'More trouble,' sighed McNulty, putting on his overcoat. 'If it ain't one thing it's another.'

'What's the matter now?' queried his good wife.

'More labor troubles,' answered McNulty.

'Not another lockout, I hope,' said the partner of his sorrows.

'No; it's worse than that,' answered the alleged head of the house. 'The boss has yielded and I've got to go to work again.'—Chicago News.

BEYOND HIS LIMIT.

During the Civil War soldiers were very apt to become intoxicated, as liquor was sometimes the only drink they could get. One soldier who was in the habit of becoming intoxicated was remonstrated with by the Colonel of his regiment, the conversation which took place being as follows:

"You are a remarkably clean man, sir."

"Thank you, Colonel."

"But, sir, you have bad habits."

"I am sorry for that, Colonel."

"You drink, sir."

"I am sorry for that."

"Oh, I know you are sorry, but why don't you drink like me?"

"Colonel, I couldn't do it; it would kill me."—"Boston Herald."
