MYSTERY OVER EARLY RELEASE OF GERMAN SPY

GERMAN-JAPANESE ALLIANCE IS ALLEGED, IN WHICH U. S. IS HAMPERED.

New York, June 6.—A special cable to the New York American from London says:

Deep mystery surrounds the release of Dr. Armguard Karl Graves, who was sentenced in July last at Edinburgh to eighteen months' imprisonment for espionage.

INQUIRIES FRUITLESS.

Inquiries at London and also in Scotland in an endeavor to ascertain when Graves left prison and why he was released before the completion of his sentence were fruitless.

Thomas McKinnon Wood professed complete ignorance regarding Graves' release, while at the Scottish office in Whitehall, Under-Secretary Lamb admitted that Graves had been liberated "in due course," but refused to give the date.

The Commissioners of Scottish prisons refused to say anything.

Dr. Graves, who until July, 1912, was a confidential agent of the German Government, is now in New York.

He tells an extraordinary story laying bare what purports to be a pact between Germany and Japan, greatly to the disadvantage of the United States. According to his story, Germany will not obstruct Japan's colonization plans, sanction her acquisition of a coaling station in the South Seas, and will not prevent her from procuring German vessels in the event of war.

ANOTHER ENGLISH ACTRESS MARRIES INTO PEERAGE

London, June 6—Another English actress has taken her place in the ranks of the peerage. Miss Pearl Aufrere, one of the beauties of musical comedy, was renectly married to Vicount Dangan, eldest son and heir of Earl Cowly, whose record of appearance in the divorce court exceeds that of any peer in England.

Vicount Dangan, who is 23 years old, is also on the stage. He is filling a small part at the Gaiety Theatre. Miss Aufrere, whose age is 20, has been engaged to play a minor role in "Croesus" if the play is ever produced. The couple will continue on the stage.

AMBASSADOR PAGE MAKES FIRST SPEECH

SIR EDWARD GREY AND EARL ROBERTS NOTABLE FIGURES AT LONDON BANQUET.

London, June 6.—Walter Hines Page, the new American ambassador to the Court of St. James, tonight received his baptism of fire as an after-dinner speaker in London at a welcoming banquet in his honor by the Pilgrims Society. Field Marshal Earl Roberts presided at the function. He had as supporters at the head of the table Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, the Earl of Halsbury, formerly Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland.

GREY THE PEACE-MAKER.

Three hundred and fifty Pilgrims, among them many prominent Britishers and representative Americans, filled the ball room of the Hotel Savoy for the occasion. Mr. Page was welcomed to London in speeches by Earl Roberts and Sir Edward Grey, the latter of whom was the recipient of a great ovation when he was referred to by the other speakers during the evening as "the peace maker of Europe."

Price Collier, the author, who, after Mr. Page, was the principal American speaker of the evening, said the two greatest peace makers of Europe were Earl Roberts, who had made peace from Kyber Pass to Cape Town, and Sir Edward Grey, who "took in hand the hornets' nest of the Balkans in this year of grace." His reference to Emperor William as "that great strong man who is the true friend of England," was received with tremendous applause.

Baron Shaw of Dunfermline described wittily the recent tour in the United States of the British committee for the purpose of arranging a program for the celebration of the centenary of peace between the English-speaking peoples. He commented on the hospitality that was showered upon the Britishers in the American cities they visited.

Mr. Page's Speech.

"The time is long past when there was need, if ever there was need, of makeshifts or make-believes in our intercourse," said Mr. Page. "Surely it augurs well for the spread of justice and fair dealing and for the firmer establishment of the peace of the world that the two nations of the English speaking folk speak frankly to one another in our dealings. Blood answers to blood and our fundamental qualities of manhood are the same.

"It is an inspiring spectacle—and history can show none other such—these two kindred nations, one on each side of the well ploughed sea that unites them, standing at the end of a century of peace, liberty-loving as of old and forward-looking, confident of the bounds of freedom and yet regarding government as a living and ever-changing instrument of human progress made by man for man's advancement and not for the mere maintenance of any political creed. This is an augury for the progress of the world that shames all structures of society where man's lot is stationary or his philosophy dipped in gloom."

Mr. Page's reference to his predecessors as ambassador to the Court of St. James, whom he named, was warmly received, as also was his description of James Bryce as persona grata to the United States government and persona gratissama to the American people. Mr. Page spoke of America's mission as that of the making of men, and in conclusion he referred to the "great English-speaking democracy which, in every part of the world, has the same large aims to keep men free and preserve the peace of the world."

Sir Edward Grey's Reply.

The ambassador of the United States in this country has a dual capacity—that of ambassador and that of honored guest and friend," said Sir Edward Grey. "If he comes to us with proposals from his government, with the idea of making more remote any appeal to blind force he will find in this country and in the British government a ready response. If there should be a proposal to make war between nations more remote, it is from the United States that such a proposal can be made with full dignity and with good feeling which is beyond suspicion.

"The peace between England and America is based upon the sure basis of a feeling of downright repugnance on both sides of the ocean that the peace between Great Britain and America ever should be disturbed. A peace proposal from such a quarter as from the United States would come under no suspicion of being inspired by any feeling of pusillanimity, by any national interest or by any desire of securing an advantage in disarming or placing at a disadvantage any other nation."

GENERAL SIR IAN HAMILTON,
Inspector General of the British Army Forces of the Empire, who arrived here yesterday afternoon by the SS. Empress of Britain.

U.S. WOULD EXTEND DUTY ON PULP TO CANADIAN PAPER

OPINION IS THAT RETALIATORY TAX WILL FEATURE TARIFF BILL.

Washington, June 6—For several hours today the Senate Finance subcommittee of which Senator Johnson, of Maine, is chairman, discussed the paper schedule of the Underwood Tariff Bill, and it is reported tonight that an amendment to put a retaliatory duty against Canada on print paper valued at not more than two and one-half cents a pound, is being seriously considered.

NORRIS TESTIFIES.

Because the majority of the subcommittee was inclined to this view, they summoned from New York, John Norris, chairman of the paper committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, who today reiterated opposition to the imposition of any countervailing duty.

No decision was reached, but it was learned from an authoritative source that the matter hangs in the balance, with the leaning toward putting on the countervailing duty. In the Underwood Bill, retaliatory duties are imposed on higher grade papers valued at more than two and one-half cents a pound. The import tax is fixed at 12 per cent. ad-valorem, and the countervailing duty is directed against Canada because of restrictions on pulp woods and pulp. The proposal of the American Paper Manufacturers is that the added tax be extended to print papers.

Print paper in the Underwood Bill is on the free list, and the amendment being considered would provide "that if the country, dependency, province

PRISONER MILLER IS SET FREE

"STATE CONVICT" OF PARLIAMENT IS RELEASED FROM CARLETON JAI

Ottawa, June 6—Richard C. Miller, of Montreal, prisoner of the Canadian Parliament since February 21st last, was "released" from the common jail of Carleton county at 5.45 p.m. today. Technically he was free at 4 o'clock, immediately on the prorogation of the Parliament, but on being notified, decided to remain in the jail until the sun had gone down, so as to enable him to escape the battery of camera men which had been gathered in the vicinity for several hours previous to the hour set for concluding the business of Parliament.

CAMERA MEN BALKED.

At 5.445 p.m. Miller came outside the door of the jail. The light was too dim for photography, and the camera men were perforce unable to snap the man who has been the subject of so great comment during the past four or five months. He would speak to no one and entering a carriage was driven away rapidly down a side street.

His counsel, Mr. R. Pringle, ex-M. P., states that Miller left on the evening train for his home in Montreal, but although a number of newspapermen closely watched the outgoing passengers at the Central Depot, they were unable to locate him, and it is thought he may have driven out to

PARLIAMENT PROROGUED YESTERDAY

PUGSLEY HAD THE LAST WORD — FAMOUS SESSION NOW OVER.

(Special to the Chronicle.)

Ottawa, June 4.—Parliament was prorogued this afternoon at a quarter to five and tonight the buildings on the hill are practically deserted. The close of the session was one of the most interesting days of the month during which the House has been together for, with a naval discussion as the bill of fare, party passion ran high and there was a return to the spirit of the famous naval debate.

LAST SCENE MEMORABLE.

The last scene of all in the Commons was memorable. Significantly enough, Hon. William Pugsley had the floor up to the last minute until the arrival of Black Rod from the Senate placed a closure upon further oratory. At twenty minutes to four all business was finished. Sir Wilfrid Laurier left his place and mingled among his followers on the back benches. Premier Borden had gone to don his privy councillor's uniform. Members were wearily awaiting four o'clock when Mr. Edgar Rhodes, M. P. for Cumberland, jokingly suggested to Mr. Pugsley that he should raise a point of order. The House roared with laughter and Speaker Sproule added to the gayety by gravely announcing that closure was off until four o'clock. Mr. Pugsley arose gravely and plunged in a navy discussion, holding the floor to the amuse-

BRITAIN BUILDS THE SHIPS.

Owing to the secessionist policy of the Liberals Britain must now build the ships which the Senate refused and must shoulder Canada's portion of Imperial defence. Winston Churchill declares that Canada's failure to provide these three Dreadnoughts has cast this additional burden on Britain.

Britain will cheerfully shoulder the burden as in the past, but it is a terribly humiliating position for Canada to occupy. Canada is the richest of the Dominions and the only one to do nothing to preserve the Empire. Laurier and his partizan Senate have forced her into the position of being protected by the Empire while doing nothing in return. Such a position may appeal to the Liberal party of spongers and shirkers but loyal Canadians feel and resent the ignominy to which they have been subjected.

THE EFFRONTERY OF IT.

When the Senate was called up on to face the unconstitutionality of their act in burking the Navy Aid Bill, the partizan majority of that body, under the belligerent auspices of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, cast logic to the winds, and stood prepared to vote for civil war, if it were necessary, in their blindness. What cared they for the constitution of the country? And now they stand condemned by their own act of interfering with the passing of a "Money Bill" pure and simple, thus setting the law of the law at defiance from partizan malice aforethought. A law-breaker is a law-breaker, and has to be told that he is a law-breaker—be a common criminal or a treasonable legislator. But the effrontery of these partizan Senators—even in face of the declaration of their President, that their conduct was unconstitutional, went beyond all bounds, when they proceeded to ask the Governor-General to announce a general election at their bidding, with a concealed threat in their demand—went as far beyond all bounds as did the conduct of one of their number when he found fault with the King himself, for his distribution of the honors he was pleased to confer on Canadians. How is a general election brought about? A government, duly elected by the people, has five or six years of power, which no one can constitutionally interrupt, while it has a majority in the House of Commons. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his partizan monomaniacs know this as well as every voter in the land knows it. And yet the treasonable spirit of certain Laurierite partizans in the Senate have thought fit to make a guy of the body they belong to by mistake, by dancing round the Navy Aid Bill in an unconstitutional way, and by finally finishing up their senile caperings in urging the Governor-General to issue his mandate for a general election. The King's horse was lately seized by the bridle as it was speeding towards the winning-post on the Epsom racecourse. The fool who did the seizing was a madwoman of a suffragette. Now the partizan segregation in the Senate has been acting in the same silly senseless way, by trying to curb the Borden majority in the House of Commons and thus force the Governor-General into line with the Laurierite desire to have a new election, whenever partizan purposes demand one. The mad suffragette, in the one case, came to grief; and the Senate, in the other case, has been sadly disabled. And serve them right—both of them—everybody says. They both stand out in the public eye as criminals. They have both been interfering in matters, where interference is mere tom-foolery. The one is in jail suffering from her self-inflicted wounds, and the other is in a quandary as to its constitutional status, and deservings at the hands of the people. And we all know by this time that there is nobody to blame for the plight into which certain foolish Senators have been dragged but Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his partizan cunning in drawing the wool over the eyes of his more immediate followers.

The alar mover the effrontery is to be detected everywhere in the Laurierite ranks, now that the session is closed; and very amusing it is to watch it in its course. Every Senator who shared in the effrontery is running hither and thither trying to cover up his folly. He didn't say this and he didn't say that. He did not vote against the Navy Aid Bill in reality. He is not a partizan. He has been entirely misunderstood. He is as much a child of the British Empire as he ever was. He loves old England, and is as willing as ever to fire that "last musket" in behalf of the solidarity of the Empire, if he only be given the chance. Senator Power has come to see that there is an emergency lying at Canada's doorstep, now that he would have the treason of his vote against the Navy Aid Bill forgotten. Sir George Ross is much in the same way of thinking. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has lost his temper over the escapade of pitting his personal claims for office against constitutional routine of rule. Several of his top-heavy monomaniacs have their doubts now of the wisdom of their rigidly following in the footsteps of their would-be master. The Navy Aid Bill is not dead, they are all now saying. We didn't kill that measure. At least we didn't mean to do so, short of the interference of the Governor-General.

And how the effrontery and all this after-pot-troonery makes every-level-minded Canadian blush at the insult the Senate has inflicted on Canada's honor. These three Dreadnoughts certain Senators would not have built at Canada's expense, and certain others were in at the wrecking of, before they could be built, on the quicksand of partizanship with its shifting outlook on a possible general election—these three Dreadnoughts are in the way of being built. The Hon. Mr. Churchill of the British Admiralty told us plainly months ago that there was an emergency facing the Empire that warranted the building of these three new warships; and now he has proven it by proceeding to have them built. But Mr. Churchill does not know his business, says Sir Wilfrid Laurier in concert with his monomaniacs. These and the Laurierite Senators would prefer a general election, which is none of their business to bother about—another throw of the dice for the dear old man who had them appointed—to everything else one coud think of in behalf of the navel protection of the Empire and our Canadian coast-waters. And we are going to snuggle under the protection of thse three new Dreadnoughts and all the rest of them, like so many improvident tramps waiting for something to turn up with nothing to pay for it! Can the flippancy of the Laurierite partizan crow over such a condition of things?

And who is to blame for placing Canada and Canadians in such a plight. Not the people of Canada! Not the Borden Government, which has walked the direct line of statesmanship and constitutional administration, from the moment they took office, amid the Laurierite hubbub raised by the ex-corruptionists to have a general election or a plebiscite or some other interruption to present-day Canadian prosperity, once a year or oftener. Who then is to blame for the pitiable shame that has come upon us all in presence of the nations? Who has made Canada a by-word for the moment in the eyes of the whole Empire? Let the Canadians who are really Canadians, and not make-believe Canadians, answer that question; and then proceed to uphold the movement in favor of reforming our effete Senate as a first step towards clearing away the blush of shame its Laurierite partizan folly has brought to all our faces. Let us check the effrontery of their late conduct, so that their after-poltroonery may become the laughing-stock of the world, and not the good name of Canada.

HAND AND GLOVE WITH NATIONALISTS.

Everybody now knows that the Liberals and the Nationalists conspired together to defeat the Borden Bill. In this there is nothing surprising because Laurier and his colleagues, Lemieux, Fielding, Fisher, Sir Frederick Borden and others have been hand and glove with the Nationalists throughout their history.

Of late some proofs of this have been given by Mr. Bourassa in his paper. He says that the Nationist League was organized in 1902 and one of its first moves was to put up a fight against a motion which had been presented to the Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire and which had declared in effect:

"That this Congress maintains the principle that the colonies must make the defence of the Empire one of their duties."

Mr. Lemieux was invited to attend the first meeting. He could not attend but sent a letter in which he fully endorsed the policy of the League, basing his opinion upon that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier who has declared that the participation of the colonies in the wars of the Empire was wrong in principle. Mr. Bourassa adds that Lemeiux was ready to join the ranks of the Nationalists and that it was his sympathy with the Nationalists that secured him his post in the Laurier Cabinet.

Mr. Bourassa says that a second meeting was held in Quebec a month later and the programme of the League was there distributed. It contained four articles as follows:

1. No participation of Canada in the wars outside the Canadian soil.
2. Opposition to all and every attempt to recruit soldiers in Canada.
3. Opposition to the establishment of a naval school in Canada for the benefit of the Imperial navy.
4. Direction of our militia by a Canadian officer, nominated by the Government of Canada, and suppression of leave of absence for officers in order to take part in Imperial wars.

At that time Laurier approved of these dostrines and Le Soleil advertised the meeting.

At another point Mr. Bourassa's history says:—

"On February 21st, 1904, Lavergne spoke at a meeting in Montreal and protested against the nomination of Sir Frederick Borden as member of the Committee on Imperial Defence. Sir Wilfrid Laurier told me at once that we were mistaken in attacking the Minister of Militia, who he held to be a good Nationalist, and who had defended in London the very ideas we were fighting for in Montreal. This was clearly proven shortly after, when Sir Frederick gave us communication of the new laws on militia before they were presented to Parliament. We met several times and he accepted certain suggestions which I made at the time, thanking me profusely for the good turn I was doing him. It was while preparing this revision of the law that Sir Frederick inserted in the law a clause which dated before the Confederation, and which had been omitted in the law of 1872. That clause states plainly that Canadian militia cannot be called out to fight for any wars outside of Canada."

This Laurier Government endorsement of the Nationalist policy as to defence gave great offence to the Opposition in the House, notably to Colonel Sam Hughes, who was the first to protest, and a hot debate ensued.

Mr. Bourassa's history proceeds:—

"The Minister held his position gamely, and maintained that the clause, although omitted from the 1872 law, was in the spirit of the Constitution. It was in the course of this heated debate that Sir Frederick Borden confessed that the Government had violated the Constitution by sending troops to South Africa. This is the best justification of the opposition I had made to his sending of soldiers."

"During the same session, the Minister excised from the statutes the clause which states that the Canadian Militia should be commanded by a British officer. Thus was adopted another principle of the Nationalists."

"It was also about that time, if I am not mistaken, that the Government dispensed so suddenly with the services of Lord Dundonald."

