BIG CANADIAN DAIRY MARKET

Dr. Grisdale and Prof. Archibald Join In Telling of Bright Future For Cattlemen

One of the features of the Royal show at Toronto last week was the big banquet put on by Canadian Ayrshire Breeders' Association in the Curtis-Rite Hotel. Over three hundred sat down and the speakers were listened to with close attention. It was not really a breed affair, for the speakers all dealt with current problems and prospects in the dairy world. Dr. Grisdale, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, who is just back from England after successfully pleading the Canadian side on the cattle embargo question, was the chief speaker of the evening. He surprised many by saying that the raising of this embargo was not important only to beef raisers but to dairymen as well. "Travelling over England and investigating conditions as closely as I could, I found just as Mr. Marshall told me he found, that there was a tremendous demand all over the country for good dairy cows. In the supplying of this demand with stuff of the first quality, the Canadian dairymen have a market which will absorb all that we can offer, but it must be good stuff." In the arrangements now completed, beef or store cattle are to be subject to a three day test on this side of the water. This is to be done during transit by the government free of charge, so it will not hamper the stuff in transit. In England there will be another brief inspection, on which the authorities there will charge 6d. per head. On dairy cattle the inspection will be a thirty day tuberculin test, which will be held in the barns of the shipper, so that there will be no actual delay in transit.

Turning to the problem of the dairy produce market in Britain, he stated that this market, being the premier dairy market in the world, was a market which should be carefully fostered by the Canadian dairymen. Yet today Canada has lost its premier place in the cheese market, and runs away down the list in the butter market. The reason for this the speaker said was that New Zealand in the first place was able to put cheese on the market which was made from the milk of cows which grazed the whole year round, but he thought the great difficulty in Canada lay in the fact that there was no big brands on the markets, and the quality varied. In England if a person got a piece of cheese or a pound of butter that he liked he came back to the store and demanded more like it. This was not possible with Canadian stuff, because coming from so many small factories there was no uniformity in quality. The answer to our problem lay in the amalgamating and starting of large factories. Already it had worked successfully in the west and the same could be done here.

Prof. Archibald of the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, went over the western map and pointed out the lack of proper appreciation that had been taken in breeding in on the prairies. For many years your Secretary, Mr. Stephen, has pointed out the great prospects in the west, but no real effort has ever been made by the breeders to get into this field. If the department wanted car loads of good stock, quite frequently they found it difficult to get. He mentioned as an example the new country lying between Smithers and Jasper Park in British Columbia. Here were millions of acres with a fine clay and silt soil, yet after interviewing practically every homesteader in the section "He was blessed if he could remember seeing an Ayrshire." In the western provinces the wheat farmers were having to turn to more certain crops. They had to have something to tide them over the bad years and the Ayrshire being admirably suitable for many sections the Association should make more determined efforts to place it there.

Prof. Barton, asked to be excused from any lengthy address, and the listeners who had watched the judging of the many classes that day, appreciated his request. He confined himself to a brief resume of the improvements in the herds during the past years of depression. It had been a good thing in disguise for when the demand was keen herds were stripped of the foundation stock, without properly preserving the strong points of the herd. He pointed out the need for more thorough breeding. The true types were not to be seen yet, and it was only through proper breeding with all the necessities of the animals in view that a successful policy of line-breeding could follow.

MONTREAL WHOLESALE MARKETS

Cattle

Saturday saw the close of the Montreal Market for export purposes and the figures for the season of navigation show a big decrease on last year. In all about 10,000 less than last year were loaded. During the early week sales of steers were made at $3.75 to $5.50 per 100 lbs., heifers at $2.75 to $4.25, cows at $2.50 to $4.50 and common bulls at $2.50 to $3.00. Lambs brought from $10 to $12 per 100 lbs. sheep from $4 to $6 per 100 lbs., calves from $7 to $12, and hogs sold at $11 to $11.50 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

Dairy Products

The market in butter strengthened on Monday and prices $\frac{3}{4}$ to 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ cents in advance of last week's quotations offered and accepted. The cheese market is remaining stationary owing to a light demand from abroad.

Eggs

An increased scarcity of strictly new laid eggs and as the demand was in excess of the supply a stronger feeling prevailed in the market and prices scored a further advance during the past week. There was no important change in the condition of the market for storage eggs, the feeling being firm in sympathy with stronger advices from Chicago. The demand was good.

Two carloads of Alberta eggs are now en route to Great Britain, and if the shipment markets satisfactorily it is expected a profitable trade will be developed. It is only a few years since Alberta was importing eggs from China and butter from New Zealand and now she is exporting large quantities of both these products.

The Gazette quotes the current wholesale Montreal prices for poultry on Monday as:

	Dressed
Turkeys	40c to 42c
Geese	00c to 24c
Ducks	25c to 30c
Chickens, 3 lbs.	18c to 20c
Chickens, 3 to 5 lbs.	00c to 25c
Chickens, 5 to 7 lbs.	00c to 30c
Fowl, small	18c to 22c
Fowl, heavy	22c to 25c
Turkeys	30c to 00c
	Live
Geese	24c to 00c
Ducks	26c to 00c
Chickens, 3 lbs.	15c to 18c
Fowl, small	15c to 20c
Fowl, heavy	26c to 28c

STE. MARTINE

Last week the cold set in for good and by Saturday the ice on the river was frozen from side to side and on Sunday some ventures crossed over near the church. Little snow fell during last couple of days and especially Monday, so the land is all covered with a thin coat.

We were lucky to receive cars of coal last week which were delivered at $18.00 a ton in the village, it is a big price but it is better than not having any. It is said the price will fall in December—all the better, as many wouldn't buy at that price and used wood.

After several advertisements at the church door the Municipal Council of this parish has authorized the collection by-law of all taxes not paid before the 15th. of this month, notices are served by the bailiff and if not paid law proceedings will be continued.

It is said the Leather Products Co., bought by Mr. Gauthier has changed hands, he again having sold to Mr. A. E. Robert of Beauharnois who intends starting business.

HOWICK

Those in this vicinity who receive the Toronto Telegram on Saturday found that R. R. Ness was a central figure in a cartoon of the Royal Winter Fair. Mr. Ness and John McKee, the superintendent of the cattle department at the show, are contrasts in size and the artist took advantage of his opportunities and had them gravely discussing the merits of an Ayrshire cow, which had some lines and angles not found in the Burnside stables.

The proper use of paint in business and industry entails a precautionary expense that returns an astonishingly high rate of interest. The need of the hour is thrift, and there is no practice in the art of saving that excels the plan of preserving the property we already possess. A dollar saved has no less value than a dollar earned. People who doubt the worth of paint may gain enlightenment through finding out why bankers will lend more money on land where farm buildings are well painted and kept in good condition than on land where they are not. The banker's action is based on his belief that the farmer's houses and barns will not only last longer through the use of a protective coating, but that the man who employs paint as a conservator is wise and thrifty and therefore a good risk. We may as well ask if it is not likewise true that the worth of a business manager may be determined in some degree by his attitude on the paint question.

LOCAL MEN CHAMPIONS

Local Breeders Sweep Classes at the Royal Fair in Toronto

Instead of the Howick-Huntingdon being on the Ayrshire map the showing at the great winter fair at Toronto last week would imply that the Canadian Ayrshire map is built around this district. The Grand Champions were found here, and in nearly every class the headlines were owned by local men. The Holstein men did not have a single representative from here, and the number of horses from this vicinity was meagre, but in the Ayrshire classes the showing was remarkable. Crack herds from the States, Quebec, Ontario and Saskatchewan and the result showed that the finest stock comes from this district. In all there were 412 animals entered, which only fell short by two of the greatest entry of Ayrshires ever held in the world, and was the biggest entry ever held in America.

With a collection of animals such as this there was bound to be a showing of different types and different line buildings. The American entries were not nearly as deep as the Canadian showings, and in some cases the horns of the males looked quite feminine. The Prince Edward Island entries were coarser coated than the Quebec entries and were more given to all white in coloring. The Experimental Farm at Ottawa had some fine stuff out. Their animals were larger in some respects than most, and were thick and wide. Among the local breeders the hair on some of the entries of R. R. Ness & Sons and Gilbert McMillan was quite noticeable. It appeared to be quite fine, and almost silky in texture.

