

THE WEATHER

A complex low pressure system extending from Hudson Bay to the Gulf of Mexico will gradually move eastward today and Thursday. This system is bringing a very large area of cloud along with showers and even thundershowers. Temperatures will be above normal in all regions due to the inflow of warm and moist air in advance of the system.

Variable cloudiness this morning, cloudy with a few showers this afternoon. Cloudy with showers and thundershowers Thursday, winds moderate. High today near 17, low tonight near 5. High Thursday near 18. Winds today southeasterly 25 to 30 km-hr; Thursday, southeasterly 30 km-hr. Probabilities of precipitation today, 40 per cent; tonight, 60 per cent; Thursday, 80 per cent.

Outlook for Friday, Saturday and Sunday: Showers and near seasonal temperatures Friday, clearing and cool Saturday. Sunny with temperatures slightly above normal Sunday. Normal highs near 13, normal lows near 3.

Campaign: Trudeau, Clark back off

Prime Minister Trudeau and Joe Clark took turns back-peddling Tuesday on separate issues which have surfaced during the campaign for the May 22 federal election.

A Gallup poll conducted 10 days after Prime Minister Trudeau called the May 22 federal election shows the Liberal party had jumped five percentage points ahead of the Tories among decided voters polled.

The April poll, released today, accords the Liberals 43 per cent and Tories 38 per cent of the decided Canadians polled. The survey was conducted before Fabien Roy accepted the leadership of the Social Credit Party, and sharply contrasts a CBC poll released Monday.

The CBC survey, begun a few days after the Gallup poll, showed that decided voters prefer the Conservatives over the Liberals by 40.2 per cent to 38.4 per cent.

Today's findings show the Liberals gained two per cent from March and the Tories lost 3 per cent.

Both polls estimate the number of undecided voters at about 32 per cent. Support for the New Democratic Party was estimated at 17 per cent by Gallup and 16 by the CBC.

Trudeau was soundly criticized by his opponents for saying Monday he would try to retain power if the Progressive Conservatives won a few more seats than the Liberals but failed to win a majority of the 282 seats in the Commons. See ELECTION, Page 10.

SCs name candidate to oppose Rondeau

FABIEN ROY...fulfills promise

ST. HYACINTHE, Que. (CP) — The Social Credit party may finally have found a candidate to run in the Eastern Townships riding of Shefford, where former Socred Gilbert Rondeau, recently released from jail and still engaged in a series of legal battles, is campaigning for reelection as an independent.

Local party officials said late Tuesday night Murielle Audette, a real estate agent from the town of St. Cesaire, will bear the Socred colors, despite the apparent reluctance of some party members to oppose Rondeau.

The issue of Socred participation in Shefford had bogged down in confusion earlier in the day when Robert Leroux, vice-president of the party riding association, told a reporter he did not "want to work against Mr. Rondeau," because despite his legal difficulties "he is very well respected in the riding." Within hours, Leroux was contradicted by party Leader Fabien Roy, who said he intended to keep a previous promise to have Socred candidates in all 75 Quebec ridings.

Leroux said he was "very surprised" to learn of the candidacy of Mrs. Audette, whom he does not know. He maintained Roy had assured him earlier this week — not personally but "through a close associate" — that there would be no Socred candidate.

CLAIMS SUPPORT

Mrs. Audette, for her part, said she has the personal support of Roy and has received a letter from him confirming her candidacy. She replaces Leroux, who had been tentatively chosen to run, but refrained from filing nomination papers when local organizers fell to bickering over whether to oppose Rondeau.

It could not be confirmed immediately whether Mrs. Audette has filed her official nomination papers with the Shefford returning officer.

Rondeau was first elected to the Commons in 1962 as a Socred and was returned at every subsequent election except in 1965.

He resigned from the Socreds in 1977 to sit as an independent after being found guilty of tax fraud related to political contributions.

Last year he was found guilty of arson and conspiracy after fire destroyed a house he owned in Bromont, Que., and last December he was convicted of 14 counts of fraud against the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Rondeau is appealing both the arson and unemployment insurance convictions.

Festival weirdies

Strange characters were in evidence at one of the Festival des Cantons workshops the other day. Some were stationary creatures in bright colors; cartoon characters and giant fish rubbed shoulders and fins, all glistening under a fresh coat of waterproofing lacquer being sprayed on by this gent with his face swathed in protective layers.

Champlain profs won't walk out

By JASPER MEYERS

SHERBROOKE — Faculty members at Champlain College in Lennoxville yesterday rejected a recommendation that they take part in a half-day study session on Thursday by a vote of 31 to 13 in a closed meeting.

The recommendation was made by the Committee de Co-ordination de la Negotiation (CCN) representing nine CEGEPs — Sherbrooke, Champlain-Lennoxville, Granby, Drummondville, Victoriaville, Matane, Ste. Foy, Nord-Ouest and Bois de Boulogne — within the Federation d'Enseignants de CEGEP (FEC) which in turn is a member of the 90,000-member CEQ.

Nicole Fortin, information officer for the CCN in Montreal, said in a telephone interview that the study session had been recommended in order to show support for the 473 CEGEP teachers in the province whose contracts have not been marked for renewal in the government's offers for a new contract. She said the refusal to renew the contracts was not based on reasons pertaining to either the academic performance of the teachers concerned or to the enrollments expected for the next academic year.

The CCN's present three-year contract is set to expire in June. Andre Milbers, who chaired yesterday's meeting at Champlain, said there was little support for the recommendation because no one at the Lennoxville campus is included in the 473 teachers whose contracts will not be renewed.

Milbers mentioned that the Champlain teachers last took part in a study session in February, 1978. He dismissed as exaggerated the suggestion that the Lennoxville members of the CCN included a group who could reasonably be called Marxist-Leninists.

The traffic is already bad in Eaton Corner with a two-lane road. Residents aren't looking forward to three lanes.

By BARBARA VERITY STEVENSON

"What's going to happen to this town?" Waymer Laberee wonders as he looks down the main, in fact, the only street in Eaton Corner.

"It's not too imposing to look at. But it's the antiquity of the town," he says.

The problem is that the Quebec roads department plans to widen the road into three lanes. Officials expect only one house will be moved. However, widening will bring the highway to residents' doorsteps and several trees will be cut down.

The approximately 100 residents, concerned for their safety and for the historical beauty of their village, are forming a citizens committee to protest the move.

Eaton Corner lies on Route 210 between Cookshire and Sawyerville, 13 miles east of Lennoxville. Residents are English-speaking.

Settled in the 1790s and early 1800s by New Englanders, it was the first village in the eastern part of the Eastern Townships. During the 19th century, it blossomed into the biggest. He doesn't want to be held to it, but Laberee, a local historian, suspects that Eaton Corner was once ahead of Sherbrooke in size.

"The town has never been touched very much," he adds. And that's what makes the place special today. Looking over an 1863 map shows that 75 per cent of buildings are still standing.

NO PLANS TO RECOGNIZE RHODESIA YET

CALGARY (CP) — External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Tuesday the Canadian government has no plans to recognize the newly-elected government of Rhodesia.

"There will have to be further negotiations, further initiatives to resolve the Rhodesian situation in a manner satisfactory to the world community," he told a news conference after a dinner with Liberal party supporters.

Rhodesia's first one-man, one-vote election Tuesday saw Bishop Abel Muzorewa and his united African National Council sweep to victory.

PQ paper proposes new electoral system

QUEBEC (CP) — A green paper on electoral reform, tabled in the national assembly Tuesday, proposes that Quebecers consider scrapping the present electoral system for a new one based on proportional representation.

The green paper, prepared by Parliamentary Reform Minister Robert Burns, points out the advantages and disadvantages of the present system and describes three alternatives all based on proportional representation.

Under the present arrangement, sometimes called the "first past the post system," there are 110 ridings in Quebec. Each riding elects one member to the national assembly.

A candidate wins if he or she gets more votes than any other. But if there are more than two candidates, it often happens that one is elected even though most people in the riding voted for others.

The proportional representation system attempts to correct this by taking the popular vote into account.

The first alternative proposed in the green paper is called "proportional representation by region."

It would mean doing away with the 110 ridings that now exist and replacing them with 28 regions.

ELECT MEMBERS

Each of those regions would elect three to five members, and there would be 120 members in the national assembly.

Electors would vote for a slate of candidates fielded by a party and seats would be distributed by a mathematical formula.

Under this system, voters could find that their riding has three members — all from different parties.

The second alternative, called the "mixed two-thirds-one-third system," would involve adding 50 seats to the assembly.

There would be 110 members elected as they now are in 110 ridings, but in addition, 13 regions would be superimposed on the ridings.

Each region would return two to six members.

In addition to voting for their member, as they now do, voters could cast ballots for a slate of candidates fielded by a party.

The third proposed alternative is modelled on the system in use in West Germany.

Under this system, there would be 220 seats in the national assembly, half of them filled by the "first past the post system" and the other half by regional proportional representation.

A green paper is not a policy statement. Rather, it is meant to foster discussion on a topic before policy is set.

Business luncheons: Forgetting that speech not a sin

TORONTO (CP) — Pity the poor tycoon who decides he's going to tell it like it is — after the creme caramel. Five minutes after the end of the luncheon speech, a University of Toronto sociologist says, no one will remember because it doesn't matter. All that will matter to dining businessmen is that they are eating together.

"The underlying significance of the business luncheon is that it is an occasion of commensality — people eating together at the same table," says Howard Boughey, an associate professor of sociology. Boughey, an ethno-methodologist who studies social institutions to find recurring behavior patterns, said in an interview that what makes eating together so important for businessmen is that it expresses and promotes the trust essential to business life. "It's called intersubjectivity. My stomach rumbles, your stomach rumbles. I say, 'Mmmm'; you say, 'Mmmm'. I drink, you drink. We are going through an identical set of biological experiences, visibly doing the same thing.

"I have a very good warrant for believing that your experience is identical to mine. And this physiological commonality provides grounds for believing that what I think the luncheon speaker means is what you think he means. Out of biological sharing comes other sharing." The guest speaker at a business luncheon will be wise to keep the speech short and light, Boughey said. "After a good lunch, blood is coursing through the digestive tract, rather than the brain. People are a little groggy. We don't expect the speaker to say much because we couldn't comprehend a difficult and important line of talk even if he gave us one. "We forgive him for putting us to sleep and blame the meal. If we have been lulled into a good state of mind, we will credit the speaker. Above all, he added, a wise speaker will avoid controversy. "Eating is one of the most conservative experiences. We eat familiar foods to get familiar sensations. A speech should be seen as a continuation of the meal and should contain no surprises.

Farm Profit Management

The increasing price of farmland across Canada has created opportunities for some and caused problems for others. Statistics Canada publishes an index of farmland value per acre with 1961 as 100. As shown in the accompanying graph, their index shows values have increased well over 4 times in the last 17 years.

In Saskatchewan, where the Saskatchewan Land Bank Commission acquires agricultural acres in large numbers, they have found that the average price of $53 per acre in 1972 has risen to $180 per acre in 1978. In Ontario, farmland values have apparently more than tripled since 1970.

It appears from the following table that the rate of increase in value may be slowing down:

Rate of Increase in Canadian Farmland Values:
in 1974	27 per cent
in 1975	23 per cent
in 1976	15 per cent
in 1977	7 per cent

However, this probably understates the extent of recent inflationary increases in the price of land in many regional areas. In some localities (for a variety of reasons) prices have continued to increase dramatically in the last 12 months.

Possibly as much as 75 per cent of land transfers have been to a farmer who owns adjoining land or is farming in the immediate neighbourhood. Such buyers cannot be considered as "uninformed".

The balance of sales have been made to a variety of purchasers — farmers relocating or expanding into new areas, buyers from foreign lands (many of whom are farmers wanting to relocate their farm business), investors from both Canada and other countries who may not intend to actively farm the land, and corporations that have been engaged in activities other than primary agriculture.

The reasons for purchasing farmland are as varied as the types of buyers. Land is perceived as being a tangible asset desirable to own. Few other assets an investor could have held in the last few years would show the increase in value that farmland has shown.

It is evident that buyers of farmland today are working by a new yardstick which includes probably future trends as well as current income producing possibilities. Only if you assume that inflation is going to continue through this century, that agriculture is going to continue to be of top-flight importance, and that economic conditions are going to continue favourable indefinitely, can you justify top payments for land today.

A recent study at the University of Guelph showed that if you are growing corn in southern Ontario and you expect returns of $3.00-bu. at costs of $150.00-acre to grow it and your expectations of rising land values are as high as 10 per cent per year then you could be willing to pay up to $1,600 per acre. However, if corn looks like only returning $2.00-bu. and land value increases at a mere 5 per cent per year then the viable land value drops to about $300-acre.

Lenders are concerned with the impact higher land prices and heavy financing have on a farmer's cash flow for servicing of long term debt.

Obviously every farmer who has a long-term debt arising from the acquisition of farmland must be looked at on an individual basis. When a farmer who owns 400 acres of land with a debt load of $200 per acre purchases another 100 acres for $1,200-acre he has a far different situation than the farmer who owns 100 acres with debt load of $200-acre buys an additional 400 acres at $1,200 per acre with maximum financing.

The first farmer's average debt load per acre is such that he will experience little difficulty in serving his long term real estate debt.

On the other hand, the second farmer has made a big increase in the size of his land ownership and will have a problem with only a modest dip in the prices of the commodities he is growing.

For this farmer, debt servicing puts a serious demand on cash flow and represents probably the largest cash drain to be met annually out of profits. High farmland appraisals and high percentages of loan advances against appraisals may actually work to the disadvantage of the farmer.

Of course, if profit margins in farming are high it will permit farmers who have invested at the right time to increase the size of their business and service the debt out of continued profits.

Caution and care should be used before making a major purchase. Don't believe those who insist that land prices can only go higher. They may be right, but they won't make your debt payments if they're wrong — you will!

That's the real bottom line — your ability to generate net cash flow.

If you can't reasonably expect to make the payments, then land is too high for you. If you can, then still be a cautious buyer — be sure in your own mind it's the best marginal use of investment dollars in your business.

Computer shopping cheaper, quicker

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Shopping is cheaper and quicker at the Ultra-Mart because grocery lists have been linked to a computer.

Gary Glass, 24, a college dropout, opened the shopping service in suburban Washington.

The operation has been experimental since last June, with $10-a-year membership limited to 1,500 shoppers.

Every two or three months they get a catalogue of Ultra-Mart's inventory. To shop, they phone the company and place an order which is run through a computer.

"Customers can sit at home and determine their real needs by looking at their cupboards and shelves," Glass said. "It also eliminates impulse buying."

ORDERS COST LESS

Within two hours after items are ordered — Glass says they cost five to 15 per cent less than at conventional stores in the area — the shopper can stop by the Ultra-Mart warehouse and have the order put in his car within a few minutes.

Those who pick up their purchases get an added two-percent discount on their order. Delivery is available for orders over $20, but it costs $1.50.

Free delivery is offered for orders over $50, but Glass said that restricts the shopper because he must wait around the house for the store's only truck to arrive.

The store offers name-brand and private-label goods, along with frozen meat. No dairy products, fresh meats or produce are offered.

Prices were stable during the test period, but will be adjusted as more people join the service.

"We are geared up for mass volumes of purchases," Glass said.

MAKES A PROFIT

Glass won't discuss Ultra-Mart's finances "because I'm restricted from talking about them by the board of directors." But he says the store is profitable for its 20 investors.

The Discoverer Seven Seas holds the record for the deepest offshore oil well discovery.

Drilling ship searches for Grand Banks oil

The offshore drilling season is about to get underway off Newfoundland — and there will be a surge of activity there this year helping the Maritimes economy generally.

The drillship Discoverer Seven Seas, already the holder of the world's deepwater drilling record, arrived recently in St. John's, Nfld., to take on food, fuel, casing and cement in preparation for sailing out to the Texaco Shell et al Blue E-18 drilling location 180 miles northeast on the Gander Block.

She will sail once ice conditions are favorable. St. John's is now the main base for stepped-up offshore drilling activities off Newfoundland and the Labrador coast.

The Discoverer is 534 feet long, has a beam of 80 ft., and a maximum draft of 25 ft. She can drill in more than 6,000 ft. of water and reach down a further 19,000 ft. of water into the earth's crust. The deep-drilling record she holds is in 4,420 ft. of water.

The Discoverer is on contract to Texaco Canada to drill a wildcat in 5,000 ft. of water on the Gander Block. This will be a new world water depth for conventional hydrocarbon exploration. The wild-cat will go down 19,000 feet below the sea bottom to test a major oil and gas structure outlined by seismic work earlier.

The operation will take 120 days and cost more than $25 million. Whether a discovery is made or not, the well will be abandoned. If it is a discovery, more wells will be needed to determine its commercial significance.

It would cost more than $1 billion to bring a commercial discovery on production, Texaco Canada says. The company is operator for a group including Petro-Canada, Hudson's Bay Oil & Gas, Home Oil Co. Ltd. (Consumers Gas), and Dome Petroleum. This group will earn a half-interest in the 5.5 million acre block of permits held by Shell Canada and associates.

The support services will be based in St. John's, including a large helicopter and three supply vessels. A small submarine is based on the drillship. One workboat will have the job of keeping an eye open for surface ice and bergs. It can tow away small bergs.

Asbestos problem limited to 13 dryers

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumers' Association of Canada published a list Monday of blow hair dryers it advises consumers not to buy or use.

After testing 64 models for potentially dangerous asbestos particles, the association ruled out 13.

The federal government is conducting tests to determine whether asbestos particles from blow dryers can be emitted into the air.

The models on the association's list include seven General Electric dryers, the PortaPro PD400, Power Brush PB100A, Power Brush PB200A, Pro-650 PD700, Pro Turbo TD100, Pro Turbo Deluxe TD200 and Super Pro TD310; three Sunbeam models, the Brush 'n Blow PHD-1, the Dial and Dry AD95 and Li'l Red Devil HD85; two GS Iona Products, the PD 1350 and Voyageur M1200; and the Topaz product, the 900 GM-801.

NO ASBESTOS FOUND

None of the Braun, Charlescraft, Clairol, Gillette, Philips, Ronson, Shick, Soloray or Kenmore models tested by the CAC were found to contain asbestos.

The association said in a news release it will urge that asbestos-lined hairdryers be removed from the market if government tests show they emit asbestos particles.

"One United States researcher has likened the health hazard associated with the use of asbestos-containing hair dryers to living near an asbestos mine," the CAC says in the release.

The group will press the government to consider a ban on the use of asbestos in all consumer products.

Detailed results of the test are to be published in the August issue of The Canadian Consumer.

Charland survives credibility test

FERNAND LAPLANTE: Charland was afraid of him

By CLAUDIA BOWERS
SHERBROOKE — Jean Charland, the Crown's 21-year-old key witness in the murder trial of Fernand Laplante, was the subject of a credibility attack by defence lawyer Jean-Pierre Rancourt yesterday as the process entered its second week at the Palais de Justice.

Rancourt hinted that Charland was lying about the role he played in last summer's shooting death of unemployed waiter Raymond Grimard. He suggested Charland was connected with drug trafficking, was linked with the Gitans motorcycle gang, carried out contracts to commit robberies and arson, and concluded by intimating that it was Charland's idea to kill Grimard.

Charland flatly denied all connection with the traffic of drugs, and claimed his part in the death of Grimard was as a witness and he had nothing to do with the actual murder.

Charland explained he was present to drive the car the night of July 5th during a break-in which they (Laplante, Charland, Grimard and Bergeron) were going to attempt at the home of Paul Nadeau on Astbury Road.

Rancourt was referring to a statement made by Charland last Nov. 11, when the key witness was picked up by police at the scene of an attempted arson at the Aloha Motel, Bourque Blvd. Later that evening, Charland made the statement incriminating Laplante in the murder of Carole Fecteau near Coaticook.

Charland claimed that he had been framed in connection with the arson attempt, as well as having been shot at on three or four different occasions last summer. Charland said the police claimed they had a statement of Laplante's incriminating him (Charland) in the murder of Fecteau, and even read him certain passages to prove their point.

Rancourt questioned Charland about his reaction to this news. "It was shocking to say the least," Charland said.

The witness flatly denied any knowledge of the Carole Fecteau murder which occurred two weeks before the killings of Grimard and his girlfriend Manon Bergeron. He stated that he knew Carole only slightly, even though she was a close friend of his brother Marc. His last contact with her had been a conversation regarding the damages to her friend's car which Charland and a friend had stolen. Charland said she was very angry in spite of the fact he offered to pay the cost of repairs.

"She pressed charges anyway," he said, and he was subsequently picked up by police.

When asked by Rancourt what his reaction was when he found out about her death, he replied "I was surprised to say the least, as I knew nothing about it."

During questions concerning his testimony at the coroner's inquest into the death of Grimard and Bergeron, Charland admitted he had lied.

"I was afraid of Laplante," he said. "We were in the same cell for a short time and he threatened me." Charland explained that his statement was the truth, but when questioned about it at the inquest, because of Laplante's threats, had sworn that it was a pack of lies.

Rancourt.

"Yes," replied Charland. "Are you sure of that?"

Charland stated, "Yes." Real Chateaufort, a detective from the Criminal Investigation Department of the Sherbrooke Detachment of the QPP had been detailed to keep Laplante under surveillance after receiving a phone call on July 4th informing the police that Laplante was planning an armed robbery at the Imperial Bank of Commerce in North Hatley.

July 6th, he was sent to Astbury Road and found the body of a man and later of a woman a short way off Astbury Road down a lane running parallel to the Coaticook River.

A search of the body of the man revealed a small sum of money together with a paper with what was later deduced to be the telephone number of the QPP office in Sherbrooke written on it, together with the name 'Tricia Hall'. Chateaufort explained that Cpl. Patrick Hall is connected with the QPP alcohol and morality squad.

The trial continues today with several more witnesses scheduled to be heard for the Crown.

Group to meet Berube

EAST ANGLUS (FJM) — Tomorrow afternoon, the ad hoc committee for the survival of the Domtar plant at East Anglus will meet in Quebec with Yves Berube, minister of Lands and Forests and other ministry officials.

The meeting will aim to discuss the progress in federal-provincial negotiations concerning a five-year plan to modernize paper mills in the province.

The ad hoc committee also hopes to discover the ministry's reaction to the report submitted by the committee in June, 1978, giving recommendations concerning the type of investment and development required to ensure that the East Anglus mills continue to operate.

The committee is further interested in the ministry's views on the future availability of primary resources for the pulp and paper industry in the Eastern Townships.

This will be the third time that a meeting between the ad hoc committee and Berube has been organized. Berube was unable to attend either of the previous two but it is expected that he will be present tomorrow.

Fire accidental

SHERBROOKE (BP) — Monday evening's fire at 50 London St. was started accidentally, the Sherbrooke Fire Dept. Prevention Division has determined. Inspector Leopold Bourque (above) said electrical wiring was almost certainly the cause of a blaze in the three-storey apartment building's storage area in the basement. Apparently, the wiring was not of equal size for the total distance of application and a short circuit was caused when too much current passed through it. The fire was similar to two other recent outbreaks — which also started in basement storage areas; municipal police have been sent Inspector Gerard Charron's report on a fire at 160 Murray St., termed as suspicious. It is the third time firefighters have been called to the same address in the past six months, the first fire being the only one definitely termed as accidental.

Rock Island agrees to treat U.S. sewage

DERBY LINE (FJM) — The town councils of Derby Line in Vermont and of Rock Island in Quebec have agreed that Derby Line's sewage can be treated at the water purification plant in Rock Island.

Rock Island may have to invest a considerable sum in the expansion of their purification plant. Wilfrid Morin, an engineer with Lemieux, Royer, Donaldson, Fields and Assoc., said Rock Island will have to spend a sum of $430,000 on the plant in order to increase its capacity to the degree necessary to service both towns.

Bob Burman, an engineer with the firm Whitman and Howard in Derby Line, said the treatment of Derby Line's sewage in Rock Island offers the least expensive solution to the problem faced by the Vermont community.

Both towns feel that it is crucial to come to some agreement because both want to diminish the present level of pollution in the region's streams and lakes.

C'ville art centre exhibition

The Cowansville Art Centre will feature paintings by Mary S. Martin Saturday, April 28th and May 5th and Sunday April 29th and May 6th, from 2-5 p.m. Admission free. For group showings phone 263-5838. The Centre is at 225 Main St.

KNOWLTON — You wake up Sunday morning and figure someone has kicked you in the ribs, then suddenly relax and, in self-justification, put it off to a mild bout of pleurisy or some other mundane malady.

Then comes the nitty-gritty — a friend in this fine town is much better on fast developing and printing and, to save your editor hell on a given Monday morning — by eliminating all guesswork on outlines you go to pick them up.

Striking off to the womb of darkness via a 10-wheel taxi, otherwise known as a Voyageur bus, is bad enough, however when you hit one of your old stamping grounds and find it occupied by members of the Toronto sect of the Cork County faction of the provisional IRA vetted to Brome (provincially, that is,) you start to wonder a bit.

Where does the blarney leave off and the reality begin? Now the Lakeview Hotel, otherwise known as the 'Sow's Ear,' has seen many things come and go — a couple of mining promotions in recent years, a monkey devastating all that was either sacred or unholy in years gone by, a former owner curry-combing a horse in the lobby on a cold winter's morn.

But when a Torontonian via Dublin tells me the joint is going to become the 'Club Med' of the Townships what few hairs left on my balding pate started to rise — not in protest, not in awe, but due to the utter sacrilege of seeing one of the last havens of Townshippers turned over to the invaders.

All types of Merry Andrew was raised in North Hatley, but not a word has yet to be said here. It's getting that one can't tell the Mediterranean Irish from the others!

Fair is as fair must be. The joint has been known as the 'Sow's Ear' for more than a decade or two and they have finally acknowledged the pig's contribution by re-naming a bar, in its honor.

Gratuitous comments on the origin of the name are to be foregone until one checks things out with Joe Lefebvre, trivia professor emeritus, of the area. Even Joe can be induced in error from time to time.

One thing positive must be said, after all the preamble has been negative, is that Allan Murphy, the new principal owner, is leaving nothing to chance.

The center of the new brochure, which should be out in the immediate future, shows an artist's sketch of the ancient building — my mother who was born prior to the 20th century and remembers it from her youth — with a halo of sunbeams shooting up in backlight.

There must be a different sense of direction in Eire — our sun normally rises in the east, not the north!