So far Mr. Bourassa has shown up three of the Liberal leaders as being in sympathy with Nationalism. He continues:—

Frightened by the jingoes, a few good Grits of Ontario tried to make the Cabinet change its decision, but thanks to the firmness of Mr. Fisher, Mr. Laurier held his fort. At that time, he did not scorn "the applause of the Nationalists," because these applauses were hushed in order not to provoke the jingoes."

I still remember the way Mr. Fielding told me:

"We are going to show these insolent Englishmen that we can get along without them, and give them their proper place!"

Laurier's neutrality doctrine is the essence of Bourassa's Nationalism.

LIKELY TO REPEAL TOLL EXEMPTION

SHIPS WILL GO THROUGH CANAL BEFORE QUESTION IS FINALLY SETTLED.

Washington, D.C., June 5—Ships will be passing through thee Panama Canal long before there is any chance of a settlement of the controversy over whether or not the United States should exempt American vessels from paying toll. The matter may be settled diplomatically or it may be settled by the House of Representatives and the Senate getting together and deciding to repeal the clause in the Panama Canal Act, which provides that American ships shall not pay a penny to go through the big ditch. Either of these methods of settlement will take a long time.

Diplomacy is necessarily a slow and cautious method, and the best informed men at the capital seem to think that the differences of opinion in the Senate and the House cannot be settled without a gruelling tussel. The matter is going to be the centre of thought and discussion in the Senate and House Committees very soon.

Opposes Free Tolls.

Representative Adamson, of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, has his committee in working shape now. He is unalterably opposed to free tolls for American ships, while Senator O'Gorman, chairman of the Senate Committee on Inter-oceanic Canals, takes the opposite view.

It is believed that if the matter ever comes to the floor of the House this session it will be passed through. It was beaten once last session by only sixteen votes, but the advocates of no exemption say the attitude of the new House will prove to be in favor of repealing the exemption clause.

At some time in the near future some member of the House Interstate and Foreign Committee is going to introduce a resolution giving President Wilson power to suspend the exemption clause in the Panama Canal Bill.

This has been determined upon for what may appear to be a strategic reason. The committee wants to get something of the sort before Congress merely to test out the sentiment of the new members. Whether or not the President will take kindly to this method is not known by members of the committee, as it is understood he has not talked about it to any of them.

The majority of the House Committee is supposed to be in favor of repealing the exemption clause on the ground that it is a sop to the "Ship Trust" and will grant a few American shippers too great a monopoly.

The resolution of Representative Simms, of Tennessee, to repeal the exemption clause is before the committee, along with several other resolutions and bills all aimed to make the American ships pay tolls through the canal. Sooner or later the Simms resolution, which is really the crucial point in the whole controversy, will be taken up for consideration. This resolution will then be sent to Mr. Garrison, the Secretary for War, and his opinion sought. When he gives his opinion the public will know what the administration believes is right in the Panama toll situation.

A GREAT BELIEVER IN "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Well Known Ontario Merchant Has Faith Because "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

MR. JAMES DOBSON

Bronte, Ont., March 1st. 1912.

"Fruit-a-tives has made a complete cure in my case of Rheumatism, that had at least five years standing before I commenced the treatment. The trouble was principally in my right hip and shoulder, the pain from it was almost unendurable. Not being able to sleep on that side, if I chanced to turn on my right side while asleep, the pain would immediately awaken me. This kept up until I started taking "Fruit-a-tives". I started by taking one or two tablets with a large glass of water, in the morning before breakfast and experienced pronounced relief very shortly. After a continued treatment for about six months, I was cured and am now in firstclass health. This, I attribute to my persistent use of "Fruit-a-tives" and I heartily recommend your remedy to any Rheumatic sufferers."

If the public were aware of the great advantage of Toric Lenses over the ordinary kind, Torics would be the only kind in demand. # GERMAN MOVIES WORRY THEATRES

WANT LAW FORBIDDING CONTINUOUS PERFORMANCES AND SERVING OR BEER.

Berlin, June 6—The great success of moving picture shows in Germany has long been a cause for the deepest concern to German theatre managers and actors, who are always on the lookout for ways and means to diminish this serious competition.

The latest development is a petition of the German Stage Society to the Reichstag requesting that a special law be passed for the regulation of moving picture shows. The society asks, among other things, that the moving picture business be put under the same regulations as the theatres in regard to construction of buildings, fire appliances and safeguards; that continuous performances be prohibited, and that it be made unlawful to serve beer and other refreshments at moving picture shows. The petition gives some striking statistics to prove that the "kinos" have cut into theatre attendance. In Elberfield, for example, the number of theatre tickets sold was reduced from 118,000 to 99,000 between the years 1906 and 1911, whereas the attendance at the moving picture shows rose in the same time from 126,000 to 880,000.

It is understood that the Prussian Government is now preparing a bill that will meet many of the wishes of theatre owners. One of the leading features of the measure probably will be to require picture shows to take out a license. Strict regulations will control the granting of licenses, none being given unless the applicant proves that there is a real need for a show at the place in question.

TENNESSEE STATE BONDS DON'T FIND EASY MARKET

New York, June 6—Governor Hooper of Tennessee and other state officials, who are in New York endeavoring to arrange the financing for refunding state bonds maturing July 1 were advised by New York bankers today that the best thing to do at this time would be to have the Tennessee Legislature authorize an issue of short-term securities bearing interest up to 5 per cent and running a year or eighteen months. The state is advertising for bids for an $11,000,000 issue of 4 per cent 40-year bonds. Local bankers say that the rate of interest is not attractive in the present condition of the money market and that there is little chance that the bonds could be sold now.

AFTER EFFECT OF FEVERS

Banished Through the Use of Dr Williams' Pink Pills

Following wasting diseases such as fevers, many people find it difficult to regain their former strength. They become breathless and tired out at the least exertion; their appetite is fickle and they often feel as though death was staring them in the face. The trouble lies with the blood which has not returned to its normal condition and is lacking in the red corpuscles without which good health is impossible. It is at a time like this that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills prove their great tonic value. Every dose helps to make new, rich, red blood which means health and vitality. Mrs. Theodore Foley, Athens, Ont., says: "Following an attack of typhoid fever I was left in a very weak and disheartened condition. The smallest exertion left me worn and tired out, and I was hardly able to get around, and naturally felt despondent. I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they proved of the greatest benefit to me. I am now as well and strong as ever, and can do all my own work, and as we live on a farm, it goes without saying that there is much to do. I feel, therefore, that I cannot say too much in praise of Dr Williams' Pink Pills."

If you are suffering from the after effects of fevers, la grippe, or any acute disease, you should begin to get new strength today through the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WATER SUPPLY IS FULLY PURIFIED

CIVIC HEALTH DEPARTMENT DOES GOOD WORK AT LORETTE RESERVOIR.

The recent exposure of bad hygenic conditions in Quebec City and the surroundings of the city reservoir at Lorette has evidently had a salutary effect upon the medical superintendent of the Civic Health Department, and caused him to pay particular attention to the city water service, and remove the causes that have been responsible for the frequent presence of colon bacillus.

A number of workmen have been engaged for some time past cleaning the river and its tributaries leading to the Lorette reservoir and obliging the farmers along the river banks to dig drains along their properties to prevent drainage finding its way into the river.

A thoroughly good piece of work has been carried out in this direction by the men employed in the interest of purer water and the public health, for which the medical health superintendent deserves credit, and the public will appreciate his efforts in this direction if the Civic Health Department will persevere in its present excellent work.

Guardians are employed to patrol the river banks and tributaries to see that the farmers carry out the obligations imposed upon them to keep the river waters pure.

City Garbage.

The Civic Department of Health has still another duty to perform, which is just as important as the safeguarding of the water supply. This duty is in reference to the snow dumps and garbage heaps in general that have long been tolerated in Quebec. The civic health medical superintendent should now turn his attention to this evil and have the dumps removed, cellars, lanes and streets cleaned and the city purified as soon as practical, which every citizen of Quebec will appreciate when it is accomplished.

GILLETTE FARCE NIGHT OF LAUGHS

"ALL THE COMFORTS OF HOME" AT THE AUDITORIUM FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

The scene of this delightful four act comedy, which is by Wm. Gillette, of Sherlock Holmes fame, and which a company of local artists will present in The Auditorium Theatre on the 13th and 14th, is laid in a private drawing room in London, England. The owner of the residence in which the scene is set is a nervous old gentleman by the nam of Pettibone, who has a second wife, young and pretty, of whom he is very jealous. Mr. Pettibone has also a beautiful young daughter, Emily, who has a love affair with Mr. Smythe. Smythe has written a letter to Mrs. Pettibone, asking when he may call, which old Pettibone finds and reads, and, of course, he thinks Smythe is in love with his young wife. At this thought he becomes very angry, and in a fit of rage, conceives the mad idea of taking his family on an extended trip through Europe, remaining for a time in Venice.

He turns the house over to his nephew, a wild yong man in constant need of money, to look after during his absence. The nephew calls in a friend as wild as himself and the pair decide to turn an honest penny by turning the place into a lodging house. The events that follow with a mixed lot of lodgers, and the complications that follows the unexpected return of the owner, make one of the most screamingly funny farces ever written.

This will be the first of a series of plays which will be given under the auspices of the Anti-Tuberculosis League.

GOOD PROGRESS ON NEW IMMIGRATION BUILDINGS.

The contracting firm in charge of erecting the new immigration buildings on the Louise docks, are making good progress on the work of building the centre main building. A greater part of the metal girders have been placed in position and the cement roofing and sides should be completed by the first of November and the whole of the buildings ready for occupation by the opening of navigation next year.

NEW GRAIN ELEVATOR GOING AHEAD FAST.

Work on the new grain elevator in course of construction on the south embankment of the Louise docks by the Canadian Stewart Company, Ltd., for the Quebec Harbor Commission, is making good headway. The pile drivers are now sinking the last of the piles in the bottom of the west end of the foundation pit.

In the meantime a gang of men are engaged in carrying concrete material from a mixer to the east end of the pit, which is being covered over in preparation for the building of the concrete foundation work.

The superintendent of the work has a large gang of men employed on the job, around which is a busy scene.

UNDESIRABLES ARE COMING TO CANADA

ACTION IS TAKEN AGAINST CAPTAIN OF VICTORIAN FOR LANDING UNFIT.

The Canadian immigration authorities have come to the conclusion to prevent the shipment and landing in Canada of undesirable immigrants by the various passenger steamship lines.

It is said that the booking agents in Europe, especially Continental Europe, are acting contrary to the laws that govern emigration to Canada, selling transportation to any and all who make application. The Canadian immigration authorities are determined to stop this, even if the department is obliged to resort to drastic means to prevent the undesirable influx.

The steamer Mount Royal recently landed 1650 passengers in Quebec and among the number was an idiot who should not have been given transportation and who is now held for deportation.

Acting under instructions from Ottawa, Mr. Aime Dion, advocate, has taken an action in the Police Court against Captain Outram of the SS. Victorian for bringing over an undesirable passenger who is subject to deportation. The case will be proceeded with on the 13th instant, when the Victorian arrives on her nert trip to Quebec.

Mr. L. A. Cannon, K. C., has been retained to defend Captain Outram.

Ladies' Jaeger Shirt Waists, in wool zephyr and wool taffeta, with collars; suitable for city or country wear. Can be had at Darlington's Store. See advt.

CASE DISMISSED.

Wishing to have Edgar Garneau, of L'Ange Gardien bound over to keep the peace, Arthur Huot, of the same parish, took action against him in the Court of Sesssions yesterday. After the evidence was all in, the case was dismissed. Huot having to pay the costs.

FISHERMEN (?) LEFT FOR LAKE BEAUPORT

Three well-known residents of Quebec and otherwise and reputed to be the very best desciples of Isaac Walton's stock, left for Lake Beauport this morning at 4 o'clock and are expect to return (bar-ring accidents) on Sunday afternoon. Dealers and others interested in the fish business would do well to be on hand at their return as bargains, undoubtedly will be in order. One of the party is so sanguin of his success that he made a wager with a friend who agreed to eat all the fish he would catch, and sportsman says that his friend will feed on fish for a couple of weeks, at least. The parties in question expect that the trip will be a most profitable one.

Oh, you poor little shes!

SOCIAL PROBLEM CLUB.

Members of New Quebec Organization Will Discuss Phases of Social Service.

A well attended meeting was held in the Y. M. C. A. Building Thursday evening to discuss the possible formation of a club to study some present-day social problems. After some discussion it was unanimously decided that a club should be organized, to be known as the Social Problem Club, and the following officers were elected:

President, H. K. Tenant.
Leader, W. W. Lee.
Secretary, N. P. Woods.

The club will meet on Thursday evenings at 7.45 and some special social problem will be studied each month. During June the question of "Poverty" will be taken up, and will be dealt with from the different aspects of conditions, causes, effects and solution. During the following months the subjects will be "Wealth," "Socialism," "Eugenics," "Euthenics" and "The Unit."

These studies should prove valuable, not only to the members of the club, but also to the community at large, for people today are realizing as never before that a study of those problems which affect the national and community life, is absolutely essential to their solution.

At the first meeting to be held next Thursday evening, the subject will be, "The Extent of Poverty in Canada and the United States."

FUNGI.

The Department of Agriculture has sent out a circular letter concerning fungi, which will both enlighten and amaze the fascinated reader. For instance:

"Definition of fungi, section 6: The term fungi is understood to mean an nonchlorophyil bearing plants of a lower order than mosses and liverwarts nonchlorophyll bearing thallophytes."

Seems simple enough, doesn't it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

QUEBEC CLUB WILL HAVE HARD TASK THIS AFTERNOON AGAINST SAILORS.

There will be a cricket match on the Plains this afternoon between the Quebec Club and a team from H.M.S. Cumberland. ### "GREAT BRITAIN" WINS HANDICAP AT LOUISVILLE

Louisville, Ky., June 6—G. H. Hendrie's Great Britain came back today and captured the handicap, the feature at Douglas Park, in good time. While the Hendrie mount had won a race earlier in the week, the bettors preferred Foundation, while Melton Street and Cream also had a big array of backers. Sosius, A. B. Speckel's colt, won the first race, which was an unexpected occurrence.

KIRBY AND TRAVERS IN THE FINAL ROUND.

Short Hills, N.J., June 6—Golf history of a year ago was repeated today when Oswald Kirby, of Englewood, and Jerome D. Travers, of Upper Montclair, won their respective matches in the semi-final round of the New Jersey State Golf Championship Tournament at the Baltusrol Club links. Last year these two met in the final at Atlantic City and Kirby won. Tomorrow they will meet again as finalists and a close match is expected.

Travers, the national and metropolitan champion, made a record of 73 for the links yesterday, but today Kirby, playing splendidly, went him one better by going round in 72 in his match with E. B. Schley, of the Home Club, winning by 9 up and 8 to play.

A TRANSFER.

"Among the tenements that lay within my jurisdiction when I first took up mission work on the east side," says a New York young woman, "was one to clean out which would have called forth the best efforts of the renovator of the Augean stables. And the families in this tenement were almost as hopeless as the tenement itself.

"On one occasion I felt distinctly encouraged, however, since I observed that the face of one youngster was actually clean.

"'William,' said I, 'your face is fairly clean. But haw did you get such dirty hands?'

"'Washin' me face,' said William."—Judge.

DOUBLE HEADER FOR TOMORROW

GAME BETWEEN ST. PATS AND VICTORIAS SHOULD BE A HUMMER.

There will be another double-header at the exhibition grounds tomorrow when St. Pat's meet the Victorias and the C. B.'s and Lavals come together.

Unusual interest is being taken in the first of these matches because of the keen rivalry between these two clubs and Messrs. Ledden and Belanger are each confident that their team will carry off the honors. This will be a big drawing card and there is likely to be a big crowd on the spot.

St. Pat's will have the same team as when they played the Vics before, except for the fact that Williams will take the place of Caron in the outfield. Cunningham may also be given a try.

Lavals say that they have strengthened up with some new blood so that their match with the C. B.'s may turn out a good one.

The first match is scheduled for 1:30 and the second for 3:30.

BELMONT HORSE WINS BROOKLYN

ROCKVIEW WINS CLASSIC AT BELMONT PARK AGAINST ONE COMPETITOR.

Belmont Park, N. Y., June 6.—Rockview, a son of Rocksand, owned by August Belmont, won the classic Brooklyn Derby today. There was only another starter, Prince Eugene, who was the favorite, owing to the difference in weight and his showing in the last race. Rockview, however, went along Prince Eugene's head while Wolfe was riding for all that was in his mount. Rounding the home turn MacTaggart called on Rockview and it seemed to the watchers that Eugene had been stopped up, so quickly did Rockview open the gap.

This was the last day for the admission of the public free to the field and a big crowd took advantage of the innovation. The races had nothing exciting about them. Lizander had to fight off a challenge of that good campaigner, Donald McDonald, to win the third, while Delirium had no trouble winning the steeplechase handicap.

BUFFALO WINS FROM TORONTO, SCORE 8-5.

(International League.)

Toronto, June 6—Buffalo won the second game of the series from the Leafs by the score of 8 to 5, they tieing it up in the eighth and winning out in the ninth. Two rank muffs by centerfielder Trout, of dinky fly balls, was responsible for three of the visitors runs, two of them coming in the eighth when they tied it up. Lehr practically won the game for the visitors when he made a brilliant catch of McConnell's sharp fly in the eighth with men on second and third, while in the ninth, he came through with a corking long single, that scored two runs.

GLIMPSES OF OLD QUEBEC

From the Files of the CHRONICLE, June, 1813 and 1883.

THIRTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Shooting Affray at Charlesbourg.

