Collectors can learn a lot just by studying a good stamp catalogue

According to the Oxford and Webster's dictionary, the meaning of catalogue is: arranged according to subjects or branches of subjects, complete list, usually alphabetical or under headings. Nowhere does it mention the price of articles in a catalogue.

In the case of philately, many collectors buy a catalogue for the price of stamps only, rather than the content. One can learn a lot simply by taking the time to study a catalogue completely.

Scott's Standard Postage Stamp Catalogue is generally the catalogue accepted by philatelists in North America. These come in four volumes plus a U.S. specialized. If one collects British Commonwealth stamps only, Volume I is sufficient. However, when it comes to Canada, the Volume I is far from being complete. The feature of each issue only is listed.

Should Canada be one of the countries in which you specialize, then you will have to go to one of the so-called specialized catalogues available. The main ones are

Stamp corner

By Peter McCarthy

Scott's Specialized Catalogue of Canadian Stamps, Canada Specialized Postage Stamp Catalogue, Lyman's Canada British North America Postage Stamp Catalogue, Darnell's, who now have an English version of their French catalogue and, the new kid on the block, The New Canada B.N.A. Standard Catalogue. The one good feature of this catalogue is the price: $2.95. The illustrations are so small, one almost needs a magnifying glass to make them out.

One certainly can't recommend one catalogue over the other. They are pretty much all the same. There are a lot of cosmetics that have been applied, the biggest being the separate numbering system. Outside of causing much controversy, I don't really see what it's adding to philately. Whichever one you are considering will certainly be far better than Scott's volume I in so far as Canadian Stamps are concerned. These specialized catalogues are very inconsistent when it comes to the listing of varieties. What you will find in one, will not necessarily be listed in another.

In order to specialize within Canada, one or more of the many study groups catalogues will be necessary. Here are a few examples.

If you are a beginner or relatively new to specializing, I would recommend you start with the Caricature and Landscape Definitives of Canada. David Gronbeck-Jones has published a study on this series which must also be classified as a catalogue, for it lists the complete issue in order. From this issue you will learn a lot about tags, perfs, papers and methods of printing. The catalogue is really an in depth yet simplified study of the issue.

Douglas C. Irwin and Murray Freedman are the editors of Canada, The 1967-1873 Definitive Issue. I think it's safe to say that this is the most complete study of this issue to be found. This is a 112-page, 8½ inch by 11 format catalogue that deals with every phase of the issue, from the first printing, to the different tags, booklets, shades of paper, gum, ink shades, fluorescent grades, pre cancels, coils, cello paks, perforations, varieties and much much more.

Canadian Railway Cancellations and related Transportation Postmarks by Lewis M. Ludlow catalogues all railway post office (R.P.O.) cancellations known. This is a very interesting facet of Canadian philately.

The one thing missing from these last three catalogues are prices, and well they should be. In the case of R.P.O.'s, one can't put a price on a cancellation they may appear on several different denominations of stamps.

The idea of catalogues is not necessarily to have one collect to the extent of the study but, to have as a reference and as a classifier of the material you have on hand.

There are other specialized catalogues available. We'll be looking at these as we talk of other segments of Canadian philately. In the meantime, as you look at the various catalogues on the market, select for material content rather than the pricing.

Not too likely, but worth hoping

Well, another year bites the dust. And for wine drinkers it most certainly had its ups and downs.

The tainted wine scandals that affected Austria and Italy signified perhaps the low point of 1986 for the industry as a whole. While in Quebec, the government's continuing attempt at wringing every last tax dollar from the sale of alcoholic beverages made everyone's Christmas just a little less merry.

At the other end of the scale was the introduction of 'draft' wine which allowed Quebecers to purchase a reasonably good vin ordinaire at prices generally affordable.

Also worth praising was the Société des Alcools' attempt at finding newer and cheaper sources of quality wine. Several new offerings from Italy, France, Eastern Europe and South America proved to be not only tasty but popular.

There still remain several lingering questions however. Why is it that the SAQ refuses to stock wines from the many excellent small wineries in Ontario and British Columbia? While the rest of the country can enjoy wines from Inniskillen, Chateau des Charmes, Grey Monk, Colio, Hillebrand, and Sumac Ridge, Quebecers must remain satisfied with dozens of inferior so-called Quebec-produced wines which are made from imported grapes and concentrates.

At the same time, why does the government still give preferential tax treatment to domestically produced wines at the expense of wines from Europe, the United States and Australia? Surely the test of a wine worth producing is in the tasting.

With any luck 1987 will see the government come to its senses and order a roll back of prices, a reduction in tariffs and a more sensible attitude towards one of nature's true gifts. Failing that, a rise in the value of the Canadian dollar would be equally welcome. I know. Not too likely but worth hoping. Cheers!

NEW YORK (AP) — Diane Sawyer, who has renewed her contract as a correspondent on the top-rated 60 Minutes news show, will draw a salary of about $1 million US, a source at the network said. The source asked not to be named.

The new agreement calls for Sawyer to continue her work with 60 Minutes and includes "upcoming CBS projects" still in the planning stages, CBS spokesman Ramona Dunn said Monday.

Under her previous contract, which expires at the end of the week, she earned $800,000 a year, Dunn said.

HONOLULU (AP) — Singer Tom Jones says he tries to add just the right measure of sensuality to his performances to wow the audience but stay out of trouble.

Jones, 46, who is performing two shows in Waikiki, including a New Year's Eve performance, said he keeps physically fit, adding that he "can't get too serious about sex" during his act.

"Try to push sex blatantly, and you're in trouble," he said. "But have fun with it, and the audiences love it. An entertainer should feel sexy in front of his audience."

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Actress Mary Martin will receive an Albert Schweitzer Medal for Artistry for contributions to the American Broadway musical.

Martin's son, Larry Hagman, and her daughter Heller will award the medal to her April 8 in Wilmington, N.C., Jim Burns, executive director for the Albert Schweitzer medals for artistry, said Monday from Wilmington.

The actress accepted the nomination for the award when contacted in her motel room in Fort Lauderdale, where she is appearing in a play.

Previous winners of the Schweitzer prizes include actress Helen Hayes and Spoleto Festival founder Gian Carlo Menotti.

From now on it will be plain old Eaton and Zeller

It's resolution time!

Yup, 1987 is right around the corner and it's time to make all those foolish promises that last about as long as a Joe Clark government. Last year I promised not to be mean to Brian Baloney but the temptation was far too great. This year might be different, however, especially with Bill Vander Zalm around to take up some of the burden of being Canada's biggest horse's whist.

Any way, here goes for 1987.

First off, in the spirit of linguistic peace, I promise not to put apostrophies in any of those offensive English-language store names. From now on it will be just plain old Eaton and Zeller. I'll also ask George MacLaren to set an example by removing all that unnecessary English from office signs. You know the ones — "Danger", "In case of fire break glass", "Keep away from children", etc. I might even stop reading bilingual road signs. After all if the tourists don't need things like "One way only", "This lane ends 300m" and "Oncoming buses in left lane", neither do I.

I also promise not to refer to Margaret Thatcher as Attila the

Who's who

By TADEUSZ LETARTE

Hen any more, nor will I accuse her of being so far right she makes Ghengis Khan look liberal. (Actually she's so far to the right she makes John Turner look liberal. But that's another story.

And while I'm at it, I promise not to refer to Sheila Copp's shrill voice, John Crosbie's weight problem, Bourassa's nose, or Bryce Mackasey's anything for an entire year.

Furthermore, I resolve not to mention the Canadian Senate in a derogatory manner in 1987. As a matter of fact, I even promise not to wake them if you don't.

As a special resolution I also resolve not to criticise television sports announcers no matter how many dumb things they say. Since they usually manage to make about seven ridiculous comments a minute, this will be a toughy but I promise to bite my lip. On second thought, this resolution will become null and void if O.J. Simpson is involved or Howard Cosell comes out of retirement. As a matter of fact I better include John Madden, Dick Irving, Howie Meeker, Frank Gifford and anybody working for ABC.

Finally, I promise not to malign Tim Raines or Andre Dawson even if they don't get picked up by another team and have to return to those rotten Expos who only want to pay them peanuts. Seven-figure peanuts to be sure, but still peanuts.

*This resolution is only valid if Mr. Mackasey stays in retirement even if offered the ambassadorship to Albania.

In 1987, Tadeusz promises not to accuse Margaret Thatcher of being so far right she makes Ghengis Khan look liberal.

Legal drama will suffer from deadly time slot

By Bill Anderson

TORONTO (CP) — As so often happens, CBC's newest series is a mix of noble ideas and bad timing.