The Grand Champion bull owned by R. R. Ness & Sons has a remarkable head, wide and full, crowned by fine horns. He was the oldest bull in the ring, and apart from his size and head was noticeable owing to his coloring being darker than any others.

The Grand Champion male was the new herd sire of the Burnside Farm, Strathglass Gold Chink. He had won his place in the regular class against a class of 14 and shown in perfect condition. The female grand champion was Palmerston Hyacinth 8th, owned by E. C. Budge of Beauharnois. This cow has been a grand champion continuously for three years now and won her class without great difficulty, but when she and R. R. Ness' Burnside Blossom Andrietta came together for the Grand Champion class, there was an open debate as to which was the better. Prof. Barton decided in her favor, but stated that she had the closest run for her money in her history.

The biggest class in the show was in senior heifer calves. Here 44 entries faced the judge and he had his hands full trying to pick a winner. Finally it was given to an American entry with R. R. Ness second and E. C. Budge third.

On Thursday morning the bulls were judged and the showing made by local men pointed to decisive victories. The aged bull class was won by R. R. Ness & Sons, with D. T. Ness getting fifth place. The class for bulls 2 years and under three went to the College at Oka, with Gilbert McMillan second, D. T. Ness third and E. C. Budge fourth. The senior yearling bull class was judged by Mr. Stansell, as one of the entries had been bred at Macdonald College. In this class R. R. Ness & Sons won first and D. T. Ness fourth. In the junior yearlings E. C. Budge won 3rd and J. P. Cavers 5th, and in the senior calf class R. R. Ness & Sons won 3rd and Gilbert McMillan fourth. In the junior bull calf class 31 entries were made and Gilbert McMillan won his first red ribbon of the show when Springburn Golden Treasure took top place. Second place was taken by R. R. Ness and Sons.

Friday morning the first class did not start off with the local men on top, but D. T. Ness was in the money when his entry took fifth prize in the cows four years or over.

However they came back strong in the three year old class in milk when E. C. Budge took first ribbon, Gilbert McMillan second and W. C. Tully third. This was Mr. Tully's first entry and first win and he followed it up in the next class when his Primrose of Beaver Meadow 4th took second in the 2 year heifer class. In next place was R. R. Ness & Sons and in fifth money was Gilbert McMillan.

Gilbert McMillan led the winner in the class for 2 year old heifers not in milk when Springburn Lovely Beauty was placed at the top of the class. In second place was W. C. Tully and J. P. Cavers made three prizes for the district when his entry took fifth prize. Just outside the money was Charles Hyde's entry which was lined up in seventh place.

Government Offers High Grade Stock to Local Farmers

Prices Range from $18 to $20

In an effort to promote the raising of the bacon type of hogs the Dominion government is offering grade Yorkshire hogs to the farmers in Quebec. Mr. Blondin, county agronomist, has been advised that a car load can be shipped here if desired and already 25 farmers in the west end of the county have asked for some of the stock. Mr. Blondin states that there are 60 sows in a car load lot and if those who would like to get one of these sows would get in touch with him he can make the necessary arrangements before the order for the stock is sent to Ottawa. As the government is paying all the shipping charges and is also bearing all the costs incurred in selecting the pigs the price of $18 to $20 here makes it possible for a man to sell one of his inferior sows now and buy stock of the much desired bacon type.

On November 1st the Federal Government placed experts on each of the large markets of the country whose business is to grade all hogs brought into the market. The idea being that the hogs which will class as Select bacon hogs for export shall be distinguished and a top price paid for that class of hog.

In order to facilitate the farmers to produce this type of hog, the Federal Provincial Governments are endeavoring to place high grade Yorkshire sows on farms. These sows will be grouped at central points and shipments made from there to the various counties that want them.

Dave Ross Gave First Alarm

On Monday night about 11:15 Dave Ross started from the Brethour home to south-west of Huntingdon. When coming down the lane, he saw ahead of him a car parked in the lane. He stopped and saw two men step out of it. It being a strange occurrence, he returned to the house and one of the Brethour boys came down the lane with Dave to investigate. Sure enough it was there but the men had crossed the field to Boyd's Garage. They believed crooked work was about to be done and immediately returned to the house and phoned Mr. J. C. Boyd and the customs officers. Before 12 p. m. J. C. Boyd and son, customs officers Oney and his assistants, along with some other men were on hand. Dave and Brethour stood on watch at the gate entering Brethour's lane. It was found that the strangers had a bar, ropes and bags and had gained partial entrance to Boyd's outbuildings. The supposition is the men were after liquor that had been seized and stored at Boyd's. The men got alarmed and beat it across the field to the Stutz car in the lane. Dave and W. Brethour saw the two tall men approaching the car from another direction. Chase was then given and the men struck for the woods on foot. The officers followed firing a few stray bullets. The tracks in the snow were followed to Carrigan's Bridge and from that point to Jamieson's line. Search was kept up until 7 a. m. The large Stutz car is now in possession of the customs officials in Huntingdon.

NOTES OF THE WEEK

The Immigration Policy

Both in an official announcement from Ottawa and in a speech in Montreal, the Hon. Mr. Stewart, who has charge of immigration, this week announced new plans in connection with the Dominion policy. It was to be expected. The country has turned the financial corner and a policy of expansion was bound to follow. In brief the new policy is by intensive advertising, to attract farmers from the United States, the British Isles, France, Belgium and the Netherlands. In particular the aim will be to get competent agricultural workers, who have the experience but not the capital to set up for themselves. The Minister styles them "renter farmers" which is as apt a term as any. In particular he hopes to attract men from the U. S. Middle-west where he claims thousands are failing because they can't get the necessary returns from farms bought during boom days at two or three hundred dollars an acre. These men he thinks will be willing to consider western Canadian sections where land can be bought for $20 an acre. With some modifications the same plan is to be tried in the east, but from the tone of the announcement the intention apparently is to concentrate the efforts on the west.

If this policy is to be made a success there will have to be a big change in the present banking arrangements. The Minister says it cost over $95,000,000 to date to handle 22,000 returned men who had taken up the farming re-establishment scheme. Most of these men are in the west. The government is now a heavy investor directly and indirectly in the west, and this week western financiers stated that the banks had loaned two dollars for every one deposited by the western farmers. In consequence the elaborate scheme which will require much money to finance should be carefully considered before adoption.

The drawback in the agricultural prosperity in Canada has been that the western farmer has not been getting the returns he should. He blames the railroads for taking all his earnings through excessive freight rates. The railroads in turn claim they are losing money. The solution of the Minister is that both should adopt the manufacturing plan and by quantity production both would make money. His argument is that if a section now producing 100 cars of wheat is more thickly populated and 200 cars are shipped it will mean a more wider division of transportation overhead costs, and in consequence a proportionately lower rate for the individual shippers. If times were normal throughout the world his reasoning would be sound but while North America has made a complete recovery Europe has not and will not be in a position to buy for many years. Should therefore we in building our Canadian west make a spur for the moment or consolidate our present condition?

Admitting the plan will deal chiefly with the west, before it is endorsed the conditions there should thoroughly be considered. In the days of prosperity before the war for $10 and no brains any man could consider himself the proud owner of 160 acres of earth, which might be good wheat land but too far away from a railway, or which might be right on the railway but not in an area blessed with a sufficient rain fall and in consequence an uncertain venture. Most of these men after several years of ups and downs, culminating in the post war slump are in a condition where they can neither find a buyer for their own land nor borrow enough money to start them on a new venture. The extent of these sections is large, and plans are now being put into practice which will move some of these unfortunates to more profitable areas. Again there are many who are on good land in the northern sections but the railway charges are so high that at present it is unprofitable for them to ship any bulky grains. It must therefore be admitted that the western farmer who is fully experienced in prairie farming is not making the success he should. Why therefore should the number be swollen by bringing in others who know nothing about it? The world is in a state of living from hand to mouth, but with the international exchange so much one-sided they won't buy more and with the United States, having such a high tariff wall erected against us, the chances are that an extravagant expansion of food supplies would not be in the interests of the sections the plan was intended to help most.

It would be more reasonable were the department to centre their interests and spend their money on the farmers we now have in the three prairie provinces. If the government has spent 95 millions on the returned men and figure that the experience and results were worth it, let it prepare other schemes whereby the condition of those farming in the west may be improved. These people, residents of the country during the years of strife and strains, are, if not now Canadian, of better material to weld into Canadian citizenship than the new settlers brought from the boiling pots of Europe. The expansion of Canada need not be rushed. It is bound to come, and a better foundation of nationalism is better than a few years of artificial prosperity through an unsound nation building policy.