A serious affray occurred at Charlesbourg, thirty years ago, which might have resulted fatally to three or four individuals. Jean Lortie has possession of a farm known as Boreal, belonging to Pierre Lortie, who, for some cause, has let the property to one Renaud. The latter finds it impossible to take possession, a few days since he got a writ of ejectment against the actual occupant. Lortie, it appears, has appealed from the judgment and it is claimed proceeded to sell property belonging to the former. Renaud then engaged a number of friends to assist him in taking possesion or in preventing the sale of the utensiles, this party on approaching the barn, was fired at by the Lortie battalion. Bedard, Magnan and another being wounded, one of them receiving no less than seven large buckshot in his body. Mayor Beaudry, of Charlesbourg, immediately notified the authorities and the provincial police were dispatched to the parish with the necessary warants. Sergt. Harp and Constables Burk, Flynn and Collier arrested Lortie and four others, bringing them to town with the arms found in their possession.

The Burning Question.

We hear it stated that some members of the City Council say that though they agreed to submit all the tenders for the new water main to competent engineers, it is a question whether or not they will agree to the report of Messrs. Shanly and Parent. The Council has got itself safely out of a box by taking the Chronicle's advice. It will do well to remain out. We are willing to abide by the report of the engineers now being consulted and so are the people. What is the use of asking these gentlemen for a report unless we mean to accept it? The day of triffling is past. The Council may as well begin to look pleasant. A fair cause and no favor must be the policy in this matter.

A HUNDRED YEARS AGO TODAY

Attack On Sacket's Harbor.

His Excellency the Commander of the Forces considers it an act of justice to express his entire approbation of their conduct in the recent attack made upon Sacket's Harbor. The regularity and patient firmness exhibited by the troops under circumstances of peculiar privation and fatigue have been exceeded only by their intrepid gallantry in action, forcing a passage at the point of the bayonet through a thickly wooded country, affording strong positions to the enemy, but not affording a single spot of cleared ground favorable for the operations of discipline. The woods were filled with infantry supported by field pieces. Commander Sir James Yeo conducted the brigade of boats to the attack. Capt. Grey, acting quartermaster, was killed close to the enemy's block house. In him the army have lost an active and intelligent officer.

TURKEY WILL HAVE FOREIGN ADVISERS

GRAND VIZER TO FOLLOW JAP EXAMPLE IN MODERNIZING EMPIRE.

Constantinople, June 6.—As the incidents in Syria and Armenia bring the question of reforms in Turkey so prominently forward at the present moment, a correspondent went to the grand vizier, Marshal Mahmud Shefket Pasha, to ask him for an interview on this subject. Slight and trim in his khaki dolman as a young lieutenant, the marshal received the newspaper man with his usual smiling affability.

"The ideal of the party of Union and Progress is to do for Turkey what the Japanese have had the glory and good fortune to do for their country—namely, renaissance by modernization with the aid of foreign collaboration," said the grand vizier. "If this ideal has not been realized up to the present, it is because all our best efforts have been paralyzed by internal intrigues or external complications. Today, in complete accord with our excellent and venerated sovereign and our highly intelligent and extremely patriotic crown prince, we are thoroughly decided to take in hand again the pursuit of our old ideal, and in the realization of this work of salvation we shall not allow ourselves to be hindered by any obstacle.

"And in order to prove to you," Marshal Mahmud Shefket continued, smiling, "that this time it is really a question of a scheme for execution, and not a list of intentions such as I announced three months ago, I will give you the first intimation of a piece of news. Yesterday at the Council of Ministers we began deliberations upon the nomination of foreign advisers for the ministries. Observe that I say 'deliberations,' and not 'on the principle,' for we have been in agreement on the principle for some time, but as regards the execution and the choice of persons, I can not say any more at present."

"Now, your highness, as regards these burning questions of Syria and Armenia?"

"My ideas," the grand vizer replied, "have not changed in the least. The new law of the vilayets has been promulgated. It is a good law, I think; but all its value consists in the manner in which it is applied. I persist in believing that the law can be well applied in the several regions of the empire, which are so different in language, customs and traditions, only on condition that the empire be divided into great zones of civil inspection and gendarmerie, in which, with the collaboration of foreign civil advisers and gendarmerie, a carefully recruited body of inspectors will watch over the strict maintenance of public order and security, and an administration adapted to the language, customs and traditions of each zone. In particular, one zone of inspection will comprise the Arab vilayets of Syria, and another those of Irak. I may add that the elected provincial councils will find their powers wide enough to give ample satisfaction to all strictly local needs.

"In the same spirit the whole of Anatolia will be divided into four great zones of inspection, and it is my firm opinion that the organization of the eastern zone of inspection, which comprises the vilayets inhabited by the Armenians, will be of such a nature as absolutely to prevent a repetition of the deplorable events which for the last twenty years have periodically desolated these regions."

CANADIAN SCORES CHURCH IN CANADA

ANGLICAN CLERGY IN DOMINION ARE DENOUNCED AS "PROFESSIONALS.'

The Montreal "Star" published the following special:

London, June 5.—Bishop Graham Ingham, an influential prelate of the Church of England, who recently toured Canada in connection with the Anglican Mission Help under the auspices of the Archbishop of Canterbury, publishes a volume here which includes a scathing indictment of the Church of England in Canada.

The writer is an anonymous Canadian clergyman. He says:

"The church which, instead of holding first place among the Protestant bodies, is a bad third and in some places even fourth, has miserably failed to act in the capacity of a leader in moulding the character and morals of the Canadian people.

Quarrels of High and Low.

"The greatest hindrance to the progress of the church in Canada has been the constant quarrelling between the high and low factions. It has been simply pitiful to see congregation after congregation split up and almost destroyed over some inane question such as whether a clergyman should wear a cassock or not, or where a cross should be placed that some persons wished to present to the church.

"It is a thousand pities that the clergy do not take the plain prayer book stand and give a simple service to the people, instead of continually worrying them over ornaments and useless accessories.

"The budgets of the Methodist and the Presbyterian churches are statements of finance that, compared with those of the Anglican Church look like a millionaire's income in contrast with that of a second class school teacher.

Should Replace Professionals.

"The worldliness of its members is declared to be another frightful present-day weakness in the church. Church people are to be found as leaders at races, society functions, and military affairs. So few are real leaders in their own body, as is the case with the Methodists and the Presbyterians.

"The church in Canada," he proceeds, "needs a real conversion. Elaborate music, early services, strange vestments, and stranger doctrines, do not in the least interest people in this busy land. The liquorman, the gambler, and the society devotee have signally failed to keep the church alive. It is time for real Christians to take charge of affairs, and let the professionals have a rest; for if there is one force more than another that holds Canada loyal, it is the influence and teaching of the old mother church.

"A strong element is at work along these same evangelical lines. The days of priestcraft and ecclesiasticism are long since over. They, in fact, never arrived in this country."

In publishing this indictment, Bishop Ingham says:

"It is a criticism, not from without, but from within. This critic, being himself a Canadian, can say what no outsider would dare to say. His words should be carefully weighed."

From Great Lakes To the Rockies

WOMEN SING THE PRAISES OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Saskatchewan Lady Adds Her Testimony To What Has Already Been Said of the Great Work Dodd's Kidney Pills Are Doing.

Caesarville, Sask., June 6—(Special)—The scarcity of female help in a new country subjects the women of the prairies to unusual strain, and careful observation has established the fact that this strain first makes itself felt in the kidneys. For this reason Dodd's Kidney Pills are making an enviable reputation from the Great Lakes to the foothills of the Rockies.

Everywhere you will find women singing the praises of the great Canadian kidney remedy that has banished their pains and weariness, and brought them back to health. Among the many is Mrs. Edgar Cowen, an estimable lady of this place.

"I have found Dodd's Kidney Pills very beneficial," Mrs. Cowen states "If anything I can say will help any sufferer I am glad to add my testimonial to what has already been said."

The kidneys strain all the refuse material out of the blood. If they are out of order this refuse remains in the blood, and becomes poison. That's why sound kidneys mean pure blood and good health. Dodd's Kidney Pills make sound kidneys.

HALF-WAY MEASURES.

I. M. Taylor, a State street broker who is an ardent sportsman, went to Maine on a fishing trip recently. While striking across country from one brook to another he was overtaken by a rural butcher who offered him a lift.

"How's business?" asked Taylor, when the butcher had whipped up his horse.

"Wa-al," said the butcher, "it's all right in the summer, when the place is all choked up with cottagers and summer boarders, but in the winter time, gosh darn it, it don't pay to kill mor'n half a cow at a time."—Boston Post.

IRISH PEASANTS SCHOLARLY MEN

RELIGION PLAYS GREAT PART IN THEIR TRADITIONS AND POETRY.

(From the London Times)

It would be an error to assume that the popular tradition in Ireland has had no literary origins and no literary influences. There was never a time when scholarship and literary culture were out of reach of the peasants. Wars and confiscations brought to their firesides the poet, the historian and the musician who had been protected by the Gaelic or Norman Irish nobles. The music that is played in the cottage or by the roadway today belongs to an ancient and highly cultivated art, and the Munster peasant who remembers his Egan O'Rahilly or Eoghan Ruadh O'Sullivan is in possession of a poetry comparable to Swinburne's for richness of language and elaboration of metre. It is not too much to say that there was in nearly every hamlet down to the year 1847 someone who collected manuscripts, wrote down poetry and prose romances, with fragments of history and grammar, and Latin prose and verse. One instance will suffice to show how vital was the tradition of scholarship amongst the Irish peasantry. Eugene O'Curry was spoken of by Matthew Arnold as a giant among scholars. He laid the foundation of Irish historical research with his great volumes "The Manuscript Materials for Irish History and "The manners and Customs of the Ancient Irish." Where did this man, who was a farmhand and afterwards an assistant in a lunatic asylum, obtain his knowledge and his training? His father, who was a small farmer in County Clare, belonged to a family of hereditary scholars, and his house and the houses of other peasants who had preserved the tradition was O'Curry's university. An instance of literary culture in a peasant's house of today rises to the mind of the writer. In a Kerry village there is a very small farmer who is returned in the census as illiterate. This man the other day dictated to his daughter from the Irish version of the "Iliad" twenty-four pages of her exercise book.

In the mind of the Irish-speaker the bulk of the imaginative furniture is religious or semi-religious. Had the form been shown them the Irish people might have produced a remarkable religious drama. We can show the dramatic quality of their religious conceptions by quoting from one of the poems given in Dr. Hyde's great collection, "The Religious Songs of Connacht":

They dragged him off captive
(Ochone agus Ochone O!)
But the virgin pursued them
Through the wilderness going
(Ochone agus Ochone O!)
"Oh who is yon woman?
Through the waste comes another."
(Ochone agus Ochone O!)
"If there comes a woman
It is surely my mother."
(Ochone agus Ochone O!)
When the Virgin had heard him
And his sorrowful saying
(Ochone agus Ochone O!)
She sprang past his keepers
To the Tree of his slaying
(Ochone agus Ochone O!)
"What fine man hangs there
In the dust and the smother?"
(Ochone agus Ochone O!)
"And do you not know him?
He is your son, O mother."
(Ochone agus Ochone O!)
"Oh, is that the child whom
I bore in this bosom?"
(Ochone agus Ochone O!)
"Or is that the child who Was Mary's fresh blossom?"
(Ochone agus Ochone O!)
They cast him down from them,
A mass of limbs bleeding.
(Ochone agus Ochone O!)
Now go on and be keening!"
Ochone agus Ochone O!)

In an Irish-speaking household the elders would keep the religious poem to be repeated upon rising, upon hearing the birds sing in the morning, upon going on a journey, upon raking the fire at night, and upon lying down in bed. They would have stories about St. Patrick, St. Bridget, St. Columcille, about the Blessed Virgin and the Redeemer. They would have religious charms for a woman in child-bed, charms against the evil-eye, against trembling, against fever.

The Irish peasantry know of two invisible worlds—the world of God and the Saints and the world of the Sidhe (pronounced Shee) or Fairies. The Celts of Ireland have always believed in an imperishable world that can be seen with the eyes of the seer or entered by a mortal who is specially favored. Cormac, the high king of Ireland, once entered it. He saw its palaces of bronze and its houses of silver thatched with the white wings of birds, and he saw bathing in a fountain "the loveliest of the world's women." Dunlang O'Hartigan came to the Irish muster in 1014 and was reproached by Murrough, the son of King Brian, for his delay in joining the forces that were to overthrow the Norse at the battle of Clontarf. "Alas, O King," he said, "the delight which I have abandoned for thee is greater, if thou did'st but know it, namely, life without death, without cold, without thirst, without hunger, without decay, beyond any delight of the delights of the earth, and heaven after judgment; and if I had not pledged my word to thee I would not have come here." But Murrough himself had made the same renunciation. "Often," said the son of Brian, "was I offered in the hills and in fairy mansions this world (the fairy world) and these gifts, but I have never abandoned for one night my country nor mine inheritance."

Caelte, the companion of Finn, was with Saint Patrick when a woman spoke to him. The saint wondered to see one so youthful and one so ancient talking as if they were contemporaries. "Which is no wonder at all," said Caelte, "for no people of one generation or of one time are we: she is of the Tuatha de Danaan, who are unfading and whose duration is perenial, and I am the sons of Milsius that are perishable and fade away.

The popular tradition of today is in agreement with the visions alluded to in the litertaure of a thousand years ago. The people speak of a world in which everything is unbroken and unfading. A woman known to a friend of the writter tells that she was once in the fairy-world. She described it as being "filled with light" and having people that were nobly formed and beautiful. The neighbors said that the woman was away for a day and a half. It was famine time and she went into a cave to gather dulse, and it is likely that she fell into a swoon. Another woman told that she was watching a hurling match when a stranger came and said to her, "You think that a fine sight, but I can show you a sight that is finer." Thereupon he gave the woman a ring, and when she looked through it she saw the fairy hurlers. "I never thought anything grand after that," she said. The fairies of the Irish tradition are not all the diminutive beings of the English stories. As they were described in the old Irish poem translated by Kuno Meyer they exist today in the imagination of the people; No wonder though their strength be great,
Sons of Queens and Kings are one and all;
On their heads are
Beautiful golden-yellow manes,
With smooth, comely bodies,
With bright, blue-starred eyes,
With pure, crystal teeth,
With thin red lips.

Caelte was right when he described these unfading beings as belonging to the Tuatha De Danaan—that is, to the gods of the ancient Celts. But Saint Patrick's theology prevailed and the Sidhe had to forego their divine name. It was necessary to give them qa high origin, and so they have been made part of the angelic host. When God cleared heaven of the angels he held his hand at the entreaty of Gabriel. Then he said; "Let those who are in heaven remain in heaven, let those who are in hell remain in hell, and let those who are between heaven and hell remain in the air." Those who remain between heaven and hell are the Sidhe. God and the Blessed Virgin are invoked in the charms against them:

SO on of God! Dost thou hear that confused noise now (coming) towards us
Loudly in the Glen?
Hear, O Mother. Let there be no fear on you.
May the Blessed Father save us.
May it be a firm fortress, the fortress in which we are.
May they be a blind host, this host that is coming towards us.
O Jesus Christ, O Glorious Virgin,
Who seest our harm and our hurt,
May'st thou spread thy blessed cowl across us. Amen.

The fairies often steal away handsome children and newly marred women. Sometimes they force a good fiddler or a good piper to join their company. The Leprechaun and the Banshee are on the side of the fairy world. The Leprechaun is their artisan and he knows where sundry crocks of gold are hidden. Those who get sight of him should capture him and keep their eyes upon him until the gold is opened up. But the Leprechaun is very adroit, and generally he can distract the mind of his captor. Then he is away in a moment. The Banshee is mourner to the families of the Milesian race. Before death she is to be heard wailing, and sometimes she is to be seen drawing a comb through her hair.

The stories told round the peat-fires are as remote as these fairy-beliefs. The youth who has on his breast the stars that denote the son of a king puts on his boat fastenings for a year and a day and goes into a strange country in quest of adventures He fights with a champion who turns out to be his brother, and is given the daughter of the King of Greece. His bride strikes him with a rod and puts him under enchanchments. Then he is cursed by a cat and gives three tasks to perform. The ragged man who accompanies him assumes a proper form, and the son of the King of Ireland sees his bride again. He has to choose her from amongst twelve beautiful women that have each her likeness. Then they go to his boat, and they lift the sails, "the red sails, the green sails, the spotted sails, and the speckled sails." They row and row until "the seals, whales, crawling creeping things little beasts of the sea with red mouths rise on the sole and palm of the oar, making fairy music and melody for themselves, until the sea rises in strong waves, hushed with magic, hushed with wondrous voices"; and "with greatness and beauty the ship was sailing until they came into the harbor of Benn Edar." Then they spendspend a third of the night in feasting, a third in music and conversation, a third in slumber soft and pleasant. "They found the ford and I found the stepping-stones; they were drowned and I came safe."

This is the type of the wonder story that is known in the Irish-speaking and English-speaking parts of the country. There is a cycle of stories peculiar to Ireland and Gaelic Scotland—the Ossianic or Fenian stories. They concern Finn, MacCumhal and his companoion, Ossian, Oscar, Goll and Dermott. These are the heroes who are celebrated in the Ossianic poetry, which was a literary possession of Ireland and Gaelic Scotland. In the west of Ireland today a shanachie will take three quarters of an hour to the recital of a Fenian tale. But the Ossianic cycle is becoming shapeless. Another story teller will say: "I can tell you a story about Finn MacCumhal and Brigham Young." In the English-speaking parts scraps and anecdotes are all that remain form this famous cycle. The tales told in English are like those given in Kennedy's and Crofton Croker's collections, or Miss Hunt's "Folk Tales of Breffni." Besides the wonder-tales and the stories from the Ossianic cycle there are independent romances like that fine story given in Larminie's "West Irish Folk Tales"—"The Woman who went to Hell."

