainly a handsome benefit to St. Anne's Guild.

GRAVED THE ELEMENTS

The heavy rain on Sunday afternoon last interfered with the annual decoration service of Pioneer Lodge, No. 7 I.O.O.F. and Enfield Lodge, Sons of England. However, a considerable number braved the elements, carried the flowers to the cemetery and placed them on the graves of the departed brethren.

WILL NOT SELL DEBENTURES AT OFFER MADE

The meeting of the Richmond Town Council on Tuesday evening was attended by the full board of Councillors, Mayor Hayes presiding.

The Council decided to sell the lease of the town hall for ensuing year at 10 a.m., on Saturday, September 19th, at the town office. The valuation roll for 1914-15 was homologated and a by-law providing for municipal and school expenses for said year was enacted.

A resolution was passed in accordance with the Good Roads Act of 1912, providing for additional allocation of the sum of $9,361.19 in connection with bituminous and water-bound macadamized road work.

A petition was read from a number of property owners asking that concrete curb and channel be placed on Main street between Adam street and G.T.R. crossing, the proprietors agreeing to pay half the cost. The request was granted and a by-law passed authorizing the work.

An offer was made by the Molsons Bank to purchase unsold debentures of the corporation on the basis of a 7 per cent. yield. The Council decided not to accept the offer, but intimated that they would be disposed to accept an offer of 6 per cent.

A motion was passed that the gasoline pump erected on Main street, by Messrs. Desmarais & Co., must be removed.

Sundry accounts were paid, after which Council adjourned.

INDUCTED INTO PASTORATE
Rev. Mr. Belford was inducted into the pastorate of St. Anne's Episcopal Church on Sunday last.

Mr. A.E. Main, Secretary of the Richmond County Agricultural Society, will be at the Court House on Monday and Tuesday to receive entries for the fair, which must not be made later than Tuesday.

The Ladies of Richmond, who are working for the Patriotic Fund will have a booth at the fair grounds next Thursday and Friday. Hot lunches, sandwiches, tea, coffee, etc., will be served. Proceeds for the Patriotic Fund.

IN AID OF THE PATRIOTIC FUND

A special series of moving pictures will be shown next Wednesday evening at the Odd Fellow's Hall by the Casino Amusement Company under arrangement with the ladies of Richmond, the entire proceeds to be given to the Patriotic Fund. The Richmond Brass Band will be in attendance. A large audience should attend in view of the worthy and timely object.

MASONS WILL GO TO DANVILLE.

A special train will go from Richmond Sunday morning at 9.30 a.m., to take Richmond Masons to Danville for Divine Service with the Doric Lodge of that town. The special will go rain or shine.

PRESENTED WITH PURSE OF MONEY

Mrs. Esther Chapman, who left on Monday for Chicago, where she will reside in future, was waited on previous to her departure by the ladies of St. Anne's Guild and presented with a purse of money in recognition of her long and faithful service to the organization.

No-Rim-Cut
Tires

Made in Canada

Needless Tire Troubles

Rim-Cuts—the chiefest tire troubles—are utterly needless. They are ended completely—in a faultless way—in Good-year No-Rim-Cut tires.

Blow-Outs, in large part, are due to wrinkled fabric. Our "On-Air" cure eliminates this cause. This exclusive Good-year process adds greatly to our own cost.

Loose treads we combat by a patent method. Hundreds of large rubber rivets are formed in each tire, reducing this risk 60 per cent.

Punctures are minimized in our All-Weather tread. It is tough and double-thick.

Skidding is best combated by this same exclusive tread. The grips are sharp, deep, resistless. Yet the tread is flat and regular. It runs as smoothly as a plain tread.

Save These Losses

Save the avoidable troubles. Get all the safety, strength and mileage that you can. Then you have the utmost in a tire.

That is what Goodyear gives you. In the five ways cited, no other maker offers what we give.

The result is that Goodyear leads. No other tire commands such prestige or such sale.

And 18 other American and Canadian makes cost more than Goodyears.

Tires are not alike. Only one tire made offers these great Goodyear features. Get it. Learn what it means to you.

Abercorn Man Could Not Pay Fine
For Selling Liquor Without a License

UNLESS HE CAN PRODUCE $700,
HE WILL HAVE TO SERVE 12
MONTHS IN JAIL

Sweetsburg, Sept. 12—(Special)—High Constable Boisvert arrested Octava Cabana, who kept the "Line House," at Abercorn on a charge of an infraction of the license law. Cabana was fined by Judge Mulvaney at a sitting of Court here for selling liquor without a license. It being his third offence he was, condemned to pay a $360 fine and costs. The accused could not be served with the papers calling upon him to pay this amount, and also the two previous fines and costs, so that in all he was owing about $700.

When arrested in the Township of Potton, he could not produce this amount and the High Constable brought him to Sweetsburg where he was lodged in the common jail.

Unless the money is forthcoming he will have to serve the three prison sentences, which are two of three months, and a third for six months.

DEER HUNTING WITH DOGS

QUEBEC ASSOCIATION FOR PROTECTION OF FISH AND GAME HAS STARTED CAMPAIGN

Windsor Mills, Sept. 12—The Quebec Association for the protection of Fish and Game has started the season's campaign against "sportsmen," who follow the illegal practice of running deer with dogs. At Windsor Mills on Thursday, Mr. J.R. Innes, secretary of the Association, and Mr. W.H. Griffith, chief warden made one arrest and gave a number of warnings.