The gatefold goes on: "Heaven, Where no simple pleasure is ever denied."

Clergy might dispute that statement, otherwise they couldn't exist.

"At last the Club Med Idea Comes to Canada," is the lead on the proposed brochure.

The idea is great and the area needs a good all-round hotel. The only thing we have to ask is: "Are potential members of a 'Club Med' type operation ready to adapt to the mores of the last bastion of English heritage in the Province? The reference to the 'Duchy' of Brome sits hard, after all the republic was proposed on pages of this newspaper some decade ago.

Ah well, imitation is the sincerest form of flattery.

Townships talk

BCS student wins Rotary speaking

SHERBROOKE (JD) — Michael Austin of Lennoxville, a Grade 11 student at Bishop's College School, was declared the winner of the Sherbrooke Rotary's annual public speaking contest at the St. George's Club.

Austin, speaking on sovereignty-association, was one of five speakers in last night's competition and will go on to the Montreal Rotary finals at the Chateau Champlain next month.

Also speaking were Nancy Williams and Janice Vaudry of Alexander Galt, Garry Jones of Stanstead College and Ron Haigh of Massey-Vanier.

Champlain Grad dance Saturday

Champlain Regional College's Graduation Dance will be held Saturday, April 28.

The dinner will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Dewhurst Dining Hall. The dance will be held in the "Bish-Pub" from 9:30 p.m. on. Music will be provided by "Octavian", a band from Ottawa.

Tickets are $10.00 per couple or $6.00 for a single ticket, and the dress is semi-formal. Please buy your tickets at the C.S.A. office, Room 206 of the Union Building; or from Jane Loiselle, McGreer 211, Champlain Regional College.

SCA wants no vote to salaries

SHERBROOKE (FJM) — L'Association des Citoyens de Sherbrooke voted overwhelmingly in favor of a proposal recommending that people vote "no" in the referendum concerning the salaries of the Mayor and Councillors to be held on Sunday, April 29.

The meeting of the Association, which has close to 500 members four months after its foundation, was attended by 114 people of whom 105 voted in support of the proposition.

The Association is in favour of a negative vote because it feels the salaries of $40,000 for the mayor and $10,000 for the councillors would still be too high.

Members decided to continue their campaign by setting a chain of telephone calls to as many of the 27,000 eligible voters as possible in motion.

Pierre Deschenes, president of the Association, noted in his speech that the mayors of Quebec, Ste. Foy and Trois Rivières are paid $32,400, $29,946 and $19,300 respectively.

Horse course future by May?

SHERBROOKE (FJM) — Claude Dussault, president of Les Promoteurs de l'Industrie des Courses a Sherbrooke, met with Mayor Jacques O'Bready Sunday and says he hopes the future of horse racing in Sherbrooke will be decided within three or four weeks.

Dussault said the mayor is interested in studying the possibility of investment in the old Sherbrooke track but that nothing can be done until Bills 67 and 68, which will determine the governmental position on and the status of horse-racing in the province, are passed. They are at present before the National Assembly.

The horse racing track in Trois Rivières is being operated in part by the municipal government thus reducing the financial burden and risk of the promoters involved through grants and reduced taxes.

If Bills 67 and 68 say that municipal governments are not allowed to be involved in the running of race tracks, Dussault suggests it will be too expensive a venture to enter into. However, if the involvement of municipalities is permitted he thinks the provincial government may be willing to provide $1 million to get the Sherbrooke track going once more.

Voter's list revision continues

If you are a qualified voter but weren't enumerated for the upcoming federal election, you can still get on the voters' list for your polling division.

If you are an eligible, qualified elector, but were missed in enumeration, it's up to you to get your name on the revised, final list of voters. You can do this by contacting the Returning Officer of your electoral district who will explain how you may get your name on the list during the revision of the preliminary voters' list. The revising process makes additions, deletions and corrections to the preliminary list compiled by the enumerators, and takes place Wednesday to Friday, May 2 to May 4.

If you are absent during both enumeration and the revising period, you can have your spouse or a blood relative make a sworn application to get your name on the revised list, but remember, you must contact your Returning Officer before the period of revision indicated above.

In rural areas, revision is done by the enumerator in each polling division.

If you live in the country, but your name is on neither the preliminary nor revised list of voters, you may still vote on election day if you are qualified. At your polling station, you may take an oath that you are entitled to vote and be vouched for by another elector whose name is on the official list of electors where your name normally should have appeared. But this rule doesn't apply to voters in urban polling divisions.

KEITH SPICER COMMENTS:

B.C. dragon killer readies one-two election punch

VANCOUVER — Which man in Canada has a splendid chance next month of both bringing down a major provincial government and of deciding the outcome of the federal election? Of course, Vic Stephens.

Don't laugh. Bear with me. Mr. Stephens is the leader of the B.C. Conservative Party. When he shaves each morning, he can say hello to his entire caucus in the mirror. The Social Credit government of premier Bill Bennett, whose only problem shaving is a Richard Nixon-style five-o'clock shadow, holds 35 seats to Dave Barrett's NDP opposition of 18.

What makes Vic Stephens a potential two-dragon-killer? The running of federal and B.C. provincial elections at the same time — May 10 for Victoria, May 22 for Ottawa.

On the federal front, the latest 41-41-per cent Gallup poll tie of Grits and Tories seems likely (with Liberals squeezed mainly into Quebec) to translate into at least a Joe Clark minority government. That is assuming Clark continues to lie low, avoid policy, drop no footballs (fatal to Bob Stanfield) and duck a T.V. debate with Pierre Trudeau and Ed Broadbent.

A Clark win in the likely May 22 squeaker supposes the Tories can rope in more than 20 seats of B.C.'s 28. Until last week, this looked possible — with the NDP taking about six and the Liberals being cut from eight to a lucky two.

Then came Kamloops. Two weeks ago Mr. Stephens went to see his national leader, Joe Clark, in his federal campaign hotel suite. He got the kind of wincing cold shoulder you might give to an old friend with the bubonic plague: Clark refused all photos of the two brother Tories together, any joint statement, even a whisper of joint campaigning or shared interests.

After turning for a week, Vic Stephens blew his cork — and blew the whistle on a backroom deal between the Clark Tories and Bennett Socreds which makes even Liberal jiggery-pokery look bush-league.

Clark, claimed Stephens, had agreed to beef up the old Tory-Socred non-aggression pact to specifically shaft B.C. provincial Tories. The deal, he says, ties financial help for federal Tories from Socred business backers to a strict commitment that Clark's forces let their provincial Tory brothers wither on the vine. Thus Bennett could ride back to power by corralling an undivided right-of-centre vote.

Clark's subsequent red-faced "no comment" and Mr. Stephens' own reputation as a straight-shooter suggest that the deal — despite Bennett's denials — is every bit as unsavory as it sounds.

For both Bennett and Clark, the blown-open deal could prove as revealing and momentum-stopping as the nuclear nightmare at Harrisburg.

For Mr. Bennett, the outlook was already sombre when he called the May 10 vote. His own party's polls warn of a narrow NDP majority; Stephens claims a poll leaked from "another party" gave him a stunning 20 per cent popular-vote standing in mid-February — up from 4 per cent in the 1975 election.

Anything over 10 per cent for Stephens could split the "anti-socialist" vote and put Barrett back in the saddle.

How does the Clark-Stephens imbroglio boost Stephens and the NDP?

—It may sicken some Tory voters into slapping out at Bennett's backroom blackmail by giving Stephens a sympathy vote.

—The nationally-noted fight with Clark gives Stephens vote-getting publicity as a tough man of principle.

—Worst of all for Bennett, the soured deal will play havoc with joint Tory-Socred canvass teams. While federal and provincial New Democrats back each other to the hilt in a double canvass for the concurrent campaigns, federal Tory workers must either knife their provincial brothers, or, by helping them, risk drying up Socred money destined for Clark. Many may just not canvass provincially at all.

Clark loses at least as tellingly:

—As party to a cigars-and-cynicism secret understanding against his own party's provincial brethren, he comes off as anything but the new-style leader needed to dislodge a tired 11-year-old Trudeau government.

—Many Tory voters may be annoyed enough by Clark's shabby treatment of Stephens to punish Clark by voting Liberal — out here, disaffected Tories do not drift far enough left to back the NDP.

—Tory workers are in moral disarray, and if enough "defect" to help their own provincial party against Bennett, they may bleed off vital canvassing strength for Clark until at least

—Clark's recent self-congratulation about being able to "get along" with provincial premiers (while Trudeau allegedly fights with them) takes on with Bennett a new and — for the Liberals — deliciously ironic dimension.

If all this queers the Conservatives in only eight or 10 federal seats west of the Rockies, we may have a TV cliffhanger in which, around 2 a.m., Eastern Standard Time May 23, you can watch Joe Clark slip off the cliff and Pierre Trudeau hang on by his fingernails.

Sure, Ontario and Quebec count a little too. But which man, there or anywhere else, carries the double-dragon clout of Vic Stephens?

The whole baby

Only Pierre Elliott Trudeau could stand up in front of an audience in a province he hasn't a hope of winning and tell potential voters he might well be tempted to try to stay in power if the Tories win with a minority.

We don't agree with Joe Clark that the Prime Minister is showing contempt for democracy; as far as we're concerned all's fair in love, war and politics, which is acknowledged to make strange bedfellows.

If the Conservatives managed only a minority win, the Liberals could conceivably stay in power if they achieved a working relationship with Ed Broadbent's New Democrats. Trudeau managed to buffalo the NDP pretty well in 1972, and Pierre and Ed as bedfellows somehow don't seem quite as odd a couple as Joe Clark and Fabien Roy, which is the alternative.

But the Grit-NDP affair holds out no hope whatsoever for Canada. It would be a niggling, grinding war of nerves and attrition, with the average backbencher becoming even more the political animal than he is now. Literally nothing would be accomplished until the inevitable lost vote of confidence forced another general election, and we'd definitely see the collapse of one or both of the two smallest parties in the wake of public reaction to those wasted years.

We need bold, vigorous leadership in this country, not rule by committee. The very fact that Mr. Trudeau and his Liberals are preparing to accept half the baby is proof enough for us that the whole child should be handed to Joe Clark and his Conservatives.

Spray season

Even as the first hints of greenery begin to tint our roadsides, the Ministry of Transport, Hydro-Quebec and the railways are cleaning their spray equipment for the annual deluge of herbicides and defoliants.

Protests do no good. Apparently Quebec is still not sufficiently convinced of the importance of the ecosystem to appoint an environment minister; Marcel Leger is responsible for the environment, but he's also responsible for keeping regional Parti Quebecois associations in line on policy questions, and guess what comes first?

It makes no difference that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has banned 2,4,5-T, nor that British Columbia has declared a moratorium on the use of 2,4-D as a large-scale herbicide until new assessments may be made on its efficacy. Ontario and the federal government are both studying its long-term effects.

It doesn't take a genius to figure out that any oil-based spray — 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T included — is going to wash onto the ground and be carried to major watercourses, where it will enter the food chain. If Mr. Leger has any concern for the Quebec environment whatsoever, he'll put other concerns aside and tackle this issue.

There is another side to the coin; that of the farmer plagued with the migration of milkweed, goldenrod and other weeds into his fields. But we happen to believe there are biological methods of controlling weed pests, not chemical methods.

As for roadside weeds and shrubs, one look at our student unemployment figures should be enough to convince Transport Minister Lucien Lessard the best idea would be to purchase a few thousand scythes and send the students out to cut 'em down. JAMES DUFF

Editor:

Tracing my family genealogy, I find the founder of my family in England, Robert Lawrence, was born about 1150 A.D. Attending his king, Richard Coeur de Lion in the war of the crusades in the Holy Land, he distinguished himself at the siege of Acre. He was knighted Sir Robert of Ashton Hall, and obtained his coat of arms - Argent a cross raguly gules - in 1191 A.D. (I have used that coat of arms on my business cards and stationary about 30 years.) About 1630 some of my ancestors moved to Watertown, Massachusetts, and to Groton, Mass. about 1662.

According to the history pioneers of the Eastern Townships, (Mrs. C.M. Day), my ancestor Isaac Lawrence came from near Burlington, Vt. in 1793. He chose a location of land in Shefford county, given by the British government. He and his family moved onto this land and homesteaded it in 1794. Members of my family and I have lived in this area of the Eastern Townships since that time.

We have lived as farmers, workers in industries, laborers, professionals and businessmen. Our family language has remained predominately English, but within the time of my memory - nearly 60 years - most family members have had a working command of the French language as well. We have used it freely in our daily contact with our French-speaking neighbors.

My history establishes my origin as Anglo Saxon. Today in 1979 I am classed as an Anglophone, and stand accused of misunderstanding, taking unfair advantage and exploitation of my Francophone neighbors in Quebec.

I do not accept such accusations on my own behalf, for other family members or my ancestors.

Who is making these accusations?

The most obvious, of course, is the Parti Quebecois government elected Nov. 15, 1976 by due process of our existing laws. It must be noted though that this election was highly influenced by the general distrust of the voters for the previous Bourassa regime, which had earned a lot of distrust by their general practice of patronage and bill 22.

The Parti Quebecois government states strongly that the Francophone culture faces great danger of assimilation and extinction from the surrounding Anglophone culture on this continent. They have support from a few groups such as La Societe St. Jean Baptiste.

The Parti Quebecois campaigned on a platform of good government for all Quebecers as a province of Canada. They have steadily been tightening control over many areas of everyday life within the province. Much of this has been done by legislation, i.e. Bills 90, 116 and 101.

Bill 90 Zoning law: Though we pay higher taxes than any other Canadian taxpayers, if we own land outside the towns or cities within the zoning belt, we can not sell it except for farming. Much of this land is not suitable for farming. That has to be decided not by our local council, but by a commission in Quebec. Tightening control.

Bill 116: Affecting our agricultural people. Talk to our farmers. You will find these bills worry them.

Bill 101 has had enough publicity. We know its restrictions. In effect it creates two classes of citizens within the borders of Quebec. It is policed by the Office de la Langue Francaise. That is tightening control.

I want to point out here that every one of these bills is affecting the daily lives of both Francophone and Anglophone Quebecers. We live together, we PAY together.

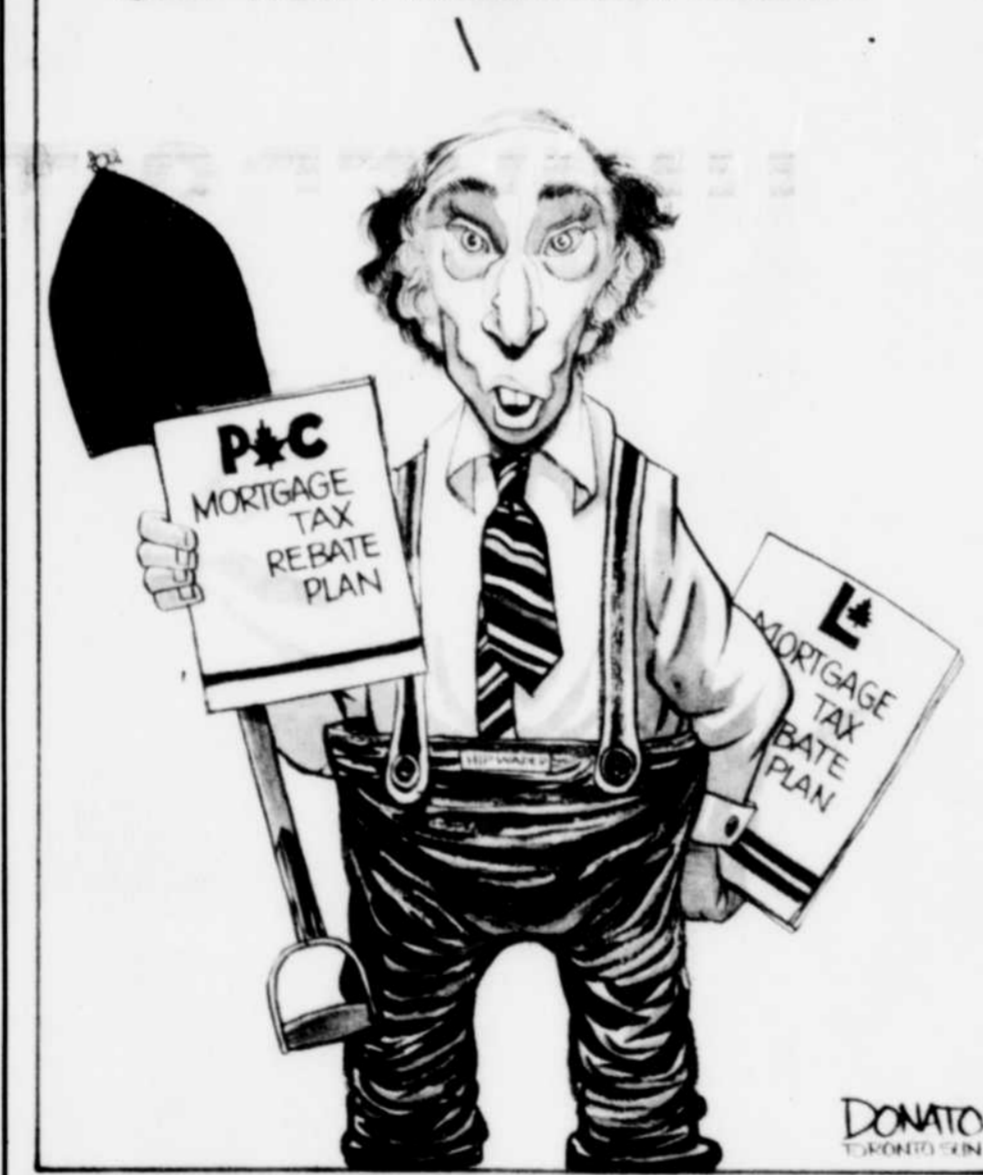

On March 7, I went to my church, the Granby United, to see a film, Canada's New Quebec, presented by Rev. Guy Deschamps, national officer for French-English relations for the United Church of Canada. The film was well done. I believe its purpose was to explain why the Francophone Quebecois think they have been misunderstood, taken unfair advantage of and exploited by the Anglophones in general. By interview, song and narration, different aspects of the lives of the French Quebecois were brought out. The fact of the return to France of the French merchants and tradesmen after the battle of the plains of Abraham no doubt left ample chances for exploitation by British merchants moving in and controlling the economy. There are exploiters in every race of people.

Probably the paper companies of Gaspé drove hard bargains. I am sure the people doing the work worked hard. Having done several years of hard physical work and still doing more of the same than most people years younger, I can only recommend it. In itself, it provides a lot of satisfaction and peace of mind, both things we all lack in the province of Quebec today, though it's probable

Washington Merry-Go-Round

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — In a voice husky from booze and laryngitis, Billy Carter recently joked with reporters about his Libyan connection. He alluded to his big mouth, which has lost friends and alienated people. The Libyans, he cracked, "are the best friends I got in the world right now."

But to Justice Department officials, it is no laughing matter. They want to know how President Carter's younger brother became so close to the Libyans, who have granted arms and asylum to international terrorists and have befriended some of the world's most notorious rogues and renegades.

Billy Carter told reporters that his only interest in Libya is to promote Libyan-American friendship. But the Justice Department is trying to determine whether he has stepped across the legal line and should register as a foreign agent. This would be required by law if he has performed any services for the Libyan government.

The Justice Department asked Carter three months ago to explain his relationship with the Libyans, but he has not responded. Meanwhile, we have conducted our own investigation of Carter's Libyan capter.

Carter was put together with the Libyans through Mario Lianza, an Atlanta real estate operator, at the Libyan's urging.

Libya's charge d'affaires in Italy, Gibrill Shalouf, reached in Rome, told us that he had helped arranged the invitation for Carter.

An entourage of eight Georgia politicians and businessmen, including state senators Floyd Hudgins and Henry Russell, accompanied the president's brother to Libya. They traveled first class, stayed at the best hotels and were shown around Rome and Tripoli in chauffeur-driven cars.

The Libyans picked up all the bills and handed out gifts, including an expensive leather saddle for Carter. One source familiar with the arrangements estimated that the trip must have cost the Libyans over $50,000.

We flew to Tripoli to piece together the story. We learned that the Georgians had discussed establishing a corporation to handle Libyan investments in the United States. "They were eager to relieve Libya of some of its petrodollars," an American diplomat told us.

Significantly, Carter talked to the Libyans about lifting the freeze on eight C-130 transport planes, which the Libyans have purchased from the United States but which Washington has held up, intelligence sources told our reporter Avivah Swirsky. The planes have been gathering mildew for five years on the Lockheed grounds at Marietta, Ga.

The Georgians and Libyans alike denied that the controversial planes had been discussed. But competent sources insisted that the Libyans hoped to use the president's brother to get their planes released.

Most members of the Georgia congressional delegation, meanwhile, have joined Billy Carter in trying to break the ban on military transport shipments to Libya. All but two Georgia congressmen have asked President Carter in a private March 21 letter to "sell twelve L-100's and associated support worth approximately $200 million" to Libya. The L-100s and C-130s are basically the same aircraft.

From all accounts, Billy was not his usual fun-loving, beer-swilling, urinating-on-the-wall self in Tripoli. He was taken aside by U.S. embassy officials and cautioned about the "sensitive nature" of Libyan-American relations. Thereafter, he was the model of decorum.

He responded to a long welcoming speech with a simple, polite "thank you." His host, Ahmed Shahiti, head of Libya's foreign liaison office, later delivered an after-dinner speech criticizing U.S. support of Israel. But Carter scrupulously avoided any political retort.

He also patiently played the role of the president's brother, shaking hands at an embassy garden reception and visiting American children at the Oil Company school.

Sources differ, however, on Billy Carter's reaction to the cultural shock of spending a week in a country that prohibits alcohol. Some say he didn't touch a drop, except on U.S. property at the embassy reception. Others confide that he managed to keep his whistle wet.

Libya's revolutionary leader, Muammar Qaddafi, was away from Tripoli during the Carter visit. He left it to his top associates to entertain the Georgians. But he complained to us afterward about the ban on the C-130s.

"The United States is behaving as a thief," he grumped. "They didn't give us planes. They didn't give us even our money back. Of course, the money we have given the United States, if we had kept it, would now become double because of the interest."

Footnote: Billy Carter not only failed to respond to the Justice Department's questions about his Libyan relationship but refused to answer a grand jury's questions about curious loans to the Carter peanut works. He is drying out at the Long Beach, Calif., naval hospital where he is also unavailable to comment on our story.

Cleanup awareness is NOT a waste of time

Editor:
I am writing a hot and hasty response to an editorial entitled "Dirty business". I'm not upset at its general message which says that the Massawippi River "is filthy enough to make a hyena retch". After working at trying to depollute the river for two years I couldn't have put it in better words. What burns me is his comment of past efforts by the C.C.C., a local environment group, to do something about it. He is insinuating our futility with the words "let's not be fooling anyone with these cleanup awareness weeks and all that jazz."
I phoned Mr. Duff to ask him what he meant by this since he and the paper had been supporting us previously. The first thing he said to me was that he never realized Lennoxville shot its you-know-what straight into the Massawippi till he saw the outlet last week. I can only respond to this by saying this is his own ignorance. If he had only read some of the infinite material being distributed during our "Week", or taken part in one activity, or read his own paper more closely Mr. Duff would have discovered that Lennoxville pollutes directly like almost every other town in the area. The sad thing is that the editor is just a very good example of anyone else in the community. Do people have to have their noses stuck in the Massawippi before they realize the severity of the problem? Does it have to take another Harrisburg?

Secondly, as this has more to do with his comment of "fooling anyone with these cleanup awareness weeks", Mr. Duff said he thought we have been too nice (i.e. to work with Lennoxville during our "Week" when Lennoxville is to blame). This is easy for him to say. He doesn't seem to realize that the C.C.C., the farmers, the industrialists, and the community at large including the town council have to lobby the provincial government for the immense sum of money that is needed. The problem of cleaning Lennoxville's sewage is not so much a part of the town council itself as it is everybody's problem. This requires working together.

Mr. Duff's editorial is typical. It's so easy to complain when you don't know the true situation. However, it is quite another thing to give well thought concrete advice. And it is another thing altogether to roll up one's sleeves and deal with the situation. This is exactly where the problem lies. The Massawippi River needs a C.C.C. with truly concerned, hard working people to obtain the $21.5 million that the government is presently waving in our faces. The river does not need the hot, idle words that Mr. Duff expressed and that can be heard in any bar. If anybody knows anybody that wants to roll up their sleeves and act, bring him or her forward. My number is in the book. Otherwise, you can say all you want but the Massawippi will remain the same.

Amour and understanding

no one under 50 years old will understand that reasoning. Rev. Guy Deschamps says as a Francophone he has a little difficulty accepting the views of Mr. Ogilvie. The substance of that interview as I remember it was that Mr. Ogilvie thought that as the laws of the land were fair laws to both groups; they gave equal opportunities to both groups. He thought that any difference in achievement made by one group in comparison with the other was a direct result of the effort made.

There is a strong movement in the free world today to place all people in the same line of endeavor, on the same level of pay regardless of ability and will. In importance to God, I believe all men and women are equal, regardless of race, color or creed. However in terms of human achievement, I have to believe that we are created and develop as individuals. True, circumstances can influence development, but we are created with individual talents, and given the power of choice affecting sense of values, how can anyone compare the combined achievements of any race of individuals with another? I think it would be as foolish as trying to run an economy on the basis of equal pay for everyone regardless of production.

Reference was made to the Duplessis era and the influence of the Roman Catholic church. I remember the Padlock law and persecution of Jehovah's Witnesses in Montreal. Being brought up in a Protestant family and a member of the United Church of Canada the past 49 years, I am probably in no position to evaluate the influence of the Roman Catholic church on the Quebec Francophones. We did have French Catholic neighbors in those days. When we were helping each other cut wood, get in hay or thresh oats, we often talked about the restrictions of living as a Catholic in comparison to being a United Church member. These days I talk with my French Catholic neighbor about the present government, its policies and propaganda among other topics of the day. Where are those two solitudes we hear so much about?

The seat of power today has changed from church to government. To keep that power, government has to command the support of the majority of votes within their boundaries. But it is well known that good government is measured by the way they treat their minorities.

The film showed memorials to the battles of the patriotes and October Crisis bombings, along with reference to the kidnappings of James Cross and Pierre Laporte who was murdered.

attempts of anarchy quite swiftly dealt with. On television these days we see what anarchy can do in Iran. Even with religious leadership it is hard to stop once it gets going. Is there any common sense in belaboring the loss of a few civil liberties at the time of controlling such a danger?