Street Legal, a prime-time drama about young urban lawyers, premieres Jan. 6 with the aim of capturing the zip and sizzle of life in a Canadian metropolis.

But it comes on the schedule in a deadly time slot — on Tuesdays opposite Moonlighting, the ABC and CTV hit — and almost four months after the launch of two legal shows.

L.A. Law, a sort of Hill Street Blues with lawyers, caught on with audiences when was launched this fall on Friday nights. It was recently moved by NBC to Thursday, where it immediately picked up more viewers following the four hottest shows in television.

Meanwhile, veteran TV star Andy Griffith has made a success of Matlock, a canny, homespun lawyer who appears on NBC and CTV in the hour before Moonlighting.

ONLY SIX WEEKS

Street Legal has two additional problems — its newness to the schedule and a run of only six weeks until it reappears next season.

Despite all this, the series will still be a modest reward for those who find it — if only because of the stunning visual images of Toronto.

In the best tradition of entertainment dreamscapes, Toronto appears far more scintillating and beautiful on screen than it is in real life.

Some viewers may not want to look at Toronto in any light, owing to a long-established prejudice against the city in many parts of the country. But Toronto appears so glistening, so glamorous — so hot — that it may stir some national pride in even the hardest regional hearts.

MUST IMPROVE

Alas, pretty pictures alone do not make a series (Miami Vice also has great music) and Street Legal must improve on the flat dialogue and casual pace if it is to rise above the mere visual appeal of the first episode.

The opening hour tries to sketch the characters of the three principals: beautiful but human Carrie Barr; brilliant but modest Leon Robinovitch; and ambitious but loyal Chuck Tchobanian.

The names of the characters are a poor choice, because they break the writing adage about keeping names simple and distinct. Carrie is close to Chuck, while Robinovitch and Tchobanian will be a blur to anyone not of eastern European descent.

But the crucial problem, as with any new series, is creating characters who somehow engage the audience enough to tune in again seven days later. And this is where the first hour of Street Legal falls short.

Base makes Cannes festival atmosphere seem authentic

Foreign Object by Ron Base (DOUBLEDAY): $18.95, 298 pp.

Ron Base, film critic for Toronto's Star, revives what looks like a serial character in Foreign Object, as he brings back the hero of his first novel Matinee Idol, named Tom Coward, who just happens to be an entertainment journalist who covers film for the dailies.

In this mildly amusing, if predictable, novel, Coward arrives at Cannes, France for the annual film festival, allowing writer Base to cash in on many of the character types and filmdom stereotypes he has encountered in his job to add the local color to what is a rather thin book.

Coward knows the whole gamut of Cannes folk, from the mysterious, sexy nymph who turns to him for protection in a bar, embroiling him in sudden bit of violence with a craggy-faced hood known as Rakko; to the mother/daughter act so reminiscent of Brooke Shields and her show bizzy mom; to the sleazy producer who has a non-stop, revolving casting couch where he promises exciting leads in major films to aspiring porno flick stars, only to have to inform them that they didn't pass the audition.

As Coward freelances around the steamy French film capitol, Foreign Object provides the reader with what must be the ambience of the international festival, with parties and promiscuity the order of the day. Beneath the glittery facade of quick deals and megabuck pictures such as the epic Saudi being hyped at the Cannes Festival that unfolds, is an undercurrent of death and violence that begins when movie financier Sir Cecil House and his yacht full of guests are stabbed and his seventy foot Hatteras craft burns off St. Tropez.

With the Festival unfolding in the midst of its usual hype and sensationalism, Tom Coward tries to locate the haunting female who led him into the scrap with Rakko, and becomes doubly perplexed when the wife of Saudi's producer bears a striking resemblance to the mystery lady.

Kaleidoscope

By RICHARD LONEY

After he has been seduced by Dieter Voss's wife Corinne, Tom Coward finds that the producer will go to any lengths to secure a property for filming — in this case it's Coward's first book — even supplying his wife's body for his potential partner's satisfaction.

If Ron Base has been at all attentive to the goings on at the numerous Cannes Festivals he has covered for his paper, then the outrageous happenings in Foreign Object probably have a great deal of verisimilitude about them — in any event they certainly sound authentic.

There are American filmmakers pushing a junky moneymaker titled Buns; a three hundred pound tub of guts resembling Sydney Greenstreet, known as "the Director", who holds court in a Cannes watering-hole regaling the unwashed with his priceless tales of early Orson Welles, or Bob Mitchum cadging a free feel of an Italian starlet's obvious assets; plus lots of talk about picture financing and how deals are constructed from thin air with everyone talking about getting certain percentages of the properties.

Ron Base makes it sound authentic, and as a mystery read, while P.D. James it is not, it is a glimpse of a world that we hear about each year, which, after Foreign Object, will not seem as impossibly "Hollywood" as it often appears.

RECORD REVIEWS

Cheap Trick THE DOCTOR (COLUMBIA)

Always one of the few rock groups who have tongues firmly implanted in cheeks when they put on their shows, Rick Nielsen & Robin Zander bring their sense of the outrageous to their latest Cheap Trick album THE DOCTOR.

Nielson's guitars and the most consistently weird collection of hats in all of rock, plus Zander's Rod Stewart blowsy & blonde, teased and tuff visual aspects never overpower the music with Trick. Clever lyrics, double entendres rampant underlie the songs by Nielson, singly, or in tandem with Zander, such as the title track with its cute slant on the Doctor Feel Good angle.

Or there's the smoking track "Good Girls Go To Heaven (Bad Girls Go Everywhere)", wherein Cheap Trick make music out of obvious social observation. If only Prince, Corey Hart and others of the pouty ilk could see how stilted and phoney they look when compared to the nuttiness of Cheap Trick the current State of Rock might not be so laughable.

Jennifer Warnes FAMOUS BLUE RAINCOAT (ATTIC-CAPITOL)

A sketch on the sleeve of this exceptional album suggests that Ms. Warnes was going to title it JENNY SINGS LENNY, but instead it bears the imprint of one of the Leonard Cohen songs that really gets classed up, thanks to the wondrous pipes of this too seldom heard vocalist.

Making it onto several "Best Of 1986" composites, Jennifer Warnes's album brings a degree of tunefulness that is not always present when Lenny sings Lenny, to put it diplomatically. Wonderful performances from session aides such as Stevie Ray Vaughan on "First We Take Manhattan", surprising appearances by Van Dyke Parks who arranged "A Singer Must Die" and plays synths and accordion on "Come So Far For Beauty", or Bill Payne's arrangements on "Ain't No Cure For Love", happily conspire to make this a superb album.

Those who have been less than thrilled with Cohen's own monotone offerings on his own creations will find that Jennifer Warnes and the musicians here give each tune an ambience all its own, shifting moods as easily as poet Cohen slides from image to image.

From the country rock of "Coming Back To You" with David Lindley's lap steel and Freddie Tackett's guitar, to the aching emotion of the title track, Jennifer Warnes wraps her voice box around these songs in memorable fashion on this sleeper of '86.

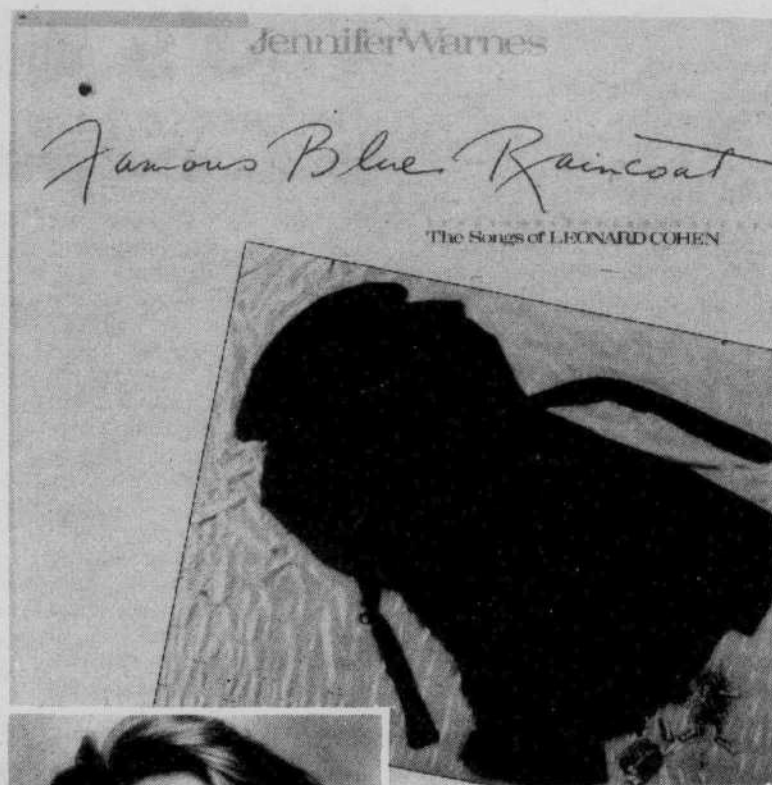

VIDEO SCREENINGS

POLTERGEIST II-THE OTHER SIDE (MGM-UA)

In this sequel the emphasis shifts away from the little girl who receives psychic messages from her television to the whole family's battle against a morbid stranger dressed as a preacher. The preacher is of course the Beast in disguise and once again this typical American family is put through the wringer of real and imagined horrors in a film that is every bit as scary as the original with director Brian Gibson getting even, if predictable, performances from the cast.