Joseph Gagnon was the culprit rounded up, and Mr. W. King, J.P., impressed upon him that a twenty-five dollar fine could be imposed for the offence, but added that as he was a poor man he would let him off on payment of $5 and costs. The man was warned to get rid of his dogs. A second offender, or one who has been once warned, will be assessed a stiff fine if caught at the illegal practice.

CANADIAN JAM FACTORIES BUSY

The embargo on the exportation of jam from the United Kingdom will increase the demand for Canadian made jams. During the fiscal year ending March 31, 1914, over $500,000 worth of jams, jellies and preserves were imported from the United Kingdom into Canada. The deficiency created by the shutting off of these imports under the embargo instituted by the British Government must be made up by the Canadian Jam factories.

As a result of these conditions there is a greatly increased activity in the jam factories throughout Canada.

Dominion Canners Limited, is operating its jam factory at Hamilton at maximum capacity, night as well as day shifts being employed. E.D. Smith & Sons, Limited, has increased the staff in its jam factory, at Winona, Ont., and will have a record output this season. In the plant of Linders, Limited, at Toronto, for example, where, under ordinary conditions, about forty-five hands are employed it is expected that night as well as day shifts will be employed for the next six or seven months. These conditions are typical of those that obtain throughout the entire industry.

BROKE OUT ON HEAD, NECK AND SHOULDERS

In Little Blotches, Scratching Caused It to Spread. Hands Had to Be Tied. Cried Day and Night. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Ennisville, N.B.—"The trouble started when my baby was four months old. Her head, neck and shoulders were a mass of sores. They broke out at first in little blotches, only watery, which the child scratched and caused to spread and form a mass of sores. Her hands had to be tied to keep her from scratching the sores. The sores caused her to fret and burn and to be cross and peevish. She was distressed for the time she had it. She cried day and night from the irritation. Neighbors said she would never be cured. "She was given some medicine to take inwardly but without success. Then a friend told me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment which I did. I washed the child with Cuticura Soap, dried well, then applied the Cuticura Ointment every day and in a week's time the burning sensation left, the child scratched no more, and when she was eleven months old she was completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. John J. McCann, Nov. 27, 1912.

Although the Cuticura Soap and Ointment are most successful in the treatment of affections of the skin, scalp, hair and hands, they are also most valuable for everyday use in the toilet, bath and nursery, because they promote and maintain the health of the skin and hair from infancy to age. THE ONLOOKER COMMENTS

Wanted—Two Markets Weekly.

There is a growing demand in Sherbrooke for increased market privileges. At present the Lansdowne Market is held only on Saturdays. The immediate demand is for two markets a week, and if this proves successful to extend later to three markets weekly. In the opinion of many this would prove a benefit to the Sherbrooke housewives and result in somewhat lower prices for the products of the farm. The idea is passed on to the Market Committee of the City Council.

Business Optimism

Business optimism is growing in Canada. The first crash of the war dislocated business. Canadians are now awakening to a realization that Canada has right now its greatest commercial opportunity of a century. Of Canadian manufactures, woollen and cotton mills are the first to benefit. Clothing and boot and shoe factories, canneries and many trades have experienced the quickening impulse of business.

The iron industries, especially those which were dependent upon development or construction work for their orders, have not yet become fully adjusted to new conditions. The opportunities are opening, however, in their direction. German trade has been swept from the world's markets. Much of this trade was in iron products. Canadian plants will have to add new lines, and if they are able to do so the demand will be sufficient to keep all busy.

And what of agriculture? Prices for this year's crops are higher than ever before, and the demand has gone forth, as a patriotic appeal, for increased acreage next year. Canada must produce more wheat and general agricultural produce to meet the increased demand of home and foreign markets.

Cultivate the optimistic spirit. There is nothing the matter with business except in the minds of the people.

The Appeal to Agriculture

The speakers at the functions held in connection with the Exhibition dwelt upon the obligation which the present crisis in the Empire places upon the farmers of Canada—the obligation to increase their agricultural production. This is a patriotic duty which devolves upon the agriculturists of Canada, and in its performance they will reap large financial returns.

No section of Canada is capable of greater agricultural development than the Eastern Townships. Farms are not producing what they should. The help problem operates to the detriment of increase in the cultivated acreage, but through determined effort this can be overcome to a considerable extent.

Farmers should lay their plans at once for an increased crop next spring. The markets of the Empire will take all they can produce.

Canada, with her vast agricultural acres, can render invaluable aid to the Empire's cause through increased production.

Let the farmers of the Eastern Townships do their share in this direction.

The Exhibition Dates.

The Sherbrooke Exhibition has a strong claim upon the Provincial Government this year, if financial deficit has resulted through unfavorable weather conditions this week.

The situation has been well stated by one of the directors, as follows: For many years the Sherbrooke Fair had been held the first week of September. This year, without notice or apology, the Quebec association appropriated these dates. A clash in these two fairs seemed inevitable. Sherbrooke felt that its right to the first week was incontestable, and so it was. It would have gone ahead and held its dates, but for one condition. The Quebec Government has supported both exhibitions in the interests of agriculture. A clash would have injured both exhibitions, and the object of the Government would have been defeated to a considerable extent. Quebec boldly appropriated the Sherbrooke dates and refused to recede. In the interests of agriculture and in consideration of the Government's desire that there should be no clash in dates, Sherbrooke gave way.