We have had our quiet revolution. Education has advanced for both groups while coping with the post war baby boom. Wages are shown to be equalizing between Francophones and Anglophones these days. If we are measuring our progress with this yardstick, we are all doing pretty well. If we are comparing our lives with people in the third world, none of us have anything to complain about since the depression of the thirties.

A feeling of nostalgia was provided by the takeoff of the old Canso patrol bomber of W.W. II. Some of the more than four years of voluntary service I did in W.W. II was spent in those Canso aircraft. We were not all Anglophones there. Some were Francophones. Were any of us content with the boys who took to the woods, as a matter of principle protesting conscription in those days? You can be damn sure we were not. Neither are we happy today, to see picket lines disrupting needed production, to satisfy the petty grievances of some organized group, giving them an advantage over their fellow men.

Do the Francophones and Anglophones of Quebec still have problems? Certainly we do. Our economy is in bad shape. This we share with all other provinces, U.S.A. and many other countries. We have a 16-billion-dollar project in James Bay going on, guaranteed by this province's six million residents. The contract work there is being done by many of the same people who built the Olympic sites in Montreal, which cost ten times its estimates. We are well into an energy crisis. Here we can see what exploitation really is. Most of our transportation and much of our heating is dependent on oil. We have found it hard to pay about $14 a barrel. Next winter prices are being estimated around $23 per barrel. This spring we must have a federal election, and probably next fall a referendum on separation from the rest of Canada, proposed by the provincial government.

Problems? I guess we have them! Sharing problems like these make our differences look small to me. What do you think? You Francophones have your faults, all right, and we Anglophones have ours. But we have come a long way together since we started plowing fields with oxen and trapping beaver.

I do not think governments have all the answers in legislation of any kind. Proper solutions will have to be worked out by you and me as individuals, using all the talents God gave us. If you can overlook my weaknesses I can overlook yours. I have no doubts we can all live better working together in Canada, than working separately probably against each other.

By the way, in the film, the two views on separation, for and against were personified by the two leaders, Pierre and Rene. It seems to me all of our problems have been magnified considerably since these two started feuding. Do you suppose we had better get rid of both these fellows when we get the chance? Maybe some fresh thinking is what we need most to start making this country what it can be. It has the size and the potential. With faith in God, in ourselves and each other, we can develop it.

Probably sometime in the distant future, our descendants as Canadians, along with all other people in the world, will speak one universal language. Maybe, if we use them properly, they will want to preserve two of our words in it: Amour and understanding.

Richelieu CSS holds Open House

The Centre de Services Sociaux Richelieu, situated at 151, rue Principale, Cowansville, will hold an Open-House on Thursday, April 26, 1979 from 15:00 to 20:00 hours.

Sociaux Richelieu is a public agency which offers services to people in the community who are experiencing social problems in their daily lives. A battered child, a helpless mother, a lonely grandfather are among the many individuals who turn to the Centre de Services Sociaux Richelieu in an attempt to solve their problems.

Children, in need of protection or in trouble, are the object of special attention at the Centre de Services Sociaux Richelieu. Different forms of assistance are provided in his natural family or, if that is not possible, in a foster family or reception centre.

For students experiencing difficulties in school, there are also social workers available who attempt to find solutions.

The Centre de Services Sociaux Richelieu offers family and marital counselling designed to re-establish harmonious family relations.

For senior citizens, one attempts to assist them to live in their own homes as long as possible and to maintain the type of activity most satisfying to them. Where necessary, a social worker can help to arrange a placement in a Centre d'Accueil.

In order to inform the population in more detail of these and other services available, the staff are preparing to meet members of the Cowansville community and environs on April 26 at the Open-House in the Cowansville office.

It is expected that the displays, presentations and audio-visual material to be offered on that day will illustrate the importance of the services offered by the Centre de Services Sociaux Richelieu in our community. Everyone is welcome.

Vitamins to supplement diet

DEAR DR. LAMB - I enjoy your column very much and all the valuable information that you give us. It does annoy me, however, when you put down vitamin supplements. While it's true that they're unnecessary if one eats a well-balanced diet, how many people do, and on a daily basis? Most of the people I know either do not like, cannot afford or have no time to prepare fresh fruits and vegetables, whole grain bread and cereals, etc., every day. Vitamin supplements are practical and inexpensive when people will not or cannot eat properly every day.

DEAR READER - It seems to me like you've wasted a lot of time being annoyed. I don't disagree with the use of vitamins for people who need them and that certainly includes people who do not eat a balanced diet. And I have no objection to older people in particular taking one simple all-purpose vitamin tablet on a daily basis.

What I do object to are the false claims about curing a variety of diseases with vitamins, extending from preventing all forms of human colds, curing arthritis and eliminating cancer. All of this is just phony baloney. It's important for the public to realize what vitamins won't do, as well as understanding how important they are in their diet.

So, basically, we don't have any real disagreement. However, I would disagree with you that it's difficult to prepare fresh fruit. It doesn't take me much time to prepare a fresh apple or to peel an orange or a banana. And it doesn't take much time for me to pour out a bowl of Shredded Wheat and add some nutritious fortified skim milk to it. Also there is a wide variety of good whole wheat bread and cereal breads available in almost any supermarket today.

I don't believe time and inconvenience are an adequate excuse for not eating a balanced diet. Motivation is another factor and I know that happens with people who live alone at all ages.

Incidentally, I also do not think that a standard all-purpose vitamin tablet is going to hurt anyone as long as he doesn't use it as an excuse not to see a doctor for a major medical problem that he has that seriously needs medical attention. So, maybe you'll be less annoyed unless you don't happen to like apples, pears, bananas and oranges.

As a peace offering, I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-6, Balanced Diet, Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Ann Landers says

Good news for wives

Dear Ann Landers: Recently a young man wrote a sad letter about how he had a vasectomy because his fiancée said she didn't want children and unless he had the surgery she wouldn't marry him.

Two months following the vasectomy, she ran off and married someone else. The man was in deep anguish and turned to you for help. You told him that some vasectomies can be reversed but warned that all men who opt for this procedure should consider it "final."

Please tell him now that remarkable progress in the field of reversing vasectomy has been made due to a procedure called microsurgery. Dr. Herman J. Silber of St. Louis is a pioneer in this field.

Only a few years ago the chances for reversal were about 30 percent. With microsurgery a 25 power magnifying device is used, also an almost invisible thread which stitches together the vas deferens which carries the sperm. Chances of successful reconstruction are now at least 90 percent.

One day in the hospital is usually required, during which time ice-packs are applied to ward off swelling. No sports, showers or sex are permitted for several days, depending on the rate of recovery. The sperm count may remain low for a few months but it does build up gradually and the once-vasectomized male may father a child - which is usually great news to his second wife. - Your Friend And M.D. From Nashville

Dear Friend: Thanks for a letter that will be good news not only to some second wives, but some first wives as well.

Many years after I was married, my father took unto himself another wife. Now my father is dead. His second wife claims she is still my stepmother. I say we are no longer related. What do you say, Ann Landers?

Manhattan, Kans.
Dear Manhattan:
I say it's apparent that you don't want to have anything to do with your father's second wife. That should settle it. She is nothing to you - in every sense of the word.

"Sexual freedom" presents a difficult decision for teenagers and their parents. Ann Landers offers down-to-earth advice in her new booklet, "High School Sex and How to Deal With It - A Guide for Teens and Their Parents." For each booklet, send 50 cents plus a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

50th anniversary party

A party was held at the Army and Navy in Lennoxville on Saturday, March 3, in honour of Gladys and Howard Rogers. It was given by their son Darrell and wife Paulette, daughter Elaine and husband Earl.

On their arrival, they were met by their son and daughter, Elaine pinned a yellow rose corsage on her mother, Darrell a yellow carnation boutonniere on his father.

Family members and friends then gathered in the lounge to extend congratulations and best wishes to the honored couple. A social time was enjoyed, in visiting and being together.

Numerous pictures were taken. A presentation of gifts was made on behalf of the assembled guests which was a Chest of Gold tableware, scroll and plaque. The couple also received many cards from friends.

All proceeded to the dining room where Master of Ceremonies Earl Meehan welcomed the guests, who recalled humorous events. A delicious roast beef supper was served to the 30 guests by the ladies of the Auxiliary. The head table was decorated with yellow chrysanthemums, gold candles and 'Fifties', centered by a cake decorated in white with a cascade of yellow roses, gold leaves and a gold "Fifty" on top.

Seated at the head table beside the honoured couple were the bride's attendant Hazel Gallup and best man Alfred Robinson, daughter Elaine and husband, son Darrell and wife and brother Earl Gallup.

A toast was proposed to the couple by Alfred, responded to by Howard. All dispersed, wishing the couple many more anniversaries. A beautiful floral table arrangement was received from a niece and nephew, Rose and Roland Gallup of Virginia, who were unable to attend.

Guests were from Westmount, Chomedey, Laval, Cowansville, Cookshire, Sawyerville, Buiwer, Burlington Vt., and Ayer's Cliff.

Women's legal info offered

KNOWLTON - Knowlton Volunteer Women, in collaboration with the Adult Education Service of the District of Bedford, are sponsoring an afternoon of information and discussion on the "Legal Status of Women", to be held at the Knowlton Academy - Saturday, May 5 at 1:30 p.m.

Guest speakers and topics will include: Heward Grafftey, MP - Introduction. Louise Codere, notary (of Tretault, Lussier, Codere & Doiron), will focus on Succession Duties and Wills, but will also touch on Tutorship of Minor Children and the Legal Rights of the Common Law Wife. Jane Glenn, professor of law at McGill University, will speak on Marriage Contracts. Afterwards, a panel will be set up for discussion.

Bridal Shower

Miss Linda Decoteau, a June bride-to-be, was surprised as she visited the home of her parents for Easter, to be greeted at the door by her matron-of-honor and sister-in-law, Mrs. Reginald Decoteau who pinned on a corsage of yellow roses made of cloth. She was escorted to her chair, decorated in yellow and white streamers. On the drapes were pictures of the bride and the different duties she will be performing as a housewife.

A table was laden with numerous gifts for the bride. On opening the gifts, the bride was aided by her mother, Mrs. Gerald Decoteau, and her future mother-in-law, Mrs. Andre Bougie.

Linda graciously thanked her family and friends for all the lovely and practical gifts.

A special surprise at the shower was the presence of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Decoteau from Phoenix, Arizona.

A delicious lunch was served buffet-style from a lace-covered table by the hostess assisted by Mrs. B. Westman and Mrs. H. Bell.

The shower cake was made and decorated by the bride's mother and was in yellow and white, which was centered by a bridal doll.

The cake was cut by the bride-to-be and then she passed it around and visited with her guests.

Gladys and Howard Rogers, who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary recently.

True liberation

The joy of mothering

"MOTHERING" AUTHOR Elaine Heffner: "Women offer a different approach to conflict — traditionally women have sought resolution by taking an empathic approach, whereas men have seen conflict as a power struggle."

CHICAGO (NEA) - She took a late flight here so she could have more time with her elder son, who had the flu.

Elaine Heffner, senior teaching associate in psychiatry at the Cornell University Medical College, had planned to arrive early enough to settle in for a good night's rest before she immersed herself in the media blitz for her new book. But when her son got sick that wintry December day, she rearranged her schedule to administer a little tender loving care.

This change in plans is significant because the book she came to promote is called "Mothering." Its author is a staunch advocate of motherhood, and even though her son is 22 years old, she still feels it's important to be accessible whenever possible.

In fact, Heffner thinks it's important that we all be more accessible to one another. "The problem of dialogue has been pinpointed as a problem of motherhood," she says, "but it is widespread in society, partly as the result of adapting to technology. The mother-child relationship is both prototype and microcosm. To interrupt destructive interactions in the whole of society, the place to start is with the mothers and their children."

"Mothering," subtitled "The Emotional Experience of Motherhood After Freud and Feminism," is an inquiry into the ways child rearing — and by extension, adult society — have been irrevocably changed by psychological theory and women's liberation.

Reflecting on the tension many modern women experience juggling family and career, Heffner ponders, "Did we break some eggs in the women's movement we might rather have sat on 'till they were hatched'?"

Talking with this tiny, gracious lady and reading her book, it's clear she feels feminism has fallen short of true liberation. Over and over she returns to her conviction that the women's movement, "by implication, at least," has equated motherhood with slavery and "has told women the important things are 'out there,' outside the home.

"The housework component of mothering is seen by some as an extension of slavery," she says. "It's not — it's just something that has to be done." Every job has its drudgery, she points out, and laughs at her own discovery of the drudgery of the business trip, once perceived as a special male experience.

By advocating the art and dignity of mothering, Heffner is not suggesting we turn the calendar back and insist woman's place is in the home. "There is time in a woman's life for many careers," she maintains. Citing the cycles of her own adult careers, she tells of the satisfactions of each.

As a young bride, she was happy to pursue her own work while her husband — communicator Richard D. Heffner — established his career. "It is hard to rush out of childhood into motherhood without first functioning in society," she says. After seven years she took a 10-year hiatus from her counseling career to be home with her two sons, now 19 and 22.

Today she has returned to teaching and is co-director of the Nursery School Treatment Center at New York Hospital, Payne Whitney Clinic, where she works with children who have developmental disabilities — and with their mothers. And, she has written her first book.

"For many years we both worked on behalf of his career," Mrs. Heffner explains. "Now we both work on behalf of mine."

Likening her husband's support to the nurture a mother gives a child or a traditional wife gives her husband, she is clearly delighted at the reciprocity of their lives and work. It's unfortunate, she says, that "many women seem to have embraced the ethic of male success rather than valuing the civilizing effects and nurturing arts which once were our contributions to society."

"Women offer a different approach to conflict — traditionally women have sought resolution by taking an empathic approach, whereas men have seen conflict as a power struggle." She favors the empathic approach as the most liberating method of child care.

Heffner opens her book by thanking her sons "for their patience while I learned — and for making lunches while I wrote — my love and my thanks."

Mightn't a radical feminist interpret that as an apology for letting her career interrupt her motherly mealtime chores? "Oh, that is a private message," she explains, noting that cooking is one son's hobby.

A society whose mothers fail, concludes Elaine Heffner, is a society that fails.

Country Music by Dave Mulholland

Stringband's latest is a work of art

The Maple Leaf Dog; Stringband; Nick Records. No order number.

There aren't many albums I feel are worth an entire column. This one is. Of the music I listen to, some is extremely good, some extremely bad, and most is mediocre; unimaginative melodies topped by vacuous lyrics expressing superficial sentiments in an attempt to cash in on whatever the current whim happens to be.

Occasionally, an album comes along which transcends all the clichés, all the repetitious runs, all the mundane, disposable lyrics: an album which is literally unique. Such is the case with The Maple Leaf Dog.

This is a work of art: a creation of music that is more than just a fine melody, or an intelligent lyric, or well-played instruments. Those essential factors are present, but the album has an aura: a life of its own. The music is soothing, exciting and always sensitive.

It's also sentimental, but sentiment here shouldn't be confused with pretension. There are no crocodile tears, no canned laughter. In a society which values the fleeting thrill of sound over substance, The Maple Leaf Dog is about the joy of relationships based upon emotional, mental, spiritual and physical ties that transcend the current vogue.

The songs are about love of people, places and events: the impact of significant experiences translated into music.

Bob Bossin, Nancy Ahern and Terry King make up Stringband. They are complemented on the album by artist friends such as Ben Mink, Kieran Overs, Danny Lanois, Frank Falco, Bob DeSalle, George McFetridge, Stan Rogers, Don Garbutt, Aileen Ahern, Norma Thompson, Chris Whitley, Enzo Fabrizi and Frank Dixon. The title song, written by group leader Bossin, is tongue-in-cheek humor about the heroic escapades of loyal dogs belonging to prime ministers. MacKenzie King, or perhaps his spirit, who knows, is featured at the end of the song.

In Newfoundlanders, with vocal assistance from Stan Rogers, Bossin echoes the tenth province's historic declaration of being Newfoundlanders first and Canadians second.

Two paddle steamers, the Casca and the Whitehorse, burned down in Whitehorse on June 20, 1974. Bossin's song recalling the mishap is affectionate without becoming maudlin.

Nancy Ahern sings lead on five songs, including three of her own compositions. What a voice! It's gentle, caring, warm, fiery and intimate displaying with pride an Irish and Maritime heritage.

Her composition, Root Like A Rose, is as fine a tribute as Nova Scotia has ever had. Ahern's voice swells with emotion during the song. The discreet use of Norma Thompson's bagpipes is the sort of tasteful, imaginative touch featured throughout the album.

Ahern's Hearts Are Made of Stone is a deeply moving expression of lost friendship. Her Grownup's Lullabye shows an introspective nature which understands the source of happiness.

Terry King's composition, Won't You Tell Me, is a light love ballad, written and performed in the style of a 1920s' vamp song. It's impossible to listen to it without feeling good.

Instruments on the album range from guitars and fiddles to spoons and finger cymbals. There are no unnecessary notes, but every note is necessary. The album is a fulfilling musical feast. Beautiful!

The Maple Leaf Dog is available through mail order. Send a cheque or money order for $6.50 to Stringband, 324 Clements Avenue, Toronto, Ontario, M4R 1H5.

Who Will the Next Fool Be-How I Fear It; Mike Graham; Amber Records: AMB-140; 45 rpm.

Mike Graham's composition, How I Fear It, is the better of these two songs. Graham doesn't have a very flexible voice, and he even goes flat occasionally. But his plea to escape the isolation brought on by the failure of a past romance is intense.

Whoever produced the song, possibly Graham, had sense enough not to clutter it with strings and voices, but to allow the singer's talking style to get across the message of the lyrics.

On Charlie Rich's bluesy Who Will the Next Fool Be, Graham simply tries too hard. His singing is melodramatic, attempting to express emotions he either doesn't feel, or isn't able to capture on record. When the vocal builds, Graham's baritone sounds contrived.

Edith Butler

Acadian folksinger livens up sad songs

MONTREAL (CP) — Although she says most traditional Acadian songs are sad, this doesn't stop New Brunswick singer Edith Butler from putting on upbeat shows.

"I take the positive approach, though I always say things for my people to be aware of, like that history repeats and even if we aren't sent away in ships again, there are other ways of destroying a people," Miss Butler said in a recent interview.

Her ancestors were French settlers who lived in the Maritimes since the early 1600s and whose lands were taken over by the British 150 years later.

Their property confiscated, the Acadians were deported on ships to a dozen strange shores down the Atlantic coast. Some escaped and others found their way back in the years that followed.

It is their descendants who live in small towns like Paquetville, N.S., where Miss Butler was brought up.

"The reason we're still here is that for years everybody left us alone, which was fine. Acadians have a tradition of living on their own."

"If we had wanted to be in the system it would have meant going to English schools or English courts. Of course, that's all changed now."

"There are French schools and laws in New Brunswick upholding French. But I think it's still in our genes to want to be left alone."

DIDN'T WATCH TV

Miss Butler says her musical career got off to a good start in Paquetville because the people there had nothing to do in their evenings before television arrived, so they played fiddles and accordions and sang the songs of old Acadia.

Her formal musical training there was three years of piano lessons, although she now plays on stage the guitar, dulcimer, harmonica, accordion and Celtic drum.

In the late 1960s, between courses at the University of Moncton and at Quebec City's Laval University, Miss Butler sang on radio and television in New Brunswick and Quebec.

By the early 1970s, she had played in Japan at the Osaka World's Fair, had toured Canada, in Europe and had recorded the first of her five albums. Then in 1973 she moved to Montreal.

"I like it here, but I know it's only temporary. At this stage in my life I have to be here, but one day I'll go back to where I come from."

"There are a lot of Acadians in Montreal — Paquetville itself has furnished a big part of the population. It used to be tough here for Acadians but we're more equal now to the Quebecois culturally and in education."

CBC stereotyped Riel: Metis president

FREDERICTON (CP) — The president of the New Brunswick Association of Metis and Non-status Indians says the CBC is guilty of stereotyping in its production of Riel.

Gary Gould said in an interview Monday the television production carried by CBC network stations last week was not factual and did a disservice to the Metis.

He said that during the time of Riel, the western provinces Metis were well organized and did more for Western Canada than the government was willing to recognize.

Gould said it appeared to him the program was almost trying to create a new native myth.

MAGOG, Que. (CP) — The man grabs the woman and pulls her toward him. They pause in a rigid embrace, gazing into each other's eyes.

"Closer, closer," orders a middle-aged man hovering nearby.

The couple disintegrates into laughter. The third party, a picture book producer, looks impatient. And a photographer stops snapping away.

It's a snowy day in this sleepy textile town, 110 kilometres east of Montreal, as the "actors" patiently struggle through yet another episode of a photo-novel.

Photo-novels are magazine-style comic books with photographs instead of cartoons to illustrate the story, usually romantic fantasies. Conversations among the characters appear in print near their faces, as in comics

COVER AND ROBERT TO PERFORM

Charlie Cover and Jean Guy Robert will appear in concert in Theford Mines' Hotel Lasalle on April 27 and 28, their first appearance after the release of their first album on the CBC Transcription Series (RCI 487). It has taken Cover seven years to put together the songs for the record and it seems to have been well worth the wait. The album was produced by former Sherbrooke resident Desi McKeon and also features High Street's Butch Coulter on harmonica.

books. And the novels don't feature sex or nudity — that's left to the imagination.

Photo-novels are popular in Quebec. They make for quick, light reading for factory workers, typists, salesclerks and housewives on the bus, during work breaks or between soap operas at home.

BROUGHT IN FROM EUROPE
Newsstands and bookstores in Montreal's French-speaking districts carry as many as 30 European photo-novels, published monthly and priced from 80 cents to $1.25 an issue.

The European magazines, often photographed in vivid colors, feature men with chiselled jaws and soulful eyes and glamorous, stylish women. Romances develop amid adventures at swanky resorts, villas or other high-class locales.

The glossy European imports offer tough competition for the Quebec publications. One, called Idylle, folded recently, but was replaced soon after by a similar magazine called Mystral.

The romance in Mystral's January issue has a happy ending. The heroine and hero are raised as if they were brother and sister. But the sister knows the truth — her brother was adopted as an infant — and she secretly loves him. In adulthood, the brother discovers his true origins and the adopted siblings declare their love for each other. The scenes are set in local apartments, country cottages and streets. And the models look like the type of people they are representing — local townspeople.

Claude Pepin, 23-year-old mastermind of Mystral, calls his models people of the masses.

"They'll have to do for right now," he adds declining to say how much he pays them for their efforts.

With the ill-fated Idylle, models were paid $5 an hour to pose during weekends. But they weren't in it for the money — in fact, much of what they earned went into buying themselves outfits for the sessions.

Sylvie and Jacques, two models who appeared in Idylle, are both in their late teens. They say they had hoped their work in photo-novels would be their ticket out of manual labor and into the world of stardom.

ACTING A DREAM

"Acting was always an impossible dream when I was young," says Sylvie, a seamstress. Jacques, formerly a waiter, admits: "I always wanted to be an actor."

He couldn't match the jaws and eyes of his stunning Italian competitors, but his wardrobe rivaled the best.

In one of the last scenes Jacques posed for with Sylvie, he wore a skin-tight pin-striped suit. His shirt was open to his fifth button, exposing two gold chains with charms dangling against his chest.

His height was raised by at least an inch by the heels on his black pointy boots. Gold jewelry adorned his hands.

Entertainment this week

Here is a list of plays, concerts, and films happening in and around Sherbrooke this week.

At the Cinema Festival the popular Theatre of Quebec will present the French version of William Shakespeare's "A Midsummer's Night Dream", or "Le Songe d'une Nuit d'Été". The show will be playing from Thursday, 26, through to Saturday, 28, showtime is 8:30. This production was directed by Pierre Fortin and Joseph Saint-Gelais. Tickets are $6, unless you are a student or over 50 years old, in that case they are $4.

On the 25 and 26, The Bug Alley Band will be in concert at Magog's La Poupee. The Bug Alley Band specialize in light and cool jazz. Admission is $3.50.

Also on Thursday is the return of legendary harp player Jim Zeller. Zeller, who is a native of Sherbrooke looks like he just might have hit the big time. Zeller, who previously was playing harmonica for the internationally-renowned Michel Pagliaro, has now recorded an album of his own, CARTES SUR LA TABLES. Although recently released, Cartes is now sold out in Sherbrooke. Zeller will be in concert at the College de Sherbrooke's Pavillon 3. Admission is $4 and tickets are on sale at the door and at Andy Benny's "Le Couloirier" on 111 Wellington St.

At Carrefour de l'Estrie's Cinema 2 "The Silent Partner" will be running until Thursday. Also playing at Cinema 1 is The Beatles, as they were. Admission is $3.50; for more information phone 565-0366.

On Friday 27, at Domaine MontJoye, on the Capelton road to North Hatley, the rock band Epizode will be playing. Epizode play progressive rock, most of which they compose themselves. Admission is $2.50. Have a good week.

RICHMOND (MR) — It's not often that a high school play is brought back for a return engagement; but then it's not often that a high school production turns out quite as well as Nick Fonda's musical comedy, Marvin.

Set in the hallowed halls of Richbourne High, the play offers a quick-moving, often hilarious and surprisingly realistic glimpse of high school life. While the characters in the play bear no resemblance to people in real life, they are never the less so realistically portrayed that the audience is drawn into the plot of the play.

The play's story line verges on science fiction: An apprentice magician from King Arthur's court (Marvin) suddenly finds himself in a modern day high school where he has been told he will find two tasks set for him by his teacher, the immortal Merlin. His presence in the school causes untold havoc.

Marvin is the result of a joint effort: Mr. Fonda wrote the script and Francine Beaubien composed an original score. Both the script and the music are excellent, the acting and production far better than one could expect from such a young cast.

The play certainly caught the imagination of the 550 people who saw it at the end of March — it is they who requested a return performance.

The play is being presented in the Richmond Regional High School auditorium, Friday, April 27 at 1:00 p.m., and Saturday, April 28 at 8:30 p.m. Tickets are being sold at the door but can be reserved by phoning 826-2534 between 7 and 8 in the morning and after 8 at night.

LONDON (Reuter) — Fritz Kreisler's Stradivari violin will be put up for sale in London on May 3 and is expected to bring more than $200,000, Sotheby's auction house says. The Austro-American violinist used the violin for his most famous recordings.