The Danes have an important place in Iris traditions. They hid their treasures after their defeat at Clontarf, and the hens when they murmur at night are telling where the treasures are hidden. It was the Danes, the people say, who brought poultry to Ireland. They also built the raths or forts. It is probable that the Danes are credited with a portion of the tradition that goes back to the De Danaans. The present writer has heard peasants say that in Denmark the nobles give dowries to their daughters out of estates in Ireland. The historical events that the people speak of are the Cromwellian campaign and the Williamite war. They have no popular poetry relating to the first. The Williamite war was full of dramatic incidents and it eventuated in the overthrow of Celtic society. And yet they have few memorials of that epoch. The people of the north take an interest in the battles of the Boyne and because of their celebrations it is known to the rest of Ireland. But Catholic Ireland mourns for Aughrim. The old men will tell how the French general St. Ruth was jealous of Sarsfield, how he kept his plans from him, and how the sudden death of St. Ruth lost the battle for the Irish.

One cannot allude to the Willaimite war without making some reference to the Munster poets. Two of them—Egan O'Rahilly and Eoghan Ruadah O'Sullivan—have been mentioned already. The Munster poets were the surviving bardic association, and they saw the Cromwellian plantation of Munster, the outbreak of the revolutionary war, the first victories of the Irish forces and their final defeat, the ruin of the Catholic families, and the opening of the penal regime. "A troop of horses at the brink of a gap, a fierce fight, a struggle with foot soldiers"—thus the poets of the seventeenth century saw the conflict. But the eighteenth century poets live in a more languishing time. Their measures become more and more complex and their themes more and more abstract. In the poetry of the period one form predominates—the aislinn or vision. The poet as he walks abroad, sees a beautiful damsel. Her hair falls to the grass and in her face the rose and the lily strive for mastery. She tells him that she is under bonds and that she waits for one who is the king's son or the young deliverer. This abstraction of Ireland passes into the new popular poetry in English and the ballad singers sing of Ireland as "Granuaile." By the firesides the curious and characteristic "secret" songs are sung. In them defiance and aspiration are hidden under esoteric references. "Secret" name after "secret" name is invented for Ireland—she is Kathleen Ni Holohan, the Poor Old Woman, the Little Dark Rose, the Silk of the Kine These curious songs are aspirations rather than memorials, and the only popular songs from the wars are "The Farewell to Patrick Sarsfield" and "Shaun O'Dwyer a Glanna." Until we come to the poems made in English and presented to the people as part of a deliberate national propaganda we do not meet in Irish tradition a body of national ballads.

The Irish people are without traditional ballads, but they possess a body of beautiful lyric poetry. It is in Irish, and Dr. Hyde has given us a selection from it in "The Love Songs of Connacht." Out of this book one could take a dozen lyrics that are not below Shelley's for melody nor below Browning's for subtety. In "The Oxford Book of English Verse" one of these poems, "My Grief on the Sea." is given in Dr. Hyde's translation. There are others in the collection that are more intense, more subtle, and more melodious than this particular poem. D. Hyde took it down from an old woman who was living in a hut in the middle of a bog. We have no complete collection of Irish folk songs and if some one would put together the songs out of various collections—love songs, religious songs, laments for the dead, satires, poems of friendship drinking songs and patriotic songs—Ireland could show a body of folk-poetry that could go beside the wonderful Rumanian collections.

Particular customs relating to birth and death survive. One that presses hardly on women of the West is that which forbids a woman to milk a cow between child-birth and the time she is churched. Often the woman is far from neighbors, and her husband is laboring in Scotland or England perhaps. The most impressive custom connected with death is the "caoine" (keen) or lament chanted by women. It is a traditional chant, monotonous and almost impersonal, rising to a poignant expression now and again. Those who have heard the caoine are not likely to forget the experience. Sometimes a father or a mother will rise u and improvise a verse, giving a personal expression to the praise or the sorrow. The clergy are against the custom of keening the dead, but in Irish-speaking districts one can still hear at funerals the traditional lament. All over Ireland custom forbids the woman of the peasant households to sit down to a meal with the priest. The custom of shaking holy water and of giving holy water to the fishers who go out night after night mark the Celtic distrust of the sea.

Irish tradition and Irish history are well comprehended in the two great Dublin libraries—the National Library and the library of Trinity College. The National Library is the most popular of the Irish public institutions it is the reading-room for the students of both universities, the reference library for the Irish public, and the Patent Office for Ireland. There are about 200,000 volumes in its collection. The Joly collection in the National Library makes an important section. It cotains over 20,000 volumes and a great collection of prints. A considerable section of the books deal with Irish affairs, but the bulk of the collection is concerned with military history within the period of the French Revolution and the ned of the Revolutionary wars. The library of Trinity College is rich in Irish manuscripts,( and it has amongst its trasres the famous "Book of Kells." It is one of the five libraries in the United Kingdom to which books must be sent for the purpose of securing copyright.

VANDERBILT MONEY LOST IN SWINDLE

COUNT SZECHENYI SAID TO HAVE SUNK $4,000,000 OF HIS WIFE'S FORTUNE.

Berlin, June 7—An explanation of the financial difficulties in which the Countess Szechenyi, formerly Gladys Vanderbilt, and her husband are involved and which are believed to have caused them to leave Buda Pesth and take up their residence in London, is looked for in the bankruptcy proceedings brought in the Austro-Hungarian courts against three of the most prominent members of the Hungarian nobility whose fortunes have been swallowed up in enterprises similar to those which have caused Count Szechenyi to lose several million dollars.

The three nobles aginst whom the suits have been brought, it was learned here today, are Count Paul Szapary, who besides being immensely wealthy, married one of the richest Polish countesses, who had a dowry of $1,000.00; Count Karacsonyi, who owned the finest mansion in Buda-Pesth, where he entertained the Emperor Joseph and the King and Queen of Spain, and was Count Szechenyi's keenest rival in the magnificence of his entertaining, and Count Emmerich Degenfield, the owner of a famous racing stable of Hungary, the bulk of whose fortune has been swallowed up in speculative enterprises.

Driven Away by Money Difficulties.

Buda Pesth, June 7—It became known today that the condition of Count Szechenyi's financial affairs was the reason for his leaving this city with the Countess, formerly Gladys Vanderbilt.

Reports that the Countess persuaded her husband to leave because the Hungarian aristocracy had snubbed her are utterly without foundation. In fact, the Countess has been most popular and has been received everywhere among the highest nobility as an equal. Her home has been the centre of the exclusive Hungarian aristocracy.

Count Szechenyi is reported to have lost more than $4.000,000 of his wife's fortune. He has been the victim of a mining swindle in which he lost large sums on the Buda Pesth and Vienna bourses. The story runs that the Count, being anxious to become Hungary's Vanderbilt, organized among the rich land owners and other members of the aristocracy what became known as the "magnate group" for operations of a speculative nature.

Everything went well for a time. The Count seemed to have obtained with his wife some of her family's financial talent. Last autumn, however, the Count and his associates failed to see the financial storm which was brewing as the result of the Balkan war, and the consequent stock exchange depression and the unsettled international situation which was hovering over Austria-Hungary. When the story of "Black Wednesday, October 12, swept by, the "magic group" was among the cripples of the financial battlefields, having lost some $7,000.000. The Count's personal loss was estimated at $2,000.000.

Mine Deal Proves Swindle.

About a year ago Count Szechenyi and his friends were interested in coal and iron mines near Krassy-Szoreny, close to the big mines owned by the Austro-Hungarian State Railway. The latter had owned the mines, but the experts, having reported that they were of little value, the lands were sold to a private firm. Count Szechenyi and his friends then obtained an option on them on the strength of a report made by Belgian engineers, that the property at a conservative estimate was worth $100.000.000.

The Count tried to interest local financiers of Buda-Pesth, but they, knowing the report of the railway company's experts, refused to come in. The count, relying on the report of the Belginas, is said to have interested, among others, the big firm of Defay & Sepulc, of Brussels, who invested $6.000.000. The Count and his friends invested a similar amount, and from other sources $1,5000,000 was raised.

Expensive machinery was installed and fine buildings erected, but after months of operation no coal or iron in paying quantities was found. Recently Count Szechenyi is said to have concluded that he had been swindled. The company stopped operations and all the capital had been eaten up.

Recipes For Quebec Housewives.

Menu for a picnic party—Cold roast chicken, ham or scrapple broiled on coals or fried over wood fire, fish broiled or fried, sardines, cold tongue, hard boiled eggs (20 minutes to half hour), eggs to be fried or scrambled, Boston corn bread, buttered rolls, grated ham sandwiches, marmalade of orange, also of rhubarb, canned peaches, sweet pickles, watermelon and beet, other varieties, botted pickles, chow-chow, cucumber, etc., quince and plum jelly, raspberry or other jams, chocolate and marble cake, plum cake, coffee, chocolate, tea, cream, sugar, salt, pepper, oranges, apples.

Fresh Ox Tongue.

Put the tongue on the fire in cold water, simmer slowly till tender, then remove the skin. Its flavor will be improved if two or three large carrots and a large bunch of savory herbs be added to the liquor after the scum is removed. When the tongue is quite tender so that it can be easily probed with a small skewer, so that the skin can be easily peeled off, take it, after removing the skin, pass a large carving fork through the root end, and by means of this fasten it on a board. Pass through the tip another and smaller fork, and before fixing in the board draw the tongue straight. Let it remain untouched until quite cold; trim neatly, glaze it, then wrap a nicely cut frill of tissue paper round the root, which it a little unsightly. About three hours and a half to simmer. A large tongue sufficient for 12 people.

Rhubarb Marmalade.

Remove the peel from six oranges and cook slowly until soft. Cool, remove the white portion with a spoon, and cut the yellow portion into strips. Take the orange pulp out from between the sections of membrane and put in saucepan with three pounds rhubarb peeled and cut in half-inch pieces. Boil 20 minutes, then add six cups of sugar, the prepared peel and cook slowly two hours. Cool and bottle.

Plum Cake.

Beat 1 pound of butter to a cream, mix with it 3 well-beaten eggs, 2 pounds of best flour, 1 pound of currants, 1 pound of sugar, 5 heaped teaspoons of baking powder, and a pinch of salt; mix rather lightly with lukewarm milk. Put the dough into buttered tins, and bake immediately. This cake is very good, but does not improve with keeping more than a day or two. Time to bake, one or two hours, according to the size of the tins. Sufficient for two or three cakes.

Picnic for Twelve People.

About three pounds cold salmon, one and one-half pints mayonnaise sauce, 2 cucumbers, cold roast quarter of lamb, cold mint sauce, 2 chickens, fruit, tarts, 2 custards, jellies or creams, 2 molds, 2 quarts strawberries, 1 pint cream, 1-2 pound cheese, 1-2 pound butter, 2 loaves bread, 1 pound crackers, pepper, salt, mustard. What to drink is individual taste and means, wine cup if desired, tea or coffee. Small cakes.

Quarter of a Lamb.

This joint can scarcely be too fresh when dressed. Remove the scrag, the shankbone and the chinebone and crack the ribs half way between the edge of the breast and the spine. Lay the meat down to a quick fire and baste plentifully from the time of its being warmed through to that when it is ready for the table. Like all young meat, lamb should be thoroughly cooked. About 10 minutes before it is taken up dredge a little flour over it and froth and brown it nicely. Serve the lamb, when cold, with a cut ruffle on the shankbone. A forequarter weighing 10 pounds will require from 2 to 2 1-2 hours to roast.

Fruit Tarts.

Any kind of bottled or canned fruit, 1 pound of flour, 1-2 pound tinned marrow, sugar, water. Fill dish with fruit, add sugar in proportion; put the flour into a basin and rub in the marrow with a teaspoon of powdered white sugar (a little baking powder may be added if liked). Wet up with enough water to make a stiff paste, roll out and cover the tart in the usual way; bake in a gentle oven. With some fruits, like gooseberries, currants, etc., there is too much juice and a little should be left out or it will boil over and spoil the appearance of the tart. A half hour to bake tart. Make one medium tart.

Lemon Jelly.

Six lemons, juice of all, grated peel of 2; 2 large cups sugar; 1 package any good gelatine, soaked in 2 cups cold water; 2 glasses sherry or white wine, 1 pint boiling water. Stir sugar, lemon juice, peel and soak gelatine together; cover for an hour. Pour the boiling water over them; stir until the gelatine is quite melted; strain; add the wine; strain again through close flannel bag and pour into wet mould.

Small Almond Cakes.

One pound powdered sugar, 6 eggs, beaten very light; 1-2 pound almonds, blanched and powdered; 1-2 pound prepared flour. Rose-water, mixed with the almond paste; whip up the whites of the eggs to a meringue with half the sugar; stir in the almond paste. Beat the yolks 10 minutes with the remainder of the sugar. Mix all together; add the flour lightly and rapidly. Bake in well buttered patty tins, or other small tins, very quickly. Turn out, as soon as done, upon a baking pan, bottom uppermost, that these may dry out. According to the size of the small tins, the number of cakes.

NOVEL TRICKS OF GERMAN SMUGGLERS

SACCHARINE BROUGHT IN A COFFIN, WITH ALL THE FUNERAL FIXTURES.

Berlin, June 6—Smugglers of saccharine, on which there is a high import duty in Germany and a higher one still in Austria, are ever inventing new tricks to elude the authorities, of which the public learns only when the customs inspectors hit by accident upon the contraband.

A short time ago the inhabitants of a Bavarian village on the Swiss frontier were amazed to see a modest funeral procession, coffin, pallbearers, mourners and undertaker, all in order pass through the village with policemen and inspectors acting apparently as honorary escort. A halt was made at the police station, the coffin was opened, and from it was taken about one hundred pounds of saccharine which the smugglers had attempted to introduce in this way.

In Furniture Van.

At one of the railroad stations in Berlin the other day, one of the roomy furniture vans which in Europe are filled with household goods, loaded on a flat car and shipped to any desired city, was accidently opened. Railroad employees were surprised to find it loaded with broken furniture of no value. As the car came from Switzerland, the police were called in, and a thorough examination for illegal articles was made without effect. Finally one of the policemen noticed the unusual thickness of the walls of the van. Investigation showed a space two inches wide between the side walls and a commodious secret garret under the roof packed solidly with sacchrine. The same van had made the trip between Schaffhausen and Berlin at least once before, according to the railroad records. The van and contents were confiscated, but the consignee disappeared.

In Blessed Candles.

Most of the saccharine smuggled into Germany is destined for Austria, the smugglers finding it much easier to hoodwink the Austrian officials with shipments from Germany than elsewhere. Also the Austrian duty is higher.

A classic trick, now exposed and no longer practiced, was to send candles to be blessed to the pilgrimage monastery at Einsiedeln, in Switzerland, after which they were exported to Austria. Here they went, not to the pious, but to the refinery, to be melted up and the sacchrine in them removed. Both the monastery and the customs were for months taken in by this device.

Hempstead, N. Y., Jnue 5—James L. Lynch, a jockey, came a cropper in the sixth race at Piping Rock, Long Island, today and was so seriously injured from being kicked in the head by his horse that he died in a hospital tonight without regaining consciousness. Lynch was riding Exemplar, owned by J. E. Widener. The mount was leading up to the third from the last jump when it struck the barrier and tumbled. Lynch was 30 years old and lived in Westbury, L. Amateur racing was carried out under ideal conditions of weather and the big crowd of society folk in attendance enjoyed a splendid day's sport. The hunting crowd from Meadowbrook and Rockaway were very much in evidence and hundreds of motor parties enjoyed Al Fresco luncheons before the races.

WHAT HE COULD GET.

Two men, father and son, entered a fashionable restaurant in Boston. The old gentleman proceeded to tuck his napkin under his chin as soon as he was fairly seated.

The waiter approached their table, and the old fellow looked up with a genial smile, and said:

"Can we get lunch here?"

The dignified waiter surveyed him critically.

"Yes," he replied, "but not a shampoo."—N. Y. American ment of everybody until adjournment came. He had the last word.

The scene in the Senate Chamber was not marked by the brilliance of former years, owing to the absence of the Governor-General. The wives of the Ministers and ex-Ministers were on the floor of the Senate and a brilliantly uniformed staff stood about the throne from which the administrator, Sir Chas. Fitzpatrick, read the speech from the throne. Premier Borden stood to the right of the acting Governor-General, resplendent in Windsor uniform and Senator Lougheed, leader of the Conservatives in the Senate, stood to the left. Outside on Parliament Hill was a large throng of people, attracted by Governor General's footguards and a detachment of the Princess Louise Dragoons. A heavy shower of rain drove many away, however, before the close of the scene, but the sun shone out again as the royal equipage left the grounds to the booming of the guns.

During the afternoon Premier Borden announced that at next session of Parliament legislation would be introduced to provide recompense to the depositors of the defunct Farmers Bank. This, however, would not set a precedent for other cases, such as the Bank St. Jean and the Banque Ville Marie.

Members also brought up the white slave traffic and the Premier declared himself ready to support any bill that was introduced to stamp out this evil. He also stated that he had taken steps already to this end with Col. Sherwood of the Dominion Police.

Speech From Throne.

The speech from the Throne was as follows:

"Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate—Gentlemen of the House of Commons—In relieving you from further attendance in Parliament after a protracted session, I thank you for the assiduity with which you have devoted yourselves to the important subjects that have been submitted for your consideration. It is satisfactory to note that your labors have resulted in many beneficial measures.

"The Act granting aid for the advancement of agricultural instruction should ensure the co-operation of the provinces with the Dominion in securing for the people a more thorough and comprehensive knowledge of improved methods by which this great industry may be carried on with greater advantage, not only to the producer, but to the community at large.