If this has resulted in financial loss, it is perfectly apparent that the claim of the E.T.A.A. for extra consideration at Quebec is a strong one.

Synopsis.

The 3 of Hearts is the "death sign" used by Seneca Trine in the private way of vengeance which, through his daughter Judith, a woman of violent and criminal temper and questionable sanity, he wages against Alan Law, whose father (now dead) Trine held responsible for the accident which made him a beggar.

Rose, Judith's twin and double, learning of her sister's campaign against Alan, leaves her home to aid him, whom she loves.

Trine pursues Law back to America by secretly sending him a rose, while he is asleep in his club in London. This was the sign that Rose, whom he loves and who has rejected him, tells him to come to her. He receives a tray of hearts through the mail. It's the sign that an attorney is to be made upon his life. He therefore, to avoid his enemies, comes out on a C.P.R. steamship, travelling second class. At Quebec he engages an Indian guide and starts to tramp through the Maine woods. A terrible forest fire rages and they have to go far out of their way. He finds a tray of hearts nailed to a tree in the forest as he is tramping along. Next day he is suddenly seized and bound by his guide, and Judith appears before him. He is carried to a position in the path of the blazing forest and left there to die, the Indian setting fire to the pile of brush and logs he had been thrown upon. The fire burned the cord that bound him and he struggled away, scorched and bruised. While being carried by the current in a lake into which he jumped to escape the fire, he manages to save the life of Judith, who was escaping in a canoe which was being carried into a mill-race. In a violent thunderstorm she gets away and he becomes hopelessly lost in the woods, wandering for days, and finally falling over a precipice into a lake. Rose, in the meantime, has learned of her father's attempt, hears from Law's partner in New York that Law had arrived in Quebec and had started through the woods of Maine. She starts out to rescue him. Her canoe, with the guide, comes upon the floating body of the stunned Law. He is rescued and they reach Portland, where he leaves her in a hotel while he goes to charter a motor yacht to take them to New York.

After they were some hours out he discovers that the girl with him is not Rose, but her sister Judith, the change having been effected in the hotel while Rose slept. Judith is in touch with a Gloucester schooner which has been pursuing them and he puts her in a dory and sends her off to that schooner. He then tells his companion on the motor yacht, Barcus, his story up to now and who the girl is.

No Quarter.

"Yes, yes," said Mr. Barcus indulgently, breaking a long silence. "Very interesting. Very interesting, indeed. I've seldom listened to a more entertaining life-history, my poor young friend. But I tell you candidly, as man to man, I don't believe one word of it. It's all damn foolishness!"

His voice took on a plaintive accent. "Particularly this!" he expostulated, and waved an indignant hand, compassing their plight.

"The rest of your adventures are reasonable enough," he said; "they won by credulity—and I'm a native son of Missouri. But this last chapter is impossible. And that's flat. It couldn't happen—and has. And there, in a manner of speaking, we are!"

Against the western horizon a long, low-lying strip of sand dunes rested like a bar of purple cloud between the crimson afterglow of sunset in the sky and the ensanguined sea that mirrored it.

The wind had gone down with the sun, leaving the Seaventre becalmed—her motor long since inert for want of fuel—in shoal water a mile or so off the desolate and barren coast that Barcus, out of his abounding knowledge of those waters, named Nauset Beach.

Still another mile farther off-shore, the so-called Gloucester fisherman rode, without motion, waters as still and glassy. Through the gloaming, with the aid of glasses, figures might be seen moving about her decks; and as it grew still more dark she lowered a small boat that thereafter had swung in davits. A little later a faint humming noise drifted across the tide.

"Power tender," the owner of the Seaventre interpreted. "Coming to call, I presume. Soberable lot. What I can't make out is why they seem to think it necessary to tow our dory back. Unnecessary conscience, maybe—what?"

He lowered the binoculars and glanced inquiringly at his employer, who grunted his disgust, and said no more.

"Don't take it so hard, old top," Barcus advised with a change of note from irony to sympathy. Then he rose and dived down the companionway, presently, he explained, grinning amiably, ended to reappear with a megaphone and a double-barreled shotgun.

"No cutting-out parties in this out!" "None of that old stuff, revised to suit your infatuated female friend. Once aboard the lugger and the man is mine!"

Stationing himself at the seaward rail, where his figure would show in sharp silhouette against the glowing sunset sky, he brandished the shotgun at arm's length above his head, and belabored strenuously through the megaphone:

"Keep off! Keep off! This means you! Come within gunshot and I'll blow your fool heads off!"

Putting aside the megaphone, he sat down again. "Not that I'd dare fire this blunderbuss," he confided, "with this rock of gasoline; but just for moral effect. Phew-w! I'd give a dollar for a breath of clean air; I've inhaled so much gas in the last few hours I'm dry-cleaned down to my silly old toes!"

Louis Vance's great story now being shown at His Majesty's Theatre and all leading picture houses throughout Canada

Gaining no response from Alan, he observed critically: "Chaffy little customer you are"; and resumed the binoculars.

For thirty minutes nothing happened, other than that the sound of the fisherman's launch was stilled. It rested motionless in the waters, two figures mysteriously busy in its cockpit. The Seaventre's dory trailing behind it on a long painter.