Later, it was owned by another concert violinist, the late Bronislaw Huberman and then by a Swiss collector.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Norman Lear and Alex Haley have joined forces to produce a two-hour TV movie and six one-hour dramatic episodes to air on CBS in March, 1980.

Haley, the author of Roots, will develop a story about a white youth and a black youth growing up in the southern United States in the 1930s. It will follow their friendship as they mature and encounter racial conflicts.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Laurence Olivier stars in A Little Romance with Arthur Hill and Sally Kellerman. The Orion picture was directed by George Roy Hill from a screenplay by Allan Burns.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Leonard Nimoy and Penelope Milford will star in Seizure, a two-hour movie for CBS about a surgeon and a young student-singer stricken by a near-fatal affliction.

The real life story will be adapted from the book by Charles Mee. The program is being developed by Jozak Productions in association with Benton and Bowles Inc. on behalf of Procter and Gamble.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dan Curtis will produce and direct a 12-hour mini-series for ABC based on Herman Wouk's book The Winds of War.

The production is in association with Paramount Pictures and as part of the deal Curtis will produce and direct a major motion picture prior to the mini-series.

British playwright Jack Pulman, who wrote I, Claudius and War and Peace for BBC, will write the screenplay.

TORONTO (CP) — FM radio stations may have more prime time commercials and less repetition of chart-topping records this fall, Pierre Camu, the chairman of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission said Monday.

Camu said he hopes new regulations allowing the changes will be in effect by the end of the year.

He told reporters at the opening session of the two-day annual meeting of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters that the CRTC discussed the proposed FM radio policy changes during a private meeting with the association earlier in the day.

Association president Ernie Steele told reporters that the two groups also discussed the possibility of a public hearing into television programming "to find out more about what the public wants from their Canadian broadcasting system."

Camu and Steele also said both sides agreed that handing jurisdiction of cable television systems over to the provinces would create problems and should not be done. The transfer was discussed in January at the federal-provincial constitutional conference.

Camu said the CRTC will hold a public hearing in the fall on the changes to FM radio regulations.

Quebec nationalists 'most Canadian'

MONTREAL (CP) — Nationalist French-speaking Quebecers are the most Canadian of all Canadians in their desire for protectionist policies, says economist Jean-Luc Mingue in a paper released Tuesday by the C. D. Howe Research Institute.

The paper, part of a series of documents called Accent Quebec, says the similarity between protectionist nationalism in Canada and in Quebec is that "they both draw their inspiration from one and the same process that gives rise to the adoption of (such) policies for the benefit of particular groups at the expense of the majority."

Indeed, "deep down, the nationalist Quebecois are the most Canadian of all Canadians, except that they would like the whole protectionist tradition that has taken root in Ottawa to be transferred to Quebec."

Mingue, economics professor at the Ecole Nationale d'Administration Publique, analysed the nature and effects of protectionist, nationalist measures adopted by Ottawa and Quebec to reach his conclusion.

Measures studied included the screening of foreign direct investment, language policies, science policy, agricultural measures, the creation of Crown corporations and preferential public purchasing as well as customs duties and import quotas.

UAF severs ties as Egypt readies for exchange

CAIRO (Reuters) — The United Arab Emirates (U.A.E.) broke off diplomatic relations with Egypt today as Cairo and Jerusalem prepare to exchange peace treaty documents at a U.S. early-warning station in the Sinai desert.

The U.A.E.'s Gulf news agency reported from Abu Dhabi that Said al Ghaith, U.A.E. cabinet affairs minister, announced the break after an emergency cabinet meeting during which the government resigned.

The Bahrain-based agency said a formal statement on the break with Egypt will be announced later today.

U.A.E. is the latest among members of the Arab League to sever diplomatic relations with Cairo in protest against the bilateral peace treaty.

The exchange of instruments of ratification at Om Khosheiba, where 200 U.S. technicians watch Sinai military movements, puts into effect the accord ending 30 years of hostilities.

The ceremony at 7 a.m. EST will last about one hour. It heralds the start of Israel's two-stage withdrawal from the Sinai and the setting up of normal relations between the old adversaries.

Meanwhile, Israel pounded Lebanese port of Tyre, the Israeli military command ended a two-day attack on coastal targets near the Lebanese port of Tyre, the Israeli military command said.

Israel said the area was the launching point for Sunday's Palestinian terror attack in the Israeli resort town of Nahariya in which four Israelis died.

News Briefs

Quebec awaiting Ottawa answer

QUEBEC (CP) — Pierre Marois, social development minister, said Tuesday Ottawa has not replied to Quebec's request for assistance in implementing the province's income supplement program.

Speaking in the national assembly during second-reading debate on a bill which would provide guaranteed minimum incomes to the working poor, Marois said he had written Ottawa twice asking the federal government not to tax the income supplement and to help finance the program, but his letters remain unanswered.

The provincial bill is designed to fight poverty and encourage people to work, said Marois, adding that it is also a first step toward a guaranteed annual income for all Quebecers.

Frank Cotroni being released

NEW YORK (CP) — Santos (Frank) Cotroni of Montreal is being released from federal prison today under a tight security lid.

The 47-year-old underworld leader's mode of travel after he is turned over to U.S. immigration officials for his return to Canada was kept secret.

Cotroni has been in the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., since June 13, 1975, serving a 15-year sentence for conspiracy to smuggle nine kilograms of cocaine into the U.S. in 1971.

The U.S. parole commission granted him freedom late last year after he served less than one-third of his jail term but a challenge by the justice department held up his release for several months.

No specific time was given for his release — only that it would be sometime today.

Begin: Solve problems or else

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Monique Begin said Tuesday the federal government could resume management of the medicare plan, now in the hands of the provinces, unless problems in the national health plan are solved.

"We are not eager to return to the earlier cost-sharing arrangement," she told a medical conference. "On the other hand, it is within our powers to do this."

A text of her speech to the joint meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics and the Canadian Pediatric Society was released in advance of delivery.

The minister was referring to the new financing formula, which took effect in April 1977, transferring the day-to-day administration and authority of the national health plan to the provinces.

However, the federal government can terminate the agreement with three years' notice.

RCMP lawbreaking 'never discussed'

OTTAWA (CP) — Former solicitor-general George McIlraith flatly denied Tuesday that he ever discussed the issue of RCMP lawbreaking with John Starnes, retired director-general of the RCMP security service.

McIlraith, now a senator, was testifying before a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing. He was confronted by a memo Starnes says he wrote Nov. 26, 1970, two days after a "law and order committee" meeting he and McIlraith attended.

The three-paragraph memo began:

"On Nov. 24, 1970, George McIlraith, the solicitor-general, raised with me the question of what should be done to eliminate inherent contradiction in the existing security service which turns around the question of the commission of crime in the national interest."

ELECTION

During a Williams Lake, B.C., news conference, the Liberal leader said he "would have been wiser to have refused" to discuss such a scenario. His Monday statement to a reporter was "my innermost feelings" rather than a political decision actually being contemplated.

Progressive Conservative Leader Clark, accused of being afraid to meet other party leaders in a television debate, also said in this cattle-ranching community he would establish a $4.5-million agricultural export commission to seek foreign markets for soy beans, field crops, fruit and vegetables in much the same way the wheat board markets wheat.

Later Tuesday, in Kelowna, Trudeau said he will continue to push his national unity campaign although the people don't appear to want to discuss it.

RHODESIA

Muzorewa will become the country's first black prime minister.

Black guerrilla leaders rejected the election, arguing it will produce only limited black rule.

Jamieson said the United States and Britain also had refused to recognize the election, but Margaret Thatcher, leader of the Conservative party in Britain, has said she will recognize the government if elected prime minister.

Asked what effect Britain's recognition might have on Canada's position, Jamieson said: "I don't believe it matters which individual debate, announced in Grand Falls, Nfld., he had changed his mind and has agreed in principle to participate.

However, it will likely not be known until the end of the week if the debate will actually be held.

In Perth, N.B., Clark accused Prime Minister Trudeau of showing "contempt for democracy" for suggesting he might not immediately turn over the reins of government if the Conservatives win only a few more seats than the Liberals.

In a hard-hitting attack on Trudeau, the Progressive Conservative leader said Trudeau's remarks underlined the necessity that voters give his party a clear majority "to throw him out absolutely."

"What Mr. Trudeau is saying in effect is 'you can throw me out but I won't go,'" he told an enthusiastic crowd in a Legion hall in this small northwestern New Brunswick town.

From St. John's, Nfld., Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, hurled insults at both Clark and Trudeau for their original positions on the television debate and minority government, respectively.

Broadbent and Clark both campaigned Tuesday night in Chicoutimi, Que., a traditional Liberal stronghold, before flying to Toronto for appearances today. Trudeau remains today in British Columbia.

Broadbent said the existence of two cultures living side by side makes Canada an exciting country. But Trudeau could not accept this as a sign of national strength.

However, the NDP leader stressed economic concern for most of a 30-minute speech delivered in French. He appealed to the crowd of less than 100 to consider the NDP as a change from the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives when ballots are cast for the May 22 federal election.

Clark, conceded that his party is having "a little problem" getting support in Quebec for the election.

He told a meeting of about 300 that, although he had predicted the party would win 60 of the 75 available seats in the province, there appeared some distance to go to reach this target.

Fabien Roy, Social Credit leader, campaigned in Acton Vale, Que., saying he is pleased a recent CBC public opinion poll shows 15 per cent of committed voters in Quebec support his party.

countries make that kind of decision."

He said the UN likely would continue to oppose the new government.

Meanwhile, the Carter administration asked Congress Tuesday to delay any attempt to lift economic and political sanctions against Rhodesia until U.S. officials can judge the fairness of recent national elections there.

The administration will withhold judgment about the election until it contacts the scores of foreign observers and witnessed last week's balloting in Rhodesia.

Soviet missile worries Carter

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The White House voiced concern Tuesday over deployment of a new Soviet nuclear missile in East Germany and said it would affect President Carter's eventual decision on the neutron bomb.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said the appearance of the SS-21 missile and the entire question of Soviet restraint would be taken into account as the president considered the future of enhanced radiation weapons — the so-called neutron bomb.

The White House confirmed reports that the missile, with a range of about 120 kilometres, had been deployed in East Germany and targeted on NATO allies.

A spokesman said it increased the threat of an arms race in Europe as the United States and the Soviet Union were nearing accord on a new treaty on limiting strategic arms, SALT II.

Publisher lauds Sun decision

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Journal publisher J. P. O'Callaghan says the dismissal of charges that the Toronto Sun and two of its executives breached the Official Secrets Act "was a note of sanity in an affair marked by persecution on the part of the government."

The charges were dismissed Monday by Judge Carl Waisberg of the Ontario provincial court for lack of evidence. The judge's decision followed a preliminary hearing which continued off and on for 10 months.

The Sun, its publisher Donald Creighton and editor-in-chief Peter Worthington were charged after printing an article March 7, 1978, based on a confidential 1976 RCMP document. The article concerned Soviet espionage operations in Canada.

In his judgment, Judge Waisberg said the act is "shop-worn, ambiguous and vague" and recommended that the 1911 document be rewritten.

Western radio, TV take awards

TORONTO (CP) — Western radio and television stations won nearly all the top awards announced Tuesday at a meeting of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters.

Top television station of 1978 is CFQC-TV Saskatoon, which won the Ted Campeau award for a series of programs stimulating public awareness of the architecture, history and cultural roots of the Saskatoon area.

Radio station CFAV Victoria was given the John J. Gillin award for AM station of the year for its series of crime prevention programs. In the same category, CKGY Red Deer, Alta., received an honorable mention for helping to raise funds for a small community that was ravaged by fire.

Drivers cleared by loophole

OTTAWA (CP) — The Criminal Code says that any driver whose licence is suspended in any province and is caught driving is guilty of an offence and liable to imprisonment for two years.

But two British Columbia drivers who were found driving while their licences were suspended were found not guilty of an offence by the Supreme Court of Canada Tuesday.

In a 4-to-3 decision, the court said the Crown must prove that drivers are aware that their licences are suspended before they can be found guilty of the Criminal Code offence.

Both Joseph Claude Baril of Clearwater, B.C., and William James Prue of Kamloops were convicted of impaired charges under the B.C. Motor Vehicle Act. The act calls for an automatic suspension of driving privileges for three months.

Nuke leak brings lawsuits

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The nuclear reactor accident at Three Mile Island has already led to five lawsuits filed in behalf of area residents who say the crisis hurt their businesses, depressed property values and caused them mental and bodily harm.

And it may take years to resolve the legal issues growing out of the March 28 incident that caused the biggest scare in the history of the U.S. commercial nuclear energy program.

Bunny-tale correction

PEKING (AP) — In a dispatch on Easter Sunday, April 15, The Associated Press erroneously reported that U.S. Rep. Patricia Schroeder (Dem. Colo.) wore a white bunny suit while visiting the Great Wall of China.

Ms. Schroeder wore the suit in the lobby of the Peking Hotel where she was staying and later at a U.S. Embassy party attended by American children.

Ms. Schroeder had the bunny outfit with her on the bus which took her and her party to the Great Wall but she did not wear it there.

Air deaths up slightly

MONTREAL (CP) — There were 23 fatal airline accidents last year compared with 24 in 1977, the International Civil Aviation Organization has announced. But 652 passengers died on those scheduled flights last year, compared with 516 deaths in 1977.

A report by the United Nations agency based on figures compiled from its 144 member states said there were 592 aircraft survivors last year compared with 169 the year before.

Relating deaths to the volume of traffic, the report said the number of passengers killed per 100 million passenger-kilometres increased slightly from .07 to .08.

The statistics showed turbojet aircraft to be significantly safer compared with propeller-driven aircraft in terms of the number of accidents.

Weary Dakotans fight flooding

The rampaging Red River, bolstered by new rains and even snow, climbed toward U.S. record heights as volunteers plugged leaky dikes and reinforced piled sandbags, eroding after eight days of severe flooding.

"The wear on the people is a little visible but morale is up and we'll fight for two more days," said Jay Graba, assistant flood control co-ordinator at Grand Forks, N.D., where the Red is expected to crest at 16.5 metres Thursday or Friday. Flood stage is nine metres.

In Mississippi, flood waters from the Pearl River slackened and officials predicted some of the 4,000 people who fled Columbia, Miss., might start returning home Thursday.

Carter energy plan hits snag

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's standby plan to manage energy shortages was dealt a major setback Tuesday when the House of Representatives commerce committee rejected a proposal to give the president the authority to close service stations on weekends.

Another part of the legislation, a last-resort proposal for gasoline rationing, also seems headed for committee rejection, although a final vote was postponed until today.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said he hopes the full House will overturn the committee's decision and restore the president's program.

Burns to close finance-law loophole

QUEBEC (CP) — The provincial government will act to close a loophole in Quebec's party financing law before June, Robert Burns, minister for parliamentary reform, told the national assembly Tuesday.

An amendment to the law will prevent parties from accepting advertising from corporations in party newsletters and other publications.

The financing law makes it illegal for political parties to accept direct contributions from corporations.

But the opposition Liberals have complained the Parti Quebecois riding association newsletter in Taschereau constituency is accepting advertising from companies, although Burns and Premier Rene Levesque promised to remedy the situation several months ago.

Burns said the director-general of party financing ruled this type of financing is legal. However, he acknowledged this is a loophole the government intends to eliminate.

Mayor describes Sacred threats

DUNCAN, B.C. (CP) — The mayor of this Vancouver Island city says he was threatened with violence and economic reprisals by a prominent Social Credit Party member if he ran for the Progressive Conservatives in the May 10 British Columbia election.

Ken Paskin, who said the man threatened to hit him over the head with a baseball bat, has been appointed a candidate by provincial Conservative Leader Vic Stephens.

Paskin said the threats only encouraged him to run in Cowichan-Malahat riding.

The allegations follow claims by Stephens that backroom deals between the provincial Social Credit and federal Conservative parties are hampering the election effort of the B.C. wing of the party.

"It sickens me when I'm disenchanted with the Sacred and want to change my political beliefs, but am told I'll be in trouble," Paskin said. "It makes you wonder what kind of country we're living in."

Paskin worked for Social Credit in the 1975 provincial election campaign.

Death

GOODIN, Lois — At her home on 1805 Union St., Fremont, Nebraska, on Wed. April 25, 1979, beloved wife of Torrey Goodin, formerly of Scotstown, Que., dear mother of Shawn and Lee.

In Memoriam

COOK — In loving memory of a dear mother and father, Gladys Eva, who passed away on April 25, 1975 and Orin Sanford, on March 21, 1972. I think of you often. Your name is ever recalled. All that is left. Are your pictures on the wall. You were gone before I knew it. And only God knows why You did no farewell. Nor did I say goodbye. God gave me strength to bear it. And courage to face the blow. But what it meant to lose you both. Only I will ever know. Always remembered and sadly missed by HAROLD COOK (your son)

Card of Thanks

ANDERSON — We wish to express our sincere thanks to all our friends and relatives for the many cards, phone calls, flowers and gifts which we received on our 57th anniversary. A special thanks to our family for the lovely meals and for making our anniversary such a day. Thank you all and may God bless you all.

EARL and JEAN ANDERSON

MATHESON — The family of the late Mrs. Charlotte Matheson would like to thank everyone who sent flowers, cards and food, visited the funeral home and made donations to the Cancer Society and in Memoriam Funds at the time of her death. Thanks also to the minister, Rev. Westman, organist, choir, bearers, St. Paul's Guild and A.C.W. for serving lunch after the funeral and the undertakers, Gordon and Everett Boynton. A special thanks to the nursing staff and doctors at the Sherbrooke Hospital for the excellent care they gave her during her stay there.

Obituary

MRS. JOHN MATHESON of Bury

The death of Charlotte Susan Matheson occurred at the Sherbrooke Hospital on February 16, 1979, after a lengthy illness.

Lottie, as she was known to her many friends, was born in Bishopton on July 23, 1904, daughter of Alfred Betts and his wife Dorothy Clark.

In 1929 she married John Lewis Matheson, who predeceased her in 1961.

She was a faithful member of St. Paul's Anglican Church and a devoted member of the Guild and A.C.W., and also Alexandra Rebekah Lodge, from which she received her 50-year jewel.

She leaves to mourn, her three sons, Peter, John, and George, one daughter Marion (Mrs. Vernon Dougherty), two daughters-in-law, June and Marilyn, a son-in-law Vernon Dougherty, five grandchildren, Heather, Tim, and Jo-Ann Matheson and Cynthia and Michael Dougherty, one brother, Ralph of Bishopton, two sisters, Evelyn Vintiner, Wales Home, Richmond, and Lucy Hardestie of Bishopton. A daughter, Dorothy, died 33 years ago. Two brothers also predeceased her.

The remains rested at the Boynton Funeral Home in Bury where a Rebekah service was held Sunday. Following prayers at the funeral home on Monday, Feb. 19, the funeral service was held at St. Paul's Anglican Church, Rev. L. Westman officiating. Two favorite hymns of the deceased, The Old Rugged Cross and "Oh, for a Closer Walk with God," were sung.

The remains were placed in the vault at Lakeside Cemetery, Bishopton, for interment in the spring.

Bearers were Rayfield Ross, Alfred Martin, Allen Matheson, Cedric Jenkinson, Charles Tailon and Clayton Allison.

She will be remembered for her cheerfulness and unflinching willingness to help others.

Rangers rout Flyers, meet Islanders in semi-final

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Flyers 8-3 and Walt Tkaczuk scored two goals and two assists Tuesday night as New York Rangers defeated the Flyers 5-2 in the first round of the National Hockey League playoffs. The Rangers ousted the Flyers in the best-of-seven quarterfinal series 4-1, and open their best-of-four series Thursday night against New York Islanders at the Nassau Coliseum.

Gus Haig's column

I received the revelation of my life this past weekend. Long considered one of the world's classic cynics, I was skeptical when teammates on the Golden Lion softball team headed up an ambitious fund drive spearheaded by owner-general manager-coach-pitcher Mike Hallam and his administrative assistant-shortstop Steve Mitchell.

Some of the once-thought outrageous ideas are now paying large dividends. For example, the selling of Golden Lion Softball pins was greeted with chuckles and gruff-faws when the thought was first conceived, but the profits have been tidy thus far.

What really re-kindled my faith in mankind, however, was the way local merchants in Lennoxville have responded to this weekend's jog-a-thon, a 13-and-a-half mile trek to raise funds for new uniforms.

"The response has been just unbelievable," gushed a happy Hallam. Indeed, the results have been gratifying and heartwarming.

There were a total of two merchants in the whole Lennoxville area who wouldn't or couldn't help our cause," he went on.

OK, so let's hear it for merchants in the Lennoxville area who are helping our team (yours truly plays a rather spastic first base) realize those new uniforms. Messrs. Hallam and Mitchell were last seen headed for Vegas. Seriously, my faith in mankind was rejuvenated. Thanks so much...

Nice to see the goons won't be bothering us any more. By that I mean the Canadians ousted those classless Maple Leafs in four straight. Toronto (or T.O. as it is fashionably referred to) is indeed a city of losers sportwise, and it couldn't happen to a nicer bunch of fellas. Take Tiger Williams (please), for instance.

There is a sneaking suspicion amongst we Habs fans that Mr. Williams would be serving a manslaughter sentence were it not for hockey. Ian Breck of Champlain College fame related this one concerning that crazy Tiger. It seems that Williams was suspended for a couple of games a few years ago for whatever reason. Williams was advised to appeal the suspension and did so. He wrote a letter to NHL President Clarence Campbell defending his actions. When no response came, an irate Tiger complained at practice, "I can't figure it out. I did what I was supposed to do and now the guy won't give me a break."

At this point one of his teammates cracked, "Maybe Campbell hasn't answered you because the crayon smudged on the letter." This broke up virtually the whole Leaf team, save one - Williams. It seems he didn't fully comprehend the joke. Keep it up, Tiger and they'll be coming after you with nets.

Answers to last week's trivia questions for anyone who remembers or cares. The answer to who caught Roger Maris' 61st homer in 1961 is Sal Durante. The young man, a barber by trade came away from Yankee Stadium $5,000 richer after relinquishing the ball to the Hall of Fame.

The answer to the second question about the only filly to ever win the Kentucky Derby is easy. Regret, in 1915, won the run for the roses and thus has assured herself a place in American history.

At this writing, the Sherbrooke Beavers are in deep trouble, down 4-0 and the prospect of returning to Three Rivers to steal one from the Draveurs an unpleasant one, maybe a year away. While not for a minute short-selling this year's edition, the Castors lose only six players, albeit six key ones. Whatever the outcome, they are a classy group of kids, who won't quit. Stay tuned...

National commissioners named

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Provincial School Athletic Associations has appointed Hayes MacNeil and Gord Smith national sport commissioners. MacNeil, of Sydney, N.S. will be the new national hockey commissioner and Smith, of Belleville, Ont., will be the new national football commissioner.

Derby positions drawn

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Spectacular Bid, an early favorite for the Kentucky Derby, drew the outside post position Tuesday for Keeneland's $100,000-added Blue Grass Stakes on Thursday. Spectacular Bid, who earlier this year won the Florida Derby and Flamingo Stakes, was made the 1-5 morning-line favorite for the race, the last major prep before the May 5 Derby at Churchill Downs.

Underage draft plan possible

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says National Hockey League general managers will work out a plan next week to allow drafting of under-age junior players. In a Philadelphia dispatch, the newspaper quotes Mickey Keating, assistant general manager with New York Rangers, as saying the league fears legal reprisals if 18-year-olds are not included in the draft.

"We will be drafting underage," Keating says. "What we're trying to figure out is by what method. One thing is certain. The only remaining option is not drafting under-age and taking the lawsuit. We won't do that."

Two years ago, a U.S. district court in Hartford, Conn., ruled that Kef Linseman, then an 18-year-old player with Birmingham Bulls, had the right to earn a living as a professional hockey player. Before the court decision, the WHA refused to honor Linseman's contract, saying the Bulls contravened league bylaws in drafting the player, who now plays with the NHL's Philadelphia Flyers.

Part of the NHL's expansion into four WHA cities allows two under-age players — Michel Goulet of Birmingham and Mark Messier of Cincinnati Stingers to be eligible for the June amateur draft.

Flyers in the best-of-seven quarterfinal series 4-1, and open their best-of-four series Thursday night against New York Islanders at the Nassau Coliseum.

The series clinching victory wasn't as easy as the score indicates. The Rangers, after building a 5-0 lead with 10:37 remaining in the game, gave up three goals as the Flyers desperately fought back.

But New York's Carol Vadnais and Ed Johnstone each scored in a one-minute span to cut short Philadelphia's late surge.

It was the sixth win of the playoffs for Rangers' goalie

John Davidson. In the five games against the Flyers, Davidson allowed just eight goals on 154 Philadelphia shots.

Ron Greschner's power-play goal started the Rangers to their first semi-final appearance since they lost to the Flyers in 1974, with a 20-footer off a pass by Phil Esposito at 9:55 of the first period.

The Rangers made it 2-0 at 13:26 on Tkaczuk's first goal. He took a pass from Dave Farrish at the Rangers' blue line and scored off a two-on-one break with Anders Hedberg.

Flyers' goalie Wayne

Stephenson came out to play the break and Tkaczuk whipped a 40-footer past the beleaguered goaltender.

The Rangers were short-handed at the time with Mario Marois in the penalty box for hooking. It was their fourth short-handed goal of the series, equaling a record set in 1958 during a six-game set between the Rangers and Boston Bruins.

In the third period, Tkaczuk intercepted a pass off the Flyers' Rick MacLeish at the red line, skated in on Stephenson, deked the goalie and scored at 2:03.

Steve Vickers made it 4-0 at 4:13 when he scored after taking a pass from Tkaczuk.

At 12:59, the Rangers' Pat Hickey was penalized for holding and the desperate Flyers took Stephenson out of the goal and put six offensive players on the ice. The strategy backfired when at 8:19, Ron Duguay scored into the empty net to make it 5-0.

Davidson, since game three of the series, had played 168 minutes and 59 seconds of shutout hockey before the Flyers finally scored. Reggie Leach scored at 10:37 of the final period. The Flyers then returned Stephenson to the net, and less than two minutes later, Bob Dailey beat Davidson for Philadelphia's second goal to make it 5-2.

The Rangers scored 25 goals in the series to better their club record of 21 goals in a playoff set, accomplished against Montreal in 1974.

Their only defeat in this series came in game one at Philadelphia, 3-2, on a goal scored 44 seconds into overtime.