In the west the policy of nation building should be internal. In the east it must be external. Here the country has been settled thoroughly for a hundred years. Practically all land is under cultivation in the southern sections and the methods are similar to those found in progressive Europe. The trouble here lies not in crop failures but in workers. Young Canada grows up with the city in his eye and he leaves the old folks to do the farming. They can't work at the same speed all their lives and the slackening down has reduced the possible production of the east to a marked degree. Indeed many farms capable of producing big and abundant crops year in and year out are not paying interest at 3 per cent, merely because the soil isn't worked. Men are needed and if in the United States or in the British Isles or in Northern Europe there are men who are prepared and willing to work our eastern farms they are needed. In the east the market for food stuffs is domestic and ever-growing, and above all the population is dense enough and the national patriotism pure enough to assimilate a large number of strangers from beyond our gates.

The Profits of Success

The outstanding showing of the Ayrshire breeders of this district at the great Royal Fair at Toronto last week, means more than the honor gained thereby. At this fair where the competitors came from all parts of Canada, and in open competition with crack herds of the United States, the capturing of the majority of the prizes by local breeders means that wherever there are Ayrshire breeders the Howick-Huntingdon district will be known as the centre where the finest stock may be obtained. The material advantages of this are not slight. Men will come here expecting good stuff and will be willing to pay the price to get it. The sentiment will be the same as that of a buyer in a city store. When he enters a big fine store he expects good stuff and is not flabbergasted, as he would be if in a mean store on a side street, when a stiff price is named.

To maintain this record not only must the quality of the stock of the prominent breeders be maintained, but also the smaller breeders must concentrate more and more in the raising of stock fit for production and exhibiting. The cattle men of this district have the greatest opportunity of the generation thrown in their laps and they should take full advantage of it. Unfortunately at this great fair none of the district Holstein breeders were out. Mr. Silley of Lachine was the only exhibitor within reaching distance of here, and he is outside of the local area. There is stock in this region which is fit to compete with the best in Canada, and before other clubs show come along the breeders' club should drive home the truth that the show ring is the show window of a district and encourage the breeders to dress this window.

GOOD REPORTS GIVEN

Orms town Show Annual Meeting Re-elects Old Board

The annual meeting of the District of Beauharnois Live Stock Association was held in Orms town yesterday morning and the financial statement showed that the directors had handled things well last year. Despite the fact that extensive improvements had been made to the grounds the Association would have balanced their revenue and expenditure, had not the show days been the worst in the history of the fair. As it is the deficit for the year is about $1500, which can easily be made up if the weatherman gives the show an even chance this year. The meeting showed their appreciation of the Executive by re-electing the retiring board.

As two of the directors were absent a directors' meeting was not held for the purpose of electing a President and Vice-President. A meeting for this purpose will be held shortly.

FACTORY WORKER EARNS $25.51 PER WEEK IN OCT.

According to Statement of Henry Thayer, State Industrial Commissioner

Albany, Nov. 27.—Factory workers in New York state earned an average of twenty-five dollars and fifty-one cents per week during October, according to a statement by Industrial Commissioner Henry D. Thayer, today. There was a decrease of over four dollars in railway shops due to shorter working time after the settlement of the shopmen's strike, he said.

FIRE OUTBREAK

Saturday between 9 and 10 a. m. the Longueuil Fire Brigade were given a run to extinguish a fire outbreak in the home of Mr. F. C. Johnson, 113 Labonte St. and promptly put an end to what might have been a disastrous fire. The damages were confined only to the kitchen.

Another of the old familiar faces has gone from our midst, in the person of Miss Jessie McNaughton of Havelock, who passed peacefully away on Thursday, the 23rd, after a quiet but eventful life at the advanced age of 93. The funeral services were conducted at her home by Rev. St. Aubin, who spoke earnestly from the text: "Those also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him." Her favorite hymns were sung, "Abide with me," "Jesus Lover of my Soul" and "Asleep in Jesus." She was held in high esteem by all who knew her. The casket was covered with flowers, silent tributes to the memory of a faithful friend. The chief mourners were Smith McNaughton, her nephew with whom she lived and the Misses Katie, Annie and Donald McFee of Montreal, Mr. Donald McFee and Mr. McNaughton of Hemmingford. The remains were taken to Hemmingford for burial.

Mrs. Mark Semple is still under the doctor's care.

Miss Florence Steele is improving in health.

Miss Mildred Barr spent the week end with Miss Marian Moore. Miss Bessie Barr of Franklin and brother Cecil, spent the week end at the home of Mr. Tom Barr and sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bustard and Mr. Willie Roberts of Orms town attended the funeral of Miss McNaughton.

ORMSTOWN

In the absence of Rev. D. N. Coburn over Sunday in Ottawa, Rev. U. Tanner of the Home Mission Board occupied the pulpit in St. Paul's Church Sunday morning and evening.

W. A. McGerrigle left for Toronto on Monday to attend the Royal Winter Fair and more particularly to attend a meeting of Fair Managers, held in the Carls-Rite Hotel, Toronto, on Wednesday, Nov. 29th, commencing by Prof. H. S. Arkell, Dominion Live Stock Commissioner, to consider the question of Federal grants to Fairs, such as Orms town Live Stock Show.

Mrs. Everest of Plattsburg, N. Y., a noted elocutionist, gave a Recital in McDougall Hall on Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the Sunday School. A good audience was present and all enjoyed a rare treat. Miss L. Walsh sang very acceptably. Miss M. Cavers and Miss F. Cameron and the C. G. I. T. Girls sang several musical selections.

The curlers are looking for cold weather as they have the first chance for the Quebec Cup and the Montreal papers report the defenders were curling on Tuesday.

CAN A LAWYER MAKE HEAVEN?

Solemnly Debated in Quebec Legislative Council Fifty Years Ago.

Considerable interest is being shown in the debates of the Legislative Assembly regarding the pros and cons of the John H. Roberts' case, and in going over old files to pick out some events of this week fifty years ago following report of the proceedings of the Legislative Council is given, which shows that the members were as sensitive then as now of having their characters blemished.

The proceedings of the Legislative Council are so dull and stupid, and of so little concern to the public, that they rarely allude to them. In fact the second chamber at Quebec is a superfluity, and what it does or says is as of little moment as the shape of the Lieutenant-Governor's official hat or the color of his breeches. If, however, its proceedings are rapid and profitable, they are not at all times unanimous. It possesses a "character" in the person of a gentleman who styles himself the Hon. J. Fraser de Berry, and who, although a French Canadian claims to be the chief of the Frasers in this Province, and so far are we from disputing his arrogant position, that we are quite willing to concede also, if he requires it, that he is the head of the Berry tribe also, including the gooseberries. On Wednesday of last week a bill was before the council to permit the admission of a Vermont gentleman, Mr. Smith, into the Canadian bar. The Chief of the Frasers and the Berries could not keep silent on such a momentous question. He dwelt on the high qualities of Mr. Smith, that he could speak French, that he sought intercourse with French families, that his father was rich, and what in the eyes of this proud chief is of infinitely more consequence, his mother was of "noble" birth. Wherein her "nobility" lies was not made apparent, but it must have been satisfactory, or else one so scrupulous as to the genealogy would have hesitated to apply the epithet to a Yankee family. To branch off from the pedigree of the Vermont Smiths to the pedigree of the lawyers was natural, and if the Honorable gentleman was not as explicit in the first case as might be desired, he fully made up for it in the second. The origin of the Smiths he left in awe-inspiring obscurity, but on the origin of lawyers he concentrated the full blaze of his historic and genealogical lantern, and left not a shadow of doubt as to their great founder. We must quote his words he said:

By allowing the bill to be read a second time, you enable Mr. Smith to enroll his name among the advocates of this Province, who exercise a profession nearly as ancient as the world itself, for we read in the 4th chapter of Genesis, the 9th verse—God asked, "Where is your brother Abel?" Cain answered, "I know not, am I my brother's guardian?"—Well, hon. gentleman, if there had been lawyers then in Paradise (he did not know if any had gone there since) they would have advised Cain not to answer and he would not then have proved himself a liar as well as a murderer.