Gradually these details became blurred, and were blotted out by the closing shadows. The afterglow in the west grew cool and faint. The crimson waters darkened, to mauve, to violet, to a translucent green, to blackness. Far up the coast two white eyes, peering over the horizon, stared steadfastly through the dark. "Chatham Lights," Barcus said they were.

Abruptly he dropped the glasses and jumped up. "Hear that!" he cried.

Now the humming of the motor was again audible and growing louder with every instant; and Alan, getting to his feet in turn, infected with the excitement of Barcus, could just make out at some distance a dark shadow beneath a dim, spluttering glimmer of light, that moved swiftly and steadily toward the Seaventre.

"What the devil!" he demanded, puzzled.

"You uttered a mouthful when you said 'devil'!" Barcus commented, grasping his arm and hurrying him to the landward side of the vessel. "Quick—kick off your shoes—get set for a mile-long swim! Devil's work, all right!" he panted, hastily divesting himself of shoes and outer garments.

"I couldn't make out what they were up to till I saw them lash the wheel, light the fuse, start the motor and take to the dory. They've made one grand little torpedo-boat out of that tender!"

He sprang upon the rail, steadying himself with a stay. "Ready?" he asked. "Look sharp!"

By way of answer, Alan joined him; the two had dived as one, entering the water with a single splash, and coming to the surface a good ten yards from the Seaventre. For the next several seconds they were swimming frantically, and not until three hundred feet or more separated them from the schooner did either dare pause for breath or a backward glance.

Then the impact of the launch against the Seaventre's side rang out across the waters, and with a husky roar the launch blew up, spewing ekywards a widespread fan of flame. Over the Seaventre, as this flamed and died, pale fire seemed to hover like a tremendous kindness of tipping you over into the pit of phosphorescence, a world and a ghastly glare that suddenly descended to the decks. There followed a crackling noise, a sound as of the labored breathing of a giant, and bright flames, orange, crimson, violet and gold, licked out all over the schooner, from stern to stern, from deck to topmasts.

It seemed several minutes that she burned in this wise—it was probably not so long—before her decks blew up and the flames swept roaring to the sky.

By the time that Alan and Barcus, swimming steadily, had gained a shoal which—though still dry land was a quarter of a mile away—permitted them footing in waist-deep waters, the Seaventre had burned to the water's edge.

Dead Reckoning.

On Nauset Beach, in the shank of a midsummer night, two men sprawled on the sands, some distance back from the water, and listened to the heavy thumping of their overtaken hearts, and panted.

Now and again one would lift his head and stare out over the black face of the waters at a little line of reddish flames about a mile off shore, all that remained to witness to the fact that an hour since, these two had been in command of as trim a small schooner as ever ventured the coastwise trip from Portland to New York.

As far out again, shone the starboard light of a becalmed schooner whose people had been directly responsible for the disaster which had overtaken the smaller vessel.

In the course of time, beginning to breathe with more ease, one of the two marooned gentlemen said:

"Tell me, Barcus, what's the nearest symptom of civilization?"

"Chatham village," said Mr. Barcus, "six miles to the northwards, and cut off by an inlet a mile or so wide at that."

Mr. Law groaned soulfully.

"Then there's the lighthouse on Monomoy Point," Mr. Barcus pursued, "three miles to the south."

A silence commented eloquently on this assertion, broken only when Mr. Law voiced a thought bred of long and malignant observation of the schooner's green eye:

"I FANCY THEY CHLOROFOMED HER WHILE SHE SLEPT IN THAT HOTEL IN PORTLAND."

"I'd give a deal to know who's aboard that vessel."

"You don't mean you think your regular young woman?"

"It's possible. Judith kidnapped Rose in Portland. That's not so far from Gloucester; a motor car could have caught that schooner before she sailed to waylay us, this morning. And what better way to take care of an abominable, full-tempered girl you've kidnapped, than to ship her somewhere by sea, in the care of trustworthy helmsmen?"

"Don't ask me; I've done very little kidnapping for one of my years."

"For tuppence," said Mr. Law, "I'd risk a swim off to that boat and see for myself."

"For two million dollars—I would not!" Barcus affirmed with great decision.

A moment or so later the line of little flames went out altogether and unexpectedly; and the owner of the late Seaventre fancied he could hear, even at that distance, the hiss of charred and smoldering timbers sucked under and drowned out.

"Exit Seaventre, with heroic gesture, R. I. P. a good little ship!"

"Oh, let up, can't you?" Mr. Law exclaimed peevishly. "I'm sorrier than you are—and after all, it's my loss. I've got to buy you another boat. All you've lost is your temper."

"And my susceptibility to the charms of the well-known sex," Mr. Barcus corrected. "Nothing can ever restore my lost faith in gentle woman's gentleness. When you brought that young woman aboard I thought better would melt in her mouth, and for a while I actually contemplated doing her the drink, so she could lavish her tender affections on a regular guy, someone able to appreciate her—meaning me, of course. And first thing I know, she ups and points a gun at my head and tips me overboard, and then makes a pretty bonfire out of my sailboat. And all the excuse you can produce is that she's crazy in the head! Well, who said she wasn't? Any woman who would consent to elope with you is a fit subject for a commission de lunatico inquisendo, all right."

For a moment the two maintained attentive silence.

A sullen whisper troubled the silence, a little flutter of sound from far across the waters. Gradually it gathered volume, became recognizable as the lap of cautious oars.