DOWN AND OUT IN BEVERLY HILLS (TOUCHSTONE HOME VIDEO)

A lighthearted, satirical movie about culture clashes, this one features burly Nick Nolte as a happy-go-lucky bum who drops into the Beverly Hills mansion of Richard Dreyfuss and Bette Midler on a low moment as he decides to end it all by a suicidal dip in Dreyfuss's pool. Upon his rescue, Nolte brings some social insights to the millionaire's family, with next door neighbour Orvis Goodnight, played by rock-ex Little Richard, providing some classic little cameo moments in this funny film.

RUNAWAY TRAIN (MGM/UA)

Of the two Jon Voight films currently in video release, this one is the action-packed, violence-oriented thriller that shows a side of the American actor not often exploited. As Manny, a prison hero because of his defiance of any authority, he escapes from a maximum security institution, and reluctantly takes along as his accomplice a green, young inmate named Buck, played by the very talented newcomer (The Pope of Greenwich Village, The Coca Cola Kid) Eric Roberts.

The escapees hop aboard an ill-fated, runaway train and in a forced isolation situation as the train hurtles along, Voight and Roberts find out some interesting truths about their respective oddball characters. Their unsuspecting guest is a young railway worker named Sara, played by Rebecca DeMornay, who is a foil to each of these social misfits.

For a movie in which not a great deal outside of a basic chase sequence happens, RUNAWAY TRAIN has a remarkable build-up of intensity and features some excessive physical violence.

DESERT BLOOM (RCA/COLUMBIA)

Voight's other movie is an understated, moody piece about America in 1950, as a family comes to terms with the end of the Second World War, the beginnings of nuclear awareness, and the unfortunate setbacks of the Korean War.

Voight's Jack, married to Lily

(Marybeth Williams), is a WWII veteran, haunted by the war and anguish about his wounded leg, who is attempting to be a good stepfather to Lily's three daughters. Eeking out a meagre living with his gas station on the outskirts of Las Vegas, as the nuclear community in the nearby desert is building up for some of the fateful early 50's testing, Voight's compelling characterization of Jack builds in intensity as Lily's sister Starr, an eye-catching sexpot, played by Ellen Barkin, comes to stay with the family.

As Jack's alcoholism and delirium worsen, a further complication develops as Lily's oldest daughter Rose (very adroitly played by newcomer Annabeth Gish) begins to find herself embroiled in personality conflicts with her brooding stepfather. The tensions created by the rumors about the effects of the atomic bomb being detonated in the desert are equally developed within the character played by Voight, as he simmers on the screen, exuding a controlled hostility that threatens to devastate his family at any moment.

As if any confirmation were needed, DESERT BLOOM reveals that Jon Voight is an American actor of rare brilliance.

'Anti-grog law' made people confoundedly mean

This text, published in the New York Times Saturday, Aug. 10, 1867, was mailed to me by Mr. Alex Greene of Rockville, Maryland, (October 5, 1986) and since it is impossible to keep the flavor of this text unless published in its entirety we will do it in many parts. Today we are presenting Part II and next week we will give you his impression of the lake itself.

And this leads me to indulge a few words with regard to the "Maine law", as it exists in Vermont. Here is a State with something over 300,000 inhabitants in which the most rigid kind of a proof the Société d'Histoire du Lac Memphremagog Inc.

hibitory law has been strictly enforced now for over fifteen years, during which time there has not been a place within the limits of the State where a glass of liquor of any kind could be legally sold or purchased.

I have been all over the State this Summer, and have not seen in my travels thus far a single person in the least degree intoxicated, except it was now and then a visitor from New York or Boston, at the watering places. I find, moreover, that public opinion throughout the State everywhere sustains the law, and am told that it has been growing more and more unanimous each year since the law was enacted. Indeed, you will rarely hear any one at the present day, not even those who were, and still are, what may be called habitual drinkers, make any objection to the law. They all admit that the rising generation are reaping untold benefits from the enforcement of the law, and are willing that it shall remain on the statute book, notwithstanding they may be individually put to some inconvenience through its operation.

Even my old-fashioned friend who gave such lucid translation of Memphremagog, confessed that the "anti-grog law" might be well enough for these "degenerate days," though he stoutly maintained that it had entirely driven out what he called "public spirit" from the hearts of the people.

"The fact is", he said, "you can't get people to subscribe anything nowadays for a highway, or a bridge, or a liberty-pole, or even a meeting-house, without an everlasting coaxing. Their temperance has made them confoundedly mean. Now forty years ago when I was a boy the farmers all used to go down to Barnet Village and fill up their jugs every Wednesday and Saturday night with good New-England rum, and all felt jolly and neighborly, and public spirited and liberal, and if anything wanted to be done in the town we all took hold and did it." "Yes", interposed a young man who listened to the conversation, "and you all used to have a jolly good drunk and went home staggering, half of you with empty jugs; you were generous and whole-souled and thrifless, and two-thirds of you had your farms mortgaged to the rumsellers, and a good share of you died in the poor-house."

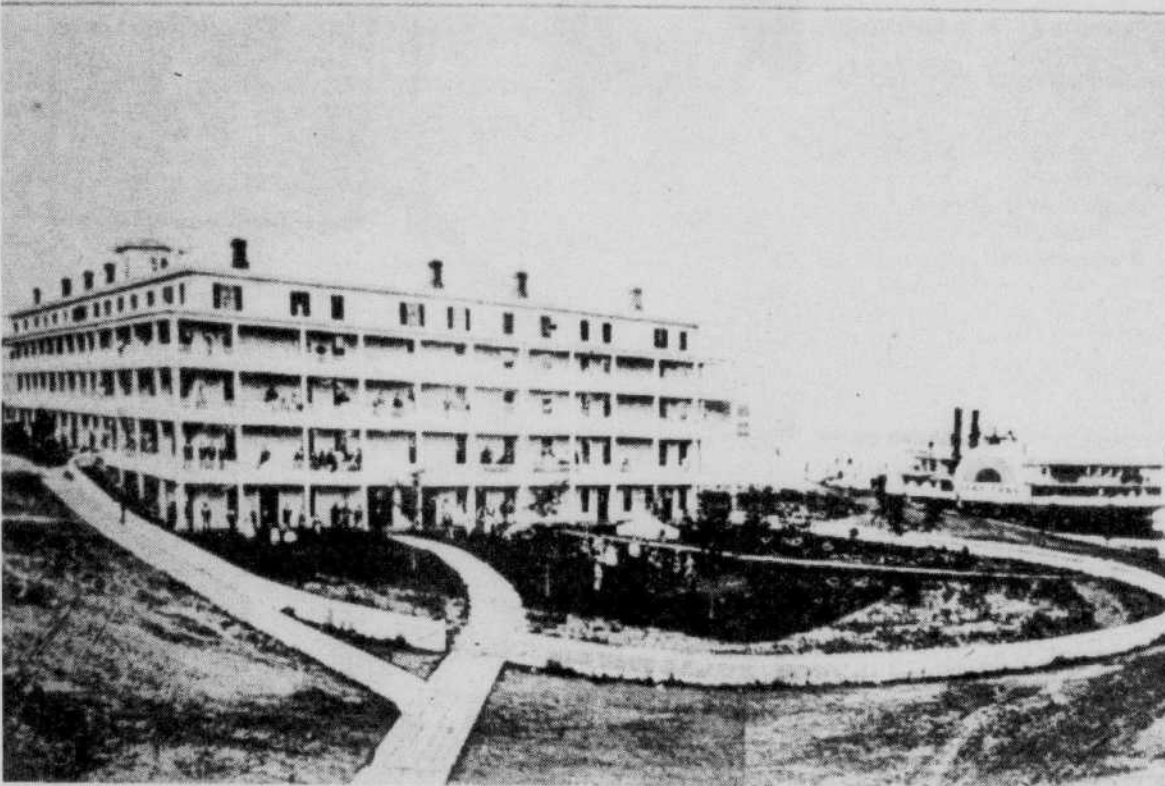

What became of your two oldest sons? Think of their career and then look at your fourteen grandchildren who have grown up under the Maine Law and see the difference." The old man made no reply to this impertinent onslaught but stopped the conversation by resuming his work, while I left with a strong desire to give the Maine Law champion a parting kick, but convinced nevertheless that his picture of "ye olden time" was nearest the truth. Whether it be owing to the Maine Law or not I am unable to say, but there is certainly a greater degree of temperance, thrift, general well being and apparent happiness among the people of this State than in any community of the same numbers that I have yet seen.