As becomes his lofty position, The Fraser de Berry is a polite man. He could not be so rude as to say plainly that the Devil was the founder of the legal profession, and therefore resorted to the equivocation. "If there had been lawyers then in Paradise," leaving it to be inferred as plain as a pikestaff that there were no lawyers then in Paradise, and that the evasive answer of Cain was suggested by a lawyer in the other place. Such is the ingratitude of man, however, that instead of thanking the illustrious Chief for his information, the lawyers in the house waxed wroth against him. The Hon. Mr. Ross boldly declared that he felt, after such extraordinary advocacy, like voting against the Bill, and the Hon. Mr. Rodier squeaked forth that the legal profession had been grossly insulted. Such is the reward of the historical investigator, but we beg the great chief of the many names not to be discouraged, but to pursue his researches and limited as our space is, we will not fail to chronicle their results. We cannot close here, however, His efforts are not confined to tracing the pedigrees of Yankee families or the origin of the legal profession, he is equally zealous in the cause of piety. At the very sitting during which the Smith bill came up, he asked the ministry when they were going to appoint a Chaplain to the Council. He had asked them the question before but had received no satisfaction. He had sought to fortify his request by constitutional precedents, but on referring to the Parliamentary library, he had failed to find a single work that bore on the point. "The library," he explained indignantly, "was full of other works, history, for example, which they might study at home, but of works on constitutional practice there was scarcely anything to be found in its shelves." Were he like other men we might ask what connection there can be between constitutional practice and chaplains, and the names of the books that treat of such a curious conjunction, but we forbear. Failing to receive aid from books he fell back on his mental resources, and said:

If they look to Rome or France, one the chief seat of the religion they profess, the other, the country whence the majority of the members of this House claim their descent, what do we find? Why, that Bishops were members of the governing councils in both countries, and that their proceedings always commenced by invoking the Divine aid on their work. In this country, before the conquest, the Roman Catholic Bishop was always a member of the Conseil Imperial, and the practice of preceding the business by prayer was the invariable rule. Under the English Government, when Protestants became the governing power, and this Council was mainly constituted of Protestant members, according to their constant plan, a chaplain was appointed whose duty it was to offer prayer to the Almighty before the Council proceeded to their great and important work of legislating on the lives and fortunes of the inhabitants, and shall we Roman Catholics, who profess ours to be the only true faith, shall we attach less value to prayer than do our brethren the Protestants, whom we believe to be in error; but this I must say for them, if their doctrines are not all sound, their practice is superior to ours, for while they observe with strictness the rules of their churches, we sadly neglect ours.

The Hon. Mr. Starnes—Speak for yourself.

The Hon. Mr. Fraser not only spoke for himself but for the whole country but he would limit to his own neighbors, and there, at least, he regretted to say, the Sunday was not unfrequently devoted to manual labor, and the duties of religion were neglected. Did Protestants so observe the Sunday? The same neglect was too common all over the country.

Hon. Mr. Starnes rose to order. The hon. gentleman was using most irritating language, which he, as a Catholic, would not suffer. The assertions, he believed were incorrect; at all events, they had nothing to do with the question before the House.

We regret to say it, but the Fraser de Berry allowed himself to be silenced; put down by Mr. Starnes, a man of no pedigree worth speaking of and of no affinity either by the fact that, like Fergus McIvor when he met Waverly, The Fraser de Berry had neglected to bring his tail with him. When he renews his question, let him go to the council all plumed and plaided in tartan array, and with due following of ghillies, and then, when he makes his demand in the purest French (Gaelic would be wasted on the Councilors even if The Fraser de Berry could speak it) let us see if a hybrid Canadian like Starnes will dare to insultingly interrupt him, or a scoffing ministry dare to deny him. A Mess John, in orthodox outance, will be duly installed, and the piety of the Council and the country be thereby secured.

The short debate throws light on the matter which has always been one of wondering conjecture to ourselves. Mr. Starnes sits in the Council as a representative for the district of Beauharnois, and the question has often puzzled us on what grounds the Government chose him. He is not a resident, he has no property of any consequence, his connection is merely nominal, and certainly he was not chosen for his talents. The interruption he made to the Fraser de Berry's speech makes it all plain, however. It will be noted when he spoke of the impious practices of the Catholics, Mr. Starnes told him to speak for himself, that he (Starnes) had reached such an austere summit of piety that he was not to be compared with the class of heretics called Protestants or with such second-rate Catholics as the Fraser de Berry himself. From this we conclude that the Hon. Mr. Starnes was chosen to represent our District in the Council on account of his piety, just as the Hon. Louis Renaud was chosen to represent us in the Senate on account of his intelligence.

BRANTFORD.

Facts About the Beginnings of Thriving City.

Brantford's origin was so closely bound up with the Six Nations Indians that it is difficult to realize that a city now so highly industrialized is only seventy-five years old. Its population of 35,000 is largely dependent on a remarkable aggregation of factories, though happily these are in turn mostly dependent upon agriculture, which is so important and prosperous an industry in the Dominion. Aside from the manufacturing of agricultural implements, however, Brantford has earned a quite unusual place of its own in science and literature, through the invention there of the telephone by Alexander Graham Bell, and through the writings of Pauline Johnson, Sara Jeanette Duncan and Norman Duncan.

It was Governor Simcoe's desire that the Grand river should be rechristened the Ouse, after the river of that name in Yorkshire, but in this, as in his efforts to apply the name of York to Toronto, he did not permanently succeed. Joseph Brant gave his name and a considerable halo to this whole region, although Joliet was the first white wayfarer to pass through these solitudes, in 1669, on his way to Quebec from the discovery of Sault Ste. Marie.

Brant was a persistent friend of the British cause, having fought against the French in 1759, against Pontiac's efforts in 1663, against the Americans in the Revolutionary War and again in the Indian uprising west of the Ohio in 1791.

It was through his efforts mainly that the Six Nations secured the big land grant in the valley of the Grand for their services in the Revolutionary War, and moved from the Mohawk Valley in New York State to Upper Canada. The original grant was twelve miles wide along the Grand from its mouth to its source. This amounted to 768,000 acres. But through subsequent sales to private persons and concessions to the Government it was reduced to 44,000 acres. The old Mohawk Church on the edge of Brantford, built soon after the Indians moved to the Grand, was the first Anglican church in Upper Canada and is one of the province's most cherished relics. Brant was well acquainted with European manners, and a visitor to him in 1792 reported that he received his guests "with much politeness and hospitality. Tea was on the table when we came in, served in the handsomest china plate—our beds, sheets and English blankets were fine and comfortable. Two slaves attended the table." But "Mrs. Brant appeared superbly dressed in the Indian fashion. Her blanket was made up of silk and the finest English cloth, bordered with a narrow strip of embroidered lace."

A Thrifty Muse.

"If you write verses advertising soap, soap and cosmetics, you'll never be known as one of the immortals." "Probably not," said the commercial bard. "Neither will posterity write indignant letters to the press because the present generation permitted me to starve."

Make Cheap Feeds More Palatable with the Dependable--Guaranteed "MAPLE LEAF" BRAND Feed Molasses

There's good nourishment in Fodder, Straw, Old Hay Shredded Corn Stover, Ensilage and Screening; but your cattle don't like such roughage because it has no taste.

You can make these dry, untempting feeds become as tasty and succulent as May grass, when you sprinkle them with "MAPLE LEAF" BRAND FEED MOLASSES.

THERE IS NOTHING BETTER

It tastes good--is good. 100% Pure sugar-cane molasses--Guaranteed.

The Government Experiment Stations endorse feed molasses. Dairy men and farmers use it right through the winter to keep their stock in prime condition and at the same time, save money on feed.

"MAPLE LEAF" BRAND FEED MOLASSES, fed with ordinary roughage or added to grain feeds, will increase your milk yield from 15 p. c. to 25 p. c.--as proved by the dairy men who are feeding it in increased quantities, "Maple Leaf" Feed Molasses acts as a splendid tonic on the Horses and keeps them in fine condition when they are tied up in the barn and cannot get much exercise. Equally good for Pigs and Sheep.

Keep down feeding costs this winter. Use up your Straw and Roughage.

He Tested Mt. Everest.