"I'm going away from here," Mr. Barcus announced guardedly, and gathered his legs under him preparatory to rising.

"Half a second," Alan Law insisted, rising in turn and grasping the other by the arm. "They've got to land—haven't they?—and leave the boat while they look for us. Well, then, what's to prevent our hiding in the dunes and—?"

In the next breath, "Look out!" he shrieked.

With no warning whatever, and within fifty feet of them, a ghastly flare broke out in full blaze on the surface of the water, revealing the shape of a dory which had drawn in unseen under cover of the profound darkness, and at the same time disclosing to its occupants the two startled figures on the beach.

Before they could stir the weird light glimmered on a polished weapon in the bow of the boat, a spiteful conspurator of reddish flame spat out, a bullet sang between Messrs. Law and Barcus, and with a sad thud of disappointment buried itself in the sands of wave-eroded bluff behind them.

Like twin automatons stirred in action by the report, the two turned and pelted off down the beach, to escape that deadly area of illumination.

Other shots sped after them, but none was so well aimed; and presently, finding a break in the bluff, they swung off into the grateful shelter of the night-wrapped dunes.

Meantime the dory had grounded on the shore, and by several driftwood, four or five of them, all men, apparently—jumping out, set off in pursuit of the fugitives, following the tracks in the sand.

The blackness of the night, however, conspired with the savage labyrinth of the dunes to save Alan and his companion.

Within another five minutes—while still the pursuit floundered and blasphemed at random a round quarter mile to the south—Mr. Law and Mr. Barcus were noiselessly equipping on their bellies, like two great snakes in the beach-grass up the back of a ten-foot bluff. And presently from its brow they looked down on the spot where the dory lay, only its bow out of water, its stern aloft, under armed guard.

Very slowly and stealthily Alan got to his feet and swung back over his shoulder, and his clever driftwood.

A match spluttered beside the dory, and flamed in the still air, relieving with its reddish glow a bronzed and evil visage.

The guard puffed fast and had the tobacco well aglow when the sky took advantage of his trustfulness and fell upon him like an avalanche.

Simultaneously, Alan and Barcus descended the face of the bluff in two miniature slides, dug themselves out and by the time the dazed and disarmed guard had sufficiently recovered to cry out for help, the dory was a hundred yards off the beach and making excellent time in the direction of that lonely green light.

The commonest precaution, however, made them pause and rest upon their oars while yet a little way from their goal.

Only an ominous silence rewarded the utmost efforts of their straining senses; no sound was audible other than the gentle whine of an unengaged block, nothing was visible beyond the sinister glare of that almost stationary green lantern.

"What think?" Barcus inquired in a dubious undertone.

"No telling," Alan replied in the same manner. "All a chance."

"You've got that gun handy?"—with reference to the rifle of which they had despoiled the victim of the sky's ill-faith.

"Here."

"Then—let's go to it. Give way!"

A dozen lusty strokes brought them alongside the schooner, and as the dory scraped the waist of the larger vessel, the two young men dropped oars, rose, and seizing the low gunwales, lifted themselves to the deck.

Nothing opposed them; the deck was ignorant of other footsteps than their own, the schooner as silent as only a becalmed ship can be.

Without further consultation, Alan leaped quickly aft and down the companionway to the cabin, where a dim light burned—a smoky lamp swinging in gimbals above a cluttered table.

Of the two stateroom doors, one disclosed an empty cabin, the other was locked.

Trying the handle roughly, Alan fancied he heard a sound within. Pausing, he called, with a thrill of fearful hope:

"Hello in there!"

The response was a cry of incredulous delight: "Alan!"

By way of answer Alan hurled himself bodily against the door. At the second impact of shoulders backed by a hundred and eighty pounds of solid muscle and determination, the lock splintered away from its socket, the door flew open with a bang—and Alan into the room with a cry: "Rose!"

His sweetheart met him half-way, her arms uplifted, her countenance transfigured.

And Mr. Barcus turned and slowly ascended the companionway, his nose wrinkled with misgivings.

Some ten minutes later a hail from the deck broke the embrace of the lovers.

"Below there! I say—Law!—wind a-coming!"

"Right-o! Half a minute!"

But that stipulated delay was several times multiplied before Alan showed up on deck, to find Barcus bending a laborious back to the captain.

"Lend a hand, can't you?" Barcus complained, blowing heavily. "I didn't interrupt your amours just to get an audience. The sooner we get this anchor in—"

Alan checked him with a hand on his arm. "What's that?" he demanded in a tone steeped with apprehension.

The muffled rumming of a heavy duty marine motor drifted down on the wings of the sluggish wind.

"Don't ask me; I'm afraid to guess!"

"But they couldn't possibly!"

"Since when did you set up to be a judge of possibilities? Nothing probably ever happened to you in all your young life's far's I can make out. As for me—I know there are at least two life-saving stations on Nauset, both with modern equipment—motor life-boats and all; and nothing will ever persuade me that pack of wolves would stick at breaking in and confiscating one of the same. It's as likely as not—not more so. Our present business is to get the hell out of here—and not advertise our exit, either. Take that port light in and douse it, while I do the same by the star-board. Then duck below, warn your Dulcinea, and put out the cabin lamp. That way—if this blackness and our bull-hulk only holds—we may manage an evasion!"