I recollect hearing Dr. Orestes A. Brownson say several years ago that there was more true Democracy, equality, freedom, general intelligence and happiness in Vermont than in any commonwealth in Christendom. I was tempted to ask him how much of this he attributed to the Protestant religion which he had renounced in favor of Catholic, but the question would have been rather impertinent, and I should have probably got a sharp answer.

Dr. Brownson is, I believe, a native of Vermont, and may, therefore, be supposed to be somewhat partial to his birthplace, albeit she is full of what he would call religious heresy, but my observation of the people of this State confirms the truth of the Doctor's statement. I have been among all classes of people in all parts of the State and nowhere have I seen so much equality in social life, and such general diffusion of property, intelligence and all the comforts of life as here. You can scarcely find a family that does not take one or more daily or weekly papers, and over and over again have I found plain farmers living in back towns on the tops of hills, or in secluded valleys far away from the leading routes of travel, who know more about national politics and the public men of the country and even about the local affairs of the State and City of New York than nine-tenths of the men who exercise the right of suffrage on Manhattan Island.

PART III next week.

The hotel "Memphremagog House", the biggest hotel (where the author was living) ever built on the shores of lake Memphremagog, was started in 1838 and destroyed by a fire on May 15, 1907.

Television in '86: Fads faded but Cosby is still king

By Bill Anderson
The Canadian Press

Television has no pride—it will copy anything.

So in 1986, with the Bill Cosby Show going through the roof, one family show after another rolled off the TV assembly lines.

None of the new series really caught on, however, and the star-studded homesteads of Ellen Burstyn, Elliot Gould and Lucille Ball were swept off the air before Christmas.

"Sooner or later," wrote U.S. media critic Todd Gitlin, "the mass audience, having gone along with the fad, grows weary, bored, resentful—in its odd way, discriminating."

"It takes its revenge."

NO NEW HITS

Try as they might, no network in Canada or the United States could come up with a smash hit, although Sherman Hemsley's atrocious Amen crept into the Top 10 for NBC and the critics did all they could for Crime Story, the boldest experiment of the fall season.

Michael Mann watched his Crime Story, a violent, garish "22-hour movie," struggle in the ratings at the same time his other NBC creation—Miami Vice—went from last year's hot tamale to this year's cold turkey.

In a new time slot opposite J.R. Ewing and cast, Miami's shimmering peacocks lost some of their strut while Dallas got away with murder by bringing Bobby Ewing back from the dead.

Another soap opera unfolded off screen as Joan Rivers had a messy public parting with late-night king Johnny Carson. Rivers' own show opened with a bang but fizzled fast, and Fox Broadcasting's hopes to launch a "fourth network" suffered with it.

HERE'S HEADROOM

Still, talk shows were all over the screen in 1986, when TV's recapture of the baby-boom audience seemed symbolized by the departure of Merv Griffin, the ascendance of David Letterman and the arrival of Max Headroom—the ultimate talking head whose stuttering, Coke-peddling face was created in the fusion of TV and computers.

While Max was babbling, Wheel of Fortune's Vanna White got rich just by turning letters on the game show's board. Everybody got the message—TV means money—and several cable channels baffled satellite dish owners with new signal-scrambling technologies.

New choices and new technologies—especially the booming popularity of video cassette recorders—contributed to a year of political concern about American domination of Canadian TV.

CBC, the pillar of Canadian broadcasting, was undermined by federal spending restraints and the corporation's own accounting gaffes. CBC executives warned of dire cuts to Canadian programming in '87, but they were told to stop crying and get on with it by a new, take-charge approach at the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission.

GATHERED DUST

The federal broadcast regulator began the year waiting—along with everyone else in the industry—for the report of a task force on broadcasting policy. But Marcel Masse was shuffled out as communications minister and Flora MacDonald shuffled in, and by the time the report came out in September it already seemed to be covered in dust.

The government urged patience, saying it would rewrite the Broadcasting Act before the next election, but CRTC chairman André Bureau was already plunging ahead with proposals to move Canadian specialty services on to basic cable in 1987 and create a gaggle of new ones as well.

Through it all, TV was increasingly seen as the key to national consciousness.

But American author Paul Theroux, in his novel O-Zone, warned of a future society shaped more by pollution, violence and social inequality. For some people in such a world, television only fuels their fantasies of escaping in a rocket.

Day after day, Theroux wrote, the downtrodden sit before their TV screens "fervent and deluded, always glued to the launch channel...."

Artists, musicians worked hard to make 1986 memorable

By Laurel Sherrer

SHERBROOKE — It's that time again when instead of chasing around in search of what's bright, bold or bizarre in the cultural life of the Townships, I get to stay in out of the cold, sit back, and ruminate on the events of the past year.

Besides getting my fingers black with ink, the exercise of flipping through back issues of Townships Week allows me once again to marvel at the changes a year can bring and at the richness and variety that exists in the cultural life of our little corner of the world.

The year, as reflected in Record coverage, included the following highlights:

On the literary scene:

- Sutton resident Don Bell captured the Silver Award for Best Canadian Sports Writing at the National Magazine Awards early in the summer. His winning article, "Hockey Night in Metebetchouan", appeared in the April, 1985 issue of MVP Magazine and is a humorous tale of hockey fever in the Lac St-Jean region.

- the John Bassett Memorial Library in Lennoxville published the List of Eastern Townships Material in the John Bassett Memorial Library in April.

- a young Townships couple launched a successful lifestyles magazine, Vie en Estrie/Living in April, with the goal of celebrating the quality of life in the Townships, and examining some of its controversies. Estrie Living's fifth issue, Feb.-March 1987, is now in progress.

- Pigwidgeon Press in Ayer's Cliff published Edwin Earle's collection of reminiscences entitled I Don't Remember Getting Born and John Mahoney's children's book The Adventures of Horatio, the Duck Who Thought He Was a Dog, which later was accepted in the 37th annual Children's Literature Exhibition in Munich, West Germany.

- Ron Graham, associate editor of Saturday Night magazine, retreated to his isolated log cabin in Way's Mill's to write One-Eyed Kings: Promise and Illusion in Canadian Politics, which spent over 13 weeks on the MacLean's best-seller list this summer.

And in the visual arts:

- Ruth Lund, founder of Cowans-ville's Lund Craft company, took her unique silk-screened handicrafts to a trade show in Tokyo, Japan in February.

- Townships watercolorists Mary Martin (Dunham) and Denis Palmer (Sawyerville) received honorable mentions from the Society of Canadian Watercolorists at an exhibit in Montreal in April.

- Granby sign-maker Michel La-jeunesse found plenty of chances for exposure with Knowlton and area merchants clamoring for his work.

- North Hatley artists Maurice Bi-

Writers, dramatists, film-makers made their mark too ron and Ninette Sylvestre continued their labor of love for the St. Elizabeth's church by donating their time and talent to design eight new stained glass windows.

• Way's Mills sculptor George Foster exhibited his bronze castings of exotic insects to Montreal's Botanical Gardens.

• Magog artist John Foster took his machine-animal sculptures to Montreal's Place du Parc for a group exhibition entitled Lumières in the fall.

Then there was the film-making industry:

• a film called The Morning Man was released in Montreal in October, chronicling the escape of convict Robert Menard from the Cowansville penitentiary in 1973 and his new life as a disc jockey under an assumed name.

• inventors Richard Labelle of Windsor and Jean St. Germain of Drummondville were among those featured in a film entitled Inven- tor! aired on Radio-Québec in January.

And in the world of theatre:

• the Théâtre Entre Chien et Loup honored young playwrights Jean-Benoît Nadeau, Sylvie Dolbec and Patrick Georges with the first, second and third prizes in its annual drama-writing contest in May.