A true Briton is Dr. Wakefield, Canadian member of the Mount Everest expedition, in that he does not advertise. Before leaving his home at Lake Megantic, Quebec, to take part in the ill-fated expedition, he did not send his biography to all the newspapers with full account of his academic and other honors and degrees. He just went. It was in something of the same quiet spirit that he went to the Great War. In both hazardous experiences he has done his duty. Twice he has survived, though which was the greater ordeal it would be difficult to say.

In the initial expedition to Mount Everest, undertaken last year and completed with considerable success, Canada had a representative, Major A. O. Wheeler, of Ottawa, and Calgary, expert Alpinist and mountain photographer. This Dominion was equally honored in the second expedition which was intended to do the work of ascent. As the 1921 party marked out and tested the best route and ascertained the conditions and the best means of overcoming them, so the 1922 party was expected to scale the snow-capped heights of the world's tallest peak.

Only the fittest men in all the Empire, men fitted by actual climbing experience and by physical condition, were selected. The dangers were enough to try the finest nerve, the hardships enough to break the strength and will of the strongest. Even to fail was glorious and in that glory Canada can share through the participation of the dauntless Wakefield, who has since returned to India, worn but unconquered and indomitable.

An Art Golfer.

"Have you noticed that Dauber has changed his style of painting lately? From his former meticulous method he has turned to a sort of slapdash impressionism."

"Yes, it's the influence of golf, I think—he now tries to do his work with the fewest number of strokes."

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

Municipality of the County of Huntingdon.

To the owners and inhabitants of the Township of Godmanchester and the parish of Ste. Barbe, interested in that certain road which lies between the township of Godmanchester and the parish of Ste. Barbe aforesaid and running west from the Ste. Barbe side road to Lot No. 770 of said municipality.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Is hereby given by R. S. Feeny, Secretary-Treasurer, under orders of the Municipal Council of the County of Huntingdon, by a motion passed on the 13th day of September last, that at the regular session on the 13th day of December next, the said Municipal Council will take into consideration a by-law to amend the Procès Verbal of I. I. Crevier on said road, homologated on the 11th September, 1895 and amended by I. I. Crevier on July 28th 1902, said procès-verbaux provide for the road to be maintained by the owners of the lots of land in the parish of Ste. Barbe fronting on said road.

And now Ste. Barbe Council has passed a by-law whereby all the roads are maintained by the Council and consequently these parties are not liable for the maintenance of said road.

Consequently the County Council proposes to pass a by-law declaring said road to be a Municipal Road in charge of the Council of the parish of Ste. Barbe and out of jurisdiction of the County Council.

All interested parties present will be heard either for or against the adoption of said by-law.

Given at Huntingdon this 24th day of November, nineteen hundred and twenty-two.

The Great Impersonation

CHARACTER XX

Arm in arm, Prince Ternioff and his host climbed the snow-covered slope at the back of a long plantation, towards the little detached sticks which indicated their stand. There was not a human being in sight, for the rest of the guns had chosen a steeper but somewhat less circuitous route.

"Von Ragasteln," the Ambassador said, "I am going to give myself the luxury of calling you by your name. You know my own weakness, a weakness which in my younger days very nearly drove me out of diplomacy. I detect espionage in every shape and form, even where it is necessary. So far as you are concerned, my young friend, he went on, "I think your position ridiculous. I have sent a private despatch to Potsdam, in which I have expressed that opinion."

"So far," Dominey remarked, "I have not been overworked."

"My dear young friend," the Prince continued, "you have not been overworked because there has been no legitimate work for you to do. There will be none. There could be no possible advantage accruing from your labours here to compensate for the very bad effect which the discovery of your true name and position would have in the English Cabinet."

"I must ask you to remember, Dominey begged, "that I am here as a blind servant of the Fatherland. I simply obey orders."

"I will grant freely," the Prince consented. "But to continue, I am now at the end of my first year in this country. I feel able to congratulate myself upon a certain measure of success. From that part of the Cabinet with whom I have had to do, I have received nothing but encouragement in my efforts to promote a better understanding between our two countries."

"The sky certainly seems clear enough just now," agreed Dominey. "I have convinced myself," the Prince said emphatically, "that there is a genuine and solid desire for peace with Germany existing in Downing Street. In every argument I have had, in every concession I have asked for, I have been met with a sincere desire to foster the growing friendship between our countries. I am proud of my work here, Von Ragasteln. I believe that I have brought Germany and England nearer together than they have been since the days of the Boer War."

"You are sure, sir," Dominey asked, "that you are not confusing personal popularity with national sentiment?"

"I am sure of it," the Ambassador answered gravely. "Such popularity as I may have achieved here has been due to an appreciation of the more healthy state of world politics now existing. It has been my great pleasure to trace the result of my work in a manuscript of memoirs, which some day, when peace is firmly established between our two countries, I shall cause to be published. I have put on record there evidences of the really genuine sentiment in favour of peace which I have found amongst the present Cabinet."

"I should esteem it an immense privilege," Dominey said, "to be given a private reading of these memoirs."

"That may be arranged," was the suave reply. "In the meantime, Von Ragasteln, I want you to reconsider your position here."

"My position is not voluntary," Dominey repeated. "I am acting under orders."

"Precisely," the other acquiesced, "but matters have changed very much during the last six months. Even at the risk of offending France, England is showing wonderful pliability with regard to our claims in Morocco. Every prospect of disagreement between our two countries upon any vital matter has now disappeared."

"Unless," Dominey said thoughtfully, "the desire for war should come, not from Downing Street but from Potsdam."

"We serve an honourable master," Ternioff declared sternly, "and he has shown me his mind. His will is for peace, and for the great triumphs to which our country is already entitled by reason of her supremacy in industry, in commerce, in character and in genius. There are the weapons which will make Germany the greatest Power in the world. No empire has ever been its way to permanent glory by the sword alone. We have reached our stations, I see. Come to me after this drive is finished, my host. All that I have said so far has been by way of prelude."

The weather had turned drier, the snow was crisp, and a little party of women from the Hall reached the guns before the beaters were through the wood. Caroline and Stephanie both took their places by Dominey's side. The former, however, after a few minutes passed on to Ternioff's stand.

Stephanie and Dominey were alone for the first time since their stormy interview in the library.

"Has Maurice been talking to you?" she asked a little abruptly.

"His Excellency and I are, to tell you the truth," Dominey confessed, "in the midst of a most interesting conversation."

"Has he spoken to you about me?"

"Your name has not yet been mentioned."

She made a little grimace, in her wonderful furs and Russian turban hat she made rather a striking picture against the background of snow.

"An interesting conversation in which my name has not been mentioned," she repeated satirically.

"I think you were coming into it before very long," Dominey assured her. "His Excellency warned me that all he had said so far was merely the prelude to a matter of larger importance."

Stephanie smiled.

FROM MILLIONS TO NOTHING

The Story of the Rise and Fall of A Mule Driver

One of the most picturesque careers of the age is now being brought to the lime light, owing to the failure of Ishii, a capitalist of Asia who rose from nothing to a wealth of fifty million dollars, and who lost it all in a year. A writer in the New York World tells the story.

A few months ago the wealth of Sada-shichi Ishii was rated at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 by a reliable commercial agency. To-day his debts to various banks amount to $27,500,000, according to his own statement and something like $58,000,000, according to some of his rival creditors.

Judging by the amount of the stocks he dealt in—rice, copper, iron, sugar, cotton, silk, lumber, real estate, ships and mines—not to mention the movie theaters he was about to combine into a grand theater trust, he was the biggest plunger in the twenty-six centuries of Nipponese history.

Ishii's victims and creditors are not the tender get-rich-quick lambs who have hallooed a Ponzi or advertised a Mississippi Bubble. They are staid, pompous, dignified and hard-boiled guardians of steel vaults, with time locks on them. He failed owing seventy-two banks—every one of which gasped out loud, "Did you ever?"

How did he do it?

The key to Ishii's financial witchery is not hard to find.

"Nikipon," Ishii is called in Osaka. This word is an expressive slang word made up of a chopped-off word and a sound. "Niko" is an abbreviation of "nikoniko," which means smiling over, and "pon" is the phonetic reproduction of a friendly pat on one's shoulder. In short, a "glad-hander."

Ishii is about forty-five. He is short, quiet, ever-smiling, winning. About twenty-five years ago he was pulling a lumber cart along the streets of Osaka. His parents were too poor to send him to school, so they sent him to a lumber merchant as a "kozo"—an apprentice—at twelve. Nobody pushed him up from that point; he kept on pulling himself up just as he kept on pulling his little lumber cart.