There followed an exceedingly busy quarter of an hour for two constrained in pitch darkness to grope their way about the decks and familiarize themselves with the idiosyncrasies of a strange two-master. Nevertheless, the end of that period found the schooner with canvas full and sheets taut, a good easterly breeze abeam, swiftly weaving a wake southwards—the light on Monomoy Point watching her curiously from over the star-board beam.

"Fear anything more of that power boat?" Alan asked, joining Barcus by the wheel.

"Nothing—wind too fresh. Make yourself easy on the soft side of a plank here. I'll hand you a kick in the slats when so minded—or when it's your trick at the wheel."

With a chuckle, Alan obediently stretched himself out on the deck.

"I say—Law!"

"Well?"

"You seem pretty easy in your mind about this young woman below. To me, she's the same that tried to send me to Davy Jones' locker. How does she explain her presence aboard?"

"Much as I surmised," Alan replied. "I fancy they chloroformed her while she slept in that hotel in Portland. Whether or no, Rose woke up in a closed motor car—bound and gagged, of course—and was brought aboard at Gloucester about midnight."

"Simple when you know how," Barcus commented. "Of course, I always say the truth was a stranger to fiction. Cuddle down, now, and I'll talk you insensible."

His accents already merging in with the swish of the 'longside waves, the bubbling of the wake, and the many-toned composite voice of the ship in being, unconsciousness like a cloud descended upon Alan's overwrought faculties.

He woke mutinously, with a yawn and a shiver, in the gray of a tarnished daybreak, to find that fog pressed heavily upon the face of the waters, a mist so thick that from the stern the waist of the vessel was almost invisible, the bows completely so.

Barcus stood over him, at the wheel, fairly reeling with weariness, his eyes blood shot, swollen, and half closed in a face like a mask of fatigue.

"Can't keep up much longer," he apologized thickly; "stood it about as long as I can. Take your trick and give me forty winks."

Grateful solicitude brought Alan instantly to his side, though he himself was sluggish and stiff and sore in all his limbs.

"You're a brick!" he protested. "Why didn't you call me sooner?"

"No good. I knew the way—you didn't. That is, I did until this fog didn't. That fog closed down a couple of hours ago. Now—God knows where we are—by my reckoning somewhere in Nantuxet Sound, west of Monomoy."

Grasping a small brass handle affixed to the wheel box, he jerked it sharply three times; and the metallic horn blared raucously a threefold response up forward.

"Keep that going," he begged, "three blasts in a row and a minute interval—and if the devil takes care of his own, we may possibly escape being run down."

With a sigh, relinquishing the wheel, he collapsed upon the deck, and was almost instantly asleep.

The wind had fallen until barely enough air stirred to keep way on the vessel; she moved in silence, a spectral swells and the compass of the ship and you in the obscurity, fog-signals of other shipping sounded a concert of discordance—the man-power of a cat-bow crying the warning back to the deck—the cry of the coastwise steamship and the impatient drumming of a motor-boat's exhaust with the muffled cut out.

This last boxed the compass, sounding now near, now far; though the complaints of other shipping diminished in volume and died away in the distance, giving place to others, still the platter-platter of that motor was never altogether lost; if, at times it failed, it came certain always to return in even louder volume.

Vainly straining his vision against the blank pallor of the encompassing fog, Alan wondered, worried, dreaded!

At irregular intervals, starting from preoccupation, he would manipulate the brass pull on the wheel-box, provoking the horn's stuttering blasts of protest. But the need for unrelenting vigilance and exercise of the fog-signal, failed none the less to reconcile Alan to that blatant clamor which, without ceasing, so hideously advertised their whereabouts.

If there were anything left to be feared from Judith and her crew—if, for instance, as Barcus had suggested, they had sought out one of the life-saving stations on Nauset Beach, appropriated its power-driven life-boat and renewed the pursuit, if ever they heard that horn there would beyond question be the devil to deal with.

The loneliness of his vigil was eventually relieved by the appearance on deck of the woman Alan loved.

The tableau that greeted her vision as she emerged from the companionway, of the haggard, white-faced wretch at the wheel and the other who lay at his feet, where he had fallen, in stupor of fatigue, instantly wrung from Rose a little cry of solicitude. And she was quick to do what little she could to alleviate their discomfort. For Barcus she fetched a pillow and blanket from the cabin; and this one suffered her ministrations without once rousing from his slumbers. Then hastening forward, she got the galley fire going and prepared a makeshift breakfast for her half-famished lover.

Warm food and hot coffee—such as they were—lent a little tone to Alan's spirits; he was presently able to discuss their situation with some optimism. Yet nothing could gloss the fact that the problem confronting them was one whose solution baffled their utmost ingenuity—one the simple contemplation of which taxed their courage and intelligence to the extreme.

He summed up: "I can't see anything for it but to father and Judith forward, to have my scap, and I'm hanged if I can see how to protect myself without taking a leaf out of their books. What I'm most afraid of is that some time I may forget my obligation to the world, and forget that I'm a fellow's fighting for his very life he can't always stop to calculate the weight of his blows."

The young man sighed, shook his head, laughed uncertainly, and held her closer to him. "Don't fear. I'll find some way out without injuring either of them. I promise you that!"

He sealed the pledge upon her lips. And for the moment of their oblivion to the world, from some point forward a muffled crash sounded simultaneously with the dull shock of a collision with a smaller vessel; and a strange voice cried out with an accent of high exultation.

Before either Alan or the girl could disengage, the decks rang loud with a rush of booted feet pounding aft.