• the Piggery Theatre in North Hatley presented three popular productions, said good-bye to artistic director Perry Schneiderman and hello to his replacement, Gregory Tuck.

• in March a new theatre company, Théâtre du Double Signe was launched in Sherbrooke, presenting Sherbrooke playwright Patrick Quintal's production, Siskalao; and in December, another theatre company, L'Aire de jeu, was formed and is preparing to present Pierre Halet's play, Little Boy in January, 1987.

• the Bishop's University drama department got a little help from Sesame Street puppeteer Tim Gosley to present Merlin in November, and later tackled Chekov's The Cherry Orchard with some help from theatre critic Herb Whittaker and actress Anna Cameron.

The Townships music scene was busy as well:

• in July members of Les Petits

Chanteurs de Granby, a choral group of children between 10 and 17, went to Expo 86 in Vancouver to present five concerts.

• the Quebec Symphony Orchestra, directed by François Dompierre, performed at Centennial Theatre in Lennoxville in early December. It was the orchestra's first foray into our region.

• in May, Sherbrooke trumpeter Daniel Doyon went off to Japan to teach a trumpet class and perform recitals in Japan for at least a year.

• the Montreal Symphony Orchestra made an appearance in Sherbrooke to raise money to restore the St. Michel cathedral organ.

• Gail Falconer Klinck joined Keith Whittall in his South Durham recording studio to record Celebrations, a cassette of traditional Christmas songs. The 100 copies they had made quickly sold out.

• Sherbrooke singer-songwriter Jim Corcoran launched his third solo album, Miss Kalabash, in September.

There were also, of course, events that related to Townships heritage:

• the town of Bury marked its 150th anniversary this summer by spicing up its already lively Canada Day weekend.

• in May, steam engine buffs turned up from all over for Rock Island's second International Steam Meet.

• in January, photographer and collector Jacques Darche donated his $100,000 collection of historic photographic equipment to the Eastern Townships Historical Society.

• the Ceilidh Society of Scotstown resurrected the ancient custom of the Kirkin' o' the Tartan in October, with representative of some 40 clans bearing their tartans to the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

There were even things happening in the hospitality business, where, in early December, the Hatley Inn received a prize in a Federation of Milk Producers of Quebec contest for its fine cuisine.

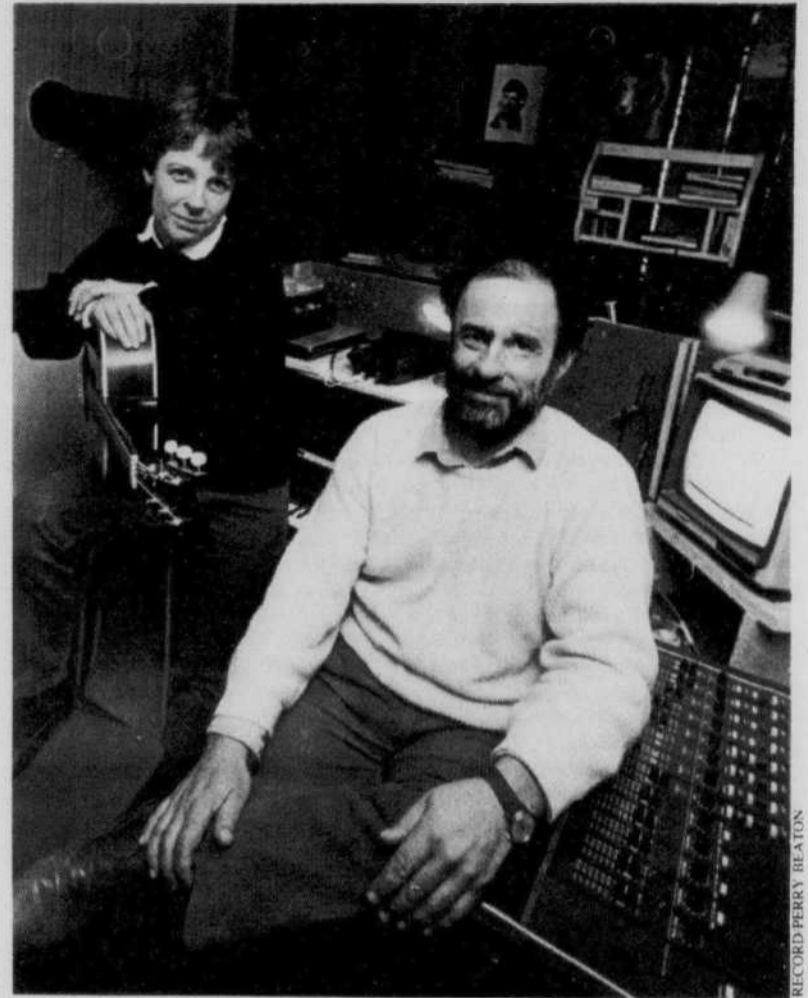

In June, Chantal and Richard Petersen launched a lifestyles magazine that's all about the Townships, and so far things are looking swell for them.

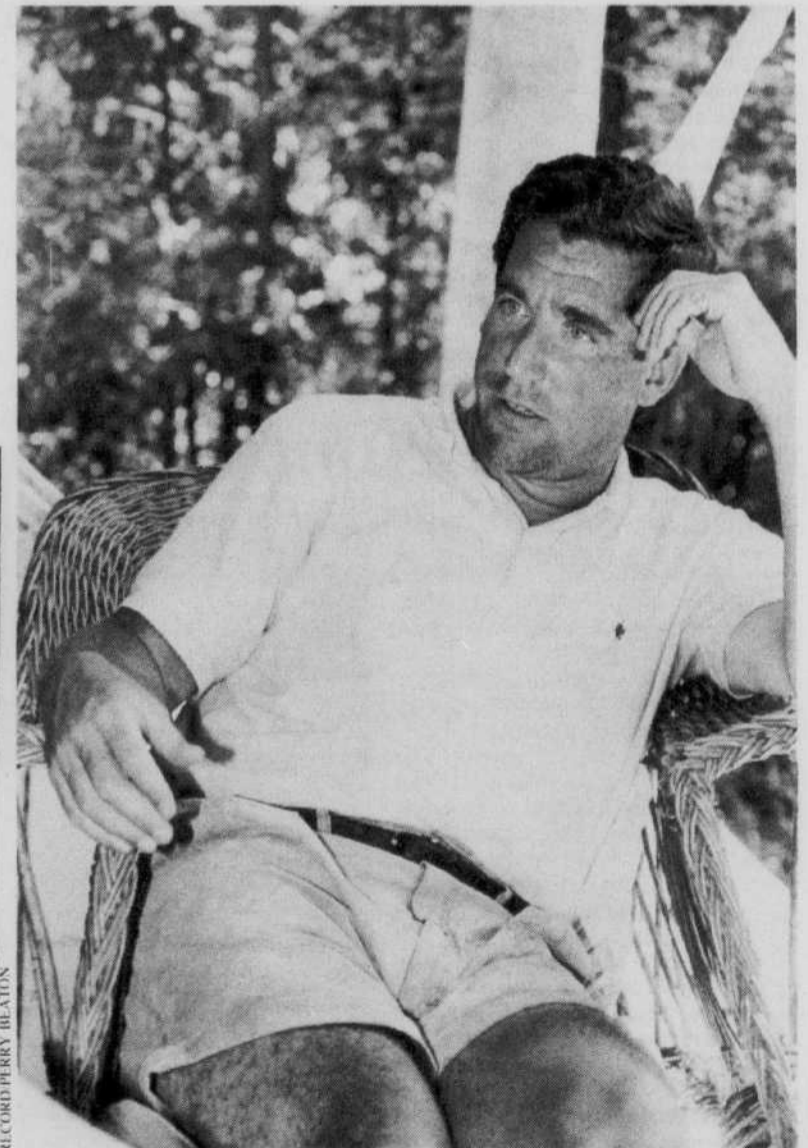

Actors David Stein, Marjorie Pauch, Brooke Johnson and Wendi Dawson were a major part of what made Noises Off such a success at the Piggery Theatre last summer.

Gail Falconer Klinck and Keith Whittall teamed up to make a recording of favorite Christmas carols, and it wasn't long before they'd sold all of the first 100 produced.

Ron Graham, associate editor of Saturday Night magazine, wrote the best-selling book, One-Eyed Kings, at his quiet retreat in Way's Mills.