"In renewing the charters of the banks for another period of ten years, the Bank Act has received careful and thorough consideration, and important amendments have been adopted providing more efficient safeguards for the protestion of both depositors and shareholders.

"The adhesion of Canada to the treaty of commerce and navigation between the United Kingdom and the Empire of Japan has been accomplished under conditions which should tend to promote friendly relations and increased commercial intercourse between the two countries.

"Provision has been made for the establishment of a parcel post, the need for which has been long felt, and it cannot be doubted that the facilities thus afforded will be greatly appreciated throughout the Dominion.

"The trade agreement between Canada and certain of the West Indian colonies has now been brought into force, and it is confidently expected that trade and intercourse between these portions of the Empire will thereby be stimulated and promoted.

"The amendments made to the Criminal Code should materially aid the necessary efforts to stamp out evils against which legislation has been recently directed in many countries.

"In wise recognition of the pressing needs of transportation, aid has been granted which should ensure the speedy completion of the transcontinental railways now under construction. The increasing volume of production and commerce is already taxing the capacity of existing transportation lines in all parts of Canada.

"Among other important subjects which are receiving effective and well-merited attention are the provision of further terminal elevators in the western provinces, the equipment of national ports on both the Atlantic and the Pacific, and the construction of drydocks of sufficient size to accommodate the largest of ocean going steamers.

"The arrangement which has been consummated for an improved mail service to the United Kingdom doubtless has commended itself to you for approval.

"You will be glad to know that the trade of Canada during the fiscal year just completed has largely surpassed that of any previous year.

"Immigration still flows to our shores in substantial measure. The revenues continue to expand and there is some satisfactory evidence of development and progress in all parts of the Dominion.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons—I thank you for the liberal provision which you have made for the increasing needs of the public service.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate; Gentlemen of the House of Commons—I trust that on your return to your homes you will find abundant evidence that the coming harvest will be bountiful, thus assuring for another year the prosperity which Canada happily enjoys."

GOETHALS' NAME.

I don't know whether Mr. Goethals of Panama Canal fame is a Belgian or not. If he is not he ought to be, because Belgium is full of Goethlses. That name is common in my native town and province. No need, thus, of consulting the German language to keep in the right track for the pronunciation of that name. Cut it into two syllabies—namely, Goet and hals. Now, make goet sound as hoot in to hoot; suppress the sound of "h" in hals and say als with the sound of the "a" as in the word father. Be sure to put fully the accent upon the first syllable and let the whole word go as gootals.—Rochester Express.

PRITZI SCHEFF'S CUBIST TALK ON BILLBOARDS

New York, June 6.—"The art of the billboard poster is not. A knot is a hole in a fence, but the fence without a hole is a blind. Therefore, the inward beauty of a fence is outward. The fence should not."

A cubist will understand from the above that Fritzi Scheff has declared against billposting for advertising theatrical stars. She announced recently that no more, even unto time forever, will her picture be posted on the billboards. All outdoor advertising will be eschewed as vulgar display.

"The line marking the cessation of one property ownership and the beginning of another has created an art which today is highly developed," said Miss Scheff, "and the master of this art is the landscape architect. His enemy is the billboard. A city will never be beautiful, restful; the environment will never be pleasing so long as the billposter's fence takes the place of the hedge and the vine. Self-respect should keep refined men and women from permitting their likenesses pasted with flour and water upon fences in association with commercial commodities. For us, newspaper publicity is the only proper and dignified means of communication with the general public."

BLACKMAILER THREATENS BARONESS VAUGHAN

Paris, June 5—Baroness Vaughan's former chauffeur, Lochet, was arrested today on the charge of attempting to blackmail the Baroness, who was the morganatic wife of King Leopold of Belgium.

It is alleged that Lochet demanded $120,000 for the manuscript of his memoirs, containing revelations of Baroness Vaughan's life with the Belgium King and her second husband, Emmanuel Duriex, from whom she obtained a divorce last May.

He threatened, according to the Baroness, if this offer was refused to accept an offer of $50,000 from a newspaper for the manuscript. Baroness Vaughan then placed the case in the hands of the police.

WINE OF "WONDER YEAR" COMES HIGH

PRECIOUS VINTAGES OF 1911 BRING RECORD PRICES IN GERMAN MARKET.

Berlin, June 6.—Wine of the "wonder-year," 1911, the higher grade qualities of which are just coming upon the wholesale market, is attaining record prices at the auctions at Mayence, Treves and other centres in the Rhine and Moselle districts. Seven thousand marks ($1,725) for a cask of Niersteiner Kranzburg of the vintage of 1893 had for years occupied the top of the list in wine prices, but the bidders at this year's auction at once ran the prices for 1911 grades up to almost double this, the record figure being reached for a "fuder" (a cask of about 600 quarts) of Piesporter from the vineyard of Count von Kesselstadt, for which 14,010 marks ($3,500) was paid at the auction at Treves. At this rate of almost $6 per bottle for two-year-old wine in the cask, it will be seen that the epicure who desires to taste a properly ripened and matured flask of Piesporter Kesselstadt, 1911, a few years hence, will have to spend at least a twenty dollar bill for his wine, in addition to the cost of a suitable dinner for the occasion. General von Schubert received $3,225 for a cask of Maximin-Gruenhaeuser-Herrenberger, 1911, and $3,000 was paid for a cask of Nackenheimer-Rothenberg Reisling Auslese.

The value of wine bring to mind the famous bottle in the historical museum of Speyer. This container is of antique shape and was found in a 1867, to which is attributed an age of 1,600 years. The bottle contains a white wine, covered on top with a resinous substance which was once olive oil, placed by the Romans in the necks of wine bottles as a means of excluding the air and preserving the liquid. Analysis proved the fluid to be wine, and other objects in the sarcophagus show that it dates from about 300 A. D.

LAKE ONTARIO LEVEL RISES, FLOOD THREATENED.

St. Catharines, Ont., June 5—The level of Lake Ontario at this side has now broken all records, and there is great danger of flooding. At Port Dalhousie, the water in the harbor is almost to the top of the stone coping.

At Niagara-on-the-Lake the water in the Niagara Navigation Company's slip is even with the road, and will soon overflow, and there is grave danger to the railway tracks, which are becoming undermined.

The theory for the periodical high water mark reached in Lake Ontario generally held here, is that the lake bottom is being raised and pressed up by some subterranean influence. This influence is probably natural gas. Because of there being such great quantities of natural gas under the ground all through this district, it is quite reasonable that there should be much of it under the lake.

WHAT MORE COULD HE WANT?

"What is your father's objection to me, Millie?" asked the young man.

"No application?" he echoed bitterly. "I wonder if he knows I've been coming to see you twice a week for nearly six years!"—Chicago Tribune.

Art of Color Photography Much Studied by Experts

(BY F. OGDEN CORNISH.)

While color photography today, in the strict sense of the word, is as distant an ideal as it was in the time of Daguerre, good substitutes are in process of remarkable development. The closeness with which the color of stationary objects may be approximated and reproduced is one of the commonplaces of present-day magazine illustration, and the interesting exhibition now being held by Messrs. Burnham and Parker suggests that current methods are by no means remote from art. That accurate snapshotting in color is about to be achieved is predicted by a Boston expert who is working on precisely that problem. This photographer, whose colored reproductions in magazines of the printing art have been extraordinary in their fidelity to nature, is experimenting with the mechanical side of both the processes by which an imitation of natural color is secured through the camera. To eliminate the rather prolonged time exposures which are now the obstacle to snapshot photography in color, he must either expose three colored films side by side with some scheme of making them register properly when superimposed, or he must develop a single quick-acting plate or film on which the three primary colors are adequately represented.

Success in a Selective Art.

"The former method," says the photographer, "which perhaps holds the greater promise of practical results, would be simply an extension of the familiar one which is already in general use. Its effectiveness depends greatly on the capacity of the person using it. To make three negatives successively requires, even in the most skilful hands, about twenty times as many seconds as would be needed for a single black and white exposure under similar conditions of illumination. That, of course, elminates any really accurate photographing of objects in motion, though the motion-picture people, with their use of successive color filters on the films, are able to get something that is fairly approximate.

"Any thing that can be kept stationary for a few seconds, whether it is a sitter or a piece of still life or a group of trees, can be caught by the three-color process as handled in this studio.

A portrait of a person in color is just possible, in a commercial sense, as one in black and white. It is something that is made every day.

"Outdoor subjects in which there is no considerable motion of any kind can be represented photographically in color with an exactness that would have been considered marvellous in the first days of three-color work.

"Here is a landscape, a stretch of road and trees wearing their autumn tones and tints. Everything is there, as closely as the most literal-minded of painters would make it, and more nearly, as I believe, in perfect value. The reds and yellows are of the right intensity. And we can get tone as well as correctness of value. By manipulation of the printing of one film over another, we can swing the whole thing a little warmer or a little cooler, according to personal remembrance of the effect in nature. Compare these two prints of the same subject. In the one the sky is undoubtedly too cold and too solid. In this one the broken, bluishsky with flecks of white is not only more agreeable in relation to the rest of the picture, it is truer to nature as I recall the particular afternoon. The difference between the two prints illustrates the nature of this so-called color photography. It remains a selective rather than a merely mechanical art. Its success depends on the deftness and taste and personal feeling of the man who chooses the color filters and does the printing. If he is sensitive to impressions, his work will accord very closely to nature. It will still be so when we reach the ability to snapshop in color, as I confidently predict we shall.

Colored Pictures for Newspapers.

"As for reproduction of such colored photographs as these, that is merely a matter of engraving and printing technique. Two local engraving establishments are doing remarkably accurate work in making plates for three color and four-color printing. When such plates go to press, the adequacy of the outcome depends much on the proper selection of inks and paper and on the competance of the overlay man. You see, therefore, that from the moment of opening the camera's shutter to the deliverance of the colored prints to the bookbinder there is a line of strictly selective processes. That the printed results are often as good as they are, bears witness to the high standerds set in the engraving and printing trades. Personally, I believe that the lithographic processes of reproduction hold the future of colored illustration. Abroad, some newspapers are already illustrated in color with heliotypes. Within five years, many American papers will be using colored illustrations printed on offset presses."

Newspaper pictures in full color, as predicted by the expert just quoted, look to be inevitable to the layman who is superficially acquainted with happenings in the printing art. Given the camera that will make quick pictures in color, the newspaper art department will find a way to do the rest. Meantime, the established processes om imitating nature's colors are under such intensive study that are being reduced to such precision that, whether or not real color photography is ever invented, the working substitute bids fair to be almost, if not quite as satisfactory.

The "movies" will unquestionably prove to have been responsible for much of the standardizing of these processes. Several inventors have lately claimed credit for having solved the whole problem of projecting motion pictures in the hues of nature. This, one is told authoritatively, is an exaggerated claim. The quest, however, is producing results. The investigators in this field are mostly following one or the other of two technical methods; either the subtractive or the additive method.

The former plan resolves color by means of suitable screens of red-orange, yellow-green and blue-violet intensities into negatives from which transparencies are made in the complementary colors. These positives in theory register propery when superimposed on the projection screen. Practically, for chemical and mechanical reasons due largely to the gelatine coating of the film, registration under the substractive process is reported to be often defective.

Results by the Additive System.

Screens of the three primary colors are also used in the additive system, the color being resolved into negatives which serve as records of these three primaries. Black and white positives are made from the negatives and these are projected through the original color screens. Some of the difficulties attendant on both these processes and the means adapted to overcome them, were described recently before the Royal Society of Art by Albert Smith. "All mechanical difficulties of registration and dissimilarity of the photographs taken from three negatives," he said, "are done away with by using one film only and allowing the three colored images to alternate . . . The film must pass more quickly, since three exposures are required instead of one to form a single complete impression. Shortening of the exposure time is especially unsatisfactory in the case of the red and green screens. Yet, though the colors so obtained may be 'washy' and ineffective, the results are generally satisfactory. A comparison of the results with an autochrome slide made of the same view shows practically no difference to the ordinary observer."

The much discussed kinamacolor process of Smith and Urban, it may be said in passing, is simply a modification of the additive system. It employs two screens, red-orange and blue-green, which make the requisite negative records whence monotone positives are projected through a rotating scren of the same colors. The cold tones, particularly the blues, are said to be somewhat sacrificed by this method, which, however, is in other respects very efficient.

While the success in the reproduction of color for motion pictures are increasing the possibilities of inexpensive photography of the same kind for the illustrator's use, the offset press is opening a chance for fast and inexpensive printing of color sheets that did not exist a few years ago. In the making of catalogues this modification of lithographic practice is already having a very large use. Supplements or entire sections of newspapers may yet be done on the offset press. Say J. Alebt Heppes in Printing Art:

"There is no reason why type cannot be printed just as well by the offset press as by any press. If you will look at any lithographic letterhead which is done on the offset press you will find the very finest lines put through the smallest lettering just as sharp, and, in fact, cleaner, than any other process could print them. The best offset type work is not transferred directly from type, but is printed on fine paper and lithographed. This retains all the fine lines and gives more perfect type than letter-press printing could ever give on antique finished paper.

The Trend in Color Photography.

This, then, is the direction toward which color photography of the present commercially practicable sort is headed; toward instantaneous work in outdoor daylight and toward exposures in other conditions that will not be greater than those now required for monotone photography. The pictures thus made wil be readily reproducible by half tone or lithographic processes in the daily press. The prospect is not altogether pleasing from the esthetic standpoint. One foresees still further vulgarization of the yellow newspapers. Yet for many legitimate purposes such reproduction will be very valuable.

It should once more be emphasized in leaving this subject that the color photography which is now being perfected is not a direct presentation of nature's colors. It is an interpretation rather than a process of copying. Whether the dream of many decades of an absolutely direct color photography will ever be accomplished, is purely speculative. That dream involves something more than the production of a colored transparency, such as the Dunniere plate. It involves a negative from which a print can be made in full color. Meantime the limitations under which the present day photographers works are those described by Professor Chapman Jones in London Science Progress: "By the three-color method as given above we have not the reproduction of color but the imitation of it. If the imitation of it is perfect, by daylight, it will probably be faulty by artificial light. The perfection of the imitation depends on the skill of the worker. The color of the photograph is not impersonal evidence of the color of the original. In fact, all color photography, in the scientific sense of the word, is at a standstill, although in the lay mind there exists a belief that itis an accomplished fact."

RECORDER'S COURT.

Six prisoners charged with drunkenness, appeared in the Recorder's Court yesterday. Five of them were condemned to fines ranging from $10 and costs or one month in jail, to $20 and costs or two moths in jail. The sixth, a Russian sailor, apparently insane, was sent to jail for examination.

FISHERMEN MAY BE LOST IN LABRADOR

3 SCHOONERS AND OTHER CRAFT WRECKED BY A TERRIFIC GALE.

Montreal, June 6 — At least three fishing schooners and possibly many more, besides the steamer Gerald Turnbull and the Norwegian ship Freia, were wrecked by the terrific gale which swept the Labrador and Nova Scotia coasts early this week according to intelligence received this morning in local shipping circles.

The schooners Geneva May and C. E. Gorman were reported wrecked at Seal Island last week and the Arcadia at Wolfe's Cove, word having been received in Yarmouth, N.S., only yesterday. These are reported to be total losses, but the crews escaped, it is understood, without casualty. The Geneva May is the property of Norman H. Smith and the C. E. Gorham of Gorham Bros. The Freia and the Gerald Turnbull were the other victims of the storm. The crews of both vessels having escaped harm, were shipped from Yarmouth to Halifax, where they are now awaiting the decision of Captain Lindsay, Dominion Wreck Commissioner, who opened an inquiry there this morning.

Weathers The Storm.

The Frances, Captain Blinn, scudded into Halifax harbor yesterday after weathering the gale without damage. She came laden with molasses from Barbadoes, and her passage was delayed for some time by the hurricane. Fears were for her safety entertained by her owners, the F. K. Warren Company, who had instigated inquiries amongst incoming vessels. Captain Blinn, an old navigator, described the gale as "The fiercest hurricane I ever ran into on the Nova Scotian coast. It surpassed even the most dangerous of the wintry gales."

As almost the entire fleet of fishing schooners which were going for the early June catch, were in last Thursday's storm, and as the majority have not been heard of since, grave uneasiness is being entertained by the relatives of the fishermen, as well as by the owners of the vessels.

The A. V. Conrad was announced this morning as having reached Halifax harbor, after one of the worst storms in her crew's experience.

MAY PROCLAIM NEW DOGMA SHORTLY

ASSUMPTION OF BLESSED VIRGIN MAY BECOME ARTICLE OF FAITH.

Milan, June 6—The Corriere Della Sera's correspondent at the Vatican, asserts that there is a probability that Pope Pius X., shortly will proclaim the traditional assumption of the Virgin Mary into heaven as a dogma of the Church. It is said that during the last few days, in talking with high ecclesiastics, the Pope expressed this intention.

The proclaiming of the tradition as a dogma would give it the full sanction of the Church and impose it upon the faithful as one of the fundamental Catholic truths.

By doing this the Pope would be exercising the highest function of the Supreme Pontiff and also exercising his infallibility.

The last dogmas proclaimed were by Pius IX, that of the Immaculate Conception in 1854 and the infallibility of the Pope in 1870. No dogmas were proclaimed by the late Pope Leo XIII.

The feast of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary is celebrated on August 15th. The belief in the miraculous ascent into Heaven of the mother of Christ is based upon sources ascribed to the Apostle John and to Melito Bishop of Sardis. Pope Gelasius I. included these writings in the list of condemned apocryphal books.

The festival is first mentioned by St. Andrew of Crete, about 650 A.D., and according to Nicephorus Callistus it was first instituted by the Emperor Maurice in 582. There is evidence of its observance at Rome as early as the seventh century.