The figures of the boarding party were already taking shape through the fog as Alan sprang toward the com-panionway to fetch the rifle. And in this action, his feet slipped on planks greasy with moisture deposited by the surcharged atmosphere. He an instant later two men fell bodily upon him—active, strong fellows in the dress of fishermen. He was suffered to rise only as a prisoner, helpless in the grasp of two pair of powerful hands.

He saw Barcus, rudely roused, and still dumb with sleepy confusion, in no better case—jerked to his feet and held captive by two more fishermen. A fifth had taken charge of Rose, clamping her wrists in the vise of one big hand.

The sixth and sole other member of the boarding party, likewise in the rough-and-ready garb of a fisherman, was Judith Trine.

Down the side of a heavily life-boat ground its way astern, the logs end of its painter slipping over the rail even as Alan caught sight of it. (So it seemed Barcus had guessed shrewdly!) Observing this, one of the men in charge of Alan made as if to leave him to the other addressing Judith for permission to prevent the loss of the life-boat. She stopped him with a peremptory gesture.

"No—let it go. We're better off without it. Hold that man fast till I fetch a rope. We'll make sure of them both, this time!"

Straining forward in the grasp of her guard, Rose implored her sister: "Judith, in pity's name, think what you are doing!"

"Hold your tongue!" Judith snapped viciously. "Another whimper out of you, and I'll have you gagged!"

The bark of her threat, though accompanied by the exhibit of an automatic pistol, was drowned out by the sudden roar of a steamship fog-signal, so close aboard that it seemed almost to emanate from the fore-part of the schooner herself.

As it was answered by shrill and hoarse cries of terror and of warning, from a dozen throats, Alan found himself released, his captors leaping for their lives to the threshold.

He caught a hasty, anxious glimpse of the knife-like bow of a great steamship towering above the two-master—sweeping toward it at full speed which raised a smart jet of white under the outwater.

Someone aboard the schooner, with the voice of a stentor, bellowed a terrified appeal:

"Stop your engines! Shut off your propeller! Stop you—"

Then, like the wrath of God, the steamship overwhelmed the lesser ship; its bow seemed to slice through the schooner as a knife through cheese. And the two halves were fairly driven under water by the frightful force of the impact.

Thunders deafening him, Alan was hurled bodily through the air fully twenty feet.

When he came up he struck out at random, blindly tormented by the vision of Rose caught in the muck of that gigantic wheel, drawn under, crushed and mangled by the propeller of the vast black hulk whose flank was sliding past, like the face of a cliff, ten yards behind his shoulders.

Aware of several dark objects dotting the surface within a radius of several yards, he swam for the nearest of the head was a woman's, the face turned toward him the face of Rose.

He gasped wildly: "Keep cool! Don't struggle! Put one hand on my shoulder and—"

What happened then was never quite clear to him; he only knew that he was forced to fight for his very life—that the woman, as soon as he came within reach, flung herself upon him like some maddened animal, clutching his throat, winding her limbs round him, dragging him down and down.

Primitive instinct alone saved him. He remembered later, most vaguely, the culmination of that duel beneath the waters—remembered freeing an arm, drawing it back, delivering a blow from his shoulder, with all his strength, finding himself free, struggling back to the air.

Then a heathen caught the back of My! How Easy it Runs!

That's the sort of exclamations we hear from people who turn the 1915 Model Standard for the first time. It runs so easily that it seems as if a hidden motor must be doing most of the turning. That a cream separator should run so remarkably easy is considered to be a wonderful thing. But it is only one of the new features of the 1915 model.

Standard

cream separator. There is the interchangeable capacity feature, too. The one frame of the 1915 Model Standard accommodates all sizes of bowls, the frame and gears being sufficiently heavy to drive our largest capacity bowl. Think of the wide margin of extra strength and durability this means for the smaller bowls.

If after buying the 1915 Model Standard you should increase your herd you will not need to buy an entirely new machine of larger size. Just get a larger size bowl and fittings. An allowance will be made for the used bowl and fittings. This is the most important improvement in cream separator construction in years and it is fully covered by our latest patents.

The other new features are explained fully in the new edition of our catalogue, just off the press. The results of tests of the Standard at Government Dairy Schools and Creameries are also shown. Write for a copy.

GRANBY FAIR SATISFACTORY

There Was a Slight Falling Off in the Attendance on Last Day

SHOW IN THE FLORAL HALL WAS EXCELLENT—GOOD EXHIBIT OF CATTLE YESTERDAY

Granby, Sept. 12.—(Special)—The Horticultural Exhibition of 1914, under the auspices of the Granby Horticultural Society, which closed yesterday was from many points of view entirely satisfactory, although the attendance was not equal to that of former years, which means a slight deficit in gate receipts. As a whole the Exhibition was a success. All exhibits shown in Floral Hall were excellent.

In the live stock department there was a much better string of cattle brought than last year. One could not but notice a decided falling off of carriage and driving horses, although there were some extra fine animals shown.

During the afternoon Granby Band gave selections of music that was much appreciated.

FOUCET HAS BEEN LIBERATED

Was Sentenced to be Hanged and Then Sentence Was Commuted

WAS CHARGED WITH MURDER OF CHILD OF WIFE BY FORMER HUSBAND AT LA PATRIE.