Coached by Fred Shero, who took over this season after seven years behind the Flyers' bench, the Rangers then won four straight 2-1, 7-1, 6-0 and 6-3.

WALT TKACZUK...sinks Philly

Russians overwhelming favorites to win

MOSCOW (CP) — Only a miracle will stop the Soviet Union from putting the finishing touches on its second straight world hockey title against a woefully inexperienced Canadian team tonight.

That will leave Czechoslovakia and Sweden, who meet earlier today, battling for the silver and bronze medals that will be awarded Friday night.

In the consolation group, it appears Poland will finish last and be relegated to the Group B championship next season, to be replaced by the Netherlands.

Poland was whipped 5-1 by the United States on Tuesday, with Finland beating West Germany 7-3 in the other B Group contest. The results left Finland in top spot with seven points, followed by the U.S. with six, West Germany with five and Poland with two.

The calibre of play and the intensity with which the consolation teams have performed throughout the tourney has had some observers wondering how Canada might have fared against what is obviously less-fortunate opposition.

Let's be honest, they (the Canadians) need two late goals to beat us," a U.S. official said Tuesday. "And they were also fortunate to beat Finland."

"They are a talented group of hockey players, but over here there is much more to hockey than individual talents. It's an over-all team effort, and it's apparent the Canadians haven't been playing that way."

Since the preliminary round, Canada has yet to gain a point and seems unlikely to add to that total tonight when it faces a Soviet team that has been awesome in recent games — firing a total of 22 goals by Czechoslovakian and Swedish goaltenders.

In an earlier match-up for the championship round, Sweden meets Czechoslovakia, the result of which could decide the second-place finisher.

Czechoslovakia holds down second place now with five points, compared with three for Sweden. Canada is without a point after four games against group opponents and finishes the tourney Friday against Sweden.

"What most people over here don't seem to understand is the youthfulness of this team," Canadian assistant coach Andre Boudrias said Tuesday. "We have a lot of young players."

Even with Unger, Libett and Charron (30), but over all we have a young team.

"Look at our defence — not one player over 23. These guys are only going to get better. So will their teams, so once they start making the NHL playoffs then we lose not only young superstars but their experience in international competition."

The Canadian defence averages out to 21.8 years of age among seven players, as opposed to 27.2 years for the Czechoslovak defensive corps and 25.8 years for the Soviets.

Even with Unger, Libett and Charron, the average age of the Canadian forwards is 24.5 years, compared with 25.1 for the Czechoslovaks and 27.8 for the Soviets.

"So if you want to knock our club because of its immaturity, because they haven't performed to what both they and we had expected in the way of results, remember that hockey anywhere is a system," Boudrias said.

"It takes time for 20 players to adjust to a system in a matter of days when most of them haven't even known one another before."

CURLING WINNERS

NBA: Subs star as Hawks stay alive

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Terry Furlow and Tom McMillen, a pair of three-year men who spent most of the season on the bench, brought Atlanta Hawks back into contention against defending-champion Washington Bullets in their National Basketball Association quarter-final series.

Furlow, a mid-season acquisition from Cleveland Cavaliers, and McMillen, who has played for several teams, came off the bench when starters Armond Hill and John Drew got into early foul trouble to combine for 40 points and lead the Hawks to a 107-103 victory over the Bullets.

It was the only NBA playoff game Tuesday night.

With Washington holding only a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series, the teams move back to Atlanta for Thursday night's sixth game. The Hawks boast a 35-9 home record this season but they have lost twice at home to the Bullets in this series.

The two Western Conference semi-finals resume tonight with Phoenix Suns — holding a 2-1 advantage — playing the Kings in Kansas City, while Seattle SuperSonics can wrap up their series at home against Los Angeles Lakers. They currently hold a 3-1 edge. The other Eastern semi-final resumes Thursday night in San Antonio with the Spurs holding a 3-1 lead over Philadelphia '76ers.

"This is the most courageous win in my three years as the Hawks' coach," said Hubie Brown, citing injuries to starters Eddie Johnson, Drew and reserve Tree Rollins and the early foul trouble to Hill and Drew. "There are not enough adjectives to describe the game played by Furlow and McMillen."

McMillen got 12 of his 19 points in the first half while Furlow came through with 16 of his team-high 21 points in the second, including two free throws with eight seconds left that iced the game.

The Hawks went into the fourth quarter with an 81-80 lead, playing the Bullets closely after being down by 11 points near the end of the first half.

Atlanta built up a nine-point lead, 99-90, with 5:46 left and watched it slip away to a two-point edge, 105-103, with 24 seconds remaining.

With the 24 seconds remaining, Bobby Dandridge, whose 24 points were only two less than Elvin Hayes' game-high 26, took one shot from the baseline and had it blocked by Rollins. He got the ball back and put it up again from 12 feet but missed, Atlanta pulling down the rebound.

Eaton Corner: Citizens oppose new highway plans

There is only one new building. Modernization has been carried out on some homes, but generally the historical character remains.

Touring Eaton Corner is a lesson in early New England architecture. The focal point is the beautiful Congregationalist Church built in 1844 which now houses the Compton County Museum.

Across the road is the former academy, built about 1824, and now used for museum storage.

There are two homes which are examples of recessed porches (two others have been converted). This is a style found mainly in Vermont where examples there are highly revered as part of that state's architectural beauty and variety. It consists of an open porch extending out from the second storey. Inspired by the Greek Revival in architecture, the porch is crowned by a graceful arch and is supported by handsome columns.

Road signs on each side of town read 30 mph, but most cars go through at 45; some at 60; and some even up to 90. And that's another major reason why two residents, Angus Curry and Mac McVetty, are organizing the citizens committee to combat the plan. Curry has young children and lives next to the museum. He says he already has to be extra careful about his kids. He also points out that he'll lose half his lawn to the road. Some will lose more than that.

Citizens haven't been told what is going on. They only know survey crews have been around for the past 10 years and two houses nearby on the road to Birchton were recently moved back and land was expropriated. Rumors began flying so Curry went to see the roads department at Cookshire. He was told not to worry because no Eaton Corner houses would be moved and only 15 feet would be taken on each side.

Curry thinks there's plenty to worry about. He thinks that when the government maps out roads it works with paper, not people, and that it applies province-wide standards without regard to specific situations. However, he is optimistic that if people work together they have a good chance of preventing what he thinks will ruin Eaton Corner.

He and McVetty have moral support from all the residents, the Eaton Township council, the Compton County Historical Society, as well as many people in neighboring towns.

Contacted by The Record, Claude Stevens, who is in charge of the district's roads, said the road will not be widened for at least three years. He said plans are set to expropriate about 20 feet on the east side of the road and about 14 on the west. One house and barn might be moved but he didn't foresee many trees being cut. "Whenever possible, trees will be saved," he said.

Most residents of Eaton Corner work elsewhere such as at Sawyerville, Lennoxville or Sherbrooke. Some are retired and a few have their own business. There's a garage, a body shop, and a food co-op; Curry sells farm fertilizer, and then too there's Marg's Restaurant.

Over at Marg's, customers find everything from diapers to canned food to freshly prepared sandwiches to stacks of second hand pocket books, all punched out on the big carved cash register by owner Marg Nicholson.

The restaurant is a gathering place in the old general store tradition. "Mrs. Nicholson" doesn't run it. "Marg" does.

"I don't think they should touch our town. My restaurant isn't set up for a super highway. I'll close if it goes through," she says. Her respect for history is seen in her careful restoration of the building that houses her business and home. Huge, hand-hewn beams are gradually being uncovered as she redecorates rooms. On the restaurant floor, square-headed nails hold down wide oak boards that show the mark of time.

Talking over tea at Marg's, Laberee and Curry say they hope the citizens committee will succeed in gaining some kind of special recognition for the town. Already the museum and academy have been declared provincial historic sites. Perhaps the whole town can be so classified, as have some St. Lawrence riverside villages that date back to the French regime.

Settlement at Eaton Corner began in 1794, when Townships land was opened for settlement. Land was cheap, plentiful and productive, so many New Englanders came up here. In those days, when land was overworked, folks sim-

The Congregationalist Church built in 1844 now houses the Compton County Museum which welcomes thousands of visitors each year. The architecture shows the influence of the Federal style.

Story and Photos by Barbara Verity Stevenson

Examples of the Georgian and Federal styles of architecture are also seen in the various buildings. One home is built of bricks from clay along the banks of the Eaton River running below the village.

Houses stand close together and most are neat and well-maintained. But they also stand close to the road since they were built in horse and buggy days. Already citizens complain of traffic on the two-lane road.

"You're liable to get killed. The traffic's terrible," Mrs. George Pinchin says, adding that she's waited as long as five minutes before being able to cross.

He and McVetty have moral support from all the residents, the Eaton Township council, the Compton County Historical Society, as well as many people in neighboring towns.

Contacted by The Record, Claude Stevens, who is in charge of the district's roads, said the road will not be widened for at least three years. He

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Carroll and daughter of Belleville, Ont., were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carroll.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Little attended the funeral of the late George McComb, on Saturday, April 14. They were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Little at Sand Hill, and dinner guests of Mrs. Dorothy Tucker and family, in Lennoxville.

The Easter Sunday service in the Church of the Ascension was taken by Bishop Russell Brown, of Montreal, a former Archbishop of Quebec. The flowers on the altar were given by Iris and Allan Little in loving memory of their late parents. Mr. and Mrs. Allan Little entertained Bishop Brown, Mr. and Mrs. W.J. Smith, Mrs. Emma Sealey and Mr. Eric Pharo, of Thetford Mines, Mrs. Alice Muir, Mr. and Mrs. Weston Graham, of Glen Murray, after the Easter Sunday service. Other callers at the Little home during the weekend included Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mackenzie of Finch, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Caron and son, of Dundas, Ont., Mr. Robert Foy of Lachine and Mrs. Art Yerhoog of Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. George Marshall of Dundas, Mr. Stewart Marshall of Ottawa and Mr. Allan Marshall of St. Catharines, Ont. were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Patterson and Hollis, of Rectory Hill. They also visited at the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Marshall of Henderson Vale, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Canning of Thetford Mines, Willie and John Longmoore, and the McVettys at Reedsdale. But the high point of their visit was a dinner and taffy-on-snow at the Longmoore-Patterson sugar camp, an entirely new and "sweet" experience for some of the group.

The biggest influx came between 1800 and 1805. By 1867, Eaton Corner had 200 people, a church, town hall, school, carriage house, blacksmith shop, steam saw mill, hotel, harness shop, tavern, and undertakers' shop. It was on the stagecoach run to Clifton and Sawyerville.

When the railway was built, it bypassed Eaton Corner and the village declined. Towns that were reached by the railway grew — Sawyerville and Cookshire are examples. Last year, the rails were torn up.

Gradually, young families have returned to Eaton Corner and today, though the village is small, it has vitality. The museum itself draws several thousand visitors each summer. As many as 150 tour it on a Sunday, says Laberee, who helps out there.

He used to be a director of the historical society but resigned when it was decided to pay directors. He didn't believe that was right.

His dedication and that of others to Eaton Corner's past is now being expressed in concern for its future:

"The road is going to alter the whole village. The idea of running a three-lane highway through a town, when it can go around, is a shame," Laberee says.

Seventy-five per cent of the buildings in Eaton Corner are over 100 years old. When residents like Marg Nicholson begin restoring their homes, they find huge hand-hewn beams like these.

The hymn sung was: "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross" and Mrs. Clara Atkins read Psalm 16 which was chosen to go with this Easter season. The interesting message which Mrs. Edwards read was taken from articles written by Dr. George Pidgeon. Ten members answered the roll call, most of them bringing white elephant articles for our sale table.

The minutes of the January meeting were read by Mrs. Edwards, Secretary, and approved as read. Several thank-you notes were read for fruit and gifts received or expressions of sympathy which had been sent.

It was decided our group would sponsor two foster children, a boy and a girl, as this is the year of the child and we wanted to do something extra along that line. The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Clara Atkins showing that several bills had been paid and a satisfactory amount of money on hand.

The visiting committee showed that 100 visits had been made to sick and the elderly since our last meeting. Mrs. Verna Hunting reported that several cards had been sent and coupons had been added to our credit at the Store.

Some discussion followed about the Salad Plate which our group has been asked to serve at the Kirkpatrick Reunion which is being held here early in July. The members decided to do this. Ten dollars was voted to be sent from our U.C.W. towards seeds for Zaire.

Plans were made to have a Sale and tea at the Church Hall on April 28 beginning at 2:30 p.m. Home baking, shoes, bazaar articles and good used clothing will be for sale and a light lunch will be served. Plants and bulbs will be sold later when gardens are ready for them, probably on May 26.

Members were reminded of Mrs. Eva Goodenough's birthday on April 21st. Mrs. Goodenough is one of our oldest members and would be 93 years young on her birthday.

A suggestion was made that our group give more life memberships and we were asked to think about this until a later meeting when it will be discussed.

The May meeting will be held on the regular date, May 10, and Mrs. L. Allison will be the hostess.

Mrs. Vera Simons closed the meeting with prayer, following which a delicious lunch of home-made breads, cheese and pickles was served by the hostess, Mrs. Walter Atkins.

Quebec-Sherbrooke Presbyterial UCW

RICHMOND — The 17th annual meeting of the Quebec-Sherbrooke Presbyterial U.C.W. was held on April 3 in Richmond United Church. Registration at 9:30 was in charge of South Durham U.C.W., after which members were welcomed with hot coffee and doughnuts.

Group singing was led by Mrs. Sara Surjadinata, with Mrs. Burton at the organ, until the meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Hilda Archer. Miss Bernice Beatty, president of Richmond U.C.W., then welcomed the members and guests.

Mrs. Archer introduced Mrs. Evelyn McOuat, president of Montreal-Ottawa Conference, who brought greetings from Conference and conducted a short worship period.

The guest speaker, Rev. Don Rabson of Chalmers-Wesley United Church, Quebec City, was introduced by Rev. Jean Barkley. In keeping with the theme of the day "All God's Children - Are You Listening?", Rev. Mr. Rabson spoke on Theological Perspectives on Childhood in the Year of the Child. He first reminded us that we are all God's children, but unfortunately in our relation to children we are prone to think of them as our own, extensions of ourselves, to be treated in whatever ways are pleasing or advantageous to ourselves, rather than remembering that they are God's children and we are the stewards of their childhood.

Each child has a right to three things: adequate physical nurture, a climate in which he can be happy and contented, and the opportunity to develop to his fullest potential. To achieve these three rights he needs discipline as well as love, and an education which will enable him to become a fully developed person as well as to earn a living. "All God's Children" should not be just a phrase, but the framework through which we work to show God's love for His children. Mrs. Miriam Fuller thanked Mr. Rabson for his inspiring address.

The business meeting followed, conducted by Mrs. Archer. Reports of members of the Executive were circulated in printed form, so that all members could study them before they were adopted.

The chairman of the nominating committee, Mrs. Laura Gaudine, presented the slate of officers for 1979, which was adopted as presented. Mrs. McOuat then installed the following officers: Executive Officers: Past President, Mrs. Laura Gaudine; President, Mrs. Hilda Archer; Vice-President, Mrs. Mildred Miller; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Phyllis Wilson; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Belya Crowell; Treasurer, Mrs. Hannah Mallalieu.

Area Vice-Presidents: Richmond, Mrs. Marion Williams; Scotstown, Mrs. Marion Laberee and Mrs. Barbara Ward; Stanstead-Sherbrooke, Mrs. Margaret Mosher and Mrs. Grace Moore; Thetford-Quebec, Mrs. Joy Nugent; Waterloo, Mrs. Norma McCord.

Portfolio Secretaries: Community Friendship and Visiting, Mrs. Miriam Fuller; Publicity and Communications, Mrs. Ileana Burns; Stewardship, Mrs. Edie Holliday; Archives and Memorials, Mrs. Lexie Rogers; Happenings, Mrs. Phyllis Smith and Mrs. Carolyn Bernard. Chairmen of Committees: Church in Society, Mrs. Muriel Prescott; Leadership Development, Mrs. Dorothy Thomson; Christian Development, Mrs. Joan Morrison; Nominations, Mrs. Laura Gaudine.

Mrs. Doris Walker read the memorial list of members deceased in 1978. A bountiful lunch was served at noon by Richmond U.C.W. after which a short time was set aside to examine the book display and make purchases. The afternoon session began with group singing, after which the Registration Committee reported there were 140 members present, plus several visitors.

Mrs. Norma McCord extended the thanks of the members to all who had contributed to the success of the day.

The main feature of the afternoon session was a panel discussion. Mrs. Dorothy Thomson introduced the members of the panel, Rev. Mr. Rabson, Moderator, with Mrs. Mary Hatfield, Mr. Jerry Kazanel and Mrs. Pat Warren, Panelists.

Each member of the panel briefly described his work with children. Mrs. Hatfield, as Youth Worker for Quebec-Sherbrooke Presbytery, works with young people's groups and with North Shore students in the area. Mr. Kazanel, from the Church of the Messiah in Montreal, besides his work in counselling, is particularly interested in a group engaged in finding foster homes for teen-agers. Mrs. Warren teaches a class of slow learners at Alexander Galt Regional High School.

After these presentations there were many questions from the floor, which were ably answered by members of the panel. Mrs. Zen Judson thanked the panel members and moderator, and spoke briefly on Children of the World. Closing devotions were conducted by Mrs. Dorothy Thomson, with the offering dedicated to work with children.

WI Meeting

ABERCORN — The April meeting of the Abercorn W.I. met at the home of Arlene Rogerson with nine members and one guest, Mrs. Bob Haggerty from New Richmond, Que.

President Ethel Haggerty opened the meeting with the Collect. Roll call was answered by giving a use for maple syrup. Some liked it on grapefruit, instead of sugar, on cereal, in baked beans, on waffles and as a pie.

Minutes were read by the new Sec. Pat Lahue, many thanks to Doris Hoyt for writing them up.

Final plans were made for the County Convention. Dinner to be served at the Abercorn House by Mr. and Mrs. Foster, prop. All arrangements for this were made by Pauline Wilkins. Letters from the other branches indicate that there will be 50 to 55 persons attending.

Financial report written by Edna Garland and read by the new treasurer, Mrs. Leaman, who suggested that we transfer $1,000 to a non-checking account so as to receive more interest. All agreed to this.

Mrs. Leaman donated a table, plus plastic material for the hall. Hall is to be put in order on April 26. President had been in touch with the County President. A bus trip is planned for the Macdonald Convention, many members are going.

Two convenors had reports. Agriculture, Pat Lahue brought in a copy of the Township Sun with an article concerning the Asbestos slag used on the rail road from Candiac to Abercorn. Many are concerned of the runoff of this waste into the rivers and streams.

Publicity convenor Pauline Wilkins gave a tip on getting refunds for the symbols on Kraft products. She gave all the address to send to and told them that April 30 was the deadline. They are worth 50 cents each but there is a limit of 8 to be sent in at one time.

A pair of socks knit by Thelma Riddell and a pair of slippers will be given for the gift stall at the F.W.I.C. Some bookmarks were brought in, all to be turned in at the convention on May 3rd. Raffle tickets and money given to President, to be returned to Lillian Mitmore in Sutton.

At the close of the meeting, Ethel Haggerty thanked both the outgoing Secretary and Treasurer for their years of faithful service to the W.I. in their elected seats. We would be lost without Edna Garland to guide us, as she has been with the W.I. since the second year of its existence, in Abercorn, and has held many seats, both local and countywide, over the years.

Doris Hoyt has been very faithful to join and support the Abercorn W.I. even though she has lived for years in Sutton. It is with the help of such dedicated members that small branches can survive. Many thanks to both of them. They were each presented with a lovely china cup and saucer. Arlene Rogerson then served a delicious lunch, topped off with strawberries and ice cream.

Brompton Road Women's Institute

The Brompton Rd. branch of Q.W.I. met at the home of Mrs. R. Sage, 57 Peel St., Lennoxville on April 10, with co-hostesses Mrs. Irene Berwick and Mrs. Elgin Decoteau.

Motto of the month, "Most of our shadows of this life, are caused by standing in our own sunshine".

The President Mrs. A.J. Goodfellow, opened the meeting with singing of the Opening Ode, repeating the Collect and Salute to the flag. She extended a warm welcome to members and guests.

Since this was Second-Vice Pres. day our Pres. called upon Mrs. L. Emery, 2nd Vice, to take the chair. Our guests were Mrs. E. Turner, President of Sherbrooke County W.I., Miss K. Atto, 2nd Vice of Lennoxville and Mrs. M. Povey, 2nd Vice of Belvidere branch, also Mrs. Wayne Decoteau from Phoenix, Arizona.

The roll call - Bring a wrapped gift for your right hand neighbour (Value 25c). Ten members present.

The minutes of the Annual meeting were read by the Secretary, Mrs. D. Cullen. Mrs. G. Decoteau was named delegate to the County meeting to replace Mrs. S. Billing.

Mrs. D. Cullen reported information on the proposed visit to Slack Bros. in Waterloo and all agreed this would have to be postponed. The Treasurer, Mrs. G. Westman gave the financial statement.

The correspondence was read by the secretary, and included was a letter from Provincial Pres. Mrs. I. Kilgour. The Federated News was given out to each member.

A motion was made to support the Landrover Fund, 25c per member.

All members present agreed to voluntarily contribute $1.00 each toward the Adelaide Hoodless Foundation Fund, other members to be contacted.

Reports of Conveners: Agriculture - Miss Elsie Winget forwarded her report, that school fair plans were progressing, seeds were ordered and prize lists ready.

Education - Mrs. N. Mackey stated she had attended plays at Sherbrooke Elementary School, in which two of her children participated.

Home Economics - Mrs. G. Decoteau stressed conserving energy and gave helpful household hints.

Welfare and Health - Mrs. R. Sage reported daffodil sales went well in aid of Can. Cancer Society. Net sales totalled $250.00. The card party in aid of same Society, proceeds $150.00. April 30 was the date agreed upon to work at the Cancer dressing room.

Sunshine - Mrs. G. Westman reported three gifts and seven cards for sick and shut-ins and agreed to buy bed trays to be donated to Stoddard Nursing Home at East Hatley.

Ways & Means - Mrs. L. Emery discussed the carpet bowling supper May 2nd and requested helpers. Mrs. G. Westman agreed to convene the luncheon at the County meeting in May.

Mrs. G. Westman, treasurer, collected Pennies for Friendship.

The floating prize was donated by Mrs. R. Sage, the winner being Mrs. Irene Berwick.

A 500 card party was discussed, Apr. 21 or 28, this to be finalized later.

There being no further business, Mrs. Emery moved the meeting adjourned.

A few games of bingo were enjoyed with Mrs. D. Cullen calling the numbers.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses and a social hour enjoyed. Mrs. R. Sage presented Mrs. Irene Berwick with a birthday cake and all joined in singing Happy Birthday.

The next meeting on May 15, third Tuesday, at the Community hall, 10:30 a.m., hostesses - all members.

UCW Meeting

STANSTEAD (DB) — On Wednesday, April 18, the ladies of the U.C.W. afternoon unit met at the home of Mrs. Valerie Baskwill in Stanstead.

Mrs. Howard Aikman was in the chair and expressed her pleasure in having Mrs. Mabel Brown able to attend the meeting, after being in the hospital. Mrs. Aikman also welcomed Mrs. Donald Dewey, a new member.

All members repeated the Purpose in unison. Mrs. Beulah Cass conducted the devotion and read an article from Rotarian magazine, "Try giving yourself away." She also read a prayer by St. Francis of Assisi.

A letter was received from Mrs. Ruth McGilton with a cheque for work of the Unit, also a letter from the foster daughter, Mrs. Ada Curtis reported she had sent two lbs. of stamps and 18 bandages.

Minutes from the executive meeting of March 21 were read by Mrs. Alice Merriman, who also gave an outline of a very enjoyable and interesting Presbyterial meeting in Richmond on April 3, which was attended by several from here.

Mrs. Valerie Baskwill gave a report on the coffee hour on April 4, held at her home.

The ladies were reminded of the dinner on April 22, following the church service.

Plans were made for the Allegro Tea to be held May 5 in the Centenary Church hall.

Mrs. Faith Fanous gave a report on "The awareness Christian training seminar" from March 22 to 31 in Granby, given by Right Rev. Steven Barhan of Eastern Orthodox Church in Montreal. It was very interesting.

Rev. Eric Snider, a missionary of World Outreach of National United Churches will be in Stanstead on May 2. He will give a talk on his work in Nicaragua in Central America. The public are invited. No admission will be charged, an offering will be taken.

Refreshments will be served.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned and delicious refreshments served by the hostess.

The May 16th U.C.W. meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Mabel Brown in Rock Island.

Stereotypes persist

If you blew out 65 or more candles on your last birthday cake, you're considered quite old.

Others probably refer to you as a "senior citizen." (I never heard of anyone in a younger age bracket being called a "middle-aged citizen" or a "junior citizen.")

More than 22 million Americans have passed the 65-year mark. They'll be joined soon by 14.7 million persons who are between the ages of 60 and 64. If we drop down to age 55, we add up to a small army of 40 million Americans.

Unfortunately, we who are lumped together as the aging population are victims of stereotypes and myths about aging. Yet, no two of us are as alike as two peas in a pod.

To begin with, the typical old person isn't an old man. In America, older women outnumber older men four to three.

A person who is physically and mentally capable can function better than someone at least 10 years younger who has begun going downhill. For many of us, however, a birth date is a closed door. The myth is perpetuated that we are just too damn old.

Employers won't hire us because they assume we're less capable than younger workers. But statistics show older workers have less absenteeism and fewer on-the-job accidents than younger workers.

Older workers are not more subject to depression than younger ones. And they are more conscientious about their jobs.

Many of us were forced into early retirement because another myth says older people don't need to work and can get by with less money. However, the soaring rate of inflation hits hard at the old as well as the young.

We find it almost impossible to ride the high-cost-of-living escalator. One out of every 10 Americans is over 65, for example, but older citizens buy about 20 percent of all non-prescription drugs and all food consumed at home.

Too often we are thrown together as that "senile" section of the country's population. No matter how healthy and active we may be, there's a trend to isolate us in physical, mental and sociological ghettos. They even try to move us into apartment complexes that keep us further out of the mainstream of normal life. I heard one stereotyper of the old say, "Instead of calling them senior-citizen homes, they should be named senile-citizen homes." Yet, only one of us in 65 lives in an old-age home or other confining institution. Just 10 percent of people over 65 have a serious illness. Unless we are physically handicapped, we can still move around, possibly at a slightly slower pace.