Hitherto the belief, although long incorporated in the usage of the Church, has never been defined as a dogma, but has remained a "pious opinion" which the faithful are not required to accept.

JAPS ARE NOW POURING INTO SOUTH AMERICA

Seattle, Wash., June 5—Japan is finding an outlet for her surplus population in South America, according to information brought today by the liner Sanuki Maru. Fifteen hundred Japanese were landed at Santos, Brazil, May 15, to be the first members of a permanent Japanese colony under an agreement between Brazil and Japan. One hundred and fifty thousand acres of agricultural lands have been set apart by the Brazilian Government for the colony. Another large colony will be established next year, the settlers to leave Japan about the end of 1913.

QUITE UNSANITARY.

Maud—They say that Jack has wooed and proposed to no fewer than ten girls.

Ethel—Yes, and he's breathed the same vows over and over until they are thoroughly vitiated.

GOOD RACING AT BLUE BONNETS

CONDITIONS AT THEIR BEST AND CROWD WAS UP TO THE RECORD.

Montreal, June 6—Racing conditions were all that could be desired, and the time made in the various events showed a big improvement over previous afternoons. The card, although without a stake event, had as its features two races for Canadian owned horses, and a conditioned race for 3-year-olds which attracted a small but select field.

The riding of Turner on Crisco did not please the stewards, and the lad had a couple of sessions with the officials during the afternoon.

The attendance was the equal of any day with the exception of opening afternoon, which broke all records for the course.

YOUNG MOOSE TAKEN AT MONTMORENCY.

Yesterday morning as Xavier Carneau and Napoleon Mercier, fishermen, were tending their nets near the Montmorency Falls, they saw a young bull moose swimming from the Island of Orleans towards the Falls They went out in their boat to capture him. After a good deal of trouble they succeeded in getting a rope over the animal's head and towing him ashore. After landing the moose, it was taken to Messrs. Holt, Renfrew & Company Zoo. He then seemed to be quite lively, but a few hours afterwards he died. It is supposed that the reaction after his struggle with his captors caused his death.

ARBITRATION PRINCIPLE IN DANGER IN U.S.

SENATE AGAIN REFUSES TO RATIFY TREATIES WITH SEVERAL POWERS.

Washington, June 6—The principal of compulsory arbitration, written into the code that has bound the United States with twenty-four great and lesser nations of the world for the last five years is in serious danger and unless there is a decided change in sentiment in the Senate the renewal of twenty-three of the treaties which gave concrete evidence of this nation's belief in such a policy may be impossible.

SENATE AGAIN REFUSES.

In executive session tonight the Senate again failed to ratify renewals of the arbitration agreements with Great Britain, Italy and Spain, which recently expired. These conventions provide that questions relating to the interpretation of treaties, excepting those that cannot be settled through diplomatic channels or those of vital interest, national honor or independence, shall be submitted to The Hague A similar treaty with France has already been renewed.

FARMER KILLED BY RUNAWAY TEAM

Aylmer, Ont., June 6.—Joseph Darlington, a farmer residing three miles west of town, was killed in the field today by a runaway team. He works a rented farm belonging to W. Davis, but today had left home and gone to help his son William, who works a farm near Orwell. Father and son were in the field plowing, the father being just ahead of the son when the whiffletrees of the son's horses broke and the team bolted. They struck Mr. Darlington in the back and threw him over the plow, the force being so great that he was killed almost instantly.

"RIPPING FINE COUNTRY" SAYS PRINCE ALBERT.

Toronto, June 6—"I have not seen a great deal of Canada, but it is a ripping fine country" volunteered Prince Albert tonight when he returned to Toronto from Niagara Falls.

"Niagara Falls is a charming place and I am greatly enamored with the picturesque spots and scenery on both the Canadian and American shores. I should like to see more of the Dominion and I hope to be able to come back again. Many of my companions are greatly interested in Canada and they tell me that they are anxious to see more such sights as Niagara Falls. There is one thing that did not appeal to me—and that was the effort made by people everywhere I moved to catch a snapshot. If I turned to the right there were scores of people with their cameras focussed on me, and every time I tried to evade them many more would be in a position in another direction. For this reason I tried as far as possible to keep aloof from camera artists, but that did not help me to any extent, as they still persisted in snapping me, no matter what position I was in."

QUEEN AND CONNAUGHT AT VERSAILLES BALL

New York, June 6—A London cable today says: The Versailles ball took place last night in the presence of Queen Mary, the Duke of Connaught, Prince Arthur and Princess Patricia of Connaught, the Battenbergs, the Schleswig-Holsteins and other royalties.

The ball was decorated with gold in the cipher of the French King and with mimic crowns on a white ground, while at one end, on a throne under a blue canopy with fleur de lis, King Louis sat with his consort, surrounded by five hundred society folk, forming a mimic court of the seventeenth century.

The hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitd, in golden coat and blue robes of state, played Louis, while the Countess of Durley was Queen Mary Therese. The famous beauties, Viscountess Curzon, Mrs. John Astor and Lady Diana Manners, were, respectively, Mesdames de Montespan, De Maintenon and Louise de La Valliere.

A Magnificent Event.

The processions passed amid outbursts of applause and even the Shakespeare ball did not approach in beauty and magnificence this great charity event. A flurry of alarm was perciptible when the Queen arrived, lest the suffragettes might choose the occasion for another outrage, but they made no attempt to spoil the evening and the Queen, with evident delight, watched the stately Court of Louis XIV., and afterward the make-believe Kings and Queens of France and England.

The hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, the Countess of Dudley, Harry Lindsay and the Countess of March were commanded to sup with the actual Queen.

Pavlova and her troupe, all in pink and white, danced the historic gavottes, surronuded by the courts of the world. Lady Manners, in genuine 17th century pink brocade, entered under a high parasol carried by a negro, and caused a sensation for youth and orginality.

Lady Alington's Russian quadrille was an enormous success, the splendor of the gowns and jewels winning approval from the Queen herself.

BALKAN PEACE STILL DOUBTFUL

MEETING OF PREMIERS ON FRONTIER MAY BE OF NO AVAIL.

London, June 6—The resignation of the Bulgarian cabinet is now officially acknowledged. According to the semi-official Sofia Mir, usually well informed, the resignation took place as long ago as May 30, as soon as the news was received in Sofia of the signing in London of the draft peace treaty.

Confirmation of the resignation of the Bulgarian cabinet has caused anxiety at Belgrade and Athens, where the feeling is growing that Bulgaria is temporizing until her forces could be brought up against Greece and Servia. If the resignation of the ministry took place before the interview wat Tzaribrod on the Bulgarian frontier, between the Bulgarian and Servian Premiers, the agreement between them would be without authority and the proposed matter between the four Balkan Premiers, said to have been set for next Sunday, will probably not take place.

The Greek delegates attended the peace conference today but the Turks remained stubborn and refused to agree to the terms of the protocol. The delegates, however, reached an agreement on the following points: To grant full amnesty to all combatants in the late war for a period of three years; to allow Ottomans living in annexed territories to arrange to emigrate if they desire to retain their Turkish nationality, and to resume postal and telegraphic communication between Turkey and Bulgaria.

or other sub-division of the government shall impose any export duty, export license fee, or other charge of any kind whatsoever, whether in the form of additional charge or license fee or otherwise, upon printing paper, wood pulp, or wood for use in the manufacture of wood pulp, there shall be imposed upon printing paper when imported either direct or indirectly from such country, dependency, province or sub-division of government, a duty equal to the amount of such export duty or other export charge imposed by such country, etc., upon printing paper, wood pulp or wood for use in the manufacture of wood pulp."

Manufacturers urge that a retaliatory duty against Canada would force that country to yield on some of its restrictions against American manufacturers on wood and pulp exports.

In his argument before the subcommittee today, Mr. Norris, in addition to reiterating his argument against any countervailing duty, called attention to a proposal of American paper manufacturers to establish a system of operating their mills only five days a week instead of six. This, he argued, was another effort to curtail the American output of print paper.

"The consumption of paper has been growing steadily," Mr. Norris said, in his brief, "at the rate of 90,000 tons per annum, or 300 tons per day, but in the year 1911, not a single paper machine was built by the manufacturers in the United States.

"In the month of March, 1911, at the time they were appealing to your committee for relief, their reports to the Bureau of Corporations showed that they were restricting their output below normal capacity to the extent of 156,000 tons per annum, of 13 per cent. They were aggravvating that restriction by the exportation of 49,755 tons of news print paper in the fiscal year of 1911. Any unusual condition arising during the year, such as a strike, a fire, drought, or blizzard, or shortage of cars, of congestion of traffic, would have participated a situation similar to that in the fall of 1908 and the spring of 1908, when a paper panic cost publishers approximately $10,000,000.

"The paper makers inaugurated a campaign to deter investment in new mills and when they failed to stop construction in any other way, they attacked the credit of the projectors of those new mills, and urged banks to refuse loans to the new enterprises."

Mr. Norris contended that every measure the United States had decided against the Canadian provinces had reached against the American paper maker and consumer that "instead of composing the situation, they provoked an ugly complication, which will require years of intelligent and delicate handling to adjust."

"Nothing can be done," he argued, "but compulsion or tariff threats to provide wood for the American paper industry. That day has passed. Canada controls the pulp wood supply. Its authorities insist that they be dealt with upon a reasonable basis."

CONSTRUCTION COMPANY IS INCORPORATED.

Ottawa, June 6—(Special)—The Canada Gazette tonight contains notice of the incorporation of the Donohue Construction Company, Limited, with a capital of $50,000, and chief place of business at Quebec. The incorporators are Joseph T. Donohue, Donat Gendron, Gustave Simard, Jos. P. Cantin and Charles E. Tashcereau.

SHOE MACHINERY MARKET MONOPOLY

SAY OFFICER SAID THAT COMPANY WAS NOT AN ELEEMOSYNARY CONCERN.

Boston, June 6.—Further testimony relating to the elimination of competing machines by the United Shoe Machinery Company was introduced by the government today in the dissolution proceedings now pending against the company in the United States District Court.

According to Charles H. Krippendorf, a shoe manufatcurer of Cincinnati, Ohio, Sidney W. Winslow, president of the United Shoe Machinery Company, told members of the Boot and Shoe Manufatcurers Association in 1900 that he had to buy out competing machines to prevent competition.

Richard H. Long, head of the Framingham Shoe Machinery Company, and of the R. H. Long Machinery Company, testified that after the United Company bought out the Eppler Welt Machinery Company and the Chase Lasting Machinery Company, it refused to supply him with these machines and withdrew the machines entirely from the market. In 1907 he said it was impossible to get a full line of shoe machinery anywhere in this country, except from the United.

Harry E. Cilley, of Rindge, N. H., who put the Universal Levelling Machine on the market, and offered to sell out to the United, testified that Edward P. Hurd, the assistant treasurer of the company, told him that the United Shoe Machinery Company was not an eleemosynary institution, and that he could not do business except on its sufferance. At the end of the day, an adjournment to Tuesday was taken.

CHILD BUREND TO DEATH.

Toronto, June 6—Bruce Stevens, a three-year-old boy, living at 14 Paisley avenue, was burned to death this afternoon in a stable near his home, and as far as is known the child himself started the fire.

FRENCH CABINET DEFEATED.

Paris, June 6—French Government was defeated by 267 to 257 in Chamber of Deputies today on motion respecting refusal of Government to reopen the debate on the rejection of the plea of the Republicans to be allowed to make a demonstration before the statue of Joan of Arc on May 4.

WORKMAN KILLED AT DONNACONA PAPER MILL

Last night Dr. G. W. Jolicoeur, city and district coroner, received a message from Donnacona, informing him that a workman had been accidently killed by a fall at the works there in connection with the construction of the new paper and pulp mills. The message did not give any details of how the accident occurred or give the name of the workman killed.

KING GEORGE V. AS CRICKETER

Through the courtesy of Mr. J. F. McQuillan, of this city, there is shown in the Chronicle window a group photograph taken when King George was visiting Canada as a middy. The picture, which will be of interest in connection with the present visit of the Prince, was taken in front Mr. McQuillan's old home in Charlottetown, P. E. I., and shows a number of his relatives and friends. The King, who is an ardent cricketer, had been playing against Charlottetown.

WOMAN IS CHARGED WITH POISONING HUSBAND

Woodstock, Ont., June 6.—A sensational turn was given the Beemer poisoning case of Drumbo this morning when Detective Reburn of Toronto went to the Beemer home near Drumbo and arrested Mrs. Grace Beemer on a charge of poisoning her husband.

She was brought to Woodstock and was formally arraigned on the charge, being remanded until the 13th.

Frederick E. Beemer, a well-known Blenheim farmer, died at his home on March 25, following what was supposed to have been overdoses of salts. He had taken several doses for an illness from which he was suffering and these were shown at the inquest to have been administered by his wife.

Dr. Andrew MacKay, coroner, and the jury brought in a verdict of death from strychnine poisoning. The stomach had been sent to the government analyist, and the analysis showed several grains of strychnine in the organ. Sensational developments are expected when the preliminary hearing comes on.

IN POLITICS

Political Candidate—Well, did you discover anything in Stumpt's past life that we can use against him?

Detective—Not a thing. All he ever did before he came here was to sell awnings.

Political Boss — Why, that's just what we want. We'll say that he has been mixed up in some shady transaction.

AMERICA BEATS THE AUSTRALIANS

ANTIPODES TENNIS TEAM PROBABLY DEFEATED IN DAVIS CUP PRELIMS.

New York, June 6—American lawn tennis players paved the way for a trip to England by defeating the Australian team two straight matches in the Davis cup preliminary tie at the West Side Tennis Club courts today. Maurice E. McLoughlin defeated H. M. Rice, 6-1, 6-3, 6-3, and R. Norris Williams, second, scored the second victory, winning from Stanley N. Doust, captain of the invading team, 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 7-5.

All that is needed to clinch the American team's victory is to win one of the three remaining matches, and experts look for this to be accomplished tomorrow afternoon when McLoughlin and Harold R. Hackett meet the Australian doubles team, consisting of Doust and A. B. Jones. Should the United States combination win, the team will sail for England late this month to meet the German team, which has already eliminated the French racquet wielders in the quest for the international championship.

The play during the seven sets contested today proved conclusively that so far as present competing teams are concerned the United States have the edge on the contenders from the Antipodes.

GEN. SIR IAN HAMILTON ARRIVES ON THE EMPRESS

Swift and other officers in full uniform.

A guard of honor composed of men from the R. C. G. A. and R. C. R., in command of Major Lafferty, R. C. G. A., with the band of the R. C. G. A., were present to receive the visiting general officer.

The Empress of Britain rounded the point between the Island of Orleans and St. Joseph at 4 o'clock, and a half hour later was at her berth and had the gangway placed, when Hon. Col. Sam Hughes went on board with Col. Williams to meet and escort General Hamilton on shore. They found him waiting at the head of the gangway dressed in his full uniform, and immediately after greetings were exchanged the distinguished British officer led the way ashore, when the guard of honor presented arms. He lost no time in inspecting the guard of honor, when he was presented to and shook hands with all the militia officers there to meet him, and then, accompanied by the Minister of Militia, Colonel Williams and several other officers, went on board a special C. P. R. train in readiness on the dock, and just 25 minutes after the Empress moored was speeding away in the train west.

Praises The Ship.

Before leaving the steamer General Sir Ian Hamilton was approached by a Chronicle reporter and asked if he had any message he would like delivered to the Canadian militia or Canadian people. He responded that he had nothing to say of any interest, except that he had a splendid passage and though he had sailed in seventy ocean steamers during his career, the Empress was the finest and most comfortable of them all.

He became very friendly with Captain Murray, of the Empress, and before the ship reached Quebec presented him with an autographed photograph, one he had taken in South Africa after the Boer War before he sailed for England, which shows him dressed in his campaign uniform and wearing long service boots.

The hero of Majuba Hill and the sole survivor, has the appearance of a much younger man than his years. He is slight in build, though well knit in physique and rather handsome in mien, and showed his lithe condition as he stepped from the gangway with the elastic step of an athlete and quickness in movement as he sized up the guard of honor and afterwards went through the ranks to inspect the men, taking in everything with a keen, swift glance from a kindly expressive blue pair of eyes that showed he was a soldier and commander of men and at the same time a British gentleman.

SIR IAN HAMILTON REVIEWS 2,500 TROOPS.

Montreal, June 6—Sir Ian Hamilton reviewed 2,500 men of the Montreal garrison on Fletcher's Field here tonight during a downpour of rain.

NEW TYPE OF AEROPLANE.

While the aeroplanes now in use are based on the kite principle of sliding on the air, a Dresden engineer, Herr Baumguertel, is showing another type in the arena of Johannisthal, near Berlin. His machine has no plane, but is provided with two horizontal propellers arranged one above the other. If both are rotating in opposite directions the air between them is pressed downward and forms a column, lifting up the whole apparatus. The motion onward is produced by another propeller or by including the fore part a little downward. The great advantage of this ingenious invention is the ease with which the apparatus ascends vertically. But there is the drawback that with the slightest defect of the motors the fate of the aeronaut is sealed, as the whole machine drops like a stone, there being no possibility of softening the fall by sliding genelty through the air.

PRISONER MILLER IS SET FREE.

the first station on either the Grand Trunk or Canadian Pacific, before taking the train.

Refuses To Talk.

On leaving the jail, Miller would discuss no phase of the situation arising out of his incarceration at the command of Parliament for refusing to answer the question as to how he spent $41,000 of the money of the Diamond Lighting and Heating Company, of Montreal, in securing government contracts. He had always declared he would tell no one else what he would not divulge in parliament, and in this, so far, he has been successful.

The "State" prisoner looked somewhat pale from his long confinement, but his persistency was unshaken, and his attitude to those who were at the jail, on his release, was one of unshaken tenacity.