Readers of the Record will remember the famous Fouquet case which ended here by a verdict of murder on the 14th of December, 1904. The prisoner was accused of having caused the death of Aurore Dubois, the infant child of Mrs. Fouquet by a former marriage, at La Patrie, Ditton, on the 2nd of October, 1903. Judge Lemieux, who presided at the trial, refused to grant a reserved case. The attorneys for the defence then applied to the Court of King's Bench for leave of appeal. The brief ground in support of the application was that the judge, in his charge to the jury, had stated that only one of two verdicts could be rendered: guilty of murder, or an acquittal. The defence obtained from Mr. Gatiien, the official court stenographer, a certified extract from the judge's charge supporting this contention. At the hearing in appeal the report of the proceedings by the trial judge did not agree with the abstract in question. In delivering judgment the learned Chief Justice (Sir Alexander LaCrosse) stated that the Court, much to their regret, could not be guided by anything else than the judge's report. But he added that this ground was serious, and no doubt would be considered by the Executive. The defence then submitted a petition to His Excellency the Governor-General-in-Council. Shortly afterwards the sentence of death pronounced by the trial judge was commuted into that of life imprisonment. The prisoner was then incarcerated in the penitentiary at St. Vincent de Paul, where he has been ever since. A couple of years ago it was reported that the prisoner was dead, but such was not the case. Last fall his wife turned up here and asked Mr. Belanger, K.C., one of the attorneys for the prisoner, to draw up a petition for pardon. After a long delay this petition was at last granted by His Excellency the Duke of Connaught, and the prisoner has been released.

Mr. Belanger has just received from his wife the following letter, which speaks for itself and will be read with interest by all those who remember this celebrated case:

"Manchester, N.H., Sept. 6, 1914. Mr. L. C. Belanger, K.C., advocate, Sherbrooke, Can. Dear Sir:—Never will I forget that to you I am indebted for the release of my husband nor the debt of gratitude I am owing to you. I feel in my heart sentiments which my pen is powerless to express. Please accept all my thankfulness, and gratitude will last forever. Your efforts for his liberty have been blessed by God, and I pray Him to bless your merit, and your great charity. Again, please accept the expression of my deep gratitude, and believe me, Yours very respectfully, Lucia Fouquet."

A PATRIOTIC FUND APPEAL
What can we do for the land
That gave our fathers birth,
From whence proceeds true liberty,
The truest known on earth?

What can we do for the race
Reared in this favored clime,
Whose sons must be baptized by blood
As their sires of olden time?

We may not enter the fray
And wage the bitter fight
To guard, and maintain to the end
Our homes, and freedom's right.

But at least we can provide
For dear ones left behind,
For fathers, brothers and sons
In battle form aligned.

On us the noblest trust
Is laid, in language mild:
"Whirl I fight abroad for your homes,
"Success my wife and child." ROVER

PRAYER FOR TIME OF WAR
O Almighty God, whose power no creature is able to resist, save and deliver, we humbly beseech Thee, our soldiers and sailors, who are now engaged in war, shield them in the hour of danger, that they, being armed with Thy defence, may be preserved evermore from all perils, to glorify Thee, Who art the only Giver of all Victory, through the merits of Thy only Son, Jesus Christ Our Lord, Amen.

After the general meeting of the ladies held yesterday afternoon, the relief committee held a special meeting to consider what action should be taken in connection with cases which required immediate attention.

Mrs. Craig reported the system worked out in Montreal. A card system is used which records the particulars with regard to each family or dependent. Standard regulations are laid down by which it may be determined just how much is to be paid out in each case. When each case has been thoroughly investigated and the amount of the allowance determined then the system works automatically and the dependents will receive their money regularly just as they would the wages of the one upon whom they depended for support. They will not in the least be made to feel that they are receiving a charitable donation.

SOME URGENT CASES
From the list of the 53rd and 54th regiments about 31 cases were marked urgent. Steps are also being taken to determine how many need attention among the dependents of the 2nd, Field Battery and Army Service Corps. Ladies are now at work making investigations and material assistance will be handed out early next week. The relief committee will meet again on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock.

WINDSOR MILLS
On Thursday afternoon Mr. Harry Doughty left by the G.T.R. train en route for Chicago. On Saturday the 12th he will be married at St. Bartholomew's Church, Chicago, to Miss Clara Beatrice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cubbin, of Rutherglen, Scotland.

FORMATION OF HOME GUARD

Sherbrooke Citizens Will Petition Minister of Militia for Rifles and Ammunition

SEVERAL VETERANS ANXIOUS TO JOIN MOVEMENT.—PUBLIC MEETING TO BE HELD

A petition is being largely signed in Sherbrooke asking the Minister of Militia to grant the use of a number of rifles and a quantity of ammunition for the establishment of a "home guard."

Many of the old veterans have signed the petition and are enthusiastic over the idea. It is intended by the promoters to ask the Mayor to call a public meeting in support of the project when the lists are full, so that the petition may go to Ottawa with the approval and backing of the citizens at large.

The petition read as follows: To the Hon. the Minister of Militia, and Defence, Ottawa.

We, the undersigned, citizens of Sherbrooke, Que., some being voters, others anxious to help practically, but being too old for the active Militia, desire to form an Association or Club for a "Home Guard" and to handle a rifle and to shoot straight.

We, therefore, respectfully petition you to grant us a number of rifles and sufficient ammunition for practicing purposes.

And your petitioners will, as in duty bound, ever pray, etc.