Ishii propelled himself up the fierce rapids of speculation in Osaka by means of a "jujutsu" (sometimes incorrectly spelled "jujitsu") or "art of yielding," which is entirely his own. The foundation of his method lies in those gentle, winning smiles of his.

"Nikipon" is more than a mere nickname. He always won the absolute confidence of his banker victims long before he flimflamed them out of a single yen.

In the gold-haloed imagination of his banker devotees, Ishii was a financial Buddha.

The panic of 1920 swept countless war-made millionaires into the Shadow World over night. The Masuda Bill-Brokers Bank went under. But no one got a single yelp out of Ishii.

"When the Masuda Bill-Brokers Bank went under," said Ishii in a recent interview, "I put on the face of 'I-don't-know-a-thing,' but I was wounded to the tune of $40,000,000."

Ishii turned to the Kochi Commercial Bank, smiling the same financial-Buddha smile of yore, but with a different heart. He informed the bank that he would graciously deign to use about all the cash in it for the glory of the bank and the quick profits of its depositors. When the bank was quite empty of cash, he invited a managing director to a pleasant dinner at his house and said to him: "Here are two promissory notes of mine. I don't want any cash. Discount the notes and keep the cash in your bank. Give me the amount. I want to keep the amount in your bank."

The banker thanked the Buddha on his knees, almost with tears.

Back in Osaka Ishii took the thoroughly genuine certificate of deposit to the great Sumitomo Bank. They were delighted to "accommodate" a man rated at about $40,000,000—always of course to the extent perfectly and conservatively justified by the security, namely the certificate of deposit issued by the Kochi Commercial Bank.

Ishii got cash.

Bankers were going to the Ishii residence every few hours, always soliciting his business. At the end of a friendly chat Ishii turned to the banker: "My business? Yes, yes, certainly. Shall I trouble you a little?"

Ishii took a portion of his cash, say $150,000, and handed it over to the banker on the spot.

Soon afterward Ishii asked the banker to discount a note or something of the kind—for $250,000. Was the banker going to lose Ishii's account by refusing to take this risk? Did he not have with the bank a cash deposit of $150,000? The bank officials knew, or thought they knew, that Ishii's holdings were good for millions of dollars. Refuse him? The thing was unthinkable. Ishii got what he wanted.

Early in 1921 he picked up 40,000 of the new shares of the Kanagafuchi Spinning Company, cornered the market and squeezed the bears terribly, netting $15,000,000.

He next turned to the rice market. But his simple formula did not work this time. The rice speculators sold only what they had on hand—requiring a payment, on settlement day, of $25,000,000 in cash. It was the beginning of the end for Ishii.

After the terrific beating in rice, he again turned to the stock market. The Tokio Stock Exchange bears were patiently lying in wait for him. They "got" Ishii and took away from him pretty nearly what Ishii had trimmed them for in the corner he had engineered, leaving him "like a fox with his tail on fire and with no means of putting it out."

OWNER CLAIMS STOLEN HORSE

Canadian Farmer Claims Horse and Carriage Found Abandoned at Malone Junction on Night of November 17th.

(Malone Telegram)

The horse and rig found abandoned by Policeman Robarge of the Malone force on the night of November 16th, near the Junction House, on Elm St. was claimed Friday by Nabore Sovia, a farmer who resides near Valleyfield, Que.

Mr. Sovia stated to the Malone police that he had been informed thru a friend residing in Chateaugay, who read of an abandoned horse, in the columns of the Malone Evening Telegram.

Sovia's description of his horse coincided with that of the one which has been held here since Friday of last week.

Sovia told Policeman Robarge that on Thursday of last week he drove the horse into Valleyfield and left the rig in front of a house while he went in for a few minutes to see a friend. Upon coming out the horse and carriage was missing. He received no word concerning his lost rig until his Chateaugay friend informed him of an abandoned horse being held in Malone. Sovia said he has no idea as to the identity of the man who stole his rig.

The horse and carriage was found near the Junction House by Policeman Robarge on the night of November 17 and since that time it has been kept at the Drury livery stable on Pearl street.

A waitress at the Junction House stated today that she saw the driver leave the rig early last Thursday morning. She said he walked toward the New York Central station after getting out of the carriage and tying the horse.

The young woman described the man as being of slight build, apparently about 18 years of age and said that he wore a brown suit and was not wearing an overcoat when she saw him. Charles Dene, proprietor of the Junction House, said today that he is of the opinion that the young chap boarded a train and made his getaway.

Or Chemical Affection.

Tom—Harry is dreadfully in love with that blonde.

Jim—Yes, and his family thinks it's a case of hypnosis.

Tom—I don't know but I think that it is a case of chemical attraction—Science and Invention.

The Author's View.

"You frankly confess that your novel failed because of a lack of literary skill?"

"I do," answered the author; "the man who wrote the advertisements was no good."

"I AM STILL CRAZY"

German, in Asylum Since 1912, Gets a Shock in Release

Paris, Nov. 27.—Hermann Meyer, a German, who was confined in 1912 in an insane asylum at Merzig in the Sarra district, was released last week cured. On leaving the asylum his belongings, which according to custom had been kept during the period of confinement, were returned to him. They included several gold twenty mark coins. Hermann Meyer, who knew nothing of the war and nothing of what since has happened to Germany went on out happy.

Proceeding to the nearest beer hall he took a long pull then another. Then he laid down a twenty-mark piece. The waiter handed him change—exceeding a thousand marks in notes, more than Hermann had ever seen in his life.

"I am still crazy," said Hermann.

Getting up he returned to the insane asylum and requested the doctors to admit him again.

A Real Old Country Treat

Rev. R. L. Ballantyne
Who is largely responsible for the great improvements made to Riverfield Church.

Riverfield Celebrates

The Church Re-opened With Appropriate Ceremonies.

Sunday morning, November 26th, was a cool clear morning and was inviting to people to go out and enjoy the air. At Riverfield the re-opening of the Presbyterian Church, the dedicating of the New Church Hall, and the unveiling of the Memorial Tablet took place at 11 a. m.

Rev. Mr. Ballantyne said that because a church was situated on the four corners it was necessary to have a four corner rating. Riverfield congregation have no such rating but a rating in proportion to any large city congregation.

The Church was crowded to the doors on Sunday. Rev. A. S. Ross, B. A., B. D. was the special preacher, his message was received with much approval.

Taking as his text, "The Larger Enterprise," Luke 5: 4, 10. Among other things the preacher said: Life is full of enterprise because of the spirit that is in man and the Christian life is a very definite enterprise of thrilling proportions when entered upon in full consciousness of the step.

By touches wondrously human Christ called and bound to him the men who were to company with Him and then carry on his work when his days in the flesh should cease. To compensate Simon for the use of his boat he directs him to "launch out into the deep and let down the net for a draught." Simon is filled with amazement and wonder at the results and the Master adds, "Fear not from henceforth thou shalt catch men." Thus these men were called to take part in the largest and noblest enterprise that can engage the mind and efforts of man. The enterprise of the Christian Life is a great and noble one because of: 1st the Leader, His name is writ large all over Christendom. In the crowded city and at quiet country cross roads all thruout Christendom temples large and small are used as centres of praise to Him and of effort in His name. His name and spirit inspire and promote the greatest movements, both within and without the visible church for the welfare of the race. Before the majestic figure of this Leader all other human leaders dwindle into mere miniatures.

2nd. The issues involved—The Christian enterprise is concerned about human welfare and development not only in its temporal but also in its eternal aspects and interests. Christ's enterprise is especially concerned about the human units in the work of the world. Do the right human relationships exist? Are the fruits of the spirit being grown in the soil of human hearts? These are the things which help forward Christ's great enterprise.

Christ with the insight and farsight of a great Divine sympathy looked over humanity past the thing we call death and in the brief records of his life preserved to us is found one of his beautiful etchings of the life beyond. He yearns and seeks to prepare all for entrance into that wonderful estate.

3rd. The ends arrived at. Launch out into the deep. Christ is ever calling us away from the trivial to earnest consideration of the brightings in life. He calls us away from the selfish to lives of sacrificing service. He calls us from the old way to an acceptance of higher principles of life. "Love your enemies" do good to them that hate you." He calls us to a world-wide age-long endeavor. "Go ye and teach all nations." He sets before His church and people an adequate objective for the best and brightest human effort.