No special order was made for Miller's release. Automatically, with the closing of the session of parliament, his freedom came. Parliament has no further power in such cases.

Chairman Middlebro, of the Public Accounts Committee, was undecided tonight as to what further action would be taken in the case at the next session of Parliament. Further action may depend on the decision in the case before the courts at Montreal.

WILLING TO PAY.

Patiently the old gentleman had been sitting through the ordeal of hearing the voice culture student in the bed-sitting-room below practising with a zeal which left no room for criticism, but with a talent by no means so kindly described. Finally he crept softly down the stairs and rapped at the door of the young woman's room.

"I can't come in," he said, in response to an invitation, "but I simply came to tell you of a friend of mine who would, I know, be willing to pay almost any amount of money to hear you sing."

Overwhelmed with joy, the lady begged the kind old gentlemtn to write his friend's name and address on a piece of paper. When he had gone upstairs she looked at the slip of paper, which he had handed back to her inscribed and neatly folded.

It read: "John W. Jones, Asylum for the Deaf."

THE OLDEST CHESTNUT TREE.

Pennsylvania Has One at Least 221 Years of Age.

On the farm of Irwin H. Schantz, who lives near Spinnerstown, Bucks County, Pa., stands a mammoth chestnut tree, one that eclipses all the rest of the giant chestnut trees in the Keystone State. Two feet above the ground the circumference of the trunk of this tree measures exactly 36 feet. The tree's height is 60 feet, and ten feet from the ground are two branches, one to the left and the other to the right, and the circumference of the former is 8 feet, the latter 9 feet 2 inches. Ten feet above the ground its great branches extend, one of them 6 feet 4 inches in circumference, each of the other a few inches less. Its boughs spread nearly 90 feet.

The age of the tree is known to be at least 221 years, from tales told by ancestors of the proprietors of the property on which the tree stands. No one ever thought of cutting this giant down, except in 1876, at the time of the centennial in Philadelphia, when the exposition commission offered the proprietor $100 for an unbroken section of the trunk one foot from the ground. What saved the mammoth from destruction was the fact that no saw long enough to cut it could be procured.

With luxuriant foliage like that of a young tree, the monster chestnut still bears abundant crops.

DIFFERENT.

"Not exactly that long; rather since the reading of her will."—New York World.

ENGLAND IS ABSORBED IN PERSIAN ART AND AIR MACHINES

Mr. Preece's Collection of Persian Art on View

Mr. Edgar Herbert Thomas and Mr. J. D. Innes Exhibit Paintings and Directors of French Gallery in London Show Works of Modern Dutch School

PHYSICIAN AND TAILOR ROYAL ACADEMY CRITICS

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 31.

THE fine collection of Persian arts and crafts formed by Mr. John Richard Preece, who was for many years British Consul General at Ispahan, are now on view at the Vincent Robinson Galleries, Wigmore street. Mr. Preece's long residence in Ispahan afforded him excellent opportunities for obtaining choice examples of Persian art. Lustreware in particular is splendidly represented by a magnificent mehrab, or prayer niche, from a mosque at Kashan, consisting of a great number of tiles in relief, painted in blue and brown lustre on a soft, creamy white enamelled ground. The inscriptions seem fantastic, and the arabesque scroll work is extremely graceful in design. This large piece is dated 1226 A. D.

Though this may be regarded as the most important specimen, there are many very beautiful wall tiles, some showing Chinese influence, and two, representing a man's face, indicate a knowledge of Western art.

Vases and tear bottles of celadon and iridescent glass, metal work and the striking spandrils, one of which decorated the arch leading to the royal stables at the Sefarian Palace, Ispahan, and the other to the royal apartments, about 1,600, are among the other treasures in the collection. There is also on view an extremely handsome Hispano-Moresque amphora (about 1330) found under a floor in the Alhambra; and as you view the collection you walk over a carpet which cost $25,000, similar in character to those first designed for the Sassanian Kings in the sixth century.

• • •

At the Doré Galleries is an exhibition of paintings by Mr. Edgar Herbert Thomas, an artist trained in London under the guidance of the late Sir Lawrence Alma Tadema, and in Antwerp and Paris. He is a good academic draughtsman and a sound colorist, but what appears to interest him most is force of illusion. Thus many will prefer his still life, such as "Gold Fish" and certain flower studies, or such as have a still life character, such as "Autumn's Lament," a study from a doorway, and "The House and the Human Window." Some studies of a river under varying conditions of light show that Mr. Thomas is a sensitive observer.

Mr. J. D. Innes, who shows paintings and drawings at the Chenil Gallery, King's road, Chelsea, may be described as of the school of Mr. Augustus John with an attractive manner of his own. His landscapes, generally of mountain scenery, possess great beauty of color, some of the best being scenes in North Wales. The two most important are "Garn Lake" and "Arenig." The former is a study of the lake surrounded by many-shaped, many-colored hills that make elaborate rhythms against a pale evening sky. A formal tree is sharply outlined against the sky, and equally formal plants occupy the foreground. "Arenig" represents a grassy hill, with conical peaks catching the glow. A hard-edged cloud is lifting from a clear green sky above the dark blue, rippled lake or sea. Both pictures are singularly fascinating.

From time to time the directors of the French Gallery in Pall Mall have held representative exhibitions of works by the leading painters of the modern Dutch school. This year they round off the subject by presenting some of the younger men. There is plenty to please the eye and stir the humbler emotions among these fifty-four works by fifteen artists. Human interest is the general note of the exhibition.

Perhaps the deepest note is sounded by "The Poor of the Village," a large canvas by Josef Israels. The picture represents a group of a dozen or so figures, from age to infancy, standing on a wet beach waiting for the charitable disposal of the less valuable fish from a vessel just come ashore. The kindly manner of the givers makes the picture attractive in spite of the sadness.

More cheerful in sentiment are the works of two genre painters, J. S. H. Kever and Bernard de Hoog. Both are interested in the situations and associations of motherhood. "Mother's Joy" and "Double Duty," two cradle pictures by the former, and "A Drink for Baby," by the latter, may be taken as typical.

F. P. Ter Meulen is a pastoral painter, with Mauve as the obvious inspiration. "Dutch Pastures" is on the whole his best canvas. It is a large picture representing a flock of sheep feeding on the sand hills by the invisible sea.

The "problem" pictures at this year's Royal Academy, "A Fallen Idol," by the Honorable John Collier, and "Out of It," by Mr. Alfred Priest, have not much of the problem in them after all when one hears what the creators of the pictures themselves have to say about them.

Asked for a solution of "A Fallen Idol," Mr. Collier said frankly:—"I do not paint problem pictures. I merely paint little scenes from modern life and try to make them as simple and obvious as possible. But no picture can be quite definite as a story, and it is possible to make problems out of anything.

"I had a portrait of my wife once which I called 'The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table,' and the newspapers said that was a problem, and wanted to know what it meant.

"As for 'A Fallen Idol,' it is perfectly simple. It is a picture of a young wife, who is confessing something to her middle aged husband, who is naturally very much distressed. The 'fallen idol' is, of course, the young wife, and her husband is disillusioned about her. As to what she precisely has confessed, that has nothing to do with the picture."

Mr. Priest was equally explicit when asked to explain the "puzzle" of "Out of It," which depicts a beautiful young woman in evening dress, lying dead in a coppice.

"My picture," he said, "was inspired by a newspaper report five or six years ago. A beautiful girl is supposed to leave the card table after a dinner party. She goes out just as she is, in her evening gown, without a cloak or hat. A search party is organized, but the body is discovered, so the report says, by a village urchin's dog."

As an artistic show the Royal Academy may have its merits; viewed from the medical and anatomical standpoint, it appears to be something of a chamber of horrors. At least, this was the unfortunate effect produced upon a physician and a tailor who made the tour of the galleries in company with an artist, whose hair literally stood on end at their criticisms.

For them the beauty of the exhibition was utterly spoiled by the "ghastly enormities" they saw perpetrated from their own professional point of view.

The physician was the first to utter his shocked disapproval.

"The whole of this exhibition," he suddenly burst forth, "is suffering very badly from either Addison's disease or acute anaemia. I can see the symptoms in nearly every case. There is a perfect epidemic of it. The chief and most noticeable symptom of Addison's disease is a dark brown coloring of the skin, which gives it a sort of chamois leather effect. Look on his portrait, and on this. Both are extremely painful cases, and I feel very sorry for them. I can only trust that they are in safe medical hands."

The two worst cases which the physician could find of Addison's disease were Sir Charles Holroyd's "Portrait of a Lady" and Mr. George F. Bird's "A Portrait," and the worst case of anaemia was "I Am Half Sick of Shadows," by Mr. Sidney F. Bird. In these anaemic cases the physician said that the artist had painted his subjects without a shade of color in their cheeks.

"Another marked feature I find," he said, "is that several women are suffering from acute congestion. They have bright red faces, as though they were being choked. I feel quite sorry for them."

The tailor felt himself deeply immersed in gloom from the moment he entered Burlington House. He found it an almost entirely buttonholeless academy. Portrait after portrait provides buttons, but never a buttonhole. Solomon J. Solomon, James Quinn, Frank Dicksee, Sir J. E. Poynter, Arthur S. Cope, Arthur Hacker, Stanhope Forbes, Sir H. von Herkomer and George Harcourt, are among the most eminent portrait painters who do not provide one of their subjects with a buttonhole to their coats.

One of the first shocks to the tailor was from the portrait of Mr. Jonman Mosley, C. B., by no less a giant than Mr. Solomon J. Solomon, R. A.

"It is," said the tailor, more in sorrow than in anger, "an absolutely ghastly attempt at a collar and lapel. The collar looks as though something had been bitten out of it." Another picture which came in for biting criticism was Mr. Walter W. Oniess' portrait of Mr. H. Hayes, Newington. "It is a fearful attempt at a coat; it is nothing but a desperate smudge."

SIR ISAAC NEWTON'S HOUSE FOR SALE

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 31.

SIR ISAAC NEWTON'S house in Orange street, Leicester square, is for sale. It is doubly famous as a historic, philosophic and literary landmark in a district whose associations link up the memory of many famous folk since departed, for here dwelt also the remarkable Burney family—Dr. Burney and his quiet little mouse of a daughter, Fanny. It was here that Fanny wrote, in secret, the novel that afterward brought her worldwide fame, "Evelina," and here, too, several times a week Dr. Burney held his never to be forgotten literary and musical "tea parties," at which all the wits of the day assembled, and where Fanny gathered so many of the jewels which were afterward to shine in "Evelina."

This was Newton's last London house, and during his residence there, from 1710 to 1727, it was also the rallying place of distinguished persons. Sir Isaac's charming niece, Catherine Barton, kept house for him, and it was a moot point who was the greater attraction to the crowd—the philosopher or the beauty. Here one day on a visit came Dr. Stukeley. Newton was out, though his dinner was awaiting him. After waiting till his patience was exhausted, Stukeley, ever an ardent trencherman, tackled his friend's dinner and polished the whole of it off. Then in came Sir Isaac.

"Give me but leave to take my short dinner," he said, "and I shall be at your service; I am tired and faint." The doctor bowed with some embarrassment. Sir Isaac lifted the cover, and, observing the dinner gone, said, with a quiet smile, "See what we studious people are. I forgot that I had dined.

COMTESSE GREFFULHE'S NOVEL IDEA FOR A FLOATING ART EXHIBITION

THE FRANCE

COMTESSE GREFFULHE.

The France, Splendid Steamship of the French Line, Will Be Used for Education.

TWO GALLERIES OF MODERN ART WORKS

Changes Will Be Made Frequently, the Idea Being to Prove Worth of the Artists of To-Day.

(Special Dispatch.)

PARIS, May 31.

THE steamship France, of the French line, has on board on her present trip from Havre to New York and return an exhibition of French decorative art in showcases fitted in two galleries.

This charming and novel idea was originated in Comtesse Greffulhe, who has done much to encourage the development of a national modern style in France. Her projects are not easy to realize, and credit must be given to the Compagnie Générale Transatlantique for the cordial manner with which it has greeted the idea and has offered the hospitality of its ship to the French decorators, giving them an occasion to prove the diversity and wealth of their creative faculties.

This floating exhibition will show that there still exist artists who in all branches of the applied arts, ceramic, jewelry, crystal, bronzes, embroideries, laces and tapestries, are well the equal of the artists of the past.

This salon of modern French decorative art which this exhibit constitutes contains works of Rodin, Bourdelle, Maillot, Lalique, Methey, Decoeur, Falize and others.

It is purposed to change the exhibits on each trip of the steamship in order to give a chance to as great a number of French artists to become known as is possible.

KING ALFONSO CHEERED BY HOSTS ON HIS RECENT JOURNEY TO PARIS

(Special Dispatch.)

PARIS, May 31.

RIDING the best thoroughbred from the Saumur Cavalry School, King Alfonso, on his recent journey to Paris, galloped with the French troops in exciting manoeuvres carried out by a large force of cavalry, artillery and infantry in the valley of the Solle, near Fontainebleau. The young monarch witnessed a realistic sham fight, riding amid the charging squadrons in company with General Gallain; saw batteries of the much praised French artillery shell and destroy a sham village and afterward watched a march past and a carrousel by a regiment of cavalry, followed by exercises with machine and quick firing guns.

Accompanied by President Poincaré, who called on him at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, King Alfonso drove to the Gare de Lyon through crowds of cheering Parisians and left by a special train for Fontainebleau. The Presidential train reached Fontainebleau station, which was gayly decorated with French and Spanish colors, an hour later. There the King was received by the Prefect of the Department of the Seine-et-Marne, the Mayor and the local authorities.

Escorted by a detachment of dragoons with colored pennants gayly fluttering from the tips of their lances, Don Alfonso and the President drove through the famous forest of Fontainebleau to the manoeuvre ground five kilometres away. With the May sun filtering through the green arch of trees, the drive was a delightful one, and the picturesque country called forth the admiration of the Spanish sovereign.

The valley of the Solle, in which the manoeuvres were held, is nothing but a big clearing in the woods some two kilometres wide by three or four kilometres long. While the bands played the Spanish national anthem and the "Marseillaise" and the troops presented arms, King Alfonso and the President drove along the front of the brigade, each regiment dipping its colors to the two chiefs of State.

Sentiment Figured in the Purchase of th Robert and Elizabeth Browning Love Letters

Mr. Sabin Says He Holds Missives for Ransom, but Will Not Be Extortionate.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 31.

WHEN Mr. Sabin paid $32,750 for the complete collection of the Browning love letters—571 in number—at Messrs. Sotheby's it was no excited bid such as buyers are sometimes impelled to by the competitive fever of the auction room. It was the result of careful calculation made weeks before hand, although the letters themselves had not been read. Indeed, Mr. Sabin says that the price at which the letters were knocked down to him had not nearly reached the maximum he had set for himself, and that, had he been driven to it, he would have given several thousands more.

In describing the line of thought which caused him to put such a high value on the letters, Mr. Sabin confessed that it was not altogether free from sentiment.

"So far," he said, "no statute has been framed against a dealer being sentimental. It may be a weakness, but it is not an indictable offence yet. One is still entitled, though a dealer, to know something of love; to regard it as the greatest and noblest of passions; to recognize that it has been the moving force of humanity since the world began, and to put undoubted faith in its continuance. There is, therefore, no finer subject than letters to be written about, and no possible chance of the subject ever failing to command the keenest interest.

"Without having read the letters it was no gamble to assume that the likely emanations of the minds and hearts of two such persons as Robert and Elizabeth Browning would afford the most fascinating treatment of the mightiest of subjects. That seems to me to be the cold, prosaic reasoning which admits of no element of doubt. From the dealer's point of view I recognized that the purchase would give me a monopoly of the love letters. I obtained them all, consequently I shall face no competition in disposing of them.

"How do I propose to dispose of them? Well, it would be a pity to spread them broadcast all over the world. I am sentimental enough to think they should be kept together, and, for myself, I shall endeavor to sell them in one lot. I shall hold them for ransom—perhaps by the nation. I am not a brigand, and shall not be extortionate, but I do think that such treasures should rightly be numbered among the nation's heirlooms.

"If they are to be separated, there are hundreds of collectors who will be anxious to buy. They can be sold in twos—one of hers, perhaps, with the reply. Treasures are still being collected in Bond street, and now the great continent of America is its best customer. They are good judges in America; they may not all have the keen judgment and good taste of the late Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, whose trips to London used to throw all the dealers into a state of excitement, but they are a very wealthy nation, and wealth is the first necessity to the collector. Now that the tax has been removed on objects of virtu entering America, provided they are at least a hundred years old, the trade in curios has increased greatly, and, it may be added, many articles have suddenly increased in age. The Browning letters are dated, but nevertheless many of them may find their way across the Atlantic if my hope of selling them in one complete lot is not realized."

LADY ARTIST SMOKED WHILE SHE PAINTED

Suffragette Artist Puffs Cigarette in Royal Academy, Despite Mr. Sargent.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 31.

SUFFRAGETTES have done many bold things, but the committee of the Royal Academy think they have never done anything so bold as the outrage one of them committed on varnishing day.

A lady artist whose picture had been "skied" by the hanging committee came on varnishing day to put the finishing touches to her masterpiece. She mounted one of the scaffoldings provided for the purpose, and then, to the horror and amazement of the other artists, produced a cigarette, lighted it, and calmly smoked as she tickled the picture with her brush. A cigarette, of course, is a forbidden thing in the Royal Academy. Hints that her conduct was out of order the lady ignored; the curt reproof of an attendant called forth another cigarette from its case, and sent a used match to the floor.

At last the great Sargent himself came with puckered brows to remonstrate—without avail. The rebel went on with her work and her smoke, finished the two together, packed up, got down and went on her way without a flicker.