Books in Canada: Soap opera, royalties and trade

By Rod Currie
The Canadian Press

There was an element of soap opera in the continuing saga of Canada's $1.5-billion book-publishing industry in 1986 that set the scene for some drama, glamor and spirited in-fighting in the new year.

Jack McClelland, who has been credited with nurturing, encouraging and promoting scores of Canadian authors to become household names, was edged farther from the centre of things.

The flamboyant, silver-haired former head of McClelland and Stewart was replaced as publisher by Adrienne Clarkson, the elegant Paris-based diplomat who launched her publishing career with what some thought was rather un-diplomatic language.

And in the continuing hassles between the federal government and the authors and publishers, the publishing side won a small one and lost a big one.

But centre stage in the business was dominated — and will be again in 1987 — by uncertainty over the place of Canadian publishing in continuing Canada-U.S. trade talks.

WRITERS SHINE

Although the book business was preoccupied in 1986 by boardroom and political manoeuvrings, it was also a year of literary accomplishment — particularly in the unprecedented showing of two Canadian authors in the competition for the esteemed Booker Prize of Britain.

Among the six writers on the final short list were Margaret Atwood for The Handmaid's Tale and Robertson Davies with What's Bred in the Bone. The prize — which brings a great upsurge in sales for all finalists — ultimately went to England's Kingsley Amis, although the Booker judges took the extraordinary step of announcing Davies had come within a hair of winning.

In the 34 years that McClelland,

64, ran the firm co-founded by his father 80 years ago, he built a glittering stable of Canadian authors, including Margaret Laurence, Irving Layton, Gabrielle Roy, Pierre Berton and Atwood.

But he ran into financial difficulties in recent years and sold out in December 1985 to shopping-mall developer Avie Bennett, now the company's enthusiastic chairman and chief executive officer.

FORMERLY ON TV

In November, McClelland became "publishing consultant," and Clarkson, a former TV personality and, since 1982, Ontario's agent-general in Paris, was named publisher and president.

The day after her appointment, Clarkson told a group of school administrators in Toronto: "I'll be able to run a major cultural institution in the free enterprise field. That's where I now feel I can affect the greatest change."

"I'm going to hire people and fire people. I'm going to do all sorts of stuff and really have fun."

She then flew back to Paris, leaving a staff already jarred by major executive changes in the last year to contemplate her words until she returns in March to take up her new job.

WIN BATTLE

In the political field, a 20-year battle led by the Writers' Union of Canada ended in April when Ottawa established a modest $3-million annual fund for "payment for public use," whereby authors will receive a small fee for use of their books in libraries.

In the past, Canadian authors received a set royalty from publishers whether their works were purchased by an individual or a library. Authors of non-fiction and historical works were particularly ill-served by that system since students and others often made use of their works in libraries over and over without additional payment.

Now, Canada has joined Australia, Britain, Sweden and other countries in recognizing that such writers should receive payment for the use of their books in libraries.

Authors Robertson Davies and Margaret Atwood made unprecedented showings in the competition for the Booker Prize of Britain in 1986.

Although it was a small victory, in that few authors will get more than a couple hundred dollars in such royalties a year, it established a principle on which the authors hope to build in subsequent years.

LOST BIG ONE

But authors, publishers and opposition politicians lost a big battle despite a spirited — and ongoing — campaign. Ottawa has so far refused to repeal a 10-per-cent tariff on English-language imported books, which is expected to damage sales and cost the industry $30 million annually.

The duty was announced last June in a sort of gut-reaction retaliation for the U.S. tariff on Canadian shakes and shingles. There is near unanimous agreement outside government that it hit the wrong target, having only a flea-bite effect on the U.S. giants it was aimed at.

The trouble is that about 90 per cent of English-language books sold in Canada are imported from the United States and distributed by Canadian outfits. Many Canadian publishers count on these sales — which now are running into buyer resistance because of higher prices — to finance the sometimes less profitable Canadian ventures that amount to less than 20 per cent of the business.

GUARD CULTURE

Meanwhile, publishers and others in the broader cultural field continue to seek assurances that Canada's cultural integrity will not be placed on the freer-trade negotiating table.

The government has stated it stands behind its policy prohibiting foreign takeovers of Canadian publishers unless they are joint ventures with Canadian control — a policy that has riled some U.S. interests.

But External Affairs Minister Joe Clark has caused concern by refusing to rule out allowing cultural issues to be negotiated. While protecting companies that require protection, it would be the height of folly, he said, to cut off opportunities for Canadian publishers who see advantages in a negotiated wider access to the lucrative U.S. book and magazine markets.

The debate is bound to grow more heated as the trade negotiators get down to specifics in 1987.

Leonord Nimoy still finds Star Trek success remarkable

By Bob Thomas

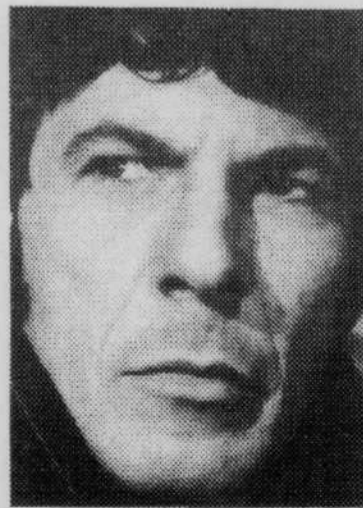

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Leonard Nimoy, the world's greatest authority on Mr. Spock, likes to analyze his character.

"In a way, Spock is an extraordinarily human character," he said. "He is considered the alien, but there is something about his alien-ness that is extremely human. He is born of a Vulcan father and an Earth mother, which gives him an internal complex of his rational side versus his emotional side. We all experience that."

"At some time in our lives, we all think, 'Gee, I wish I could control my emotions.' Spock is fighting that battle constantly. So in a way he is a very, very human character."

IN NEW FILM

Nimoy and Spock are back for another go-round with the new film Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home.

The original Star Trek was a television series that faded from NBC on Sept. 2, 1969, and everyone thought the series would soon be forgotten.

"When we were cancelled at the end of the third season, I thought that was the end of that," recalled Nimoy, now 55. "I thought that after a year or two of reruns, Star Trek would be history."

"But when it went into syndication in the early '70s, suddenly it started coming back in a gigantic way. It was really remarkable. It is still remarkable to me."

OLD GANG BACK

Star Trek IV stars Nimoy, William Shatner, DeForest Kelley, James Doohan, George Takei, Walter Koenig and Nichelle Nichols, the seemingly ageless space travellers, along with a guest star Catherine Hicks.

For the second time in a row, Nimoy served as director, a role he admitted was not easy at the start.

"I was surprised when I came to direct Star Trek III — I found out eventually in a nice kind of way — that the cast had been a little concerned about how this was going to work," he said. "I think they were nervous that somehow I wouldn't appreciate their performances or I wouldn't appreciate their contributions. They weren't sure how I would be as a director."

"We discovered that we all had mutual interests. It was to all of our best interests to enjoy the work, appreciate each other and get a good film made, which we did. When it came time for me to direct Star Trek IV, they were all welcoming the idea. They liked the script, and we all had a good time together."

FIRST IN '51

Nimoy has been an actor most of his life. Born to Russian-Jewish immigrants in Boston, he began appearing in community theatres as a teenager. He left a Boston College scholarship in drama to try his luck in California, enrolling at the famed Pasadena Playhouse. His first film role was in 1951 in Queen for a Day.

"In 1966, when I started Star Trek, I had been in films 15 years," said the actor, who wears a trimmed, salt-and-pepper beard in his non-Spock life. "I had been teaching acting classes successfully for several years, and had plans to become a director. I was making a substantial, secure living."

"I was a little nervous about going into Star Trek," Nimoy said. "I was pretty serious about the work I was doing, trying to maintain a dignified career. To put on pointed ears was a pretty dangerous thing to do."

WHAT'S ON

Music

The thing to be doing tonight, obviously, is getting together with friends and going somewhere to dance or at least sway to the music of live bands. And there's plenty of that to choose from.

To start with, there's a party tonight at the Sutton Legion, which will feature music by Wayne Durrell. You might have some luck in getting reservations if you call (514) 538-2210 right away. There'll be a cold buffet, one free drink, and it costs $10 to get in. This all starts at 9 p.m.

Tonight at the Auberge Glen Sutton there'll be music by the Mick Hall Band, and Thursday through Saturday you can hear the same group at one of their more frequent haunts, the Georgian in Lennoxville.

There's a dance going on at the Cowansville Legion tonight featuring the music of the Bolton Brothers. But dinner comes first, at 9 p.m., at a cost of $10 per person.