His enterprise is a gigantic one. We would advance it one degree in our day and seek that the next generation carry forward the torch of His truth and assist to carry forward His enterprise one degree, more nearer to final consummation. And so friends, these great, strong scientifically equipped barns which you have built all thru these parts witnessing to the fertility of the soil where a kind Providence has cast your lot, witnessing to your industry, intelligence and progressiveness are not the symbol of the great-est and most important enterprise being carried on here. The growing of grain and the rearing of live stock is as honorable as it is fundamental to the very existence of the race, but you are engaged in a still higher and more noble enterprise, and the symbol of it is found here in this building which your fathers built many years ago and which you their worthy sons and daughters have now beautified and amplified by this splendid addition in the rear of the church with spire pointing to the skies—Every Church if possible should have a spire—To this beautiful God's acre hard by you bring the remains of your departed ones gone on before and as you pass among those granite memorials you think of them and sometimes sigh and say:

"O, for the touch of a vanished hand And the sound of a voice that is still".

Here on these walls you erect in loving remembrance a memorial to those gallant lads who at the call of Duty went forth to the supreme sacrifice, whose bodies lie in France or Flanders Field but whose names are set up here never to be forgotten by a loving and grateful people. Here Sabbath by Sabbath you come to lift your voices and your hearts to the Great Eternal Father, to receive a message of inspiration and hope, and here you will come more frequently than ever now because of the increased accommodation to plan for the strengthening and extension of His cause and Kingdom. Yes, here is the symbol and the centre of the greatest enterprise of this community. It is the rearing of men, women and children who shall know and love and serve with warmest devotion the great Lord and Leader, it is the growth here of a manhood and womanhood that shall worthily interpret to all the world Him whose you are and whom you profess to serve, it is the preparation of human souls here for life's destiny, so that when the journey here is finished they may have an abundant entrance into the great family circle in that "Sweet and Blessed Country." And to the promotion of this high enterprise may we not only dedicate this building but each and everyone dedicate his life.

The Dedication Prayer—was given by Mr. David Galbraith, a faithful elder of the church.

The Rev. R. L. Ballantyne presided over the unveiling of the Honor Roll. Mr. Ballantyne first expressed much thanks to Mr. Stewart, the committee and the congregation for the way they worked hand in hand for the improvements as seen. He expressed many thanks to Mrs. Jas. Templeton for the desk and chair presented in memory of her husband who was an elder of the church. The desk and chair are now in the church vestry. Mr. Ballantyne signified his approval of the excellent painting and decorating done by Mr. Bicknell and to the Messrs. Morris Bros. for the tablet they so thoughtfully donated to the church and was about to be unveiled.

Many people belonging to Georgetown, St. Louis, Ste. Chrysostome, Ormstown, Dewittville, Huntingdon and Montreal were present.

Mr. Jas. Morris was called upon and donated the tablet. Mr. Morris said he could not put in language, words that would express his feeling for the bereaved parents but would ask that this tablet be accepted. He said that they felt it their pride to present the tablet. The men fought for justice not to crush a nation of its rights but for our homes and our British Institutions. Therefore we can never do enough for our heroes. I would suggest that this inscription be placed in gold letters above the tablet, "Lest We Forget."

We are now at peace and liberty under the Union Jack. We owe our Freedom to the soldiers' work done in Europe and today Canada is one of the foremost countries in the world and is attracting much attention. It was our soldiers who first caused this. Although we have left Riverfield we are proud of it and its people. Had all other places contributed men to arms as did Riverfield, conscription would not have been necessary. Mr. Morris then complimented the congregation upon the improvements made and paid a high tribute to the pastor, Rev. Mr. Ballantyne, who conducted the work of improvements in no small degree but in his modest manner does not wish to take credit for it.

Mrs. John Milne then unveiled the memorial. The following names are inscribed upon it:

After the unveiling the chorus of "O Canada" was sung. Lance Corp. Jas. Orr carried the wreath and placed it at the War Memorial at the corner. At the monument the service concluded by the singing of the National Anthem.

The need of a gathering place for farmers, political, school or any other kind of meeting was lacking very much. A committee was appointed with Mr. Stewart as chairman and as a result an annex has been erected to the rear of the church. It is not a large addition but will easily accommodate 50 to 75 people. A library is at one side of the annex and a vestry on the opposite side.

The structure is of stone and cement, and is well done. Mr. J. D. Stewart did the cement work. The woodwork was done by Mr. Hamilton and is a masterpiece of workmanship. The hardwood floors have received much attention from Mr. J. D. Bicknell who did the painting and it is truly well done and with good taste.

The basement is not yet completed but it is to have a wooden floor laid on top of the cement. Also a ceiling is to be put on. The basement will serve as a dining-room with a modern kitchen in one corner. Running water has of course been installed along with other conveniences. The main church has new stained glass windows put in. Also the walls have been tinted and new rugs placed on the floors. The interior of this building now has a bright and prosperous appearance.

The work has been chiefly done by bees of the men of the church. Rev. Ballantyne says that all bore their share of the work and in so doing have reduced the cost correspondingly for had everything been paid in cash it would have cost in the neighborhood of $10,000.

It would do for one to forget the change of outside appearance of the church that is underway. New cement walks have been made around the church. Earth has been filled in between the walks and when levelled and seeded in the spring will add greatly to the outward appearance of this church.

LOCAL MEN ARE CHAMPIONS

The senior yearlings brought out some magnificent specimens. Burnside Blossom Andrietta of R. R. Ness & Sons was outstanding and was a popular winner. Alta Crest Farms took second with Mr. Fish of Ayer's Cliff in third place and the second entry of the Burnside stable in fifth place. W. C. Wylie of Howick took the sixth prize and W. C. Tully was just outside the money with his entry, which was placed seventh in the line.

Thirty-eight entries faced Professor Barton in the junior yearling heifers and Cumming Bros., of Lancaster took the prize. Gilbert McMillan crowded them closely and Springburn Lovely Star was the winner of the blue ribbon. W. C. Tully kept up his string of wins by taking third place and R. R. Ness & Sons took fourth prize. E. C. Budge took sixth and J. P. Cavers was placed seventh, which showed that the local breeders had the pick of the young stuff at the show.

Forty-four entries were made in the senior heifer calf class and again Ness and Budge were in the money.

The last class was a good one when 36 calves came out. Mitchell Ness was a proud boy as he led "Snowdrop" around the ring. The rail-birds couldn't attract his attention, and his cup of happiness was filled when the red ribbon was pinned on his blouse. E. C. Budge came second, Gilbert McMillan followed in third and fourth places and R. R. Ness made it five prizes for Howick-Huntingdon when the second entry of the Burnside stable took fifth prize.

The Herds.

One of the features of the show was promised in the Yorkshire herds. The catalogue showed 20 entries, which would mean 100 animals in the ring. However all did not turn out, and the cramped space spoiled the spectacular effect. The victory went to the States with the Alta Crest Farms on top. Second prize however came in this direction when Douglas Ness led out their parade with the blue ribbon showing. Gilbert McMillan was in fourth place with his five.

In the junior herds two prizes were won by local men. R. R. Ness & Sons won first ribbon and E. C. Budge came fifth.

As a grand finale Gilbert McMillan led the parade in the next two classes. The first was for 4 animals any age or sex, get of one sire. Here he took first and fifth. In the class for two animals any age or sex progeny of one dam Mr. McMillan took first and third prizes and W. C. Tully took 5th place.

Horses

R. R. Ness & Son had their big horse Royal Master up. He didn't win first place but a great many thought that he should have been placed second, but the judges decided otherwise and he was given the third ribbon.

Archie Bell had one entry in, it was a colt and he has the honor of wearing the first ribbon given in the class by the Royal Fair.

D. A. McCormick of Brysonville had his champion mare, Jean of the Briars out. The class was a big one and all in the ring with the exception of Mr. McCormick's showed that harness and they were strangers this year, so he was placed in sixth place, as his mare didn't have the fat the others carried.