We're not really "dotty" as so many people assume. Statistics show that few of us are senile in the medical sense of having suffered brain damage. We don't have a constant loss of memory. We aren't more forgetful than younger people — we just remember those things we believe are more important. And sex isn't something only for the birds and bees — and young people. Sexual vigor can and should continue into the late 70s and even beyond. According to the National Council on the Aging, these are the major stereotypes and myths that have a way of hanging on:

- Old people are all alike.
- Old people are poor.
- Old people live all alone.
- Old people can't function in society.
- Old people are sick.

- Old people are depressed.
- Old people are a drag on everybody else.
- No matter what your age today, you, too, are growing older — day by day.
- As Robert Louis Stevenson said, "Old and young, we are all on our last cruise." And in the same boat. Write the National Council on the Aging, 1828 L. St. N.W., Washington D.C. 20036 for the booklet "Facts and Myths About Aging." Reading it has stiffened my arthritic backbone enough to go out and slay the stereotype dragon.

An inside look at a modern cowboy

MOLINE, Kan. (NEA) - The morning is pitch dark and cold.

But at 5 a.m. — just as he does every Tuesday — Oliver Darby gets out of bed, tends to chores about his place, feeds and loads one of his horses into a trailer, and drives the 50 miles to his job at the Winfield Livestock Auction.

He is on the job by 9 a.m., ready for a day of sorting and herding cattle that will keep him away from home for 11 or 12 hours. And if the run of cattle is especially heavy, it may be 11 p.m. before he gets home for supper.

It would be a hard day for any man. But for Darby to maintain this pace is amazing. He's 80 years old.

He doesn't stop there. On Thursdays and Fridays, he performs the same chores at other cattle sales. On Mondays and Wednesdays, he works for area ranchers.

"On Saturdays and Sundays, I rest," Darby admits. "I take care of my two horses and then spend most of the weekend resting in my old easy chair."

He has two horses so that each may get a day's rest between days of work — a luxury he doesn't share. "As long as I can make a hand, I'm going to work," he explains. "Horses and cattle is all I know."

Darby was born in 1898 near Gentry, Mo., but soon moved with his family to Woodward County, Okla.

"I made my own way since I was 7 years old," Darby says. He attended country school "for about six or seven grades."

He lived in a bunkhouse at the Oklahoma-based ranch where he was to work for 40 years. Two or three cowhands were kept there as a steady complement, with more hands brought in when work was heavy.

Cowboys' pay was slim then. He recalls starting one job at 50 cents a day plus room and board.

Every ranch had a string of horses in those days; 50 or 75 was not an unusual number.

"We broke our own horses," Darby says. "I never got one that I couldn't manage to ride, and we had all kinds."

"I've been bucked off a lot, but never hurt bad. Any man who ever rode much got bucked off."

Roping cattle was dangerous but necessary to doctor the stock. If the lariat broke while roping a stubborn animal, you'd often wind up on the ground, he adds.

Darby's only serious injury happened around 1935 when he was stretching fence wire. The stretcher broke, twisting and fracturing his ankle.

He called to his wife, who was within hearing distance. She brought a car and took him to the doctor.

"He put a cast on it and I rested for three days, then rode the rest of the summer with my foot out of the stirrup," says Darby.

What about the dangers of his work at auctions, where up to 2,000 cattle may be worked each sale day?

"We get some fighting cattle," he responds. "Some are just mean. When a bull gets excited, he wants to fight."

"About two years ago, a big Brahma bull got his head between my horse's hind legs and turned him onto his head, with only his front feet on the ground. I got out of that when the bull stopped."

Although he has been drawing Social Security for several years, the veteran cowboy can still read a brand on a steer from astride his horse. He wears glasses only to read fine print.

"I'm awful lucky, as I feel pretty good all of the time," he says.

Darby lives with his third wife, Rilla. He fathered four children with his second wife, who died seven years ago. His two daughters have given him five grandchildren.

But the memory of his sons brings a note of sadness to his soft voice, as he says, "My two boys were both killed in action in World War II with the Marines — George at Guadalcanal and Howard at Tarawa. ... A man never really gets over something like that."

So, Darby lives the life he has always led — working with horses and cattle. In addition to his several jobs, he buys green horses, breaks and sells them for as much as $1,200.

In his leisure hours, Darby enjoys television — "especially Western shows."

"Western music is still my kind of music," he adds. "I used to sing a lot myself. I still sing to my horse — he can't help himself."

Goldwyn's cook

What was it like to feed the stars?

FULLERTON, Calif. (NEA) - The only thing she could count on was that lunch would be served at noon. She seldom knew the number or names of the guests until moments before the first course was to be served.

But it was the spontaneity in her cooking that made Josephine Berger so popular with the celebrities at movie producer Samuel Goldwyn's table. They included Bette Davis, Clark Gable, Judy Garland, Joan Crawford, Bing Crosby, Dwight D. Eisenhower, Harry S. Truman and Richard Nixon — to name a few.

Now 80 and a resident of a local convalescent hospital, Mrs. Berger usually prefers to have someone else do the cooking. But she can still serve up delightful reminiscences of her days as a chef to the stars.

Cooking came naturally by necessity to Mrs. Berger. The eldest of the 12 children of an Austrian shoemaker and his wife, she taught herself to cook to help her mother care for the large family.

"No one ever taught me how to cook," the white-haired Mrs. Berger recalls. "I could just take things, throw them together and they would come out tasting good."

She was only 10 when she immigrated with her family to New York City.

"Papa had heard from friends how good America was, so he decided he would find out for himself," she explains. "If it was good, we would stay; if not, we would go back to Austria."

Apparently Papa found the country to his liking. The family made it its permanent home.

Shortly after her arrival, Mrs. Berger began hiring out as a cook for the wealthy families of New York and Vermont, including members of the Rockefeller clan. Her earnings went to her mother to help care for the family.

At 18, she met Alfred Berger, who applied for a job as a butler at a home where she was in charge of the household staff. She hired him, and they were married soon after. Eventually they settled in southern California.

Mrs. Berger's path crossed that of pioneer movie maker Goldwyn in the mid-1940s.

As she remembers it, Goldwyn was a guest one evening at the home of her employer. He needed a cook — legend had it he had fired 22 cooks in 22 days — and hired her away that night after just a few bites of her cooking.

Although Goldwyn wanted Mrs. Berger to manage his Beverly Hills home, she agreed only to cook noon meals in his studio apartment. By then she had a young son, and her main interest was her family.

To have a chef just to prepare lunch might seem the height of elegance. But to Goldwyn, lunch was more than nourishment. It was a time to interview prospective actors and actresses, conduct script conferences and entertain the reigning celebrities of the day, including politicians.

"Mr. Goldwyn often judged people by the way they ate," she recalls.

Mrs. Berger figures that all the big names in Hollywood broke bread with the producer at one time or another. Her particular favorites were Gable ("he was so nice and so handsome, too"), Miss Crawford ("a real fine lady") and Crosby ("a nice fellow" who once sang to her).

She says Miss Garland was "all right to a certain extent. She always wanted things her way, and if she got it, she was fine."

One guest was then-Vice President Nixon, who proclaimed Mrs. Berger the finest cook ever. He offered her a job in his own household, but Goldwyn responded that Mrs. Berger could leave only "over my dead body."

Mrs. Berger remembers that Goldwyn's famous guests delighted in her cooking. "They would ask me, 'How do you make this — I've never had anything like it before?' Or, 'What school did you go to?' And I would just tap my forehead and say, 'It's all from up here, my imagination.'"

Unlike most chefs, Mrs. Berger was not averse to giving out her prize recipes. "I would just tell them to come out into the kitchen, sit down and write it out as I dictated it," she recalls.

Mrs. Berger's culinary duties weren't totally confined to Goldwyn's luncheons. The producer frequently had her take meals to a fledgling film maker who had an apartment in the Goldwyn studios. He was Howard Hughes.

And when John Gilbert had a minor run-in with the law and was housed for a short while in the city jail, Goldwyn had Mrs. Berger take a basket of specially prepared dishes to the actor's cell.

Goldwyn frequently invited Mrs. Berger to sit with him while he previewed new films and solicited her opinions on them. That fact prompted his wife to comment, "Josephine was the only person who could say no to Sam Goldwyn and get away with it."

Widowed about 1952, Mrs. Berger continued to work for Goldwyn until 1967 and maintained close contact with the producer and his wife afterward. So fond was the couple of her that both remembered her in their will.

CLARK GABLE, Judy Garland and Joan Crawford were among the stars who enjoyed the cooking of Josephine Berger, longtime chef to film producer Samuel Goldwyn. According to Mrs. Berger, "Mr. Goldwyn often judged people by the way they ate."

A COWBOY SINCE his youth, Oliver Darby has no plans for retirement. "Horses and cattle is all I know," he explains.

Belvidere Women's Institute

The monthly meeting of Belvidere Branch Women's Institute was held on Saturday, April 7, at the home of Mrs. Jack Tarte, with Kathleen Reid as co-hostess. The president, Miss Margaret Kinkead, presided.

The meeting was opened in the usual manner, with the motto reading, "Health is Priceless". The members and three guests were welcomed. Our visitors were Mrs. Conway, Mrs. Annie Reid and Mrs. June Wells, R.N. The roll call was answered by ten members, who each gave a first aid remedy.

The minutes of the March meeting were read by the secretary, and a good report given by the treasurer. Correspondence included a letter from our Q.W.I. president, Mrs. Ina Kilgour, in which she mentioned that plans are well underway for the 65th annual convention at Macdonald College. This being International Year of the Child, the theme of the convention will be "Today's Child, Tomorrow's Future."

A motion was made at the F.W.I. executive meeting that on the occasion of the 60th anniversary, a Hoodless Homestead Foundation Fund be established, and that every W.I. member in Canada be asked to give an anniversary gift of one dollar, these gifts to be presented at the national convention to be held in Saskatoon in June. These donations are to be on a strictly voluntary basis. A thank-you letter from Dr. Kathleen Atto, school fair committee chairman, was read, acknowledging a special gift of ten dollars from our branch for prizes for the highest aggregate received by exhibitors in sewing and cooking classes. This is in keeping with the International Year of the Child. A sum of money was turned in by members for the Hoodless Homestead Foundation Fund.

The standing committees' reports were as follows: Agricultural convener Dorothy Montgomery mentioned the maple syrup and sugar season, and that various reports had been heard about it. School fair plans are progressing.

Citizenship convener Margaret Smart passed out nine CanSave towels ordered by members.

Education convener Kathleen Reid read an article pertaining to the International Year of the Child. This item was entitled, "Let the Children Have Their Say," the theme being that the media should help the children be heard. Kathleen mentioned that she still receives letters from our old pen pal Hazel Gunderson in British Columbia.

Home Economics conveners, Eva Beaton and Phyllis Hazard displayed book-marks made by members for the F.W.I. convention in Saskatoon. Articles for the J.P. Coats contest are to be turned in at the May county meeting to be judged. Socks, mittens and a towel were turned in on the work calendar. Mickie Povey turned in a shopping bag that she had made from material given by Eva Beaton.

Welfare and Health convener Hazel McGee reported that two members and one visitor worked on cancer dressings in March. The next work day was to be April 11th. Mention was made that red signs or stickers are available at the fire station in Lennoxville. These are for placing in the windows of rooms where children sleep, in case of emergency. A list of health hints was read. One of the hints was that all fish and seafood are high in protein and mineral content, and also supply a good variety of vitamins. Used stamps were received from Margaret Darby for the Red Cross.

Sunshine convener Mickie Povey sent letters to members who were indisposed or otherwise unable to attend meetings. She also sent cards for birthdays and to the ill and shut-in. Thank-you notes were received from the recipients.

Ways and Means convener Viola Tarte reported that the county card party in aid of the school fair is in the planning stage.

It was decided to donate $25 to the Canadian Cancer Society. Money was voted for Mickie Povey to use in her sunshine work. The monthly drawing was won by Margaret Kinkead.

Miss Hazel McGee was in charge of the program, Welfare and Health, for the day, and invited Mrs. June Wells, R.N., to our meeting as guest speaker. Mrs. Wells was introduced by Irene Paige. Mrs. Wells is a school health nurse. She gave us an enlightening talk on the various aspects of the rights of the child, and told us of an Act respecting the protection of children who may be subjected to ill treatment. Irene Paige thanked Mrs. Wells and presented her with a small gift as a token of our appreciation for her informative talk. It was particularly pleasant to have a former member like Mrs. Wells visit us again.

A delicious supper consisting of ham with salads and a variety of breads and pies was served by the hostesses, who were assisted by Mrs. Annie Reid.

The reports of the annual meeting were sent to the conveners and to the Sherbrooke Record. The required lists for the new year were sent to the Q.W.I. office at Macdonald College. The history of the branch for the past year was written, typed and sent to the Q.W.I. office at Macdonald College to be put on file.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Henry Parker on May 5. Mrs. Charles Drummond and Mrs. Charles Pitman will be co-hostesses.

Prosperity Rebekah Lodge No. 32

COWANSVILLE — On April 2nd, 29 members of Prosperity Rebekah Lodge No. 32 met for a regular meeting. The flag was presented, O Canada was sung and the meeting opened in ritualistic form.

The Noble Grand, Sister Menec extended a warm welcome to all and a special greeting to those who have been absent for a time. The minutes were read and approved. Sister McClay was reported ill, also Sister Algiers. Brothers Earl Royea and L. Beattie were visited and slowly improving; cards were to be sent to them.

In the correspondence, a letter was received from Sister Hoyle concerning the used stamps sent to her, also a letter pertaining to Camp Neofa with dates and prices for summer camping. The information concerning the membership rally to be held on April 21st, in Waterloo was read again. Financial reports were given, also the report of the recent card party. The secretary read several items from the Oddfellow and Rebekah Bulletin. Sister Damant expressed her thanks for the gift and card sent to her while she was ill. Sister Isabella, on behalf of Brother Beattie, thanked the members for the gifts and card taken to him while he was in hospital. There being no other business, Lodge closed, the flag was retired, and all joined in singing God Save the Queen.

A silent auction of home-baking took place during the lunch period, which everyone enjoyed.

Prosperity Rebekah Lodge No. 32 met for the second bi-monthly meeting, on April 16. Over forty members and eleven visitors attended this special meeting, as it was Past Grands night and we were conferring the degree on three Brothers.

The meeting opened with Past Grands in all the chairs, the flag was presented and O Canada sung. A warm greeting was extended to all, Sister Shirley Vaughan escorted Sister Hilda Howard, Assembly Inside Guardian, to the center of the room, where she was introduced and welcomed.

The order of business was brought forward and the degree team prepared for initiation. This is the first time we have used Biblical characters for the degree, the degree captain and members are to be congratulated. It was very much enjoyed and Brothers Syberg Beaulieu and McClay are now members of Prosperity.

Reverting back to the order of business the new members were welcomed. The minutes were read and approved. Brother Melrose was reported in the hospital and is to be remembered, Brothers Royea, Beattie, and Strange had all been visited and found improving. Sister Viola Strange had also been visited; she is not well and would welcome more visitors.

One bill was received and ordered paid. Easter greetings were received and a letter from the Building committee. Financial reports were given. A silent auction of home-baking will be held at our next meeting. Word has been received that Sister Kathy Royea will be moving to B.C. where her husband is already working, we will all miss her.

Eighteen Past Grands voted for Assembly Warden. Our new Brothers spoke briefly, expressing their pleasure in the degree work and they promised to work with us for the good of our Order.

The meeting closed by retiring the flag and all joined in singing The Queen.

Everyone retired to the lower hall for lunch, where the tables were laid with colorful covers, napkins and spring flowers, the centerpiece being a beautiful cake shaped like an open book and iced with our fraternal colors and white doves. Thank you, Sisters, who are not Past Grands, your turn is coming.

WI Meeting

LENNOXVILLE — The Women's Institute held their regular meeting in the Town Hall, Queen Street, with the president Mrs. Harold Worster presiding.

The meeting was opened in the usual way and nine members responded to the roll call by bringing a piece of hand work for display.

This display was most interesting and showed that members were keeping the old crafts alive.

In the art-an interesting hand painting of an old round barn with sheep grazing nearby was typical of the surrounding district.

A pictorial map of Cape Cod in the form of a wall hanging showed the area and many items of added interest. This map was done in crewel embroidery, as was a flower design cushion.

In crochet there were intricate doilies and a book mark. Patchwork which is becoming more popular again, showed two pot holders.

Some very life-like stuffed toys done in felt craft, were also completely dressed, showing daintily created outfits machine and hand-sewn.

In hand weaving, a crib coverlet, placemat, pot holder and bookmark done on a four harness loom and an attractive placemat done on a lap loom, also a needlepoint cushion top. Knitting showed a fair isle sweater, puppet and other mittens, an owl design pot holder and a smocked apron.

All members present had one or more pieces of their craft work and many do other types of crafts, also.

This being Home Economics month, plans were also discussed to have a craft afternoon for members interested in patchwork.

Mrs. Hugh L. Wallace thanked all for their interest in the display in the absence of Mrs. Warren G. Ross, convener.

Conveners reports included - Mrs. Earl Findlay referred to the year's outline which indicated exploring of industries, farm safety assist 4-H Clubs and school fairs. She also commented on the 4-H member of Ayer's Cliff who was visiting in Ottawa. Miss Cecile Antik who was en route to the U.B. National 4-H Conference in Washington, D.C.

Miss Kathleen Atto commented on Prince Charles' visit to Canada and urged members to show their interest in the upcoming election on May 22.

In keeping with the craft theme of the day, she read an interesting article on the interest and work in Crafts shown by Lord Reilly of London who has accepted the presidency of the World Craft Council.

Lord Reilly is interested in seeing more emphasis being given in schools to crafts teaching and the development of hand work. Some of his quotations, "People who make things tend not to break things" and "People who are taught to use their hands are never bored".

Mrs. Wilson Beattie reported 360 Cancer dressings made. The next work day on April 23.

Mrs. Wallace reported the meeting to the press and read a timely article entitled: On becoming an educated electorate.

The president reminded all members to have their book marks ready for the May meeting, also the F.W.I.C. gifts for the sales table in Saskatoon, Sask.

All members present donated one dollar each to the Hoodless Home Fund.

The County card party will be held in St. George's Church Hall, May 5th, arrangements to be finalized.

This concluded a busy session and delicious refreshments were served with an Easter theme, pussy willow, daffodils and decorated sweets served in a dainty beribboned basket. A social hour was enjoyed. Hostesses were Mrs. Harold Worster and Mrs. Gerald Cascadden, assisted by Mrs. Archie Kinnear.

A TASTE OF SUMMER!

California strawberries are the next best thing to our local product. They are large and flavourful, and this week are being offered at summer prices. Remember that 10 large strawberries contain all the vitamin C required for one day.

Here is an interesting recipe for strawberry tart.

1-9" baked short pastry crust
1 pint or 600 g strawberries, washed and hulled
1/4 cup raspberry or currant jelly
Slice the large strawberries in half. Melt the jelly and baste the pie crust with some of it. Place the strawberries over the jelly, and pour remaining jelly over fruits with the help of a pastry brush. Let rest for 20 minutes. Serve.

UCW Meetings

MANSONVILLE (MB) — A regular meeting of Mansonville U.C.W. was held on April 5, in the United Church Hall with 15 members present and two children.

Meeting was opened by the Vice-President, Mrs. Gilda Clark in absence of the President, Mrs. Mary Bailey.

The devotional period, led by Mrs. Louise Oliver, was taken from John 15 with the theme "Friendship" followed by a reading, "I Have Called You Friend", and concluded with prayer.

A short business meeting included plans for the May 5th spring supper, i.e. the menu, the articles for the sales tables and sewing to be done.

The M. & S. Committee displayed articles for sale. The two members of the Young Women's Action Group continued their lessons on macramé.

The following members attended the Quebec Sherbrooke Presbyterian Annual Meeting of the United Church Women in Richmond on April 3: Mrs. Bertha Nichols, Mrs. Gilda Clark and Mrs. Maud Clark. A report of this all day meeting

A social hour was enjoyed with lunch served by the hostess, Mrs. Marguerite Ommerli.

The Mansonville U.C.W. members extended hearty congratulations to Mr and Mrs. Rudy Cole and to their family and relatives, former Pottton residents. Mrs. Cole gave birth to triplets in a Vermont Hospital.

ULVERTON — The U.C.W. held their April meeting on the 12th at the home of Mrs. John Harriman with eight members present.

A business meeting was held first by the president, Mrs. W. Potts. There were 27 calls made. Mrs. A. Dunn reported that eleven subscriptions were in for the Observer. A letter of thanks was received from the Evangelical school for the deaf in Puerto Rico, for soup labels, which had been sent.

Plans were made for a Garage sale and a bake sale to be held at the Church Hall on May 19, commencing at 11 a.m. Light refreshments will also be served at this sale. The collection, with a good donation from the U.C.W.

funds was to be sent to World Vision.

After the business meeting, the members enjoyed a pot luck lunch at the noon hour. They were joined by two guests the Rev. Ruth Matthews of Drummondville and the Rev. Jacques Beaudon.

Following lunch, the Rev. Londa Beaudon held a Maundy Thursday Service and communion.

At the close of the service, the Rev. Ruth Matthews gave the benediction.

COOKSHIRE — The April meeting of the U.C.W. was held at the home of Mrs. Pauline Thorneole, with 12 in attendance. Mrs. Gladys Parsons chaired the meeting.

Mrs. Jean Stevenson, who was in charge of the worship period, read some of the verses from Acts 10, and then the article in the Observer's April edition by Garth Mundle entitled "Tell Us the Old, Old Story", and then gave a short prayer.

Following the reading of the minutes by Mrs. Jo-Ann Jondreville, and their approval, routine business was conducted.

A number of thank-you notes were read from members and friends for favors received.

Mrs. Barbara Vogell gave the treasurer's report which showed the receipts, expenditures, and the bank balance. The sale of daffodils was quite good, the money will be sent to the Canadian Cancer Society.

It was stated that four of the ladies had attended the U.C.W. Presbyterial meeting held in Richmond recently, and had visited some of the ladies in the Wales Home.

Miss Esther Farnsworth gave a resume of this interesting event. Money was voted for seeds for Zaire, and for the Missionary and Maintenance Fund.

An invitation was received to attend the U.C.W. meeting in Bulwer on Tuesday, May 8, in the Community Centre. A number of ladies signified their wish to attend.

Mrs. Heatherington gave out information about the recent meeting of the Quebec-Sherbrooke Presbytery's executive, which was held at the Manse in Sawyerville.

A motion was made that we purchase ten new

A.U.C.W. Tea was planned for June 2nd, in the Church Hall.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Elkie Rodger on Wednesday, May 9 at 7:30 p.m. It was suggested that we bring pictures of our grandchildren.

Following adjournment, Mrs. Ethel Cruickshank showed colored snapshots of the recent trip she and her husband had taken to California and Mexico, which were much enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Nellie Parker was the winner of the drawing. At the close of the evening, refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Elkie Rodger and Mrs. Diane Learned, assisted by Mrs. Pauline Thorneole.

KNOWLTON (KT) — A general meeting of Knowlton United Church Women was held in the church hall at 10:30 a.m., April 10 and was followed by a pot-luck lunch. Eleven members were present and proceedings opened with repeating in unison the Purpose and the Lord's Prayer.

Note was made of a Rummage Sale held on Saturday, April 21 from 10 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The Easter Tea at St. Paul's Church on April 18 at 2:30 p.m. was also noted. Plans were made for a Friendship Night of the U.C.W. to take place on May 29, at the United Church at 7:30 p.m. Members are urged to bring someone from the congregation with them for this event. Entertainment will be provided, including a Penny Fair.

There will be a Nearly New Table at the Summer Sale which takes place June 16, at 2 p.m. May Doherty will be convener and will procure articles for the table. Donors are asked to please mark suggested price. Articles will be picked up if necessary - call May Doherty at 243-5723.

It was moved by Letitia Cousens and seconded by Mary Pille that a cheque for $100 should be sent to Mrs. Schmeier, of the Association of the Mentally Retarded, Cowansville, for Camp Garagona, a summer camp operated by this society. An Auction Sale, in benefit of the United Church, is planned to take place in early September and necessary arrangements will be under way. Norah Sellars reported hearing from the Evangelical School for the Deaf in Puerto Rico, stating that necessary articles are being bought for the school, from monies derived from the donations of Campbell's Soup labels sent in by various church groups and supporting friends.

Letitia Cousens presented the Devotional period. Groups were formed to study what Jesus meant that the Lenten season should mean to us personally. The study was taken from Mark 12, verses 41-44; Luke 6, verses 27-36 and 37-42. The wilderness and wild beasts fought by Jesus can be likened to our present day world our wild beasts being such things as hate, hasty judgment, fears and anxiety, which we have to fight daily.

With no further business, the meeting adjourned and a happy social hour was enjoyed.

QUEBECERS

I was born in old Quebec
I was married in old Quebec
My husband and I brought Twelve children into this world,
They are still Quebecers.

Some have moved to the West,
Some to the South,
Does that make them Westerners or Southerners or Americans,
Oh, no, they are still Quebecers.

For seventy-seven years I have lived in Quebec, as an old Quebecer
Those that are born in Quebec are still Quebecers.

No matter how far you roam
You're still a Quebecer.

QUEBECER

CONGRATULATIONS

CONGRATULATIONS my good man
Nice to hear that you still can Hold hands... Do all the things you do
If true.....
A good SOBUSTER... You've been too
Now tell me true for I must know
How large a Pumpkin could you grow
When you were twenty?
Do you know?
I'd bet..

That girl who makes such pies
To gladden heart and twinkle eyes
Just now and then kept watchful care
That in 79... You'd still be there.
A hunger for pie... You surely had
For fifty-nine years... could drive her mad.
Now if your "DOODLINGS" can relate
How many Pumpkin pies she's baked
As sure as Hell she'd say as I
If it's your wish tonite to dine
On Pumpkin pie.....
That will be fine.....

To Mr. and Mrs. W.M. Elliott, on the 21-4-79.....

LYSANDER FALLS

In the Province of Quebec
But my best memories are here
In old Lysander yet.

There is a beauty still untold
And I will, its loveliness unfold
The trees, the rocks, leaves and sky,
The rushing water flowing by.