England Making Progress in Naval Air Machines

Cruiser Selected Fitted with Platforms for Launching Aeroplanes and with Appliances for Repairs, and Chain of Air Stations Being Established Around Coast.

WAR SHIP BUILDERS CONSTRUCTING AIR CRAFT

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 31.

THE agitation about what is called the air peril threatening this country came to a somewhat lame and impotent conclusion with the meeting at the Mansion House. Public opinion refuses to be unduly alarmed or excited by statements to the effect that since Blériot crossed the Channel Great Britain is no longer an island, that Germany has conquered the air, and that as a result the command of the sea is of little value to England. It must be admitted that the flamboyant resolutions originally drafted for the Mansion House meeting were considerably toned down before being proposed, and that a more reasonable judgment, born of fuller knowledge, was reflected in the speeches than was apparent in the early announcements about the meeting.

The fact is that it is beginning to be more generally realized that the naval and military authorities are making steady progress in aeronautics along the lines best calculated to provide machines suitable for war purposes and an organization for them which will harmonize with the defence policy of the country. The commissioning of a parent vessel for hydro-aeroplanes is a sign of advance. The cruiser Hermes, which has been selected for this duty, will not be a nominal headquarters for the aeroplane section of the naval wing, but a seagoing tender, fitted with platforms for launching machines into flight, and with appliance for repairing air craft. Captain G. W. Vivian and Commander F. R. Scarlett, who have been appointed to the Hermes, have both taken aerial pilots' certificates.

Difficulties Easily Overcome.

Any delay in regard to the acquisition of machines has been mainly attributable to the difficulty, first, in deciding upon types most capable of naval and military work, and secondly, in getting such types of craft manufactured. These difficulties appear likely to be quickly surmounted. The War Office has evolved an aeroplane which some authorities assert to be the best of its kind for military purposes. The Admiralty is working in the direction of providing an efficient naval machine, but a type which satisfies it sufficiently to warrant its multiplication in large numbers does not yet appear to have been found.

Experiments must, therefore, continue with such aircraft as are available. These include many varieties, and new machines are constantly being obtained, not only hydro-aeroplanes, such as the Borel and and Farman machines added recently, but biplanes and monoplanes of the Deperdusain, Candron, Sopwith and Avro types, all to be tried from a naval standpoint.

The task has also been allotted to the naval wing of deciding which of the several types of dirigible airships is best suited for combined land and sea warfare, in which connection the co-operation of the big war ship building firms, like Vickers & Armstrong, will be of great assistance. Besides an Astra-Torres airship, the Admiralty are purchasing a Parseval through Messrs. Vickers, who, taking the Parseval design as a basis, may be expected to evolve a new naval airship in the same way that they produced the successful British submarines from the original Holland designs. With their valuable resources in capital, research laboratories and experience of what is required for naval and military purposes, these large manufacturers of war material are at an advantage in deciding to undertake air craft construction. Several of them, including Messrs. Vickers, Limited; the Coventry Ordnance Works and Messrs. White, Limited, the torpedo boat builders of Cowes are already aeroplane or hydro-aeroplane constructors.

Chain of Air Stations.

Meanwhile, a chain of air stations is being established around the coast of Great Britain, each in charge of a flight commander of the Royal Naval Corps, and the stations at Grain, in the Medway; Calshot, on Southampton Water; Great Yarmouth and Harwich are already in use, while others are being rapidly provided.

It was recently remarked in the Army and Navy Gazette that the need of the navy is for hydro-aeroplanes that can be carried conveniently in a ship, and for airships that can carry sea boats. The fact that in Great Britain, France and Germany hydro-aeroplanes are to take part in naval manoeuvres during the summer will invest the latter with added interest, and some valuable lessons should be learned by all three Powers.

Huth Library Sale Is Near

Third Portion, To Be Sold This Month, Contains Many Rare Volumes.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 31.

THE catalogue of the third portion of the Huth Library, which is to be dispersed by Messrs. Sotheby in nine days, beginning next Monday, was issued last week. It comprises 1,335 lots under letters E to R, inclusive. To mention all the treasures enumerated would be impossible, but there is to be noted a single Caxton, Gower's "Confessio Amantis," of which Blades records only five perfect copies. This copy has 218 leaves, and eighteen leaves are in fac-simile. In general condition it is described as clean and sound, and free from stains and worm holes.

Among the Erasmus entries there is a Wynkyn de Worde, "A Lytell Booke of Good Maners for Chyldren," 1532; and other works from the same press are Bishop Fisher's "Treatise Concerning the Fruitfull Sayings of David," 1535 edition; his funeral sermon on Henry VII., 1509; "Fruit of Redemption," an unusual 1539 edition; Walter Hilton's "Scala Perfectionis," the 1494 edition, the second book printed by De Worde in his own name, and also that of 1533; and Stephen Hawes' "Example of Virtue," 1530. In specially high type appears another, "Gallant," possibly by John Lydgate. The only other copy known is in the British Museum; this one is mutilated and restored, and several pages facsimiled having originally been taken from the covers of another book.

Of great names besides Erasmus falling in this portion of the library, Fielding Goldsmith and Holbein head long series including first editions of "Tom Jones," "The Vicar of Wakefield" and the "Historiarum Veteris Instrumenti Icones." There are also long series under John Evelyn, Fisher, Bishop of Rochester; Richard Flecknoe, Phineas Fletcher, John Ford, Dr. Thomas Fuller, Robert Greene (the only known first edition of "Second Part of Connie-Catching" and first edition of "Euphues, His Censure to Philautus" and "Ciceronis Amor," of which the only other known copies are in the British Museum), John Heywood, Thomas Heywood ("London's Ius Honorarium," the original edition—possibly Garrick's, and the only known copy) and James Howell.

There are fifteen entries under Homer. Some quaint lines are quoted from the first translation of the Iliad in an English dress, 1581:—

"Had not Juno spit on her hands and taken better hold."

Under Horace are fifteen entries. The "Horaes" number more than forty, and among the individual treasures noted are "The Boke of Mayd Emlyn" (c. 1530), a unique and perfect copy, formerly in the Caldicott and Daniel libraries; and "Four Leaves of True Love" (Wynkyn de Worde). There are also Stephen Hawes' "Conversyon of Swerers" (edition about 1540), and a volume on "Hawking," Augsburg 1497.

An almanac of Thomas Hills for 1577 has blank pages for a diary, and these and all other available spaces are covered with interesting notes by some former owner, who used it as a commonplace book. The first edition of Froissart in English, by Pynson, 1523-5, bears the autograph of Jane, Countess of Southampton.

Among the collections catalogued are a scrapbook of fragments of early printed and rare books, two volumes of rare pieces relating to France during the civil wars of the sixteenth century, and 383 of Hogarth's prints mounted in three imperial folio volumes.

TO TEACH RUSSIAN DANCES IN ENGLAND

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, May 31.

THE triumph of the Russian dancers in England is about to have a practical result in the establishment of what is called a university of dancing and miming. The London Opera House has initiated the enterprise, and the university will be under the supervision of Mr. Theodore Kosloff, of the Imperial Russian Ballet.

Mr. Kosloff, who is the inventor and producer of "The Rose of Ispahan" ballet in the review "Come Over Here," has been greatly impressed by the lack of facilities in England for a proper training in dancing and miming. There are fine dancing schools at St. Petersburg and Moscow, and it is Mr. Kosloff's object to conduct one on a similar scale in London.

The thoroughness with which the training is to be given will be realized by the fact that the educational courses are to include sculpture and painting, the study of which, Mr. Kosloff holds, to be essential to the perfect dancer.

The true dances of the ancients have never yet, according to Mr. Kosloff, been produced. In order to remedy this deficiency he has made a close study of ancient monuments, and intends to teach these dances in London. The university will be conducted in the London Opera House, and the teachers, who will be brought from Russia, will include Professor Safonoff, who is attached to the Imperial Russian Ballet.

Already 300 applications have been received from many society ladies and well known English professional dancers.

It is held that this thorough training in dancing is good for the health and promotes vitality. Professor Safonoff is seventy-three years of age, and one of Mr. Korsoff's own tutors, "Petit Pas," though ninety-three years old, is said to be able to trip it with the youngest.

Any Excuse for Indolence.

Washington Star:—"The time for gardening is here again," said the cheery suburbanite.

"Yes," replied Mr. Growcher: "but we want to take these pastimes in moderation. This craze for gardening is what is getting the Japanese into trouble out in California."

EMPRESS ARRIVES AFTER QUIET TRIP

C.P.R. RAILWAY DEPARTMENT GETS SPECIAL TRAIN OFF IN RECORD TIME

The C. P. R. Co.'s R. M. S. Empress of Britain, Captain James Murray, from Liverpool, May 30th, arrived in port at 4 p.m. yesterday.

When the steamer was safely moored alongside the Breakwater there was the usual rush of people to get on board, but Commander Walsh, marine superintendent of the C. P. R., used his usual good judgment in picking out those who had business on board the ship and those who had not. The latter had to stand aside, the commander handling the people with tact and skill.

The Empress of Britain brought out 186 first, 465 second and 872 third class passengers, a very heavy mail and a general cargo.

Captain Murray reports a moderate passage with head winds and clear weather, and no eventful incident.

There was a rapid piece of work performed in connection with the arrival of the Empress, which reflects credit on the railway department of the C. P. R. The steamer was moored at 4.30 p.m. at the dock, and at 4.45 p.m. the special train consisting of a dining car, two sleepers and baggage car, conveying Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, G. C. B., D. S. O.; Colonel Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, and others to Ottawa, left for its destination. This is doubtless a record.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

McDonald & Lesperance, stock brokers, private wire to New York and Montreal, Hochelaga Bank Building. Telephone 1227.

(Canadian Press Service.)

New York., June 6—Although not free from periods of unsettlement, the stock market today showed a distinct improvement, culminating in an emphatic exhibition of strength which lifted many important shares well above the previous day's close. By comparison with the preceding days of the week, there was little in the way of pressing liquidation. In certain quarters of the list, particularly among the specialties, there was evidence of forced selling, which brought about some severe declines. The leaders, however, were in much better demand.

Opening prices were generally higher, but the early gains were eliminated gradually, as the market was undermined by heavy selling of Atchison, the petroleum shares, Can and some other shares which developed weakness. The movement was accelerated by a sharp bear raid, in which a number of new low records for the long decline were reached. The market quickly recovered its poise, however, and under the influence of spirited buying of the leaders, rose steadily to the end of the session.

A factor in bringing about the smart upturn late in the day was the appearance of Washington advices stating there was no ground for recent rumors circulated in Wall street concerning the attitude of the administration toward certain large corporations. The chief demand for stocks, however, came from the shorts. The market appeared to have reached an oversold condition, and the failure of the bears to induce fresh liquidation by reading the market led to active covering.

The market was helped by cessation of pressure from abroad. Cable despatches reported a more cheerful feeling in London. Trading here for London account was on a small scale, and transactions were about evenly divided between purchases and sales.

A gain in cash of $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 for the week was indicated by known movements of currency. Time money was strong and foreign exchange rates made another advance.

Considerable weakness appeared in numerous bonds, with some recovery later in sympathy with the rise in stocks. Total sales, par value, $2,042,000.

United States 2's registered declined ⅞ on call.

NEW YORK MARKET LETTER.

Received over the private wire of McDougall & Cowans, stock brokers. Phone 4076.

New York, June 6—As a whole this afternoon's market has had the best recovery in a week. Led by Canadian all the active stocks recovered considerably although there were many stocks that lagged behind the general market stocks in which there is little or no short interest. There was no special reason for the recovery other than the market the low level developed a power to absorb liquidation and short sales and when liquidation ceased, stocks rallied quickly on short covering and bullish traders buying for a turn. The possibility of a favorable decision being handed down by the court in the Minnesota rate case next Monday may have been a factor in inducing this rally.

There was also a considerable recovery in the bond market. Reading rose over 2, Union 2, the Tobacco stocks advanced about 6 and Canadian some 5 points above last night's finals.

The close was at about the best levels of the day. Total sales 595,000 shares.

CLOSING MARKET LETTER.

By private wire to Neuville Belleau & Co., 93 St. Peter street, Quebec. Phones 946, 4076.

New York, June 6—The opening prices were favorably affected by London's quotations, which were fractionaly higher, with the exception of Canadan Pacific, which gained 2½ points, and Union Pacific 1 point.

Southern Pacific opened down ⅝ on the announcement of $30,000,000 note issue, making new loan record.

After rallying slightly the market started again on the downward track and at the end of the first hour liquidation broke out afresh in large volume, nearly 170,000 shares being dealt in between 11 and 12 o'clock.

Atchison was attacked and driven down sharply a couple of points and the rest of the list suffered in corresponding degree.

In the afternoon, particularly, in the last hour, short covering rallied, the market and advances extended to two points or more in many issues. Union Pacific gaining 3 points and Canada Pacific 4 points.

Investment inquiry is more apparent and some substantial purchases were recorded.

One of the leading dealers in the city is said to have re-entered the market after an absence of some months and to have bought 50,000 shares of stocks.

The May earnings of the Great Northern Railway show a gain of $1,209,247 in gross.

It is to be hoped that this will not all be swallowed up in the net.

It was reported from Washington that the President was not in favor of reopening the Standard Oil or the Tobacco Company's case.

This caused a rapid advance in the shares of these companies.

Canadian Pacific semed over-sold and the shorts had difficulty in getting back their stock, as a result the closing was between 5 and 6 points higher for the day.

Mr. Schiff, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. is out in an optimistic interview.

The closing prices were strong on the recovery and at about the best for the day.

At present it looks as though the rally might continue somewhat further and we would hold off from selling for the time being.

FINANCIAL WORRY IN ALL EUROPE

POLITICIANS AND FINANCIERS UNABLE TO EXPLAIN ITS PROBABLE EXTENT.

New York, June 6.—A Sun London cable says:

Anxiety for the future is reflected on all the Bourses of Europe, while the political situation is improved, yet every market is depressed. Many separate causes are assigned.

Public confidence in Great Britain is disturbed by fear of labor troubles, the ceaseless play of militant energy on the part of suffragettes, and the continental apprehensions of a hitch in the Balkan settlement.

Everywhere there is an excessive multiplication of securities and the increase in the liabilities of the underwriters is disquicting.

With proper weight given to all these factors, politicians and financial men are unable, however, to account for the unprecedented extent of the reigning depression. English observers attribute some of it to fear of the French decision to extend the term of compulsory military service to three years.

This, it is believed, resulted not so much from the German army increase as from a demand on the part of Russia that France should create for itself and thus for the Dual Alliance a still more formidable military weapon than it possesses.

The French proposal is tantamount to taking a year out of the industrial life of the people, and imposes great sacrifices on the individual soldier. The English think that the plan can be carried through only by arousing the country to a patriotic fever that will cause unrest throughout Europe.

IL MAESTRO DI CAPELLA OLD AND NEW OPERA

Although it was first produced away back in 1821, when its composer was maitre de chapelle for Napoleon in Paris, the hilarious tabloid opera, "Il Maestro di Cappella," is accepted by music lovers now-a-days as the property of Signor Antonio Pini-Corsi, of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York. Pini-Corsi, about whose supremacy as the greatest basso buffo of the world there can be no argument, is known as the only living singer able correctly to interpret the part of Barnaba.

"Il Maestro di Cappella" can perhaps best be described as a droll and beautiful bit of musical badinage. It will have particular appeal here, for the reason that it delights not only the musical "high brows," but also those who usually prefer ragtime to classic music. The whole program has been framed to please at once and the same time those who are stern music lovers and those who simply like delightful music.

SOME PEOPLE THOUGHT

There would be no flood; Noah sailed alone and
"They got left."
That Doc Cook discovered the North Pole; he didn't and
That the Giants would take the World's Series; they didn't and
That the 'gettes weren't in earnest; they were and
"They got left."
That bargains in bags can be found every day; they can't and
Moral: See Walsh's ad. on first page.

BUSINESS COMMANDMENTS.

Every business man is or should be interested in the development of the moral side of his business, and anything that tends to make for the raising of the standards of ethics in business should prove of interest, and this is our excuse for reprinting from our contemporary, "How," the following "New Commandments for Business Men; Ten, Count 'Em":

1. Thou shalt not wait for something to turn up, but you shall pull off your coat and go to work that thoy mayest prosper in thy affairs and make the work "failure" spell "success."

2. Thou shalt not be content to go about thy business looking like a loafer, for thou shouldest know thy personal appearance is better than a letter of recommendation.

3. Thou shalt not try to make excuses, nor shalt thou say to those who chide thee, "I didn't think."

4. Thou shalt not wait to be told what thou shalt do, nor in what manner thou shalt do it, for thus may thy days be long in the job which fortune hath given thee.

5 Thou shalt not fail to maintain thine own integrity, nor shalt thou be guilty of anything that will lessen thy good respect for thyself.

6. Thou shalt not covet the othe. fellow's job, nor his salary, nor the position that he hath gained by his own hard labor.

7. Thou shalt not fail to live within thy income, nor shalt thou contract any debts when thou canst not see thy way clear to pay them.

8. Thou shalt not be afraid to blow thine own horn, for he who failest to blow his own horn at the proper occasion findest nobody standing ready to blow it for him.

9. Thou shalt not hesitate to say "no" when thou meanest "no," nor shalt thou fail to remember that there are times when it is unsafe to bind thyself by a hasty judgment.

10. Thou shalt give every man a square deal. This is the last and great commandment, and there is no other like unto it. Upon this commandment hang all the laws and profits of the business world.

ALL DEPENDS.

Harriet was a very precocious little girl. One evening a friend of the family was asking her some questions in mental arithmetic.

"How old would a person be who was born in 1872?" he asked.

Harriet thought for a moment, then: "Was the person a man or a woman?"—Sunday Magazine.