Central Park ushers in 1987 at the Old Mill in Stanbridge East, while the Foster Hotel has music by Country Session.

Lawrence Marquis and his Melody Mountain Boys will be at the Eagle's Nest on the North Hatley Road tonight, and they'll be there Friday night as well.

A smorgasbord buffet is planned for the Domaine RSVP tonight, followed by dancing to the music of Rod Bray and the Countrymen. Try (819) 889-2840 for reservations.

The Erabliere Doyon in Ascot Corner has the music of Jean-Claude Guay and his orchestra to bring in the new year, while Bernard Houle is the featured entertainment at the Brasseries Le Petit Moulin in Bromptonville.

You'll find the James Todd Band bringing in the New Year at the Mapies in Stanstead, and playing for one last time Friday and Saturday nights. Meanwhile the Good Ole Boys play for a party tonight at the Bretagne in Waterville.

Country Fever will be playing at the Aramis Club in Sherbrooke tonight, while the Caroussels are at the Hut in Lennoxville. In Bury, the Salle Jean-Paul parties the night away with Bobby Lassenba.

Tonight and tomorrow night Ginette and Daniel Boisvert play country music at the Bar Lise in Wotton.

Scott Lowd and his orchestra will be playing for a dance Saturday night at the Bulwer Community Centre. It's a few days late, but it's still a New Year's party, complete with noisemakers and such. The evening starts at 9 and there's a pot luck lunch.

Looking beyond the New Year celebrations, Country Fever will be playing at the Bar Bossa Nova in St-Elie Fridays and Saturdays throughout January; at the Shady Crest in Ayer's Cliff, Moonshine plays Fridays and Saturdays through till the end of January, and the Hut in Lennoxville will have music by the Good Ole Boys weekends starting Jan. 10.

Over at the Old Mill in Stanbridge East, after the country-rock group Central Park play this Thursday, Friday and Saturday, they'll be replaced by the Backroad Band Thursday nights and Jet Black Fridays and Saturdays for the rest of the month.

Exhibitions

Still have Christmas gifts to pick up? Of course this is the best time, what with all the sales on and all. One place you can be sure to find something distinctive is at the Arts Sutton Gallery where the Christmas Happening is still going on — until Sunday that is. This is a sale of crafts, paintings, drawings, sculpture and photographs by local artists. The gallery is open 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday through Sunday.

It's still Christmas at the Tayaut Gallery in North Hatley as well. The Christmas show there, featuring wildlife art by D'Angelo, Larsen, Nadeau, Montpetit, Schutz, Palmer and John James Audubon as well as Coaticook artist Richard Kermode, continues until Jan. 7. The gallery, at 985 Massawippi Rd., is open seven days a week from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A whole slew of workshops in various arts and skills are being offered this winter by the Foyer de culture populaire in Sherbrooke. They all start Jan. 12 and run for 10 weeks with classes once a week. Among the subjects are batik, sewing, needlepoint, crochet, drawing, ceramics, interior decorating, wood sculpture, guitar, stained glass and yoga. You can find out more about them by attending an information meeting at 7:30 p.m. next Wednesday, Jan. 7 at 400 Galt St. W. Each course costs $15. The drawback, for some people, of course, is that the courses are offered in French. If you can't make the information meeting, try calling (819) 563-5959.

Theatre

The new Sherbrooke theatre company known as L'Aire de jeu opens its first production, Pierre Halet's Little Boy next Wednesday at the Salle Maurice O'Bready. This is the story of how the dropping of the first atomic bombs during the Second World War affected one of the pilots responsible. They're calling it a multidisciplinary event, meaning that there's much more than your traditional theatrical conventions involved. There's also music, dance and elements borrowed from the cinema. Little Boy will be presented through till Jan. 24, Wednesdays and Thursdays at 9:30 p.m. and Fridays and Saturdays at midnight. Tickets will be selling for $12 at the box office the nights of the show, but they can also be purchased in advance in packages of four for $30 at the University of Sherbrooke Cultural Centre, the Loubard on Alexandre St. and La Rose des Sables on King St. W.

Movies

I just saw Crocodile Dundee for the second time, and still found it enjoyable, so that will have to be my recommendation of the week. It's written by, and stars, Paul Hogan, who plays a rugged crocodile poacher and tour operator in the Australian outback. Linda Kozlowski is a reporter who follows him to where he was allegedly attacked by a crocodile and just barely survived to tell the tale. Wanting a more exciting end to her story about him, she invites him to New York, where he gets his first taste of the city life. Of course there's some romance involved, and some rivalry with her polished American fiancé, but what's funny is Dundee's reaction to the crowds and the modern conveniences of the city. He wears himself out saying hello to everyone he meets on the street, for example, and hob-knobs with the chauffeurs and busboys.

Crocodile Dundee is playing this week and next at the Merrill's Showplace Cinemas in Newport, Vt. This week it's at 1:40, 7:15 and 9:20 today through Thursday and at 1:55, 7:10 and 9:25 Friday through Sunday. Next Monday through Thursday you can see it at 7:25 nightly.

Also showing at Merrill's this week and next is Star Trek IV, in which the intrepid Enterprise crew apparently return to earth to save earthlings from self-destruction or some such thing. The times for this show are 1:30, 7 and 9:15 p.m. today through Thursday, 1:45, 6:50 and 9:20 Friday through Sunday and 7:15 from Monday to Thursday next week.

Until Friday there's also something called No Mercy at Merrill's, showing at 9:25 nightly.

I'd also advise you to hurry and see Three Amigos which is only at Merrill's until Friday. This is the comedy that stars Steve Martin, Chevy Chase and Martin Short as silent movie stars of the early 1900s who are called upon to save a Mexican village from a marauding bandit. It's really not too bad. Three Amigos is showing daily at 1:50 and 7:10.

Starting Friday at Merrill's is Children of a Lesser God. This is the story of a teacher (William Hurt) who wants to try some unconventional methods in a school for the deaf, but along the way falls in love with the deaf janitor and tries to get her to come out of her shell and leave behind the bitterness that has imprisoned her for years. I've heard conflicting reports on this one; some thought it was great, others so-so. Children of a Lesser God plays Friday through Sunday at 1:45, 6:50 and 9:20 and Monday through Thursday at 7:15 p.m.

Now all of the above is fairly inaccessible to Sherbrooke and area dwellers, so for you we have The Golden Child and Wisdom at the Cinemas Carrefour. The Golden Child stars Eddy Murphy as a Los Angeles social worker who gets entangled in a mission to rescue a child with magical powers who has been kidnapped by forces of evil. This movie is showing at 1, 3, 5, 7 and 9 p.m. daily now through Jan. 8. Wisdom, showing at 1:15, 3:15, 5:15, 7:15 and 9:15 until Jan. 8, stars Emilio Estevez and Demi Moore, and that's about all I can tell you about it.

The Cinéma Capitol in Sherbrooke still has the French film Les Fous de Bassan, based on the novel by Anne Hébert. This will be showing nightly at 7 and 9 and Sunday and Tuesday at 1 p.m. as well at least until the end of next week.

At the Cinema Princess in Cowansville the same two movies continue until Jan. 8, but take note that the theatre is closed today and tomorrow. Other than those holidays, Runaway Train will be playing nightly at 7:15 and Star Trek IV at 9:05. Star Trek IV is described — well, sort of — above. Runaway Train stars Jon Voight and Eric Roberts as two escaped prisoners who find themselves alone on a freight train hurtling out of control when the engineer dies of a stroke. It's been called a combination of existentialist drama and cliff-hanging action, and the critics seem to like it a lot. Watch out for the few gory scenes like when Voight gets his hand caught between two of the train cars.

Sherbrooke's repertory theatre, La Maison du Cinéma, has Sting — Bring on the Night at 7 p.m. Jan. 6, 7, and 8. This is a musical documentary in which Sting breaks out from the rock mold of the group The Police, gathers together some high calibre jazz musicians and explores the possibilities of collective creation.

Paul Hogan stars as the rugged crocodile hunter from Australia who is introduced to the insanity of New York City in Crocodile Dundee, a movie now showing at the Merrill's Showplace in Newport. See Movies column.

Alice combines color and contradictions of Australia

ALICE SPRINGS, Australia — Alice Springs sits bull's-eye, dead centre in this vast island-continent, smack in the middle of the desert.

The entire state of the Northern Territory, all 1,346,200 square kilometres of it, is home to less than three-quarters of one per cent of Australia's population.