There is a park where children play,
And parents gather every day,
And dancing at Lysander Hall,
Where music and fun is enjoyed by all.

The people stop to have a chat,
They talk of this, they talk of that,
We're ready at each beck and call
To greet each one at Lysander Falls.

So now you see why "old Levesque"
Won't make me leave our Quebec, for the best memories I recall
All happened here at Lysander Falls.

OES Pinnacle Chapter 11

SUTTON — The regular meeting of Pinnacle Chapter No. 11, Order of the Eastern Star, was held in the Memorial Fraternal Hall in Sutton on the second Wednesday of the month, with the worthy Matron, Mrs. Helene Lengacher, presiding.

Mrs. Helen Ramsay,

General Grand Chapter Committee Member, and Mrs. Myrtle Vincent, Past Grand Matron, of the Grand Chapter of Quebec, were ceremonially introduced, escorted to the East, and given Grand Honours.

Mrs. Eileen Eldridge, Associate Grand Matron, Mr. Fred Lengacher, Grand Sentinel, and Mrs. Jean McNeil, Grand Instructor, were presented, introduced, welcomed, and escorted to the East. Grand Chapter Committee Members, Grand Representatives, Past and Present Matrons and Patrons were all cordially welcomed by the Worthy Matron, as were all members and visitors present. Visitors were welcomed from Maple Leaf Chapter No. 2, Stanbridge East, Beaver Chapter No. 7, Waterloo, Cowansville Chapter No. 17, and Owl's Head Chapter No. 35, Mansonville.

As this was the official visit of the Grand Instructor for purposes of instruction, all aspects of Chapter Work were exemplified at her request. In addition, Mr. W.H. Ramsay was installed as Worthy Patron of the Chapter for the current year, the ritual ceremony being capably performed by Mrs. Else Syberg of Cowansville Chapter, assisted by Mr. John Syberg, Mrs. Eileen Eldridge, Mrs. Louise Fulford and Mrs. Natalie Patton.

On behalf of Pinnacle Chapter, Mrs. Helen Ramsay presented Mrs. Nellie Hastings with a 50-year Eastern Star pin to commemorate her fifty years as a member of the Chapter. Mrs. Hastings thanked the Chapter, speaking of her enjoyment and friendship shared as a member of the Chapter, and mentioning some of the changes which have taken place over the years.

The May meeting will feature Grand Representatives' Night.

ACW Meeting

AYER'S CLIFF — The St. George's Anglican Church Women held their regular meeting on Thursday, April 5, at 8 p.m., in the Parish Hall.

Lorraine Harrison, chairperson, opened the meeting by leading members in the ACW prayers. The minutes of the March meeting were read by the secretary Mrs. Leslie Ounsworth.

Mrs. Royce Martin read the treasurer's report and took the roll call while accepting dues.

Business arising from the minutes was the discussion and planning of the menu for the noon dinner to be held on Friday, April 27, from 11:30 a.m. to 12 noon in St. George's Parish Hall. Posters are to be put up in places of business, as everyone is welcome.

Mrs. Martin reported the substantial proceeds, of the St. Patrick's Tea and Bake Sale. Mrs. Joseph Shulver told of the afghan's ticket sales and reported that the sale of her oven mitts is an on-going affair. Mrs. Shulver announced that Kraft labels of eight kinds of cheese and Miracle Whip are still being collected.

It was decided to put cut flowers on the altar for Easter as well as a lily. Mrs. Wally Browning is taking care of the altar for April.

The Annual May Rummage Sale will be held in the Parish Hall on Friday, May 4, from 7 - 9 p.m., and on Saturday, May 5, from 9 - 12 a.m. Members will sort on Thursday night, May 3rd, after the ACW meeting. Donations may be left at the Parish Hall.

It was decided to mail a donation and to ask for information on sponsoring a child through the Christian Children's Fund of Canada.

Mrs. Norman Wintle moved the meeting adjourned, and Mrs. Wally Browning served a tasty lunch, while the business meeting was concluded.

Guild meets

FOSTER — St. James Evening Guild met with Mrs. Muriel Whitehead on April 5. Rev. Tucker opened the meeting with prayer and the president welcomed the members and several visitors. Twelve members responded to the roll call.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved and the treasurer gave her report. A donation of $10.00 was received from Margaret Davson toward the work on the hall and the sum of $29.50 was received from the sale of blanket material and other material received as donations.

It was moved by Elvia Johnson and seconded by Kay Forshaw that the bills for material for the hall be paid. $20.00 was received for the rental of the coffee maker and chairs from the hall. The corresponding secretary reported a sympathy card sent to Irene Tibbitts on the death of her brother, also a thank-you received from the Burnham family. Tickets were handed out to the members for a drawing to be held on the Cradle Magazine Rack at the May card party.

The May meeting will be held at Mrs. Reba deSolla's on May 3rd.

Following the closing of the meeting, the ladies were joined by the gentlemen for a social hour.

On behalf of the church community, Mr. Tucker presented Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mann with a gift prior to their departure for Victoria, B.C. They have been faithful workers on behalf of the church during their stay here and will be greatly missed.

Delicious refreshments were served by the members, including a special cake made for the occasion by the food convener, Mrs. Elvia Johnson.

UCW Meetings

BEEBE — The April 11th, meeting of Unit One U.C.W. Wesley United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Margaret Mosher with Mrs. E. Miller assisting hostess.

A welcome was extended to all, she also mentioned the month of April for Easter and spring. A short poem entitled "Spring", was also read.

Devotions were led by Mrs. Janie Somerville entitled "The Resurrection". She also read an article written by Rev. G. Joycece Rogers called the meeting to order with all repeating the Purpose and Function, also the Lord's Prayer.

A successful card party was held on April 7, with a full report made.

Routine reports were read, also two letters.

One member expressed her thanks for the card which she and her husband had received on their golden wedding anniversary. Thanks were expressed by Mrs. E. Miller on behalf of Mrs. Ida Haselton for the card and gift received on her recent birthday.

In the absence of the treasurer Mrs. Wilkinson, the report was given by Mrs. E. Miller.

Two donations were voted to the church Memorial Fund.

Literature chairman - Mrs. Frances Finlayson read an article entitled, "Throw Away Generations".

Sunshine - Mrs. Margaret Mosher, sent cards to birthday celebrants, anniversary and sympathy cards.

Social Functions - Miss V. Moranville mentioned the fellowship enjoyed, following the combined service. She also stated that the flowers for Easter would be placed in the church on Saturday morning. Following the Easter service, the cut flowers and some plants would be distributed to shut-ins.

Upcoming events were mentioned, the family dinner to be held in Stanstead South Church on April 22, with two members offering to work and others to make salads.

Card party on April 21 and Rummage Sale April 27 - 28 was discussed, posters workers and collectors were named. Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Wilkinson to do pick-up for Rummage Sale.

Mrs. J. Watson will observe a birthday on April 23, she will be remembered, also Mrs. May Cochrane who has a birthday on May 9.

Mrs. M. Mosher gave a full report of the Presbyterian meeting which she and Mrs. Rogers attended in Richmond.

Due to illness of Mrs. Muriel Cass, the garden seeds project for Zaire is now being taken care of by Mrs. Hannah Mallalieu. Ten dollars was voted to the project as June 1st is the deadline.

Our president, Mrs. Rogers was appointed to be in charge of the archives and memorials of the Presbyterian.

The May 9th meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Olive Carter.

Following adjournment, the hostesses served light refreshments to terminate a pleasant evening.

EAST FARNHAM — The U.C.W. for April was entertained at the home of Mrs. Carl Thomas on Monday, the 9th. Miss Marion Collins brought the meeting to order by requesting every one to repeat the Purpose in unison.

Mrs. L.C. Horner had charge of Devotions with Mrs. Edwin Jenne reading the scripture, theme being on Easter.

Minutes of March meeting were read and approved. Mrs. Edith Shufelt gave a report on Observer subscriptions which had been adjusted for the coming year and paid. Mrs. William Monteith was given a donation of money to cover her expenses as Corresponding secretary.

The Sunshine convener gave her report and was asked to remember the aged and sick people of the congregation with Easter gifts. A gift will be sent to Rev. and Mrs. Sinclair, our former minister, now settled in North Bay, Ont., who were blessed with a baby daughter, on April 1st and a remembrance to be taken to Mr. and Mrs. Brian Jenne, honoring their second son, on April 1st, also.

The treasurer's report showed a good balance on hand.

The May meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. T.W. Houghton, 610 Choiniere Road, on Wednesday, the 9th at 7:30 p.m. Gentlemen are welcome.

Meeting closed by all repeating the Mispah Benediction.

During the lunch period Miss M. Collins and Mrs. Edith Shufelt gave interesting excerpts from their trip in March to the Holy Land. Miss Collins presented each member with a "Widow's Mite" coin which will be treasured.

Thanks were expressed to the hostess, before each departed for their homes in an April snowstorm.

WI meetings around the Eastern Townships

EAST ANGUS — The April meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Ransome Hayes Sr. on Tuesday evening, and was opened by the president and the members repeating the Collect in unison.

The motto, "What is a weed?" A plant whose virtues have not yet been discovered.

The roll call was answered by nine members, each bringing an Easter card and Stamp for a shut-in.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Bailey.

Three more Compton County histories were sold.

Two sweaters were donated by Mrs. Knapp and these will be sent for the sale table at the FWIC Convention. Ten bookmarks were turned in to be sent to the convention.

Plans were made for the dinner and afternoon tea for the Annual meeting to be held at the Cultural Centre on April 23rd.

Fifty bags of candy to be made for the musical evening to be held at Sawyerville on May 4. The candy is to be sent to Mrs. Rowland by May 2nd, to be packed.

The treasurer gave her report, showing a balance on hand. It was moved that all bills be paid.

Letters were read re "The Adelaide Hoodless Fund". It was decided not to support this cause, also a letter about the W.I. throws for Senior W.I. members. Several cards of thanks were read from members receiving Easter cards and flowers. A letter re a representative for CLSC committee of Health and welfare. Miss Ord's name was sent in to act for the Women's Institute.

Home Economics. Mrs. Wilkin read on boycotting meat and other articles to bring down prices.

Education. Mrs. Clout, an item "Quebec women unsure about independence."

Publicity Mrs. Labonte, on Mrs. Marion Fulton receiving membership into the Order of Canada, given to people having worked for the betterment of Canada.

Mrs. Fulton's work was with the Women's Institute in Manitoba with FWIC and ACWW as well as community work and efforts in Rural development.

The Mystery parcel was won by Mrs. M. Knapp.

The next meeting will be held on May 14 at the home of Mrs. Heatherington, in Cookshire.

Lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. M. Labonte.

SAWYERVILLE — The Women's Institute held their April meeting in the Community Center, the President Olive Twyman presiding.

The meeting was opened by all singing O Canada, Salute to the Flag and repeating the Collect.

Motto: The only thing you can do on a shoe string today is to trip over it. Roll call was answered by 14 members sharing their favorite new recipe with a sample.

Minutes of the annual meeting were read and approved and treasurer's report given. A letter was read from Mrs. Ina Kilgour and several thank-you notes.

Information on Canadian Save the Children Fund for the Handi-bags, a donation is to be given this cause, also a donation to the Anniversary Establishment of the Adelaide Hoodless Home. Daffodils were sold in aid of the Cancer Society.

Committees: Home Ec. reported not always the best buys are in larger sizes, it pays to watch size and prices.

Welfare and Health-Yogourt is one of the best, nutritious foods, comes in 16 flavors and as much food value as milk for children. Good for cholesterol and sold now at ice cream counters.

Cheer and courtesy-Birthday, sympathy and get-well cards sent. Home made candy will be packed at the May meeting for the musical evening on May 4 in the Sawyerville Elementary School.

A good number of members plan to attend the C.C. Annual meeting in East Angus on April 23.

For perfect attendance at all meetings, prizes, given by the President, went to Dorothy Loveland, Bonnie Fowler, Freda MacLeod, Lillian Laroche, Idell Griffin and Olive Twyman.

Two gifts have been purchased for F.W.I.C. convention in Saskatoon.

The program was in charge of Home Ec. convenors Mrs. Idell Griffin and Mrs. Mabel Mackay. The exchange of recipes and sampling of delicious breads, cookies, cakes, squares.

Mrs. Claris Phillips and Miss Glenna Evans, acting as judges for a handi-craft display by the members, found it difficult to decide.

Prizes went to Wilda Robinson, Hilda Cragg, Bonnie Fowler, Mabel Mackay, Lillian Laroche and Idell Griffin. The drawing was won by Emma Watt.

A social hour was then spent, the attractive tea table covered with an Easter cloth and centered with a bouquet of pussywillows. Doughnuts, jelly and pickles were enjoyed, served by the hostesses, Mrs. Leah Goode and Mrs. Bonnie Fowler.

SHIPTON — The regular monthly meeting was held at the Anglican Church hall, Danville, with eight members present and Mrs. Rita Olney presiding, in the absence of the president.

The meeting opened with the Collect and roll call. The minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. J. Saffin and accepted.

Correspondence consisted of a letter from Q.W.I. president, Mrs. Ina Kilgour, outlining plans for the year.

It was decided to give a donation to the Cancer Society and to hold a food sale on May 4.

The treasurer, Mrs. Wm. Broscomb, gave her report, and also showed samples of two attractive tea towels with flower and bird patterns to be sold for CanSave. Several orders were given.

Mrs. L. Perkins outlined her project for "The Year of the Child" - a "crafts fair" to be held May 11th. There will be various tables featuring food, crafts, "white elephants", a fish-pond, etc. The entire proceeds will be divided equally between The Montreal Children's Hospital and St. Justine's Children's Hospital and will be used for research into the causes of children's diseases. Several W.I. members agreed to help Hazel in this worthwhile endeavour.

The monthly drawing was won by Evelyn Saffin. Pennies were collected for Friendship with women in other lands, and for the "Friendship and Sunshine" box. The travelling prize was won by Mrs. Frank Bourner.

Four members plan to attend the annual Richmond Co. W.I. meeting to be held in Richmond April 28.

At the close of the meeting, everyone enjoyed a social hour together.

AYER'S CLIFF — The monthly meeting of the Ayer's Cliff Branch of the Quebec Women's Institute was held in the United Church Hall on April 6 with Mrs. Flora Astbury and Mrs. Mary McComb as co-hostesses.

The meeting was conducted by the President Mrs. N. Pierce and was opened in the usual manner with the Collect and the Ode. The membership gladly welcomed Mrs. Palmquist as a new member. Thirteen members answered the Roll Call by reading an amusing cartoon which provided some merriment.

Routine business items were handled. Several book marks were handed in for the F.W.I.C. Convention. Mrs. Robinson reported that $335.00 was sent in for the sale of daffodils for the Cancer Society. The president thanked the members who took orders and delivered many of the daffodils and to Mrs. Lord for going to Sherbrooke to pick them up. The F.W.I.C. magazine has not been received as yet and it was agreed to write about it again to the Provincial president.

It was reported that the community library project is progressing. Several members visited the school on March 19 to see the location. It is planned to visit again in May with each member inviting a French woman to accompany her and become familiarized with the project.

The municipality of West Hatley has also joined in this library and it is hoped that Stanstead East and West Barnston may join in also to make more books available to even more people.

A letter was read from the Cercle de Fermiere of Way's Mills accepting our invitation to attend our June meeting on June 1st. Further plans for this will be discussed at the May meeting.

Convenors' reports - Agriculture - absent.

Citizenship - Mrs. Holmes acting for Mrs. Thompson urged everyone to be sure to get out and vote on May 22 and mentioned the enlarged constituency for the Federal election.

Education - Mrs. J. Walker read a letter from the school telling of various activities and the fact that the School Fair seed lists have been circulated. She also read an amusing clipping "Just you and I to do all the work."

Home Economics - Mrs. T. Ride read the outline with good suggestions in it and reviewed the exhibit list with all articles now being made.

Welfare and Health - Mrs. W. Roddick read the seven important signs of cancer and urged everyone to have regular checks.

New business was then discussed. The members were reminded to bring their money to the May 4 meeting if they plan to take the County bus trip to Rawdon on June 13. The Provincial Convention dates are May 30 and 31st and Mrs. J. Walker agreed to try to attend as a delegate. A letter was read from the Provincial President regarding the 60th Anniversary of the F.W.I.C. It was agreed to send a dollar a member to the Adelaide Hoodless Anniversary Fund with each member to reimburse the treasury one half of this at the next meeting.

It was agreed that the secretary be authorized to buy a new minute book. The members were asked if they would care to sell carnations for the multiple sclerosis fund drive. It was voted down for this year since they have just completed the daffodil sale.

At the close of the business session the president conducted a short jumbled word contest on words pertaining to publicity. This provided a brief interlude of fun while lunch was being prepared.

All joined around the large tea table to enjoy delicious home made bread, jam and cheese served by the hostesses and a pleasant social time ensued.

Women's Institute meet

STANBRIDGE EAST — The April meeting of the Stanbridge East Women's Institute was held April 5, 1979, at St. James Parish Church Hall. Twenty-two members and two guests answered the roll call - "How can we best educate ourselves at home?" Mrs. C. Rhicard, pres., opened the meeting in the usual way. Mrs. C. Harvey read the minutes and Mrs. M. Tait, treas., gave the financial report.

Convenors' reports proved timely and interesting. Education convenor Mrs. F. Corey noted the great contributions made by "Prominent Canadian Women". Such names as Charlotte Whitton, Mayor of Ottawa, Gabrielle Roy, author, Mary Ellen Smith, B.C. Legislator, Jeanne Mance, co-founder of Ville Marie, were only part of the list.

The dangers of accidental household poisoning were reported by Home Economics convenor Mrs. J. Rhicard. Most victims are children under four years of age. Mothers! Keep those products out of reach!

Publicity Convenor Mrs. E. Biggs read the list of food items to be boycotted for the week in an attempt to fight rising prices.

Health and Welfare Convenor Mrs. H. Ethier reminded us all of the versatility of yogurt. Not only is yogurt a delicious food, it is thought to be instrumental in lowering blood cholesterol.

It was our privilege to have as our guest speaker Mr. Arlen Bonnar. Having worked for several years at the Butters' Home, Mr. Bonnar shared his moving experiences with us.

In 1973, the year Arlen joined the staff, the Quebec government took over the administration of Butters' Home and oversaw many changes. The emphasis shifted from one of custodial care of the residents to one of education.

In a move to de-centralize the services, Mr. Bonnar was instrumental in the establishment of Champagne House in Knowlton's Landing. Residents were taught and encouraged to do for themselves and great progress was made. Mr. Bonnar's great love and dedication to the mentally handicapped was very evident and all of us could not help but admire and be inspired.

The executive of the Du-boyce Cemetery Co. Inc. met at the home of Mr. Ray Du-boyce on Monday evening, April 9, when plans were made for the regular meeting on May 7 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Marsh, West Bolton, at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Audrey Rhicard has returned from a month's vacation in California, where she was a guest of her sister Mrs. Margaret Tuxen and family at Downy, and also of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Coveduck at Santa Barbara. While away she enjoyed a lot of sightseeing.

Miss Cheryl Rhicard of Downy, Calif., is spending a month here and will be the guest of her father Kenneth Rhicard and also of her aunt Mrs. Audrey Rhicard.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Jones and their two children of Sutton and Mrs. Daisy Johnston of Bromie attended a sugaring-off party at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Mahannah, at Frelighsburg on Easter Saturday. Some 40 relatives and guests attended their party which was much enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Guillette, of Athol, Mass., were guests at the home of Mr. L.J. (Buster) Crandall on Wednesday to Easter Monday, when they left to stay overnight with Mr. Guillette's brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Guillette at Deauville, Que. On Tuesday they continued to spend the day and stayed overnight with his sister and niece, Mrs. Alice Beals and Miss Doris Beals at Granby, before returning home on Wednesday. While in Knowlton, Mrs. Guillette was visiting her sister, Mrs. Huldah Irwin at The Regal Nursing Home in Cowansville.

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Crandall and two children were guests for the holiday weekend of Mrs. Crandall's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dryburgh and her brother Doug. Mr. George Dryburgh of the Cote Home, South Bolton was an Easter Day guest at the same home.

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Crandall, Lisa and Jodi, of St. Bruno, and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Page were dinner guests on Easter Sunday evening, of Mr. L.J. (Buster) Crandall where they joined Mr. and Mrs. Charles Guillette.

Thoughts are with several residents who are patients at B.M.P. Hospital. Bob and Ethel Hastings are there, and are visited quite often by people from their town. Mrs. Sylvia Jolley is a surgical patient and best wishes are extended also to Mrs. Dolly Beckus. We regret to hear that Ken Patterson is also a patient. Bruce Bailey returned to his home at Gilman's Corner on Easter Monday after about a week at B.M.P.

Best wishes also to Mrs. Pegi Shand who is a surgical patient at Montreal General Hospital. She is not expected home for some time yet, so, if wishing to write, her address is Room 1818, 18th Floor, Montreal General Hospital, Montreal.

And a bundle of good wishes to a little 5-year-old at the C.H.U. Hospital. Miss Theresa Thayer, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Thayer, suffered serious burns about four weeks ago. She is making satisfactory progress, but it is expected she will be in hospital at least another four weeks. If wishing to cheer her day, a card would reach her, addressed 5th Floor, C.H.U. Hospital, Stoke Road, Sherbrooke, Que.

Again a second time winner in the I.G.A. free grocery drawing. On Saturday, April 14, a cash register slip of $107.52 was drawn for Mrs. Diana Timmins.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Inglis of Sherbrooke were visiting Mrs. and Mrs. Harold Battley on Easter Saturday and also called on the Dennis Taylors. Kenneth Battley was home from Haileybury, Ont., for the holiday weekend.

At St. Paul's Church, the Reader at the 11 a.m. service on Easter Day was Mrs. Ruth Stanway. The rector was assisted at Communion by Mr. J.S. Morson at both services. The flowers on the altar were in memory of Mr. James Anthony Awde, Mrs. W.H. Campbell, Mrs. Marguerite Crandall, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. Pat McInnis, Mr. Stuart McLeod, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Turner and Mr. Charles N. Turner.

We understand that a house is still being sought in the Mansonville area for Mr. George Campbell and his family. Mr. Campbell was recently appointed by Bishop Hollis to act as assistant in the Knowlton-Mansonville parish following his ordination at Christ Church Cathedral on June 10. He will begin his work here the following Sunday, June 17, when he is officially appointed by the Bishop on the occasion of the latter's visit to St. Paul's for confirmation that evening. It is greatly hoped that Mr. Campbell may live in the Mansonville vicinity — if a house can be found for rent. In his 20's, he and his wife Marcia are parents of two sons — Duffy, 4 years old, and Matthew, who is 5 months. With two clergy sharing the load, more time is hoped for, especially with regard to children and shut-ins. The Campbells know this area and like it very much. His father, also an Anglican priest, owns a cottage in West Bromie. If you can supply a lead, please get in touch with the church office, 243-5787 or the Rectory, 243-6061.

HATLEY

Mrs. Wm. Cutler
On Wednesday, April 11, the members of the United Church Women held a baked bean and hot dish dinner in the Vestry at noon. There was a good attendance, many of them school children, who were on their Easter holidays from classes.

Following the dinner, a business meeting was held, with ten members and one guest present.

All repeated the Purpose and Lord's Prayer in unison and Mrs. Elsie Drew led in the worship service. Mrs. K. Morse and Mrs. B. Cunningham presented a short dialogue.

Sara Surjadinata will show slides on Africa one evening soon, at the Vestry.

Plans were made for the spring rummage sale and food sale to be held in the Vestry on Saturday, April 28 from 10 a.m. to noon.

The meeting was adjourned by Mrs. L. Drew.

+ + +

Easter services were held on Easter Day in both Churches, with the service in St. James Anglican Church in the morning at 9:30 and in the United Church at 2 p.m. Both services were well attended and Holy Eucharist celebrated by the ministers, Rev. Ron Smith and Rev. Max Surjadinata.

Hardwood Flat was settled before 1880

By NINA ROWELL

This account was compiled largely from the writings of Mrs. G. Parsons, mother of the writer.

Just outside the village of Bury, on what used to be the main road going to Scotstown, is a road branching off to the left, up a winding hill, leading to Hardwood Flat. One could almost assimilate it with the story of Jack and the Beanstalk because at the top of the hill are several miles of smooth, fertile farmland, divided in half by a swamp. The community at the farther end of this plateau was named Hardwood Flat, but now the full length of the road goes by the same name.

It is believed that the community was named when the post office was established here, although there has been some controversy as to just where the name came from, some thought it was from a Mr. Hardwood who contracted the cutting of ship timber here, while others were determined that it was named for its natural features.

The first permanent settlements around Bury had been established. Some of the settlers came directly from England, others came from nearby townships, while several families came from the Shefford area. By 1880 there were approximately 20 families here.

Their first major task was to clear and build some kind of accommodation for their families and stock. Many started out with log cabins, but as saw mills had been established nearby, others built substantial houses in the beginning.

In a short time, trees were cut down and the land broken, many stumps had to be removed from the fields. These were dragged out by ox team, and later piles of them were burned. This made their farms much easier to harvest with mowing machines and horse drawn rakes, taking the place of their more primitive tools, scythes, sickles and hand rakes. Ox teams were eventually replaced by horses and many years later by tractors and motorized equipment.

Each farmer kept a variety of stock; a few sheep, from which the wool was first washed and taken to a carding mill in Slab City, where it was carded into rolls. William Lefebvre once operated a carding mill in the vicinity of the present Fish Hatchery and the C.P.R. trestle. Some of the wool was spun into yarn and knit into socks, mittens, etc., the remainder was taken to woolen mills in Sherbrooke and exchanged for cloth. Most of the women could weave, but not many owned a loom.

The cattle they kept, furnished them with milk, cheese and butter, as well as meat. Pigs were kept to replenish the pork barrel, which was standard equipment in each home. When milk was in greater supply in the summer, each farmer took his turn in taking the surplus milk to the cheese factory near the village. Surplus eggs and butter were taken to the stores, where they were exchanged for necessary staples, anything left over was used for thread and other such little items.

Each spring, practically all the farmers tapped a number of maple trees, boiling the sap into sugar and syrup. At first, they used big open kettles, but progressed to the sugar camp and evaporator type equipment. Sugarings off were frequently held, providing much enjoyment for both young and old, who attended in large numbers. There was no charge, it was just common courtesy to invite one another. Any surplus syrup or sugar was sold, after the farmer had estimated how much his family would use in the coming year, as this was used for practically all cooking requiring sweetening. The sugar was cooked to a soft stage and put into large buckets, where it could be easily scraped for cooking or eating on pancakes or bread and butter.