The Royal Fair established history in Canada, for it is the start of the greatest scheme ever attempted during the winter months. The building alone is valued at over a million dollars and it couldn't begin to accommodate all the entries of the crowds. Comparing the building to the Arena at Ormstown shows that the big district fair does not rank badly, when the size of the district and the capital available are considered. The covering in the arena was a great improvement, being tank-bark. This is a far more solid covering than sawdust and naturally there is neither the dust in the air, or the bad footing for the horses. Another improvement is the catalogues with all the entries and each entry wears a corresponding number in the ring.

Most of the exhibitors complained bitterly about the conditions. The Ayrshires for instance were in the poultry building, which is not heated, and the open lake being not so far distant the cattle were always chilled.

One of the curiosities on exhibit was in the gold fish department. Here the Walker House had two fish entered which went under the name of walking perch. They came from Egypt and have extra fins, with which they can propel themselves when out of water. It is reported that they have been known to walk 18 miles, but those at the show were content by walking a yard and then flopping back into the tank.

In the poultry department the display was remarkable. It excelled anything hitherto known and in all there were over 9,000 entries. The markings on some of the birds was remarkable and the noise the whole collection made, terrible. Every species known to Canada were on exhibit and around the outer edges were some of the pet stock, such as rabbits, cavies and endless displays of pigeons. The reports of the judging in these classes have not been published yet, so the winnings of the local men are not definitely known yet.

Boy Bishop and Patriarch.

A correspondent writes: A friend who was at Bagdad for King Feisal's coronation tells me that the most interesting figure in the brilliant crowd of notables there was a solemn, aloof boy of twelve, with big, staring eyes, and a dignified bearing, who spoke hardly at all. This was Mar (Saint) Shimun, Patriarch of the Nestorians, the youngest prelate in the world. The Nestorians are an ancient Christian sect, following the Fifth century heresy of Nestorius; their churches are primitive, and their liturgies very antique. The office of patriarch is hereditary. This explains the youth of Mar Shimun. His family have provided a patriarch for 400 years; when one patriarch dies he is succeeded by his nearest relative, whatever his age. The solemn boy who holds office at present has never, my friend tells me, been photographed or interviewed, and lives a recluse in a remote Kurdish village 7,000 feet above sea level.

Royal E. Gamble Herdman

HUNTINGDONHuntingdon has seen and heard many fine entertainments as well as many poor ones. Monday evening an exceptionally high class entertainment was given in the Academy under the auspices of the Y's. A piano duet by Mrs. McCrimmon and Miss Sellar, solos by Mr. Allan, Dr. Douglas and Mr.
George F. Dixon received loud applause and many encores.Mr. J. B. MacMillan sang in the chorus with Mr. Dixon. Dr. Douglas composed a patriotic song and sang it while Messrs. Allan, Dixon and Mac-Millan sang in the chorus. Between the musical numbers Mrs. Everest gave her recitations. One and all were of a very high order and well received.
Her last number "Miss Civilization", was certainly exceptionally well given. Mrs. Everest has been to Huntingdon on several occasions and on each visit gains many more admirers.The gross receipts amounted to $65.
Mr. M. T. Robb acted as Chairman.Miss Grace Everest, elocutionist of Plattsburg, N. Y. was advertised in the last issue to come to our community and to assist in an entertainment to be given in the Academy. Miss Everest unfortunately was unable to come owing to sickness but her mother the well-known elocutionist in this locality filled the engagement with entire satisfaction.—In a letter received from an old Havelock boy, John Bustard, who is now Secretary for the Danville Tobacco Association, Virginia, he quotes figures showing the extent of the tobacco business in that locality. In the week ending Nov. 23rd, tobacco to the value of $599,820.67 was sold. The figures for the total sales to date are $5,312, 519.11 which when retailed to smokers will mean a lot of money changing hands.—During the week end revenue officers made raids at several places along the line and as a result seizures of liquors were made at two resorts and charges laid for infractions of the Quebec Act.—The authorities have had a troublesome time this week with a man by the name of Laurent Monette. A complaint was laid against him on a charge of breaking into a house and Alex. Smail went to arrest him. In effecting this arrest Monette bit him on the back of the hand and made a painful wound. On being brought before Justices of Peace Crawford and Gardiner he was found not guilty. He was immediately re-arrested on a charge of assault.—Work on the skating rink was started this week, and if cold weather comes for a few nights the rink will be in working order earlier than usual.
Mr. Herb. Partridge of Lachine spent the week end in Huntingdon.Mr. Clarence Cluff of Montreal spent Sunday at his home in Huntingdon.Mrs. Everest of Plattsburg, stayed at the home of Mrs. Cluff during her stay in Huntingdon.Mr. Russell of Fort Covington was in town on Saturday visiting old acquaintances.Mr. Robt. Ellerton of Hemmingford was a business caller in town on Saturday.Mr. W. H. Malone of McGill spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Shirriff.Mr. Douglas Lunan of McGill spent the week end at home.Mr. and Mrs. W. G. McCullough and son Reginald left Tuesday morning for Winnipeg where they will spend a few weeks.Mr. Romeo Demers of St. Martine is visiting his brother, Mr. J. H. Demers.Miss Antoinette Michaud of Montreal spent the week end with her parents.Mrs. R. E. Pury and Mr. B. M.
Douglass have returned from Saw-yerville, where they have spent the past week with their sister, Mrs. L.
P. Boyd.Mr. Herbert Ferns is spending a week in the Townships, hunting deer, with Mr. Wallace Boyd.Mr. Jos. Adams has gone to Brownsburg, Que. where he intends spending the winter with his daughter, Mrs. McQuat.Mrs. G. W. Knight of Montreal spent Monday in town.Mrs. C. M. Oney is visiting her people in Malone.—The power lines are being connected up to the Baumert factory to-day and the plant will be ready to receive milk to-morrow morning. Considering the number of changes that had to be made in the building before it was arranged to the Company's satisfaction the time taken to get it into operation was short. One of the officers who has done a great deal in whipping things into shape is Mr.
Brehm, who is general superintendent of all the Baumert plants.All who have come into contact with Mr. Brehm have been struck by his practical ability and understanding of the farmers' viewpoints. He is considered the finest maker of fancy cheeses in North America and has been in the employ of the Baumert Co. since the day he landed in America from Switzerland—a boy 16 years of age.—A special session of the court is to be held this week.Mr. W. F. Stephen is in Ottawa attending a meeting of the Dominion Health Board.Mr. R. H. Crawford was in Burke, N. Y., yesterday attending the funeral of the late Thomas Crawford, who was his cousin.—The invitation of the Bell Telephone Co. to its patrons to inspect its offices in Huntingdon gave an opportunity to the subscribers to see all that was being done on this exchange. The local officers courteously showed everything and those who took advantage of the opportunity went away with a better sense of appreciation of the efforts that were made to give this district a fine service. The Huntingdon exchange is by far the largest of any rural exchange covering a like sized district in the Dominion, and it is constantly expanding.Clover HullingAt present I am doing clo-

The Beaver Baseball Team celebrated the closing of the season's sport and the winning of the Robb Trophy by an Oyster Supper in Munro Hall, Friday night, Nov. 24th. The preparation of the supper as well as the waiting on the tables was performed by the members of the Club in suitable uniform, assisted by some of the lady fans. After justice or injustice had been done the oysters the audience repaired to the Assembly Hall upstairs where Rev. E. Mowatt acted as chairman and called on Mr. M. T. Robb to make the presentation.

Mr. Robb asked the Beavers to take seats on the platform and proceeded on behalf of his brother, the Hon. Jas. A. Robb, who was absent in Australia, to present to the winners the handsome trophy donated by Hon. Mr. Robb. He congratulated the club on their success and hoped they would repeat the act next year. Dr. Rowat replied on behalf of the team. Mr. David Brown, Jr. contributed two Scotch songs which were very much enjoyed. A piano duet by the Misses Wilson and Hampton and a violin solo by Wm. Rowat completed the program. The Chairman announced that they would meet a year from date to celebrate a similar event. The singing of the National Anthem brought to a close a very enjoyable evening.

A very successful "Sack Social" was held in Munro Hall Wednesday evening, November 22nd. After a few selections by the orchestra the chairman, Rev. E. Mowatt called on Miss H. Elder, who had been in London, England, on the teachers' exchange, to give a talk on her work, which proved very interesting. Mrs. Elvin Wood's singing was much appreciated. Games were then enjoyed and refreshments served. The net proceeds amounted to $44.25.