Settled originally as a supply dump and repeater station for the Overland Telegraph in the early 1870s, Alice Springs had two precious commodities — a small water hole, after which the town was named, and the Todd River. Alice, as the town is affectionately known, was named after the wife of Sir Charles Todd, then South Australia's superintendent of telegraphy. Completion of that telegraph link in 1872 cut communication time between Adelaide and Mother England from several months to just seven hours.

Back in 1903, with its entire female population at seven, Alice was sleeping sounder than a fairy-tale princess. What roused her was no prince on a white charger but a cross-country iron horse railroad and the discovery of gold and other minerals in the outback.

After the bombing of Darwin during World War II, the territorial administration moved here. Then Nevil Shute's novel "A Town Like Alice," and the subsequent "Masterpiece Theatre" television series, brought world attention to this remote area. That combined with the town's proximity to Ayers Rock, one of Australia's natural wonders, now brings half a million people here each year, making tourism the largest industry.

Alice combines the delightful color and contradictions that make this continent endlessly fascinating, even in this largely forbidding area.

Kangaroos bounce along the street as you make your way to Alice's Kmart. Flocks of pink and gray galah cockatoos squawk overhead as you cycle off to the local Piggly-Wiggly Supermarket. You may even have to double-park beside a camel when you "pick up a bucket" at Kentucky Fried Chicken.

Alice is young, growing, and still very much an active frontier town. It's the accommodation camp for exploring the outback, home to local surveyors, miners, geologists, and scientists, and base camp to the cattle stations nearby. Many people work in aboriginal affairs and government administrative services. The average age of the population is 35. Most residents live comfortably in low, modern ranch-style homes, topped with solar collectors.

HIGH GROWTH RATE

Alice now thrives with a population of 22,000 and an annual growth rate of seven percent — one of the highest in the country.

It may be stretching the point to call Alice Springs the New York City of the outback, but then there's no town around to challenge it. Alice now even boasts its very own single set of traffic lights!

From the air, the uncompromising parched red sand is interrupted by the Macdonnell Ranges, a string of jagged mountains that from the air resemble the half-buried backbone of some gigantic prehistoric creature. Alice nests at the foot of the Macdonnells, flat, dusty, and spreading. Strict zoning laws keep buildings no higher than three storeys.

The surrounding desert supports a surprising number of feral animals, both indigenous and imported. Kangaroos in a variety of species abound along with parrots, cockatoos, lizards, five-foot flightless emus, Australia's native dog — the dingo — and British-introduced rabbits.

Camels were imported from Afghanistan during the last century, with their Afghan cameleers. They helped build this town and were indispensable in the exploration of the outback. All these animals compete for food, if not space, with great tended herds of hotter than a tin of Billy tea. Basketball, rugby, netball, and football are popular. A superb 18-hole golf course opened recently. Lack of public transportation makes cycling almost mandatory. Soaring is available — and even scuba diving. "It's becoming quite popular," a ruddy-faced salesman in a sporting goods store confirmed. "We have some water holes over 50 feet deep."

PRACTICAL INFORMATION:

Alice Springs can be reached by air from most major cities in Australia, and by rail from Adelaide, cattle in the centre and water buffalo north in Darwin.

UBIQUITOUS TOYOTA

Although camels once provided most of the pulling and hauling, they have largely been driven off the road by the ubiquitous Toyota four-wheel-drive vehicles — almost standard equipment here. There is still a Camel Farm and museum on Emily Gap Road, where some 30 dromedaries are available to rock-and-roll tourists about for a small fee.

Sports are eagerly pursued here even though summer days can get

Sydney, Brisbane, and Darwin. Most people combine their visit here with a trip to Ayers Rock. Touring coaches offer a variety of trips. Prices depend on the degree of comfort — or discomfort — you are willing to endure. And, of course, you can explore the outback by four-wheel-drive vehicle. Museum recreates Sigmund Freud's English refuge

LONDON (CP) — Visitors to Sigmund Freud's London home, recently turned into a museum to commemorate the father of psychoanalysis, usually remark first on the famous couch.

It's covered by a handsome oriental rug and velvet cushions. One wonders if they gave comfort to patients who reclined there to confide their troubled thoughts. At the head of the couch is a tub chair, in a dark green velvet, where Freud would sit and listen.

The house at 20 Maresfield Gardens was a refuge for Freud in 1938 when he fled at the age of 82 with his family from the Nazis in Vienna. By paying a so-called "fugitive tax" to the German authorities, he was permitted to ship his library, letters, furniture and collection of antiquities to England. There, ensconced with his favorite things arranged as they had been in Vienna, he died on Sept. 23 the following year.

GUARDED WORK

For more than 40 years thereafter, Anna Freud, the youngest of his six children and a psychoanalyst who guarded his work and legend, stayed on in the home. After her death in 1982, as she had planned, the house became the property of an English charitable trust to be run as a museum.

Canadian curator David Newlands makes it clear that turning Freud's last home into a fitting museum was a race against time — and a major effort to repair its ravages.

"We had four months maximum to create a museum" and meet the deadline for opening ceremonies, said Newlands. The restored neo-Georgian house in London's Hampstead district opened formally in late July.

Hundreds of books line the walls in the ground-floor study, many of them in English. Freud's fascination with the past is evident in the several dozen antique figurines standing on his desk — part of the 2,500-piece collection of Roman, Etruscan, Egyptian and Assyrian statuary he began assembling as a young man. Hundreds more are in glass-fronted cabinets.

A garden is glimpsed through the glass doors, flanked by heavy ma-room curtains, at one end of the room. There is a restful sense here and one can imagine the solace it gave Freud as he passed his final months, sick with cancer of the jaw, in the safety of his English exile.

An adjacent dining room now holds several pieces of gaily painted Austrian peasant furniture, but not all the original furniture from the house was in good enough condition to go on display.

Newlands, who worked from 1973 to 1982 at the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto and then at the University of Toronto teaching museum studies, believes his curatorial experience was considered more important for his present job than a scholar's knowledge of psychoanalytical history.

"I'm interested in presenting an accurate history of Freud," Newlands said in his modern office atop the museum, leaning over a computer terminal which the staff is using to record the thousands of artifacts and documents the house contains.

"The purpose of the museum is not to justify or defend his viewpoints. Freud can defend himself quite adequately if people are prepared to read and study him."

Much remains for Newlands and his staff, numbering about 20, to do.

Paris computer facilities outstrip North America's

By Norma Siddiqui

Surprisingly, modern computer facilities in Paris far outstrip anything available in North America and are more unfamiliar to a visitor than the historic landmarks of Paris.

The mosaic of great masterpieces in Paris never ceases to awe the tourist, and its landmarks, so familiar from posters and pictures are more inspiring in real life. Still, this historic architecture full of arches, domes, turrets, balustrades, fluted columns, stained glass, flying buttresses, all richly interspersed with sculpture is somewhat familiar.

Not so the modern computer facilities which today's Parisien now takes for granted.

The municipal government has constructed a network of electronic billboards at a cost of over $50,000 apiece, strategically placed throughout the city. These give up-to-date information of happenings of interest to tourist and Parisien alike. Also available are "Situ" machines on which any person may type his destination and receive printed output of the best route according to one of four choices: the quickest, the least walking, metro only, or bus only.

Another useful computer aid to the traveller is the "Bison Fuité", or "Smart Buffalo" available at strategic points along the autoroutes. These provide routing from points A to B by major highways and alternate routes which are more scenic.

In addition to these computer facilities Paris also has those facilities to which the North American is more familiar. That is, many hotels and shops have electronic cash registers connected to centralized computing facilities. The use of credit cards is linked to the system and the customer has only to sign the cash tape which is in duplicate to record a credit card sale. One copy is given to the client, the other is kept by the store. This saves the time required to make an extra credit card slip and reduces the frustration of others waiting in line to make cash purchases. Train reservations are also centrally computerized and printed.

As in Canada, computers calculate long distance telephone charges according to time and distance called. In Paris, as well as the rest of France, local calls are also charged according to length of call. To make calling from phone booths easier, in addition to depositing coins the caller can buy a long distance calling card with a mini-magnetic disk for about $20. This entitles the caller to use the card for up to $20 of calls. Each time the card is used the magnetic disk is updated to the value of calls left until the amount falls to zero. Then a new card must be purchased. This avoids the tedious requirement for change to make calls. Surprisingly, monthly bills give only the total charge, and rumor has it that itemized billing has not been passed in parliament in order to protect the privacy of calls made to one's mistress. Considering the sophistication of government computing facilities it is hard to imagine another explanation.

All in all, a visit to France's city of antiquities was more than a little amazing.