This road did not go farther than the Ross families' farms until the time that the C.P.R. line was extended from Bury. At this time a siding was put in at Long Swamp, to accommodate the operations at Bown's Mills, there was a small flag station there also. A logging road was made, branching off to the right from the Ross farms, continuing to the siding, approximately a mile away. This road which connected with the Victoria Road, was only passable in winter until later, when it was improved. A few years ago, it was completely rebuilt by the town, making a good highway both summer and winter.

In looking back on the life of their day, we have no reason to look upon it with derision, comparing it with a feeling of superiority to our modern way of life, but rather let us never forget that it was they who laid the solid foundation on which our present living rests, at least to the time before our government bureaucracy has interfered with "free enterprise".

Mr. and Mrs. Abel Whitehead Sr. came from England, about 1886, and settled on the first farm on what is now known as Hardwood Flat. They brought their young nephew, Abel Whitehead Jr., who was four years old at the time. Abel Sr., had by his progressive farming methods (he was the first in the district to have a cream separator) and his keen business acumen, he had amassed a considerable amount of money. In 1908, he retired from farming and built a house in the village. It is now owned by Gwilym Lawrences.

This farm was subsequently owned by John R. Smith, then Mr. and Mrs. Hall, who had two daughters and one son. One daughter, Lulu, married Orrel Harrison, son of Jim Harrison, a near neighbor. The next occupants were Reuben Crawford and his second wife, the former Mrs. Celia Irwin.

They sold the farm to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Harrison who with his son Douglas (by his first marriage), came to live here in 1922. One of the happier events which took place while they lived here was their 30th Wedding Anniversary, at which many relatives and friends honored them.

Following Douglas' marriage to Glenna Hooker, Uncle Tom and Aunt Mary moved back to her little house by the trestle and where they spent the rest of their lives. Douglas and Glenna have two children, Darcy and Diana. For many years Douglas had a milk route in town, where his truck was seen daily, delivering clean, wholesome milk and cream to his many customers.

When the roads were good or in a very busy time, Glenna was often seen doing the delivering. Due to government restrictions after pasteurization of milk became law, he was forced to give up his route, but is able to continue selling milk to many who go to his farm for it. Their daughter married Jacques Lizotte and lives in Sherbrooke; their son married Patty Winslow and they live on the original Harrison homestead.

On October 16, 1914, Lottie Allison, (oldest daughter of Henry and Ida) was married to Elwin Beech Hodge (of Cookshire) and went to live on the next farm, adjoining her parents' farm, that Elwin had bought from John Stubbs. They had a daughter, Evelyn and two sons, Leon and Austin. After the father died in 1939, Lottie carried on the farm with the help of her sons.

In 1952, she married Clifford Gaulin and went there to live. In the meantime, Leon had married Dorothy Grey and they took over the Hodge farm, but their married life was not destined to be of long duration, Leon died in October 1957, after much suffering, leaving his widow and two young children, Robert and Leona. Robert, a most energetic, hard-working young man now operates the home farm, incorporating other local farms with it, sharing the home with his mother and little nephew.

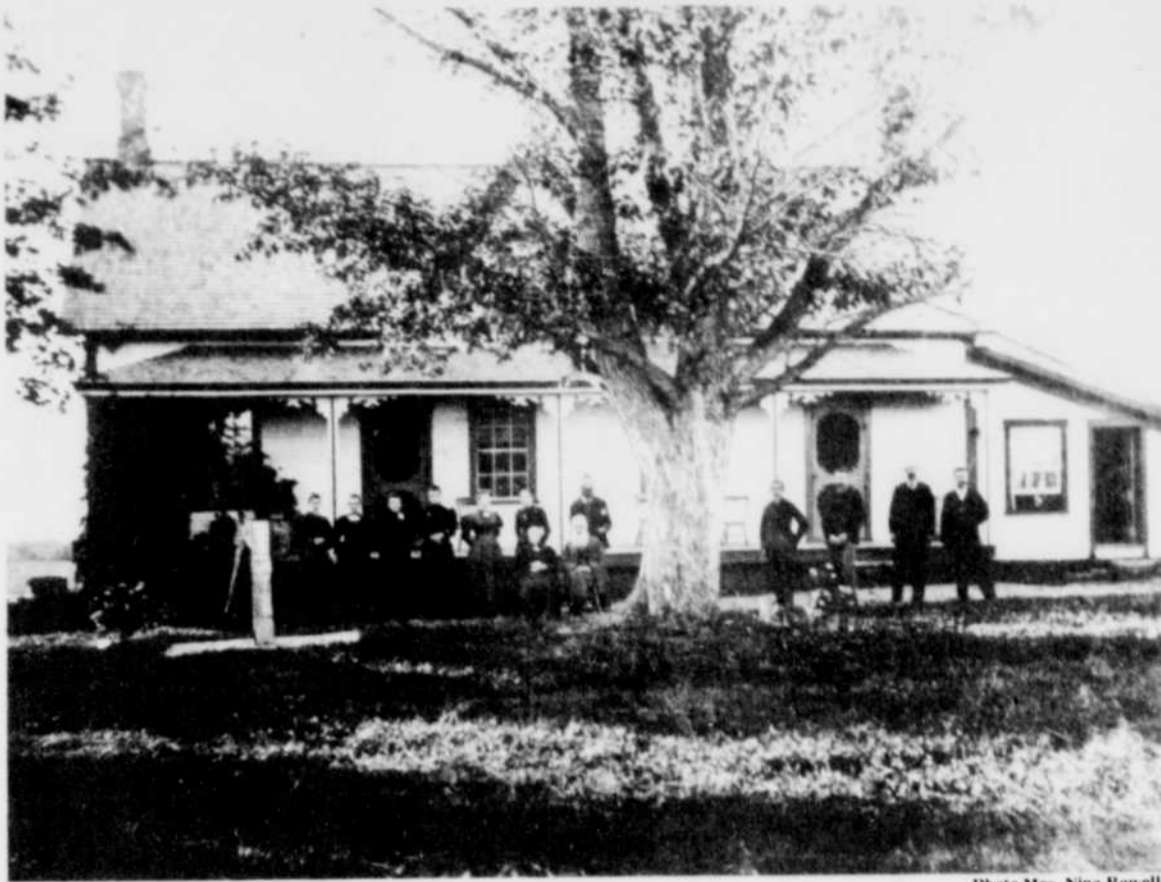

In 1835, at the age of two, Anthony Allison came to Canada with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Allison, from England, settling on a farm on the Victoria Road. Other brothers and sisters were born after they came to Canada, but only three brothers survived childhood, George, Enos and Will.

In 1853, at the age of 20, Anthony bought a 146-acre farm on the road leading to Hardwood Flat, from the British American Land Company, where he built a log cabin. On January 20, 1857, he married Angelina Finn, daughter of John Finn, the only other settler on the road. They had several children, of whom only three sons survived, Arthur born in 1859, Wesley in 1867 and Henry on March 31, 1873.

It was during the year of Henry's birth that a large new house was built, replacing the log cabin, in a beautiful setting of shade trees and shrubs, reflecting in a lovely pond.

As the years passed, their eldest son, Arthur married Elvira Reed and went to a farm across the road to live. Wesley went to the States, where he married and died still a young man. Henry remained to the farm with his parents. On October 3, 1894, he brought his bride, Ida Emery (a granddaughter of John Fisher) in the family home.

the household chores with her daughter-in-law. Their family life was further enriched as Henry and Ida's children came to bless their home, first Martin, on October 11, 1896, then Lottie on October 14, 1898, Osborne on July 6, 1903, and later Dorothy. The older Mrs. Allison had been denied the pleasure of this last little granddaughter, as she had passed away in 1910, at the age of 70.

In 1914, Lottie married Elwin Hodge, making their home on the adjoining farm, three years later, Martin married Gladys Clarke and took her to the home of his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Harris Potter, on the Victoria Road. Mrs. Potter, in failing health, now went to live with her daughter, Mrs. Allison (Martin's mother) where she passed away.

In September, 1923, Osborne married Kathleen Ingham of Lennoxville, making a most pleasant addition to their family home. A year later, on September 12, 1924, Grandfather Anthony Allison died at the age of 91, after a long active life. He was a man who was held high in regard by friends and neighbors, both for his personal merit and in his capacity as a worthy citizen and farmer of wide experience, which he gladly shared with others. He was affectionately remembered by all - especially his grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Allison (Henry and Ida), Dorothy, Osborne and Kathleen shared this home until 1933, when Mrs. Allison died of cancer. She had taken an active interest in both community and church work, both she and her husband derived much pleasure from their family, who all lived in the vicinity. In 1937, Dorothy was married to Walter Berwick and they made their home on the farm across the road.

Henry, a quiet reserved person, continued to take an active part in the work as long as his health permitted, becoming afflicted with a form of arthritis, which resulted in his death in 1956, at the age of 83. At this time, being left alone and having no children of their own, they took a great-niece, Joy Allison, sharing their home with her until her marriage to Perry Station.

In 1977, Osborne built a comfortable little house in the village where he and Kathleen moved in the late fall. Both were in declining health when they left the old homestead. The Allison's lived there almost continually for 125 years - both Osborne and his son were born there too.

In 1854, my great-grandparents, William Harrison, his wife Annabella (Munsey), and five of their six children, ranging in age from William Jr. - 10, to Emma Jane - 7 months. The others were: Josiah, 9, James, 7, Annabella (Belle), 5, and Catherine (Kate), 3. Their oldest son William (Bill) had come earlier with his aunt, Mrs. Josiah Clarke (Harriet Harrison).

The uncle, Josiah Clarke, a shoemaker by trade had come several years earlier with some of their acquaintances. Encouraged by what they saw, he sent for his wife, who wrote back later, encouraging her brother and sister-in-law, the Harrisons.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison had been living in the village of Brandon, County of Suffolk, England, where he was employed as a guard on the railway. He had been engaged in other occupations, as a gardener and butcher and had acquired various skills which proved of value in later years.

We shall never know exactly what circumstances led up to their final decision to migrate to Canada, although we can be certain of one thing, it must have been severely painful to cut off all ties with the settled way of life they were familiar with, pack their possessions, and venture out into an unknown and rugged country, bidding "Farewell" to the loved ones they were leaving behind, most likely never to see again. Their journey took over seven weeks, in addition to the hardship and expenses they endured.

Seven more children were born to them in Canada - making a total of 13, eight girls and five boys, all of whom lived to maturity. The last seven were: Sarah, Henry, Amelia, Harriet, Alice, Adella and Thomas.

On arriving here, they settled on a farm one-and-one-half miles from the village of Robinson (Bury). Someone had taken up this farm previously, but had left it. There was a long rambling log house on it, in which they lived until 1890, when they built a new frame house, moving the old log house aside.

With the exception of a younger daughter, Amelia, none of the children furthered their education after taking the basics at Elementary level in the Bury Model School, which was called District No. 1, which was at the Hawley place at that time. But they were all taught to work, and do it well. The girls were excellent housekeepers, and had acquired skills, many practically unheard of today, they could all sew, knit, spin and weave, make good butter and cheese, make preserves, cure and preserve meat, make soap and many other useful crafts. Mr. Harrison had never had a ready-made suit in his life. The boys were good farmers, many becoming skillful in carpentry and in the use of other tools.

As soon as the children were able to leave home, they found work in other places. The two older girls, Belle and Kate worked as housemaids on farms in the Eaton district, where they began at 4 a.m. and ended at bedtime. When the housework eased up in the afternoon they were told to "spin a while and rest themselves". Their weekly pay ranged from 75 cents to $1.50. Sarah and Hattie went to Boston, working as nursemaids for wealthy families.

Amelia persevered in going to school until she graduated from the Bury Model School, where she was told she was eligible to take her examination for a teacher's diploma at the Sherbrooke Board of Examiners. Fearing that her father would not consent to the expense of a trip to Sherbrooke, she was delighted when he agreed to accompany her on the trip by stage coach, spending the day, while she successfully wrote the exams, emerging with her diploma, much to his great pride. Little could she hope to dream that in the next 100 years, over 80 per cent of her great-grandchildren would have college degrees, including one with a Ph.D.

As the years passed, the Harrison children married and one by one left for homes of their own, and with the exception of one, they all lived in the vicinity, Annabella (Belle) married Peter Coombs, made their home in Sawyerville, where he had a carriage shop. Catherine (Kate) married Henry Herring, living at Ayer's Flat, where he was employed on the railway, later moving to a farm in Herringville. Harriet (Hattie) married Isaac Herring, a brother of Henry, and settled on an adjoining farm in Herringville, until 1905, when they moved to a farm near Lennoxville.

Emma had married John Clarke and continued to live on the farm of her aunt and uncle (Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Clarke). Sarah married John Winslow and they also took up a farm in Herringville, near her two sisters, had one son, Duncan, who lived with his grandparents after his mother's death.

Amelia married William Lefebvre and lived on a farm on Hardwood Flat. Three of the sons all settled on adjoining farms at the upper end of Hardwood Flat; William married Sophronia Page. Josiah married Margaret Duncan; Henry married Isabella Todd; James married Amelia Fisher (daughter of John), they lived across the road from his father.

Alice married Thomas Herring, a younger brother of Henry and Isaac, they lived with her parents several years, later moving to the village (Lynn Parsons' house).

Adella married Thomas Gill-

had six children, Eva, Glenna, Violet, Gwendolyn, Beverly and Tommie.

This farm was later bought by Clifford Gaulin and his wife, Lila Vintinner. They had one son, Wendell. Following the death of his first wife, he married Lottie Allison Hodge in 1952, where they continued to farm until his death in 1964. At this time Lottie moved to a rent in town, later buying a house there. She died in 1972. Clifford's son Wendell and Mary, with their children, Daphne, George, Wenda, Tina and Allen are now living in the old home, to which Wendell has made many modern improvements, the farm land is rented to Robert Hodge.

Just past Wendell Gaulin's farm was once a long driveway that went back into a field, where a good sized log house stood. A family of Paradis once lived here. There was James, his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Paradis and two daughters, Mary who was 14, and Alice who was 11, when they went to the Hardwood Flat School in 1876. Around the turn of the century the Wooten family moved here, (Everett's family) they lived here a few years, but no one is believed to ever have lived here since.

The Williams family who came from Montreal chose their lot in a rather swampy area. Mr. Williams was a tinsmith and plumber by trade. They had four children, Joseph, Samuel, Bert and Nellie. He had built a comfortable frame house, where they lived for a few years, after the marriage of their daughter, Nellie to Albert Lawrence, who took over the place, the rest of the Williams moved where they could find more lucrative employment.

Nellie (Mrs. Lawrence) was a very refined lady-like person, much admired and liked by her neighbors. Her husband, Albert, did not take to farming, but had considerable experience as a civil engineer, his work often took him away for weeks at a time. Eventually he was sent to a job in Mexico, where he took his wife and little son and they never returned.

This home was occupied from time to time by different people. A.L. Whitney and his daughter Rhoda lived there for a time.

In 1903, Walter Dougherty bought it and had better results as a farmer than his predecessor. He had married Annie Hamilton and their three oldest children were born there. In 1910, fire destroyed their home and they too moved away. Since then another house has been built on the same site, the Quinns.

Edgar Quinn, a descendant of the Samples, married Irene Gaulin, daughter of Willie Gaulin of Newport Township. They have one son, John, who with his wife Shirley and their two children, John Jr. and Margaret (Margie), share the parental home in winter, living in their trailer home in the summer time.

Although they farm on a small scale, they keep a quantity of bee hives, making a fine quality of honey, they also work for Andersons, both in the mill and woods.

The next place above this was taken by Elijah Booth, who came with his family from the Stukely area. He had also made an unfortunate choice in his lot which was on the edge of the swamp. Elijah Booth was a brother of John R. Booth, a renowned lumber king and multimillionaire of Ottawa. He was married to Julietta Todd and had seven children; Gertrude by his first marriage (she married Walter Webster of Bury), Lydia, Henry, Rotus, Munro, Alfred and Annie.

Lydia married Alfred Vintinner and remained in the Bury area, while the rest of the Booth family moved back to the Brill neighborhood near Foster, in 1888.

Shortly afterwards, James Riley of Marston took over the place. They had a family of four boys when they came, Willie, Tommie, Francis and Patrick. A little daughter, Lena, was born while living there. Like the others who had tried to farm there, he did not do too well, working out a great deal. His wife contracted erysipelas and pneumonia and died in 1892, after which he too moved away.

The place was then vacant until 1897, when Angus MacAulay of Winslow, with his wife and family took possession. They had two sons, Johnnie and Dannie and four daughters, Belle, Katie, Mary and Jennie. The two older daughters and Mary went to the States. Johnnie enlisted in the American Army, serving in the Spanish American War of 1898; following the war, he remained in the States.

Golden Age Club meets

MANSONVILLE (QJ) - Forty-three Golden Agers assembled at the Town Hall for their meeting on Tuesday, April 10.

The Easter Chocolate door prize was won by Rose Alma Pouliot.

Six tables of 500 were played with Yvonne Robin and Gabriel McDuff, the winners. Consolation prizes went to Martha Sargent and Herman Ommerli.

Mr. and Mrs. G. McDuff and Toni Lamothe were welcomed home by the group. Three new members joined the club so the total membership now stands at one hundred and twelve members.

Game winners were Lawrence Smith, Pearl Greenham, Bertha Nicholls, Elsie Knowlton, Anna Padinki, Ethyl Burnham and Mrs. Pouliot.

Get-well wishes were sent to Kate Bailey who was confined to her home with the gripe.

The tables were covered with Easter motif tablecloths with a stand up Easter bunny on each. Minerva Lamothe was responsible for the Easter settings. Barbara Oliver made the beautiful Easter Bunny Birthday Cake and cookies in the shape of a rabbit. Those celebrating April birthdays were Kate Newell, Irene Carrier, Jean Parmenter, Julieanne McDuff and Rita Mossa. Each member received an Easter memento.

Hostesses at this meeting were Mary Barnett, Anna Padinki, Irene Carrier and Verlie Aiken.

ASTRO-GRAPH
Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday
April 26, 1979
Your social life will take on new significance this coming year. Friends with whom you will be involved will prove to be worthy pals, indeed.

year ahead holds for you by sending for your new Astro-Graph Letter, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Something is going on behind the scenes regarding an issue you've been concerned about. Don't fret, it will be taken care of better than you could yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There'll be plaudits today for the way you conduct yourself among your peers in sticky situations. There'll be no doubt regarding who's running the show.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your two strongest areas today are career and finances. When the chips are down in either area, it brings out your best.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Utilize the knowledge gained from your past experiences today and you won't go wrong. It's not likely you'll repeat any old mistakes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Things which you competently manage for others today could shower you with benefits as well. Treat their affairs as if they were your own.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Normally you function best operating alone. Today, your successes will come in things which you do in tandem. Be a team player.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Difficult achievements are not likely to intimidate you today, and with good reason. You have what it takes to get things done right.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

A little apple polishing or politicking may be necessary today to win over someone who is very important to your present plans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Double-check your family budget today and you may find a way to do something you've been wanting to do, but felt you couldn't afford.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll deal with life realistically today. Because you're prepared to face issues honestly, the decisions you make are likely to be very sound.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This could be a red-letter day financially. Focus your efforts on areas that can offer substantial returns for ventures you have already started.

HUNTINGVILLE
Marian Dewing

We are sorry to hear that Mr. Ross Carter of Beebe is not as well as his friends would wish.

Our sympathy to the family of the late Mr. Fred Loach and especially to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hunting who are in Florida now. Mrs. Hunting is Mr. Loach's sister.

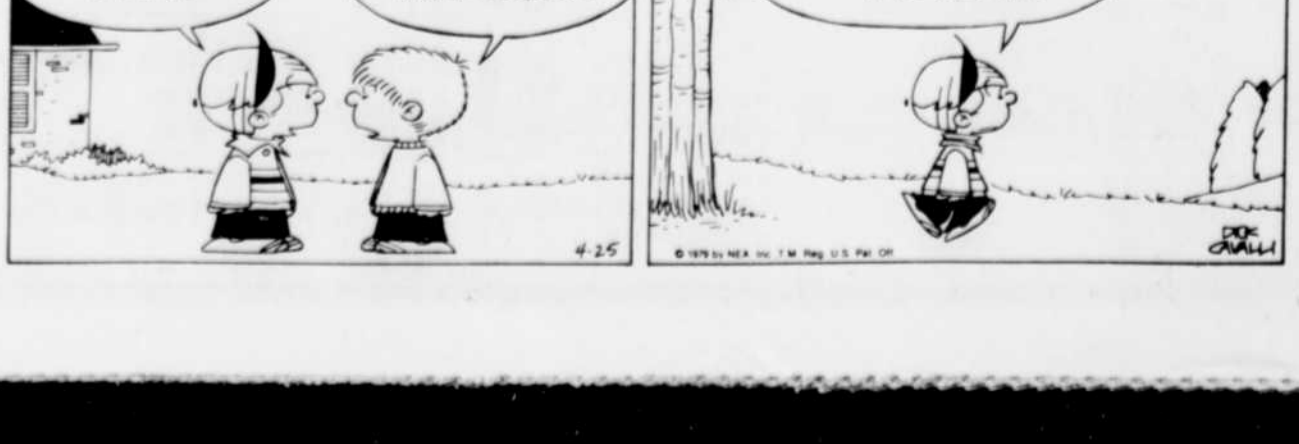

Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Dewing were dinner guests of their son and wife and family, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dewing of Compton, on Easter Sunday, and also dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Parker of Cookshire on Tuesday.

Mr. Kendall has sold his home here and I believe he and Mrs. Kendall will be moving to St. Catharines, Ont.

Mrs. Gertie Murray spent a few days here at her apartment before returning to her work at the Wales Home, Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Carter called at Mr. and Mrs. Harold Aldrich's on their way home from having X-rays etc., on April 12.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Dewing were in Beebe on Thursday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Ross Carter.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

The contract was terrible. Not enough can be said to condemn it. North's leap to seven diamonds was unwarranted. He had learned that South had three aces, but that by itself did not guarantee 13 tricks. Fortunately, South was able to find the only winning line of play. West's opening lead took care of one of South's problems. He now could count 12 tricks: two spades, two hearts, seven diamonds, and one club. He realized the 13th trick would have to come from a squeeze. The best squeeze chance was one known as the Vienna coup, an intricate maneuver in which declarer cashes a high card to establish a lower-ranking card for the defense which they will be squeezed out of later.

His ace of hearts covered East's king at trick one. He cashed the ace king of spades (pitching two hearts from dummy) and now made the key play of the ace of clubs — the Vienna coup. He next ran off all the diamonds.

This brought him down to a two-card ending. Dummy held the queen of clubs and a small heart. It didn't matter what East held. South held the queen-seven of hearts and poor West held his head in his hands and groaned.

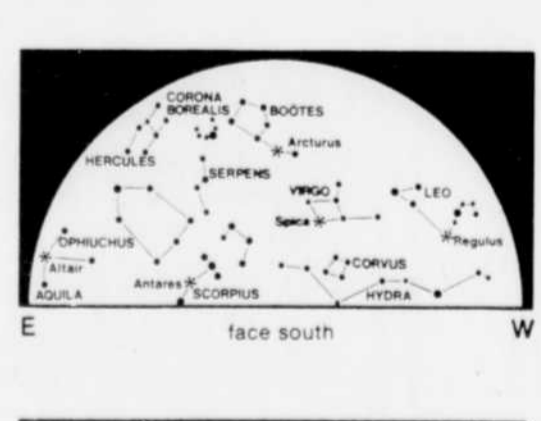

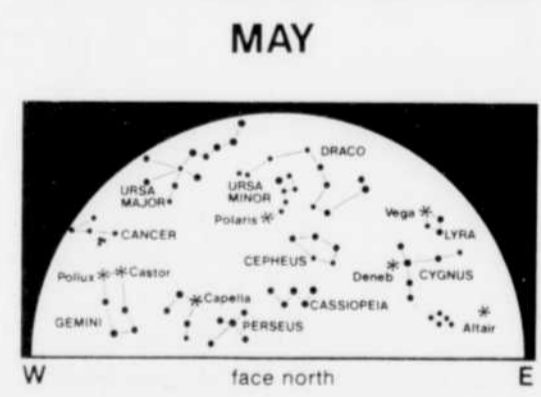

He had to discard down to one heart to keep the king of clubs and the lucky slam had come home. The Vienna coup had worked because West had been dealt four hearts and the king of clubs. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

STAR MAGNITUDES: There are six or seven thousand stars in the entire sky that can be seen without optical aid — about 2500 of these visible at any one time. A good pair of binoculars will reveal over 50,000 stars, a moderate sized telescope a few hundred thousand, while the world's great telescopes bring about a billion into range.

Magnitude is a measure of a star's brightness. When looking at stars it becomes apparent that some are brighter than others. The apparent magnitude of a star is the result of two things, its real or intrinsic brightness and its distance from us. A star may appear to be bright because, like the sun, it is relatively close, or because it is intrinsically brighter than the average star. This is easy to understand when you realize that a very bright light in the distance may appear brighter than a much fainter light nearby.

magnitude 1, and one of magnitude -1, 2.5 times brighter than one of magnitude 0.

Sirius, the brightest star in the nighttime sky has a magnitude of -1.47 and the sun, our nearest star, an apparent magnitude of -26.73. But Sirius, relatively close at a distance of 8.7 light years, is intrinsically 23 times more luminous than the sun whose light takes just over 8 minutes to reach us. (A light year, the distance light travels in one year, equals 9,400,000,000 km.)

The magnitude (m) and distance in light years of the bright stars shown on the map are listed:

Pollux	1.16	35
Castor A	1.97	45
B	2.95	45
Polaris	1.99	680
Capella	0.05	45
Deneb	1.26	1600
Vega	0.04	26.5
Aitair	0.77	16.5
Antares	0.92	520
Arcturus	-0.06	36
Spica	0.91	220
Regulus	1.36	84
Mars	1.5
Jupiter	-1.6
Saturn	+0.9

PLANETS: Venus, Mercury and Mars are low in the pre-dawn sky. Mercury, closest to the horizon, will be visible only early in the month. At sunset Jupiter and Saturn are high in the southwest and south respectively - Jupiter setting a few hours after sunset, Saturn shortly after midnight.
